I told him that I would not do that, that to do so would only be regarded as an act of treason, that as a member of a union and an officer of the Union my commitments ran to not only labor but to the people of the United States of America as well.

I invited Mr. Lewis to come to the city of Detroit and there debate the merits of our respective positions in the presence of that great Constitutional Convention. He did not come.

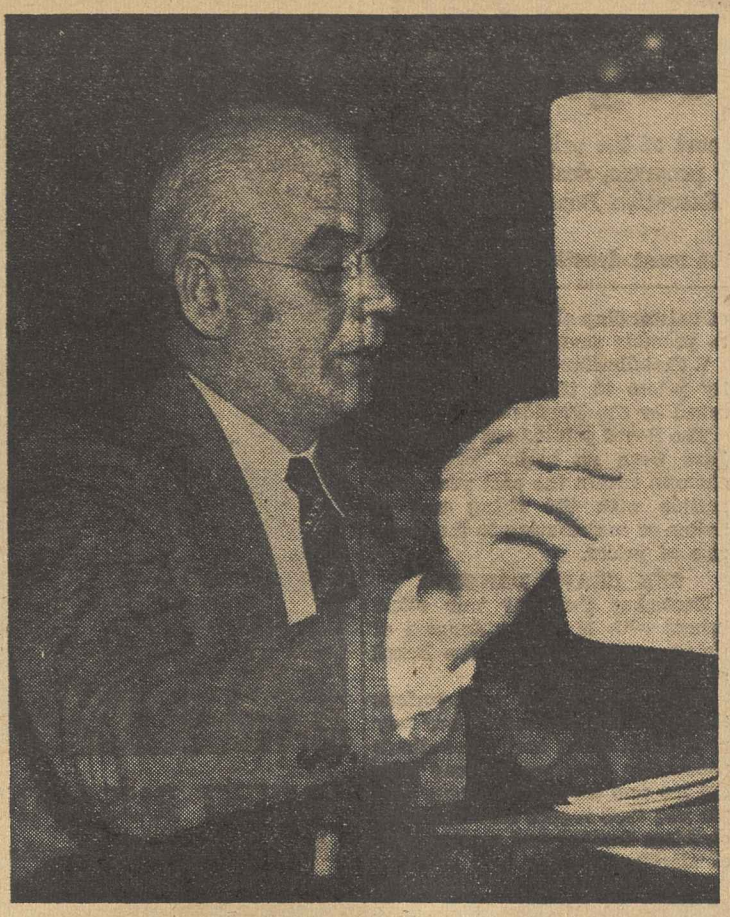
ATTACKS INCREASE

Following the November Convention of the CIO held in the city of Detroit an insidious campaign was undertaken by District 50, by the Construction Workers Organizing Committee and by the president of the United Mine Workers of America, directed not alone against me but against the membership of every CIO Union affiliated with this organization. Men were called into the offices of District 50, offered positions with the United Mine Workers of America, with the distinct understanding that they would immediately attempt upon their acceptance of those jobs the destruction of the national CIO movement.

Field workers in one case of record representing District 50 were told to canvass employes of a given steel company in the city of Williamsport, Pa., and ask them to vote against the Steel Workers Organizing Committee in an election being conducted under the auspices of the National Labor Relations Board.

WANTED UNITY

I have never sought discord or disunity. To the contrary, before the war I promoted unity within the councils of the CIO; I promoted unity within the entire labor movement, and since the war I have self-sacrificedly approached Mr. Lewis repeatedly asking him to discontinue the provocative acts and to have his official representatives, including himself, sit around the conference table and endeavor to work out with the CIO common, mutual understandings, designed to promote not only the well-being of labor but also to promote the well-being of our Nation and the promotion of our national war effort.



PRESIDENT PHILIP MURRAY

The culmination of this unhappy state of affairs was reached here in the city of Washington one week ago last Monday, when without prior notice having been given me by any member of the United Mine Workers of America, charges were instituted, designed to destroy confidence in my leadership and designed to destroy confidence in the CIO.

Those charges were instituted by District 50 before the International Policy Committee of the United Mine Workers. They stated in substance that the CIO president was delinquent in the performance of his duties in that each time that an officer or a member of a national CIO Union spoke harshly about District 50 that the president of the CIO did not undertake to repudiate the individual accused of these so-called high crimes.

I appeared before the International Policy Committee of the United Mine Workers of America on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of last week. I there attempted to defend my administration of your affairs. I there attempted to defend my conduct as an officer of the United Mine Workers of America, and asked that each one who took the floor to accuse an officer of the CIO before the Policy Committee meeting appear before this meeting and face the individuals against whom he was directing his accusations.

The President of the United States called my office in response to a query made that had been made by my office to him several weeks ago, and asked that I come down and meet him at 10:30 o'clock.

REMOVED FROM OFFICE

In the course of my meeting with the President of the United States, President Lewis, without prior notice, convened a meeting of the International Executive Board in the presence of the Policy Committee and rendered a constitutional interpretation which vacated the office of the vice president of the United Mine Workers of America.

The vice president of that Union had not been given an opportunity to appear before the Board and show cause why he should not be removed. It took approximately 40 minutes for President Lewis to make the constitutional interpretation and the motion to be offered sustaining his interpretation, following which there was an election of my successor.

These things were done in my absence, without the opportunity of a trial, without the privilege of making the record before the members of the National Executive Board.

DEVOTED TO UMW

I should like it to be known here now that my work in the United Mine Workers Organization over a period of approximately 30 years as an officer has been a work of love, a work of devotion to the mine workers and to that Union; and despite my separation from office I should like it to be known that that love for that Union and its membership will linger so long as God gives me a breath of life.

I have no quarrel with the membership of the United Mine Workers of America; I cannot have any quarrel with them. The members of that Union gave me whatever little education I may possess.

They furnished my opportunity to do and render whatever little service I may have rendered the labor movement of this country, and it shall be in the course of my life a feeling of everlasting gratitude to the membership of that Union for their evidence of splendid support which they have always accorded me during the thirty-odd years that I have served them in district and national office.

ABUSE

The president of the CIO has been castigated, condemned, maligned, slandered and abused by every representative of District 50, and the record will show—if we get the record; and we have asked for it—that during the course of the Policy Committee meeting many strange things were said about the president of the CIO, not only by representatives of District 50 and presidents of provisional districts of the United Mine Workers, but also by the president of that Union, Mr. Lewis.

Since I acquired the presidency of the CIO, the CIO has not borrowed any money from anyone or any organization. We have lived within our income; we have builded our organization and we have saved money, and thank God we are going to live and nobody can stop us from living.

I consider it an obligation and a duty to serve this Union. That is what I was elected for, and I am going to serve this organization and I am going to protect this organization's affiliates insofar as I can protect them, and I am going to protect their membership insofar as I am able to protect it.

HUTCHINSON APPEARS

According to information presented to Messrs. Thomas, Emspak and myself by President Green, Secretary Meany and President Tobin of the Teamsters Union, Mr. Lewis has been conducting individual negotiations since early last

CIO Votes Backing For Roosevelt War Economy Program

WASHINGTON, June 6—Support of the principles of President Roosevelt's wartime economy program, designed to prevent inflation, was voted by the CIO Executive Board meeting here this week.

Declaring that workers are the most drastically affected by rising prices, the Board offered seven suggestions for the President's program aimed to help keep the nation's work force at maximum efficiency and output. The recommendations were:

ENFORCE PRICE CONTROL

1. Immediate and vigorous enforcement of the General Price Regulation promulgated by the Office of Price Administration to control rents and prices of other necessities, and enlistment of labor in the control program.

2. Extension of rationing to cover basic necessities to assure equal sharing of goods.

3. Effective taxation to keep profits low, and enactment of a tax program similar to that proposed by the Treasury and the CIO, including a ban on any form of general sales tax or additional burdens on the low income groups.

ESTABLISH UNION SECURITY

4. Establishment of union security, with a ban on legislation or administrative action to freeze wages.

5. Purchase of war bonds to the fullest extent.

6. Discouragement of credit and installment buying, and payment of outstanding obligations in order to promote savings.

7. Stabilization of farm commodity prices at the level of parity asked by the President.

The Board pointed out that there have been no major wage rate changes within the past year compatible with the rising cost of living, or contributing to the sharp rise of prices.

SEE GRAVE DANGERS

Declaring that the war effort brings with it "grave dangers of rising costs of living," the Board stated in a resolution:

"Such rises are a most serious threat to the success of our war production effort and the nation's production program because they cut the real wages of working people and thus reduce essential food, clothing, housing and medical care of working people.

"Such necessities are absolutely essential to workers and their families in order that they may produce at the highest efficiency and maximum output for the great victory effort of 1942, and in order that the national morale and the strength of the people may be maintained and bettered."

September with a man named Hutchinson.

Mr. Lewis, according to the statements adduced by these responsible leaders of the AFL, had meetings in the early fall of 1941 with Mr. Hutchinson at which time, according to their allegations, Mr. Lewis agreed with Mr. Hutchinson to a complete surrender, lock stock and barrel, of the Construction Workers Organizing Committee to the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor.

That report, according to Messrs. Green, Tobin and Meany, was submitted to a meeting of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor in October in the city of Seattle, Washington.

NOT INFORMED

The president of the CIO knew nothing about that. If there were any peace committees in existence then I assume that I was a member of that peace committee. I occupied the same building as President Lewis. Why, I even ate lunch with him almost every day while I was in the city of Washington, and do you know that every member of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor knew about those meetings and the president of the CIO did not know about them? I was the individual that was kept in the dark.

WANTS UNITY

I have been very anxious to effectuate with President Lewis, with the members of the United Mine Workers International Executive Board, and with its Policy Committee, decent, man-like understandings and agreements.

I deplore splits in the house of labor. I deplore internal confusions and disorders and disunities, because they lend no comfort to either the members of the Unions, the Unions, or to the country; and I have withheld as long as a human being could withhold the submission of this public statement which I am now making in the presence of the press and the members of the International Executive Board.

I see no other recourse; there is no other way out. There is nothing that can be done.

It seems that President Lewis is hell-bent upon the creation of national confusion and national discontent. There is nothing that I can do evidently to stop him from continuing his provocative acts.

I am forced under those circumstances in defense of these unions and in defense of American labor to say through the medium of this meeting, despite any attacks that he might make upon me or my Unions or these Unions affiliated with the CIO, I shall fight with every drop of blood in my veins for the preservation of our organizations, their integrity and the promotion of our national well-being and the national war effort.

Tax Talks On Air

Washington, June 6—If you don't think taxes can be interesting, try turning your radio dial to the Columbia Broadcasting station in your vicinity at 10:30 p. m. Tuesday, June 9.

You'll get an earful from Frank Rosenblum, a CIO vice-president, an official of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union and a member of the CIO's Tax Committee; and Ralph Hetzel, CIO economic director.

Joint War Parley Urged By UE Board

NEW YORK, June 6—Rising prices, increasing taxes and other burdens during the past year have put the wage structure "badly out of joint" the general executive board of the United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers declared in a resolution passed at a special session held here last week-end.

This is reflected in the wage demands now being sought by unions in major industries, the Board said. "In addition, many unorganized and recently organized workers are, as the President points out, paid at badly substandard levels.

"It is true that the general standard of living considered as a whole must inevitably go down if we are to win the war, but within this inevitable general decline, the wage demands already made on the basis of past conditions and those aimed to bring substandard wages up to a minimum efficiency level must be granted.

"We will expect the majority in Congress to resist obstructionist maneuvers and we will expect such administrators as Leon Henderson to abandon their spurious economic theories and spineless administrative policies in favor of the practical program advocated by President Roosevelt."

The Board also directed that a protest be sent to Attorney General Francis Biddle against his order for the deportation of Harry Bridges, president of the CIO Longshoremen's Union as "a surrender to the appeasers who are now particularly anxious to drive Bridges out of the United States precisely because he is the acknowledged leader of popular support on the West Coast for the American war effort."

The Board voted unanimously to request the CIO to initiate an all-labor "Win the War" conference to which the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods would be invited to send delegates.

The resolution stated that it regarded the President's Labor Victory Committee composed of three representatives each from the CIO and AFL, as "the body best fitted to issue such a call." Julius Emspak, UE secretary-treasurer, is a member of the Victory Committee.

Blasts Lewis

labor win-the-war- conference and for meetings of a joint labor board to carry on all means necessary for victory. Labor unity for victory was also recommended in a resolution directing the CIO executive officers to study closer relations between British, American and Soviet trade unions.

While the CIO Board was meeting to work out its positive program for victory, a carefully hand-picked collection of Lewis stooges was listening to vicious attacks on Murray, the CIO and the war effort at the "Policy Committee" meeting of the UMWA.

This meeting hit an all-time low when it passed a resolution wildly calling Murray a "Communist" and demanding that he rid himself and the CIO of all such people or else. Murray's reply, relating this latest "charge" to the Lewis anti-war drive, branded it as "ridiculous and completely untruthful."

'Win the War' Unity Of CIO-AFL Urged

Washington, June 6—Working unity to win the war between CIO and AFL was urged in a unanimous resolution passed at the CIO Executive Board meeting here. Such unity, the resolution said, would be a step toward a final goal of organic unity between the two great labor organizations.

Pointing out that the CIO, under Murray's leadership, has "at all times since Pearl Harbor joined with the AFL in maintaining unity of policy and of action for victory in our war against the Axis," the resolution praised the joint CIO-AFL Labor Victory Board and urged it to call a "National Conference to Win the War" made up of CIO and AFL delegates.

"This conference shall take up such basic and immediate issues in connection with the war as increased production, political support to those candidates in support of the President and the war effort, and increased labor participation" in government "to assure labor's contribution to the war effort," the resolution said.

The CIO intends to avoid the pitfalls of false organic unity as recently proposed by John L. Lewis in an attempt to confuse the labor drive for victory, the resolution pointed out. Instead, it proposed an immediate joint meeting of CIO and AFL leadership to establish a "United National Labor Council" to draw up a joint war program for all labor.

CIO Opposes Racial Bars

Washington, June 6—Equal treatment of all workers, regardless of race, creed or color has always been the policy of the CIO, declared a resolution passed by the CIO Executive Board, which opposed "any discrimination in industry, government and anywhere else."

Stop Bridges Exile, Board Urges FDR

WASHINGTON, June 6—President Roosevelt was urged by the CIO Executive Board this week to set aside the order of Attorney-General Biddle deporting Harry Bridges, both "in the interests of the nation's war effort" and as a matter of simple justice to a labor leader who has been acquitted twice of all charges against him.

The Board action came in a unanimous resolution that cited "the utmost in service" that Bridges and the Longshoremen and Warehousemen are giving the nation in "rapid and efficient shipment of war materials to the fighting fronts"—service that has been "praised by high officials of the Army and Navy and other U. S. war agencies."

Biddle's arbitrary action, which reversed the findings of his own Board of Appeals on the case, was sharply rapped by the Board, which pointed out that the order had been immediately welcomed by the Berlin radio and its echo in America, the Hearst press.

APPEASEMENT APPLAUSE

"The order of the Attorney-General was welcomed by the Berlin radio, by its American echo, the Hearst press, and by reactionary and pro-appeasement politicians and similar elements," the resolution said.

"These are precisely the elements that have been spared by the Attorney-General, except when prodded by public opinion to take action against a few of the more notorious sedition mongers. Their relief that the Attorney-General has singled out a union leader devoted to the war effort for deportation, rather than proceeding against them, is the obvious reason for their approval."

Meanwhile, protests against Biddle's order continued to pour in from unions all over the country, each of them emphasizing the blow to the nation's war effort involved. Similar statements came from liberal and progressive groups, many of them signed by leading clergymen.

In Washington, Carol King, attorney for the Bridges Defense Committee, moved to secure a stay on the order to give time for an adequate appeal and court review of the facts in the case. The Immigration Department in violation of the usual 90 day stay allowed, sought to rush the deportation order before Bridges' attorneys could find time to prepare the appeal.

"The whole procedure is so vindictive and unprecedented and contrary to public policy as to constitute, in my opinion, a clear violation of Bridges' rights," Mrs. King declared when she learned of this sneak move.

FULL CIO SUPPORT

Full CIO support to Bridges in fighting Biddle's outrageous order was voted in the Board resolution and expressed in speeches from the floor. Pointing out that the CIO "has consistently defended Harry Bridges since the first attempts to deport him were made in 1938," the resolution said:

"The Executive Board of the CIO pledges continued full support, financial and in all other feasible ways, to Harry Bridges so that he may remain in this country and continue his contribution to the nation's war effort and to the welfare of the organized workers he represents."

In the appeal to President Roosevelt, the resolution declared: (The Board) "urges the President of the United States to act in the interests of the nation's war effort and of simple justice in refusing to permit the deportation of a union leader who has been twice acquitted of all charges against him."

HARRY BRIDGES

For Democratic Price Control

Washington, June 6 — Effective representation for labor on government agencies dealing with price control and rationing was called for in a statement approved by the CIO Executive Board.

Admitting the necessity in wartime of control of the nation's economy and the lives of its citizens, the board declared that this must be done by democratic administration of these controls.

To attain this, the board recommended "full and effective participation of labor in local rationing and price control boards," and the vigorous enforcement of general price control ceilings.

It also asked that price regulation be extended to food and other commodities necessary to maintain a basic standard of living, including provision for "a special rationing system to give to those who cannot afford to pay the share to which they are entitled in the rationing."

7 CIO Plants Win Navy 'E's'

Washington, June 6—Seven CIO plants were among a dozen this week awarded Navy "E's" for production efficiency.

Four of the plants belong to the General Electric Corp., and are organized by Locals 201, 119, 901 and 301 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union. The three others are unionized by the United Steelworkers of America.

The plants are awarded pennants and the workers' lapel buttons bearing the Navy seal, the Navy "E" and the legend, "For Production."

Praise Murray Leadership

Buffalo CIO Supports Murray

Buffalo, N. Y., June 6 — By a unanimous roll call vote, the executive board of the Greater Buffalo CIO Council went on record to give full support to CIO President Philip Murray in his fight for a united CIO, and to back the Niagara Falls locals of District 50, United Mine Workers.

"It is our belief that the overwhelming majority of members of the United Mine Workers wish to remain in the CIO and to follow the leadership of Philip Murray, who is giving his life to rally every force of the labor movement to win this people's war," the statement declared.

"The attitude of members of District 50, UMW, in this area is not a matter of belief with us—it is a matter of knowledge. They joined the CIO with us of the other unions, they subscribed to the same principles with us and they fought shoulder to shoulder with us for those principles.

STILL WITH US

"They are still with us and they will remain with us, and we will remain with them, when the maneuvers and machinations of the power-proud have been defeated by the rank and file members of our sister union.

"We know for what John L. Lewis stands in this situation and where his leadership would guide us. We will have no part and the members of District 50 in this area and elsewhere will have no part in a rule-or-ruin gamble that has no regard for the desperate need of our nation and our labor movement for unity to produce and win, or see our labor movement engulfed in the fascist reaction that will follow defeat."

Virginia CIO Lauds Murray Leadership

Norton, Va., June 6—Congratulations for his "great leadership of the CIO" were wired to President Philip Murray from the convention of the Virginia CIO Council which met here last month. The resolution, passed unanimously, ordered the treasurer of the Council to send the telegram to President Murray.

I. G. Stone of the United Mine Workers, Appalachia, Va., was elected president of the Council to succeed Ray Thomason who did not run. Lloyd P. Vaughan, CIO field representative, was re-elected secretary-treasurer, defeating Melvin Schaffer of UMW District 50.

The following nine vice-presidents, representing the various affiliated unions, were also elected:

J. C. Oliver, United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers; R. A. Johnson, Dyers Federation of the Textile Workers' Union; W. A. Richards, Textile Workers; Tony Samander, United Mine Workers; Robbie May Riddick, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers; J. K. Robinette, Mine Workers; Farley Holder, Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Robert Mills, National Maritime Union, and Thomas Hunter, CIO field representative.

Protest Layoff

Jacksonville, Fla., June 6—Protests have been made to the U. S. Maritime Commission by the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers Union against a business-as-usual layoff of 400 men at the Merrill-Stevens Drydock and Repair Co. here.

The layoff, the union pointed out, is a serious disruption of the war effort. The commission was urged to force the company to put all the men back to work.

What's Labor Doing For the War? Plenty, Says Production Board!

WASHINGTON, June 6—If a visitor from Mars should ask what labor is doing to support the war effort he'd only have to turn to a four-page leaflet published by the U. S. War Production Board to find out that labor's doing plenty.

Questions on strikes that are almost down to zero, the 40-hour week that virtually is non-existent in wartime industry, overtime pay that helps workers meet the rising cost of living, and other matters, are tersely handled. Here's a sample:

Question: Are strikes holding up war production?

Answer: No. The records show that labor is cooperating wholeheartedly. Strike idleness in relation to war production during the first quarter of 1942 was one-fifteenth of the corresponding period of 1941.

Question: Does labor refuse to work more than 40 hours a week?

Answer: No. Seven out of ten workers in war industry today are putting in 48 hours or more every week. In the critical machine-tool industry, workers are putting in from 50 to 70 hours a week. In 4 out of 5 aircraft factories, labor works from 44 to 54 hours weekly. In the Nation's shipyards, nearly 70 per cent of the labor force works between 46 and 52 hours a week.

Question: Don't labor laws prohibit a work week longer than 40 hours?

Answer: No. There is no law that prohibits working more than 40 hours a week. The wage-hour law simply provides that workers should be paid at the rate of time and a half for hours over 40 in any week.

For example, Andy Jones, a war worker, earns 70 cents an hour for 40 hours of straight time, or $28. He works 10 hours overtime and is paid 70 cents straight time for each of these extra hours, or $7, and 35 cents overtime for each of the 10 hours, or $3.50. The additional $10.50 makes his total earnings $38.50 for 50 hours work.

Question: Why not get rid of this overtime pay?

Answer: Anyone who wants to abolish overtime pay is really urging that $3.50 be cut from Andy Jones' pay. Andy needs that $3.50 to help meet rising living costs.

Question: What has labor done?

Answer: Here are a few examples.

1. One thousand construction workers fought side by side with the Marines at Wake Island.

2. Thousands of workers risk their lives daily to man our merchant ships and tankers on the seven seas.

3. Three billion dollars worth of defense bonds, according to the most conservative estimates, will be bought by the membership of organized labor this year.

4. Workers completed the battleship Alabama 9 months ahead of time. At Cleveland, Ohio, even before the war started, workers took only 5 days to rebuild a $2,200,000 defense foundry wrecked by fire.

American labor is all-out for victory.

CIO Unions Back Bridges Deportation Battle

WASHINGTON, June 6—While Attorney General Francis Biddle was denying Harry Bridges a re-hearing on his deportation order, CIO affiliates joined the national CIO Executive Board in bombarding Biddle with protests that declared the ouster of Bridges would be a definite blow to national unity and hence to the war effort.

Among telegrams released to the press was that of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, which said in part to Biddle:

AMALGAMATED PROTESTS

"Your decision strikes a serious blow against the national effort for victory which we are all striving to achieve.

"Harry Bridges has made and is making a splendid contribution to the war effort in the vital work of expediting shipments of needed materials to our armed forces and to our allies in the Far East.

"We believe that all who are intensely devoted to the successful and speedy outcome of the war find it impossible to understand how Bridges, with a record of devoted work in our nation's cause, can be denounced by you as subversive and found guilty of advocating the violent overthrow of our government.

"Labor's struggle for full unity behind the war effort deserves the sympathy and support of all agencies of government. Your action serves to confuse and antagonize the workers."

The CIO Maritime Committee declared that Biddle's reversal of the decision of the Board of Immigration Appeals on the deportation of Bridges is "the first major victory of Hitler's spring offensive."

"By ordering the deportation of Bridges, Biddle has struck a severe blow at national unity and at the all-out production effort of the organized union workers," the Committee stated.

Other protests publicized were from the Indiana State Industrial Union Council, Int'l Fur & Leather Workers Union, Greater Buffalo Industrial Union Council, Civil Rights Federation, United Office & Professional Workers Union, Social Service Employes Union, Book & Magazine Union, Greater N. Y. Industrial Union Council, Wholesale & Warehouse Workers Union, Int'l Fishermen & Allied Workers, the Citizens Committee for Harry Bridges, the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties and the National Maritime Union.

CIO EXECUTIVE BOARD RESOLUTIONS

Resolution on United Mine Workers' Position in the CIO

Whereas, (1) The United Mine Workers of America took a leading role in organizing the Committee for Industrial Organizations in 1935, and along with other industrial unions pledged the contribution of sufficient funds to initiate an organizing drive among the unorganized workers in the basic mass production industries;

(2) The United Mine Workers of America and these other unions did make such advances to the CIO in keeping with their pledge and as a result millions of unorganized workers have been given the benefit of union organization and economic security, and have achieved an improved lot for the women and children in workers' families throughout the nation;

"DEBT" PERCENT

((3) John L. Lewis, only recently and for the first time, has indicated to the CIO that he considers the advances which were thus made by the coal miners for the benefit of the other less fortunately situated workers as a debt owing to the United Mine Workers of America; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, that (1) The coal miners comprising the United Mine Workers of America have inscribed in history the heroic and militant role which they have consistently played in the struggle of the American workers to achieve economic freedom. They have given the inspiration and leadership which resulted in the tremendous growth of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Through the strength of the CIO, the United Mine Workers of America has also become stronger and its recent achievements must in part be attributed to the great labor movement—the CIO—which stood solidly behind the United Mine Workers of America. John L. Lewis, addressing the Executive Board meeting of the CIO on November 15, 1940, stated:

NO BREAST BEATING

"The representatives of the United Mine Workers of America did not stand in the market places of this country beating their breasts and calling upon all men to witness that they are holier or better than somebody else because they had a few dollars that their membership dug coal for and had instructed them in convention to utilize these dollars to aid those less fortunately situated and whose organization, after all, would result in the increased security and increased strength and the increased power in the economic world of the United Mine Workers of America."

(2) All workers throughout the nation owe a deep debt to the United Mine Workers of America. This debt cannot be measured in dollars. Only one steeped in avarice can discuss this problem in mercenary terms. In the words of President Murray, the funds furnished by the coal miners to the CIO were used to "feed the hungry, clothe the naked and shelter the homeless during bitter struggles on the part of the workers to establish their unions." Experiences of the CIO in this regard may be very well likened to the great heroic struggles of the United Mine Workers during the dark days from 1925 to the early part of 1933 to maintain the union.

PERSONAL APPEARANCES

"I can remember distinctly making personal appearances at public meetings for assitance to provide shelter, nourishment, clothing and medicine to the gallant fight of our union for decent living standards and economic freedom."

The CIO is firmly of the opinion that the coal miners did not and do not consider the advances which they made to enable other and less fortunate workers to achieve economic freedom through union organization to be a debt to be repaid in dollars and cents.

(3) The CIO and its millions of members expresse and reaffirms its everlasting gratitude to and affection for the United Mine Workers of America. The steel workers, the auto workers, the rubber workers and the millions of workers in all the other industries united in the CIO desire nothing other than to stand shoulder to shoulder with the coal miners in their forward march. Today, more than ever, this unity must be maintained in order to assure victory for our nation in its present war for survival. We assure the United Mine Workers of America that if the occasion ever arises in which it needs aid or succor there shall not be a worker or a union anywhere in the nation which will not give of every resource and assistance.

(4) The United Mine Workers of America has not paid per capita tax to the Congress of Industrial Organizations for the months of February, March, April and May, 1942. Therefore, the United Mine Workers of America is delinquent in its per capita tax payments.

Racial Discrimination

Whereas, (1) It has always been the policy and practice of the CIO to fight for equal treatment of all workers, regardless of race, creed, or color;

(2) Inherent in labor's wholehearted support of the victory program is its hatred of doctrines of racial and religious discrimination;

(3) Our war effort requires unity of all sections of the population, regardless of race, creed, or color;

(4) The practices of those industries which discriminate in employment on the basis of race, creed or color, violate our democratic principles, impede our program of production for victory, and constitute direct threats to the success of the national war effort; and

(5) Policies of segregation, Jim Crow-ism and discrimination in our armed forces, in housing, and in any sphere of our national life undermine our democratic institutions and serve to demoralize and disunite our people; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, that the Executive Board of the CIO (1) declares its firm opposition to any discrimination in industry, in government, and anywhere else on the basis of race, creed, or color; and

(2) Pledges itself and the affiliated unions of the CIO to the fight to secure equality of treatment for all workers, Negro and white and all races and creeds in industrial employment and promotion centers, in vocational training, in union leadership, and service in the government and in the armed forces.

District 50 Locals Ask Charters from CIO

Only a grave emergency striking at the very existence of those principles upon which industrial unionism is based would justify the urgent plea which is the purpose of this petition. But with the United States fighting to preserve democracy from extinction at the hands of Axis dictatorship, it becomes imperative that we do not permit our national unity to be attacked from within by the same sort of fascism which we as a people are fighting against on all the battle-fronts of the war.

That danger is here. It is attacking the American labor movement within the very ranks of the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Among us is a man whose practices are one and the same with those of Hitler and Mussolini. The signatory local unions to this petition are the victims of this tyranny. We have suffered under its menacing shadow and have seen it spread until it now threatens to disrupt the strength and the very life of that branch of the CIO of which we are an integral part.

Over five years ago, the United Mine Workers of America granted a charter to District 50, giving it jurisdiction over the gas and by-product coke workers of the United States and Canada. That charter was issued after the members, who were then enrolled in federal labor unions of the American Federation of Labor, had requested President John L. Lewis to provide for them an industrial type of organization.

NO GUIDANCE

And so the men who had built their unions against obstacles of disunity and disorganization were proud to receive a Mine Worker charter. They had high expectations of growth, development and progress under the guidance of a great International Union. Instead of guidance, they got Ora Gassaway, Kathryn Lewis and John O'Leary.

They have placed on our field staff gunmen and thugs, ignoring the rank and file members of our union.

They have jumped jurisdictional lines, causing strife and confusion in the labor movement.

They have organized dairy farmers, boat builders, and foundry workers while by-passing chemical and gas workers.

They have broken up locals of long standing into inadequate and helpless groups. They have removed charters from independent unions.

They have dismissed our officials and staff members who dared to uphold the leadership of President Franklin D. Roosevelt in his fight against reaction at home and abroad.

They have destroyed production committees and attacked members who tried to organize war production rallies and initiate policies to increase the flow of war supplies.

Rather than permit us to grow toward self government, they have imposed upon us officials exercising arbitrary authority.

They have made District 50 not a labor union but a political catch-all for John L. Lewis's plan to create an anti-Roosevelt machine.

They have violated all decent union principles, disregarded industrial organization, and destroyed the democratic method in the conduct of union affairs. Provisionalism (rule by boss-picked machine men rather than duly elected officials) like a disease, has spread in all sections of the United Mine Workers until it is now clear that John L. Lewis does not intend to turn back to the members the control over their own policies, finances, or officers.

Today, as five million members of the CIO fuse their strength and skill into building the war machine which will carry the United Nations to victory, we members of District 50 seek from your hands the power and the authority to become part of that United effort.

Not only because the nation is at war do we ask this. We ask it because the CIO is assuming high place in the successful prosecution of a war that will spread democracy to the four corners of the earth. We of District 50 want to play our part in the great constructive task and we want to begin by winning back our democratic autonomy.

For these reasons enumerated we respectfully pray the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations to grant a national charter to the locals and members of District 50 and to admit us into the real House of labor.

Resolution on John L. Lewis

John L. Lewis has used his position as President of the United Mine Workers of America to hamper the nation's victory effort not only by failure to extend positive support to the nation and to our Commander - in - Chief, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, but also by a studied campaign of disruption and disunity, both within and outside the labor movement.

This was evident as far back as John L. Lewis' August, 1941, declaration of alliance with a dozen of the most reactionary figures in American political life, including the leading agents of appeasement in this country. These signers included such discredited anti-labor politicians as Alfred M. Landon, Herbert Hoover, Charles G. Dawes and Henry P. Fletcher. This declaration was a deliberate attempt to sow suspicion and hostility toward those nations which were engaged in the struggle against the Nazi aggressors, at whose bidding Japan was shortly to launch an open attack on our nation.

The campaign against our Nation's security took another sinister step in the active lobbying ordered by Lewis against passage of the bill to permit arming of U. S. merchant ships, in opposition to the policy expressed by the national officers of the CIO. This attempted sabotage of our national defense was carried out in callous disregard of the lives of American seamen—union members of a CIO affiliate—who were daily facing death from Nazi submarines without even the protection of a gun on board their ships.

AMERICA FIRST

From its inception, Lewis' agent participated in the councils of the America First Committee, the happy hunting ground of all appeasers and dissident individuals.

Following the Axis attack on Pearl Harbor, Lewis confined his official pronouncements to strongly implied criticism of our country for its unpreparedness in face of the attack, plus a general statement of support that was at no time implemented by practical proposals for aiding in the common defense. It is important to note, too, that there was no statement from Lewis at the time that Nazi Germany and Fascist Italy declared war on the United States.

These failures to make public pronouncements of support to our country's war of survival are glaringly evident in the absolute lack of direction to the local unions of the United Mine Workers of America that would help them to take their proper and desired place in labor's victory effort. Aside from a formal endorsement of the War Bond campaign, and a flamboyant and much publicized offer to buy $5,000,000 worth of bonds from the UMWA treasury, the local unions and membership have received no advice or leadership from the officials of the international union on this all-important question.

NO VICTORY PLANS

In contrast to other affiliates of the CIO, the officials of the UMWA have put forward no plans whatever for increasing production for an offensive and victory over the Axis, nor have they come forward with any proposals for gearing the Nation's economy to the needs of war.

On the contrary, the official Journal of the UMWA has been used in recent issues to raise suspicion and fear in the minds of its readers, notably in an editorial in a May issue deliberately intended to induce a feeling of defeatism and panic on the question of inflation.

Within the labor movement, Lewis and his agents have pursued a steady course of disruption and disunity through the puppet state of District 50 of the UMWA. This puppet state has at all times followed an ordered policy of raiding, harassment and sabotage of affiliates of the CIO, forcing them to divert time and attention from the essential task of organizing the workers of the Nation for victory. In carrying out this part of the campaign, Lewis' agents have employed the most sordid tactics of the professional union-disrupter, including physical violence and personal vilification.

This disruptive plan has not been confined to the labor movement, as shown by the campaign undertaken among dairy farmers. Here again the object is to drive a wedge between the unity of all sections of our population that is necessary to victory. Close cooperation between the working farmers and the industrial workers has never been more essential than it is today. The drive undertaken by District 50 is calculated to break this relationship just when it is most desperately needed.

"ACCOUPLEMENT" PHONEY

The move instigated by Lewis for "accouplement" between the CIO and the American Federation of Labor was planned with the same motives, as was made amply clear by the Executive Board of the CIO at its January meeting in New York City. Our reply to that move, in the form of active working unity on all war issues, has already been made.

These tactics reached their lowest point in vicious attacks on the President of the CIO, in which persons having no genuine place in the labor movement have been permitted and encouraged to heap insults and provocations on the elected leader of 5,000,000 American working men and women. They finally culminated in the outrageous act at the most recent UMWA board meeting, in which President Murray was deprived of his elected place as vice-president of the international union without a hearing and while President Murray was in conference with the President of the United States. Thus was the voice of the rank and file completely abrogated—the rank and file who had elected Philip Murray.

Now, therefore, the Executive Board of the Congress of Industrial Organizations makes the following statements, in the full knowledge of the grave dangers that our country and the cause of freedom face throughout the world today.

CONDEMN LEWIS

1. We condemn the actions and policies of John L. Lewis as a grave danger to the security of our nation and to the future of the workers in the entire world.

2. We reaffirm the complete confidence of all CIO affiliates and members in the membership of the UMWA, knowing that they share equally in the patriotic devotion to their country of all American workers.

3. We urge them to retain their bonds with their union brothers and sisters throughout the American labor movement, preserving the solidarity and unity that is essential to victory over the Hitler Axis and the preservation of freedom throughout the world.

4. We impress again upon all members of the CIO the vital necessity of retaining the closest bonds with the membership of the UMWA, not only as a grateful remembrance of the great help extended by them to the CIO in its formative days, but also for

Ask Strong Control of Prices, Rationing of Necessities

WHEREAS (1), The gigantic war effort of our nation brings with it grave dangers of rising costs of living, and

(2) Such rises are a most serious threat to the success of our war production effort and the nation's production program because they cut the real wages of working people and thus reduce essential food, clothing, housing and medical care of working people, and

(3) Such necessities are absolutely essential to workers and their families in order that they may produce at the highest efficiency and maximum output for the great victory effort of 1942, and in order that the national morale and the strength of the people may be maintained and bettered, and

(4) The workers of the nation are those who suffer most from rising costs of living, and

NO MAJOR WAGE CHANGES

(5) There have been no major wage changes within the past year compatible with the rising cost of living, or contributing to the sharp rise of prices, and

(6) The President of the United States has set forth to the Congress a seven-point program of action to keep the cost of living from spiralling upward and thus to keep the national economy under control, to prevent unreasonable war profits and to maintain war production at a maximum, now therefore be it

Resolved, The CIO again pledges itself to the fullest cooperation in achieving maximum war production by working for the measures necessary to keep the nation's work force at maximum efficiency and maximum output, and necessary to prevent further rises in the cost of living. This requires that the following measures be instituted in accordance with the seven-point program laid down by the President of the United States to Congress:

VIGOROUS PRICE CONTROL

(1) Immediate and vigorous enforcement of the General Price Regulation promulgated by the Office of Price Administration to control the prices of basic living necessities. The rent control measure must likewise be vigorously enforced with additional adequate housing provided where necessary. The substantial number of foods and other commodities now not under the General Price Regulation should be brought under control. Enforcement of the price control and rationing should be made effective by the enlistment of labor participation on local price control trol and rationing boards and at other levels of enforcement and policy determination.

(2) Rationing should be extended to cover the basic necessities in order to assure the equal sharing of the essential goods available to consumers. This requires provision whereby working families unable to buy their ration share will be given their basic share through a special rationing system.

EFFECTIVE TAXATION

(3) Effective taxation to accomplish the purposes set forth by the President to "keep personal and corporate profits at a reasonable rate, the word 'reasonable' being defined at a low level," should be immediately instituted by the Congress. The tax proposals of the Ways and Means Committee drastically cutting corporate taxes and high income individual taxes as wholly inadequate to meet the goals set by the President A tax program based upon the principles set forth by the Treasury and by the CIO should be enacted in place of the emasculated program of the Ways and Means Committee. Any form of general sales tax or additional burdens upon the lower income groups must be avoided.

(4) Union security must be established. The stabilization of wages must provide for adjustment to levels which will advance war production by promoting the health and efficiency of American workers. These ends must be achieved through the maintenance of the machinery of voluntary collective bargaining and the War Labor Board. There must be no arbitrary legislation or administrative action to freeze wages, to destroy present statutory and contractual standards governing hours and rates of pay or otherwise to place in jeopardy the voluntary labor-management relations now operating so effectively and established in accordance with time-honored practice.

(5) War bonds must be purchased to the full extent possible by each person and family. The CIO and its affiliated unions have already pledged themselves to promote the fullest possible sale of such bonds. Many unions have agreed to systematic systems of wage check-offs for bond purchase.

(6) Additional credit and installment buying must be discouraged and all present debts, mortgages and other obligations should be paid off as much as possible at this time, in order to promote savings.

(7) The prices of farm commodities must be established at the level of parity as asked for by the President.

The Executive Board should notify the President of the United States of the CIO's determination to cooperate in the national war economic program as promulgated by the President and set forth in this resolution.

Bridges Ouster Blow to Justice

The order of Attorney Biddle directing the deportation of Harry Bridges is a blow not only to all concepts of American justice but even more a blow to national unity and morale necessary to victory.

The Attorney General chose to rely on hearsay evidence for this order, selecting testimony that was thoroughly discredited in the first hearing on the Bridges case by Dean Landis and by the findings of his own Board of Appeals following the second trial. This evidence has not become any more credible in the time between the report of the Board of Appeals and the issuance of the present order.

WELCOMED BY BERLIN

The order of the Attorney General was welcomed by the Berlin radio, by its American echo, the Hearst press, and by reactionary and pro-appeasement politicians and other elements generally. These are precisely the elements

WAR, WOMEN AND WINGS: Mabel Webster, worker in the heat treating department of Consolidated Aircraft Plants, explains to Capt. Richard Maibaum, one of a group of visiting Army officers, how dipping an airplane part into a hot solution prevents corrosion. The dipped part carries away part of the solution which hardens and covers it like a film.

Price Control And Rationing

As the war effort proceeds, the economy of the nation will be of necessity drawn more and more under the control of Government agencies. In particular the Office of Price Administration, dealing with price control and rationing, will to an increasing extent exercise control over the nation's economy and over the lives of all its citizens.

The CIO fully realizes the necessity in wartime of these controls. The cost of living must be held down. The goods which are available for keeping the nation's productive machinery at work for maintaining its work force must be fairly and equitably distributed. Only by the effective and democratic administration of all price control and rationing can these ends be accomplished.

The CIO calls for:

(1) The full and effective participation of labor in local rationing and price control boards.

(2) The establishment of price control and rationing committees in CIO state and local councils.

(3) The vigorous enforcement of the general price control ceilings.

(4) The extension of the general price regulation to those foods and other commodities which go into the cost of living and are not now under regulation.

(5) The extension of rationing to cover the commodities necessary for a basic standard of living. This must include the provision of a special rationing system to give to those who cannot afford to pay the share to which they are entitled in the rationing.

Urge CIO and AFL Call Joint Win the War Conference

WHEREAS, (1) The successful prosecution of the war and the maintenance of maximum war production require complete unity of all portions of the population and particularly of all the forces of organized labor; and

(2) The CIO, under the leadership of President Philip Murray, has at all times since Pearl Harbor joined with the AFL in the maintenance of unity of policy and of action for victory in our war with the Axis. One of the best examples of such unity was the agreement between the AFL and CIO to avoid any stoppages of work because of jurisdictional disputes to assure complete continuity of production; now, therefore, be it

HAIL VICTORY BOARD

RESOLVED, that (1) The Executive Board endorses and approves the action of President Murray, congratulates Labor's Victory Board on its long strides toward rallying a united labor movement behind our war effort.

(2) In the effort to extend the cooperation and collaboration with the AFL we recommend that the Combined Labor Victory Committee issue a call for a National Conference to Win the War, with representation for every national and international union affiliated with the CIO and the AFL. This conference shall take up such basic and immediate issues in connection with the war as increased production, political support to those candidates in support of the President of the United States and the war effort, and increased labor participation in the executive and administrative branches of the government to assure labor's contribution to the war effort.

WAR TEST FOR UNITY

(3) The CIO expresses its sincere desire to take any steps toward the establishment of unity with the AFL in the effort to further labor's contribution toward achieving a speedy victory over the Axis. However, the CIO does not intend to permit anyone to interfere with the nation's war effort by injecting the false issue of immediate organic labor unity, thereby hoping that efforts to achieve that end would create disputes and friction that would undermine the growing collaboration and cooperation between the AFL and the CIO behind President Roosevelt and the nation's war program. The sole test for the CIO in regard to any step or policy relating to unity is: Does it serve the interests of the workers and of the nation?

With this singleness of purpose the CIO offers the following concrete program for the establishment of real unity between the CIO and the AFL which will serve labor and our nation:

PROPOSE JOINT ACTION

(a) The CIO and the AFL Executive Councils shall meet forthwith for the purpose of establishing a United National Labor Council consisting of representatives of both executive councils which will have the authority to formulate a program covering all issues which may in any way aid the cause of labor and the war program;

(b) This United National Labor Council shall undertake to make effective the program of cooperation and unity within the ranks of labor so that in every community there shall be rallied around labor all the people in the single endeavor to achieve a speedy victory over the Axis;

(c) Through this unity under the National Labor Council an increasing mutual confidence will be developed between the several National and International unions of the CIO and the AFL. On this firm basis, discussions can then be encouraged by the United National Labor Council between AFL and CIO unions having similar jurisdiction, looking toward organic unity. Such discussions will be predicated upon the basic principle that the interests of all members and of all unions shall be protected and any steps taken must receive the democratic approval of the membership involved. Finally, discussions held on such a basis will not lead to strife between unions or divert the energy of the unions and their members from the primary task of exerting the maximum effort behind the war program.

Political Action

Whereas, (1) In order to lead this nation to a final drive to victory in 1942 over the Axis powers, the President of the United States must have behind him full and unified support of a Congress fully committed to complete support of a program for unity and victory;

(2) The people of the United States are united in support of the President's leadership in the drive for victory and do not wish to have that unity disrupted by their representatives in the halls of Congress; and

(3) There are, unfortunately, now in Congress some representatives who, contrary to the desires and views of the people of the United States and of their own districts have engaged in defeatist tactics and have promoted disunity and have placed special interests above national necessity in the present war effort; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, that the Executive Board of the CIO (1) pledges its full efforts in all elections this year to secure election to the Congress of representatives, regardless of political faith or allegiance, who have demonstrated that they may be relied upon to back to the full the objectives of labor and the war effort of the government, and to promote national unity in wholehearted support of the President's leadership in our war against the Axis; and

(2) Instructs the national officers of the CIO to take the necessary steps to effectuate this pledge by rallying the national and international unions and the State and Local Industrial Union Councils of the CIO behind this program, and to obtain joint action with the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods throughout the nation in conformity with this pledge.

Wagner Resignation

This is to advise you that I herewith tender my resignation, effective immediately, as Board member of the United Mine Workers of America. I do so regretfully, because I have done my best to contribute to the work of the United Mine Workers of America in the best principles of trade unionism. But the working men and women whom I have been privileged to represent on the Board can no longer endure the dictatorial suppression of all democratic rights.

It is not possible for me to remain on the Board, and thereby condone this deprivation of their fundamental rights as American workers. I prefer to continue in the course which originally brought me into the United Mine Workers of America—as the representative of these workers, fighting for their aspirations and hopes with them.

Neither they nor I can any longer support the policies of the Executive Board of the United Mine Workers of America attacking the CIO, its President Philip Murray and granting only lip service to the President of the United States.

I believe that these feelings on the part of the membership of District 50 are the same feelings held by the other hundreds of thousands of working members of the United Mine Workers of America.

the preservation of unity in our war effort.

5. We reaffirm our stated policy of extending all aid to the members of the UMWA in whatever need may arise, disregarding the venom and spite exhibited by the international officials of that great organization.

6. We pledge on our part to redouble our support of our Commander-in-Chief and our work on the production lines, to enable our Nation and our allies to take the offensive to wipe Nazi barbarism from the face of the earth.

Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers' Representative Ben Riskin reports that a sensational string of Labor Board victories has been hung up by the International Union in the last few weeks. Within 48 hours the MM&SW won five key Labor Board victories: The huge Chase Brass and Copper Co. plant at Waterbury, Conn., voted 1591 for MM&SW to 456 against; the Phelps Dodge Laurel Hill Refinery, 601 to 219; the largest zinc smelter in the U. S., Bunker Hill and Sullivan at Kellogg, Idaho, 367 to 327; Kennecott Copper's subsidiary, Nevada Consolidated Copper at Santa Rita and Hurley, New Mexico; American Smelting and Refining Black Hawk Mine at Hanover, New Mexico, by 5 to 1.

These five elections won followed victories the week before at the American Smelting and Refining Omaha Lead Refinery and the Metal and Alloy plant at Buffalo.

The next few days will see the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers extending its record in elections at Buffalo American Brass; St. Joseph Lead smelter at Herculaneum, Mo.; Phelps Dodge mines at Bisbee, Arizona; American Magnesite at Chewelah, Washington, and the Telachi mines at Atlanta, Idaho.

The CIO Executive Board in session in Washington this week, expressed itself in no uncertain terms against those who would treat labor during this national crisis in a discriminatory manner, while allowing concessions for manufacturers and others by assuring them of prices as of March, and attempting to put over a wage freezing program when labor generally has suffered a reduction by the mounting cost of living, increased taxation, etc.

Labor is making every sacrifice, but expects to enjoy collective bargaining and the right to prove its case for wage adjustment, and when such proof is established, adjustments made accordingly. Workers of America are determined to outproduce the Axis on all the production fronts. They will demand that their legitimate aims and aspirations be treated with the same consideration as the employers', and that the right to organize and bargain collectively be maintained and union security be established.

As we have often stated, free labor can and will out-produce slave labor; but to be free labor, these fundamental rights must be accepted.

Tax According to Ability

Whereas, (1) The President's 7-point program for a national war economy has as its keystone the enactment of a tax program to prevent unreasonable war profits on the part of any corporation or individual and to limit individual incomes to $25,000 a year, and

(2) This program is essential to prevent further rises in the cost of living and to enable the attainment of maximum war output, and

(3) The workers of the nation are willing to bear their fair share of taxation, but such taxes must not be allowed to cut into the income necessary to maintain workers' efficiency and productive output, and

MUST FINANCE WAR

(4) Sufficient tax revenue must be collected in order to finance the war effort, and

(5) The House Ways and Means Committee has failed miserably to work out a tax program to meet the nation's needs, therefore be it

Resolved, (1) That the CIO call for a Federal tax program, based upon ability to pay, to collect at least $10,000,000,000 additional revenue above the present tax law. Such a program should include the following:

(a) Increases in corporate taxes to collect at least $3,500,000,000 of revenue by increasing the surtax and normal tax to 50 per cent, by maintaining the 93 per cent excess profits tax of the Ways and Means Committee and reducing the credits for the excess profits tax.

RAISE UPPER BRACKETS

(b) The raising of rates, especially in the middle and higher brackets of the income tax, based on present exemptions, to raise at least $4,500,000,000. The tax should provide that no person shall receive an income higher than $25,000 a year after taxes, as called for by the President.

(c) In order that these taxes may be effective, the serious loopholes pointed out by the Treasury should be plugged. The state and local tax exempt securities, held in large part by the rich, should be taxed. Mandatory joint returns for man and wife should be es eshdtalibc....t and wife should be established in order to prevent the rich from getting around their fair tax responsibility. Unfair depletion allowances of oil and mining corporations should be brought into line.

INCREASE GIFT LEVIES

(d) The additional revenues necessary to make up the total should be collected from increased rates on inheritances and gifts and by selected excise taxes on luxuries as proposed by the Treasury.

(2) The CIO and all its affiliates should bend every effort to bring about the enactment of such a program.

(3) The CIO shall call upon the President and the Treasury to use their every influence on behalf of this tax proposal.

(4) This resolution shall be sent to the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury, the members of the House Ways and Means Committee, and every member of the Congress.

To John L. Lewis:

Soldier-Miner's Open Letter Condemns Leader's War Policies

FORT THOMAS, Ky., June 6—An open letter to John L. Lewis from a soldier member of the United Mine Workers Union this week bluntly condemned the president of the organization for policies and acts "in direct opposition to a speedy and successful prosecution of the war against Fascism."

The writer was Charles A. Franklin, a member of UMW Local 12097, who said he wrote the letter in the hope that printing it might "help to pose and clarify the issue in the minds of thousands of my fellow mine workers."

"Once they understand the situation," Franklin said in explanation, "there can be no hesitation, I feel, in their support of the policies and leaders who best represent the interests of labor and of our country."

The letter to Lewis follows:

"I am a United Mine Worker and a soldier newly inducted into the country's armed forces. I address this open letter to you as a man of great ability and influence and as the International President of a union I have worked with all my might to build along the principles of true unionism.

"Because of your ability and influence and because of your exalted position in our union, you have a great responsibility to your brothers and your country.

RECOGNIZED RESPONSIBILITY

"In the weeks before I entered the armed forces I did some pretty stiff thinking. I recognized my responsibility in America's all-out, uncompromising struggle against the Fascist enslavers. For Fascism means death to unionism and democracy; Fascism means the most inhuman slavery the world has ever witnessed.

"These facts are clear and must be considered above all else. For the defeat of Fascist enslavement, my union brothers, both in the armed forces and on the battle lines of production, are prepared to give their all. No strings, no petty grievances, no personal ambitions are attached to their sacrifice.

"I wish to feel such confidence in the recent policies and acts of the President of the United Mine Workers. But to say it bluntly, these policies and acts are in direct opposition to a speedy and successful prosecution of the war against Fascism. Specifically, we Mine Workers question and condemn the following conditions as gravely endangering our unity and victory:

"(1) A half-hearted lip service to the war effort. A loud back-slapping for having bought defense bonds cannot cover the serious fact that the United Mine Workers Journal is silent on the major issues of the war—the battle for production, national unity, a western front—and makes no condemnation of Hitler and the Axis.

CITES HOSTILITY

"(2) Your continued (and unbecoming a man of your stature) hostility to our Commander-in-Chief and President of the United States, Franklin Roosevelt, and non-cooperation in the whole war program. Surely we are not to believe that you had rather embarrass the President than beat Hitler.

"(3) Your petty attacks upon your former friend and fellow builder in the labor movement, Philip Murray, president of the CIO. What quarrel could possibly justify the disruption of the unity and strength of our great labor movement in this perilous hour? Is the basis for these attacks to be found in Murray's all-out support of the war program?

"(4) The refusal to pay the customary per capita tax to the CIO —another decision upon which the wishes of the United Mine Worker membership was not consulted.

PETTY ATTEMPT

"(5) The sudden demand for repayment of money contributed by the United Mine Workers to assist organization in other industries and thus secure their own union. This seems on the surface to be a petty attempt to embarrass, at a time when constructive cooperation should be the slogan of all labor.

"(6) The recent raiding of other CIO unions and the stirring up of jurisdictional disputes.

"(7) The unsound scheme to organize farmers into the United Mine Workers, and at the same time hamper the organization of workers into other CIO unions.

APPEASER FRIENDS

"(8) Your continued association with Wheeler, and various appeasement forces in this country; also, the connection of your daughter, Kathryn Lewis, secretary of District 50, with the America First Committee without your protest or repudiation — even after Pearl Harbor.

"What is behind these policies? Their fruits are unmistakable——disruption of America's powerful labor movement at a time when the nation struggles for its very survival, and when a strong and unified labor, in the words of General MacArthur, is the very backbone of our victory. To obstruct the war effort, to divide and confuse, for whatever cause, in this hour of peril is to work for Hitler; to work for slavery.

"Now, the United Mine Workers have always been pioneers, have been the backbone of many a fight for freedom. Today many unions are pioneering in labor-management committees, dealing directly with the problems of production and the speeding of the war effort.

"The United Mine Workers stand for more than bond patriotism; they would welcome a program that would insure their maximum contribution toward the defeat of Fascist enslavement.

"I appeal to you, then, to give thought to the fruits of the policies which you now pursue, and know that where these lead the United Mine Workers will not follow. I call upon you to abandon all considerations of a personal complexion and devote yourself to the carrying out of the will of the mine workers—the speedy winning of this war.

"I am a soldier now, but I have implicit faith that my brothers at home will back me up and keep for me a union that will grow in strength, in unity, in wisdom, and in democracy.

"Very sincerely yours,
CHARLES A. FRANKLIN,
Local 12097.
"United Mine Workers of America."

that have been spared by the Attorney General, except when prodded by public opinion to take action against a few of the more notorious sedition mongers. Harry Bridges, and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union are today giving the nation and our allies the utmost in service for rapid and efficient shipment of war materials to the fighting fronts throughout the world. This service has been praised by high officials of the Army and Navy and other United States war agencies.

It would be a grave disservice to our country and to the cause of the democratic nations fighting Hitlerism to undermine this contribution by carrying out an order that is based neither on the facts nor on common sense.

The CIO has consistently defended Harry Bridges since the first attempts to deport him were made in 1938, because he is the elected leader of thousands of American workers whose working and living conditions have improved greatly under his leadership.

Now, therefore, the Executive Board of the CIO pledges continued full support, financial and in all other feasible ways, to Harry Bridges so that he may remain in this country to continue his contribution to the nation's war effort and to the welfare of the organized workers he represents;

And further calls on Attorney General Biddle to reverse his arbitrary and unfounded order directing the deportation of Harry Bridges;

And urges the President of the United States to act in the interests of our nation's war effort and of simple justice in refusing to permit the deportation of a union leader who has been twice acquitted of all charges brought against him.

A CIO Bridges Victory Committee shall be established for the purpose of offering full aid to Harry Bridges in the protection of his interests. This committee shall consist of Sherman Dalrymple, chairman; Joseph Curran, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum, R. J. Thomas, and David J. McDonald, secretary.

Free Labor Unity

Whereas, the organized trade union movements of the world are engaged in a united struggle against the common enemy and can strengthen the unity within and among the United Nations through greater cooperation with each other in accordance with the experience of the united action which has already been achieved between the British and Soviet Union trade unions; now, therefore be it

Resolved, that the CIO Executive Board authorize its national executive officers to take steps toward securing closer cooperation and unity of action between the organized workers of America, including the AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods, and the trade unions of the United Nations, including the Latin American nations, to the end that a united world labor movement may be the basis for winning the war against the Axis and securing a peace which will establish for all the people freedom of speech and assembly, freedom of religion, freedom from fear and freedom from want.

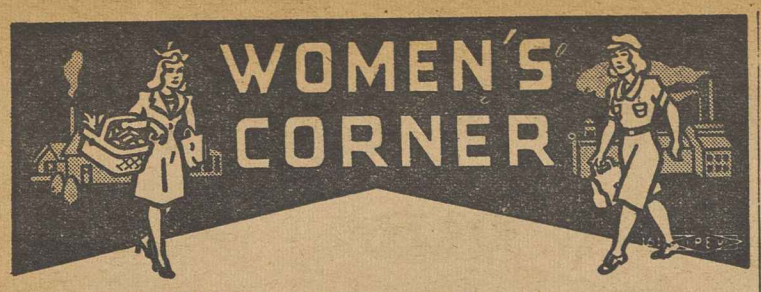
Labor-Management Committee Arranges Blood Donation

Detroit, Mich., June 6—Donation of 132 pints of blood was the first project of a joint worker-management Victory committee set up under a win-the-war contract signed between Local 26, United Office and Professional Workers of America (CIO) and the Maccabees. A Red Cross Mobile unit was brought into the Maccabees' building to receive the donations the day after the contract was signed.

Double-time pay in war stamps and bonds and increases to raise sub-standard wages were other features of the union shop agreement covering 200 insurance office workers. The Victory committee is now working out a comprehensive salvage campaign.

Steel Workers Hike War Bond Payments

Cleveland, O., June 6—The 60 members of Local 2523, United Steelworkers of America, this week voted to raise their regular payroll deductions for war bonds an average of $3 a month apiece, despite living costs.



Auxiliaries Call for Opening of New Front

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The immediate opening of a second front against Hitler in Europe in order to win the war in 1942 was the first point on the Victory programs adopted at the State conventions of CIO auxiliaries in Washington and Michigan.

The importance of training courses to prepare women to enter war production as they are needed and of day care facilities to care for children of working mothers were also emphasized in both programs. A fair and equitable system of rationing of all scarce consumer goods was urged by both groups.

The Washington Convention, held in Seattle, May 16 and 17 named Mrs. Eleanore Sinclair, of the Longshore auxiliaries, president, and Mrs. Loris Hall of the Woodworkers, secretary-treasurer for the year.

The Auxiliary Convention in Muskegon, Michigan, May 26 and 27, formally established a Michigan State CIO Women's Auxiliary Council and voted to affiliate with the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO. Mrs. Jennie Bennett of the Auto auxiliaries was chosen first president, and Mrs. Betty Larson, of the Rubber auxiliaries, secretary-treasurer.

Vice-presidents were elected from auxiliaries of the Oil Workers, the Paper and Novelty Workers, the Fur Workers, the Newspaper Guild and the Auto Workers.

AID VOTED

The Michigan State CIO Convention voted moral and financial support to the new women's council following an address by Mrs. Helen Goldman, executive secretary of the Auto auxiliaries.

Problems of youth in this war period was the central point of discussion at the meeting of delegates from Oil Workers auxiliaries of the 5th District held in Coffeyville, Kansas on May 15. Tire rationing cut down attendance and caused the women to decide to have district-wide meetings only twice a year for the duration.

A full report of auxiliary activities in New York is scheduled on the agenda of the New York State CIO Convention which meets June 19 and 20 in Syracuse, according to Mrs. Bea Abramson, New York State Auxiliary president. All New York auxiliaries are urged to send delegates to the Convention.

SPEED DRIVE

Reports from all over the country tell of plans of local auxiliaries to compete for the national auxiliary banner, to be awarded by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries to the local gaining most members in the three month period ending July 4.

The Los Angeles Auxiliary Council has offered a special prize to the Los Angeles auxiliary getting the most new active members during the drive—a service flag with a blue star for each member of the auxiliary's parent local in the armed forces.

Los Angeles also has established a regular "visiting day" when auxiliary members meet at CIO headquarters and go out to make home visits on prospects. Washington, D. C. Federal Workers Auxiliary is adopting this plan, too.

UAW auxiliaries are in the contest armed with a sheet of suggestions from their national office and a new organizing leaflet called "Hey Pop! Take me Home to Mom," which outlines the auxiliary program. Each auxiliary is urged to have an information table at each meeting of its parent union and to have a speaker on the union agenda. In this way the union members are constantly reminded of the importance of the auxiliary and given an opportunity to assist by handing in names of prospects.

A Letter On National Unity

Boston, June 6—An eight-paragraph letter from the father of a U. S. Navy seaman, missing after the Japanese capture of Wake Island, this week said practically all that can be said about the national unity of this nation that is helping us to whip the Axis.

The letter, from E. F. Wilson of Glendale, California, was written to the New England Insurance Division of the United Office & Professional Workers Union, which recently voted to contribute an hour's pay a month to buy needed supplies for 1,142 AFL workers and 800 U. S. seamen and marines who were captured on Wake Island.

"Permit me to express to you and all the members of the Insurance Agents Union my deepest and most heartfelt gratitude for this most magnanimous action. The fact alone that a CIO union should feel constrained to aid brother workers—even AFL—is worthy of the highest praise alone.

"But I have a closer feeling than just unionism. You see, my only son is a prisoner of the Japs . . . at Shanghai.

"My son's name is Franklin Marquette Wilson, Seamen 2nd Class, USN. He was sent to Wake just before the outbreak of war. The last we heard from him directly was a letter dated December 6, postmarked Wake Island.

"We have already written one letter to our son, but I am hastening to write another. In that I shall see that he is fully informed of your union's action and ask him to see that all other prisoners are so informed.

"Words seem so puny in expressing thanks for what the union has done. But I know that you and your members will realize all that I feel."

CIO Asks Place in War Bond Drive

Washington, June 6—The CIO this week asked the Treasury Dept. to grant labor equal recognition with management in pushing sale of war bonds, in the belief that cooperation on bond sales would yield as good results as joint labor-management cooperation on production.

CIO Secretary James B. Carey reported to the CIO Executive Board that he has asked Treasury Secretary Morgenthau to reorganize the bond setup by placing sales in the hands of a committee of 15, five to be named by Morgenthau, five by labor and five by management.

Stooge Union Out

Washington, June 6—Abolition of the company-dominated Employes Association at the Emerson Radio & Phonograph Corp., New York City, and reinstatement with back pay of a worker laid off unfairly was recommended to the NLRB in the intermediate report of a trial examiner.

Board Reviews Bills Pending In Congress Two Good, One Bad

WASHINGTON, June 6—The aims and present status of three bills supported or opposed by the CIO now pending before Congress were outlined in the Legal Department's report to the CIO Executive Board in session here this week. The measures are the Anti-Poll Tax, the Anti-Racketeering, and the Senate Dependency bills.

The Anti-Poll Tax bill holds it unlawful for any state or person to require payment of a poll tax as a requisite for voting for federal office. Members of the Senate subcommittee have questioned the constitutionality of the measure on the basis that voters for Congressmen in each state must have the "qualifications" required.

"Without becoming involved in a technical legal discussion of the complexities in this argument," the report states, "it can be pointed out briefly that this bill contends that payment of a poll tax cannot be said to be a "qualification" for voting.

"Moreover in support of the bill it is noted that Congress has been upheld in exercising full power to enact legislation necessary to protect the ballot box from fraud and corruption."

ATTACK ON LABOR

The so-called Anti-Racketeering Bill introduced by Congressman Hobbs and reported by the House Judiciary Committee, "adds little or nothing to the protection against racketeering and affords only an additional attack on labor organizations," the Legal Department reports, in explaining objections to the measure.

Pointing out that without adding any strength to the drive against real racketeering, the bill would make it possible for a court to decide that the obtaining of a wage increase through a employer's fear of a strike could be construed as a violation of the act.

CIO SUPPORT

Reporting on the Senate Dependency bill providing for specific monthly allotments to families to soldiers, the report points out that Title 2, providing for supplemental allowances by the Federal Security Agency in cases of special need, had been eliminated by both the Senate and the House.

"While the fight for reinstatement of some provision of prompt supplementary allowances in cases of special need should not be abandoned," the report says, "as between the House and the Senate bills in their present status, there is no doubt that the Senate bill is far preferable and should be supported by labor."

In its present form, the Senate bill provides larger allowances to soldiers' families than the House version. The Senate bill also contains provision for insurance with premium charges divided between the government and the soldiers.

Honor United Nations In Flag Day Rites

Washington, June 6—Flag Day this year will be an expression of international solidarity in the cause of crushing the Axis, for President Roosevelt has asked that on June 14 the flags of all the United Nations be honored, in addition to our own.

In a proclamation, the President declared:

"For many years it has been our American custom to set aside June 14 in honor of the flag, the emblem of our freedom, our strength, and our unity as an independent nation under God.

"Now we are fighting in the greatest cause the world has known. We are fighting to free the people of this earth from the most ruthless, the most savage enemy the world has ever seen. We are dedicating all that we have and all that we are to combat. We will not stop this side of victory.

"We as a nation are not fighting alone. In this planetary war we are a part of a great whole: we are fighting shoulder to shoulder with the valiant peoples of the United Nations, the massed, angered forces of common humanity. Unless all triumph all will fail.

"For these reasons it is fitting that on our traditional Flag Day we honor not only our own colors but also the flags of those who have, with us, signed the Declaration by United Nations, paying homage to those nations awaiting liberation from the tyranny we all oppose, to those whose lands have escaped the scars of battle, to those who have long been heroically fighting the blaze and havoc of war."

Flag Week

The Congress of Industrial Organizations joins enthusiastically with all good Americans in the patriotic celebration of Flag Week, June 8-14. June 12 is set aside as Workers' Day in this flag week. It will see CIO unions joining with the rest of labor in many functions in the true spirit of national unity.

Particularly welcome is the action of President Roosevelt in dedicating Flag Day, June 14, as a day of honor not only to the American flag but also to the flags and peoples of all 26 United Nations. No spirit of nationalistic jingoism will mar this day, but rather it will celebrate the united war effort of all freedom-loving peoples to destroy fascist slavery once and for all.

By HARRY READ

DETROIT, Mich., June 6—The Fifth Annual Convention of the Michigan CIO Council ended a momentous three-day session in the Armory at Muskegon this week after adopting by an overwhelming majority a Victory Program that pledged all out effort to win the war against Germany, Japan and Italy, fighting in conjunction with Russia, Britain, China and the other United Nations. Eleven hundred delegates attended.

The convention denounced with but three dissenting votes John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, for "sniping, raiding and splitting tactics" that are hampering the war effort.

SCHOLLE RE-ELECTED

August Scholle was re-elected president and Ben Probe secretary-treasurer.

The convention program called for:

An equally gigantic offensive on the political front to retire from public office "every reactionary official, labor-baiter, appeaser, Quisling and pro-Hitlerite who is using his office to attack the war effort."

BOOST PRODUCTION

A third and equally important offensive on the production front to turn out the weapons that will bring quick victory to the United Nations.

A War Economy for Victory treatment of the rising cost of living, the rationing of all consumer goods, a people's program of taxation, maintenance of wage and hour standards and the rising of substandard wages.

War Activities which treated of civilian defense, purchase of war bonds and full support of the CIO war relief program.

Under the heading of Unity, the Victory Program urged a ban on discrimination of any sort that might divide the American people, and the formation of Labor Victory Committees jointly between the CIO and the AFL.

BACK MURRAY

The Victory Program quoted President Philip Murray and reiterated the loyalty of the Michigan CIO Council's affiliated unions to his leadership. The Lewis situation flared into the open at the convention on the third day, when R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO, appeared as a guest speaker.

"There are those going up and down this country deliberately trying to castigate Philip Murray, the greatest labor leader we have today," Thomas said.

"There are men from District 50 sitting in this hall," said Thomas, "and with them I have no quarrel. But I do have a quarrel with their national leadership which is doing everything it possibly can to disrupt the CIO. They are not going to get away with it."

No candidate for office campaigned on a "support Lewis" platform, and both Scholle and Leiper were on record before the convention in support of Murray.

The convention adopted resolutions supporting the opening of a new front against Germany at the earliest possible moment, seeking unity with the AFL in the war effort, and demanding the appointment of labor representatives to positions on government boards. Other resolutions pledged support of President Roosevelt's 7-point program and of the CIO tax program. Others urged seizure of Martinique and other Vichy possessions in the Western Hemisphere, and the taking over by government of merchant shipping controlled by companies that are following a "business as usual" policy in the face of the war emergency.

Record War Songs

New York, June 6—New war songs by the Almanac Singers were issued this week by Keynote Recordings. The album contains songs such as: "Round and Round Hitler's Grave," "Deliver the Goods," "Side by Side," "The Reuben James," and "Belt Line Girl," dealing with the battle front and production for victory.

CIO Sports

New York, June 6—A CIO proposal for a city-sponsored program of sports and athletics in the interest of physical fitness for future selectees and war production workers will become a reality shortly, Secretary Saul Mills of the New York Industrial Union Council reported this week. The City Park Dept. has accepted the CIO proposal, which will involve sports and athletic exercises on the lawns of city parks.

Standard Oil Labor Policy Blasted by Miss Zara DuPont

WASHINGTON, June 6—The Standard Oil Co. was staggered with two punches to the chin this week.

A charge that the company's labor policies are as disruptive of national unity and as damaging to the war effort as the cartel deals Standard made with Nazi corporations was made at an annual stockholders' meeting by Miss Zara DuPont, elderly member of the munitions family.

Meanwhile, Asst. Attorney General Thurman Arnold told the Senate Truman Investigating Committee that Standard of New Jersey officials had repeatedly lied to the Committee to cover up the Company's relationship with the Nazi-dominated I. G. Farbenindustrie.

Miss DuPont urged that Standard cease dominating so-called "employes' associations," pointing out that the anti-labor policies of the Company are not only costing stockholders money but are disrupting the war effort.

Asking adoption of an NLRB trial examiner's report forbidding domination of such associations, Miss DuPont said:

ANSWER TO HITLER

"Acceptance of the report now would do much to dispel the idea that Standard has been, and continues to be, the progenitor and chief advocate of company unionism in American labor relations.

"It would be an answer to Hitler's friends in America who think that they can divide and disrupt our national unity. It would put Standard squarely on the side of the American people in the fight against Hitler."

Arnold, before the Truman Committee, charged that Standard representatives failed to tell the truth about 10 major points. Among those he challenged were:

That Standard's cartel obligations never interfered with the Company's cooperation with the U. S. Government.

That Standard got valuable basic information on synthetic toluol and aviation gas from I. G. Farben.

That Standard did not intend that its cartel deal with the Germans should extend throughout the war.

That Standard did not refuse to give to the American government information it already had given to the Nazis.

SABOTAGED ARMY

"Standard did not tell the Committee that a program desired by the U. S. Army for the development of fuels which would have put our Army ahead of the rest of the world as regards performance of their fighting equipment was contrary to Standard's obligations to I. G. Farben," Arnold testified.

"It (Standard) did not tell the Committee that the Assistant Secretary of State had to threaten to blacklist the Standard subsidiary before the shipment of gasoline to the Axis airlines in South America was stopped."

Standard, Arnold said, attempted "to cover up and mislead" the investigating Committee by its "deliberate effort to frustrate the development of a synthetic rubber program in this country unless it were allowed to dominate it."

Seek Speed In Canadian Shipbuilding

Toronto, (ALN)—The appearance of Nazi submarines in the waters of the St. Lawrence has intensified the insistence of Canadian shipyard workers on drastic measures to speed Canada's shipping output.

"There is cause for concern at the slowness of production in our shipyard," says a resolution adopted at the Toronto Shipbuilding Co. The resolution instructs the union's executive committee to "take all necessary steps looking to establishment of a joint production council of the management, our Brotherhood and other unions in the shipyard."

800 MEET

At Midland, Ontario, a meeting organized by shipyard workers, but attended by 800 local citizens from all walks of life, passed a comprehensive resolution calling on the Ottawa government to do something about shipbuilding. Important demands endorsed by the Midland meeting were:

That the government call a general conference of representatives of shipyard labor, management and government, to go over the whole shipbuilding situation, discuss production methods, and determine how higher production levels can be established at once.

That a shipyard labor representative be appointed to the already existing Federal Shipbuilding Board.

That management-labor production committees be established in Canadian shipyards and that collective bargaining be enforced in all of them.

Chinese Scrap Iron From Japanese Mines

KWEILIN, CHINA, June 6—(ALN)—This correspondent's recent journey through Southeast China has revealed vividly the way in which the skill and ingenuity of Chinese workers are offseting the scarcity of war materials caused by the enemy's tight blockade.

Take the case of an arsenal I came across close to the Kwangtung coast. Most of its workers came from Shanghai, where they had been employed until the capture of that city by the Japanese in the fall of 1937. Rather than work for the enemy, they had escaped into the interior, destroying their factory behind them.

Now they are working under the technical direction of a former General Motors engineer from Flint, Michigan.

The way in which they get their scrap iron is decidedly resourceful. Using the junks of local fishermen, they cut loose Japanese mines, carefully laid to tighten the blockade of the China coast, drag them ashore and melt them down. With the metals thus obtained they make boilers, rifle parts and hardsteel axles.

The workers in this arsenal also manufacture anti-aircraft guns out of derelict locomotives and machine-gun magazines out of hardened blue oil drums. Recently the British Military Mission, with headquarters in Chungking, visited an arms plant in this area. It announced that the Bren guns being turned out there were in no way inferior to Bren guns made in England.

RADIO FACTORY

On my journey of escape from Hongkong, I visited a radio factory hidden in the hills of Kwangsi. Every month this factory turns out 500 military transmitters and receivers, as well as commercial receivers and one-kilowatt radiophones. China now makes all the radio equipment she needs. Radios are particularly useful in enabling guerrillas operating behind the enemy lines to keep in touch with regular Chinese armies. The guerrillas act as intelligence scouts for Chinese and American bombing pilots.

The machine tools used in this radio factory—lathes, planers, drills, bakelite molders—have all been made in China since the start of the war, with the exception of sixty precision lathes made in South Bend, Indiana. These American lathes were flown into China recently by way of India.

Another plant I visited is turning out highly efficient anthracite gas converters for army trucks. The workers here have the cooperation of an internationally-known fuel researcher, who before the war was a consultant to the French government, and who is a veteran of many international engineering conferences.

Ford Local Pledges 100% War Relief Effort

WASHINGTON, June 6—Ford Local 600 of the United Automobile Workers, with a membership of 80,000, today pledged itself to have 100 per cent subscription to the CIO War Relief fund within 30 days. According to Monroe Sweetland, national director of the CIO War Relief Committee, the Ford employes are taking action to donate at least one hour's pay per month to the official Relief Committee of the CIO.

Sweetland viewed the action of the Ford employes as evidence that the men who are fighting on the home front on the assembly line, building tanks and planes, are also doing their bit by contributing to the relief of the victims of war—the American prisoners in the hands of the enemy, their families in distress, and the heroic civilians of Russia, China and Britain.

ENDORSED BY COUNCIL

The action of the Ford employes in support of the CIO program for war relief followed the endorsement of the National CIO War Relief Committee last week by the Convention of the Michigan State Industrial Council at Muskegon, representing 500,000 members.

Another convention which passed a resolution last week in support of the CIO War Relief Committee's drive for an hour's pay per month, was that of the Aluminum Workers, at Eau Clair, Wisconsin.

An agreement for mutual support was entered into by the CIO War Relief Committee and the Navy Relief Society, last week. The agreement accorded "recognition of the important role of the Navy Relief Society in serving the needs of the men of the U. S. Navy and their families, thereby helping to maintain the morale and the effectiveness of this vital branch of our country's armed forces."

LABOR COMMITTEE NAMED

A special Labor Committee was appointed, including Irving Abramson, national chairman; and David J. MacDonald, secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers of America; R. J. Thomas, president of the United Rubber Workers; John Sherman Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers, John Green, president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; and Sweetland.

It was agreed that the first month's total contributions from all CIO shipyard workers were to be earmarked for the Navy Relief Society, but were to clear through the National CIO War Relief Committee.

The National Maritime Union this week sent $2,000 to the CIO War Relief Committee, with the request that it be allocated to Russian Relief, and $1,000 to be sent to the USO.

DONATES FOR BROADCASTS

The American Newspaper Guild contributed $100 with instructions that the money be used to promote international short-wave broadcasts by prominent CIO leaders to the workers in the countries dominated by Hitler.

United Packinghouse Workers, Local 347 of Chicago, sent in its first donation, a check for $501. Bedding Local 140 of the United Furniture Workers of America sent in a contribution of $1417, while the United Automobile Workers, Amalgamated Local 259 of New York City, donated $327.

No 'Weaker Sex' in War! Women Can Fill 80 Pct. Of Jobs, Says McNutt

WASHINGTON, June 6—Women aren't the "weaker sex" in wartime! A survey of occupations in 21 key war industries this week indicated that 80 per cent of the jobs could be performed by women, according to Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission.

The survey covered 1,859 jobs in war industries and 937 non-war jobs, and ranged all the way from aircraft manufacturing to shipbuilding.

Among the occupations which women are performing satisfactorily are a wide variety called for in the manufacture and assembly of parts for motors, radios, recording instruments and airplane gauges, McNutt said. The development of new machinery, he added, now makes possible the employment of women even in the manufacture of heavy shells and other types of munitions. Methods formerly used made it necessary to employ men only.

Even in the ship and boat-building industry, it was found women could be satisfactorily used as boilermakers' helpers, draftsmen, machinists' helpers, blueprint machine operators and flash welders. It was also found that women could be satisfactorily employed in foundry work as casting cleaners, finishers and polishers, as machine core makers and facing mixers.

"Women," said McNutt, "have shown that they can do, or learn to do almost any kind of work. Thousands already are working in jobs which have customarily been filled by men, and the development of our manpower mobilization program may require a more general use of those who have the physical strength and other characteristics necessary to do the work."

Volunteer As 'Guinea Pigs'

London—(ALN)—Miners in South Wales coal fields who volunteered as guinea pigs in a study of silicosis conducted by the Home Office and the Mines Department, have asked the government to publish its report soon. Lack of protective legislation against silicosis, it is asserted by the Miners' Federation of Great Britain, costs hundreds of thousands of pounds a year and accentuates the manpower problem of the hard-pressed coal industry.

Thousands of miners at selected pits, particularly in the Aberdare area, center of the anthracite district, have been X-rayed at regular intervals for the last four years, in what has been described as one of the greatest medical research experiments in recent times.

Unionists To Help Farmers With Crops

Muncie, Ind., June 6 — Aid to farmers short of hands to harvest crops was pledged this week by the CIO and AFL, through the Agricultural Advisory Committee of the Muncie Defense Council.

Unionists have pledged to help on their day off whenever farm labor runs short. Farmers have agreed to pay competent city workers $3 a day and one meal. The unions have urged city workers temporarily unemployed because of priorities or conversion to take casual farm work to help win the war.

War News By River In Siberia

Kuibyshev, USSR, June 6—(ALN)—In the remote interior of the Soviet Union, news travels slowly. Lumberjacks and loggers in the depths of Siberian forests have received only brief news bulletins by short wave since the start of the Red Army's winter offensive last December.

During the winter months, union delegates of the powerful Lumber Workers' Union, with a membership of many tens of thousands in the Krasnoyarsk district in Siberia, have taken extensive educational courses. Now, as the ice is breaking up on the great rivers of the territory, they are leaving for remote rafting stations where they will give lectures on the progress of the war.

TRAVEL BY RIVER

With them they are taking mobile motion picture projectors and late news reels and features issued by Russian studios. They will travel along the rivers, the only means of communication in these areas except by air, giving showings at rafting stations and lumber camps.

When I asked Anna Tarakanova, vice chairman of the Krasnoyarsk Committee of the Lumber Workers, about her union in wartime, she said:

"Two important jobs faced the local branches of the Lumber Workers from the first days of the war: aid the front in every possible way and promote the most rational organization of labor in the rear."

WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

CIO'S NEW HOME: This new building, just a block away from the White House in Washington, will house the national headquarters of the CIO after mid-August. CIO bought the building, part of which is now occupied by the National Republican Committee, and will move in after alterations have been completed.

Union Members Rally to Murray, CIO Policies

WASHINGTON, June 13—From every section of the country CIO-affiliated unions were this week voicing their approval of the "win the war" program of Pres. Philip Murray and lashing out at disruptionists and defeatists both within and without the organized labor movement.

Significantly, a large proportion of the support for CIO came from within the ranks of the United Mine Workers, whose top leadership has embarked on a campaign of slander and obstruction in a vain effort to halt CIO progress.

More than 100 District 50, UMW, locals have already severed their ties with the miners' union and rejoined the CIO through the newly-created National Council of Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, it was revealed by Martin Wagner, chairman of the council. He said a convention would be held in mid-summer to adopt a constitution and receive a charter as a CIO international union.

Meanwhile an effort by A. D. Lewis, brother of the UMW president, to lead several thousand construction workers out of the CIO met a stormy reaction from locals affiliated with the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee. Open rebellion against Lewis' effort to hook up the UCWOC with District 50 was reported throughout the country.

Dissolution of the UCWOC as a CIO committee was announced by Secretary James B. Carey, following a meeting of the UCWOC attended by four of its five members. The group, comprising Murray, Carey, and Vice Presidents Thomas and Dalrymple, urged locals to affiliate with the CIO as local industrial unions—an invitation that was gaining a quick response from members fed up with Lewis' divisionist shenanigans.

CIO Barbers Aid War; Bond Sales Talk Comes With Shaves, Haircuts

Brooklyn, N. Y., June 13—Next time you walk into your favorite Brooklyn CIO barbershop for that shave or haircut, your barber isn't going to be talking about the weather. Instead he's going to give you a sales talk for War Bonds and Stamps.

In a circular to all members, Director John Tartamella and Sec.-Treas. P. C. Di Neri pointed out that while "ours is a service trade, nevertheless our work is most essential. We are cultivating human neatness and beauty. The personal appearance has a strong bearing for the maintenance of the morale of each individual."

The message continues:

"Make it your business to speak to all your patrons to buy government Stamps and Bonds. Tell them to do that each day; each week; each month.

"Tell them that each bond they buy means ammunition, tanks and planes for our men in the front lines.

"Tell them it means to destroy tyranny and despotism. Tell them that each Bond they buy is the symbol of our faith and determination to defend our freedom and liberty."

Full Speed Ahead!

BALTIMORE, Md., June 13—"Damn the schedules! Full speed ahead! Keep those Liberty Ships sliding to beat the Axis! Build ships faster, come hell or high water, until the free forces of the world have forever destroyed the forces of Fascism and aggression!"

That's a porthole glimpse of the militant spirit that dominated the "Win the War Production Conference," held last week by Local 43, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers. It was the first such conference in the industry.

ADOPT PROGRAM

Hailed by important national figures and addressed by John Green, president of the Shipyard Union, the conference unanimously went on record for this program to increase production:

1. Build morale and understanding of the war.
2. Fight all discrimination. Train Negro workers.
3. Study technical methods for more efficient management.
4. Organize competition to spur production.
5. Establish joint training programs.
6. Guarantee the piece rate system.
7. Organize the unorganized to win the war.
8. Consolidate the union.
9. Guard health and safety of workers.
10. Buy bonds to help win the war.

The local also voted full support for CIO President Philip Murray and asked President Roosevelt to intervene in the Harry Bridges deportation proceedings.

Unions in N. Y. War Day March

New York, June 13.—Every major war industry in this city was graphically depicted in action this weekend by 250 New York CIO unions as their members marched in the great New York at War Day parade on Fifth Ave.

Organized by the New York Industrial Union Council, unions manned 24 colorful floats, many of them jointly sponsored by employers and employes, to tell the dramatic story of increased production and speeded transport to beat Fascism.

OFF TO WORK WE GO: Old timers may blink at scenes like this, but they're becoming common as American women lend a hand to the war effort. These girls, carrying their own tools, are on their way to work at a U. S. arsenal where they're rebuilding and re-equipping tanks and trucks for the army.

Bridges Ouster Order Brings Flood of Protests

WASHINGTON, June 13 — Support for Harry Bridges, ordered deported by Attorney-General Biddle despite two acquittals on all the charges against him, continued to roll in from unions and citizens groups all over the country.

Following action of the CIO Executive Board at last week's meeting, and on the urging of President Murray, a Bridges Victory Committee consisting of the six CIO vice presidents and David J. MacDonald, secretary of the United Steelworkers of America, was set up to raise funds and to publicize the case.

Murray announced at the time that the committee would raise money not only for legal expenses but also to bring the facts of the case to the American public. Sherman H. Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers is chairman of the committee, with MacDonald acting as secretary.

LEGAL STATUS

Bridges is at present free on a habeas corpus writ secured from the courts. Biddle had earlier denied an appeal for a review of the case, holding that his arbitrary order was not subject to appeal. Biddle has also been busy striving to give the impression that the order is absolutely final and cannot be revoked. The Bridges Committee will fight the case through the Supreme Court if necessary.

Meantime, Bridges received assurances that he would thoroughly be welcome in Australia, in a cable sent to him by the Australian Attorney-General, John O. Beasley. Bridges, in his reply, pledged that the longshoremen would keep up the rapid flow of war materials and said that "the main fight is still against Hitler and Japan."

Protests to Biddle and to President Roosevelt and promises of support for Bridges were forthcoming from CIO unions and councils throughout the country, all of them stressing the decision as a blow to national unity and morale for the war effort.

CIO Sweeps Illinois Poll

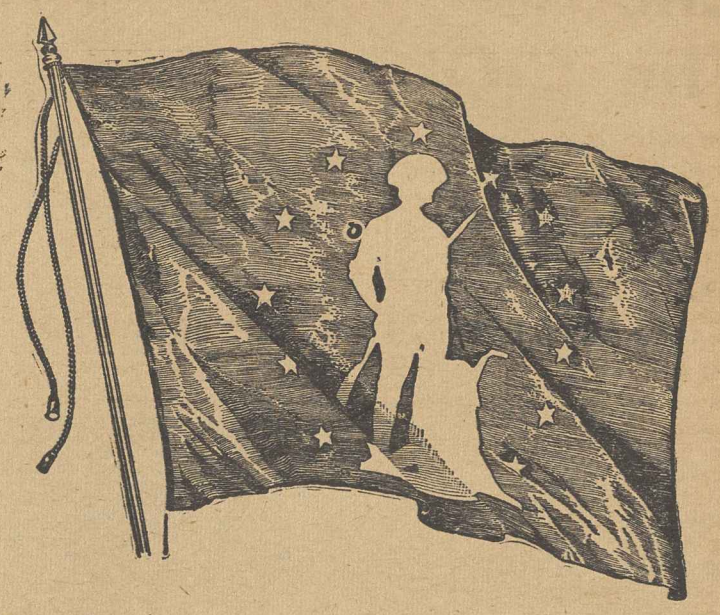
In an NLRB election, they cast 931 votes for the Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee, to only 211 against. The election brings the number of the company's plants under CIO union bargaining rights to six. A whirlwind organizing campaign preceded the vote.

Pres. Ray Downey of FEWOC Local 120 commented that the results show Allis-Chalmers workers "stand four-square behind the CIO's program, not only on the question of better wages and conditions, but on its all-out, win-the-war policy."

SYMBOL OF PATRIOTISM



MINUTE MAN FLIES HIGH.—This is the new Minute Man War Bond Flag, designed by the Treasury Department for firms and organizations which attain more than 90 percent participation in War Savings Bonds purchases by their employees or members through a systematic purchase plan. The Minute Man is emblazoned in white on a blue background, surrounded by thirteen stars, representing the Nation's thirteen founding States. When companies, labor unions, and other organizations top the 90-percent figure, they will receive a special Minute Man Certificate of Award signed by Secretary Morgenthau, the State Administrator, and the State Chairman of the War Savings Staff, the Treasury Department announced. This certificate entitles the recipient to fly the flag, which is being manufactured in various sizes and is sold by licensed suppliers at a nominal price.

You Gotta Have Rhythm!

Boogie Woogie, Rug Cutting Music Helps Boost Production

WASHINGTON, June 13—You gotta have rhythm to win this war. Acting on that theory—if you don't believe it works, try it!—more than 500 American factories, arsenals and shipyards are wired for sound, and are offering everything from boogie woogie, rug cutting rhythms to Beethoven to increase production for victory.

Boogie woogie and symphonies helped launch the battleship "Alabama" nine months ahead of schedule. When the Alabama slid off the ways at Norfolk Navy Yard, she had become known as "the rhythm ship" because her welders, riveters and fitters were spurred on by recorded music.

Eight million British war workers have increased the tempo of their work to the music of Benny Goodman and Beethoven during the past two years.

British factories discovered shortly after the outbreak of the war that workers' production rose tremendously when both popular and classical music was "piped" into war plants and broadcast over the loudspeakers.

British experience showed an increase in factory output ranging from 6% to nearly 12% as a result of the use of music in war plants.

Two one-half hour programs, called "Music While You Work," are "piped" into British factories each day by the British Broadcasting System.

Manpower Council Gets 3 From CIO

Washington, June 13—A voice for America's organized workers in the War Manpower Commission was at least partially achieved this week with announcement of the appointment of a 14-member management-labor policy committee.

Represented on the committee are seven employer representatives and seven from labor. Its functions, as outlined by Commission Chairman Paul McNutt, will be to "consider and recommend to the chairman on matters of major policy concerning the activities and responsibilities of the Commission." In addition, the employer-labor group is empowered to make its own studies and surveys, offer suggestions for manpower policies and consider problems referred to it by the chairman.

CIO REPRESENTATIVES

Representing CIO on the committee are Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers of America; Walter Reuther of the United Automobile Workers; and John Green of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

The AFL representatives are Frank Fenton, John P. Frey and George Masterton. A seventh member, representing the railway brotherhoods, will be named soon.

The same six labor officials are also serving as a policy committee to direct the program of the WPB's labor production division, it was announced by Wendell Lund, division head.

"No major policies will be made or changed except with prior consultation with the committee," he declared.

Protect Public Schools in War, Is Murray Plea

Washington, June 13—"It is our profound conviction that the war must not be used to weaken or destroy our system of public education," CIO Pres. Murray declared in a statement to the Natl. Education Assn. this week.

"To the contrary," he said, "it must be a part of war effort to strengthen our educational system.

Pointing out that labor has always stood in the forefront of those demanding expansion of the public education system, the CIO leader said that during wartime especially there must be provision for "well-paid teachers who are given the protection they need so that they may impartially teach the truth and honestly prepare youth for the changing conditions in the world.

"We must stand firmly against any attempt to lower school standards during this period, against any attempt to impair our war effort and the post-war world by depriving our children of their right to an education."

Hobbs Bill Against Labor Hits Snag

Washington, June 13.—An attempted sneak maneuver to put the Hobbs so-called "anti-racketeering" bill through the House Rules Committee stalled today when labor's opposition was made clear to the committee members.

Rep. Hobbs, the Alabama poll-taxer who wrote the Bridges exile bill and the infamous concentration camp bill, both killed in previous Congressional sessions, had planned to secure an early rule permitting the bill to come on the House floor.

JOINT DEFENSE

CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood representatives joined to stop him, and at time of writing had succeeded in stalling the bill in committee. The danger that it would go through still remains acute, however.

All three labor representatives were unanimous in denouncing the bill as a stab in the back for labor, coming at a time when every union and every worker in the country is doing the utmost for war production.

Under the mask of preventing racketeering, the bill would subject unions to court procedures that would inevitably be used by hostile judges to interfere with almost any normal trade union activity. Nathan Cowan, CIO's legislative representative, has already testified against the bill before the House Judiciary Committee.

Gotham CIO Advises: Let 'Ex' Mark Spot For Tory Congressmen

New York, June 13.—In the interest of the "most vigorous possible prosecution of the war," the New York City Industrial Union Council this week started a drive to put an "ex" before the names of five Congressmen who have opposed President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

The five are: Representative Leonard W. Hall and William B. Barry of Queens, and James A. O'Leary, Martin J. Kennedy and William T. Pheiffer of Manhattan.

"The most important question before the American people today," said Council Secretary Saul Mills, "is how to attain the utmost possible efficiency in the prosecution of the war against the Axis. The key to this and to the attainment of maximum efficiency on the home front is the election of a Congress which will guarantee vigorous and unqualified support of President Roosevelt's foreign and domestic policies."

Mills said that "the CIO will support candidates for Congress who are 100 per cent pro-Roosevelt, pro-labor and anti-Fascist," and hence has unanimously endorsed Congressman Vito Marcantonio for re-election.

Standard Oil Plant Goes CIO

By TRAVIS K. HEDRICK

TEXAS CITY, Tex., June 13—The Standard Oil empire, citadel of the open shop and company unionism in the American petroleum industry, has received its first major jolt in a significant CIO victory here.

More than 1,000 workers are employed at Standard of Indiana's huge Pan American refinery in this gulf port city. Last week they cast 462 votes for the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union to 375 for the AFL.

The refinery until recently was the stronghold of the Texas City Employes' Federation—an organization that destroyed itself in a last minute effort to swing its membership to four combined AFL craft unions.

Starting in mid-February with exactly six members out of 1,011 eligible workers, the CIO Oil Workers, Organizing Campaign met the combined resistence of the company, the employes' federation and the AFL.

Almost as soon as Director Edwin S. Smith of OWOC assigned a staff of five organizers to the Pan-American situation, the TCEF filed a petition with the National Labor Relations Board for an election.

FINAL GASP

When the election was finally set for May 5, the OWOC-CIO appeared to have the situation in hand, with the employes' federation and the AFL dividing the opposition. On May 3, however, the employes federation suddenly withdrew from the ballot and circularized the plant with appeals for the workers to vote for the AFL.

This switch confused the situation so much that on May 5 neither the AFL or the CIO obtained a majority of the ballots cast and a run-off election was ordered by the NLRB for June 5. The vote May 5 was AFL 354; CIO 355, while 136 voted for "neither" union.

With a run-off assured, the CIO enlisted scores of volunteers among the workers and doubled its membership during the four weeks between the two elections.

With the Pan-Am victory under its belt, the OWOC turned to the next Standard plant on its list—the big Humble Oil refinery at Baytown and Goose Creek, Tex. A staff will move into this situation in the next few days.

Sinclair Oil, Union Agree On Severance

Fort Worth, Tex., June 13—The first contract in the oil industry to contain a severance pay provision was signed this week by the Oil Workers International Union with the Sinclair Co., covering 9,000 employes. Severance pay is computed on length of service.

The pact also provides exclusive bargaining rights for all operations in field, pipe line and refineries except the Wellsville, N. Y., refineries, and contains maintenance of membership, and check-off clauses.

Buffalo CIO Council Attacks Disrupters

BUFFALO, N. Y., June 13—Continued strong support for the policies of CIO President Philip Murray and equally sharp critism of the "rule or ruin gambles" of John L. Lewis were voiced in a resolution passed by the Buffalo Industrial Union Council.

The council called upon all locals in the vicinity to take similar action.

"It is our belief that the overwhelming majority of members of the United Mine Workers of America wish to remain in the CIO and to follow the leadership of Pres. Philip Murray, who is giving his life to rallying every force of the labor movement to win this people's war.

"The attitude of members of District 50, United Mine Workers, in this area is not a matter of belief with us—it is a matter of knowledge. They joined the CIO with us of the other unions, they subscribed to the same principles with us and they have fought shoulder to shoulder with us for these principles.

"They are still with us, and they will remain with us, and we will remain with them when the maneuvers and the machinations of the power-proud have been defeated by the rank and file members of our sister union."

They All Choose The CIO!

WASHINGTON, June 13—A series of major Labor Board elections showed this week that the attacks of defeatists and disrupters aren't swerving American workers from their determination to be represented by the CIO for better conditions and for victory in the war.

Biggest of the elections was conducted at 19 war-busy plants of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., biggest subsidiary of U. S. Steel. Workers gave the United Steelworkers of America sole bargaining rights by voting 70,141 for the CIO to a mere 5,708 against. And at Natl. Tube Steel, another member of the Big Steel family, they voted 15,382 to 1,276 for the powerful CIO union, which has had U. S. Steel under contract since March, 1937.

Meanwhile, at the Pressed Steel Car Co. in McKeesport, Pa., 1,435 workers voted for the USA-CIO, to 793 against.

UTILITY ELECTION

Clear across the country, Oakland, Calif., employes of the powerful Pacific Gas & Electric climaxed a long organizing campaign by voting 809 ballots for the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee to only 201 for the AFL. The company is one of the biggest utility networks in the nation.

Down in Martin Dies' Texas district, the CIO won a vote of support from Standard Oil Pan Am. refinery employes. In a runoff poll they gave the Oil Workers Intl. Union 462 votes to 375 for an AFL affiliate that carried on a long campaign of slander against the industrial union.

And in New York, CIO unionism gained full status in the editorial offices of the Herald Tribune, generally recognized as the leading newspaper spokesman for the Republican Party. The New York Newspaper Guild received 176 votes to 79 against.

Also in New York, the CIO United Office & Professional Workers won its second election among industrial agents employed by the Metropolitan Insurance Co. The vote: CIO, 1,182; against, 778.

Two more election victories by the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union last week ran the organization's winning total up to nine straight.

At Herculaneum, Mo., Lead Workers Union 532 won 134 to 113, at a St. Joseph Lead Co. smelter. At Newark, N. J., Metal & Smelter Workers Union 595 took the long end of a 6 to 1 score at Forest Hill Foundry.

TO BRITAIN: Pres. Joseph Curran of the CIO National Maritime Union, who'll bring CIO greetings to the 12th session of the Joint Maritime Conference of the Intl. Labor Office. The parley opens in London June 22.

Hail RAF Bombings In Ruhr

Washington, June 13—CIO's applause for the devastating RAF raids on Cologne and Essen as a "prelude to a speedy all-embracing offensive, to carry the war to Hitler on his own territory" was cabled by the Executive Board to President Roosevelt, Premier Churchill and Generals Arnold and Somervell.

The wire said:

"The many millions of Americans are thrilled by the reports of the unprecedented mass bombings of Cologne and Essen by the valiant RAF. We greet with utmost enthusiasm the sentiments expressed by you that these bombings are but the prelude to a speedy all-embracing offensive, to carry the war to Hitler on his own territory and crush the Nazi machine between the pincers of the armies of the United States, Great Britain and Russia.

"The workers of America have been producing and delivering, in ever increasing numbers, the tanks, planes, guns and ships to meet the needs of the United Nations. We pledge to meet any and all additional needs of the armed forces to guarantee the complete annihilation of the Fascist Axis."

Proof of Pudding:

Output Councils Doing 5-Star Job

WASHINGTON, June 13—Joint labor-management committees definitely are speeding the day when American tanks, guns, ships and planes will be able to provide full cooperation in the battle of the United States to crush the Hitler-dominated Axis, the U. S. War Production Board reported this week.

The labor-management committee of the Westinghouse Manufacturing Co., division of East Pittsburgh, Pa., reported that with the cooperation of management and members of the United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers Union, its shipments in the first quarter of 1942 were 60 per cent above the corresponding period in 1941.

Number of employes had increased 24.4 per cent and payroll 48.3 per cent.

BOOST PRODUCTION

At the Philco Corp., in Philadelphia, employing UE members, the management reported that the joint production committee had helped to boost output in the metal division over 4,000 items since April 1.

The War Production Drive committee of the Great Lakes Steel Corp. reported that members of the United Steelworkers of America, working on blast furnace B at Ecorse, Michigan, broke a world's record by producing 43,478 tons during March, for an average daily production of 1,403 tons. The maximum was 1,608 tons in a single day.

The labor-management committee at the Goss Printing Co., of Chicago, reported that of 11 war items, members of the AFL Pattern Makers Union were producing five in excess of quota and six at quota rates.

Construction Local Hails CIO

Chicago, June 13.—Local 135 of the United Construction Workers, CIO, doesn't want anything to do with disrupters or defeatists.

In a recent resolution, the local praised the policies of Pres. Philip Murray, cited the gains for labor made during his term of office and added that "the active prosecution of the war against the Nazis to final victory and the welfare of labor in the peace that follows calls for the organized effort of all our people, now."

Murray, CIO Policies Win Overwhelming OK from Membership

WASHINGTON, June 13—While thousands of union locals this week voted endorsement of the CIO Executive Board's strongly-worded support of Pres. Philip Murray and his policies, national CIO officials moved fast this week to counter the divisionist and defeatist strategy of John L. Lewis and other top officials of the United Mine Workers of America.

These actions include:

1. Dissolution of the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, which its chairman, A. D. Lewis, had illegally "affiliated" with District 50 of the United Mine Workers. UCWOC locals are being asked to re-affiliate with the CIO as local industrial unions, and early reports indicated a widespread demand for continued membership in the CIO.

2. A mass break-away of District 50 locals throughout the country from the dictatorial Lewis organization back into the CIO, through a newly-created CIO National Council of Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers. Martin Wagner, who resigned from the UMW's executive board in protest against its anti-CIO action, is chairman of the new group.

3. Tentative plans for a convention of these gas and chemical workers locals early in August at which a national union will be formed.

Meanwhile, large numbers of communications being received at CIO headquarters here showed the resentment of tremendous numbers of locals, both within the United Mine Workers and in CIO-affiliated international unions, at the UMW's apparent declaration of war upon the CIO industrial union movement. CIO's Board a week ago ruled that the mine union is delinquent in its payment of per capita taxes to the organization, and the UMW's top leadership has violently denounced Pres. Murray and the CIO for refusing to submit to its dictatorial demands.

Murray and the CIO board reiterated strongly their support of Pres. Roosevelt's policies, all-out war effort and the principles of bona fide unionism. Those statements found a quick reaction among locals of District 50 in particular.

100 LOCALS

Martin Wagner, chairman of the National Council of Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, said that more than 100 locals and many officials of the District have come back into the CIO ranks, and the list is growing daily.

In St. Louis all six District 50 locals voted allegiance to the CIO, while in northern New Jersey—where the district had a large number of affiliates—the response has been 100 per cent, Wagner said.

Plans are now being worked out, it was understood, for a constitutional convention of these locals early in August, where a stabilized, democratic international union will be estalished. Exact details of the time and location have not yet been worked out.

CONSTRUCTION

Members of the United Construction Workers were also moving quickly this week to retain their affiliation with the CIO, following efforts by A. D. Lewis, their former chairman, to herd them into the United Mine Workers as a "construction workers division" of District 50.

Lewis' letter was sent out June 6, following a meeting of handpicked members of the organization's "policy board."

Construction Committee Dissolved

WASHINGTON, June 13—The CIO this week dissolved the three-year-old United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, at the same time inviting its affiliated locals to maintain their CIO membership with the status of local industrial unions.

The action, which brought a quick response among UCWOC locals, nipped a plan by UCWOC Chairman A. D. Lewis—brother of John L. Lewis—to lead the workers out of the CIO and into the United Mine Workers as a division of Kathryn Lewis' District 50.

The action was taken by a majority of the UCW committee members—CIO Pres. Murray, Sec. James B. Carey and Vice-Presidents S. H. Dalrymple and R. J. Thomas.

Carey, speaking for the CIO and the committee, wrote to Lewis that his action in "affiliating" with District 50 "is in absolute violation of the obligations and responsibilities of the UCWOC to the CIO."

DECIDED IN MAY

Lewis' plot to pull the construction workers out of the CIO and into the mine workers' organization was first hatched at a meeting of the UCWOC's policy board, a group largely consisting of paid officials, on May 29. The so-called agreement between District 50 and the UCWOC was reached on June 4, and locals were notified a few days later.

Early responses showed a strong determination on the part of the members and locals to continue their CIO affiliation. In Philadelphia, five locals with 2,000 members asked to continue their CIO membership, and similar letters were coming in from all sections of the country—strong evidence that the workers are fed up with Lewis' high-handed techniques.

DISQUALIFY LEWIS

In his letter to A. D. Lewis, Sec. Carey charged that "on the basis of the action which you have taken without any authority, thereby disqualifying yourself as a member of said committee, the remaining members of the UCWOC ... we have notified the CIO that the United Construction Workers' Organizing Committee be considered dissolved, and that request be made of you to return the certificate of affiliation which has been issued to the UCWOC. I hereby request you to return said certificate of affiliation.

"The CIO has of course a distinct obligation to, and responsibility for the membership of the local unions which have been formerly affiliated with the UCWOC. These members will be afforded their opportunity to decide in a democratic manner for themselves their continued affiliation with the CIO."

The four participating members of the construction committee who voted for dissolution of the charges were understood to be incensed at the failure of A. D. Lewis, the committee's chairman, to appear at a meeting where charges of racketeering and malpractices were to be aired.

Some time ago the New Jersey CIO filed charges of such a nature against certain Lewis lieutenants, and other complaints have been heard in various sections of the country.

Auto Union Meets Aug. 3 In Chicago

Chicago, June 13. — CIO auto workers, in friendly competition with their brothers from the United Steelworkers of America for title of "largest CIO union", will open their seventh international convention here August 3, Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes of the United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers of America, announced today.

The auto workers will convene in an area that has shown remarkable organizational progress in the past year, featuring victories in labor board elections at the new Studebaker and Buick plants, following almost 100 per cent unionization of the General Motors Electro-Motive Division plant near La-Grange the year before.

When the new Chrysler Chicago plant, which is scheduled to dwarf the Ford bomber plant near Detroit, is built and in full operation, this area will be one of the largest centers under UAW-CIO jurisdiction in the nation.

For Labor Unity

The Congress of Industrial Organizations has made winning the war its first and all-important order of business. It approaches the question of labor unity, as all other questions, with this main thought in mind.

The war demands the maximum of joint effort by all sections of labor and the minimum of friction between them. The CIO and AFL have joined together in the Combined Labor Victory Committee, and both organizations are cooperating closely nationally and locally, to achieve this result.

At its last executive board meeting, the CIO acted to expand and increase this cooperation, looking toward the final goal of a completely united labor movement. But even this goal, it held, must not be approached in such a way as to create friction harmful to immediate war interests.

"The CIO does not intend to permit anyone to interfere with the nation's war effort," the board declared, "by injecting the false issue of immediate organic labor unity, thereby hoping that efforts to achieve this end would create disputes and friction that would undermine the growing collaboration and cooperation between the AFL and CIO behind President Roosevelt and the nation's war program."

The CIO proposes immediate steps to broaden and intensify united labor effort to win the war. It urges that the Combined CIO-AFL Labor Victory Committee call a National Conference to Win the War, with all unions represented, to plan increased war production; united labor political support for Congressional candidates who fully support President Roosevelt and the victory program; and increased labor participation in administration of the war effort.

The CIO further proposes that the executive councils of both CIO and AFL meet together and constitute themselves into a United National Labor Council to rally all labor for victory over the Axis.

Through this Council, the CIO holds, increasing mutual confidence will be developed between CIO and AFL unions, and fair and democratic agreement can be encouraged between them looking toward eventual organic unity.

These proposals are made to minimize labor friction immediately, to develop the greatest joint war effort in the simplest and quickest fashion, and to smoothe the way for complete labor unity. They deserve the serious consideration and approval of all organized workers.

The Workers' Choice

The Peglers and their ilk constantly try to create the impression that growing union strength is due to some finagling with the government, or to workers being forced into unions against their will.

But Labor Board elections are conducted by secret ballot, under impartial auspices and with carefully guarded democratic procedure. The workers can vote exactly as they feel.

And what do Labor Board elections show? They show that when workers have this opportunity, they vote almost consistently and with large majorities, to be represented by genuine labor unions, particularly those of the CIO.

Consider the results of the elections in the plants of U. S. Steel subsidiaries. The score is 70,141 votes for the CIO Steelworkers union to only 3,720 against in Carnegie-Illinois plants, for example. And here are some other recent samples:

The CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers have just won elections by majorities of four-to-one or more in seven important plants in half a dozen different states.

At the Pan Am Refinery in Texas City, Tex., with 1,100 workers, the CIO Oil Workers scored 462 votes, with 375 going to the AFL.

At Springfield, Ill., 931 workers of the Allis-Chalmers Co. voted for the CIO Farm Equipment Workers, to 211 against.

On the West Coast, workers of the Pacific Gas & Electric Co. voted for the CIO Utility Workers by nearly four-to-one, giving it more than 800 votes.

White-collar workers also welcome a chance to vote union. Witness the sweeping vote of 2,321 to 1,241 for the CIO United Office Professional Workers in New York state-wide election among Prudental Insurance agents, the CIO vote of 1,182 to 778 in Metropolitan Life; and the more recent victory (by 176 to 79) of the American Newspaper Guild among editorial employes of the conservative New York Herald-Tribune.

Union organization is basic to American democracy. And the more opportunity workers get for democratic expression, the more they vote for union representation.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

ONE of the favorite sports of Nazi storm troopers is to try to get prisoners in their concentration camps into bitter arguments and hair-pulling matches over labor theories, religious differences and the like.

The Nazis find the joke particularly rich because, if any prisoners fall for it, they re-enact the very kind of scenes that led to the division and undoing of the democratic forces and to Hitler's triumph.

If the Axis and America's home-grown fascists should ever win out in this country, CIO and AFL unionists would doubtless have many opportunities to argue out their differences and settle old scores—in concentration camps.

A sharp argument over union jurisdictional differences and a name-calling match between CIO and AFL would furnish neat entertainment to our new rulers. If they got bored, they could end the show at any time with a few impartial prods of the bayonet.

Fortunately, however, the American people have heard all about what happened in Europe. They are in no mood to rehearse future entertainment for Nazis or American Quislings.

National unity is not just a vague slogan. It is a description of the kind of action and behavior which most ordinary American people instinctively adopted after Pearl Harbor.

Democrats and Republicans, Protestants and Catholics, Christians and Jews, Negro and white, native-born and foreign-born, management and labor—all good Americans, jumped to the conclusion that the first and most important thing was to work together to win the war.

This did not end the differences between the different groups, of course. But it did mean a common consent to subordinate such differences, to bury old grudges for the duration, to avoid issues of argument and division, and to emphasize common interests and united effort.

Within the labor movement, the reaction of the rank and file was equally spontaneous. CIO and AFL local unions and councils at once began to join together in war activities. Joint committees were set up, joint rallies held, joint programs agreed upon.

This did not mean that these unions and councils tried to settle all their organizational and jurisdictional differences at once—any more than national unity means that different religions or different political parties must merge.

Rather, the unity of effort between CIO and AFL local bodies meant avoidance of issues leading to never-ending dispute; and their subordination to joint war activity which breeds good-will and makes easier the eventual settlement of old differences.

Nationally, the necessity for united effort was immediately recognized by the leaders of both CIO and AFL. They entered into a joint agreement between themselves and with management to end strikes and lockouts for the duration. Both labor movements became represented in the Combined Labor Victory Committee established by President Roosevelt.

Since then, there has been a healthy, natural and growing cooperation between CIO and AFL, both locally and nationally.

The only fly in the ointment has been the efforts of certain elements in both camps—identified with opposition to Roosevelt's foreign policies — to force the issue of immediate organic unity.

The CIO, both when John L. Lewis first made such a proposal last January, and again at its recent executive board meeting in Washington, held that hasty and ill-timed steps of this character would merely open up old sores and concentrate attention on difficult jurisdictional differences, such as bred friction and wasted months of time during earlier CIO-AFL negotiations.

By setting war interests first, on the other hand, the CIO holds both movements can expand their joint activities in a hundred ways and prepare the way naturally, and without friction, for the complete labor unity which all true unionists desire.

This is the background and explanation of the position unanimously adopted by the CIO executive board at its recent Washington meeting.

The National Conference to Win the War, which it proposes, would take a number of immediate steps for greater unity of effort between CIO and AFL to increase production and for other political and legislative war purposes.

And the proposed United National Labor Council, consisting of the executives of both movements, would be the organizational form through which united action may lead without friction into more and more complete labor unity.

CIO Radio Program Gets Hand

WASHINGTON, June 13—Phone calls to the studio, and many letters and wires to CIO are proof that the latest show in the CIO radio series, "Labor for Victory," went over with a bang.

The program, one of the Saturday night series, at 10:15 p. m. over the NBC Red Network, was built around the war production effort of the United Automobile Workers. It told the story of the huge bomber plant at Willow Run in dramatic form, using a cast of actors, a chorus and an orchestra.

Music for the show was specially written by Earl Robinson, composer of the "Ballad for Americans" and other nationally famous musical pieces. Robinson also appeared as the solo voice in the song "Make Way for the Flying Squadrons."

The script was written by Peter Lyon and directed by Paul Stewart, who also directs the New York City CIO Council's weekly radio program over WQXR.

CIO's "Labor for Victory" program is heard every other Saturday, NBC Red Network, at 10:15 p. m. Eastern War Time. The next program is set for June 20, and will deal with the tax bill in dramatic form. Marc Blitzstein, composer of "No For An Answer," will write music for it.

Don't forget to tune in. "Labor for Victory" is your program, telling labor's part in the war effort in labor's own words.

CIO Copper Plan Gets Big Send-off

Butte, Mont., June 13.—A drive for all-out production in the nonferrous metal mines started here today with a national network broadcast of speeches by War Production Chief Donald Nelson, President Reid Robinson of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers' Union, an AFL representative, and a spokesman for the Anaconda Copper Mining Co.

The WPB drive to set up labor-management production committees in every mine, to be inaugurated by the Butte meeting, is similar to that proposed long ago by the CIO Union and has the enthusiastic support of both CIO and AFL, according to Wendell Lund, director of the Labor Production Division of the WPB.

MINERS' DAY RALLY

The rally will be held on Butte Miners' Day, traditional holiday marking the anniversary of Butte Miners' Union No. 1 and was chosen in recognition of the crucial part organized labor is playing in boosting output of vital war metals.

The objective of the production committees will be to get multiple shift operation of mines, where physically possible. To accomplish this, the production committees will make improvements in working conditions and will study ways of reducing labor turnover to a minimum, MM&S officials said.

Ask Higher Pay Rates For U. S. Employes

Washington, June 13.—A full production living standard for the 2,000,000 workers on Federal government payrolls was urged this week by the CIO.

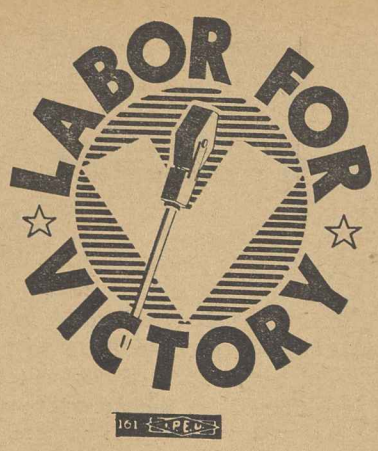
Legislative Representative Nathan E. Cowan, appearing before the House Civil Service Committee, recommended:

1. Raising wages of lowest paid federal workers to a $1,200 minimum.

2. Payment of time and a half overtime wages for work after 40 hours a week.

3. Payment of a $300 bonus to help meet the rising cost of living.

Urging the committee to take a broad, planned approach to the problem and to continue keeping wages adjusted to living costs during the period of war economy, Cowan pointed out that overtime compensation "would help Federal workers pay for food, housing, medical care and the other essentials to top efficiency on vital war jobs."



LABOR FOR VICTORY

is on the air every Saturday night on the NBC Red Network.

THE TIME:

10:15 P. M. Eastern War Time
9:15 P. M. Central War Time
8:15 P. M. Mountain War Time
7:15 P. M. Pacific War Time

Every Saturday Night

LABOR FOR VICTORY tells labor's own story, in labor's words, of what labor is doing on the production front, on the home front, to beat the Hitler Axis in 1942.

LABOR FOR VICTORY is shared by the CIO and the AFL on alternate Saturdays. CIO's programs for June, July and August come June 20, July 4 and 18, August 1, 15 and 29.

NO SALES TAX!

Following are excerpts from CIO's newest leaflet, "Taxes for Victory," which outlines CIO's tax program based on ability to pay and lines up the facts on the sales tax drive now being pushed in Congress.

Our country needs money to win the war against Hitler slavery—big money, more money than was ever spent before in the history of our country or in the history of the world. Much of this money will be raised by taxes.

This money is part of the price of freedom. If we don't raise it, and raise it quickly and efficiently, we can lose this war and lose our unions, our freedom and our very lives.

As workers, organized in free labor unions, we are willing and eager to pay our share of taxes. We know what will happen to our unions if we lose the war. We know what will happen to our wages and our living conditions and our families.

In fact, the workers of this country are already paying a big slice of the tax bill. Not many people know this, but workers with less than $1,000 a year income were already paying 26 per cent of the tax bill as far back as 1939. The percentage is much higher now.

Taxes To Beat the Axis—

The U. S. Treasury Department, the President of the United States, and all government agencies are strongly opposed to the sales tax. The CIO is opposed to the sales tax. The CIO favors the Treasury Department's plan for raising the billions we need for victory. The CIO also has its own tax program to meet the country's needs. Here it is, in brief form:

1. Raise at least 3.5 billion dollars more by increasing profit taxes, up to 93 per cent of excess profits. The President has declared that no one must make excess profits out of this war for freedom. The CIO agrees.

2. Raise another 4.5 billion dollars by increasing income taxes in the upper brackets, leaving present exemptions ($1500 for married men, $750 single) untouched. The aim here should be to hold incomes down to the $25,000 level asked by President Roosevelt.

3. Raise the rest by plugging the serious loopholes that now exist, loopholes that allow wealthy individuals and corporations to finagle their way out of their responsibilities to the nation.

4. Avoid the sales tax as unfair, undemocratic—and even worse, as a cut in wages and living conditions and a consequent cut in production for victory.

What's Wrong With the Sales Tax

Why are the CIO and responsible government officials against the sales tax?

Because the sales tax will slow down the country's war production by cutting living standards — and thus delay our victory.

The sales tax is the most unfair and undemocratic method of taxation yet devised. It takes the same amount of money out of everyone, regardless of ability to pay. A worker with an income of $30 a weeks pays the same tax on his food and other family needs as a coupon clipper with $50,000 a year.

Ability To Pay

The CIO tax program is based on one simple principle—ability to pay. Victory will cost money — huge amounts of it. The workers want to pay their share, knowing what will happen if we should lose the war. They want to make sure that everyone pays his fair share—and that the money is raised in a way that will safeguard the economic strength of the country. We need that strength to win.

Increase taxes on the big incomes and on war profits.

Close the loopholes that allow us to lose so much needed revenue.

Avoid the sales tax as a danger to the health and efficiency of the production workers and other low income people on whom our victory depends.

What You Must Do—

The Ways and Means Committee of Congress is holding meetings on the tax bill now. Soon it will come up on the floor in Congress for final passage. After that happens, it will be too late to change it. No tax bill has yet been amended during debate.

Write and wire to your Congressman and your two Senators now. Tell them that taxes for victory call for:

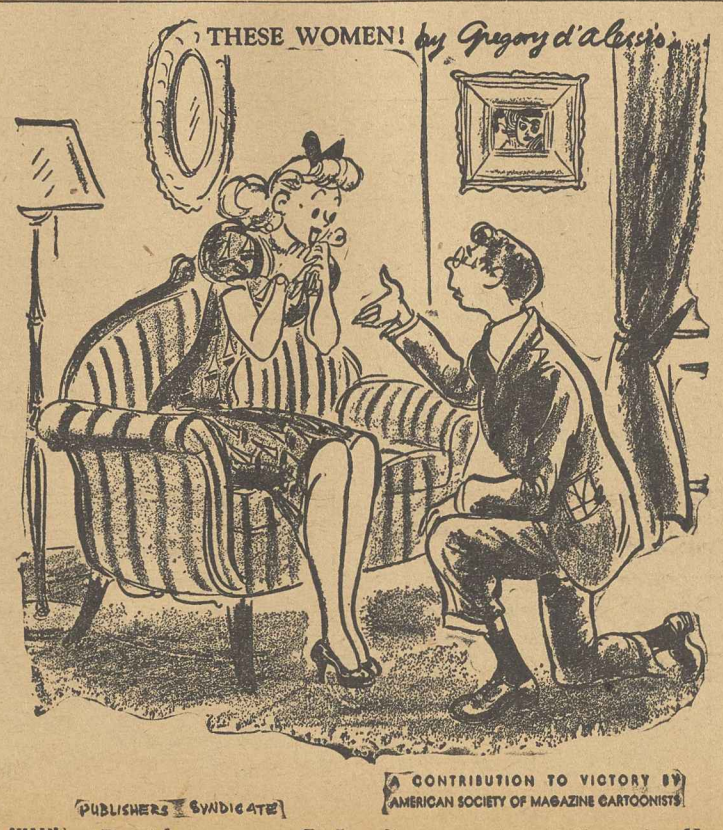
Strict attention to the principles of ability to pay, as outlined by the Treasury Department and by the CIO.

No sales tax of any kind.



CIO Pushes Fight For 'Win The War' Tax Program

WASHINGTON, June 13—CIO took the offensive this week in the fight for a fair tax bill to raise the billions the country needs for victory in 1942.

The offensive included a renewed publicity drive, with two national hookup broadcasts and a new leaflet explaining the issues and the CIO program for taxation based on ability to pay.

First broadcast, over the Columbia Network, brought in Frank Rosenblum, a vice president of the CIO and of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and a member of the CIO Tax Committee; and Nathan Cowan, CIO's legislative representative. They were interviewed by Columbia's Washington news analyst, Albert Warner.

The second broadcast is scheduled in the Labor for Victory series, CIO's Saturday night program that it shares with AFL on alternate Saturdays. This is planned as a dramatization, worked out by Marc Blitzstein, Peter Lyon and others. It will go on the air Saturday, June 20, at 10:15 p.m., Eastern War Time.

The leaflet, now in the press, will appear under the title "Taxes for Victory," and is a brief popularized version of the CIO tax program and an analysis of the dangers to the war effort that a sales tax would bring about.

CONGRESS STALLS

Meantime, the House Ways and Means Committee continued its game of stalling on reporting out a bill, with the scheme in some Congressional minds of slipping over the sales tax at the last minute. To date, the committee has hacked away about 2.5 billion dollars out of the Treasury proposals, chiefly by going light on excess profits and big incomes. This deficit of 2.5 billions, taken from the 8.5 billions in additional revenue that the Treasury asked for, will have to be made up somehow—and the sales tax promoters plan to make it up by taxing everything the workers have to buy.

Both the broadcasts and the leaflet stressed the need for raising money for victory, pointing out that the workers are willing and eager to pay their share, that they already are paying a big chunk of the nation's tax bill and that they know that while the money cost of beating Hitler comes high, the cost of defeat would be infinitely heavier.

ABILITY TO PAY

Summing up in the broadcast, Rosenblum declared that the CIO tax program is based "on ability to pay and the needs of the Victory program . . . We, of the CIO, are willing and eager to pay our share. We are paying our share now. We want to make certain that everyone pays his share—and that we raise this money in a way that will safeguard the economic welfare of the country, as President Roosevelt has pointed out in his economic program for the nation.

"The way to do this is by adopting the program of the U.S. Treasury and of the CIO. Increase taxes on the big incomes and huge war profits. Close the loopholes that allow so much revenue to slip between Uncle Sam's fingers. Raise the money our country needs in the quickest, fairest and most efficient way we can find.

"And avoid the sales tax. Avoid anything that will cut into the living standards of the low income people, because on their health and efficiency on the production lines depends our victory."

Congressmen Get Tax Story From Workers

Pittsburgh, June 13.—Over 35 delegates from locals in District 6, of the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers of America, in Western Pennsylvania, are expected to meet with their Congressmen and House Ways and Means Committee members, when the UE District 6 delegation to Washington on the Tax Bill arrives in the Capitol on June 17.

Purpose of the District 6 UE delegation is to meet with Congressmen from areas in Western Pennsylvania where the UE has locals, and with minority members of the Ways and Means Committee, to work for a minority report for a Victory Tax Bill.

Army Pay Raise, Sought By CIO, Near Passage

Washington, June 13—A pay raise for men in the armed forces—long sought by the CIO—was virtually assured this week as both House and Senate gave unanimous approval to a bill fixing minimum pay of $50 a month, effective June 1.

The bill, which is virtually certain to be signed by President Roosevelt, would increase to $50 the pay of Army buck privates, Navy apprentice seamen and men of equal rank in the Marines and the Coast Guard. Increases would be granted to all ranks up to second lieutenants and ensigns.

Washington, June 13—"Labor for Victory," CIO's Saturday night radio series broadcast over the NBC Red Network, takes up the tax bill for the program of Saturday, June 20, on the air at 10:15 Eastern War Time.

The script will be under the direction of Peter Lyon and a group of writers including Bob Richards and Bob Tallman. Marc Blitzstein, composer of "No For An Answer" and other musical shows, will do music and songs for the program.

All CIOers and others interested in what labor has to say will tune in, Saturday, June 20, at 10:15 p.m., Eastern War Time, on the NBC Red Network.

Urge Unions Back Russian Relief Drive

WASHINGTON, June 13—The special drive of Russian War Relief, Inc., during June and its climactic Aid-to-Russia Day on June 22, which marks the end of one year of heroic resistance by the Russian people against Nazi aggression, was called to the attention of all CIO International Unions last week by the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief.

The committee acted after President Philip Murray, a member of the board of directors of Russian War Relief, Inc., had discussed the organization's special drive at the meeting of the CIO Executive Board and had recommended to the board members that the Internationals support it. President Murray called attention to the role of the Russian Army at this time in the United Nations' victory drive.

Recognizing the urgency of the Russian appeal at this time, with the long-awaited spring fighting on the Eastern Front under way, the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief has agreed to transmit immediately to Russian War Relief, Inc., funds earmarked for that agency during June.

In many cities, CIO unions are participating in special rallies arranged in connection with the proclamation of June 22nd as Aid-to-Russia Day by governors and mayors.

V. P. Wallace Likes CIO Manual, Sending It to Son

Washington, June 13.—Henry A. Wallace, Vice-President of the United States, has endorsed the Servicemen's Manual issued by the CIO War Relief Committee.

In a letter to Monroe Sweetland, national director of the War Relief Committee, the Vice President said:

"The little booklet that the CIO has printed for the service men seems to me to be unusually worthwhile. I am sending it to my son, who is in the service."

The Servicemen's Manual is a handy little booklet of over sixty pages, which explains in simple layman's language the law as it applies to the men in our armed forces. Subjects discussed include the question of whether servicemen are subject to suit, whether they continue to be liable for installment payments, their voting rights in the various states, and many other practical matters. The Manual contains quotations from President Roosevelt and CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

War Relief Gifts Help Pacific Heroes

WASHINGTON, June 13—Families of several AFL workmen who were captured at Wake Island and Guam early in December were aided today by the National CIO War Relief Committee, according to Monroe Sweetland, national director of the

In one instance, Sweetland said the family of an AFL worker now in a Japanese prison, was in danger of losing its home through arrears in taxes and irrigation assesments. The CIO Committee has accordingly made payments on the taxes and assessments to prevent foreclosure of the property of this family, consisting of a mother and five children.

One dependent mother of a captured worker is seriously ill in the hospital, and CIO War Relief funds are helping meet the hospital bill, since no Federal funds for that purpose are available.

Other families of the captured are receiving assistance, and still others are being investigated by the CIO War Relief Committee to determine whether they are in need of assistance or of supplementary aid in addition to the help given by the Federal Government.

SENDING BUNDLES

In the meantime the civilian prisoners themselves, and the marines captured with them at Wake Island and Guam, are being sent bundles of necessities by the CIO War Relief Committee, Sweetland pointed out. These bundles include books, razor blades, toothpaste and ther comforts to enable the men to maintain their health and morale.

Sweetland said today that most of the workmen captured at Wake Island and Guam had apparently been recruited from Oregon, Washington, Idaho and California. They all had become members of the AFL.

When the Japanese attacked, these workmen seized rifles and fought alongside the marines until they were overpowered. Most of the workers have families in need of assistance.

Although the Federal Security Administration has been assisting many of these families under an executive order of the President, there are some families that cannot meet with the strict Federal requirements. In these cases the CIO War Relief Committee has come to the assistance of the needy families of these union men who are prisoners of the Japanese.

TO OTHER NATIONS

This assistance to American workers, service men and their families is only one phase of the work of the CIO War Relief Committee. The Committee is forwarding contributions from local unions to Russia, China and Britain for the relief of needy civilian populations, to the U. S. O., Red Cross and the Navy Relief.

The funds of the CIO Committee are voluntary contributions given by CIO members through their local and international unions, on the basis of an hour's pay per month.

UCWOC, spoke out for 2,000 members of five locals determined not to lose their membership in CIO.

Bucher described A. D. Lewis' action as "arbitrary, undemocratic and dictatorial," adding that "our officers and members in this area will not be bludgeoned or browbeaten into a third labor movement or kicked out of the CIO, whose policies and officers we are 100 per cent behind."

Other large construction locals, spread out in a number of sections of the country, were voicing similar reaction to this latest dictatorial action by the Lewis group.

Cartels Injured U.S. War Effort, Want New Munich

NEW YORK, June 13—Powerful international business monopolies that have restricted world-wide production for the sake of profit and have definitely hampered America's war effort can be depended on to seek peace with the Nazi-dominated Axis, without victory for the United Nations.

This was the warning sounded last week by Thurman W. Arnold, assistant Attorney General, in an address before the National Federation of Sales Executives here.

Pointing out that international cartels had 162 agreements with American big business, Arnold said that "to these international cartels we owe the peace of Munich."

PROMOTED SCARCITY

"To these same cartels we owe the failure to expand American industry prior to Pearl Harbor," he declared. "To the interests of these cartels in stabilizing prices and restricting production, we owe our present scarcity in all basic materials."

Arnold asserted that German influence in international cartels resulted in boosting production of vital war materials for the Nazis while output in the democracies was restricted.

"The small group of American businessmen who are parties to these international rings are not unpatriotic," Arnold said. "But they still think of the war as a temporary recess from business as usual with a strong Germany. They expect to begin the game all over again after the war.

"It is significant that all these cartel leaders still talk and think as if the war would end in a stalemate, and that, therefore, they must be in a position to continue their arrangements with a strong Germany after the war.

"If you read the documentary evidences in the hearings on the rubber cartel of Standard Oil of New Jersey and the German Dye Trust you will get a typical pattern of the thinking of international cartel leaders continuing after Pearl Harbor.

"The secret influence of the international cartels is going to be thrown in favor of peace without victory when the first opportunity arises—just as it was thrown in that direction at Munich.

"Their international financial power, their control of world markets all depend upon taking up with Germany where they left off."

N. Y. Council Meets

New York, June 13.—The New York State Industrial Union Council's annual convention will be held at Syracuse, New York, June 19-20, President Gustave A. Strebel announced this week.

Ban Jim Crow In Army, Negro Congress Urges

WASHINGTON, June 13—Declaring that "this is our war," the National Negro Congress this week urged the opening of a Western Front against the Nazis and the ban of Jim Crow treatment by the armed forces so that Negroes can offer their full contribution toward victory by the United Nations over the Axis.

"This is the war of every American—regardless of race, creed or color—because the national independence of our country is at stake.

"Negro Americans, especially, want to defeat Hitler because Nazi slavery threatens our onward march to full freedom."

The statements set forth the following four-point program "which all citizens can carry out as their contribution to helping build national unity, advancing the struggle for full citizenship of the Negro people, and winning victory."

Support Roosevelt

1. Do everything you can to win the war. Support our Commander-in-Chief against the defeatists. Urge a western front now to win the war in 1942.

2. Urge the removal of all discriminatory bars from the war effort. Report to the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices all cases of job discrimination. Urge strengthening of the War Manpower Board to accomplish mass training and mass employment of Negroes. Petition our national government to set up mixed brigades and naval units.

3. Expose the disrupters of war unity. Demand the suppression of the Ku Klux Klan and all other anti-Negro, anti-Semitic, anti-Catholic, anti-labor groups which seek to destroy national unity.

4. Promote unity among Negroes for victory and full citizenship. In every organization plan and work for the broadest unity of Negro people to win their rightful place with all other Americans to achieve full victory.

The Congress hailed "labor's determination to keep its ranks united and strong against such defeatists as John L. Lewis, whose disruptive tactics endanger the trade unions and the war program."

By ELEANOR FOWLER

A drive for contributions to War Relief has been launched by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO which is urging every affiliate to give money-raising parties at regular intervals. All funds will be turned over to the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief.

Aid to Russia is uppermost in most minds as rumors of a great German offensive in a few weeks gain ground. Following President Murray's recommendation to the CIO Executive Board that international unions support the June drive of Russian War Relief, the Auxiliary Congress suggests earmarking of all June funds for aid to Russia.

Throughout the country mass meetings and other great demonstrations of support for the heroic Russian people will be held on June 22. CIO auxiliaries are urged to give these functions full support.

Women's auxiliaries to Soviet unions are active in the whole war program of the Russian unions and money collected by Russian War Relief in this country helps to finance the work our Russian auxiliary sisters are carrying on.

In the Soviet Union as in the United States there is need for greatly expanded facilities to care for the children of working mothers. Today more than 50 per cent of Russian industrial workers are women.

The auxiliaries are securing additional space in schools, public buildings, parks and apartment houses for day care centers. Their members have volunteered to be trained as aids to the permanent staffs. Russian War Relief is aiding these nurseries with constant shipments of supplies.

Rap Bridges Ouster

Immediate protests to Attorney General Biddle, cooperation in union programs for combatting Bridges' deportation and contributions to the Bridges' defense fund are urged by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

"You have not only perpetrated a grave injustice against Mr. Bridges, but jeopardized the nation's war unity and the best interests of our war program," the Auxiliary Congress wired to the attorney general immediately after the decision.

What should the housewife do if she believes that the storekeeper is charging more than his legal maximum?

The Office of Price Administration has requested that she do two things: First, ask the storekeeper to explain the price to her; and then if she still believes he is violating the price order, report the facts to the nearest war price and rationing board or the nearest local office of the OPA.

Books For Migrants

Stored in attics and closets of many homes are the children's books that Johnny and Mary have outgrown, novels of interest to women, magazines that the family has finished reading.

These are the books that could not be sent to Army camps by the Victory Book Campaign. But there is a use for them. They can bring pleasure and comfort to women and children in many places in the country. The Labor Section of the Office of Civilian Defense suggests that women collect these books for the Migratory Camps.

FLASH—Elections in 17 plants of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp., biggest subsidiary of U. S. Steel, gave the United Steelworkers of America a big victory. The vote: USA-CIO, 46,490; No Union, 3,720. Total for all Carnegie-Illinois plants: USA-CIO, 70,141; No Union, 5,708.

The United Office & Professional Workers won a smashing victory among Metropolitan Life Insurance agents in New York. The vote: CIO, 1,182; No Union, 778.

The employes of the National Tube Steel Corporation, subsidiary of United States Steel, demonstrated their choice of the United Steelworkers of America in an election held a few days ago in four plants of this company by registering a vote of 15,382 for the USA-CIO as against 1,276 for no union. This brings the total vote in the plants of United States Steel where elections have been held so far to 63,566 for the USA-CIO as against 5,057.

Then for good measure, this week the United Steelworkers added another victory at the Pressed Steel Car Company, McKeesport, Pa., against an independent union, with the vote 1,435 for USA-CIO and 793 for the independent union.

These and the following election results demonstrate that the workers throughout the United States and Canada want the CIO.

GREAT WORK, USA-CIO!

Many Elections Won

The Utility Workers Organizing Committee joined the grand march of election victories. Lynn Haymes, CIO representative for UWOC, reports a victory among employes of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, Oakland, California: CIO—809, AFL—201, no union—54. Cooperation on the part of all CIO affiliated representatives brought this achievement.

Other victories in Buffalo recently include: Buffalo Forge—USA-CIO, 491; independent union, 325. Metal & Alloy—IUMMSW, 161; independent union, 54. Iroquois Gas—UMW-CIO, 359; Employes Social Club, 138. National Aniline—UMW-CIO, 1,252; Employes Union, 108. Electric City Box—UPNTW—payroll check, union certified.

Brother Thompson has also applied for charter of the Niagara County Industrial Union Council, which is being granted. This new organization will add strength to our unions in that area.

Sub-regional Director George DeNucci comes through with an election for the Amalgamated Clothing Workers at the Hercules Trouser Company, Wellston, Ohio, with a vote of 202 for CIO, and 125 for no union. He also reports election results at the Ralston Steel Car Company, Columbus, Ohio—Steel Workers, 547; Independent Union, 78, and no union, 62.

Regional Director A. F. Hartung and National Representative Adolph Germer report the following victories on the West Coast: At the Pelican Bay Lumber Company, Klamath Falls, Oregon, the International Woodworkers of America-CIO received 154 votes; the AFL, 12, and no union, 107. Also at Klamath Falls, the Long Bell Company vote was 52 for IWA-CIO, and 30 for the William Hutcheson AFL outfit.

In the Labor Board election at Petican Bay, Oregon, IWA-CIO got 154 votes, the Carpenters and Joiners AFL 12, and neither union 107.

Refinery Votes CIO

Director Edwin Smith and Travis Hedrick, acting southern regional director of the Oil Workers Organizing Drive, report a run-off victory against the AFL at the Pan American Refinery Company in Texas City, Tex., with 462 for CIO, and 375 for the AFL. This is the first big plant of the Standard Oil Company where we have won an election, and our victory there will echo throughout the Standard Oil empire.

Regional Director Fulton and Chairman Grant Oakes of the FEWOC report a great victory at the Springfield, Illinois, plant of Allis Chalmers Company—CIO 931, and No Union 211. This is the sixth major victory for the Farm Equipment Workers this year.

The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union reports three more Labor Board election victories: St. Joseph Lead Company, Herculaneum, Missouri—CIO 134, No Union 113; Forrest Hill Foundry, Newark, New Jersey—CIO won by a six-to-one margin; Telachi Mines, Inc., Atlanta, Idaho—CIO 76, No Union 53.

Sub-regional Director Edward McCrone reports an election victory in Bridgeport, Connecticut, at the Auto Ordnance Plant by the UERMWA, with a vote of 743 for CIO, and 263 for the independent union.

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee brings home the bacon with an election in Boston, Mass., at the Swift Packing Company plant with 188 for CIO, 39 for the company union and 8 for no union.

Win Herald Tribune Poll

The American Newspaper Guild has announced its most impressive "win" since the New York Times. Editorial employes of the New York Herald Tribune voted for the ANG-CIO by almost three to one. The bargaining unit has over 310 eligibles.

The Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians had a mediation hearing before Paul A. Dodd of the National War Labor Board, and as a result consummated an agreement with the Shell Development Company in Oakland, Calif., covering 275 laboratory, engineering and pilot plant technicians of the company at its Emeryville laboratories.

A joint statement followed the signing of the contract, issued by J. F. M. Taylor, president of the company, and Marcel Scherer, FAECT International vice-president, proclaiming that this contract indicates remarkable progress in collective bargaining in this field, and looking forward to setting high standards in labor-management relations which will result in furthering Shell Development's contribution to the war effort. They said that the patent bonus plan will stimulate inventions among the employes. The contract provides a maintenance of membership clause, increases in wages, and other beneficial provisions.

Organize to serve the nation, to win the war, to protect and advance the interests of the workers, and to win the peace. ORGANIZE! ORGANIZE!

Labor School Sets War Program

Hendersonville, N.C., June 13.—Problems of workers in wartime will come in for full discussion at the 16th annual session of the Southern School for Workers, which opens here July 2.

Various phases of collective bargaining, health, nutrition and social legislation and the effect of the war upon them, will be studied by the worker students.

Adapting its program to the tempo of war production, the Southern School this year will hold not one six-weeks' course as in the past, but a series of one and two-week sessions.

Tennessee CIO Hails Murray Leadership; Crump 'Sues for Peace'

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 13—The official hand of welcome of the Crump political machine was exactly 14,300 degrees warmer this week as the third annual convention of the Tennessee Industrial Union Council met to express full support for CIO President Philip Murray and his policies, and condemnation of John L. Lewis, isolationist leader of the United Mine Workers. This was the first state CIO convention since the National Executive Board meeting.

The 14,300 degree difference was caused by a growth of CIO membership to 15,000 from a weak 700 in 1940, when E. H. Crump, local political boss, became mayor for 15 minutes, in order to rescind an invitation given by his predecessor to the American Newspaper Guild to hold its national convention in Memphis.

"Boss" Crump said then that he knew the Guild would "not be welcome."

His henchman, Mayor Chandler, said this week:

"It is a pleasure to come down here to greet and welcome you to your first meeting in our city. You are to be congratulated on your fine attendance."

VICTORY DRIVE

The convention theme was "winning the war" and a telegram sent to President Roosevelt assured him that the council was ready to make every sacrifice and exert every energy for American victory.

One of the main convention speakers was James Carey, national CIO secretary, who said that "the only question left undecided is whether John L. Lewis is copying the tactics of Adolf Hitler or whether Hitler is copying the tactics of John L. Lewis."

"Our campaign in behalf of labor against the practices of our own home grown fascists is the same task confronting us in the world-wide scene," Carey said.

"The fight is one and the same—war between those who believe themselves to be supermen against the interests of the real people, the producers, both farm and industrial. We have pledged ourselves to produce the goods necessary to destroy Hitlerism wherever it may exist—at home or abroad.

"Lewis' campaign to destroy the principles upon which the institution he helped build were based will be no more successful than the campaign to destroy President Roosevelt, the New Deal and the principles Mr. Roosevelt represented."

HITS DISUNITY MOVES

Regional CIO Director Fred C. Pieper of Louisiana, said, in condemning the Lewis break from CIO, that "while we bend every effort to fight dictators in other lands, there arises one Lewis in our midst who declares civil war. Any man engaging in such action at a time like this is engaging in undiluted treason. Lewis has brought disorganization instead of unity to the American labor movement."

Convention resolutions reiterated opposition to the poll tax and asked the Governor to call a special session of the state legislature to repeal it; blasted John L. Lewis for disruptive tactics; called on the national CIO to organize the south; urged conversion of the shut Ford plant here to war work; condemned Westbrook Pegler and urged that papers using his column discontinue it; and ordered publication of a Tennessee edition of the CIO NEWS.

Steel Union Gets Raises

Barberton, O., June 13.—Nickel an hour wage increases and provisions for maintenance of membership have been gained by the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, in a supplementary agreement signed with the Wright Tool & Forge Co., District Director William F. Donovan revealed today.

At the same time, he announced that the Burt Manufacturing Co. in Akron has signed a pact giving the USA-CIO sole bargaining rights, vacations with pay, and provisions for employes who have served in the military forces to regain their jobs with full seniority.

Technical Workers Win Security

Emeryville, Cal., June 13 — The first union security contract for white collar and professional workers negotiated under War Labor Board guidance was won this week by the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians from the Shell Development Co.

About 200 laboratory technologists won increases ranging from $5 to $25 a month and a clause banning discrimination because of race, color, creed, nationality, sex or religious belief, according to Marcel Scherer, vice-president in charge of organization.

PATENT BONUS PLAN

The pact contains a maintenance of membership clause and a patent bonus plan, described as "probably the first of its kind," which is expected to stimulate invention and thus help the war effort.

Following a contract signature, the union and the company set up a War Production Victory Committee which will concentrate on solving some of the vital petroleum research problems.

Force Action on Poll Tax, Unions Asked by Cowan

WASHINGTON, June 13—All Congressmen who have not yet signed the petition to bring the anti-poll tax bill on the House floor were urged to do so at once in letters sent to them by Nathan Cowan, CIO's legislative representative.

The petition is needed because the House Rules Committee, dominated by polltaxers and pro-fascists like Cox, Howard Smith and others has refused to give the bill a rule that would bring it up for debate and a vote. They know that the bill outlawing the poll tax would pass by an overwhelming majority, and that their long careers of disservice to the nation would end.

"We feel it particularly urgent at a time when this nation is engaged in a world conflict for the preservation of democracy that every step be taken to insure full democracy at home," Cowan wrote.

"We are, therefore, concerned at the continued denial by virtue of poll tax laws, of the right of large sections of the American population to vote. We believe that now is the time for those members of the House of Representatives who firmly believe in these principles to sign the petition to discharge HR 1024."

Bus Drivers Win Record Pay Scale

New York, June 13.—A record-breaking $1 an hour pay scale—highest in the nation for bus drivers—was won this week by the Transport Workers' Union from the New York City Omnibus Corp.

The contract, which was a renewal of one already providing for the union shop, raised hourly rates of drivers six cents, mechanics eight cents and garage employes six cents. All provisions are retroactive to May 1.

A new feature of the agreement, covering the company's 2,100 employes, is the check-off system of collecting dues and quarterly contributions for the union's medical plan.

Mexican Labor Rallies To War

By CESAR ORTIZ

Special to Allied Labor News

MEXICO CITY, June 13—(ALN)—Organized labor, widely recognized as the moving force behind Mexico's declaration of war against the Axis, this week went into action against the Axis Fifth Column, which is maneuvering behind the scenes to sabotage Mexico's war effort.

Fidel Velasquez, general secretary of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM), and Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), have asked the government to confiscate the many Axis-owned businesses in Mexico. Meanwhile, every Mexican labor organization has declared a formal boycott of all Axis enterprises.

The CTM's first act last week was to organize the Committee of National Defense and Struggle against Nazi-Fascism, which united, for the first time in recent Mexican history, representatives of rival labor groups, farmers, political parties and industrialists.

The committee includes Mexico's major political party, the Party of the Mexican Revolution, its major business group, the Miners' Union, and a number of labor and farm organizations.

TWO PROPOSALS

At the committee's first session, Fidel Velasquez, on behalf of organized labor, put forward two proposals: mobilization of Mexico's industrial workers to win the battle of production and immediate suppression of the Fifth Column.

To win the battle against the Fifth Column, Velasquez said, would go a long way toward winning the war of the United Nations against the Axis.

The leading role which labor is playing in the Mexican war effort has been shown in the last few days by the following:

Workers in the National Munitions Factory have contributed one day's wages to the government, and have promised to forego the spring vacations provided by their contracts.

The CTM's well-disciplined Workers' Militias, recruited from organized labor but commanded by officers of the Mexican Army, have offered their services to the government. The CTM is requesting that they be armed.

MASS MEETINGS

In Monterey, Tampico, Ciudad Juarez, Puebla and other cities, the CTM and the Party of the Mexican Revolution have held mass meetings in honor of the seamen who survived the torpedoing of the Potrero del Lana and the Faja de Oro, the two Mexican tankers whose sinking off the coast of Florida by Axis submarines was the immediate cause of Mexico's declaration of war. Twenty-three Mexican seamen, all of them members of seamen's unions affiliated with the CTM, went down with the tankers.

The largest of the mass meetings, in Mexico City, was attended by more than 100,000 persons.

The National Committee of the CTM has announced that, like labor in the other United Nations, it has suspended strikes for the duration of the war. It has called on employer groups to make equivalent sacrifices.

Want Tanks For Russia

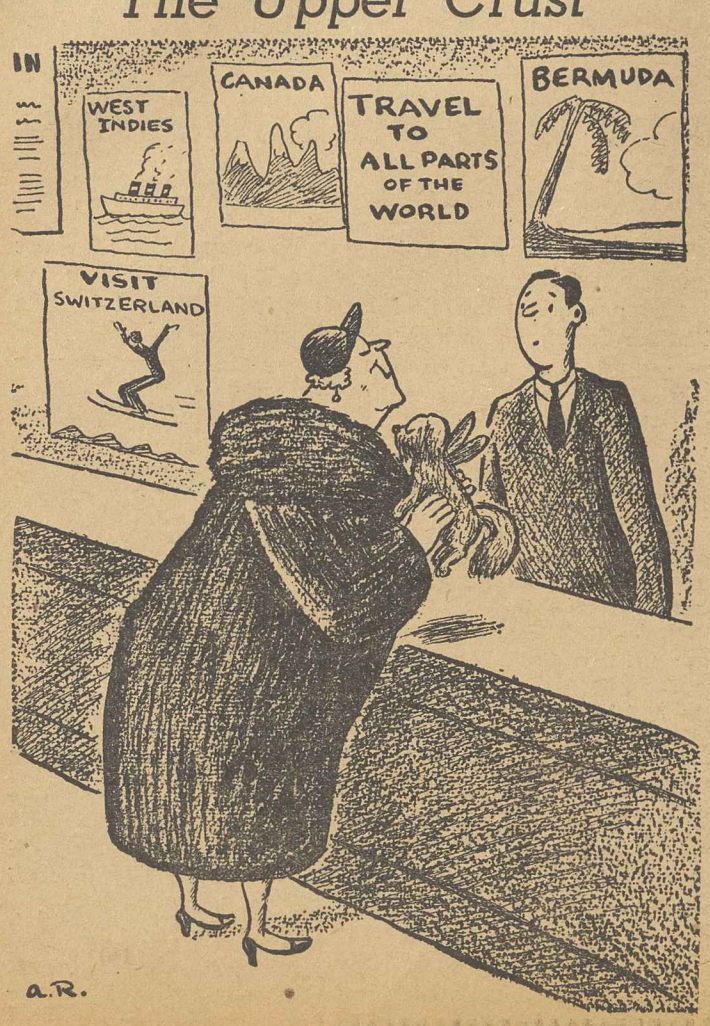
New York, June 13.—The New York CIO has called upon President Roosevelt to proclaim June 22, anniversary of the Nazi invasion of the Soviet Union, as Aid to Russia Day.

In a letter to the chief executive, Council Pres. Joseph Curran declared that "in recognition of the vital role played by the Russian nation and its army in defense of civilization against the onslaught of Nazism," all tanks produced in the U.S. during the week should be sent to Russia.

Endorse Relief Drive

Boston—(FP)—Governor Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Mayor Maurice J. Tobin of Boston have endorsed the CIO campaign for payment of one hour's pay a month by every CIO member for American and Allier Relief.

The Upper Crust



"No, ma'am, this isn't a recruiting office for the WAAC."

VICTIMS OF AXIS: Russian Red Army officers found these kids looking at the ruins of their home in a burned-out village recaptured from the Nazis. The children will be adopted by other Soviet families. BELOW: Chinese residents of Cheng-tu, important Chinese industrial city, move out into the country during raids, come home to their jobs when the sky is clear. U. S. military assistance and supplies will help people of the allied nations swamp the Axis.

CIO Greets Chinese Workers

WASHINGTON, June 14—CIO greetings to the people of China and a pledge of assistance in their battle against Japanese aggression were voiced by Pres. Philip Murray in a statement shortwaved to the Far East today.

Murray's message was part of a program broadcast under government auspices in connection with American Flag Day. A similar statement from AFL Pres. William Green was also sent to the Chinese people.

Pres. Murray said the CIO membership sends its "warmest brotherly greetings to the heroic workers and farmers and soldiers of the Chinese Republic.

'WE SALUTE YOU'

"We salute you, our valiant allies in this war of the common people of the world against the bloody tyranny of Japanese imperial aggression in Asia and of Hitler's rapacious attempt to enslave the people of Europe and the western hemisphere.

"While we, the workers of America's war industries, toil in our factories to supply the armies of China and the other United Nations with the best possible instruments of war, our hearts go out to your great people for your magnificent resistance to the Japanese despoilers of your beloved homeland. We hope and pray that the airplanes and guns and bullets that we produce in our factories will speedily help to bring an early victory to your courageous armies.

LONG SYMPATHETIC

"Long before the entrance of the United States into the war, the working people of America had expressed their sympathy with your fight for national freedom, and had advocated every possible measure to aid your heroic battle. Now that our nation is also in the war, we are all the more determined that victory shall come to the people of China and to the democratic way of life throughout the world.

"During the past six months, we, the workers of America, have become even more firmly convinced that no bars of nationality or race or color shall divide our ranks—the ranks of the common people everywhere — against the reactionary forces that would destroy us all. Your contribution to this campaign for liberty has won the admiration and respect of working people everywhere. We salute you and hope that your victory will come soon."

British Dockmen Speed Loading

LONDON, June 13 (ALN)—With the need for increased shipments of war materials to the fighting fronts, ships are now being turned around by Britain's dock workers faster than ever before.

A few days ago, after unfair treatment by a boss stevedore, 70 dockers refused to handle cargo at a Northeast England dock. A docker named Sammy Byewood, who was well known as a good union man, jumped on a truck and said:

"The quicker we turn these ships around, the quicker we'll get supplies off to the Middle East and the quicker we'll get a Second Front in Europe. I've gone on strike plenty of times in the past. You fellows can do what you ruddy well like, you can call me a scab if you want to, but I'm going back to the job."

He walked back up the ship's gangway. One by one the men followed him, until all 70 were back on the job.

While they were unloading the cargo, their union—a local of the Transport and General Workers—negotiated with the company, got an extra twenty cents an hour pay and had the boss stevedore fired.

I heard of a case recently where dockers had to climb 40-foot ladders into cold storage refrigerators, where the temperature was so low that their hands stuck to the iron rungs and they could only work an hour at a time. But they stayed at it 14 hours till the ship cleared.

Dockers' normal shifts are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., but now they work as long as it is necessary, all night long and seven days a week, to unload the goods. Scarcely a week goes by without a new record being set for turn-around.

Thanks to Ernest Bevin, formerly general secretary of the T. & G. W.U. and now minister of labor, the dockers have a guaranteed working week, with a minimum wage and payment for overtime. The longshore industry, now under government control, was noted before the war for its low pay and chaotic working conditions.

Urge Cooperation Among Anti-Axis Labor Groups

Toledo, O., June 13—Cooperation between the organized labor movements of the world to hasten the victory over international Fascism was given the endorsement of the Toledo Industrial Union Council this week.

The Council called for cooperation "to the end that a united world labor movement may be the basis for winning the war against the Axis and securing the peace which will establish for all the people freedom of speech, assembly, freedom of religion, freedom from fear, and freedom from want."

WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

Winner Says:

Union Men Make Best Fathers!

WASHINGTON, June 20 — You can file this under "Phenomena of 1942" as a sample of what national unity to win the war will do to an employer trade association that wants to make Americans conscious of Father's Day.

First, take Arthur S. Ash, 47, and a member of the United Auto Workers union, with two sons who enlisted to fight the Axis.

Second, take the National Father's Day Committee, who selected Ash as "Yankee Doodle Daddy of 1942."

Mix the two, shake well, and you've got a trip from Detroit to Washington, via New York, with Ash meeting Paul V. McNutt, national Man Power Administrator—all expenses paid by the Father's Day Committee.

Expressing a "mine not to wonder why" philosophy, Ash stopped off at national CIO headquarters to tell the CIO NEWS that he's darned glad a union man was picked as an outstanding father because "good union men make the best fathers."

FINE RECORD

Ash, who works as a tool maker in the Excello Aircraft Corp., in Detroit, was chosen by UAW officers at the request of the Committee, which was seeking an outstanding union father. Ash has belonged to UAW local 157 since 1937, helped organize his plant, was its first union shop chairman, and now heads the entertainment committee.

A neatly dressed fellow, wearing glasses, and with graying hair, Ash seriously is mighty glad of the opportunity as a union man to represent American fathers.

He realizes the necessity for union people to paricipate in community affairs, and practices what he preaches by serving as an air raid warden. He's buying war bonds, too.

WORKING FULL TIME

Until his short vacation, he worked seven days a week, 66 hours, with only three Sundays off since Pearl Harbor.

"We've got our boys in the Army and we've got to back them up," he said. "Labor has a great responsibility as the American group most conscious of the need to win the war. We've got to set the best example of all-out production for victory."

That's what the CIO workers in his plant are doing, he said, cooperating with management through a joint production committee and signing up almost 100 per cent for payroll deduction purchases of war bonds.

"We've got to fight on the home front as well as the battlefront if we're going to win," Ash declared—which seems to be a good philosophy for a "Yankee Doodle Daddy" of any year.

Win Union Shop In Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Wis., June 20—A five year struggle for a union shop ended in victory this week for Albert Trostel Local 47 of the Int'l. Fur and Leather Workers Union.

The 600 members also gained wage increases of 6¾ to 12 cents an hour, check-off collection of dues and a clause providing equal pay for women who do men's work.

HOUSING VICTIMS: You'll have to go far to look for a trio of cuter kids than these, whose fathers are building U. S. bombers at the Boeing plant in Seattle, Wash. But lack of adequate shelter keeps them in the high-priced, inadequate shelter of a trailer camp. A one-room unpainted board shelter costs $25 a month.

Worker's Idea Brings Saving Of Steel

Milwaukee, Wis., June 20—Acting on the simple but effective theory that when you want to save material you use less of it, a member of the United Steelworkers of America is conserving for the war effort 1,960 pounds of steel on each production order that passes through his hands.

The conservation idea sprang from the formation of a joint labor - management production committee at the Chain Belt Co.

LESS MATERIAL

Spurred on by efforts of the committee for increased production and saving of material to help win the war, the USA member, who works on a punch press, formulated a plan whereby an extra link for chain belts is salvaged from each bar of steel.

He simply shortened the material used on each operation by a small fraction of an inch, thus obtaining another link at the end of the bar instead of a small piece which had to be scrapped.

The method's simple—but it had been overlooked for years.

They Don't Like Him!

Chicago, June 20.—If the Pure Oil Co. thought it pulled a smart trick by hiring Hans V. Kaltenborn as its radio commentator, it guessed 100% wrong.

The Chicago Industrial Union Council has condemned the company's choice, and urged affiliated unions to place Pure Oil gas stations on the unfair list until Kaltenborn is removed.

Kaltenborn was one of the instigators of the anti-labor drive against labor's wage standards last spring, and his talks falsely incited many people into attacks on workers and unions.

12,000 To Vote In Textile Poll

Danville, Va., June 20—Twelve thousand employes of the Riverside Dan River Mills will mark NLRB ballots here June 26 to decide whether they wish to be represented by the CIO Textile Workers' Union of America.

The election will be the largest ever conducted in the South's textile industry. The company has agreed to negotiate a contract if the union wins the poll.

'We'll Deliver Goods,' QM General Pledges

CAMP LEE, Va., June 20—"We will deliver the goods. Wherever they go—to whatever point American fighting men penetrate—Quartermasters will be by their side to keep 'em rolling—to Victory!"

That was the pledge of Maj. Gen. Edmund B. Gregory, Quartermaster General of the United States Army, to the American people on the occasion of the 167th anniversary of the Quartermaster Corps. The Quartermaster General made the promise here last Wednesday before approximately 13,000 soldiers massed in the greatest single formation of Quartermaster troops in history. His speech was broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting System.

The Quartermaster Corps has the responsibility of supplying the entire Army with the huge number of supplies produced by American labor.

In this war the Quartermasters have been going through virtual hell in their task of furnishing soldiers on the front lines with food and supplies. During the battle of Bataan, Quartermaster troops actually swept through a narrow gauntlet of enemy fire—losing many men for freedom's cause—in order to keep the flow of supplies going.

"Some of these men (Allied soldiers) must have planes, others tanks; more, high-powered guns. Some must have trucks to drive, and still others, bridges with which to span streams," General Gregory declared.

"Yet, these weapons of modern war—vital as they are—can be of no purpose to a soldier who is starved, or is frozen, or who is not in contact with the enemy because transportation does not get through," General Gregory said.

The Quartermaster General promised the parents of America that the Quartermaster Corps "will never fail your sons. We will deliver the goods."

Anti-Labor Bill Flops in South

Baton Rouge, La., June 20.—Efforts to saddle the people of Louisiana with a vicious anti-labor law have ended in the legislative wastebasket.

The bill, a replica of one introduced in the Senate last winter by Sen. Lee O'Daniel of Texas, was defeated 59 to 20. It had been pushed by an anti-Semitic and anti-Negro group called Christian Americans.

Nail More Pegler Lies

NEW YORK, June 20—Westbrook Pegler's newest low, in which the rabid union-hating columinist boasted of being a labor spy, called for repeal of the Wagner Act and made the wild charge that two CIO unions were engaged in spying on employes and on the Government, got a sharp reply from the unions involved.

The two unions concerned were the United Office and Professional Workers and the American Communications Association, both of which, Pegler said, were engaged in espionage and therefore were traitors to the country. The same column made the unblushing revelation that Pegler frequently passed on anti-union information to employers, and was proud of it.

In a letter to the Scripps-Howard newspaper chain that employs Pegler, Lewis Merrill, president of the UOPWA, sharply refuted the charge of spying and put the issue squarely before the columnist, saying: "Mr. Pegler doesn't like our patriotism We don't like Mr. Pegler's appeasement.

"Now what is it that Mr. Pegler complains of? Is it the fact that our paper attacked him? We did so. Mr. Pegler's attacks on our Allies, on the Negro people, on labor, on the administration and the whole war effort are, in our opinion, calculated to cause the maximum disunity and confusion, and are dangerous to the national unity needed for the successful prosecution of the war."

OTHERS JOIN

In Washington, Local 27 of the UOPWA sent a resolution to the Washington Post, local outlet for the Pegler poison, hitting Pegler for "a new low in anti-labor, anti-victory vileness" and calling on the Post for a retraction and the dropping of his column. The Post has not so far carried a line on the story.

Other UOPWA locals in New York, notably the big Local 16 and the Book and Magazine Guild, joined in condemning Pegler and in pointing out the dirty work he was doing against national unity and the victory effort.

Owner of PM Raps 'Blind' Publishers

New York, June 20. (FP)—Declaring that newspaper publishing has become a "branch of big business," Marshall Field, publisher of PM and The Chicago Sun, expressed the hope in a speech at New York University that cooperatives and labor unions will try to "create new and living forms of journalism" in the U.S.

"The owners of papers," Field asserted, "are singularly blind to the position and aspirations of labor. It is natural perhaps that their view of labor facts should be colored by their relationship to those facts.

"They actually see and feel and understand them from their own particular point of view. And the consequences of that are quickly obvious in the actual handling of news."

40-HOUR WEEK

Field cited the case of the newspaper furor over the 40-hour week which took place several weeks ago.

"It took," Field said, "several statements by the President and other government officials to reassure the country . . . . that the 40-hour week law did not restrict work on war contracts to 40 hours.

"Paper after paper commented on the 40-hour week in such a way that for days the issue appeared to be whether a man could legally work more than 40 hours or whether, as was, of course, the fact, the whole question was a wage question rather than one of hours."

BUTTE, Mont., June 20—Hard-rock miners who get the copper out of Butte's mile-deep mines heard their union leader, Reid Robinson, head of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, call on them to "work as you never worked before" to send Adolph Hitler on an early trip to "the waste-dump of history."

The occasion was Butte Miners Day, traditional ceremony among the 6,500 miners and birthday of the Mine, Mill union. Robinson spoke on a national hookup of NBC with Donald Nelson, War Production chief. The day was further marked by acceptance of the union's production for victory plan by the Anaconda Copper Co. and the government.

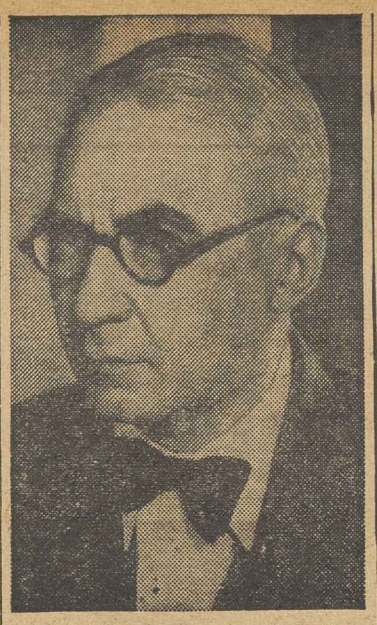
Nelson pointed out that copper was needed now for victory as we never needed it before, citing the fact that one flying fortress used as much as four miles of copper wiring, a battleship two million pounds of copper.

"I know you will respond with body and soul—you men of the mines, you men of the front office," Nelson said. "All of you joined together are enrolled in the battalions of democracy to sweep the Axis from the earth."

In responding to Nelson, Robinson cited the union's consistent fight against fascism and its struggle to get the victory production plan in operation, saying:

"We greet the Anaconda Copper Mining Co. and hail with gratitude its decision to work side by side with us in increasing copper production in order to defeat the Axis.

"This type of democratic unity will hasten the trip of Adolph Hitler to the waste dump of history. To our members I say—work as you have never worked before. We are working for ourselves, our country, our freedom."



NAMED: Head of the new Office of War Information is Elmer Davis, noted radio commentator. Davis won workers' acclaim this spring when almost alone among commentators and columnists, he fought the tory drive against overtime wage payments.

Battle For Soldiers' Pay Raise Won

Washington, June 20—The CIO's battle for a better financial break for soldiers showed success on two fronts this week.

President Roosevelt signed a bill setting $50 a month as the minimum base pay for service men.

He is expected to sign another bill, passed this week by the House and Senate, which will provide allowances for families of married men in the service.

CONTRIBUTIONS

Under the bill, a soldier will contribute $22 a month for support of his wife, for instance, while the government would contribute $28.

A wife with one child would receive $62, $40 of which would be supplied by the government, plus $10 additional for each child.

If the dependent's relationship is other than that of wife, the service man could contribute $22 a month, to which the government would add $15 for one dependent parent, or $25 for two. One dependent parent and a service man's sister would get $20.

The bill also set as a principle of induction the deferment of married men, regardless of financial status of dependents, in an effort to keep families intact. Single men will be called first, then men with dependents other than wives, then married men without children whose wives are employed, and lastly, other married men in the order of least to greatest dependency status.

WLB Awards Dime Raise at Plane Plant

WASHINGTON, June 20—A 10 cents an hour wage increase was awarded this week by the National War Labor Board to the 1,150 employes of Ranger Aircraft Engines, Farmingdale, Long Island.

The raise was two-thirds that requested by the United Auto Workers Union, which represents the workers, and was granted by the WLB to stabilize the earnings of the company's employes and to bring them more nearly to the level of wages paid in comparable plants and on comparable jobs.

The order for the increase, retroactive to April 10, also boosted the hiring rate from 50 to 60 cents an hour. After 30 days the pay will be 65 cents, after 60 days 70 cents, and after 90 days 75 cents.

The Board ordered a maintenance of membership clause, to take effect June 27, which provides that all those members of the union at that date or those who subsequently join must remain in good standing for the duration of the contract as a condition of employment.

The decision on the wage issue was made after a careful study by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of wages in comparable plants in Long Island and in the aircraft industry.

The opinion, written by Wayne L. Morse of the WLB and concurred in by the three other public members and the four labor members who participated in the decision, stated flatly that wage stabilization "cannot be accomplished by freezing existing wage rates."

'UNFAIR TO DENY IT'

"It simply would not be fair to the workers involved to deny them a wage increase in view of the unfavorable wage position in which they find themselves when compared with other workers who perform like work," the decision said.

"It is not fair or reasonable to require a worker, either by employer practice or by government policy, to remain on his job for the duration of the war unless reasonable adjustments are made in his wages so that he is not discriminated against economically as a result of such manpower stabilization program," it added.

Attention, Mr. Biddle— How About It!

Of the 812 joint labor-management victory production committees in operation throughout United States war industry, 256 are at work in California.

It's no military secret that airplanes, ships and other arms are made in California, that a great deal of oil is drilled, that considerable food is grown there.

It is also well known that Harry Bridges, ordered deported by Biddle three weeks ago, is the California Regional Director of the CIO. The joint labor-management production committees have been set up on labor's initiative. The labor in California's war industries is mostly CIO.

Curtiss-Wright Signs First Pact With Auto Union

Columbus, Ohio, June 20. (FP)—The Curtiss-Wright Corp. has signed its first CIO agreement, with Local 927 of the United Automobile Workers.

Employes gained a $4,000,000 annual pay raise and standard union conditions. The starting rate is 60c with a 75c minimum.

The big plane manufacturer follows a policy of company unionism which still prevails at the Paterson's plants, though the UAW-CIO has made tremendous headway. The Columbus pact came just two months after the UAW's election victory in an NLRB poll, and on the eve of an election at the Buffalo plant.

Win Poll

Memphis, Tenn., June 20.—The CIO increased its strength in this city today when workers at the Chapman & Dewey Lumber Co. cast 153 votes for the Intl. Woodworkers of America to only 98 against and three for the AFL.

California CIO Set To Lick Tories

SAN FRANCISCO, June 20—The California CIO Council takes the job of electing win-the-war candidates to public office seriously, as shown in the "Votes for Victory" drive now being pushed throughout the state.

The drive is using all types of publicity, including a handbook outlining the job that must be done to elect victory candidates, instructions on how to organize for political action, and the like.

In addition, the Council is putting out posters, going on the air, and devoting special editions of the "Labor Herald," official CIO state paper, to the campaign.

"American labor is not content merely to accept its share of the responsibility for winning the war," according to a report of the state Council Executive Board inaugurating the campaign. "American labor, through giving real leadership to winning the war, must become so deeply integrated in the political and economic life of our country as to ensure for labor a voice in determining the kind of peace which will follow the complete destruction of Nazism.

"Labor must make sure that peace brings not only a cessation of hostilities, but economic security for the common people and the extension of democracy in this and every other country."

Rep. Smith Fails To Oust Opponent

It took Emmett Davison, secretary-treasurer of the AFL Intl. Assn. of Machinists, exactly 42 days to prove to the Smith-controlled Democratic machine that his name should be on the primary election ballot this August. Nomination is tantamount to election in Virginia.

ACCEPT PETITION

The Democratic Committee of the Congressional District, which is staffed with Smith adherents, finally admitted that Davison's petitions were in order. Earlier it had appeared that technicalities concerning the signatures of 250 citizens with paid-up poll taxes might be used to give Smith an unopposed contest for return to Congress.

"The evidence that I had met the requirements of law was so overwhelming and the people were so stirred up over the attempt to deprive them of the right to vote in the primaries, that it was impossible for the Committee to delay its certification further," Davison said.

Davison, a one-time mayor of Alexandria, has widespread support from labor and civic groups which are fed up with Smith's anti-labor, anti-administration proposals.

CIO SUPPORT

Additional labor support came to Davison when the Virginia Industrial Union Council's executive board attacked Smith's record as "anti-labor", adding that "he has done a thorough job of disrupting war morale by his incessant attacks on labor.

"We have gleaned Mr. Smith's record and have found he has not cast a single vote in the interest of the poor people of his district."

The CIO group also indicated it would support Moss Plunkett, a crusader for abolition of the poll tax, against Representative Clifton Woodrum, member of the House "soak the poor" bloc.

Victory at Polls

Rockford, Ill. June 20—The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union won its first victory in this city this week when workers at the Eclipse Fuel Engineering Co. voted for the union 59 to 34 in an NLRB election.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Dear Phil:-

I have seen some of these Resolutions which were passed by the Executive Board on June third, and I want to tell you what a fine example I think it is of your wholehearted cooperation toward the war effort.

My best wishes to you,

Always sincerely,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Hon. Philip Murray,
President, Congress of Industrial Organizations,

TRIBUTE: President Roosevelt sends a note to CIO Pres. Philip Murray expressing his approval and congratulations for the resolutions passed at the CIO Executive Board meeting early this month.

'Mauled' Tax Bill Creeps Slowly Towards Vote

WASHINGTON, June 20—The tax bill—already badly mauled by the majority of the House Ways and Means Committee in Congress—made further progress toward debate and a vote this week, with a little prodding by President Roosevelt and a burst of committee activity in response.

The activity came after the President asked for action to raise the money the nation needs for victory, in which he urged Congress to get at least a partial bill, leaving details to be filled in later.

While the activity didn't amount to much, the committee restored some 400 million dollars of the 2½ billion dollars it had chopped out of the Treasury Department's original request for 8½ billion in extra tax revenue for the war.

Talk of the sales tax subsided somewhat during the week, largely due to continued labor opposition, though the danger still remained that the sales tax would be sneaked in at the last minute.

LIGHT PROFITS TAX?

Labor sources continued to point to the need for an open rule when the bill hits the floor. An open rule allows amendments to be offered and voted upon during Congressional debate, while a closed rule forces the House to vote the bill up or down as a whole.

At the same time, Ways and Means Committee members and other influential forces continued to press for lighter taxes on excess profits. One proposal seriously made is to hand excess profits taxes back to the corporations after the war is over, on the theory that they will need funds for readjustment.

This would make excess profits taxes merely a loan, to be repaid after Hitler is beaten. The proposal was supported by Matthew Woll, head of the AFL's tax committee!

CHOPPING JOB

To date, the Ways and Means Committee has done a pretty thorough job of whittling down the Treasury's estimate of what is needed in extra tax revenue this year. This has been done by going light on big incomes and war profits, while retaining the Treasury's recommendations for taxing the lower brackets pretty much intact.

Thus, the majority of the Committee recommended that incomes of $10,000 a year be taxed $485 a year less than the Treasury asked. Congressmen are paid exactly $10,000. Nothing whatever has been done to carry out President Roosevelt's suggestion of limiting income to $25,000 a year, though the Treasury has asked that also.

The CIO program, repeatedly presented to Congress, calls for higher income taxes on the upper brackets, leaving present exemptions alone, for stiffer excess profits levies, for closing of all loopholes that allow wealthy individuals and corporations to evade taxation, and for strict avoidance of the sales tax in any form.

Little Steel Report Due This Week

Washington, June 20—The report of a three-man fact-finding commission of the War Labor Board on the long-drawn out "Little Steel" cases will be turned over to the WLB this week.

On June 25—one day less than four months since hearings first started—the report will be submittted and made public. On June 29 the Board will hold public hearings, and then move towards a final decision.

The United Steelworkers of America, headed by CIO President Philip Murray, have demanded $1 a day wage increases, union security and other improvements. Involved in the case are an estimated 182,000 employes of Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, and Inland Steel.

The WLB's fact-finding commission is headed by Arthur S. Meyer, representing the public; Richard Frankensteen of the United Automobile Workers, for labor; and Cyrus Ching of the U. S. Rubber Co., for employers.

WASHINGTON, June 20—If you don't believe that labor-management production committees are a big success, ask the bosses!

Of 88 employers recently surveyed by Mill & Factory, a trade magazine, the great majority of them, chosen at random, felt that labor-management committees:

1. Increase production.
2. Are worth the time consumed.
3. Increase the number of worthwhile suggestions.
4. Do not encroach on management functions.
5. Are not being used as bargaining units.

Editors of the magazine pointed out that the survey showed that neither labor nor management has sought special advantage through the committees, instead using them for their special purpose—to increase production for victory over the Axis.

CROSS-SECTION

"These companies," the magazine stated, "were selected at random and represent the experiences of a typical cross section of industry. . . . The survey was carefully planned to get at the real facts without fear or favor. Every plant manager queried was asked to report completely and without prejudice.

"He was assured that his reply would be held in strict confidence and used only in compiling over-all results."

Seventy-four per cent of the employers said that labor to date has "used these meetings in a sincere effort to increase production"; five per cent said it "was too early to tell"; and 21 per cent said that labor hadn't.

UNIONS HELPFUL

"Some firms," the magazine stated, "still feel that their committees have not been in operation long enough to permit them to answer the question satisfactorily. Most of these firms, however, believe that labor is going to be cooperative."

To the question, "Has the plan resulted in the improvement of your labor-management relations?" 47 per cent said yes, 47 per cent answered no, and 6 per cent "didn't know yet."

In a summary of the survey, Mill & Factory stated:

"The great majority of the concerns establishing these committees report continued good or improved labor-management relations. Only two firms reported impaired labor-management relations.

"Although the plan is still largely in the process of being set up, it is significant that 73 per cent of those answering the queries report a sincere effort on the part of labor to help increase production."

3,000 Quit Lewis Union In Louisiana

New Orleans, La., June 20—Casting off the yoke of a man whose practices have been described as "one and the same with those of Hitler and Mussolini," nearly 3,000 New Orleans workers quit John L. Lewis this week and returned to the leadership of the CIO and its president, Philip Murray.

Disgusted with Lewis' "studied campaign of disruption and disunity," the workers, who belonged to District 50 of the United Mine Workers Union and to the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, petitioned for direct affiliation with CIO.

Pennsy Union Gives Earful To Congressmen

Washington, June 20 — Eight Pennsylvania Congressmen and one of its two Senators—"Puddler Jim" Davis—got an earful of CIO's program for raising taxes for victory, when 35 delegates from the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers came to visit them this week.

Headed by Michael Fitzpatrick, president of District 6 and William Chambers, secretary, the delegates spent a couple of hours with the Congressmen, setting forth the CIO tax program and urging them to vote and work against the sales tax.

According to Chambers, the Congressmen agreed that the CIO program was sound, agreed that the majority of the House Ways and Means Committee had done a butchering job on the Treasury Department's original requests, and agreed emphatically that they would vote against the sales tax. "Puddler Jim," however, wasn't quite so emphatic on the sales tax.

REMINDS

The Congressmen were also reminded that the Committee had ignored the President's seven-point program for gearing the nation to a victory economy in their treatment of the tax bill so far; that nothing had been done by the majority to write a tax bill that would help prevent inflation; and that the $25,000 income ceiling suggested by the President and backed by the CIO had been totally forgotten.

The delegates, who represent more than 45,000 CIO workers, also urged their Congressmen to demand an open rule from the Rules Committee when the bill comes up. Under the open rule, amendments can be offered from the floor during debate.

Tax Chiselers

Some glaring instances of tax evasion were recently reported by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

One corporation owner—a maker of airplane parts—hired himself as sales representative at a compensation of $1,656,000, to cut down on his corporation's income tax.

A company making forgings increased salaries of employes who were stockholders and relatives of stockholders by 523 per cent from 1938 to 1941.

Yet another company, in the aviation field, paid $516,000 in excessive salaries and bonuses to its owners, to avoid taxation, the Treasury found.

These and other reported tax evasions were discovered and blocked by the Treasury. But there are a hundred other loopholes through which war profiteers and the very wealthy are escaping payment of their fair share of war taxes.

The Treasury presented to Congress a program designed to plug many of these loopholes, as the CIO is also demanding. But the House Ways and Means Committee seems bent on sabotaging the Treasury program and leaving as many loopholes as possible. Urge your Congressman to work for a fair tax program, based on ability to pay, and showing no mercy to tax chiselers.

The Union Shop

The current propaganda against the union shop is blasted by a barrage of facts, in a scholarly study of the subject by the Rev. Jerome L. Toner, Ph.D., which has just been published in book form, under the title, "The Closed Shop."

Dr. Toner points out that the closed shop idea is as old as the craft guilds, and that it met with general acceptance from employers who dealt with unions until 1903 when the National Association of Manufacturers decided on an open shop policy.

The NAM's record, Dr. Toner says, "reveals that its opposition to the closed shop has been nothing more than a means to cover its anti-union policies."

Despite such opposition, 4,000,000 American workers are now protected by union or closed shop contracts, and employers as well as workers have found its results are good.

Among the advantages which Dr. Toner finds resulting from the union shop are protection for unions from employer opposition and discrimination and from non-union competition; and a spirit of responsibility and cooperation between union and management productive of the greatest possible production.

The union shop is particularly important in the present war period as a means of securing the greatest possible concentration on increasing war production, unhampered by the friction and struggles bred by open-shop policies.

Boosts for Big Shots

There were no industry-wide wage increases for workers on the production line in 1941. But corporation executives were more fortunate.

A recent compilation of executives' salaries in the Economic Outlook shows boosts in total remuneration ranging from 25 per cent to 218 per cent between 1940 and 1941. And this does not take into account their stock holdings.

These corporation heads reckon their salaries in scores or hundreds of thousands, so that some of the increases amounted to more than $100,000 for the individual concerned.

Think of this the next time you hear labor called "selfish" for trying to keep wages in line with rising living costs.

Aid-To-Russia Week

June 22 is the anniversary of Hitler's invasion of the Soviet Union. It marks the conclusion of a whole year in which the people of the USSR, through gallant and almost superhuman struggle, have borne the brunt of world resistance to the Axis enslavers.

This day is appropriately chosen as the opening of Aid to Russia Week, with the endorsement of all sections of labor, the churches, governors and other leaders of the American people.

CIO members, through their own Committee for Allied and American War Relief, are proud to take a leading part in this drive to aid our own cause and the cause of all freedom-loving peoples, by giving to the limit to aid our Russian and other allies to victory for all the United Nations.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE House Ways and Means Committee has dropped President Roosevelt's proposal to limit war incomes to $25,000 a year like Aunt Althea might drop a lizard if you slipped it into her hand.

After all, you know, old chap, the poor are used to hardship. It's one thing to slap a tax on a fellow making $9.60 a week, as the committee proposes. But it's something else again to expect someone used to better things to get by on a miserable $25,000 clear for himself, after taxes.

In England, the War Department reports, earls and dukes get only the same meager food rations as workingmen. "The skin trouble which comes from inadequate diet, and which is prevalent in England, has afflicted a certain very important British family," the same report continues.

But members of America's "important families," it appears, are to be spared the indignity of having to get by on 16 times the income of the average worker's family.

The shuddering cold shoulders turned on the $25,000 proposal are indicative of the lack of seriousness with which the tory majority of the House committee approaches the whole tax question.

After all, if these Congressmen want a real good shudder, they have only to consider what Hitler has done to other countries where the class interests of the rich were set ahead of national interests.

American labor takes a much more serious view of our war necessities. It is not out to soak the rich, nor to gain special advantages for itself. Its chief concern is to raise enough tax revenue to lick the Axis, and to raise it in a way that will promote the war effort, not hamper it.

But much more important than the handling of the $25,000 proposal is the butchery which the House committee has been performing on the whole tax program of the U. S. Treasury.

The committee has fallen more than $2,000,000,000 short of providing the eight billions immediately necessary for war purposes.

It has whittled away the administration's tax program in a manner peculiarly demoralizing to war morale—by reducing the burden on the wealthy in every possible way, and by proposing to place impossible burdens on low-income groups which are already paying more than their share of taxes.

The committee is now proposing to bring out its inadequate and unjust tax program—formulated in secret sessions—with a closed rule which will only permit Congress to vote the program up or down, without the possibility of making amendments from the floor.

The CIO tax program corresponds in most respects with that of the U. S. Treasury. It calls for raising more money through effective excess profits taxation, through plugging present loopholes, through taxing holders of tax-exempt securities, and through other taxation based on ability to pay.

The CIO opposes the sales tax because this hits heaviest those with the lowest incomes and falls lightest on those who have the most money.

The CIO also opposes the sales tax, as it does the lowering of income tax exemptions to soak the lowest paid, because this means taking actual living necessities away from useful workers and thus lowering their productive efficiency.

After all, none of our coupon-clippers are going to get skin diseases that come from malnutrition by being reduced to $25,000 a year spending money, or through other taxation directed at war profiteering.

But if you put an income tax on an individual earning only $9.60 a week, or on man and wife with but $23 between them, as the House committee proposes—or if you sock them with sales taxation—you are taking food from stomachs that don't have enough as it is. And much worse than skin diseases will result.

The government reports that war production workers lose 6,000,000 work days a month through illness and injuries. The type of taxation advocated by the House Ways and Means Committee would increase this terrific loss to our war effort.

It is not too late to get a win-the-war tax program, despite the House committee. Write or wire your Congressmen and Senators to oppose a gag rule on the committee's report, and to insist on adoption of the Treasury program and the proposals of the CIO.

'Food To Win' Plan Adopted By Union, Firm

Camden, N.J., June 20.—"Food will win the war and write the peace."

With that slogan in mind, labor and management of the Campbell Soup Co., joined today in the formation of a joint production committee to accelerate production for the war effort and for American armed forces throughout the world.

Represented on the committee are corporation officials, headed by A. F. Miller, general superintendent; and members of Local 80, CIO Cannery & Agricultural Workers, led by Pres. Anthony Valentino.

A joint statement issued by the committee called for improvement of the plant safety record, reduction of waste, improved efficiency, preservation of machinery and avoidance of production errors.

"We must cut waste of raw ingredients," the statement said. "Every pound of food saved means more to distribute not only to our own people and our armies, but also to the peoples of our Allies who stand with us."

Senate Group Urges WPB Give Voice To Labor

WASHINGTON, June 20 — Attacking dollar-a-year men in Government who have hampered the nation's all-out production program for victory because they did not divorce themselves from private business interests, the Senate Truman Investigating Committee this week released a report which recommended:

1. Increased participation in the production program on the part of labor, small business and "independent-minded production engineers." The Committee recommended broadening of labor participation on a regional and industrial basis.

2. Removal of dollar-a-year men from positions where they make decisions affecting their own industries.

3. An over-all plan for future war production.

Applauding War Production Chairman Donald Nelson for making great strides in increasing national production and for taking a progressive stand on labor participation, the Committee urged that he carry the program even further.

IN FOREFRONT

"The labor division of the War Production Board and the labor advisory committees have consistently taken advanced positions in advocacy of the radical curtailment of civilian industry," the Committee report stated, "and the labor groups have been constantly in the foreground in fighting for an adequate conversion program.

"Labor has fought for curtailment and conversion despite the fact that in many cases limitation orders have resulted in severe and prolonged unemployment for thousands of union members. In the necessary tasks which lie ahead in the completion of the conversion process, labor has demonstrated its right to a greater degree of participation in the operating work of the War Production Board and to a more respectful hearing for its plans and suggestions.

"Mr. Nelson has already recognized this in his inauguration of the war production drive, which provides for joint participation by labor and management in the stimulation of production at the individual plants.

BROADEN PROGRAM

"This program of labor participation should, in the Committee's opinion, be broadened to provide for similar activity on a regional and industrial basis.

"The war production drive has provided that, without either labor or management trespassing upon the legitimate functions of the other, both can make a distinct and profitable contribution in joint activity to increase production."

The Committee voted to release the report, 9 to 1, after Nelson had asked that it be withheld. In overriding the Nelson objection, Senator Truman told Nelson that the program he directs is being threatened by the same "little band of conspirators and dollar-a-year men" who were responsible for the failure of the Office of Production Management.

Methodists Urge Place for Labor

New York, June 20.—Meeting for its 35th annual conference, the Methodist Federation for Social Service has adopted a program calling for a peace that will be permanent, and underscoring the necessity of giving labor a voice in the councils of government.

Reaffirming its belief in the need for social-democratic planning and the social ownership of all things necessary to its successful operation, the Federation urged improvement of racial relations, defense of civil liberties, and cooperative relations between church people and unionists.

The federation hailed the growing number of joint labor-management production councils and the increasing display of unity between CIO and AFL, and it advocated close cooperation between the labor movements of the democratic nations.

Wallace Speech In Pamphlets

New York, June 20—Vice-President Henry Wallace's widely-hailed speech setting forth the war aims of the common people in this war, is now available in pamphlet form.

L. B. Fischer, Inc., 381 Fourth avenue, New York City, has printed the speech in book form, to sell at 75c a copy; and in pamphlet form, at 25c. It will be on sale at bookstores.

Quantities of 500 or more of the pamphlets may be ordered directly from the publisher at 10c a copy.

Union Shop Security Aids U.S. War Output Program, Priest Finds In New Book

By FRED D'AVILA

WASHINGTON, June 20—Extension of the union shop to all American industry would be a potent contribution to the United Nations' battle to crush world Fascism. That is the inescapable conclusion to be drawn from the booklet, "The Closed Shop," written by the Rev. Father Jerome L. Toner and published by the American Council on Public Affairs.

Rev. Toner, of St. Martin's College, Olympia, Wash., sees the union shop not only as a protective device for workers but also as an adjunct to the battle of production.

"It creates that spirit of cooperation which logically leads to harmonious and efficient relationships envisaged in the Philip Murray 'Industrial Council Plan' or the Donald Nelson 'Joint Labor-Management Committees'," Rev. Toner wrote.

He declared that cooperation "between the union and the employer which is productive of the greatest possible production and the most equitable and just distribution generally obtains only when a closed shop exists."

COOPERATIVE SPIRIT

"Unionists and unions alike feel a sort of co-partnership relation because the closed shop signifies complete victory in the struggle for recognition and existence of the union," Rev. Toner explained.

"It gives the employes a sense of ownership which creates interest and responsibility conducive to greater production and efficiency. It frees the energies and resources of the union for activity tending to stabilize and equalize labor costs.

"But even while it increases the strength of the unions—numerically and financially—it tempers the animosity that all too frequently characterizes the meetings of management and labor."

FALSE PROPAGANDA

Father Toner accused employer groups such as the National Assn. of Manufacturers of fostering misconceptions about the union shop. He cited his interpretation of it, "that the employer agrees with the union that all employes covered by the agreement—and in some agreements, all the employes of the employer—shall be, or become, and remain unions members in good standing, or be discharged."

In addition, Rev. Toner pointed out that current union shop practice calls for observance of certain hiring procedures, varying from that of hiring only workers who are members of the union to that of hiring any workers who is willing to join the union within a specified period of time.

He said that in his discussion of the union shop, "it is understood that the union is generally open to qualified workers."

CHECK-OFF HELPS, TOO

Logically associated with the union shop is the check-off method of collecting union dues, Rev. Toner noted, although the check-off may exist with any degree of unionization.

He declared that under a union shop contract, with all employes belonging to the union, "the check-off provides the simplest and most convenient method for the employer, as well as for the union, to safeguard security of employment—a security otherwise frequently interrupted or lost by suspension or expulsion from the union for failure to fulfill the financial obligations of membership."

AN OLD IDEA

Rev. Toner exploded the conception that the union shop idea is something new. It existed, he said, before the American Revolution, and originally arose among the craft guilds, or associations of workers, in Great Britain.

He said that the union shop idea expanded and developed in the United States with the general acceptance of employers until 1903 when the NAM demanded an open shop policy for American industry.

"Before that time, employers were inclined, when collective bargaining union contract relations had been established, to accept without undue protest the closed shop as a logical result of union relationship," Rev. Toner stated.

"The Association's record . . . reveals that its opposition to the closed shop has been nothing more than a means to cover its anti-union policies and actions. Still, there is some possibility," Rev. Toner explained, "that this policy may be relaxed. The recent turnabout by Ford may mark the beginning of a change in the attitude of organized employers."

PERFECTLY LEGAL

The legality of the union shop is beyond question, according to Rev. Toner, who said that "from the time of the passage of the National Industrial Recovery Act in 1933 down through the enactment of the National Labor Relations Act in 1935, and its constitutional confirmation by the Supreme Court in 1937, and on to the present day, the closed shop has, in effect, been approved by Congress and the Courts."

Despite employer association opposition to the closed shop, many individual industrialists and manufacturers have accepted it. An estimated 4,000,000 workers now are protected by union shop contracts, Rev. Toner estimated.

He pointed out that the union shop is "primarily a defensive device, protecting unions against employer opposition and discrimination as well as against non-union competition."

HIGHEST STAGE

"In conclusion, it may be observed that institutionally, the closed shop represents the acme of unionization through which the most effective type of collective bargaining is possible.

"It is the bond of industrial relations by which men and masters may be united to work together in peace and harmony for their mutual benefit.

"Non-closed shop relations breed suspicion in proportion to the degree of non-organization; inevitably, the union is wary of the employer and unionists war with non-union employes.

"Even though the closed shop is no panacea for all industrial difficulties, it does constitute the solution of many of them."

"The Closed Shop," by Rev. Jerome L. Toner, is published by the American Council on Public Affairs, 2153 Florida Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C. The book sells for $2.75 in paper binding and $3.25 in cloth.

Clothing Union Asks Clemency For Sharecropper

New York, June 20.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America yesterday sent a telegram to Gov. Colgate W. Darden of Virginia, urging him to exercise clemency in behalf of Odell Waller, Negro sharecropper who has been sentenced to die on June 19.

The telegram, signed by Jacob S. Potofsky, general secretary-treasurer, and Frank Rosenblum, executive vice-president of the union, declared in part that if the desired commutation were granted, Governor Darden would be "making a significant contribution to the welding of that national unity so essential to the successful prosecution of our war for survival."

LABOR AT WAR: This float heads the throngs of marching members of the CIO National Maritime Union in New York City's great "Nation at War" parade. This float and the NMU's contingent of men who had been torpedoed at sea, drew cheers from the sidewalk crowds, estimated at 2,500,000. In all, more than 100,000 CIO and AFL members took part and their floats were among the most colorful in the line of march.

WASHINGTON, June 20—"Phil Murray Day," celebrated traditionally by steel workers throughout the country on June 17, was set aside this year as a means of contributing to the CIO War Relief Committee.

The United Steelworkers of America, representing 660,000 members, urged all its affiliated local unions that instead of merely celebrating June 17 as usual by parties in honor of the president of the union and of the CIO, the membership should give their day's pay to the War Relief Committee of the CIO.

Employes and officers of the USA-CIO also contributed a day's pay to the CIO War Relief Committee, according to David J. McDonald, USA-CIO secretary-treasurer.

DRIVE AT FORD

Detroit last week officially celebrated the drive to sign up the 80,000 members of Ford Local 600 of the United Automobile Workers to pledges of an hour's pay per month.

Mayor Edward J. Jeffries of Detroit launched the CIO campaign with a special proclamation, at ceremonies attended by pretty girls in native European costumes, representing the United Nations. A CIO War Relief campaign banner was displayed in front of the City Hall. The Ford Local has appointed a special organizer of the war relief drive, and arrangements have been made with Ford Company to provide for a check-off to facilitate the collection of the hour's pay per month.

Two large auto locals last week successfully completed their campaigns for regular monthly pledges for the CIO War Relief Committee with 100 per cent sign-ups. These were UAW Local 2, the Murray Body, which is expected to contribute $5,000 monthly, and UAW Local 660 of Jackson, Michigan, in which the 600 members unanimously agreed to monthly donations of an hour's pay. More than fifty Michigan locals have adopted the hour-a-month program and are now circulating pledge cards among their members.

PRAISE IN BAY STATE

Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts endorsed the campaign of the CIO War Relief Committee now under way, for payment of an hour's pay per month for the duration of the war. The Governor's statement follows:

"May I congratulate the Congress of Industrial Organizations on its magnificent undertaking for war relief, through its program for payment by CIO members of one hour's pay per month for the duration of the war. Fully realized, the program nationally should mean millions of dollars monthly to relieve war suffering."

Mayor Maurice J. Tobin of Boston also announced his approval of the War Relief drive in Boston by the CIO. He commended the CIO "for its excellent program for the relief of war suffering," adding that "by this program, the CIO has assumed enthusiastically the duty of giving of both its efforts and its money to win the war against the enemies of freedom throughout the world.

"I am sure," said Mayor Tobin, "that CIO workers in Boston will cooperate to the limit through regular sustained contributions every month until the war is won. This campaign demonstrates that the millions of CIO members are going to assist in this fight to the finish."

One of the first unions in Massachusetts to respond to the campaign was the Textile Workers Union of America, of Lawrence, Mass., which sent in a contribution last week. Donal Sullivan, former president of the American Newspaper Guild, is the New England Director of the CIO War Relief Committee in charge of the drive in Massachusetts.

The National Maritime Union which has already contributed thousands of dollars to the CIO War Relief Committee campaign, last week donated another $2,000.

tion as the National Council of Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers.

More than 2,400 construction workers, in Locals 198, 260 and 393, unanimously passed a resolution condemning the actions of the high-handed Lewis leadership. They charged that:

Although an organizing committee was set up, it has never functioned.

The appointed chairman of UCWOC, A. D. Lewis, John L.'s brother, has consistently ignored the CIO parent body which created the committee he headed.

A. D. Lewis and his brother attacked the CIO and Murray, established a policy board for UCWOC without consulting CIO, and through that board's action voted to quit CIO without giving any local notice.

PITTSBURGH, June 20—The United Steelworkers of America, CIO, this week had rolled up the greatest series of election victories in the history of the Natl. Labor Relations Board.

With practically every subsidiary of U. S. Steel Corp. accounted for, the NLRB reported these results:

USA-CIO	111,046
Against	8,777

The resounding vote of confidence in the CIO steel union, led by Philip Murray, was a tribute to the union's activities in behalf of its members since the steel organizing drive was launched in 1936. U. S. Steel has been under a "for members only" contract with the SWOC—now the United Steelworkers—since March, 1937.

UNION DEMANDS

The string of victories give the USA-CIO sole bargaining rights, and pave the way for contract improvements. The union's demands for $1 a day increases, union security and the check-off are now before the War Labor Board for determination.

How completely the union has won the allegiance of Big Steel's employes was indicated by the plant-by-plant results. At Duquesne, Pa., for instance, the USA-CIO received 4,312 "yes" votes to 151 against. The Edgar Thompson Works in Braddock, Pa., went CIO by 3,906 to 102, and in Chicago the South Works voted for the USA-CIO by a margin of 8,654 to 944.

WOMEN'S CORNER

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Adoption in the House of Mrs. Norton's amendment to the WPA appropriations bill earmarked at least $6,000,000 for nursery schools for working mothers is an important step towards enabling women to be efficient war production workers.

As Mrs. Norton pointed out in her speech to the House:

"Unless the mothers are assured of the welfare of their children, it will be impossible for them to extend their best efforts to the production of those essentials necessary to win the war."

WPA has already opened many nurseries for care of children of working mothers in defense areas. A small charge is made for the care in accordance with the ability of the family to pay. The Norton amendment, if adopted in the Senate, will enable greatly needed expansion of this part of the WPA program.

They are doing a great job," Mrs. Norton said, "and they could do better if they had more nurseries, particularly in the districts where extensive war work makes it necessary to employ many mothers with small children. These nurseries provide food, recreation, medical care, rest periods — everything necessary for the comfort and welfare of children."

A Wartime Need

The Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO stresses the need for day care of children of working mothers as an essential part of the war production program, and has asked for time to testify in favor of the Norton amendment before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

They point out that young housewives who have recently worked in industry require least training for war production jobs, but a high percentage of this group of women have young children at home. This has been the experience in England also where hundreds of public nurseries have been opened by the government.

Active support for the Norton amendment has also come from the New York Committee on Care of Children in Wartime, on which the New York CIO Auxiliaries are represented.

Act on Tax Bill

The importance of having every member of every auxiliary send her own Congressman a personal letter supporting the national CIO program on the Tax Bill was emphasized this week in a legislative letter issued by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

The letter stressed the importance of an adequate tax bill as an essential part of the CIO war program, and suggested that members tell their representatives that they support taxation based on ability to pay. That would mean higher profits taxes and high income taxes; closing of loopholes in tax legislation, like that which allows husbands and wives to make separate returns and so saves wealthy families some $300,000,000 a year; and higher gift and inheritance taxes.

It would also mean opposition to a sales tax and to lowering of exemptions. These provisions, the auxiliary letter pointed out, would injure the war effort by taking needed food, clothing and other necessities from low-paid workers.

LaFollette Raps Alcoa Profit Greed

Washington, June 20—Declaring that a preventable shortage of aluminum forgings had held down the production of Martin bombers 20 per cent this year, Sen. Robert M. LaFollette this week in a speech to the Senate urged establishment of a Federal Aluminum Authority to direct all U. S. production of the metal.

The Wisconsin Progressive charged that the aluminum program had been "warped by the overweening desire of private corporations to protect their post war interests."

TIES TO NAZI FIRMS

LaFollette told the Senate that the Aluminum Co. of America had discouraged the production of independent aluminum producing facilities, had maintained "intimate and dangerous ties" with the I. G. Farben chemical trust of Germany, and had concealed the shortage of aluminum by "over-optimistic, misleading advertisements and public announcements."

LaFollette contrasted the statement of Glenn L. Martin of the Martin Aircraft Co., who said production of bombers was below capacity because of an aluminum shortage, with that of Jesse Jones, RFC head, who told the Senate banking committee that "it looks like we are going to have ample aluminum."

Announce Awards

Washington, June 20.—Awards for production "soldiers" whose ideas help to boost output were announced today by the War Production Board. They will range from "Awards of Individual Production Merit" for simpler suggestions to "Citations of Individual Production Merit" for makers of suggestions having an outstanding effect on the entire war effort.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Regional Director Noel Beddow of Alabama reports a successful gathering of CIO organizers from our different national and international unions in the Southern states, 80 in all being present. The meeting was held June 14, and represented 13 unions.

A constructive program was adopted calling for cooperation of all national and international representatives in planning and effectuating organizing drives. The plans contemplate activizing local unions, their representatives and CIO Councils. Walter Smethurst, assistant director of organization of the CIO, attended the conference. This will be followed up by similar conferences in other Southern states. The conference also took steps to extend the use of the labor press.

They laid plans to deal with the following problems: Organizational, administrative, press and public relations, publicity, political set-ups and activities.

Effective Answer

This will be an effective answer to the so-called "Christian American," a labor-hating institution with temporary headquarters at the Heidelberg Hotel in Baton Rouge, Louisiana. Two of the planks this group is advocating for passage by state legislatures are: Requiring all labor unions to register with the sheriff and provide surety bonds of $10,000 and filing lists of applicants registering for jobs with the sheriff once a week.

This is typical of the Nazi Gestapo. CIO will expose this group for what it is and these Southern conferences will go a long way to combat such evil influences.

Not one of the sponsors has ever advocated anything in behalf of organized labor but it is well known that some of them have been in opposition to labor. Where organizing activities are progressing, these enemies of labor always seem to stick up their heads only to be defeated and driven back. OUR ANSWER TO THIS IS TO KEEP ON ORGANIZING!

Election Victories

Walter H. Harris, director of the Shoe Workers drive, reports the following election result at the Farmington Shoe Company, Dover, New Hampshire: Out of 262 votes cast, CIO received 217 as against 43.

CIO Regional Director August Scholle reports winning bargaining rights for CIO at the Kent Estinauihser Company in Grand Rapids, Mich., with a count of 21 for CIO to zero. They have signed a closed shop agreement with check-off and a 9 to 15 cents per hour increase.

Roy W. Atkinson, acting CIO regional director for the State of Washington, adds an election victory at the Ohio-Ferro Alloys plant in Tacoma with the following results: CIO, 21; AFL, 12, and no union, five.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO regional director in Chicago, reports winning of two elections by CIO in that area this past week, as follows: Pioneer Paper Stock Company: UPN&TWA, 261; no union, 48. American Brakeshoe Co.: UAW-CIO, 204; no union, 173.

Regional Director Fulton reports an agreement at the Charles S. Braman & Sons Co., in Chicago, providing for an increase in wages of 25 cents per hour; vacations with pay; union shop, and check-off. This company deals with aluminum products. Brother Leon Lazor, representative of the Aluminum Workers, was instrumental in securing this contract, the first between this company and the Aluminum Workers of America.

More Successes

Regional Director Harvey C. Fremming in Kansas City, Mo., reports a successful election last week in the Mechanical Division of the Armour plant at St. Joseph, Mo., with the following results:

Motive Power Division: 18 eligible; 15 votes cast—15 for PWOC.

Cooper Division: 15 eligible; nine votes cast—eight for PWOC. (This group was formerly under the AFL.)

Electricians: 5 eligible; 5 votes cast—5 for PWOC.

James J. Matles, director of organization of the UERMWA, advises that the report of the third quarterly meeting of their General Board showed that they added 41,353 members to their organization; signed 49 new contracts bringing 12,550 workers under union contract for the first time, and won 48 labor board elections covering 15,600 employes. This very splendid progress is an inspiration to the entire CIO.

Regional Director Frank Bender in Baltimore reports winning a 5½-cents per hour increase for men and 7½-cents per hour for the women at the American Sugar Refining Co. covering some 600 employes.

LaFollette Asks Rights For Farm Laborers

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, June 20—The LaFollette Committee this week prescribed a thorough dose of collective bargaining and progressive labor legislation to cure California's long-festering agricultural labor situation.

In the third of a series of reports based on investigations several months ago, the Committee recommended a 12-point program aimed at bringing the Joads of "Grapes of Wrath" fame some of the rights and privileges of American citizenship now held by other sections of the population.

Number one on the list of recommendations was a proposal for legislation to protect the rights of agricultural labor to organize and bargain collectively. Throughout its report, the committee made clear that the passage of laws would not be sufficient to remedy the west coast state's admittedly bad farm labor set-up so long as agricultural laborers cannot meet, through their bargaining representatives, with the big "factory farm owners" who control the state's agriculture.

LACK OF EQUALITY

The present mess — which the committee described minutely in its 250-page report—is in part "attributable to the absence of the effective exercise of political and economic rights by the agricultural labor involved, which has resulted in their having little or no voice in fixing the terms, conditions and techniques of employment.

"That the employes and their associations have a complete monopoly in controlling labor relations is the most important, but often obscured, aspect of California's agricultural labor problem," the report noted.

Collective bargaining would do more than promote peace and avoid strikes—it would give California's thousands of farm laborers a feeling of real participation in our American democracy, the LaFollette report stressed.

MORE DEMOCRACY

"In the midst of a vast international effort to defend democratic institutions," it said "the nation cannot ignore the plight of those within our own borders who are outside the pale of economic democracy. The battle to extend democratic standards of human relationships must be waged here as well as abroad."

While its report primarily concerned California, the committee warned that other agricultural states will, before long, be facing the same type of problem. It pointed out that the breakdown of the "family farm" system—in which the bulk of farmers are small property owners—is national in scale, and is being replaced by a system in which a small number of wealthy "industralized agriculture" bosses own or control huge amounts of land.

The family farmer of the past is becoming the farm laborer of the future, the committee said, and he is becoming dependent on occasional jobs at rates dictated by the highly-organized big farm owners.

High Court Ruling Offers Non-Union Firms Opportunity To Chisel

BY LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

The United States Supreme Court decided, last week, two very important cases involving the application of the overtime provisions of the Wage-Hour Law to salaried employes.

In one case, Overnight Motor Transportation Co. vs. Missel, the Court, by an 8 to 1 decision, interpreted the Wage-Hour Act to apply to salaried employes in regard to overtime work. However, in the second case, Walling vs. A. H. Belo Corp., the Court, by a 5 to 4 decision, not only nullified its first opinion but for all practical purposes eliminated the overtime provisions of the Wage-Hour Act for salaried employes. In the second case the dissenting opinion was written by Justice Reed and concurred in by Justices Black, Douglas and Murphy. These four Justices have consistently maintained their liberal and progressive interpretation of the Constitution and of the Federal social and labor legislation.

THE PROBLEM

The problem involved in these two cases can be stated very simply. For such compensation they work a certain number of hours each week which may vary from week to week. The question arose whether the provision of the Wage-Hour Law that requires employers to pay time and one-half for all hours worked in excess of 40 hours applies to these salaried white collar employes even though they are receiving more than the minimum wage prescribed by the law.

In the Missel case the employe involved received a fixed salary each week. His average work week was 65 hours with a maximum of 80 hours. The employer maintained that he did not owe this employe any overtime pay.

The Supreme Court held that the Wage-Hour Law clearly required compensation for employment in excess of the maximum number of hours at a rate not less than one and one-half times "the regular rate" at which the worker is employed. In this case the Court held that the regular rate was to be computed by dividing the weekly wage by the total number of hours worked in each week. For all hours in excess of the maximum number of hours of 40, time and one-half of such regular rate had to be paid. The employer was ordered to make up the difference to the employe for the entire past period since the enactment of the Wage-Hour Law.

This would appear to be a perfectly simple and just interpretation of the Wage-Hour Law.

HOWEVER . . .

However, in the Belo case, five Justices of the Supreme Court in their majority opinion nullified the Missel case and furnished a pattern to employers to follow if they wish to evade the overtime provisions of the Wage-Hour Law for salaried employes.

In the Belo case the employer was paying his salaried workers $40 a week prior to the effective date of the Wage-Hour Law. Just before the Wage-Hour Law became effective, the employer entered into individual contracts with his employes. The employer computed that most of these salaried employes worked about 54½ hours a week. The contracts then provide for an hourly rate which will permit the employer (a) to work the employes the same number of hours as they had previously, (b) theoretically to pay time and one-half for all work in excess of the 40 hours, and (c) to avoid paying any extra compensation as a result of the Wage-Hour Law. The contract showed that no change was contemplated by specifically providing that the employe would not receive less than $40 in any one week.

The Wage-Hour Division advised the employer that the individual contract could not be fairly interpreted as actually fixing an hourly rate because of the weekly guarantee. In other words, the Wage-Hour Division held that the same rule that the Supreme Court applied in the Missel case should actually be applied in the Belo case.

This could be done by ascertaining the employe's regular rate of pay by dividing the weekly wage of $40 by the number of hours that the employe worked each week. The employer would be obligated to pay time and one-half of this regular rate of pay for all hours worked in excess of the maximum number of hours provided for under the Wage-Hour Law.

REGULAR RATES

The majority of the Court upheld the validity of the individual contracts and ruled that the hourly rate set forth in the contract was the regular rate of pay. Since the employer had paid time and one-half of such hourly rate for all hours worked in excess of the statutory maximum, the Court held that the employer did not owe the employes any additional compensation.

The majority opinion stressed the importance of the fact that the contract had been entered into between the employer and the individual employes on a bona fide basis that the arrangement between the employer and the employe had proven mutually satisfactory.

"By such a verbal device, astute management may avoid many of the disadvantages of ordinary overtime, chief of which is a definite increase in the cost of labor as soon as the hours worked exceed the statutory workweek. If the intention of Congress is to require at least time and a half for overtime work beyond a fixed maximum number of hours . . . that intention is frustrated by today's holding."

The majority opinion should serve to persuade salaried employes that their only protection is to join a strong and powerful union of their own to which employers will not even dare submit such phony contracts.

Navy Names Friend Of Labor

Washington, June 20.—Edwin Lahey of the Chicago Daily News, known as one of the country's best labor reporters and columnists, has been appointed by Asst. Secretary of the Navy Ralph Bard to help develop closer relations between labor and the Navy.

As special assistant to Bard, Lahey will be in a position to bring labor's viewpoint directly to high officials of the department. Many of the misunderstandings which have arisen in past years between the Navy and the unions stemmed from a lack of knowledge about the aims and aspirations of American workers and their unions, it is felt.

Lahey has been on the staff of the Chicago Daily News for several years. His honest, hard-hitting labor stories have received wide attention.

Britain Hails New Council

By GARRY ALLIGHAN

LONDON, June 20—(ALN)—Creation of the Combined Production and Resources Board, headed by Donald Nelson, chief of the U. S. War Production Board, and Oliver Lyttelton, Britain's Minister of Production, has been welcomed here by trade unionists. They hope in particular that the new Board will facilitate greater interchange of technical information between the two countries.

Although British factories have been geared to war production longer than American factories, they are technically behind the latter in many respects.

In this connection, great interest has been aroused in trade unions by an article by Eldridge Haynes, editor of the American magazine Modern Industry, which recently appeared in the London Daily Telegraph. Mr. Haynes, who has made an extensive tour of British war plants, points out that, although British industry has several lessons to teach America, notably in regard to full mobilization of manpower and employment of women, nevertheless it is seriously behind American industry in certain respects.

FEW CONVEYORS

While observing that the actual manufacture of materials is performed as efficiently in Britain as in America, Haynes singles out for criticism the slow rate at which materials are moved through British plants.

"I am sure that there must be more than one conveyor in England," he writes, "but in all the plants I visited I found only one, and this one handled materials less than 10 per cent of the way through the plant. I did not see a single electric industrial truck, tractor or trailer system of materials-handling. More man-hours are being invested in moving materials through the plant than necessary, man-hours which could be devoted to skilled operations."

British workers, particularly the shop stewards, are concerned over this backwardness, and hope that means may quickly be found to remedy it.

Railwaymen Annoy Nazis In USSR

KUIBYSHEV, June 20—(ALN)—Many Soviet railway workers on lines in territory now held by the invaders have joined guerrilla bands and are tearing up the track over which once ran Russian trains.

A year ago Peter Mozgunov, a Red Army sapper during the Civil War of 1919-21, was driving a locomotive on an important run near the White Russian frontier. He was an officer in his local of the powerful, 1,500,000-strong Railwaymens' Union.

BEHIND THE LINES

When the Germans invaded the Soviet Union and the Red Army was driven back toward Moscow and Leningrad, Mozgunov was assigned the job of blowing up his railway line between two large stations. Accompanied by another engineer, Ivan Kuznetsov, and two mechanics named Volkov and Parzhikov, he remained in Nazi-conquered territory.

After blowing up the track, the four railwaymen found themselves cut off from Soviet lines. They immediately organized a partisan unit which began tearing up rails and destroying bridges over a stretch of track which was more familiar to them than it was to the German soldiers guarding it.

Within a month Mozgunov's unit had become famous in the district. It had grown to a detachment of more than a hundred fighters whose raids, directed by Mozgunov, had much to do with the success of the Russian mid-winter offensive. Mozgunov has calculated that during the winter the Nazis were obliged to build two entirely new railroads, from the roadbed up, in the area under his immediate care.

English Farm Workers Take Crop Pledge

London, June 20—(ALN)—At a giant Food Production rally held recently under the auspices of the National Union of Agricultural Workers at Maidstone, farm workers of Kent pledged to "increase production for victory in 1942."

Increased domestic food production was necessary, it was stressed, in order to save shipping space for the munitions from America needed for a second front in Europe.

E. P. Gooch, president of the NUAW, stated that one hundred per cent union organization was necessary in order to achieve maximum production.

The meeting sent greetings to the workers of the Soviet Union, particularly to "our brothers and sisters on the Soviet farms." Strengthening of the bonds between the Soviet and British workers, both now and after the war, was urged.

Australian Labor Gets CIO Greeting

WASHINGTON, June 20—Greetings from CIO were sent by shortwave and cable to the Australian labor movement, meeting this week in a national conference centered on war and the threat of invasion by the Japanese.

The greetings came from CIO President Philip Murray, who made a shortwave radio speech, and James B. Carey, over whose signature an article was cabled to the Australian press.

"On behalf of five million workers organized in the CIO, I greet the brave people of Australia, now facing the common enemy in the imminent presence of invasion," Murray said.

"It is a great satisfaction to the members of the CIO, who are working long hours on the victory production lines, to know that the war weapons we make are smashing the enemy as he was smashed at Midway and in the Coral Sea. We get a particular thrill when we read of the work our Flying Fortresses, our ships and our tanks do, because we make them."

Murray reaffirmed CIO's pledge to work all-out for speedy victory over the Berlin-Tokyo-Rome Axis, pointing out that CIO members had already made big contributions in laying aside the right to strike and in taking other measures to step up war production.

CAREY ARTICLE

Carey's article stressed the unity of all the nations fighting the Axis, saying that "we are not safe in our homes until the Axis is wholly destroyed, until its armies are annihilated and its fascist rulers brought to justice. The people of Australia are as close to us as our own people. We stand with them, as we stand with the heroic people of Britain, of the Soviet Union, of China and all the United Nations."

Carey also pointed out that the CIO has made many contributions to increasing production, through the Murray Industry Council plan and the detailed production blueprints put out by many CIO affiliates.

Mexican Labor Offers Unity, Victory Plans

By CESAR ORTIZ

MEXICO CITY, June 20—(ALN)—Meeting here a few days ago, the National Committee of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, Mexico's most powerful labor group, proposed the formation of a National Labor Council which would include representatives of all Mexican labor organizations, the several rival federations as well as unaffiliated unions.

The National Council would speak for organized labor on a tripartite labor-management-government committee directing Mexican production.

A few days after war was declared the CTM proposed an all-embracing labor federation to be made up of all unions in the country. This was not accepted by several groups which have bitterly opposed the CTM in the past.

However, officials representing all branches of Mexican labor are now meeting with the Minister of Labor, and it is expected by observers that the result of these conferences will be agreement on all fundamental points with the CTM.

PROPOSALS

Meanwhile, the CTM's National Committee proposed:

An immediate end to jurisdictional disputes;

United action to maintain labor's gains as the best assurance of victory;

Support for all measures designed to win the war, particularly suppression of the Fifth Column.

In addition to these proposals, the CTM has asked the government for a joint labor-government census of all Mexican industries to determine what they can contribute to the war effort and ensure that no corporation uses the war as an excuse for excess profits.

Ask More Aid To Russia

New York, June 20—This week marks the first anniversary of Hitler's attack on the Soviet Union and the ninth month of American aid to the Russian victims of his attack, Russian War Relief, Inc., points out in a statement released here.

The date also marks further progress in Russian War Relief's drive for $6,000,000 to be raised this summer. This drive was officially backed by CIO President Murray, who is a director of the organization and who has called on all CIO affiliates to help.

During the first nine months, Russian War Relief has sent over $1,128,000 worth of supplies to the USSR, including such items as sulfanilimide, quinine, iodine, X-ray equipment, hospital tents and surgical instruments. The first shipment included enough surgical supplies to equip 10 operating rooms. It has also sent evaporated milk, chocolate, clothing and other materials.

Industrial, labor and civic groups are represented on the Board of Directors. Contributions can be sent by CIO members through the CIO Allied War Relief Committee, with headquarters at 1407 L St. N.W., Washington, D. C.

Czech Victims of Hitler Were Union Coal Miners

New York, June 20—Hitler's Nazis have again struck at the men who once made up Europe's big labor movement.

The men of Lidice—the Czechoslovakian village wiped out by the Gestapo in bloody vengeance for the death of Reinhard Heydrich, Nazi terror chief— were almost all coal miners. And almost all of them had been staunch union members until the Nazis invaded their country and wiped out its democratic labor organizations.

That hitherto unknown fact was brought to light this week in a radio address by Jan Masaryk, vice-premier and foreign minister of the Czech government in exile. He is a son of the first president of Czechoslovakia.

"Lidice is quite close to the summer home of my late father, where we used to ride horseback through the village. Father often stopped to talk with the hard-working clean-cut Czech laborers.

"Besides miners, there are a few small farmers who had to work very hard to make a decent living for themselves. All the men who have been murdered were organized in trade unions before Hitler came. They were wide awake, intelligent folk, and so were the women."

Following the death of Heydrich, Gestapo agents raided the town of 1,200 population. All the men were shot, and the women and children were carried away.

Steel Union Warns of Cut In Output, Offers New Plan

Farm, Labor Groups Urge Funds for FSA

WASHINGTON, June 27—If Congressional tories have their way and cripple the Farm Security Administration, the nation's entire "food for victory" program will be endangered.

That was the message sent this week to Pres. Roosevelt by leaders of farm, labor and church groups. They urged the Chief Executive to take the issue, now deadlocked in the House and Senate, directly to the people for support.

The appeal was signed by Pres. J. G. Patton of the Natl. Farmers Union; CIO Pres. Philip Murray; AFL Pres. William Green; J. G. Luhrsen of the Railway Labor Executives Assn.; Murray Lincoln of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation; Rt. Rev. Msgr. L. G. Ligutti of the Natl. Catholic Rural Life Conference, and Benson Landis of the Federal Council of Churches.

LABOR'S FOES, TOO

Attacks on the FSA have come from the same groups in Congress that have always fought labor tooth and nail, and they are supported by the big farm owners who have been crushing the small, independent farmers.

The letter charged that the House had been misled by "certain corporate and speculative farm interests" when it rejected an FSA bill previously passed by the Senate. The Senate bill provided approximately $96,000,000 more for the agency than the House bill, and permitted the sale of government-owned grain for feed at 85 per cent of the corn parity price.

Pres. Roosevelt was reminded he had requested Congress "to do its part towards insuring adequate supplies of essential foods for the war effort of our nation and of our Allies."

OFFERS INCENTIVE

It was recalled that the President's message was based on the idea that encouragement of small farmers would help yield a far greater crop. FSA loans help give these hundreds of thousands of low-income farmers an opportunity to develop their under-employed lands and to help the victory program.

"We have only hinted at the importance of the Farm Security operations in relation to corporate and large-scale commercial farming," the letter said. "The future of agriculture in our nation is involved. It is a question of deep concern to labor and to all elements in our population dedicated to the democratic way of living."

Hitler, Himmler Blubber As Heydrich Heads For H—

Washington, June 27—Picture, if you can, a United States where the chief executive and the Attorney General fall all over themselves in lavishing praise on a man who is a fink de luxe, a blood butcher and one of the most hated persons in the country.

Then you'll get an idea of what fascism is like. For that's exactly what happened last week in Nazi Germany.

Both Hitler and Himmler, the chief of the Gestapo, could scarcely find words to express their grief at the death of Reinhard Heydrich, known unaffectionately to the German people as "The Hangman."

Said Gestapoman Himmler: "His was a character of rare purity with an intelligence of penerating greatness and clarity . . . He was filled with an incorruptible sense of justice. Truthful and decent people could always rely on his chivalrous sentiment and humane understanding. During months as a deputy Reich Protector he displayed his generous qualities extensively."

CIO Members Set Record: 2,793 Rivets

A gang of Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers members at Robins Drydock drove 2,793 three-quarter-inch snap rivets in 7¾ hours.

A second gang drove 2,730 rivets in the same working day. Both gangs included two heater boys and two passers.

Murray Gives WPB Methods to End Bottlenecks

(See Story on Page Three)

WASHINGTON, June 27—CIO President Philip Murray today charged that three major bottlenecks in steel production are seriously delaying the tank and shipbuilding program, and that steel scrap shortages may cause a drop in production to as low as 80 per cent of the industry's capacity this winter.

Murray, also president of the United Steelworkers of America, laid a detailed study of the situation before the War Production Board, emphasizing three main points:

1. Failure of big steel corporations to use 100 per cent of its existing facilities, and to cooperate with partly-idle smaller firms.

2. Failure to go "all-out" in the conversion of strip mills to the rolling of steel plates.

3. Failure of the entire steel industry to accumulate adequate supplies of scrap steel—with the result that plants may be 20 per cent idle next winter.

Seeking immediate elimination of these bottlenecks, Murray asked the WPB to bring USA-CIO leaders and representatives of the industry together for an immediate conference.

Treasury Ups Union Bond Limit to $100,000

WASHINGTON, June 27—Responding to numerous requests by labor unions and other organizations, the Treasury Department has announced that after July 1 the limit for annual purchase of War Savings Bonds by organizations will be doubled to $100,000.

Hitherto, a labor organization was permitted to buy no more than $50,000 worth of Series F or Series G Bonds, or of both together in combination, in any calendar year.

In the last half of 1942 any labor union may purchase up to the $100,000 limit. The top figure includes purchases made in the first half of 1942. This means that organizations which already have bought $50,000 worth of War Bonds may now buy another $50,000 worth.

The doubling of the limits on Treasury Series F and G Bonds was described by leading labor officials as "very welcome to labor organizations."

SOUGHT BY UNIONS

There is no safer place for the funds in union treasuries than in Government securities, it was pointed out. Beyond the safety feature of this investment is its patriotic aspect. Many labor organizations, international, national and local which have asked for an increase in the $50,000 limit, are expected to celebrate July Fourth by taking advantage of the new ruling.

While no complete figures are available, a majority of the nation's international unions and hundreds of the 60,000 local unions with substantial treasuries have invested up to the previous $50,000 yearly limit.

The new annual limit of $100,000 is based on the cost price of the bonds, not on their maturity value.

Intended primarily for organizations, institutions and larger investors, the Series F and G Bonds have been purchased widely by labor organizations, and by welfare subsidiaries of the labor unions.

Guild Parley Features Unity for War

DENVER, Colo., June 27—A streamlined convention run by streamlined committees was held here last week by the American Newspaper Guild as 125 newspaper workers from all sections of the country gathered here for the union's first war-time convention.

Unity was the keynote of the proceedings as was evidenced in the speeches and the order of business.

Unity around the basic issues of the war effort was forthcoming on the first day when a resolution previously adopted by the New York delegation was adopted by the convention as its own pledge of support behind the Murray-Eubanks-Rodgers administration on all efforts to extend the union's win-the-war policies.

GUILD BEHIND MURRAY

Complete support of President Murray of the CIO was a foregone conclusion when thunderous applause greeted the speeches of Guild President Milton Murray and CIO Vice-President Reid Robinson.

The highlight of Robinson's address was a blistering attack on John L. Lewis, whom he termed "my former friend" and whom he accused as "as good a friend of Hitler as perhaps Martin Dies, or some of those other reactionaries."

Other addresses were delivered to the convention by CIO Sec. James B. Carey; Monroe Sweetland, director of the CIO American & Allied War Relief Committee; Col. A. Robert Ginsburgh of the War Dept.; and Barney Mullady, information director of the U.S. Wage-Hour Division.

Carey, attacking divisionist and dictatorial practices of John L. Lewis, charged that "there is no difference between the thinking of Adolf Hitler and the thinking of John L. Lewis."

STOKES GETS PRIZE

One of the highlights of the early part of the convention was the granting of the Heywood Broun Memorial Award of $250 to Dillard Stokes of the Washington Post for a series of articles which contributed to the conviction of George Sylvester Viereck, Nazi agent in this country, and George Hill, secretary to Rep. Hamilton Fish of New York.

The Guild's award committee praised Stokes for piecing together "essential points of information which exposed a ring of fascist agents who had reached into the very halls of Congress to exploit their foreign propaganda." In presenting the award, ANG Pres. Milton Murray noted that the Stokes series had revealed that the rantings of reactionary Rep. Clare Hoffman of Michigan "were being used as propaganda to weaken American unity."

Executive Vice-Pres. Sam Eubanks reported to the convention that the number of Guild locals, members and contracts had increased during the year, and Sec.-Treas. William Rodgers indicated a strengthened financial position for the international union,

Celebrate 4th With Bonds, Barbers Urge

New York, June 27—The nation's barbers were urged this week to celebrate the Fourth of July by buying more War Bonds and Stamps as a "symbol of our faith and determination that America must win the war."

The National Organizing Committee of Barbers and Beauty Culturists of America pointed out that the Fourth of July is "the genuine expression of our democratic independence."

National Unity Note:

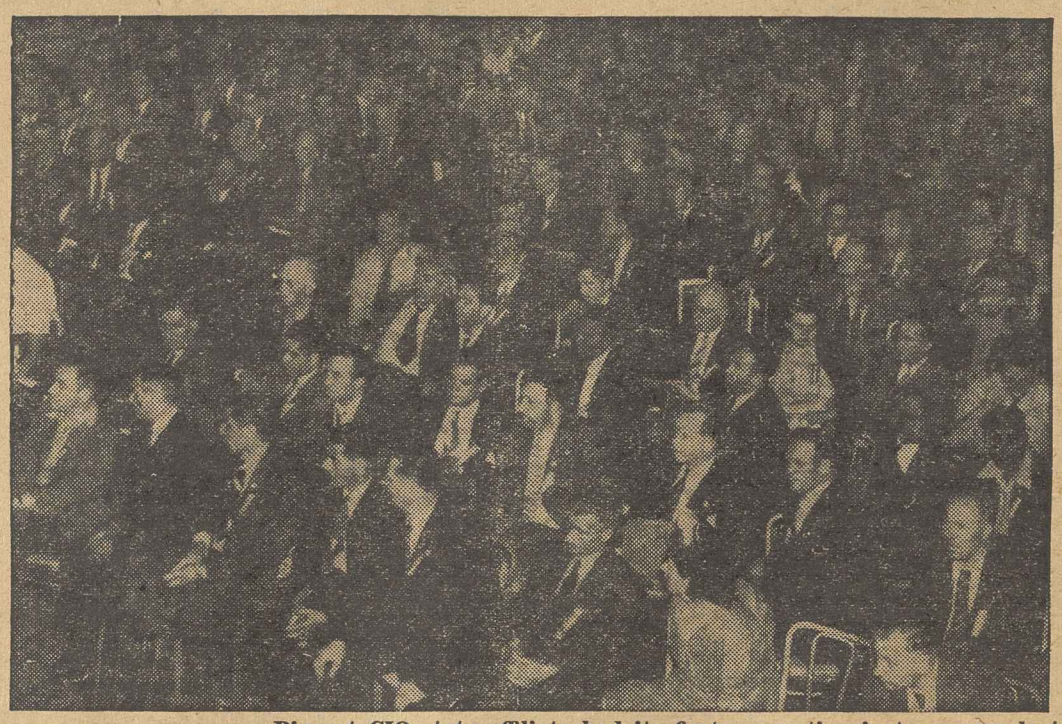
Unionists' Blood Saves Personnel Man's Life

Washington, June 27—Two CIO members helped save the life of a personnel manager this week.

The two were President Charles Goff and Secretary Robert Davidson of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union Local at the Philadelphia plant of the Electric Storage Battery Co. The personnel manager, of the same firm, was L. W. Mosely.

Mosely was near death from internal bleeding when the two CIO members, who were with him here for a War Labor Board hearing, remembered that they had the same type blood as his. They had learned about this through a blood typing program of the Union for Mutual Aid at their plant several years ago.

As a result of transfusions from the CIO members and from several other people, Mosely this week was reported as "recovering" at Emergency Hospital.



DELEGATES: Biggest CIO state affiliate had its first convention in two years last week, when 750 delegates met in Syracuse, N. Y., at sessions of the New York State Industrial Union Council.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 27—In an atmosphere of harmony that contrasted markedly with its last session two years ago, the New York State Industrial Union Council met here last week and pledged full support for the war effort, and the policy and programs of the CIO.

Some 750 delegates, representing a million workers in the Empire State, voiced their unanimous praise for Pres. Philip Murray and their equally united condemnation of the disruptive policies being pursued by John L. Lewis and other high officials of the United Mine Workers of America.

PRAISE ROOSEVELT

In another major resolution the convention adopted without a dissenting vote an expression of confidence in President Roosevelt. The statement pledged full support "for our gallant allies" whose resistance and courage "have earned the undying gratitude and admiration of all the world." It hailed the close relations being forged among the U.S., England and Russia, and called for the opening of a second front against Hitler in 1942.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization and representative at the convention for Pres. Philip Murray, took the chair after the gavel had been handed to him by Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers, who has served as administrator of the council for the past two years.

The CIO official hailed the obvious unity of the convention and lauded the determination of labor everywhere to prosecute the war as efficiently as possible.

HITLER'S GAME

Warning that all who seek to split the common people of the world are playing Hitler's game, Haywood pointed out that "a defeat on any front is our defeat, and we have to pool all our United Nations and their peoples."

He pointed out that you can favor such a program "without being called a Communist" and spoke derisively of the recent action of the mine union executive board seeking to smear President Murray as a Communist because of his support of the war.

"We haven't any room for that stuff, my friends," Haywood said in referring to the disruptive actions of some UMW officials. "We are trade unionists first, and we are for this war and all it stands for."

In another section of his speech the CIO official criticized new efforts by AFL Pres. William Green and Dan Tobin, AFL teamsters head, to split the CIO and force the abandonment of long-held gains by the industrial union movement.

A resolution passed later in the session praised Haywood's "invaluable assistance" to the state council in helping it to strengthen its unity and to "develop the enthusiastic and determined support of the war as formulated in this convention."

Other speakers included John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils, and Harry Bridges, CIO longshoremens union president, who described the west coast progress of the CIO victory program. Brophy stressed the need for developing the Murray Industry Council Plan both as a war-time and peace-time instrument. He urged the defeat of reactionary, anti-war and anti-labor congressmen at the coming elections.

DEMAND LIBERAL

The political situation in the Empire State was a matter of major concern to the convention, and it adopted a resolution sharply critical of Thomas Dewey and Atty.-Gen. J. J. Bennett, Republican and Democrat gubernatorial aspirants. The resolution urged the American Labor Party—to which many CIO unions are affiliated—to place a third candidate in the field if the major parties should nominate Dewey and Bennett.

Gov. Herbert Lehman, who is retiring from office, received prolonged cheers when he urged both major parties to nominate "true liberals"—men who had demonstrated "by their character and their acts that they are against isolationism, against compromise, and against any yielding to reaction."

Gustave Strebel, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, was re-elected president of the council, and Harold J. Garno of the United Automobile Workers named secretary-treasurer. An executive board of 22 members, representing each affiliated union, was chosen. Voting strength will be dependent on the size of the affiliate.

Resolutions called for joint CIO-AFL unity, but opposed proposals for a complete merger of the two organizations; Presidential overruling of the Bridges deportation order; backed President Roosevelt's 7-point war economy program; urged closer relations among the unions of this country, England and the USSR; called for cooperation between farm and labor organizations; and advocated a continued fight against racial discrimination.

Hosiery Hits Lewis Disruption

PHILADELPHIA, June 27—President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, was accused of hampering the war effort and was called "a grave danger to the security of our nation and to the future of the workers in the entire world" by the 31st convention of the CIO American Federation of Hosiery Workers, meeting here this week.

The organization's first war-time convention declared that Lewis has hampered the victory effort by "failure to extend positive support to the nation and our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and also by a studied campaign of disruption and disunity, both within and outside the labor movement."

URGE RATIONING

The delegates heard Emil Rieve, a member of the War Labor Board and president of the CIO Textile Workers Union, urge rationing of all commodities and immediate fixing of prices on all goods and services. The Federation is a TWU affiliate.

Rieve declared the present "piece-meal" controls would not work and hence high income groups would be able to outbid low income groups for unrationed commodities.

Rieve recommended that while the government should freeze prices, some flexibility should be allowed to change those that are manifestly too high or too low.

Other convention developments were:

The parley asked $60 a month grants for all needy aged.

RAP PEGLER

Westbrook Pegler, Scripps-Howard columnist, was condemned for his attacks on labor and was charged with "serving the purposes of the Fascist enemies of American democracy by attempts to mislead the American public as to the character of the labor movement."

The convention urged that workers unemployed because of priorities or conversion should be paid two-thirds of their regular earnings, but in no case less than $24 a week in unemployment benefits.

The convention also urged the membership to buy war bonds to the limit of their ability; opposed the sales tax; and pledged complete support to the United Nations so that the "fullest resources of the Allies may be delivered to the right place at the right time for striking the most telling blows for victory."

Steel Union Offers Plan To Avert 20% Output Cut

BROUGHT VICTORY: Scenes like this were duplicated in scores of steel towns as the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, piled up a 13-1 lead among 120,000 employes of U. S. Steel. Here, Raymond Sarocco directs a group of organizers in pre-election campaigning at S. Chicago, Ill.

House Tax Bill Short Of Need

WASHINGTON, June 27 — The House Ways and Means Committee this week completed a tax bill—short some 3.5 billion dollars of the Treasury's request for 8.7 billions in extra tax revenue to help pay for victory.

No sales tax is contained in the bill, thanks to organized labor's struggle against it stretching over the past several months. The danger of a sales tax is still acute, however, because of the 3.5 billion dollar deficit that must be made up.

EASY ON WEALTHY

That deficit is entirely due to the Ways and Means Committee's refusal to tax big incomes and excess war profits at the rate the Treasury and the CIO wanted. In almost every case where the wealthy and the big corporations were concerned, the committee went light, while taxing virtually every cent the Treasury asked on low incomes. Here are some examples:

1. The committee refused to compel husbands and wives to file joint income tax returns—a device that lets wealthy families escape taxes to a loss of $420,000,000 a year.

2. The committee refused to do anything about tax-exempt state and local securities — a loophole that costs the country $275,000,000 a year.

3. The committee cut $470,000,000 out of the income taxes originally asked by the Treasury—mostly to the benefit of the high income groups.

4. The committee voted to kick-back excess war profits taxes to the big corporations, after the war

PRES. MURRAY

Murray Sends Report To WPB

WASHINGTON, June 27 — Three principal bottlenecks in steel production are seriously delaying the tank and shipbuilding program, with the added possibility that steel scrap shortages may drop production as low as 80 per cent of capacity, Philip Murray, president of the CIO and of the United Steelworkers of America, announced here.

Murray's statement was made in a detailed study presented to the War Production Board, and was followed up in the same study by a practical plan for overcoming the difficulties.

SERIOUS LOSSES

President Murray's study showed, in graphic form, that all plants now working on heat-treating and fabricating armor plate would have to be closed 10 days of each month for a year to do as much damage to the tank program as is now being done by failure of one giant steel corporation to utilize fully its existing facilities and those of small firms through sub-contracting.

Murray also showed that all plants now rolling steel plates would have to shut down seven days a month for the duration of the war to do as much harm to shipbuilding as is now done by failure of several giant firms to convert strip mills to steel plates, and to allow full use of small firms through sub-contracting.

The entire steel industry, he added, would have to shut down a whole month to begin to equal the damage to the whole war production program that will accrue due to failure to accumulate ade-

Bosses Join In WLB Vote For Security

WASHINGTON, June 27 — Cracking a previous united front of employers, two of their representatives on the National War Labor Board last week joined for the first time with public and labor representatives to recommend a union security clause.

The United Auto Workers Union at the Ryan Aeronautical Co. of San Diego, Cal., was the winner in the precedent-shattering case.

The decision was 10 to 2, with two of the four employer representatives dissenting. Those concurring in the decision were Roger D. Lapham and Richard R. Duepre, who agreed that all members of the union in good standing 15 days from June 18, when the decision was rendered, or who subsequently become members, must remain members in good standing during the life of the contract as a condition of employment.

WAGES LIFTED

The Board was unanimous in ordering the company to bring its wages into line with the rest of the Southern California aircraft industry.

The company must make retroactive to Oct. 15, 1941, a general 10 cents an hour increase, and also to the first pay period of July, 1941, a basic hiring rate of 60 cents an hour, to be increased 5 cents an hour each four weeks until it reaches 75 cents.

Unions Hit Baseball's 'Jim Crow'

WASHINGTON, June 27 — Thousands of CIO members in three of the best baseball cities of the nation this week demanded that the major leagues end their Jim Crow policies of refusing to employ Negro players.

The giant Ford Local of the United Auto Workers Union in Detroit, with the New York City CIO Council and a large Washington local of the United Federal Workers Union, all asked major league club owners to extend national unity to the playing fields.

The Ford resolution, which spoke for 80,000 white and Negro workers, asked "in the interests of true traditions of American fair play and democracy in keeping with our objectives in the present war" that baseball Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis use his powers to lift the ban against Negro players.

The resolution pointed out that such leading baseball players as Joe DiMaggio, Bob Feller, Dizzy Dean and others have contended that such Negro stars as "Satchell" Paige, Josh Gibson and others are capable of playing major league ball.

Post-War Studies

New York, June 27—A bulletin listing information about groups working in the field of post-war reconstruction and organization for peace was issued this week by the Commission to Study the Organization of Peace.

Dayton Unions Back CIO Plan For War Rally

Dayton, O., June 27—The entire CIO movement in this important war-production area is supporting the action of the national CIO Executive Board in calling for an all-labor "win the war" national conference.

Presidents and all executive board members of auto workers' locals, electrical workers' locals, rubber workers, government workers and other local unions met jointly unanimously to adopt a resolution urging that AFL, CIO and other unions hold such a victory meeting on a nation-wide scale.

The resolution asked that "the Labor Victory Committee, consisting as it does of three representatives of CIO, including President Murray, and three representatives of AFL, including President Green, call this Labor Win-the-War Conference."

Ask Help for New CIO Union

Washington, June 27—Officers of CIO international unions were urged today by Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood to extend their full cooperation to CIO's newest affiliate, the United Transport Service Employes of America.

The organization's jurisdiction includes red caps, ushers, attendants and miscellaneous railroad service employes.

Explaining the "broad expanse of their organization," Haywood called upon international unions to give the new affiliate "practical help and assistance."

Tax Problem Aired on CIO Broadcast

New York, June 27—CIO's latest "Labor for Victory" radio show hit a subject very near and dear to all of us—the tax bill. It went on the air Saturday, June 20, at 10:15 p.m. Eastern Wartime, over the NBC Red Network, and was part of CIO's regular fortnightly broadcast.

The show was a music-plus-drama presentation; music and songs by Marc Blitzstein, script by Robert Richards and Peter Lyon, and direction by William Sweets of NBC.

Main stress was on the sales tax, which was described in the dialogue and in the songs as the worst possible threat to workers' living standards and consequently to war production.

The show also got over the point that workers and other low-income groups are already paying a big chunk of their earnings in taxes, seen and unseen, that take away up to 26 per cent of their incomes.

JULY 4TH NEXT

The commentary, done by CIO's news commentator, Len De Caux, wound up the show by presenting CIO's program for taxes based on ability to pay, taking the billions needed for victory from those who have the dough and leaving the workers' food budget alone.

CIO's next "Labor for Victory" is scheduled for July 4, and will be a patriotic dramatization of what unions are, what they do for the workers, and what they are doing now for victory. All National Broadcasting Company Red Network stations have the program—10:15 p.m. Eastern Wartime.

Steel Bottleneck

Labor again comes to the rescue in a war production emergency.

National attention has been called to the serious bottleneck in steel which delays the production of ships, tanks and most of the other weapons of war.

But the CIO United Steelworkers of America is the first group to come forward with detailed and practical proposals to uncork this bottleneck.

Pres. Philip Murray reports, on the basis of a USA-CIO study, that steel production is being held up by a shortage of armor plate for tanks, a shortage of steel plates for ships, and an inadequate stockpile of iron and steel scrap.

The failure to accumulate enough scrap may cause a drop of steel production to 80% of capacity this winter, Murray warns. Yet there are many sources of scrap that have not yet been tapped.

The proposals of the USA-CIO call for pooling of existing facilities; for conversion of strip mills to steel plates; for a program of sub-contracting to small firms which are not getting the work they could do; and for a special government agency to accumulate the scrap iron and steel we must have to insure capacity steel production.

As a first step to put this program into effect, Murray asks the War Production Board to call a conference of representatives of small and large steel companies and the United Steelworkers.

In general, the alarming bottleneck in steel is due to the monopolistic selfishness of large steel corporations which seek to freeze out small business; to failure to heed labor's suggestions; and to the lack of industry-wide planning which the CIO has long demanded.

To eliminate this bottleneck to war production, there must be "a much greater participation of small business and organized labor in the output of armaments," Murray declares.

Food for Victory

The food supplies we need to win this war depend upon the action taken by Congress on President Roosevelt's request for an adequate appropriation for the Farm Security Administration, and for government authorization to sell some of its wheat and corn for feeding purposes at 85% of the corn parity price.

The Senate has approved a somewhat reduced appropriation for the FSA, but the House, without a record vote, has insisted on cutting the FSA appropriation to less than half of what the administration asked. Similarly, the House has rejected the grain feeding formula which the Senate accepted.

Hundreds of thousands of family-type and small working farmers will fail to get the facilities they need for all-out production of essential foods, if the House action prevails.

These low-income families, if given the help they need from FSA, could increase food production enough to supply an army of 2,400,000 men with their needs in milk, cheese and eggs for an entire year, and their needs in potatoes, pork products and butter for six months, it is estimated.

The opposition to both administration proposals comes chiefly from big business farm interests committed to the idea of creating scarcity to make high prices, and little concerned about the interests of the low-income working farmers, whom they would just as soon see driven from their farms to increase the labor supply. The real dirt farmers, who need the help FSA can give, support the administration program.

The urgency of this situation is stressed in the recent appeal to President Roosevelt, on behalf of the administration proposals, signed by Pres. James G. Patton of the National Farmers Union, Secretary Murray Lincoln of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, Pres. Wm. Green of the AFL, Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO, Secretary J. G. Luhrsen of the Railway Labor Executives Association, and religious leaders.

The significance of this joint action goes beyond even the important issue immediately involved. It represents a real united front of labor and working farmers and should lead to ever closer and more fruitful cooperation between these great groups in the spirit of national unity to win the war.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE American people's will-power for victory is being tested a hundred ways each day. And the tests are not all on the field of battle by any means.

For example, the steel industry has become a bottleneck in war production. If we take this lying down, if we just complain and pass the buck, we haven't the will to win.

But that isn't the steelworkers' reaction. Through their union, they have gotten on the job at once, studied every cause of production and hold-ups and how to remedy them. And Pres. Philip Murray has just offered to the government a series of practical suggestions for eliminating the steel bottlenecks.

What's more, if something's not done pretty quickly to get the steel we need, the CIO steelworkers will demand to know the reason why. They have the will to win.

Here's another test. Hitler would like to see American farmers and workers trying to cut each other's throats, squabbling and backbiting, and not knowing how to pull together.

He won't like to hear about the joint action just taken by the CIO, the AFL, railway labor, the National Farmers Union and other farm leaders. All these groups are working closely together to insure the food supplies necessary for victory, through adequate appropriations for the Farm Security Administration and by other means.

This history-making united action by organized labor and organized farmers is already having its effect in Congress. It should lead to further joint political activity for progressive and win-the-war purposes.

It's a good sign that American farmers and workers won't let disunity make them a doormat for Hitler and the Japs. They have the will to win.

Or take the question of labor unity. The attempts of John L. Lewis to disrupt and divide the CIO are a blow to united labor effort to win the war. So too are the maneuvers of the Hutcheson crowd in the AFL to use the issue of "organic unity" to disturb existing friendly relations between CIO and AFL and to promote friction rather than real unity.

But the organized workers are not going to fall into this trap. Every CIO meeting reveals a greater unity than ever before behind Murray's win-the-war leadership and a militant repudiation of all disrupters and defeatists.

The CIO has voted for closer and friendlier relations with the AFL and for more and more united action. And throughout the country, the rank and file of AFL and CIO are continuing and expanding their cooperation for all war purposes. The organized workers have the will to win.

Attorney General Biddle has struck a blow for national disunity by his notorious order for the deportation of Harry Bridges. It has been accompanied by attempts to purge or terrorize liberal and anti-fascist government employes.

All pro-fascist elements here and abroad are chortling over these developments, hoping that witch-hunts and red-baiting may divide America's anti-Hitler front and create dissension between the United States and its allies.

But they may be disappointed to know that even the business-controlled daily press hasn't swallowed this Hitler bait. Though most of the papers used to make Bridges-baiting a regular routine, the James S. Twohey press analysis now reports that as much as 38% of the daily press disapproved Biddle's action as causing disunity and emphasized Bridges' important help in the war effort.

And every day more unions and other citizens' groups are joining in the chorus of condemnation. For all patriotic Americans want anti-Axis unity. They have the will to win.

Hitler's little helper, Westbrook Pegler, has been doing his best to divide the American people's war unity by his constant labor-baiting.

But the workers have been saying nuts to him in one Labor Board election after another, by casting their ballots for the unions he denounces.

The steelworkers employed by U. S. Steel, for instance, made their answer conclusive enough. Their vote was 111,046 for the United Steelworkers of America to only 8,777 against. They have the will to win.

Murray Flays Lewis Dictatorship

Unions Voice Support For Bridges

WASHINGTON, June 27 — Support for Harry Bridges in his fight to stay in this country in order to serve the war effort continued to pour in this week from unions and liberal organizations throughout the country.

From Butte, Mont., Local 1 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers (founding local of the union, with more than 6,500 members) a resolution pointed out: "We, the hard rock miners in the copper mines of Butte are gravely concerned over the deportation order . . . The fifth columnists and defeatists are rejoicing.'

Five locals of the United Mine Workers of America have passed resolutions condemning Biddle and describing his order as "a foul blow to national unity and America's war effort."

LATIN AMERICA

From Latin America many messages have come to Biddle and to President Roosevelt urging rescinding of the deportation order, the Council for Pan-American Democracy revealed. These messages were from labor and anti-Fascist leaders and organizations in the Argentine, in Chile, in Puerto Rico, in Mexico, Colombia, Panama, Venezuela, Ecuador, Uruguay and Cuba. Mexico's protest came from Lombardo Toledano, head of the Latin-American Confederation of Workers.

From Washington, the Natl. Federation for Constitutional Liberties wrote to President Roosevelt urging him to rescind the order "in the interests of the American people and of victory over the Axis."

And in Portsmouth, Ohio, Local 117 of the United Shoe Workers adopted a resolution saying that it was "deeply impressed by the reports in the press of the fine patriotic service Mr. Bridges is giving our country, and we, therefore, consider Mr. Biddle's action unpatriotic, un-American and unwarranted."

Speakers Honor Work Of Brandeis

New York, June 27—A tribute to the memory of the late Justice Louis Brandeis, who fought during all his life against monopoly and concentration of economic power, was voiced this week by Senator Robert Wagner of New York and CIO Secretary James B. Carey.

Speaking at a Brandeis memorial dinner here, Wagner honored the former Supreme Court justice as a friend of the common man and a firm believer in democracy. At the same time, he pointed to the New Deal as a force for democracy that has "made us stronger in this war for survival."

Carey said that American labor realizes the dangers of monopoly which Brandeis was battling in the early part of the century. For that reason, he said, the unions of this country are determined to have a voice in drawing up the plans for a post-war world "in which liberty supplants repression, peace banishes war for all time, and economic security wipes out the spectre of want and hunger."

'Big Parade' Out Of Lewis Unions

WASHINGTON, June 27—The march of workers away from Lewis-controlled gas, coke, chemical and construction unions back into the CIO this week was taking on the aspects of a mass movement.

Martin Wagner, chairman of the CIO's Natl. Council of Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, revealed that an estimated 18,750 members of District 50 of the United Mine Workers had severed their connections with that outfit in the two weeks following the UMW Policy Board's attack on the CIO and Philip Murray.

Meanwhile unions and councils in every section of the country were voicing their loyalty to Murray and the CIO win-the-war policies, and their condemnation of the disruptionist tactics being pursued by Lewis and his paid officials.

PUBLISH PAPER

All the issues in Lewis' desperate attack on the CIO, and his sniping at Pres. Roosevelt and the nation's war program were contained in copies of "Victory," the gas and chemical workers' new paper, which came off the press last week. The paper branded Lewis as bent on building a personal empire "to turn over, like a medieval king, to his daughter Kathryn."

As the members of District 50 and of the former United Construction Workers—headed by Lewis' brother until he tried to merge it with District 50—were voting overwhelmingly to return to the CIO, Lewis henchmen were desperately trying two devices to hold their members: A furious red-baiting attack on Murray and the CIO, and open use of anti-Semitic arguments, as in a circular letter from George Titler referring to "Jew-Communists."

In a press conference here, the head of the CIO Council of Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers said the new CIO union would not be a "catch-all" for workers in a dozen trades where the Lewis family has made organizing raids, but would be confined to workers in the one broad coke and chemical industry.

MANY LOCALS

"Victory" reviewed in detail the extent of the swing to the CIO among former locals of District 50. The paper revealed that among the unions returning to the CIO are all locals in St. Louis, all the large locals in northern New Jersey, all the locals in Niagara Falls, and large numbers of local unions in Buffalo, New York, Minnesota, West Virginia, Ohio, Michigan and New Orleans.

Represented among the CIO groups were locals under contract to some of the largest corporations in the industry: Koppers, Carborundum, Niagara Alkali, American Cyanamid and Spencer-Kellogg.

In Toledo, all District 50 locals quit the UMW for the CIO, issuing a statement that Lewis' officials "have violated all decent union principles, disregarded industrial organization and destroyed the democratic method in the conduct of union affairs."

CONSTRUCTION, TOO

The tide towards the CIO was running equally strong among locals of the dissolved United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, with groups throughout the country applying for CIO local industrial union charters.

UCWOC groups in Akron and Cleveland, Ohio, voted affiliation with the CIO and brought more than 1,000 workers out of the Lewis organization. The action in Cleveland made the desertion of Lewis 100 per cent complete in that area.

At Trenton, N.J., Local 338 of the Construction Workers issued a similar blast at the Lewis family tactics and declared their support for CIO. Locals in New Orleans, Philadephia and in other major centers have already acted.

Here's An Idea; Baseball Sets For Boys In Camp

Fort Custer, Mich., June 27—Soldiers here are enthusiastically grateful to the United Automobile Worker locals of Michigan for 47 athletic kits which the unions have sent to them.

Some $500 was taken from the unions' athletic funds to purchase 13 complete sets of softball equipment, which are now in use. Each kit is composed of 12 balls, 12 bats, 10 fielders' gloves, a first baseman's mitt, a catcher's mitt and a mask. It is enough to outfit one company softball team.

To all UAW-CIO locals in the Detroit area the union is now distributing milk bottles which are to be used for money collections for this equipment.

Assails Purge From Office For Supporting FDR; Explodes 'Loan' Claim

BELLAIRE, O., June 27—The common people of the world must wipe out every form of dictatorship if the war is really to be won, CIO President Philip Murray declared here this week in a speech at an American Slav Day celebration.

Pointedly referring to the Hitler-like grip of John L. Lewis on the United Mine Workers membership, Murray said:

"I am fighting for the destruction of European dictatorship, of Oriental dictatorship, political dictatorship—and for the destruction of American labor dictatorship. I do not think this war will be really won until all these forms of dictatorship are completely destroyed."

70% LACK AUTONOMY

Murray told the meeting, which was one of a series being sponsored throughout the nation by the American Slav Congress, that 70 per cent of the UMWA members are without local autonomy, and that the presidents and other local officers are appointed by Lewis.

"If John Lewis has 27 puppet states in the United Mine Workers, and Adolph Hitler has 27 puppet states in Europe, then one is just as bad as the other," Murray declared.

"For all practical purposes it is just as necessary to eliminate one as it is the other," he said.

SUPPORT OF FDR

Murray told the crowd that he was the victim of a "purge" because of his consistent support of President Roosevelt.

"I think everyone knows that during the past 10 years I have given steady, consistent support to our President," he declared. "That support was unfaltering, not only because of gratitude, but because of the great statesmanship and leadership he has provided.

"Unfortunately for me, I have been purged in what has come to be regarded in Germany as an American purge. I have been purged because I supported Roosevelt in 1940, in 1939, and as far back as 1932. And now in June, 1942, I want the world to know that I am still supporting Roosevelt whether I am purged or not."

REVIEWS HISTORY

To the hundreds of coal miners in the meeting, Murray recalled the critical days in the miners' union during the strikes of the late 1920's and early 1930's.

"We were not fat and corpulent in those days," he said. "We were running around the country begging for money to help starving miners and their families. We did not have demogogic groups in those days.

"We were looking for a handout, and we got it. The people who gave us the handout did not ask us for it after we got it. They gave it to help starving miners and their wives and children.

"I know these things because I was on the picket lines around these mines. My spurs were not dug in a desk in Washington."

NO TALK OF LOAN

Pointing out that he was vice-president of the UMWA when that organization donated funds to the CIO, Murray declared:

"I will take an oath to my Maker that I never knew until the 15th day of March, 1942, that the United Mine Workers had loaned a single nickel to the CIO. There never was a word mentioned about a loan, either in convention or out of convention."

Murray told the meeting that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, which invested several millions of dollars in the CIO, and other organizations, communicated with CIO "and told us they did not want the money returned; that the money was an investment in the welfare of working men and women; that the money belonged to America."

HONORABLE PEACE

Referring to "peace" between the CIO and the AFL, Murray said discussions with AFL leaders indicated that peace "misrepresentations are being made to beguile the working men and women of America."

"I shall not accept a peace that sacrifices a principle or brings sorrow or misery into the home of any union member," he said.

Councils Back Murray, CIO

Washington, June 27—A growing movement of active support for the program of President Murray was sweeping through CIO affiliated city and state councils this week, while bitter criticism of John L. Lewis' disruptive policies was being voiced in all sections of the CIO movement.

Setting the pace for the resolutions was that of the New York State Industrial Union Council, whose 750 convention delegates spoke for 1,000,000 members. They praised CIO and Murray, unanimously condemned Lewis.

In Cleveland, President William Donovan of the city CIO council was authorized by that body to send a letter to Lewis saying:

"Your undemocratic attitude and actions, repugnant to every concept of decency, cannot help us to win the war; cannot help us organize the unorganized; cannot, in fact, help anyone but our sworn enemies."

Ft. Wayne Paper, Pegler Under Fire From CIO Council

Fort Wayne, Ind., June 27—Stop Westbrook Pegler, the Fort Wayne Industrial Union Council urged this week. Pointing out that the anti-labor Scripps-Howard columnist has admitted that he and Bill Gross, an editor of the local News-Sentinel, "employ labor spies," the council urged that "Pegler's unity-splitting, Hitler-helping smearing be stopped" and that Gross be investigated "for his Nazi connections."

The council stated that both men "have enlisted the aid of notorious appeasers and pro-Fascists in their efforts to smash trade unionism and wreck the nation's war effort."

Score Navy's Mass Firing Of Union Men

NEW YORK, June 27—Some U. S. Navy officials with bitter anti-union phobias are sabotaging the war effort by ordering the dismissal of experienced marine radio operators without even bothering to present formal charges against them, or to inquire about the truth of so-called "un-American activities" with which the operators are charged.

That was the conclusion reached in maritime circles here this week as two ships were delayed because of the operator shortage. That the shortage would extend to 50 ships by mid-September was the estimate of officials of the American Communications Assn., who credited the figures to Coast Guard officers.

The ACA is pressing for early action on pending Navy "blacklist" cases against 87 maritime radio operators, ordered to leave their ships because of "un-American activities." Forty-seven of the 87 are ACA members, and 14 are now or have been either ACA international or local officials.

While the ACA has said that it has no quarrel with Public Law 351 which allows the Navy to remove the operators, the union said that the law is being administered in an "unfair and undemocratic manner."

COVER UP CHARGES

The ACA cited one case where an operator was called for a hearing and asked what the specific charges were against him. The Navy board replied, according to the ACA, that it did not know. The man asked how he could present a defense against charges about which he knew nothing.

The union urged the Navy to hold hearings on all the cases and render final decisions, so that innocent men could be cleared and returned to work, where they are sorely needed to aid in winning the war—the ACA's main present goal.

"Dear Sir:

"Mr. ——, a radio operator whose employment as such has been disapproved by the Secretary of the Navy (acting under authority granted him by Public Law No. 351), has given your name as a reference. The disapproval of Mr. —— was based on evidence of un-American activity . . ."

PREJUDICE

The letter continues to ask about the suspected operator's "character, trustworthiness and loyalty to the United States."

The union officials pointed out that in most cases such an opening paragraph in a letter would have one immediate effect, to convince the ordinary business man that he had been associated with a man already found guilty of un-American activities.

House Tax Bill Short Of Need

is over. This little handout will cost the plain, ordinary taxpayer 14 per cent of all excess profits taxes taken in now.

5. The committee allowed oil and mining companies to continue to take a "depletion allowance" out of their taxable income—i.e., it gave those two industries a special premium for carrying on their business. This item will cost the plain, ordinary taxpayer another $80,000,000.

SALES TAX FIGHT

The fight against the sales tax in the committee was led by Representative McKeough of Illinois and Representative Healey of Massachusetts, both friends of labor. This is only the first round, since the sales tax can be brought up again, either on the floor or in a subsequent bill to make up the deficit.

The need for a good minority report from the committee, recommending a program to follow that of the Treasury and the CIO, is very clear from the outcome of the months of committee debate. Such a report would call for at least a return to Treasury levels on income taxes, plugging of loopholes, steeper profits taxes, and a positive statement against the sales tax.

The second obvious demand at the present time should be for an open rule on the committee's bill, allowing for ample debate and amendment from the floor on major issues. Under the closed rule procedure, no amendments can be offered, and the bill must be voted up or down as a whole.

Mrs. Roosevelt Hails Seamen For Heroism

Washington, June 27—"We can hardly fail to pay homage for supreme courage . . . to the men who man the merchant ships," Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt said this week in her widely syndicated column, "My Day."

"As one reads of the many merchant ships which have been sunk, I wonder if there should not be some special medal of honor for the men who man these ships," Mrs. Roosevelt wrote.

"In some cases they run even greater risks than the boys in the regular Army and Navy. When we realize that over and over again, they land from one torpedoed ship and as soon as they recover from wounds or exposure they start on another trip, we can hardly fail to pay homage for supreme courage."

Steel Union Warns of 20% Output Cut

Murray urged the War Production Board to call a conference of representatives of the steel firms, big and little, and the United Steelworkers to take action on these conditions, declaring that "the effects on the war production program will become increasingly disastrous unless these bottlenecks are corrected."

He flatly charged giant steel corporations with responsibility for "the bottleneck of steel plates in the shipbuilding program." This bottleneck is responsible for a "23 per cent shortage of steel plates—amounting to almost a quarter of a million tons monthly," an amount that "would build more ships than the Axis has sunk in any one month near our Atlantic coast since the start of their treacherous attacks after Pearl Harbor."

This in turn is due, Murray charged, to "the corporate greed of most of the operators of the continuous strip mills." Steel plate output of these mills can be increased by at least 15 per cent," he added.

SCRAP BOARD

Murray also called for the setting up of a three-man "War Scrap Action Board" as an independent government agency to take complete jurisdiction over scrap. This board would have one member nominated by President Roosevelt, one by the USA-CIO and one by the steel industry.

"This board should have full powers to do whatever needs to be done to build a scrap pile of at least 10 million tons by November 1, 1942, and to otherwise keep the steel industry operating at 100 per cent of capacity."

These practical suggestions, Murray added, "are designed to help industry and government win a speedy victory over the Axis. This requires, among other things, a much greater participation of small business and organized labor in the output of armaments."

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

A resolution urging the immediate opening of a western front was adopted unanimously this week by the National Executive Board of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO. The Board also unanimously endorsed the position of the CIO "in condemning the policies and actions of John L. Lewis as an attack on our national unity and a threat to our war effort," while pledging itself "to strengthen our bonds with the auxiliaries of the UMWA who want to work with us to help win the war."

"We rejoice that our Government with the British and Soviet Governments, are planning the opening of a European front against Hitler in 1942," Mrs. Faye Stephenson, President of the Auxiliary Congress, said in a statement issued on June 22, first anniversary of the German attack on the Soviet Union.

"We believe that the need of a western front is more urgent every day. The Russians have fought a magnificent year-long battle. We know they will continue to fight to ultimate victory. But an attack on Hitler from the rear now would mean a shorter war, might even mean victory in 1942.

"We are remembering the anniversary of June 22 by urging our Government to open a second front in Europe immediately, and by pleding to redouble our own war efforts."

The auxiliary resolution on John L. Lewis points out that the miners union has consistently thwarted and discouraged auxiliaries. It quotes a letter from Thomas Kennedy which informs the Auxiliary Congress that "The United Mine Workers of America does not give official recognition or official status to women's auxiliaries in our organization."

The resolution greets the many fine auxiliaries of the miners union and promises them full cooperation in their win-the-war programs and urges them to maintain their bonds with the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries.

The West Virginia State Auxiliary Council, made up almost wholly of Mine auxiliaries, is very active in war activities in that state. Under the leadership of Ruth Allen, State auxiliary executive secretary, auxiliaries in Marion County have registered more than 800 people for civilian defense activities. The Red Cross has been assisted with financial contributions as well as sewing.

CONVENTIONS MEET

Increasing win-the-war activities was the keynote of two important auxiliary conventions this week—the Women's Auxiliary of the Newspaper Guild, meeting in Denver June 22-26 and the Utah State Auxiliary Convention beginning June 26 in Provo, Utah.

Pearl Harbor Hero's Mother On Radio

New York, June 27—The mother of Dorie Miller, Negro messman who exhibited extraordinary heroism by manning a machine gun against Jap dive bombers at Pearl Harbor, was a guest of honor on the New York CIO Win the War radio program this week-end. She is Mrs. Connery Miller of Waco, Texas.

Mrs. Miller participated in the National Negro Day parade and will speak at the big Unity for Victory mass rally this Sunday. The rally is jointly sponsored by the Negro Labor Victory Committee, the National Conference of Negro Youth and the People's Voice.

In honor of her son's selection as Negro National Hero by the Negro Day Committee, Mrs. Miller was presented with a scroll.

NAM Spreads Tory Tales In Schools

Kenosha, Wis., June 27—The tentacles of the National Assn. of Manufacturers have stretched into the local high school system with the cooperation of the National Education Assn., it was revealed this week by Kenosha Labor, AFL-CIO newspaper.

The labor paper stated that copies of "The Closed Shop," NAM pamphlet characterizing the union shop as a "Hitler method," have been distributed at the Mary D. Bradford high school by G. G. Browne, recently elected local vice-president of the NEA, which has started a series of joint conferences with the NAM.

KIDS PROTESTED

When Browne handed out the leaflets in his business practice classes some of the students, whose fathers are unionists, asked why he did not present "the other side." Browne said, "there isn't any other side."

The labor paper withheld publication of the story until school closed, at the request of the students, who feared reprisals. The paper said the piece was published as "tangible evidence of the efforts made to turn the children of Kenosha citizens against the unions to which the majority of their fathers belong."

PROTEST LOW PAY: Representatives of State, County and Municipal Workers Local 400 as they protested this week at the State House, in Trenton, N. J., against low wages paid by the Trenton State Hospital. After hospital authorities refused recognition of the union, Governor Charles Edison appointed an investigating committee, averting a threatened work "holiday."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The New York State Industrial Union Council held a record-breaking convention in Syracuse last week. Approximately 800 delegates were in attendance. The growth of the USA-CIO and the UAW was obvious by the increased number of their local unions and delegates represented.

Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers of America opened the convention and after the preliminaries the writer was chosen as chairman. Unity was the keynote and it prevailed throughout the convention. Resolutions were adopted for all-out support to the war effort and of the agreement entered into with President Roosevelt, Winston Churchill and V. M. Molotov. Determination to drive on with the organizing of the unorganized was stressed.

Gustave A. Strebel of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America was elected president and Harold J. Garno of the United Automobile Workers, secretary-treasurer.

Little Steel Drive

USA international and local representatives from the plants of Little Steel assembled in Pittsburgh this week and laid plans to enroll every worker in these plants into this great organization.

All throughout the nation we find the sentiment is to roll the unions on by ORGANIZING THE UNORGANIZED.

CIO Regional Director Paul R. Christopher and Field Representative William R. Henderson report an NLRB victory by the CIO at the Chapman-Dewey Lumber Company in Memphis, with a vote of 158 for IWA; three for AFL, and 98 for no union.

Three Wins in Ohio

Sub-Regional Director George DeNucci reports three election victories in behalf of the CIO, within the past week, as follows:

The USWA-CIO drive under the direction of Brother Walter Harris chalked up another fine victory at the Brown Shoe Company, Vincennes, Indiana, as follows: CIO 275; AFL 149; no union 23.

UWOC Field Representative Joseph Logue reports a CIO victory at the Pennsylvania Water Company, as follows: UWOC-CIO 51; independent 29.

Mine, Mill Wins Polls

Morris Wright, assistant editor, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, reports several fine victories won by the IUMM&SW, as follows:

Although the MMSW received the highest number of votes in the one big unit of an election at the Phelps-Dodge Copper Queen Mine in Bisbee, Arizona, a run-off election has been ordered because of the high number of challenged votes. The results were, as follows: MMSW 466; AFL 426; challenged 46, and no union 38. We wish them a victorious outcome in the run-off.

Regional Director E. B. Pugh reports they were successful in obtaining a 6 cents per hour increase for over 100 workers, vacation with pay, membership maintenance clause and grievance machinery in the initial contract with the Richmond Cedar Works.

Relief Funds Pour In

WASHINGTON, June 27—Ten thousand dollars was raised for American and Allied War Relief by several New York City and Brooklyn locals of the Retail Shoe Clerks, an affiliate of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, it was announced by Samuel Lowenthal, Chairman of the Victory Committee of that union.

Fewer than two thousand shoe clerks, earning about $30 a week, raised the $10,000 in a short and vigorous drive led by Lowenthal, who is the Business Manager of Local 287 of the United Shoe Employes. The Committee of the union made an intensive drive every pay day among their members, and raised the sum in a short time. The Retail Shoe Employes are now considering the plan of the National CIO War Relief Committee for regular sustaining contributions of an hour's pay per month, endorsed by President Samuel Wolchak and by the National Convention of the URWDSE held at Chicago last month.

Some of the hardest working men in the shipbuilding industry last week contributed $1,000, raised at a recent dance, to the CIO War Relief Committee. These men are employed in two Brooklyn shipyards where they work a shift of ten hours a day, seven days a week, turning out the ships to help win the war.

Of the $2,000 raised in this manner, half was used for the purchase of War Bonds, and the balance was contributed to the CIO War Relief Committee.

Typical of the attitude of these shipbuilders was the action of Richard Versch, a shop steward of Local 39, employed in the sheetmetal department of one of the Brooklyn ship repair yards. Versch was presented with a check for $50 by the men in his shop, for the purchase of a gift for himself, as a token of their esteem for a loyal, veteran union leader. Instead of buying the gift, Mr. Versch sent the money to the National CIO War Relief Committee.

Another Victory Ball, given under the auspices of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, Local 1114 in Chicago, succeeded in raising $300, which was turned over to the CIO War Relief Committee.

DOUBLE QUOTA

Fifty members of Local 1225 of the same International, employed in the shop of the D. E. Lisser Machinery Co. recently told Dick Henry, New York City regional director of the CIO War Relief Committee, he was too modest in requesting an hour's pay per month.

They turned down the plan as inadequate, and instead voted to give a whole day's pay each month to the CIO war fund chest. The employers, affected by the enthusiasm of the union men then agreed to match their employes dollars for dollar, and to contribute through the CIO War Relief Committee.

EL CENTRO, Calif., June 27—Signing of a contract with the CIO Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America by ten fruit packing sheds in Imperial Valley has rung the death-knell of the notorious vigilantism in this former stronghold of the powerful and bitterly anti-labor Associated Farmers, the "bankers in overalls."

UNIONISM DEVELOPS

"UCAPAWA's drive to organize some 20,000 fruit and vegetable shed workers in California and Arizona is grounded in the determination to keep production of fresh fruits and vegetables moving for the Army, Navy, Defense workers and their families," said UCAPAWA Pres. Donald Henderson.

"Signing of the Imperial Valley contracts plus swift-moving organization of the 5,000 workers in the sheds of the Salinas area means that orderly unionism has become rooted in this area which until recently was marked by frequent turmoil."

18 PER CENT INCREASE

The historic melon contract calls for maintenance of membership, job security, recognition of the shop-steward system, labor-law compliance and an 18 per cent wage increase.

Leading shed employers and public officials have welcomed the change to orderly operation of the industry, realizing that national unity for full production is imperative.

Bob Hatton, mayor of El Centro, addressed a pre-contract rally in the municipal baseball stadium, where a China Relief Drive and Bond Sales campaign was inaugurated in the sheds. The local Legion Hall, moreover, is now available for union use.

This is something of a change from a few years back when union organizers went into the valley at the risk of their lives.

Murray Asks Clemency For Waller

Washington, June 27—The execution of Odell Waller, Negro sharecropper condemned to death in Virginia, "would be a gross miscarriage of justice," CIO President Philip Murray wired to Governor Darden this week.

Waller was sentenced to die June 19 for killing a white landlord in self-defense. The jury, as usual in poll-tax states, was all-white, with Negroes excluded. Murray's wire was sent in response to a plea from A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

CIO Secretary James B. Carey also sent a wire to Governor Darden, urging that "Virginia justice should not be stained by this disgrace." Following these wires and other petitions for clemency, the Governor postponed the execution.

"I earnestly petition that you extend clemency to Waller," Murray said in his message. "The attention of the nation is focused on this case and you have the opportunity to right a grievous wrong."

Jersey Local 'Adopts' Three Pilots

Newark, N. J., June 27—When it comes to adoptions, the United Auto Workers Union doesn't recognize any ceilings.

UAW members at the Titeflex Metal Hose Co. "adopted" three aviators this week when they presented a $300 check to the American Flying Services Foundation, which rehabilitates potential pilots barred from enlistment because of minor correctible defects. A similar check was presented by the company.

"In participating in this adopt-a-pilot campaign, we are carrying out our work of close cooperation in all such important causes which have become our causes," said President Irving Abramson of the N. J. Industrial Union Council.

Ask Labor Voice On Price Boards

San Francisco, June 27—Labor representation on 500 war price control and rationing boards in this State was urged this week by a joint delegation of CIO and AFL spokesmen.

The delegation pointed out to the Office of Price Administration that much of the war production program depends on proper functioning of these boards. An AFL representative cited a case where a crew was unable to report to work because of difficulty in securing tires.

Crack Down On Outlaw Walkouts

Detroit, June 27—An outlaw strike at the Hudson Naval Ordnance Arsenal near here was ended this week after President R. J. Thomas of the CIO United Automobile Workers threatened severe disciplinary action against its ringleaders.

White members of Hudson Local 154, who caused the stoppage, will be subject to loss of their jobs and union expulsion, as this is the latest in a series of discrimination incidents in a number of Detroit plants that have drawn government attention.

The Negroes are long-standing members of the Hudson local and were formerly employed as sweepers. They took vocational training and qualified for milling machine and other jobs.

Discrimination is forbidden both by the UAW's constitution, and by President Roosevelt's executive order.

Army OK's 'Longshore Commandos'

Washington, June 27—Longshore "commandos"—skilled union longshoremen who know the art of ship loading inside out—will soon be formed and sent to ports all over the world where United Nations ships arrive with arms and supplies to be unloaded.

This was learned when the Army, after a long delay, finally indicated that it was willing to make use of CIO longshoremen as a nucleus for building longshore battalions. Serious holdups have slowed down ship loading and unloading, delaying the use of desperately needed war material.

Bjorne Halling, CIO Maritime Committee secretary and a member of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, has been negotiating with Army officials for some time. Personnel will be selected from key men on CIO-organized docks, and will be made commissioned and non-commissioned officers.

Just as a reminder, Harry Bridges, leader of the ILWU and a major factor in California war production, has been ordered deported by Attorney-General Biddle. Bridges' union has earned a world-wide reputation for speed and skill in handling ships loaded with war supplies.

Ask U. S. War On Finland

Newark, N. J., June 27—A group of American trade unionists of Finnish descent this week urged President Roosevelt to strengthen the front of the United Nations by declaring war on Finland.

Charging that the myth of Finland's political independence from Germany is playing into the hands of the Nazis and of Finland's own fascist groups, the Finnish-Americans said that the Baltic country's army was rebuilt by Hitler generals with supplies seized from the defeated French military forces.

President of the Committee of Finnish-American Trade Unionists is Ilmar Koivunen of the International Woodworkers, Duluth, Minn., and its secretary is Rudy Hanson of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, Newark.

Dalrymple Hits Anti-Alien 'Strike'

Akron, O., June 27—President Sherman Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers this week ordered sponsors of an illegal stoppage at the General Tire & Rubber Co. to resume work or face loss of jobs.

The wildcat strikers laid down their tools when the company rehired 25 aliens. The men had been suspended from work some time ago pending investigation of their cases, and had subsequently been cleared of any suspicion by federal authorities.

New British Minister Predicts Allied Victory Depends on Workers

By GARRY ALLIGHAN

LONDON, June 27—(ALN)—Victory over the Axis depends largely on the men and women working in the factories, Harold Butler, newly-appointed British Minister to Washington and Director General of Information Services, told this correspondent on the eve of his departure by clipper for the United States.

"Ultimately it's production that is decisive," he said. "The war can be won or lost in the workshops and mines. So far as the workers of Britain are concerned it will be won and won quickly.

"In preparation for my new job, I've been going round the country for the past few weeks building up a factual picture of what British workers are doing to win the war.

"I can state without exaggeration that they have achieved a miracle of production. The results are now being seen over the air in Germany, and in the great battles now raging in Libya and on the Eastern front in Russia.

"British workers take heart in the knowledge that the workers of America, like themselves, are out to beat all records."

KNOWS U. S.

Big, burly with thinning grey hair and horn-rimmed glasses, the new Minister has a close acquaintance with American labor and production problems. He has many times visited the U. S., particularly the highly industrialized sections, and he is the author of "Industrial Relations in the United States" and "Unemployment Problems in the United States."

Butler was Deputy Director of the International Labor Office in Geneva from its start in 1920 to 1932, when he succeeded Albert Thomas of France as ILO Director. He remained in that office until 1938. During his term the United States became a member of the ILO.

Butler believe that so far the story of Britain's production effort in this war has not been told fully in the United States.

"Britain has been painted as a fortress of democracy, but not as an arsenal of democracy," he told me. "I hope to be able to tell the full story of British factories, mines, shipyards, mills and fields."

England's Largest Union Rolls Up Its Sleeves To Help Second Front

London, June 27—(ALN)—A week after the announcement of Foreign Commissar Molotov's visit to Britain and the U. S., the Amalgamated Engineering Union, largest organization of skilled workers in British war industries, has promised that its 650,000 members will do everything in their power to carry out the "urgent tasks" of creating a second front in Europe.

At is annual convention held this week in Blackpool, Lancashire coast resort, the AEU pledged:

1. To bring more women into industry so that skilled machinists can enter the army as tank drivers;

2. To campaign for labor-management production councils in all factories;

3. To support the granting of full powers to Minister of Production Oliver Lyttelton, now in Washington.

"Our members, and all virile Englishmen, have their thoughts turned to attack," said Jack Tanner, president of the AEU. "They are resolved to defeat the Axis this year.

"We cannot pay enough tribute to the Russian glory; but we want to be doing well on our own account. For this we need a second front in Europe now.

"Beaverbrook, who is in a position to know, says that we have the equipment today for opening the second front. This union, the one most vitally concerned, knows that production has increased tremendously in the last six months."

RESPONSIBILITIES

At the same time, Tanner said, members of the AEU had no right to demand a second front unless they were were prepared to help bring it about.

"If we embark on larger scale military activities," he told the delegates, "we must face up to the demand for more tank mechanics and skilled engineers in the armed forces, already revealed by the Lybian campaign.

"This means that more skilled men must leave the workshops, and their places must be taken by women. We cannot afford to look on women as intruders in industry. We have to accept them as colleagues fulfilling an essential task."

Relief Drive

New York, June 27—Nearly 10,000 CIO members collected money on the streets of this city this week for the benefit of Russian War Relief. The unionists joined with thousands of people from other organizations to sell aid-Russia tags under the slogan, "They gave us a year—let's give them a day."

Australian Workers Vow Aid In War Plans

MELBOURNE, June 27—Australia's workers must be prepared to make sacrifices comparable to those made by the people of Russia.

This was the warning brought to representatives of the island continent's million union members here by John Curtin, Labor Party leader who holds the post of Prime Minister.

Reminding the delegates from 86 labor organizations that the Dominion's liberty is at stake, Curtin said that this is a people's war for economic emancipation and political freedom.

PLAN CONVERSION

The Australian Labor government plans the switching over of 318,000 workers from civilian to war industry, the Prime Minister revealed, and the cooperation of the unions becomes a prime necessity to accomplish this task.

Two thousand workers have almost completed Australia's largest airfield, he said, and in 15 weeks brought about the conversion of one village to a humming war-base town with a special branch railway and 49 miles of roadway.

The Australasian Council of Trade Unions, acting in accord with Curtin's request, has developed plans for economic planning and general coordinating committees to allocate the manpower requirements among fighting services and civilian industries.

Canadian Bosses Panned; Ignore Workers

Toronto, June 27—(ALN)—In an address given here last week before the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Elliott M. Little, Director of National Selective Service, charged that many employers, including some of those sitting in front of him, were holding up war production by disregarding the skill and ingenuity of their workers.

"Each minute of time, like each pound of material, must produce the maximum," Mr. Little said. "All the minutes that are wasted in our plants are minutes donated to Hitler. Those minutes must be salvaged. That is your responsibility.

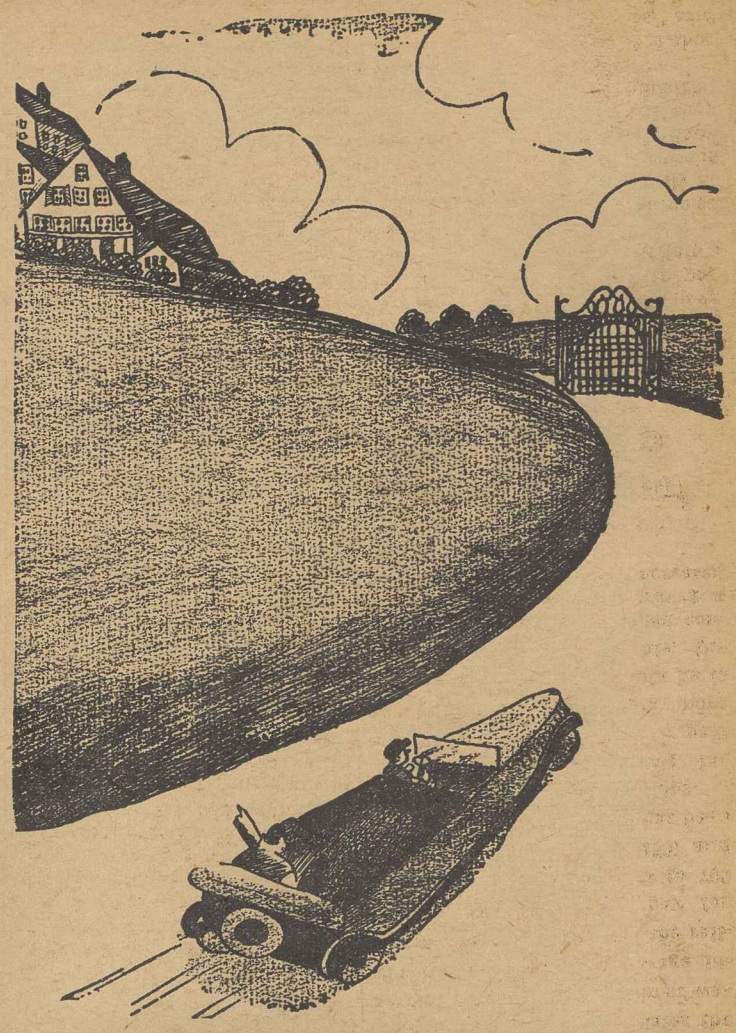
"How can you improve the situation? The answer is, by getting your employes to help you run your job. You must actively go after their advice and the full use of their experience.

"It's there waiting for you. You merely have to provide the opportunity to turn that advice and experience into greater production of war weapons, into better use of materials, into more efficient use of manpower."

First Pact: Dime Raise

Cincinnati, O., June 27—The first labor contract ever signed by the King Machine Tool Co. this week provided for a 10 cents an hour increase for members of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union, plus a 5 cents an hour bonus for second-shift workers and a 10 cents bonus for third shift. Pay rates will be equal for men and women doing the same work.

The Upper Crust



"I ask you, Junior, how could we keep that place up on $25,000 a year?"

Machine Shops Get Wheels, Tour Soviet Railways

KUIBYSHEV, June 18—(ALN)—Along the railways of the Soviet Union, now devoted exclusively to carrying troops and supplies to the front, there has sprung up in the last few months a network of small, mobile workshops where workers, after putting in a full day's work on the railroads, manufacture their own tools.

It is an idea of the Railwaymen's Union, Russia's largest. In these workshops, using local raw materials and scrap gathered by the workers' children, railwaymen manufacture all the innumerable tools required for the operation of a railway: shovels, hammers, wrenches, oil cans, even small boilers.

On a recent trip between Moscow and Rostov, this correspondent observed a mobile workshop in operation. In Liski, an important junction on the only north-south line left to the Soviets by the German advance, our train laid over for a few hours to permit the passage of several long freights loaded with munitions for the Kharkov front. The railwaymen's workshop was outside the depot.

"The production of small tools by our union local," I was told by the senior mechanic of the depot, a man of about 65 named Nikolai Kochetov, "has relieved hundreds of machine shops, permitting them to switch over entirely to war production."

WAGES UP

That the country appreciates the heroic work of its railwaymen was shown when substantial wage increases went into effect on the railways March 1st. Base pay for engineers is now from 475 to 700 rubles a month ($100 to $150) and an elaborate bonus system has been adopted for wartime conditions.

For all work done over his monthly quota, the worker is paid double time, and for work more than 10 per cent above quota he is paid triple time. This rate, the highest in force in any union contract in the world, has proved a powerful incentive to increased production.

News From Naziland:

Pharaoh Was a Piker

WASHINGTON, June 27—Hitler today is the greatest slave master in history, cracking the whip of terror over millions of foreign workers dragged into the Reich either by force, threats or extravagant promises.

This is revealed in broadcasts monitored by the Federal Communications Commission and by European newspapers available to the Office of War Information.

Estimating that the foreign workers in Germany may total 5,000,000, the OWI stated:

"The workers have been brought to Germany against their will, separated from their families, and are resented by the local population because their presence at the work bench means that a German worker is at the Russian front."

So great have been the drains on the Nazi labor force that a recent order by Himmler called for replacing men in provincial police stations with women, the OWI report.

MANY METHODS, ALL BAD

Hitler has used various methods for recruiting labor from occupied countries:

1. The Germans, as in Norway, order forced mobilizations of workers and load them into freight cars for Germany.

2. Occupation chiefs threaten to reduce food rations unless workers "voluntarily" go to Germany.

3. The Nazis order a flat per cent of workers laid off in local plants and then ship workers to Germany.

4. Nazi diplomats have concluded agreements with friendly nations to deliver workers.

5. German labor agents promise the workers higher wages, better food and special privileges. The Nazis, however, fail to mention that all foreign workers in the Reich must pay a worker's tax," which ranges from 25 to 30 per cent of the wages.

SLAVE EXISTENCE

The barracks in which the workers live under the watchful eye of the Gestapo, the long work days, and the order that factory workers must devote their free time to farm labor—all are kept secret until the workers arrive in Germany to begain their slave-like existence.

'Tommies' Want Pay Raise, Too

London, June 27—(ALN)—News that the U. S. Congress has voted to raise the basic pay of soldiers has aroused special interest here among trade unions, many of which have been campaigning for similar pay raises for members of Britain's armed forces.

The Labor Party, political voice of the unions, voted unanimously at its recent conference that service rates of pay and dependents' allowances should be raised until they approximate earnings of industrial workers.

"There are thousands of Labor Party members in the Forces," said W. Nally, delegate from Bolton, "and they look to the Conference to use its influence to improve their conditions."

WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

Steel Workers' Pay Boost Sought as Aid to Victory

Bay State CIO Fights Appeasers

BOSTON, July 3—Pres. Joseph A. Salerno of the Massachusetts CIO, announced today that the Council's Executive Board has issued a call for a special state convention of its locals, representing 180,000 workers, to organize support behind real win-the-war candidates for state and national offices in the forthcoming primaries and election.

The convention will be held in the Parker House, Boston, on Sunday, July 19.

The CIO's campaign will lay special emphasis on election of a Congress which will give complete support to President Roosevelt's foreign and domestic programs for smashing the Axis.

"Labor will enter the campaign with both hands and both feet," said President Salerno. "We are not going to wander all over the political lot. We are going to center our activities and make the appeasers and the enemies of labor and the President the Number 1 targets of our campaign.

"Our slogan is 'Keep the Appeasers Out of Congress.' We do not want any part-time patriots. War is a full-time job."

CIO Swept NLRB Polls During May

Washington, July 4 — The CIO continued to star as a National Labor Relations Board election winner during May, the latest reported month, according to NLRB figures released this week.

The CIO won 154 elections or "payroll checks," the AFL 104, unaffiliated unions 27, and "no union" 33.

In 318 contests, 107,034 workers voted, making the May record five times the average for the first five-year period of board operation.

Of the 29 major industrial groups in which the board conducted elections during May, the leading five were directly or closely connected with war production.

During May 434 employe representation cases and 414 union fair labor practice cases were closed. Of the 848 cases closed, 49.4 per cent were settled by agreement; 26.7 per cent were withdrawn by the party filing; and 10.7 per cent were dismissed by the board.

Vote For CIO

Columbus, Ohio, July 4—Workers of the Clark Auto Equipment Co. here voted by a substantial majority for the United Automobile Workers as sole bargaining agency in a recent Labor Board election. The CIO union won this victory in the face of three general pay raises given within three weeks by the company to forestall organization.

GET OUT THE VOTE: Virginia Woods, assistant research director of the California CIO, isn't running for office, but she's doing her bit to help to get out the vote in the West Coast State. CIO is urging all eligible citizens to register, and cast their ballots for win-the-war candidates.

Smelter Workers Win Praise for War Effort

WATERBURY, Conn., July 4—Greetings from CIO Pres. Philip Murray featured the "Labor for Victory" rally sponsored by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers here this week.

"The meeting was addressed by MMSW President Reid Robinson, Connecticut Governor Robert A. Hurley, CIO Secretary James B. Carey, Mayor Scully of Waterbury, and others.

"You have been serving, not as civilians, but as soldiers on the home front, giving everything of yourselves with courage, determination, energy and will," Governor Hurley said to the more than 2,200 CIO brass workers at the meeting.

"The brass workers are a most important sector of America's army of production," Murray wired to the meeting. "I am delighted to hear of your activities to stimulate more and more enthusiasm for increasing war output to beat the Axis. The CIO is 100 per cent behind America's victory effort and our Commander-in-Chief."

SECOND FRONT

Victory in 1942 is within reach if a second front in Europe is opened as rapidly as possible, Robinson declared, saying that "a quick second front in Europe will save the lives of thousands of American workers."

Carey urged the workers to produce and produce "to show the so-called supermen that the common people in America will make certain that freedom will live for all." Union organization, he added, was the best means of safeguarding "the human and production resources with which we will defeat Hitler."

USA-CIO Asks Labor Board OK Panel Recommendations; Murray Raps Henderson

WASHINGTON, July 3—Wage increases and union security for 175,000 employes of Little Steel, recommended this week by a War Labor Board fact-finding panel, "would serve to aid and intensify the national war effort."

That prediction was made this week by Pres. Philip Murray, of the United Steelworkers of America as he and other leaders of the union appeared at WLB public hearings to demand acceptance of the panel report. Final decision is expected in the next few weeks.

Murray suggested that the Board should examine both the union's demands and the companies' arguments in the light of their effect on the war effort. The union's arguments, he said, proved that granting of the increase to overcome rising living costs, and the removal of union insecurity, would aid the nation's war effort.

During the course of his speech, Murray attacked the "ingenious theories . . . of armchair chart experts" who have conspired to prevent the steel workers from winning their case. He offered sharp criticism of Leon Henderson, head of OPA, who, he said, has been fighting labor's demands while keeping rationing and price control in the "tid-bit" stage.

Texas Union-Busting Goes 'Red, White & Blue'

By TRAVIS K. HEDRICK

BEAUMONT, Tex., July 3—(FP)—Union busting has adopted a fancy, red-white-and-blue pattern in Martin Dies' home district, where major oil refineries, shipyards and even department stores are conducting an anti-union petition-signing campaign among "loyal" employes.

Edwin S. Smith, national director of the CIO Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, said he had preliminary reports showing that a number of CIO members employed by the Standard Oil Co. here had been "threatened with loss of their jobs if they failed to sign the petition as demanded."

Foremen and other straw bosses were actively engaged in recruiting signers during work hours, and other company-minded persons were busy on downtown streets.

WAR ON UNIONS

Chiefly objectionable in the declaration are these phrases:

"We declare war on all rules, regulations or agreements which may prevent any worker on any war contract for munitions or supplies, from working as many hours or as many days as he or she is willing to work, or doing as much work as he or she wants to do to increase production — so long as normal health safeguards are maintained . . .

"While we haggle over an hour of overtime—our sons are being slaughtered."

It is noteworthy that in a paragraph mentioning the President, the declaration of war carefully avoids pledging support to him and fails to mention him by name. It merely announces to the President as commander-in-chief that the signer is pledged to an "unalterable view"—including one against overtime pay.

The petition, throughout, fails to mention democracy or to denounce fascism or the Axis powers.

Iowa Labor Pledges Victory Drive

Des Moines, July 3 — Lowering the standards of the American working people isn't going to help build morale, A. J. Kojetinsky, steel union executive board member, told a Win-the-War Conference sponsored by the CIO here.

More than 250 union representatives attended the meeting. Ben Henry, president of the Iowa-Nebraska Industrial Union Council, was chairman.

"Some people think this is not the time to bother about wage increases and working conditions, and that labor should go backwards," Kojetinsky said.

MUST ADVANCE

"I think that participation in the war means all-out participation, but we can't do it unless the union and members stay astride of the times.

"We can't build morale by lowering the standards of the American people. A satisfied workman will build morale. We must continue to fight for economic security."

Other speakers at the rally were Thomas Burns of the War Production Board; the Rt. Rev. Msgr. L. G. Ligutti of the National Catholic Rural Life conference; Rabbi Eugene Mannheimer of Temple B'nai Jeshurun; and Lieut. Gov. B. B. Hickenlooper.

Army, Navy Praise Role Of Unions

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., July 3—High officials of the Army and Navy this week lavished praise on CIO and AFL workers in two Springfield machine tool plants at ceremonies where the unions and two firms were awarded the new Army-Navy Star Flags.

The flags are awarded to machine tool workers and companies which reach high production levels.

Receiving the prized emblems in Springfield were Local 213 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers together with the Van Norman Machine Tool Company, and the AFL machinists at the Baush Machine Tool Company. On hand at the ceremonies were Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson and Under Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal.

HAILS UNION HELP

"Much of the credit" for the companies' output "must go to the local labor organizations," Patterson declared. "For their services, not only helping production in the plants, but also aiding the whole American war effort, each of these unions is also being awarded an Army-Navy Star."

Forrestal also praised labor's part in the victory program.

"Defeat of the Axis is just as important to the American men and women who work in this plant as it is to the American men and women who own or manage this plant," he said.

"It is abundantly clear that capital, management and labor all have equal responsibility in this war and an equal stake in its outcome."

1,000 Leave Lewis' Union In Capital

Washington, July 3 — One thousand street paving workers in the nation's capital voted down unanimously a proposal that they leave the CIO and join the District Fifty "catch-all unit" of the United Mine Workers.

Instead the membership of Local 30 of the former United Construction Workers Organizing Committee—now dissolved by the CIO—decided to apply for a charter as a CIO local industrial union, it was announced by Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Md.-D. C. Industrial Union Council.

"This charter was granted to them so as to give the better than one thousand street paving workers an opportunity to democratically control their own destiny as an autonomous CIO local industrial union," Katz said.

WANT SELF-RULE

"The Washington street pavers decided to stay with the CIO not only because they supported the win-the-war policies of Pres. Philip Murray and rejected the defeatism of John L. Lewis, but also because they wanted democracy in their own union.

"The Washington street pavers, as a CIO unit, will have the right to elect their own officials, maintain their own treasury, handle their own finances and negotiate with their employers, all of which normal union processes are absolutely out under a Lewis regime."

Repudiation of Lewis' anti-CIO, anti-Roosevelt policies was continuing throughout the country.

In Iowa, Ben Henry, CIO regional director and himself a mine union member, offered to debate the issues between the UMW leadership and the CIO before every mine union local in the state.

CHOICE FOR WORKERS

Henry wrote to Pres. Louis Bolodrini of District 13, UMW, that the debates would let the miners decide "whether or not you are representing them by attacking the CIO, which is the only real, live labor organization in the state of Iowa."

And in West Virginia, Local 111 of the United Federal Workers praised the CIO leadership of Pres. Murray, and of Van A. Bittner throughout the state.

"We, the members of this union believe in the stand taken by both, Pres. Murray and West Virginia's accepted union leader, Van Bittner, in the war effort, and in their stand for our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, the commander-in-chief of our great nation," the resolution said.

NEW YORK, July 3—The New York City CIO Council has called upon President Roosevelt, Governor Lehman and Mayor LaGuardia, as popular and respected wartime leaders, to intervene in the state's "confused" political situation.

In a statement declaring that the state must have a 100 per cent Win-the-War governor to succeed Lehman, the Non-Partisan Political Activities Committee of the Council urged that the President, the Governor and the Mayor agree on a candidate who can win the support of labor and progressive forces.

HIT BOOMS

Denouncing the Bennett and Dewey booms, the Council said:

"The Democratic party has admirable gubernatorial material in the persons of United States Senator James M. Mead and Lieutenant Governor Charles Poletti, but the leadership of the party has failed to heed the vote getting qualities of either of them. Among the Republicans only one candidate of serious stature, Wendell L. Willkie, has attraced any labor response." Willkie has announced he will not seek the office.

"Labor and progressive forces of the state can rally to the support of such a candidate and elect him. The same forces can join with such a governor to make this pivotal state reach maximum effectiveness in the war effort," the council said.

"The politics-as-usual which dominate the pre-convention activities of the two major parties is spreading confusion, breeding discouragement and checking the forward march of the war effort. This is particularly true of the John J. Bennett boom among the Democrats and the Thomas E. Dewey boom among the Republicans."

Colorado CIO Blasts Disrupters

Denver, July 3—Moving swiftly to meet the anti-CIO attack of John L. Lewis, which spread last week to Colorado, local CIO leaders met last week with John Brophy, director of CIO industrial union councils, in an emergency conference here.

This was revealed today when Brophy emerged from the conference to issue a blistering attack against the splitting tactics of the Lewis forces in the persons of Frank Hefferly, district 15 president of the United Mine Workers, and Frank Price, who resigned last week as acting president and secretary of the Colorado Industrial Union Council.

Brophy's statement was issued after a three-hour meeting in the headquarters of the CIO Mine, Mill, & Smelter Workers.

BONNACI IN CHARGE

Brophy announced that Frank Bonnaci, who succeeded Hefferly as CIO regional director here, had been placed in full charge of the Colorado council's affairs, with full authority to call a convention of the council and to continue the council's organizational activities which local CIO leaders charged had been "sabotaged" by Hefferly and Price on the instructions of Lewis.

Victory Is Key Issue in Conn. Campaign

New Haven, Conn., July 3—"Winning the war" is the essential issue in Connecticut's coming elections, the state Labor's Non-Partisan League warned union voters this week.

"Alongside of the war issue, everything else becomes secondary in importance,' the statement said. The Connecticut League has endorsed the position of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and condemned the disruptive policies of John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers.

The leaflet urged voters to study the records of each candidate on the basis of his support to President Roosevelt's Victory Program, to the President's seven-point economic program, and to the safeguarding of labor and minority rights.

Set Deadline

San Francisco—(FP)—Attorneys for Harry Bridges have been granted until July 13 to file opening briefs in his habeas corpus petition, first step to carry his deportation order to the U. S. Supreme Court.

Offer N. Y. Transport Program

NEW YORK, July 4—A four-point Victory Program designed to make city transit workers "individually and collectively a greater force in the national victory effort" was presented by the Transport Workers Union, CIO this week.

The program, drawn up by union leaders after discussion with CIO President Philip Murray, is chiefly designed to enable transit workers to improve their efficiency and to enable them "to rear healthy families and themselves to be healthier, more energetic and useful citizens who can make a maximum contribution to the war effort," TWU Secretary Douglas MacMahon said.

FOUR POINTS

The first point deals with elimination of sub-standard pay rates and inequalities among workers who are paid less than others doing identical work, plus wage raises for other groups to make up for the rise in the cost of living.

Second point in the program is a union security clause in the contracts, which is described as essential for "just, harmonious and democratic labor relations" and in line with government policy as shown by recent War Labor Board decisions.

Third is a demand for carrying out of departmental working agreements entered into by the Board of Transportation and the union last December but never put into practice. This, MacMahon said, will "not only eliminate abuses but will also promote harmony and efficiency."

WANT JOINT COUNCIL

The final point calls for a joint management-labor committee to work out ways of conserving materials, promoting civilian defense and passenger safety, and similar parts of the national victory program.

The entire victory program, according to TWU President Michael J. Quill, is based on "the needs of the New York City transit employes and on the needs and policies of our country at war." It was also based, he added, on the chief features of President Roosevelt's seven-point economic program.

Copper Miners Win— WLB OKs Pay Raise

WASHINGTON, July 4—Union security and a wage raise for 6,100 workers at the Phelps-Dodge Copper Corp., of Arizona, organized by the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, were won in a War Labor Board decision handed down here this week.

The decision ordered maintenance of membership plus a 50 cents pay raise and a base rate of $4.90 a day, an increase of 70 cents. It marks the first decision in which all Board members were unanimous for union maintenance. Thomas Kennedy, labor member, dissented on the raise, which he held "is substantially less than facts warrant."

The decision followed a previous Board order which had sent the case back to collective bargaining for a period of 15 days, after which it could be brought to the Board again in case of disagreement. The first order had denied the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers demands for a raise and union security, and thus the second order is a complete reversal.

NAMES MEAN CASH: Each of these signatures brings money to members of the CIO Wholesale & Warehouse local in New York City. They're some of the 100 members who were fired from the F. W. Woolworth warehouse four years ago for union activity. Labor Board action brought them $40,000 back pay—an average of $900 per man.

Murray Urges Steel Pay Raise To Aid War Workers' Morale

Panel Report Recommends $1-a-Day Increase, Union Security in Little Steel

WASHINGTON, July 3 — A three-man fact finding commission of the War Labor Board this week recommended $1-a-day increases and union security for the 175,000 employes of Little Steel.

The recommendations marked a "semi-final" round in the months-long effort of the United Steelworkers of America, headed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, to gain its first contracts with four one-time anti-labor bastions—Bethlehem Steel, Republic Steel, Youngstown Sheet and Tube and Inland Steel.

Shortly after the fact-finding panel submitted its report to the WLB, that agency held two days of public hearings and then moved towards preparation of a final decision on the case.

LIVING COSTS UP

Principal basis of the panel's recommendation for wage increases was the fact that cost of living has risen by 13.3% in the nation's steel towns since the USA-CIO—then known as the Steel Workers Organizing Committee—gained its dime-an-hour wage increase increase in April, 1941. The $1-a-day raise, the panel found, will be necessary to restore the steel workers' purchasing power, and to keep steel industry weekly wage earnings stabilized in line with those of other durable goods industries.

Because the steel industry operates largely on a three-shift basis, opportunities for overtime work are limited, the WLB committee showed.

The steel worker's weekly paycheck, as a result, has slipped 11% below those in the durable goods industry, though in the past it has always been substantially larger.

FIRMS' BIG PROFITS

Busy turning out war goods for the government, the four Little Steel companies are rolling up unprecedented super-profits, the panel found, and can easily afford to pay the CIO union's demanded increase. Bethlehem, for instance, will make $90,000,000 this year even after giving the wage raise, the WLB estimated. The other trio of Little Steel companies will also show heavy earnings.

"It will be noted that in each case the figure (of profits) is substantially greater than any year in the 1931-1940 decade," the recommendation noted.

WASHINGTON, July 3 — "How will it help the war?"

That is the question that must be used as a test on every issue involved in the United Steelworkers' demand for $1-a-day wage increase and union security, Pres. Philip Murray warned a War Labor Board hearing on the Little Steel case this week. Then with a wealth of detail, he proceeded to show that such an increase would be in the public interest, and would enable the steel workers to improve their already splendid "win the war" activities.

"The union has submitted certain requests to these four corporations," Murray said. "It is the firm conviction of the union that requests, if granted, would serve to aid and intensify the national war effort. This was the major objective of the union in submitting the requests.

"We therefore ask the board in considering the merits of the union's case to subject our demands to this question—would granting them aid the war effort or would their denial retard or endanger the war effort?

COMPANIES' POSITION

"On the other hand, the union suggests that the board subject the companies to the same query. Does the adamant position of the companies reflect an endeavor to obtain the maximum production of steel, or constitute a continuation of the industry's policy to adopt a shrewd business program in anticipation of the post war period, regardless of its present effect on the war effort?"

Murray was the lead-off speaker for the USA-CIO at the public hearings. He was followed by Research Director Harold Ruttenberg, who urged WLB adoption of its panel's recommendation for the increase,

Tax Bill Sabotage Charged

WASHINGTON, July 4 — A handful of reactionary and appeasement-minded Congressmen on the House Ways and Means Committee "have been permitted to sabotage the most important section of the country's war economic program," CIO Vice Pres. Reid Robinson, a member of the CIO Tax Committee, declared in a Mutual Broadcasting System network speech on the 1942 tax bill week.

This group, he charged, is responsible for completing a tax bill that not only falls 3.5 billion dollars short of the new taxes we need for an offensive and victory in 1942, but also has saddled the greater part of the burden on the low income groups, while letting the wealthy and the big corporations off lightly.

Robinson, who is a member of the CIO National Committee on Taxation and president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, warned his listeners that the sales tax, while voted down in the committee, is still a serious danger to the victory drive.

The danger lies, he pointed out, in the fact that the 3.5 billion deficit will have to be made up somehow, which will give a signal to sales tax minded Congressmen and the forces behind them.

SALES TAX TALK

Confirming Robinson's warning, newspapers throughout the week were filled with rumors that the sales tax would be brought up again, either on the floor during debate or in later sessions of the Ways and Means group. One paper here carried a story that some Congressmen were planning a poll of the House to "sound out" sentiment on a sales tax of five per cent. Such a tax, it was explained, would produce "approximately the amount by which the committee failed to achieve" the Treasury request.

Robinson stressed the Committee's failure to meet the needs of the new victory tax program, pointing out that it had completely ignored the President's seven-point message calling for high taxes on profits and big incomes, while it stepped up already steep rates on low incomes.

He cited examples to show that the Committee, "while bearing down heavily on the family with little money, was very easy on the well-to-do and the wealthy." This was typified, Robinson showed, by the Committee's action in increasing taxes on a family with $2,400 a year by an added $42 in income tax, while cutting down on a similar family with $5,000 by the sum of $47.

Looking for a Liberal? Rankin Ain't Him!

Washington, July 4—Here's a polltax Congressman who knows a good gravy train when he's on one and believes in being frank about it—including being frank about his contempt for the people.

He's Mississippi's Rep. John E. Rankin, who wrote to CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan that he glories in the polltax that keeps him in office and regards CIO's efforts to abolish it as part of a general scheme "to stir revolution in this country, at a time when the nation is fighting for its very existence."

QUOTES BIDDLE

The whole drive to give votes to the disfranchised workers and farmers of the South is just a "Communist plot" to this overstuffed statesman, who quotes Attorney-General Biddle's anti-Bridges decision in support of the polltax.

What's more, the campaign against anti-Negro discrimination, including the drive to stop Red Cross segregation of blood donations, is a scheme to overthrow the government.

Rankin is "elected" by about five per cent of the voters in his district. The rest cannot vote simply because they can't afford to pay the polltax.

Textile Union Wins South's Biggest Poll

DANVILLE, Va., July 3—The Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills, largest in the world—in 1930 the storm center of one of the most bitter struggles in the turbulent history of Southern textiles—has finally been organized.

The CIO Textile Workers Union of America won the right to represent the 13,500 production workers of the giant mills in the South's biggest NLRB election.

The vote: for TWUA 7,204; for no union, 4,716.

TORIES CAMPAIGNED

The CIO was unopposed on the ballot, but was not unopposed in the election campaign. Three so-called "citizens" groups—the Anti-CIO Association, the Citizens' Committee, and an unidentified group that issued literature in the name of "Business Men of Danville"—sprang up in the week prior to the election and attacked the union by printed literature and numerous radio broadcasts.

The TWUA-CIO campaigned on the basis of wage increases and rate adjustments, vacations with pay, recognition of grievance committees and a signed union agreement.

This is the largest single election in which the TWUA has participated since its creation in March, 1937, as the Textile Workers Organizing Committee. The largest previous election in which the CIO textile union participated and won was in the Wood and Ayer Mills of the American Woolen Company in Lawrence, Mass., in September, 1937, when 11,462 were eligible to vote.

HISTORIC STRIKE

The two units — Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills—form one company, which in 1930, the year of the four-month strike of the AFL United Textile Workers, employed only 4000 workers.

That strike, which has gone down into the annals of the American labor movement as one of the chief struggles of southern workers to organize, began on September 29, 1930, in protest against a wage cut, but troops and starvation ended it four months later.

The Issue in Little Steel

The final decision which the War Labor Board will make in the case of the United Steelworkers of America and "Little Steel" is of vital importance to all labor and to our whole war effort.

The Board now has before it the findings and recommendations of its own panel, which support the union's contention that a dollar a day wage increase and union security are fully justified.

The panel reached its conclusions after months of exhaustive study of all points of view and every phase of the question. Both employer and public members of the panel joined with the labor representative in unanimous findings on the wage question.

After such a careful and impartial study, one would assume that the full Board has little alternative but to uphold the recommendations of its panel. But these recommendations have infuriated tory and financial interests and a noisy campaign has been launched in the press to pressure the Board into reversing them.

The WLB panel found that weekly wages of steel workers are 11 per cent less than in other durable goods industries; that cost of living in steel towns has increased almost 14 per cent in the past year; and that the buying power of steel wages has decreased about 13.3 per cent since the last general wage increase was granted. It found also that the huge profit increases of all four steel companies would permit them to pay the higher wages asked and still retain most substantial profits.

As against the company argument that wage increases cause inflation, the WLB panel pointed out if the national income pie has to be reduced in size, this should affect all groups and not be done by merely making labor's share less than that of capital's.

The panel recommended union security, in the form of maintenance-of-membership, united with the checkoff, on the grounds that union security makes shop conditions more peaceful and eliminates friction; reduces the cost of dues collection, and releases the time of union officials for more concerted effort between union and management to achieve maximum production.

Acceptance of the panel's recommendations will promote the war effort by remedying present gross wage inequalities; by enabling the steel workers to earn enough to maintain their health and efficiency for top production, and by enabling the union to devote its full efforts to all-important war tasks.

It is of urgent importance, therefore, that the War Labor Board be guided by the facts as presented by its panel and stand adamant against the present reactionary pressure campaign which sets selfish profit interests ahead of our national war interests.

Sales Tax Squeeze Play

Although the House Ways and Means Committee recently voted against a Federal sales tax, the danger that this vicious proposal may be enacted is by no means past.

The committee's own tax proposals fall nearly three billion dollars short of supplying the extra tax revenue asked by the administration. So now the campaign for a sales tax has been renewed, both in Congress and throughout the big business press, on the pretext that it is needed to make up the tax shortage.

The purpose of this campaign is to make the committee reconsider its action on the sales tax, or failing that, to push for a sales tax amendment from the floor of Congress.

It is imperative that the full amount of tax revenue asked by the administration be raised. But a sales tax is both unnecessary for this purpose and the worst possible way of raising the extra revenue. It is opposed by the administration, by organized labor, by farm groups and by all who want fair taxes based on ability to pay.

The extra revenue can easily be raised by substituting the U. S. Treasury proposals for those of the House committee. The committee has fallen short by refusing to tax profits as much as asked, by refusing to tax tax-exempt securities, by rejecting compulsory joint income tax returns for married couples, and by generally lowering the burden on wealth and luxuries, while it increased the burden on low incomes.

Let your representatives in Congress know labor is 100 per cent opposed to the sales tax and other soak-the-poor taxation, and wants a real victory tax program based on ability to pay, as proposed by the Treasury and the CIO.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THIS is a story of two maggots. They met for the first time on a WPA worker's shovel. But before their chance acqaintance could ripen into friendship, a twist of the worker's wrist threw them hurtling through the air — in different directions.

The first maggot landed on a pile of rotting garbage and manure—a veritable maggot paradise. He ate his fill—and then some more, and settled down to a luxurious existence of feasting and sleeping.

But one day, when he could eat no more, this maggot decided to take a stroll. After he had journeyed some feet, he heard a weak voice coming from a crack in some cement; "Hey, you, help! Get me out of here!" And looking down, he saw the second maggot, thin and hungry-looking and struggling to get out of his barren hole.

When the second maggot saw his former acquaintance looking down with smug indifference, he began to upbraid him: "Why, you big, fat capitalist, how did you get so plump and prosperous?"

That's as far as that story goes. But if we put the parable in modern dress we'd find the first maggot talking through a host of newspaper publishers, columnists, economists and politicians.

They'd be telling the second maggot that his conditions should be frozen for the duration, that his demands were selfish and exorbitant, that they threatened inflation, endangered the system of free enterprise, etc., etc.

Without organization the second maggot might lose courage and lack statistical arguments to answer all this high-falutin' stuff. But still he'd know darned well that all he wanted was to get a fair break and more opportunity to increase his usefulness to himself and to society.

All of this is a round-about introduction to the important public hearings of the War Labor Board on CIO demands for a dollar a day increase and union security for the 175,000 employes of the "Little Steel" companies.

The No. 1 maggot crowd still have the advantage in money-power. Their propaganda has flooded the press and has even been abetted by government officials like Leon Henderson.

Supported by bushels of learned briefs, it has sought to create the impression that the steel workers ask an unfair and selfish advantage, which will cause more inflation; that their demands for union security will rock the industrial boat, destroy the right to work, etc.

Fortunately, the steel workers are now strongly organized. Their leaders, economists and legal talent are fully a match for those of the employers—and they have been able to meet every argument with convincing factual evidence.

For months a Board panel—consisting of an employer member, a labor member and a public representative—has heard both sides and studied the thousands of pages of evidence and argument presented. Its impartial findings, now being considered by the full Board, throw a flood of light on major economic issues of the day.

Wages and living costs. Contrary to the propaganda about labor "selfishness," the panel found the buying power of steel wages has declined 13.3 per cent since the last general change of steel wage rates. On this basis, the workers are entitled to an even higher increase than they asked.

Profits. The panel found the four steel corporations made higher profits in 1941 than ever in their history, and can easily afford the dollar increase asked by the union. And Pres. Murray showed that the corporation executives last year got boosts in their salaries (which run into hundreds of thousands of dollars) of from 30 per cent to more than 50 per cent.

Inflation. The panel found that labor's share of national income will seriously decrease in 1942, if wage increases are not granted. With national income increasing 21 per cent in 1942, payrolls should increase 21 per cent, instead of the anticipated 11 per cent, if labor's proportion is not to be diminished. To deny adjustment of wage inequalities means making labor's share less than that of capital, instead of fairly cutting the total income of all groups to check inflation.

Union security. The panel found that labor unions "perform an important social function"; that there is no violation of personal liberty in union security; that union security reduces industrial friction and frees unions to concentrate their energies on increasing production to win the war.

"WIN THE WAR": Help bring victory by ending racial discrimination in industry was the theme of the rally held in New York last week by th Negro Labor Victory Committee. Shown here are War Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt and Mrs. Conery Miller, mother of the Pearl Harbor naval hero. In the background is Mrs. Joseph Curran, wife of the CIO Vice President.

Murray, McNutt Laud Negroes' Role In People's War

NEW YORK, July 3—Greetings from CIO Pres. Philip Murray featured the sessions of the "Negro Labor Victory Committee" conference just concluded here under the chairmanship of Ferdinand Smith, secretary of the Natl. Maritime Union, and and Charles A. Collins.

The meeting was addressed by Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, who told the delegates that "from Crispus Attucks to Dorie Miller, who so valiantly used a machine gun at Pearl Harbor, men of your race have stood shoulder to shoulder in the cause of freedom."

"The CIO fights for equal treatment of all workers, regardless of race, creed or color," Murray wired to the conference. "It abhors all doctrines of racial and religious discrimination. Particularly at the present time is the CIO fighting for equality of treatment of all workers, Negro and white, in war employment, in vocational training and in the armed forces."

PEOPLE'S WAR

"This is a people's war," Ferdinand Smith said in his address. "The people must be given an opportunity to participate in it fully. All of them must be given the opportunity to help elect their representatives. The Negro people must be given a true voice in the affairs of the nation."

Chicagoans Honor Negro CIO Leader

Chicago, July 3—Several hundred leading Chicago citizens gathered at the Good Shepherd Community Center last night to honor Willard S. Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employes of America, newly-affiliated CIO union.

Townsend became first Negro to be a member of the CIO Executive Board when the UTSEA joined the CIO last month after having been unaffiliated since its formation in 1937.

The union president told the meeting that the union had three motives in affiliating:

"The first was a desire to contribute whatever little power and influence we have to the important job of maintaining the vigor of the CIO, the most progressive and enlightened labor movement in the world today.

"Secondly, we wanted to express our confidence and the faith of the masses of Negroes in the war-time labor leadership of Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO.

"Thirdly, and these latter considerations were probably the most important, the future progress of our organization like that of the millions, both Negro and white, depends largely upon our ability to make ourselves an inseparable part of the labor movement."

Wage Boost Would Aid War Morale, WLB Told

and by General Counsel Lee Pressman, who reiterated the need for union security in the plants of Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown and Inland. They were followed by spokesmen for the various companies.

The steel union leader reminded the WLB that the organization has been passing through a "classic cooling-off" period of nine months since negotiations began, and of four months since the case went to the government agency.

Recalling that steel is the foundation industry of the nation's entire war program, Murray noted that the wages and security of the workers in that industry "vitally affect the problem of maintaining and improving both the morale and physical well-being of those who, through their blood, sweat and toil in the plants, produce the steel for war.

"Fancy and ingenious theories may satisfy the arm chair chart experts in Washington—but will they result in determined, healthy steel workers, hell-bent on out-producing the Axis powers?"

RAPS OPA LAXITY

Murray recalled that wage-freezing anti-labor legislation was defeated in Congress last year, and that the War Labor Board was created to permit collective bargaining to continue throughout the war.

Nevertheless, he added, the Office of Price Administration has been carrying the ball for the wage-freezers, and has "initiated a campaign to combat any wage increases for the workers of the nation, regardless how justified they might be.

"To our knowledge, the OPA never demonstrated any particular concern about the merits of the specific case involving this union," he added. The "time and energy" of OPA officials have been so devoted to fighting the USA-CIO wage demand that "control of cost of living through price-fixing and democratic and equitable rationing received slight if any attention.'

A recent OPA proposal that wage increases be limited to a maximum of 5 per cent was described as "intolerant and unfair."

BOSSES BENEFIT

While the steel companies trot out all sorts of fancy arguments to justify their opposition to wage increases, they have handed out glossy salary boosts to top executives, Murray showed.

Tom Girdler of Republic Steel won a 56.3 per cent increase to $275,000 in 1941, the union leader pointed out, while Eugene Grace of Bethlehem—who sent a long statement to the WLB denouncing the union demands — received $375,000 in 1941—a 31.7 per cent increase over the previous year.

"It might not be amiss," Murray said, "to ask these executives whether they have given support to the President's call for a $25,000 ceiling on personal income.

"The union does not contend that all items in the President's economic program must be accomplished before wages can be stabilized," Murray concluded. "The union accepts the program in full.

"But we point out, and we believe properly so, that the present economic situation is thoroughly inconsistent with the objective of the President. Today it is only the workers, those who can least afford to bear the burden of the severe rise in the cost of living, who have been called upon to make the severe sacrifices."

Urge Steel Pay Raise

these: That such an increase would reduce governmental revnue and lead to inflationary borrowing by the government.

"The panel finds," the report states, "that if a wage increase, otherwise proper, is withheld because of its effect on governmental revenues per se, such witholding would involve an unauthorized tax on the workers."

On the question of inflation, the Panel discounted company arguments that an increase in steel wages spreads like wild fire throughout the other industries in the country, and declared:

"The panel believes that general economic conditions are the principal causes of changes in wage rates, rather than the effect of any specific change in a particular industry."

At the same time the panel's report demolished the companies' arugment that the wage boost should be withheld on the basis that the government would therefore be deprived of the excess profits taxation.

HIT TAX ALIBI

"Profit taxes represent the government's opinion of the intent to which the government should share in the net profits of business after all other expenses, including labor costs, have been deducted," the panel asserted.

"To propose that wages should be affected by profit taxes is to propose that labor's return should be conditioned by the government's impost on industry. The panel believes that this neither can nor should be the case. . . ."

The wage recommendations were unanimously signed by the three panel members: Chairman Arthur Meyer, head of the New York State Mediation Board, representing the public; Richard Frankensteen of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, representing labor; and Cyrus Ching of the U. S. Rubber Co., representing employers.

The recommendation for union security, however, found Ching dissenting from the majority assertion that maintenance of membership and the check-off would substantially improve labor relations in Little Steel's score of plants, and permit the workers' representatives to devote a greater proportion of their time to affairs directly related to the vigorous prosecution of the war.

UNION'S VITAL FUNCTION

"The functions of this union, in particular, are today of vital significance and its maintenance is socially desirable," the WLB panel majority declared.

"Union security, in the form of maintenance of membership, united with the check-off, would:

"(a.) make shop conditions more peaceful by diminishing friction and eliminating the solicitation of dues.

"(b.) reduce the cost of dues collection and benefit the union accordingly.

"(c.) release the time of union officials and thus permit frequent contact with both union membership and management addressed to the elimination of grievances and to a concerted effort to achieve maximum production."

Victory Food Plan Sent to FDR

CHICAGO, July 4—Declaring that no strike adjustment machinery exists for agriculture, Pres. Donald Henderson of the CIO's Cannery and Agricultural Workers today presented a "Food for Victory" program to Pres. Roosevelt designed to guarantee full and continuous production.

Many big commercial farmers still flatly refuse to submit labor disputes to arbitration, Henderson said, thus holding up production by provoking stoppages. He urged President Roosevelt to deny such growers any federal benefits and to order their farms taken over, as is done when industrial concerns hamper war production by refusing to deal with their workers.

EIGHT POINTS

Henderson's plan contained an eight point program, which would send labor disputes to the U. S. Conciliation Department, deny benefits to recalcitrant employers, set up a Labor Division in the Agricultural Department, to which cases not settled by conciliation would be sent, provide machinery for taking over farms, and to keep labor disputes out of the Agricultural Department proper.

"We submit this program as a necessary one in order to maintain in agriculture a successful constructive settlement of disputes such as now prevails in the field of industrial relations," Henderson said in submitting the plan.

Back Murray

Chicago, July 3 — The executive board of the CIO Canners & Agricultural Workers, winding up a three-day session here, voted full support to the win-the-war policies of CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

The board voted to hold the union's fourth constitutional convention in Chicago October 19-24.

Recommend Security in Shipyards

Washington, July 3 — Recommendations for union security and the dues checkoff in eight Bethlehem shipyards under contract to the CIO, were proposed here by a three-man panel of the War Labor Board.

The dispute before the WLB arose over terms in the union's master agreement with the company. The employer representative on the panel did not join in the recommendation for a maintenance-of-membership clause, but joined with the others in suggesting a number of improvements in working conditions and vacations with pay.

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS OF AMERICA

Los Angeles CIO Asks Equal Rights For 'War Women'

LOS ANGELES, July 4—Under the auspices of the Los Angeles CIO Council, the first trade union women in industry conference was held here Sunday, and went on record for national registration of woman-power, equal pay for equal work, more job training and other measures to mobilize and protect the nation's vast new army of production soldiers, affectionately known as the lipstick brigade.

One hundred and seventy-five delegates from CIO locals, including aircraft, steel, rubber, eletrical, die casting and food processing were determined that there should be no repetition of the blunders of 1918 when women were used to create a fluid labor market and to beat down wage scales.

They convened with representatives of the internationals and auxiliary councils to consider the problems of women workers, including their preparation for entering industry, family responsibilities and occupational hazards.

THREE PANELS

Following this meeting a trio of discussion panels adopted a realistic program to cope with these problems and also a plan to bring new workers into the CIO.

Paul Pinsky, California State research chief and key speaker, pointed out that by the end of '42 it was expected that 20 per cent of all workers would be women, citing the increase from 12,000 now employed to an expected 65,000 by the year's end.

PROGRAM

The program included an increase in free training facilities, more careful selection of training class instructors, and reiterated the CIO policy against discrimination on account of race, creed or color.

To safeguard women at work, it called for equal pay for equal work, revision of the state sanitary code rest periods, more government surveys of occupational diseases and accidents.

To lessen family responsibilities it urged government and management to provide restaurant and child care for families of working women; that adequate wages be paid permitting paid household help to minimize work in the home; that war price control be rigidly enforced, rationing extended; and specific recommendations for child care, the government to assume responsibility for providing supervision of children from infancy to sixteen.

It urged that playgrounds be kept open with meals provided at nominal cost; that surveys be made in plants and that labor take up with management the care of children of employed mothers as allowed under cost-plus contract provisions.

"RED CROSS BABY: A Chinese nurse holds this baby in an American Red Cross rice sack as a blanket. Red Cross has sent large food supplies to our allies in the Far East.

Biddle Ruling Twists Facts, Says WLB Member

WASHINGTON, July 3—Wayne Morse, public representative on the War Labor Board and long a labor arbitrator on the West Coast, thinks Biddle's decision against Harry Bridges is "pregnant with the twins of twisted logic and unsound public policy"—and doesn't mind saying so.

While declaring that he preferred "to wait for a court decision before passing final judgment," Morse wrote to Eugene Paton, secretary-treasurer of the International Longshoremens and Warehousemens Union that Bridges heads, branding the decision.

"I have read the decision as printed in the New York Times," he said, "and frankly, on the basis of my knowledge of the case, I think it is an unsound decision and one which certainly should be reviewed by the courts before final determination.

"However, I have not had the advantage of studying the complete record of the case as Attorney General Biddle has, and therefore, I prefer to wait for court review of the decision before passing a final judgment on Biddle's decision, which, on its face, appears to be pregnant with the twins of twisted logic and unsound public policy."

Morse also said that the case should reach the Supreme Court because of "the nature of the legal issues involved," adding: "To my way of thinking, they are fundamental issues which challenge long established principles in our form of government."

Detroit LNPL Severs Ties With Lewis

Detroit, July 3 — The John L. Lewis-dominated national organization of Labor's Non-Partisan League was severed from all connection with Wayne County Labor's Non-Partisan League by a unanimous convention vote here today.

The Wayne County group went on record in full support of CIO Pres. Philip Murray, and of President Roosevelt and his foreign policy.

The "Murray slate" of officers, headed by the incumbent president, Tracy M. Doll and Bennett swept into office by an overwhelming majority.

OPA Names CIO Group On Council

Washington, July 4—Creation of a Labor Policy Committee in the Office of Price Administration was announced here this week. The committee will work with the OPA on problems of rationing, price control, rent etc.

The three CIO members are; Emil Rieve, president of the Textile Workers Union of America, Sherman Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers, and Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union.

Douglas Bars Racial Rules

Los Angeles, July 4—No discrimination on place of work, kind of job, wages, etc., will be allowed in the huge Douglas aircraft works, according to an order issued by company head Donald Douglas.

The order came on the eve of a conference called under government auspices to seek stabilization of aircraft wage rates. The order forbade discrimination on racial, religious, political or trade union grounds.

Insurance Agents Set for Metro Talks

New York, July 3—Certified as sole bargaining agency for 2,100 Metropolitan Life Insurance agents, Local 30 of the CIO Office & Professional Workers today prepared for contract parleys with the big corporation.

The union gained an 1,181-778 majority in a recent election. Four years ago Metropolitan forced a long court fight by refusing to recognize Local 30 after it had won an election. Today, however, the union is confident that the company will not only recognize it but bargain collectively.

Leon Berney, UOPWA national insurance director, predicted friendly bargaining sessions "because the leaders of both the company and the union are primarily concerned with making their every action advance the war effort for victory over the fascist Axis."

Praising the spirit of the union insurance agents, CIO Organization Director Haywood wired the local: "Assure them the CIO is fully behind them in their efforts to secure what is their right—a union contract."

WOMEN'S CORNER

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

A national campaign for pressure on Congress to support the President's seven-point program for gearing our national economy to victory was launched this week by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO. Nation-wide circulation of a petition to Congress in support of the President's program will be the immediate goal of the campaign.

"To open the second front and carry on to victory, the country needs not only a military plan but an economic plan, which will assure the maximum production and the biggest morale," the Auxiliary Washington News Letter says. "Such a plan has been given to us by President Roosevelt, Commander in Chief of our armed forces."

The News Letter outlines a three-point auxiliary program to effectuate the President's seven points: First, pressure on Congress for legislation to put the program into effect, especially for an adequate tax bill based on ability to pay. Second, pressure on Leon Henderson, Director of OPA, to put teeth into existing laws by extending rationing and training housewives to aid enforcement of price ceilings. Third, immediate work to defeat Congressmen who are sabotaging the President's program and to elect a win-the-war Congress.

"We feel that the President's seven-point program is the economic foundation for victory," the petition to Congressmen says in part. "That program is a single, interrelated program. No point on that program can serve the purpose for which it is intended unless the whole program is enacted. To delay action on the program is to delay victory."

WAR RELIEF GUIDE ISSUED

"Money Saves Lives" is the title of the new CIO Auxiliary War Relief Guide issued this week by the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief. Prepared by the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, and illustrated by Harriet Glazier, United Federal Workers Auxiliary member, the leaflet explains the importance of the War Relief Committee program and makes suggestions for money raising affairs by auxiliaries. It is being distributed free to all auxiliaries by the Auxiliary Congress at 1407 L Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

The leaflet points out that union members are already making their contribution of an hour's pay a nomth to the CIO War Relief Campaign, and urges the women to appeal especially in their affairs to friends and neighbors who are not already contributing.

Financial aid of $50 a month for organizing expenses of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Newspaper Guild was voted by the Guild Convention in Denver last week. Auxiliary leaders hailed the action of the convention as tangible evidence of the growing understanding by the union of the importance of auxiliary work. The Guild also established an auxiliary committee of the national executive board to assist in building the national auxiliary which already has 30 locals.

Mrs. Faye Collins of Detroit was unanimously elected president of the Newspaper Guild Auxiliary succeeding Mrs. Katherine Earnshaw of New York, who declined to run again. Mrs. Mabel Pollock of New York fills the newly-created post of executive secretary-treasurer.

PM Expert Gives Buyers Tips on Savings

A shopping guide aimed to teach the consumer how to get all the value out of his dollar in these strenuous war days, has just been published by Modern Age Books, Inc., under the title, "How to Buy More for Your Money."

The author, Sidney Margolius, shopping news editor of the newspaper PM, has condensed much valuable information he has gleaned in the course of his shopping rounds for PM readers into the 177 pages of this book. It is offered as a contribution to the war economy under which Americans must now live.

"By buying efficiently and using to full advantage, you are not only helping yourself and your family, you are fulfilling your patriotic duty to your country—your duty to maintain the morale and well-being of your family, keep prices down, and conserve the resources of democracy," Margolius tells his readers.

TEN PRINCIPLES

Ten principles of smart shopping for the guidance of careful buyers, and advice as to where and when to buy various kinds of articles are given. A value guide, food shipping tips and an explanation of what the new excise taxes mean to the consumer are also included.

The book concludes with a special shopping guide for the New York City area, explaining how to take advantage of this huge market for savings and warning the unguided shopper against some "sharp practices" in the town.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

On Tuesday of this week I conferred with international and local representatives of the UAW-CIO and the FEWOC-CIO in Chicago. An agreement was arrived at to allow both organizations to proceed to complete organization and seek elections at the John Deere plants in a manner that will not conflict with one another but allow the most wholesome cooperation to prevail.

Field Represenative John Hindmarch has been assigned to the Rock Island-Moline area to coordinate all activities in these election drives. Both organizations are to be commended on their spirit of cooperation to bring about this understanding.

Plan New Offices

James P. Dean, representative of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee in Oklahoma, has been assigned as CIO Regional Director in that state. He will establish offices soon.

Representative James Ritchie, who has been working in St. Louis and East St. Louis, has been assigned as CIO Regional Director in the Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minnesota, areas. We are planning to set up a regional office there. Francis P. Carmichael has been assigned Assistant Regional Director in charge of the New England states, other than Connecticut. Edward McCrone had heretofore been assigned as subregional director for Connecticut, where he is now establishing an office.

Regional Director Paul R. Christopher reports that the maintenance-of-way employes of the Smoky Mountain Railroad Company in Knoxville, Tennessee, have voted to affiliate with the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, CIO.

Election Victories

The United Shoe Workers drive under the direction of Walter Harris chalks up two more election victories, as follows:

Byron Plant, International Shoe Co., Manchester, New Hampshire:

CIO	198
Against	185

Hamilton Shoe & Walsh Shoe Co., St. Louis, Missouri:

CIO	159

UWOC Representative James L. Daugherty reports an election victory at the Southern California Gas with a vote of 83 for CIO as against 31. Negotiations affecting five local unions and his company will commence very soon.

CIO Regional Director H. C. Fremming reports a victory for CIO at the Moore Lowry Flour Mill, Coffeyville, Kansas, with a result of 28 votes for CIO to 18 for the AFL.

President Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union advises that the election at the Dan River Cotton Mills in Danville, Virginia, was won by a vote of 7,204 for the union, and 4,718 against. This was an outstanding victory and the Textile Workers Union expresses thanks for the assistance of Organizer Edmund F. Ryan, Sr., who, they say, aided immeasurably in the successful conclusion of this campaign.

Regional Director Hodson in Wilmington, Delaware, reports that the United Rubber Workers Local 184 has just renewed a contract with the Electric Hose and Rubber Co., covering 750 employes. The contract grants a 10 per cent general wage increase and contains many other fine provisions.

Martin A. Watkins, Representative, reports an election victory at the Federal Chemical Company in Nashville, Tennessee, where the employes voted unanimously for the CIO. Fifty-six workers went to the pools and no votes were cast against the union. Harry Doty was the organizer in charge at this plant.

Contracts Negotiated

Regional Director Frank Bender in Baltimore advises the completion of negotiations with the U. S. Printing & Lithograph Co., Baltimore plant, for the United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers. The contract provides for an increase in the starting rates for female help from 33 cents to 40½ cents per hour, common labor rates from 45 cents to 55 cents per hour and a general increase of 2½ cents per hour, maintenance of membership and a preferential seniority for the union members. Considering the condition of this industry, whose business has been greatly reduced by priorities, this is a real gain.

Brother Bender also advised that the Fur and Leather Workers Union have completed negotiations with the Chas. S. Walton Co., receiving a 10 cents per hour general increase, union shop, sick leave with pay and many other improvements.

George Craig, CIO Regional Director in Philadelphia, reports a CIO victory in the election held at the Hemmelein & Baily Incorporated Company, as follows: Leather Workers, 82; no union, 35.

Brother Craig also advises that a council has been set up, known as the Lower Bucks County Industrial Union Council, Bristol, Pennsylvania.

The Oil Workers International Union report two election victories, as follows:

El Dorado, Kansas, Elrico Refining Co., CIO, 54; no union, 32; Mt. Pleasant, Texas, Taclo Asphalt Co., CIO, 36; against, 30.

Firm Fights WLB Hearing In Ward Case

Washington, July 4—The dispute between Montgomery Ward & Company and the CIO United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, involving 5,500 workers in Chicago will be taken up by the War Labor Board, Chairman William H. Davis announuced this week.

In criticizing the company's objections to having the WLB take jurisdiction, Wayne L. Morse, public member of the Board said that such an attitude amounted to a belief that the company "should be allowed in these times to fight out with the labor organizations in its plants its differences over such issues as wages, conditions of employment, union security and arbitration machinery."

The panel reported that a strike in the Chicago house would likely close down other units of the company throughout the nation where some 65,000 to 70,000 workers are employed.

British Miners Win Pay Raise, Natl. Control Board

LONDON, July 3—(ALN)—The 700,000 miners of Britain, who for the past months have been carrying out an intensive "more-coal-for-winning-the-war" campaign, were this week rewarded by a government tribunal with a half crown (50 cents) per shift wage increase which will net them $100,000,000 a year.

In addition, the tribunal, headed by Lord Greene, granted a national minimum wage instead of the existing minimum which varies in different parts of the country. The miners have been demanding a national minimum for twenty years.

The tribunal further acceded to the demands of the miners by setting up a National Coal Board to control the industry.

The National Executive of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain had urged the creation of such a State Board, declaring that the present serious underproduction of coal was due mainly to the inefficiency of private owners.

"I've appealed to the miners to spare no effort to step up production now that we've won such a victory," Will Lawther, president of the MFGB, said today.

"Now that the coal industry has been put on a state basis, the miners must keep at their jobs and not strike when they've got a grievance. The miners will work the skin off their fingers to provide coal for winning the war."

LABOR DIRECTOR

The chief position on the new National Coal Board will be that of Director of Labor, who will control the allocation of workers in the nation's pits. Reliably informed quarters say that the post will be offered to Ebby Edwards, general-secretary of the Miners Federation. Edwards started life as a pitboy and has worked most of his life underground.

If he accepts the job, there will be a ballot to elect his successor. Arthur Horner, president of the 220,000-strong South Wales Miners Federation, is the hot favorite. The MFGB general-secretary automatically sits on the General Council of the Trades Union Congress.

Wallace Talk Offered Free

Chicago—(FP)—Ninety thousand copies of Vice President Wallace's "century of the common man" speech have been printed and distributed free by the Chicago Sun, morning daily published by Marshall Field.

The Sun also announced that it will send the reprint, in an eight-page leaflet, in any quantity to any union in the U. S., free of charge, and all postal charges paid. Unions may write The Sun for the leaflet at 400 W. Madison St., Chicago, Ill.

Indian Union Leaders Plan Visit to USSR

London, July 3—(ALN)—A delegation of leaders of India's trade unions, peasant organizations and constituent branches of the National Congress is leaving in a fortnight for the Soviet Union in order to establish closer relations between the two countries and aid the United Nations' war effort, this correspondent has learned exclusively from high British labor officials.

The delegation will take to Moscow gifts for Red Armymen from Indian workers. In the meantime, Indian trade unions are organizing a fund for the Russian Red Cross.

WELL-KNOWN LEADERS

Jawaharlal Nehru was to have headed the group, but owing to the intensified political situation he is unable to do so. Instead his sister, Mrs. Vijayalakshmi Pandit, will be a member of the delegation, which will be headed by Bankim Mukhergi, All-India Trades Union Congress leader; Zayied Zahier, well-known Congress official, and Dutta Mazumdar, leader of the Bengal Labor Party.

The All-India TUC, which unites all sections of Indian labor with the exception of the small Ahmedabad Labor Association, controlled by Gandhi, has long supported the United Nations' war against the Axis.

SUPPORT WAR

A TUC resolution last December stated:

"The war which the Soviet Union and Great Britain are jointly waging against Hitler Fascism, with the assistance of the United States of America, is one and indivisible and can no longer be regarded by the working-class or the people of India as an imperialist war to which they could afford to take a neutral or hostile attitude.

"The victory of the progressive forces now becomes the pre-condition for the achievement of independence and complete democracy in the country."

Race Barriers Fall In South Africa

CAPETOWN, July 3—(ALN)—Two of the most significant events in South African history, of importance not only to labor but to the development of this dominion's war effort, took place here this week.

Unions composed of native Africans and other non-Europeans, it is announced by the South African Trades and Labor Council, will now be recognized by the Ministry of Labor. Hitherto only unions with white members, mainly the craft unions in skilled trades, enjoyed the privileges of collective bargaining.

"As an experiment," according to Col. Deneys Reitz, Minister of Native Affairs, the notorious Pass Laws, which have operated against the formation of African unions in the northern provinces, have been abandoned.

EQUALITY DRIVE

These actions are expected to give further impetus to the campaign for equality for Africans in industry and the armed services. They will counteract the extensive propaganda which has been carried on among Africans by defeatists and Axis agents, and will strengthen the position of those who advocate mobilizing the native populations in other sections of the British Empire, including India.

Behind the meager announcement of the government decisions, which have already had a marked effect on the membership figures of unions in basic industry, is a long campaign fought by small, active minorities within the South African Trades and Labor Council and the Cape Federation of Labor Unions.

In conjunction with a handful of liberals in Cape Parliment they have recognized that South Africa could not contribute effectively to the allied war effort while 7,000,000 of its 9,500,000 population were denied the right of organization.

Under the Industrial Conciliation Act, employers were specifically forbidden to carry on collective bargaining with unions made up of African workers.

Russian, Chinese Armies Hailed by CIO Head; More Relief Funds Asked

WASHINGTON, July 4—The CIO joins with Pres. Roosevelt and Premier Churchill when they "recognize and applaud the Russian resistance to the main attack being made by Germany, and we rejoice in the magnificent resistance of the Chinese army," CIO Pres. Murray told an audience of 16,000 at a Russian War Relief rally here.

"We must have confidence in our military leaders," he said. "What steps they are planning to relieve pressure on the eastern front must remain military secrets until executed.

"However, it would seem reasonable to expect that in the not too distant future, all will not be quiet on the western front."

Murray spoke on the same platform with William Batt of the War Production Board; Paul Robeson, the famous Negro singer; Ivy Litvinov, wife of Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinov; and others. The meeting, held near the Lincoln Memorial, was Washingtons first big mass rally for Russian War Relief week, and first step in raising a quota of $100,000 for the $6,000,000 sought.

ROBESON SINGS

Robeson's songs, including a number of Russian folk songs, were prefaced with a brief speech in which he told of his admiration for the Soviet army and of the equality of all races and nationalities in the USSR.

"Britain and Russia have signed a 20-year alliance," Murray said. "Russia and the U. S. have a lease-lend agreement promising full support in arms and all other supplies; and it goes without saying that this pledge of mutual assistance will take the form of acts rather than written agreements.

"It takes no great imagination to appreciate the welcome that would be accorded British and American troops in Norway, in the Netherlands or in France by those friendly people."

WALLACE SPEECH

Murray lashed out at Hitler barbarism, accusing the Axis of seeking "not to right wrongs but to enslave a world; to destroy Christianity—yes to destroy the very name of God."

He quoted from Vice President Wallace's speech of a few weeks ago, in which Wallace said: "We who live in the U. S. may think there is nothing very revolutionary about freedom of religion, freedom of expression and freedom from the fear of secret police.

"But when we begin to think about the significance of freedom from want for the average man, then we know that the revolution of the last 150 years has not been completed, either here in the U. S. or in any other nation in the world. We know that this revolution cannot stop until freedom from want has actually been attained."

CIO Greetings On War Stand Sent to China

Washington, July 3—Greetings to the people of China on the fifth anniversary of the Japanese invasion, were sent today by CIO President Philip Murray.

The message, together with others from prominent Americans, are being transmitted by the United China Relief.

"As the fifth anniversary of China's stirring resistance dawns, I am proud to salute those marvelous fighters who have been waging our war for so long with so little help," Murray said.

TAUGHT US LESSON

"The Chinese have taught us a lesson in fortitude. We won't forget it.

"They have also hastened the ultimate downfall of the fascist powers by exacting a terrible price from the Japanese for territorial gains. But in so doing they have suffered terribly themselves.

"We shouldn't forget that, nor should we let anything stand in the way of getting help to them. American labor is already doing its part to help, and will do more in time to come."

Guild Raps Bridges Order

Denver, July 4—Final actions of the ninth convention of the American Newspaper Guild included a resolution urging international union unity against Hitler and another protesting the deportation order against Harry Bridges.

In addition, the convention outlined a war activities program for the union, called for greater labor participation in government war agencies, condemned John L. Lewis as "a voice of Hitler" and supported President Roosevelt's seven-point victory economic program.

The delegates also voted financial aid to the Guild Womens' Auxiliary, of which Mrs. Fay Collins is president.

Utah CIO Asks Unity

Provo, Utah, July 4—Unity of all workers for victory over Hitlerism was the keynote of the sixth annual convention of the state CIO Council, just concluded here.

John Brophy, director of CIO Councils, made the keynote speech, in which he vigorously attacked the disruptive work of John L. Lewis and called for all-out support of CIO President Philip Murray and the war effort.

The convention passed resolutions urging more organization of unorganized workers, protesting the deportation order against Harry Bridges, calling for a second front in Europe, urging taxes based on ability to pay, and supporting the CIO Committee for Allied War Relief.

CIO Daily Held Needed

Detroit, July 4—The CIO needs a daily labor paper to cut through the lies and distortions of the commercial press, the Michigan state CIO said in a resolution at its recent convention here.

Leaders Back Russian Relief

New York, July 4—Messages of support from Philip Murray, William Green and A. F. Whitney are quoted in "This Is Our Russian Front—Labor Must Back It Up"—a new leaflet addressed to unions by Russian War Relief, Inc.

The leaflet, handsomely laid out in two colors with illustrations showing the Soviet army and people at work beating Hitler, quotes Pres. Murray's message of acceptance when he joined the Board of Directors of Russian War Relief.

"No one can fail to admire the heroism of the Russian army and people in repelling Nazi barbarism. The 5,000,000 men and women of the CIO are determined to help their valiant allies in every practical way by working, fighting, giving."

Your Donations Help:

'Words Can't Express It . . ."

WASHINGTON, July 3—The CIO's a friend indeed to the families of AFL workers taken prisoners by the Japs at Wake and Guam Islands.

"Words can't express our gratitude and appreciation," was the way one hard-pressed woman described her thanks to Chairman Irving Abramson of the CIO War Relief Committee.

Funds collected through "hour's pay a month" donations from union members have been used to help the families of these men as well as to assist American and foreign relief drives.

LETTER OF THANKS

"A short time ago your representative called upon us but we never realized anything would materialize from the interview. We were very much surprised to receive your letter containing the check. Words cannot express our gratitude and appreciation for the kindness shown to us.

"Since my husband has been taken prisoner by the Japanese, it has worked a hardship upon my family. There have been times this past winter when I felt an advantage had been taken, since I was a woman alone with a family. For this reason we are especially grateful for the kindness shown.

"The money has paid in full our taxes, an item that has been a worry to us. We realize that you are an organization of great influence while we are just "common folks" but we want to express our gratitude for the very great kindness shown."

COMMITTEE MEETS

To discuss allocations of funds already collected and a program of co-operation with other relief agencies, including Russian, British, China Relief, and the Red Cross, members of the National CIO War Relief Committee met this week in Washington with regional directors from all over the country. President Murray complimented the Committee and its regional directors on what he termed a "splendid job in organizing the CIO drive for war relief funds," and stated that he would assist in every way to intensify the campaign of the Committee.

Funds for the drive are increasing daily. Members of the Newspaper Guild in the New York Daily Mirror office who just won a wage increase through negotiations conducted by the union celebrated by sending the CIO War Relief Committee a check for $700, representing the whole of the first week's raise.

BIG GIFTS

Other unions in the New York City area contributing during the same week were the National Maritime Union which sent in the first $5,000 of a $25,000 donation, the balance to be forthcoming within a few weeks; and a New Jersey local of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers which contributed $5,950 through donations of 50 cents from each member for the past month, with regular contributions to follow monthly.

Furniture Union, Local 78-B, added another $1,500 to the totals it has donated for relief, and Bedding Local 140 of the same International contributed another $1,000. The United Office & Professional Workers, who have carried on an active campaign among poorly paid employes, sent in another $2,500 to the Committee.

Following the endorsement of the CIO War Relief Committee program by the recent convention of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes in Chicago, and expression of wholehearted approval by Samuel Wolchok, President of the International, the organization sent in $3,800. The United Shoe Workers of America, Joint Council No. 13, contributed $1,500, and the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Local 1225, donated $637.

MONTHLY PLEDGE

A recent contract negotiated by the United Shoe Workers in the St. Louis area with the International Shoe Company, affecting nine plants and 6,800 members, made provision for the collection of a monthly pledge of an hour's pay.

The employer agreed to regard the voluntary war relief donations of the members as an assessment, and to check it off the pay and turn the proceeds over to the National War Relief Committee. It is expected that more than $3,000 a month will be received regularly in the St. Louis district from the shoe workers.

RELIEF DIRECTORS MEET: Regional directors of CIO's American and Allied War Relief Committee meet with Pres. Philip Murray to discuss rapidly-expanding work of the committee as more union members get behind the "hour's pay a month" war relief program. Monroe Sweetland, director of the committee, is at the extreme right.

Tax to Beat Axis, Not Us, Says CIO

WASHINGTON, July 11—This week the same as every other week for the past month or more—a new drive for the sales tax started in Congress.

This time the drive has been started by Rep. Willis Robertson, a polltaxer from Virginia, who was the author of an unsuccessful sales tax proposal made to the Ways and Means Committee while it was considering the tax bill.

SEEKING 'VIEWS'

The drive again takes the form of a petition circulated in Congress, in which Robertson asks for the "views" of each member on the sales tax. If a majority favors the tax, Robertson says he would favor submitting it again to the Committee. If they don't, he says it would be a "waste of time."

The bill as drawn up by the Ways and Means Committee is short more than three billion dollars of the added tax revenue the country needs for the war. A sales tax of five per cent, Robertson explains, would raise about 2.5 billion dollars.

CIO POSITION

The CIO, responsible government officials and the President of the U. S. have all condemned the sales tax. CIO leaders have called on all unions and members to write and wire their Congressmen against it.

There is still time to block the sales tax in Congress, if those warnings are listened to by labor and all citizens. (Note: CIO's new leaflet, "Taxes for Victory" tells what would happen to the war effort if the sales tax goes through, explains the Committee's shortcomings and urges action. It can be ordered from the CIO Publicity Dept., 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C.)

Navy OKs CIO Proposals For Radio Personnel

New York, July 11.—CIO marine union proposals for improving safety at sea and for halting unjustified dismissals were accepted this week by the U. S. Navy Dept., acting through Asst. Secretary Ralph A. Bard.

Acceptance of the proposals was hailed by Natl. Maritime Union Vice-President Frederick N. Myers and American Communications Associations President Joseph Selly as marking a "new and constructive era in the labor policy of the Navy Department."

The unions' safety proposals included training of all seamen as gunners and utilization of small craft for coastal patrols and inshore convoys.

On personnel, the two unions had strongly protested against dismissal of marine radio operators on unfounded charges of being "subversive." One operator, Murray Winocur, a vice-president of the ACA, was ordered reinstated and the cases of the others will be reviewed.

CIO Factories Lead Output Campaign

WASHINGTON, July 11 — (FP) — An "overwhelming majority" of the 2,000,000 workers in plants with labor-management committees are union members, the War Production Board revealed this week.

Almost three-quarters of them—72 per cent, to be exact—belong to CIO, AFL or independent unions. Of the remaining 28 per cent, many may have union affiliations which have not been mentioned in reports to government agencies here, the WPB pointed out.

In 310 plants in which councils are functioning, some 789,886 workers belong to the CIO. The AFL had 132 plants with 247,952 workers, while independent unions had 67 plants with 216,692 workers. Affiliations of almost 600,000 workers in 370 plants were listed as "unknown."

USA-CIO AHEAD

The United Steelworkers of America led the CIO union group with the largest number of joint councils. Behind it came the Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, the United Auto Workers, the Intl. Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, the United Rubber Workers and the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, in that order.

Leader among the AFL unions in number of joint councils set up was the Intl. Assn. of Machinists.

Kentucky CIO Blasts Lewis 'Back-Stabbing'

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 11—In a blistering resolution, the executive board of the Kentucky Industrial Union Council this week blasted the "treacherous and bitter . . . back-stabbing assaults" which John L. Lewis is now engineering against the CIO.

"We say to the nation and the world . . . that we are 100% back of Philip Murray and Pres. Roosevelt," the resolution continued.

Speaking up from the heart of one of the nation's most important coal areas, the state CIO charged that Lewis "slanders the fair name of the United Mine Workers in arrogant disregard of the wishes of its membership by associating their great union with his personal vendetta against Pres. Roosevelt and Philip Murray."

The resolution asserted that Lewis seeks "to destroy the movement that gave him national fame," charged that recent actions by the miners' leader is the "work of a power-hungry disrupter who is hell-bent on creating national discontent in a time of grave emergency," and warned that his "personal ambitions threaten the security of the nation and the future of the workers of the nation."

Housing Seen Key to Output Problems

Washington, July 11.—The big problem today "is not so much to get the workers as to get them to their place of work and to provide them with adequate housing so they may stay there," President Philip Murray said in a radio symposium on housing broadcast from here.

"In the last war many so-called labor shortages were simply shortages of housing," he added, "and now in our great armament centers, the same thing is happening again."

Murray pointed out in his broadcast, aired by the Natl. Broadcasting Co. that "it is fantastic to prepare great new plants for armament output and then not be able to operate them just because of failure to build a few decent houses for the men and women who must work in them."

Ask 2nd Front

Denver—Four new locals of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in New Mexico have passed resolutions demanding the immediate opening of a 2nd front in Europe.

Output Recipe: Songs, Skits Sandwiches

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 11—Todd Shipyard employes are going to be swallowing their lunchtime sandwiches with a hey nonny-nonny and a jingle-jangle-jingle.

"Lunchtime Follies" is the name of the contemplated show for the shipyard men, and it will be sponsored by the American Theater Wing. Sketches and songs written by topflight writers and composers, including George Kaufman, Moss Hart and Harold Rome, will be presented inside the plant during the noon hour.

FDR Lauds Farm-Labor Alliance

WASHINGTON, July 11—CIO's aid in fighting for an adequate "food for victory" program through support of the Administration's farm program in Congress was hailed by President Roosevelt this week as "heartening" and as an assurance that the issue would be "taken to the country."

President Roosevelt's message of thanks was contained in a letter sent to CIO President Murray and his co-signers on an earlier letter that had urged Congressional support for the Farm Security Administration appropriation bill.

This bill, though passed by the Senate, has been held up in the lower House by a bloc the President described as representing "certain selfish and power-hungry groups." Co-signers with Murray on the letter were James Patton, president of the Farmers Union, Wm. Green, president of the AFL, Murray Lincoln, head of the Ohio Farm Bureau, J. G. Luhrsen, secretary, Railway Labor Executive Association, Msgr. L. G. Liguetti, secretary Catholic Rural Life Assn., and Benson Y. Landis of the Federal Council of Churches.

The opposition to the FSA appropriation comes chiefly from anti-labor, pro-appeasement Congressmen who have chosen to look out for "certain corporate and speculative farm interests" rather than pay attention to the needs of the low-income working farmers and of the victory program.

This bloc was vigorously criticized in Roosevelt's letter, when he said: "You have asked me to take this issue to the country. I think that your excellent letter does this in large measure. I will support and emphasize it at every opportunity. Should resistance to these proposals persist, I am convinced that the people will hold those responsible to strict account."

APPLAUDS UNITY

"The seven signatures on this joint appeal spell a new understanding and a new unity, born of war, among farmers, all three national labor organizations, and two great religious groups of men and women of goodwill.

"Our fighting men need this kind of unity in support of them. As their Commander-in-Chief, I welcome it."

WHY & WHEREFORE: Philip Murray, CIO president and head of the United Steelworkers (standing, at left) tells the War Labor Board why facts justify union's demand for $1-a-day increases and union security. WLB decision on its panel's recommendations backing up the union case, is expected soon.

British Workers Anxious For New Anti-Hitler Front, Curran Reports from London

By GARRY ALLIGHAN

(Special Cable to Allied Labor News)

LONDON, JULY 11 — (ALN) — Ernest Bevin, Britain's Minister of Labor, would like to visit the United States as part of an exchange visit with William Green and Philip Murray, AFL and CIO heads, Joseph Curran, head of the National Maritime Union and one of the six vice-presidents of the CIO, told this correspondent in an exclusive interview today before returning to the United States.

"During a long talk with Mr. Bevin," Curran said, "I suggested that he should go to the United States, while Mr. Green and Mr. Murray came to Britain. He enthusiastically agreed."

The American seamen's leader, who has been attending the United Nations shipping conference called here by the International Labor Office, stated that all the trade union and government leaders with whom he has talked have stressed the importance of strengthening the ties between the labor movements of the allied countries as a means of winning the war. While here Curran talked at length with U. S. Ambassador John G. Winant.

"Many British union leaders also agreed that rank-and-file delegations should be exchanged," Curran added.

"There's a move on foot here for an interchange of British shop stewards with representatives of rank-and-file workers in American war plants. Exchange of information about production technique, labor-management committees and other such matters would greatly step up the war effort."

The NMU president has just pulled off a notable victory for allied seamen. Due to his efforts at the ILO conference, and in the face of the stalling attitude of some other delegates, the British government has accepted an international seamen's safety charter. When this is ratified by all the United Nations, the following improvements will be carried out:

All vessels over 3000 tons will have at least two lifeboats; all new ships will be built with mechanically operated davits for lifeboats; tankers will have steel lifeboats; all lifeboats will be equipped with short-wave radio transmitters, waterproof charts, luminous compass dials, signal pistols, floatable water-containers and weather-proof first-aid kits.

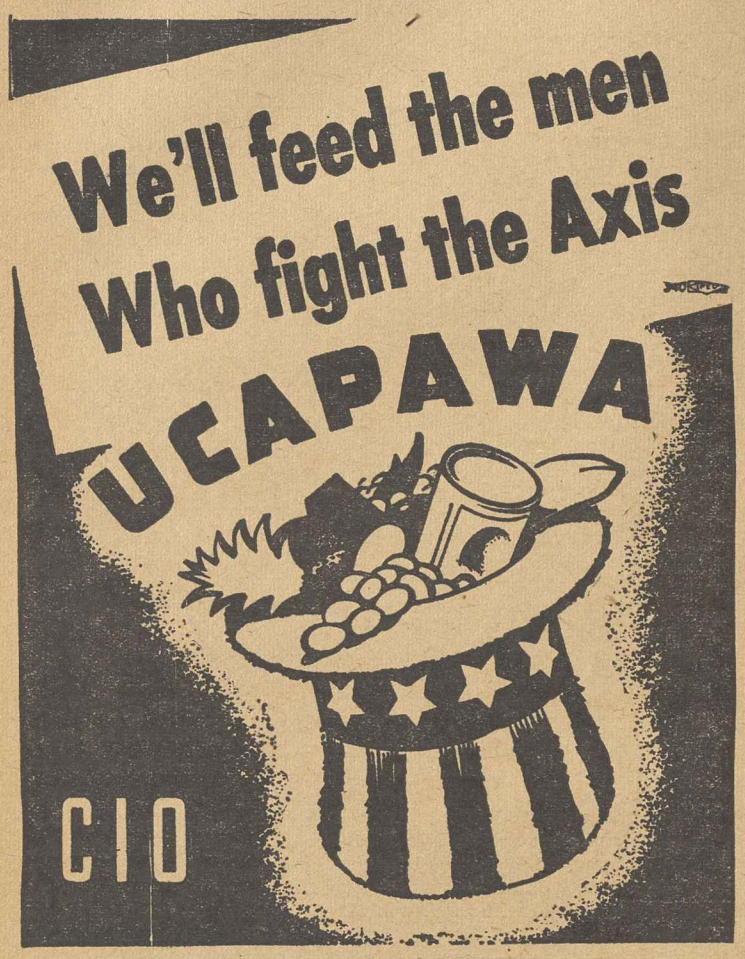
The conference would have been more effective, Curran told me, if a representative of the Soviet maritime unions had been present. Curran had high praise for the contribution made by Tenterdome, who had flown especially from Australia.

After the close of the ILO conference Curran visited the Clydeside in Scotland and other shipbuilding centers. His observations on the British productive effort have received much attention here, as he is recognized as the most important American union official to visit Britain since the United States entered the war.

SECOND FRONT

"I found the workers in the shipyards all-out for production," he told me, "but they are having the same difficulties with their brasshats that we have had with ours. The workers are sweating their guts out to turn out ships but some managements act as though we had until 1950 to win the war.

"British workers I talked with all over the country are demanding a second front now to win the war in 1942. The Molotov-Churchill-Roosevelt declaration had a tremendously invigorating effect on production."



UNION PLEDGE: Over 25,000 of these "food for victory" stickers have been pasted on windshields, in factories and homes by members of the CIO Cannery & Agricultural Workers. Union has already established a joint management-labor production committee at big Campbell Soup plant in Camden, N. J.

'Last Mile' For Camels' Open Shop

Winston-Salem, N. C., July 11—A drive to organize employes of the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., makers of Camel cigarettes, has been launched here by the CIO United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers.

A staff of four organizers, headed by Harry Koger, international union representative, has been assigned to handle the drive. Headquarters have been established in the office of E. L. Sandefur, CIO director for the Carolinas, in the Nissen Building.

Pamphlet Offers Tips To Councils

Washington, July 11.—CIO's latest pamphlet, "War Production" is addressed to CIO Industrial Union Councils and outlines in simple form the steps that councils can take to help speed up war production in their areas.

The pamphlet discusses application of the Murray Industry Council plan and the various production blue prints that CIO unions have produced on the basis of the Murray plan.

"Americans are determined that retreat shall be converted into an offensive of the United Nations," the pamphlet says. "The American people, and American labor in particular, understand quite well, furthermore, that the key to victory is found in the volume of war production of the basic industries of the United States."

Dockmen Spur War Fund Drive

WASHINGTON, July 11 — Showing the same patriotism that has won them the admiration of the government and the public for their efficient work on West Coast docks, members of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union this week put on the steam for greater contributions to the CIO Committee for American & Allied War Relief.

Acting in response to a letter from Intl. Secretary-Treasurer Eugene Paton, San Francisco warehousemen quickly voted for deductions from their pay of an hour's pay a month. Officials expect the local will send $10,000 a month to the committee for distribution among the victims of Hitler's aggression, both at home and abroad.

In his letter, Paton noted that cooperation with the CIO relief committee will guarantee a "substantial contribution each month to be used where the need is greatest. . . . our members will make this single contribution to cover all relief compaigns, and our officials will be spared the constant appeals which take time from other important union work."

FISHERMEN ACT

Members of Fishermen's Local 33, of San Pedro, California, representing a membership of 1,000 fishermen unanimously adopted the plan to assess themselves a dollar per month for sustaining contributions to the CIO War Relief fund, for the duration of the war. Consolidated Steelworkers Local 2058 took similar action at their last meeting. In Oakland, Steelworkers Local 1798 is collecting monthly contributions from its members pending the completion of negotiations for a monthly checkoff.

In New York City, the Transport Workers Union in response to an appeal by President Phillip Murray of the CIO, sent a check for $1,000 to the CIO War Relief Committee, as the down payment on much larger contributions to follow.

In a letter to President Murray accompanying the check, TWU Secretary-Treasurer Douglas L. MacMahon said:

"Our union is conducting a strenuous drive to obtain the donations of every member of one hour's pay per month and we have high hopes of doing a successful job."

AUTO UNION HELPS

Another International that responded to the appeal for funds by President Philip Murray was the United Automobile Workers, which sent a donation from its treasury of $500 to the CIO War Relief Committee.

The UAW has sent a letter to its locals urging their support of the war relief drive, to which many locals have replied with checks and promises of regular monthly donations. UAW Local 125 of Minneapolis sent in a check for $308 and Local 72 of Kenosha one for $46.

A significant development was the signing of an agreement by the Murray Body Corp. for regular payroll deductions of an hour's pay each month. This agreement affects thousands of workers and it is expected that $5,000 will be donated monthly by the employees of the Murray Body Company for the CIO War Relief program.

CIO Victor In Big Poll At Minneapolis

Minneapolis, Minn., July 11—A majority of the 2,000 production workers in the Honeywell Regulator Co. here chose the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers as bargaining agency in an election conducted by the National Labor Relations Board. The vote was 987 for the CIO union to 802 for the AFL.

Robert Wishart, UE representative, headed the victorious campaign in Honeywell, aimed to secure action on the just demands of the workers for improved conditions and to guarantee fullest war production in the plant.

7 CIO Men Nominated In Oregon

Portland, Ore., July 11—A coalition of farm and labor groups scored heavy victories in Oregon's Democratic primaries last week on platforms urging support of Roosevelt's foreign policies and preservation of labor's rights in wartime.

Working through the Oregon Commonwealth Federation, a farm-labor political alliance, two CIO-Commonwealth candidates for Congress won nominations. They were State Sen. T. K. Mahoney in the third district and Edward C. Kelly in the new fourth district.

Seven CIO members were among the OCF's 17 successful candidates in the state legislative primaries. They included Ralph W. Peoples, state CIO secretary, and members of the clothing, longshore, textile, fishermen's and woodworkers' unions.

Coast Parley

Los Angeles, July 11—Special attention to problems of placing physically handicapped workers in war industries marked the sessions of a two-day conference on "Conservation of Human Resources in Wartime" held at the University of Southern California here this week.

Free, Equal World Labor's War Aim, Says Murray

DETROIT, July 11—The peace that will come from the work and sacrifice of the workers of the United Nations "must produce a world where imperialism and the exploitation of the less advanced people" give way to equality and well-being for all, President Philip Murray said in a July 4 speech delivered here.

Pres. Murray spoke at a lunch in honor of Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of supply of the U. S. Army. AFL Pres. Wm. Green and representatives of all Michigan organized labor were present at the meeting.

TAP LABOR'S ABILITY

After reviewing the contributions that organized labor has made to planning and to production for victory over the Axis, Murray declared:

"I do not believe that our nation has even yet fully tapped the great reservoir that lies within the creative abilities of our workmen. . . . Yet it is already true that in no other war in history has labor been called upon to play such an important part.

"We must demonstrate in our every-day life, in our conduct of our domestic affairs and of the war, that the promise of the four freedoms is a universal pledge.

"Indulgence in racial hatred in our country, discrimination against Negroes in the factories, will serve only to give the Nazi propagandists new seeds to sow among those who already mistrust our motives."

'Half-Slave' World Seen On Way Out

New York, July 11—American workers realize that "the world cannot remain half free and half slave," Frank J. Rosenblum, executive vice president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and a vice president of the CIO, said in a shortwave broadcast to Europe this week.

The great tide of American work for victory "is directed against the Nazi regime and the Axis and for the freedom and welfare of the common people," Rosenblum declared in describing the war effort of the CIO and of the Clothing Workers.

"Our sons and brothers on the battlefronts and we in the shops, plants and on the belt lines, are fighting and working to the limit to crush Hitlerism and for our indivisible security—yours and ours," he said.

'Gibraltar' Falls:

Prudential Life Insurance Signs First Contract

NEW YORK, July 11—The "Rock of Gibraltar" has fallen—not the British fortress at the mouth of the Mediterranean, but the Prudential Life Insurance Co., whose trademark is known to every school kid.

Prudential, second wealthiest corporation in the world, last week signed an agreement with the CIO United Office & Professional Workers. The pact, covering 4,000 industrial insurance agents in New York State, followed several years of dispute and negotiation.

Pres. Lewis Merrill of the UOPWA termed the agreement a "declaration of independence for white collar workers." Merrill and Leon Berney, director of the union's insurance division, signed the pact for the UOPWA, while the company was represented by Carroll M. Sharnks, vice-president, and Frederick Groel, secretary.

Although wage rates are still being discussed, an agreement was reached immediately to permit both the agents and the company to turn their energies toward full mobilization behind the war effort. Both parties have agreed that the wage formula will be reached before Sept. 30 of this year.

The contract puts into effect at once a system of dues deduction which guarantees maintenance of membership, in addition to the usual clauses providing for paid vacations, grievance machinery and arbitration.

The UOPWA won a Labor Board election among New York City Prudential agents several months ago, but agreed to forget about it when the company promised to negotiate a contract immediately if the union won a state-wide vote among industrial insurance agents. That election was also won by the CIO affiliate, and the contract followed.

In a drive to broaden its representation among Prudential agents, the union has filed petitions for state-wide elections in New Jersey and Michigan.

Negotiations with Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., the nation's largest, are due to open shortly. The UOPWA recently gained a substantial election victory among New York City agents.

Minimum Goes Up

Washington, July 11—Some 12,500 workers employed in the manufacture of luggage, leather goods and women's handbags will have their pay increased five cents an hour under a wage order effective July 27, setting 40 cents an hour as the minimum wage in that industry.

CIO Member In U. S. Raid On Roumania

New York, July 11—A member of the CIO American Newspaper Guild this week took his place with other union men in the front ranks of Uncle Sam's fighting men.

He's Lt. Charles T. Davis of the Army Air Corps, who navigated a U. S. Flying Fortress in a devastating attack on Axis oil fields in Roumania several weeks ago. Davis' plane was one of four that made forced landings in neutral Turkey shortly after the bombing raid.

READY FOR ACTION

The Guild Reporter, ANG official organ, revealed this week that Davis had written friends in this country a letter predicting American offensive action in the air. He told them:

"We don't know just where or when, but we're heading for the wild blue yonder one of these days with a load of bad news for the Axis. And we can really go a 'fur piece,' too."

The Guildsmen acted as "press relations officer" for his fellow fliers when their plane came down in Turkey, but his information was carefully free of military information.

Davis, a native of Arkansas, was a member of the CIO union when he worked on the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

'Nation Was First Union,' Theme of CIO Broadcast

NEW YORK, July 11—The first union in this nation was the nation, CIO's Labor For Victory broadcast, made July 4, reminded listeners this week, and today the nation and the labor unions are one in working together to wipe fascism off the face of the earth.

The program, one of CIO's regular fortnightly radio series, was written by Peter Lyon, with original music by Marc Blitzstein played by the NBC orchestra under Joseph Stopak.

The dramatization began with the preamble of the U. S. Constitution—"We, the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect union . . ." and shifted quickly to a scene in the steel country, where a CIO organizer is speaking to a small group of workers, telling them about the union that's coming to steel.

TO USA-CIO

From these first organizing efforts, the script went quickly to what's happening today, as union labor and management work together to step up production for an offensive and victory, following out the principles of the Murray plan. In the commentary by Len De Caux, the case for the USA-CIO's wage increase and union security demands was presented in news summary form.

Labor for Victory goes on the air every Saturday night, at 10:15 p.m. Eastern Wartime over the Red Network of the Natl. Broadcasting Co. CIO broadcasts every other Saturday. July and August dates are: July 18, August 1, 15 and 29.

Selly Urges Steel Wage Increase

New York, July 11.—The "interests of the nation" demand acceptance by the War Labor Board of its panel's recommendation for $1-a-day increases and union security in the plants of Little Steel, Pres. Joseph Selly of the American Communications Assn. wrote today to WLB Chairman W. H. Davis.

"We are convinced, as was the panel, of the justice and propriety of the demands of the United Steelworkers of America," Selly said. He contrasted the "forthright and logical" testimony of President Murray and General Counsel Lee Pressman at recent WLB hearings with the "business as usual attitudes" of the steel company executives.

Rubber Union Advertises CIO Programs

Akron, July 11.—The United Rubber Workers, with a record of successful radio publicity of its own, believes that CIO's "Labor for Victory" radio series should be advertised.

They've just issued an 11x14-inch poster in red, white and blue calling attention to the series and urging members of Rubber Workers locals to tune in.

Just as a reminder, "Labor for Victory" goes on every Saturday night at 10:15 p.m. Eastern Wartime, over the Red Network of the Natl. Broadcasting Co. CIO has its alternate weeks. July and August dates are July 18, August 1, 15 and 29.

WLB Grants Textile Pay Increase

Washington, July 11—Between 4,000 and 5,000 textile workers in nine New England finishing mills will get wage increases ranging from five to seven cents an hour under an order issued this week by the National War Labor Board.

The decision, handed down by a six to three vote, with the three employer members of the Board dissenting, was made in an effort to remove inequalities between wage rates in New England mills and those in the metropolitan areas of New York and New Jersey.

Dr. George W. Taylor, vice chairman of the Board, who wrote the majority opinion in the case, said that differential wage rates had been thrown out of balance by increases given in the metropolitan area and in some of the New England mills not covered in the case before the Board.

The decision calls for an hourly increase in pay of seven cents for workers whose base rate is 64 cents or less.

Freedom For All

President Philip Murray applied CIO principles of equality of treatment and opportunity to the international scene in the eloquent speech he made at the recent luncheon to Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell in Detroit.

The peace which must come after this war, Murray said, "must be a peace where there will be no 'backward' nations; it must produce a world where imperialism and the exploitation of the less-advanced people will give way to planning and allocation of raw materials on a basis which will provide the possibility of well-being for all peoples."

But it is of first importance, Murray emphasized, that we practice at home what we preach abroad. "We must demonstrate in our every-day life," he declared, "in our conduct of our domestic affairs and of the war, that the promise of the four freedoms is a universal pledge.

"Indulgence in racial hatred in our country, discrimination against Negroes in the factories, will serve only to give the Nazi propagandists new seeds to sew among those who already mistrust our motives."

The CIO is committed, under its constitution, to the organization of all workers "regardless of race, creed, color or nationality," with fair and equal treatment for all.

In fighting racial, religious and national intolerance in the United States, and opposing all forms of discrimination, the CIO is not only strengthening our national war effort, but it is also preparing the grounds for the kind of peace which will bring real freedom and opportunity to the common people of the world.

Union Outlawry

Labor unions depend for their strength upon democratic discipline and compliance with constitutional procedure.

These union principles are well understood by every labor leader, and John L. Lewis has frequently insisted on compliance with them in disciplining locals of the United Mine Workers. But in his assault on the CIO, he has blithely thrown such principles out of the window and violated every law or orderly union procedure.

As a subordinate body of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, the United Mine Workers was bound by the CIO constitution in whose formulation and adoption it participated.

But Lewis has scornfully flouted the elected leadership of CIO. He has ceased to pay the per capita tax to which the UMW obligated itself. He has disregarded the orders of the CIO executive board to resume such payments. He has ignored the summons of the executive board to appear before it, to answer the charges made against him.

In flagrant violation of the CIO constitution, Lewis has attempted to annex to his District 50 a subordinate organization of the national CIO, the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee.

In these and many other respects, Lewis has set himself up as a law unto himself. He has violated the fundamental obligations which he assumed as president of an affiliated union of the CIO. He has himself committed the very crimes of insubordination, indiscipline and union outlawry which he has so often castigated and harshly punished within his own union.

Lewis may think himself bigger than union laws and constitutions, bigger than the CIO, and bigger than his President and his country, for that matter. But the membership of the United Mine Workers do not share this belief, nor do the unions of the CIO.

A labor movement fighting a world war for democracy against dictatorship cannot long tolerate the usurpations of a would-be dictator within its own ranks.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

LET'S CHECK up on ourselves. Are we really doing our part for victory, or are we thinking and acting the way Hitler wants us to think and act? Is the CIO following real win-the-war policies?

The Office of Facts and Figures has just supplied a neat and reliable test. It is a seven-point summary of all Axis propaganda directed to the United States since Pearl Harbor. Each point represents one of the main aims of Axis strategy to undermine American resistance. Let's check them one by one.

(1) Axis propaganda aims to make Americans feel weak—militarily, economically, politically and culturally—to undermine confidence in victory.

If we just kick and cavil and bellyache over weaknesses and failures, we're playing Hitler's game.

CIO emphasizes America's magnificent productive and human resources and the workers' will to win. Its every criticism of production lags and the like is accompanied by constructive proposals to overcome them.

* * *

(2) Axis propaganda aims to make Americans feel deprived, increasingly, playing up war hardships as futile and needless.

CIO stresses labor's willingness to share in every necessary hardship to win the war. It calls for equality of sacrifice by all groups. It advocates more extensive rationing as fair and democratic.

* * *

(3) Axis propaganda aims to make the various American groups—political, religious, racial, nationality, economic, regional—feel threatened by each other, to divert attention and energies from the war effort to internal group hatred and conflict.

CIO pioneered in demand for joint labor-industry-government effort to increase war production, through the Murray plan. It urges political unity behind win-the-war candidates. It fights anti-Semitism; demands equal rights and job opportunity for Negroes and foreign-born.

(4) Axis propaganda aims to make Americans feel threatened by their Allies—British domination, Russian Bolshevization, etc.—to divert attention and energies from fighting the common enemy to distrust and conflict within the United Nations.

CIO seeks international labor unity, urging closer cooperation and unity of action with the unions of Britain, the Soviet Union, Latin America and all the United Nations. It recognizes red-baiting, a la Dies committee, as a Hitleristic device to divide American anti-Fascist forces and sow distrust of our Allies.

Through its Committee for American and Allied Relief, CIO organizes tangible aid for our Allies and promotes American solidarity with all the United Nations.

(5) Axis propaganda aims to make Americans feel they are not threatened by the Axis, decrying possibility of invasion of the Western Hemisphere and claiming American interests would be served by cooperation with the Axis powers.

The CIO, at its Detroit convention, even before Pearl Harbor, emphatically repudiated all isolationist ideas, stressed the danger of Hitlerism to America and called for the United States to play its full part in the world struggle against Hitlerism.

(6) Axis propaganda aims to make Americans feel guilty and divided in conscience, to implant conflict and indecision over the justice and morality of our war activities and war aims.

CIO constantly emphasizes this is labor's war, a people's war for freedom and democracy, against the dark forces of Fascist enslavement.

(7) Axis propaganda aims to make Americans fear the future regardless of the war's outcome—that our economic and social structure will inevitably be destroyed.

Through the Murray plan, CIO has long advocated constructive measures for averting post-war unemployment and other economic dislocations. It subscribes to the "four freedoms" enunciated by President Roosevelt. It organizes labor's determination to win a peace of freedom and more prosperity for the common people when we win the war.

* * *

The above seven main aims of Axis propaganda are also a useful check to apply to defeatists and divisionists, to probe through the camouflage of proclaimed patriotism.

Apply them, for instance, to the anti-CIO propaganda of Lewis payrollees. Labor-splitting tactics, red-baiting, caviling criticism of the administration, isolationist propaganda—just what Hitler wants.

Apply these seven checks to the labor-baiters in Congress, to the Westbrook Peglers, to the appeasement press. Anti-labor propaganda, to turn employer and middle-class against the workers, red-baiting, union-bating, constant carping against war policies, anti-New Dealism as usual, profiteering as usual, politics as usual—just what Hitler wants.

Mine Locals Hail Murray

3,000 Leave Lewis

WASHINGTON, July 11 — New mass breakaways from John L. Lewis' daughter-dominated District 50 of the United Mine Workers this week brought to approximately 40,000 the number of workers seeking reaffiliation with the CIO.

The Natl. Council of Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers—which will be chartered as a CIO international union at a convention late this summer—revealed that the admission of 3,000 workers in 30 southern locals had brought its membership past the 28,000 mark. Several thousand members of the former United Construction Workers have also returned to the CIO as local industrial unions.

Led by Bernard Borah, southeastern regional director with offices in Tennessee, the 30 locals voted unanimously to quit the Lewis outfit and affiliate with the Council.

They charged that "John L. Lewis no longer represents the best interest of the American workers," and further condemned his "appeasement and pro-fascist policies for spreading disruption and disunity in the labor movement and endangering the war effort.'

Five organizers—B. T. Judd, W. I. Smith, J. R. Cooper, C. W. Dannenberg and Martin A. Watkins, the latter now an Army private—joined the exodus from District 50.

In a statement amplifying his position, Borah said he "cannot stand idly by while John L. Lewis attempts to wreck the labor movement, and by causing dissension, interferes with and endangers the war effort of the United States.

SUPPORTS MURRAY

"It is my belief that the defeat of Hitler and the Axis is the prime consideration of our nation and of the labor movement. My support, therefore, must go to Philip Murray and the CIO."

Expressing amazement at the "raw deal" given Murray by top leaders of the UMWA when the CIO was ousted as miners' vice-president a few weeks ago, Borah added:

"Murray is a respected and loyal labor leader. He gave years of service to building the miners' union and was elected by the rank-and-file coal miners as vice-president. His removal by Lewis took place as a surprise one-man move at a time when Murray with President Roosevelt.

"Murray's only offense was that he had faithfully upheld our nation's war program and built a united CIO out of 5,000,000 members.

BELIEVE IN CIO

"The members of District 50 have always considered themselves members of the CIO rather than followers of any one man. John L. Lewis is determined to destroy the CIO, but he will receive no aid from southern workers who realize that improvements in conditions have been brought about by the CIO and not by any single individual, regardless of his personal power.

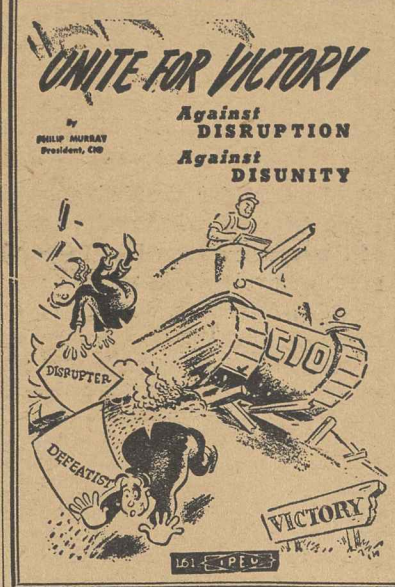
With the tide definitely running against it, the Lewis family has sent scores of representatives into the field in efforts to halt the mass movement out of District 50.

Anti-Semitism, bribery, red-baiting and thuggery have all been employed in the unsuccessful effort of the Lewis minions to preserve the District 50 empire. In one city —Buffalo—a storm-trooper squad of 23 Lewis representatives sought to keep the locals from voicing approval of the Council, the CIO and the pro-labor, pro-war policies of President Philip Murray.

Protest Raiding

Kalispell, Mont.—Miners in this country are fed up with raiding by the Lewis family's District 50, according to a resolution passed by Local 478 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO.



UNITE for Victory is Philip Murray's answer to the disruptive work of John L. Lewis, given at the CIO Executive Board meeting. Pamphlet contains full text of Murray's speech, plus resolutions on UMWA and Lewis. Price: 100 for $5; 500 for $15. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C.

UMW Leaders Violate Own Union Constitution In Attack on CIO Councils

WASHINGTON, July 11—Anyone who tries to get United Mine Workers locals to withdraw from CIO state and city councils is "flagrantly violating the constitution of the UMWA," CIO Secretary James B. Carey wrote to CIO councils this week.

Carey's letter pointed out that certain UMWA representatives have been trying to persuade UMWA locals to withdraw, and quoted the UMWA constitution adopted at the February, 1940, convention which orders locals to affiliate with CIO councils.

TEXT OF LETTER

His letter follows in full:

"Information has come to this office that certain representatives of the United Mine Workers of America are attempting to persuade the local unions of the United Mine Workers to withdraw from the state and local industrial union councils of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

"In this connection I wish to call your attention to a provision contained in the Constitution of the International Union of the United Mine Workers of America, adopted at its last convention held at Columbus, Ohio, on February 1, 1940. Obviously this convention is the supreme body of that organization and no individual can supersede the mandate of such convention.

"'Sec. 28 of Article 14.: All Local unions are required to affiliate with state industrial councils and industrial councils, if industrial councils are conveniently located, if such state industrial councils and industrial councils are chartered by the Congress of Industrial Organizations.'

"This mandate is clear. Local unions of the International Union of the United Mine Workers of America are authorized and directed to maintain their affiliation with the appropriate state and local industrial councils of the CIO.

"Any individual representative of that organization who attempts to withdraw the affiliation of local unions of the Mine Workers is flagrantly violating the International Constitution of that organization."

Test Vote: Murray 90 Lewis 10

That was the score in the first NLRB election contest between Lewis' District 50 and the Natl. Council of Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers. It was conducted at the Cleveland Enamel Products Co.

The results were hailed in Washington by Martin Wagner, Council president, as an omen of further successes in months ahead.

"When they voted for the National Council, they voted for full support of the Roosevelt victory drive against the Axis—for democratic industrial unionism, for the program of the CIO under Pres. Philip Murray . . .

"They voiced the protest of all of us in the gas, coke and chemical industries against the disruption, despotism, disunity and defeatism which stems from the catch-all creature which the Lewis family royal made of District 50."

Rap 'Walkout' Of Ohio Mine Union Heads

Columbus, Ohio, July 11 — An order directing Ohio locals of the United Mine Workers to withdraw from the state industrial union council is in flagrant violation of the union's constitution, Ted F. Silvey, state CIO secretary-treasurer, charged today.

His statement followed the resignation of John Owens, president of the Ohio district of the UMWA, from the presidency of the state CIO, and an order from Owens to locals in the state demanding their dis-affiliation from the council.

WORK WILL CONTINUE

"Our success in Ohio has not depended upon Mr. Owens or upon any other officer of the miners' union, and our work will continue with energy and vigor as heretofore," Silvey said. "I will continue to carry out the work ordered by our convention, and continue to fulfill all the provisions of our constitution."

The state CIO official said that his "extended contact with the working miners of Ohio's coal producing counties allows me to know how they believe in industrial unionism and the national and state CIO programs."

"All my work is for President Murray, for the national CIO program and for the successful culmination of the war in full American victory," Silvey declared.

Oregon League Ready To Quit Lewis Set-Up

Portland, Ore., July 11.—The Oregon Commonwealth Federation, long an affiliate of Labor's Non-Partisan League, has been urged by its board of directors to sever all connections with the Lewis-dominated political agency.

"The Federation can no longer lend its implied support to the undemocratic and disruptive tactics of John L. Lewis, chairman of LNPL," according to Douglas Anderson, Federation president.

A major complaint is directed at Lewis' failure to call a convention of the league or institute any type of democratic control.

Huge Volume of Messages Voices Faith in CIO

WASHINGTON, July 11 — A rumbling protest against the high-handed tactics of John L. Lewis, first felt through his hesitancy in backing the nation's war effort, is daily growing in volume in the United Mine Workers.

From thousands of telegrams, letters and resolutions from United Mine Worker locals, pouring into CIO Pres. Philip Murray's office — all pledging loyalty to him and the CIO— the growing resentment of the rank and file emphasizes these points:

1—Injustice was done President Murray by Lewis and the Executive Board in vacating the office of vice president "without the consent of the voters that elected him."

2—An almost universal demand that the miners pay their per capita tax to the CIO.

3—Demands from virtually every provisional district in the Mine Workers for autonomy. More than 70 per cent of the miners are without autonomy.

5,000 MESSAGES

In addition to the formal action taken by the United Mine Workers locals, Murray has received nearly 5,000 personal messages and letters from individual coal miners since the action taken against him. Hundreds of these letters, as well as scores of locals, are demanding that he place his name on the ballot at the miners elections and "let the rank and file speak."

Murray's own local union, Local 1197 of Cokeburg, Pa., unanimously voted support of him and his policies. This was one of the locals which demanded that he run for office. The telegram was signed by Lee Karpoff, president, and Joe Solowaitis, secretary.

Typical of the resentment in Miners locals on the per capita and loan question is a resolution adopted by Local 393, Hastings, Pa., which reads in part as follows:

"The great work of organizing among the unorganized workers of America which has been achieved by the CIO in all the basic industries of the country and which is proceeding to new victories under President Philip Murray's able leadership should continue to have the whole-hearted support of the United Mine Workers.

'DISGRACEFUL' ACTION

"We think it is a disgraceful situation when the United Mine Workers is put in a position of seeming to be a grasping moneylender, more interested in exacting the last cent of supposed obligation than in continuing to help the CIO to organize the unorganized workers.

"We favor having the United Mine Workers keep its per capita payments to the CIO up to date without any bickering of the kind which has been going on.

"In the event that the CIO is compelled to return this money to the United Mine Workers, that the money be paid back to the rank and file members who gladly assessed themselves to make this money available for the job of organizing the unorganized."

From Local 5808, Wiscoal, Ky., came a telegram commending President Murray for the splendid work that you have done for organized labor."

"We hope that you will retain your membership with the Mine Workers that you helped to build too what it is today," the telegram said. It was signed by Floyd Gilley, president; Leslie Mullins, financial secretary, and R. C. Disney, recording secretary.

DEMAND AUTONOMY

The demand for autonomy is vigorous in every provisional district. Expressing this sentiment is this typical resolution from Loocal 765, Breese, Ill.: "The membership of the District has patiently waited since 1935 for the International Union to return to the membership the running of their own affairs, through elected officers.

"Resolved that we go on record petitioning the International Executive Board to immediately restore autonomy to the Illinois District and give a complete financial accounting to the membership for all monies received and spent since the District became provisional in 1933."

SUPPORT FDR

Local 3422, Cokeburg Junction, Pa., and Local 4053, Maidsville, W. Va., in denouncing the action of Lewis, were likewise typical in their backing of President Roosevelt.

"Resolved that the members declare their full support of the President of the United States; that we express our full loyalty to the CIO and Philip Murray; that we condemn all labor Quislings who seek to advance their personal powers at the expense of our nation," said Local 3422.

Local 4053 declared "we do not believe in dictators in Europe; and we certainly do not want dictators in this country."

Hundreds of invitations to President Murray to speak in the various districts of the United Workers "so that the coal miners may let you know personally that they are back of you," were received.

STAINLESS STEEL...
the Ageless Metal

• Thousands of products which are contributing to the American ability to produce more and more of the essential goods are better because they are made of stainless steel.

This ageless metal will not rust, tarnish, or stain and requires no lacquer or other protective treatment to preserve its smooth, hard, bright surface. It can be easily cleaned. It is strong and tough. It is highly resistant to corrosion, oxidation, and scaling at elevated temperatures. Because of this unique combination of strength and durability, products and equipment made of stainless steel are light in weight and give long, trouble-free service with a minimum of maintenance.

Consequently, stainless steel has become tremendously important in the food, textile, aircraft, petroleum, chemical, and other essential industries.

Wallace's 'Common Man' Address Stirs Britain

LONDON, July 11—(ALN)—The recent speeches of Vice-President Henry Wallace, Under-Secretary of State Sumner Welles and Milo Perkins of the Board of Economic Warfare, in which they underscored the war aims of the United Nations as set forth in the Atlantic Charter, are having marked repercussions in the British labor movement.

The Labor Party, at its annual conference held recently in London, unanimously passed a resolution on post-war reconstruction closely paralleling Wallace's declaration that "the century we are entering, which will come into being after this war, can be, and must be, the century of the common man."

'AND INSECURITY'

"There must be no return after the war to an unplanned competitive society which inevitably produces economic insecurity, industrial inefficiency and social inequality," the resolution said.

This resolution was based on a report of the National Council of Labor, highest labor body in Britain, comprising the leaders of the six-million-strong Trades Union Congress, the eight-million-strong Co-operative movement, and the Labor Party.

It is significant that it was left to the British labor press, and to that section of the press which is friendly to labor, to present the speeches of the American leaders to the people of Britain.

Wallace's speech was virtually unreported until Reynolds News, organ of the Cooperative Movament, published it in full—despite the acute paper shortage which limits the national papers to four pages. The full text of Mr. Welles' speech was printed by the News Chronicle, progressive daily with a circulation of over one a half million.

'LOST SPEECH'

In an editorial comment, Reynolds News stated: "This amazing speech on war aims in which Henry A. Wallace says what Sir Stafford Cripps would like to say but doesn't, is now known throughout the world as 'the speech that got lost.' The full report of it in Reynolds News last week, until a day or two ago, was the only text available in Great Britain, even to the American Embassy. America's high-powered propaganda machine fell down on the job in a manner reminiscent of our Ministry of Information.

"The first member of the British government who talks like this will go places—maybe to No. 10 Downing Street."

"To such speeches many of us listen with envy," the New Statesman and Nation, liberal weekly, says in an editorial. "They are still only outlines, but they have a perceptible direction, a clear economic idea which we miss in the vague phrases of our own national leaders."

THIS POSTER supporting the government's scrap salvage campaign, was drawn by a New York school kid. Are you doing your part to convert tin cans into hand grenades?

Support CIO War Policies

Newton, Ia., July 11.—Support for the "win-the-war policies" of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and the United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers was voted here by UE Local 1116.

The resolution also condemned the "unity-splitting appeasement program of John L. Lewis" and charged that he has joined "in full force" with the appeasers of America First, the Chicago Tribune, Martin Dies, Westbrook Pegler and others.

U. S. Papers 'Ganging Up' On Wallace

New York, July 11—(FP)—The commercial newspapers' great conspiracy of silence against Vice-Pres. Wallace's "century of the common man" speech finally has been broken. Some publishers are beginning to attack it with such smear words as "mystical, crackpot, visionary."

Samplings of what the newspapers have had to say on the speech, which they either reported badly or not at all, have been received by Federated Press from correspondents throughout the country.

Outside of PM, The Chicago Sun and the Denver Rocky Mountain News, the only major newspapers to print text of the speech have been several score labor papers and a few liberal weeklies.

Some papers which lacked the temerity to attack the speech outright ignored Wallace's demand for economic security, education and democracy for all human beings, and tried to twist the speech into something that better fitted their publishers' own ideas of a post-war world.

The first to attack outrightly was Scripps-Howard's Westbrook Pegler, who has a great capacity for knowing what the publishers would like to read. Next was Capt. Joseph Patterson's defeatist New York Daily News.

American Workers Fighting For Better Life, Murray Writes

Des Moines, Ia., July 11—American Labor "has come of age" since December 7, and is filling an increasingly important role in the life of the nation, CIO Pres. Philip Murray writes in the July 14 issue of Look magazine.

"The brains, as well as the brawn, of the man at the machine are busy," the CIO leader points out. "On the job, he is thinking of ways to step up output. His suggestions go to the union's shop steward, who knows that the man who performs the job is the one who understands it best."

Recalling that CIO unions have offered production plans for nearly a dozen war industries, Murray says:

"Our government has accepted some of these proposals; had it accepted others, our national shortage of steel, aluminum and rare metals might be less acute today."

SEEKING UNITY

Labor's voice has been important in the factory; it's equally important in the fight for national unity, the CIO president declares:

"Appeasement, defeatism, homegrown fascism get short shrift with us. The internal enemies of American democracy realize they must first defeat organized labor."

American workers are looking forward to the post-war world, determined that the evils of the past will not be repeated, Murray concludes.

"Labor's experience in participating in industry and government will point the way to a fairer distribution of the things Americans will be able to enjoy in a world freed of the Nazi menace—such things as books and automobiles, electric refrigerators and decent homes.

"Fairer distribution will have to include freedom from want, which means freedom from unemployment. Union labor, both on the job and in the armed forces, is determined that mass unemployment, now mostly overcome by the war, shall not return."

Council Urges 'Win-War' Confab

Pittsburgh, July 11—A "win the war" conference of CIO, AFL and railroad unions should be called at once, according to a unanimous resolution passed at a recent meeting of District Council 6 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers here.

The Council, which represents 45,000 workers, declared that this conference was needed to combat the anti-victory tactics of "certain reactionary groups" and to carry out President Roosevelt's seven point program and labor's production for victory plans.

Message From U. S. A.

'Hold Fort', French Workers Told

DETROIT, July 11—French workers were urged to resist efforts to transport them to Germany for work in Nazi defense plants, in an appeal sent to France in the name of 80,000 members of the United Automobile Workers employed at the Ford Willow Run bomber plant.

The message, transmitted to the French through the Office of War Information in Washington, was signed by William McAulay, administrator of UAW Local 50.

Extending the warmest fraternal greetings to all French workers, the message read: "Here in the greatest and largest aircraft plant in the world, we are turning out powerful fighter planes.

"It is our desire that these planes fight not only for victory for the United States but for the liberation of the workers of France who are now suffering under the domination of the Nazi government.

"We are producing these planes in ever-increasing number and without delay, working as many hours as is possible so that the day of judgment for Adolf Hitler may be swift and completely effective.

"We have heard that Laval is attempting to recruit French workers to go to work in Germany.

"We beseech the workers of France to reject and resist all efforts to transport them for labor in the workshops of Hitler. If any of you do that, you will be helping forge even stronger the chains which now hold France and its workers in slavery."

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Support for the full appropriation asked by the Office of Price Administration and a renewed request for the mobilization of America's housewives to participate in the price-control program was voiced this week in a letter to Leon Henderson, director of OPA, from Mrs. Julia Katz, national director of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries.

"Our members in all parts of the country are petitioning their Congressmen to bring farm prices down to parity, to grant the full appropriation requested by OPA, and to pass other measures which will make the President's seven-point program effective," the letter said.

"We are the wives, sisters, daughters and mothers of American workers, and we are proud of the contribution which our men are making by helping to plan and achieve victory in the battle of production. We feel that we, and the millions of other housewives in the nation, can make as important a contribution in the battle against inflation. We agree with your statement that 'it is important that the public have a clear understanding of the facts that compel the OPA to allow an increase in the price of basic commodities."

"We think that you can help to enlighten and enlist the American housewife in the battle against this and other threats to the Government's anti-inflation program. We, therefore, urge you to take immediate steps for the mobilization of housewives for their education and participation in the functions of OPA."

Immediate convening of a women's conference to discuss consumer participation in the price control and rationing program was also urged in a telegram from the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries to Frank Sessions, Director of the Consumer's Division of the Office of Price Administration.

A contribution of $200 to the national auxiliary organizing fund from the United Steelworkers of America was reported this week by the CIO Auxiliaries. The gift was in response to an appeal addressed to all CIO International Unions by the Auxiliary Committee of the National CIO and signed by Chairman James Carey, Reid Robinson and R. J. Thomas.

Other internationals which have responded to the appeal are the United Rubber Workers, the Utility Workers' Organizing Committee, the United Paper, Novelty and Toy Workers, the United Stone and Allied Products Workers, the American Communications Association, and the State County and Municipal Workers.

WAR RELIEF DRIVE

Over $100 raised at two auxiliary parties was turned over to the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief this week as the national auxiliary war relief drive got under way. Some $60 came from a war relief bingo party of the Detroit UAW-CIO Auxiliary Council, which plans on having other similar affairs.

Over $42 earmarked for Russian War Relief as part of the June drive for aid to Russia, was the proceeds of a Washington Federal Workers Auxiliary supper party, and was included in the $500 contributions of the Washington, D.C., Industrial Union Council.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The second largest corporation in the world, The Prudential Insurance Co., signed an agreement this week with the United Office & Professional Workers of America, CIO, covering some 4,000 industrial insurance agents in New York State. It is the largest single contract in the insurance field.

The contract includes a system of dues deduction which guarantees maintenance of membership, paid vacations, grievance machinery and arbitration. Wage matters are subject to further negotiations. Both the company and he union put themselves squarely behind the nation's war effort.

The union has filed petitions for two state-wide elections covering Prudential agents in New Jersey and Michigan. President Merrill reports that negotiations with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, the largest corporation in the world, are expected to open within a few days. The union won an election among 2,100 agents in Greater New York just recently.

White Collar Workers

By a vote of 129 to 28, white-collar workers at National Screen Service, New York City, designated the UOPWA-CIO as the bargaining agent in a recent NLRB election. The Screen Office & Professional Employees Guild of the UOPWA, now represents over 2,000 white-collarites, having previously won elections at Loew's Inc., Columbia Pictures, 20th Century-Fox and Movietonews, and RKO pictures. Elections are to be held shortly at Paramount and Famous Music.

Assistant CIO Regional Director Ewald Sandner in New Jersey reports winning elections for CIO, as follows:

J. Crowley & Co., E. Orange, N. J., UERMWA 139; no union 2. Garfield Mfg. Co., Garfield, N. J., URWA 73; no union 26. Demattio Machinery Co., Paterson, N. J., UAW-CIO 109; no union 26. Dornoil Company, Newark, N. J., UOPWA 76; Independent 75.

Immediately after this vote the Independent Union voted unanimously to go UOPWA-CIO.

Negotiations in Progress

In addition to these election victories, negotiations are about completed with the United Building Service Employes and the Warner Brothers. Negotiations are about completed in behalf of the United Rubber Workers at the Lea Fabrics, with wage increases granted. Organizer Macri has concluded organization in Scully Steel which was transferred to the United Steelworkers of America.

On July 4, a gigantic show was held on Belle Isle, near Detroit. War equipment of many varieties was demonstrated. Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO, Pres. Green of the AFL and Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army's Services of Supply, spoke at the meeting. It demonstrated the part organized labor is playing at the crucial period of our nation.

The National War Labor Panel that handled Little Steel made its findings granting labor $1 increase, maintenance of union membership, etc. The case is now before the board itself. Labor is asking what is going to be done about it. CIO unions, all internationals, and many AFL unions, as well, are calling upon the WLB to support the findings of the panel in which the steelworkers have proven their case. The United Steelworkers, under the able leadership of President Murray and associate officers, prepared and presented their case in a manner that cannot be denied. The CIO and all its affiliated unions are supporting the USA in this important case.

Buy $20,000 Bonds

Lettuce shed workers invested almost $20,000 in War Bonds and Stamps, when back-pay checks totalling about $125,000 were paid. The checks came as a result of recent pay increase of 10 and 15 cents per hour, retroactive to April 6, which was won through federal conciliation proceedings in which local 78 of the UCAPAWA, CIO played a vigorous part.

Field Representative M. Breslow, SCMWA, reports that their organization has organized the first group of school teachers into the CIO in Gloucester City, N. J., where about 90 per cent of the teachers and maintenance workers in the Gloucester City School Board were issued a charter by the State, County & Municipal Workers of America, CIO.

The International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO, won a victory at the Phelps-Dodge refinery in El Paso, Texas, by a vote of 267 to 107. In the past six weeks this organization has won 15 out of 16 Labor Board elections held.

After a period of four years, George Craig, CIO Regional Director in Philadelphia, reports establishing an organization at the Fleetwing, Inc., plant in Bristol, Pa., which has applied to the Aviation Division of the UAW-CIO for a charter.

CIO Wins Output Councils In Canadian Lumber Camps

VANCOUVER, July 11—(ALN)—With the establishment last week of labor-management councils in four Queen Charlotte Island lumber camps and in the Canadian Colliers, center of British Columbia's mining industry, Canada's far west showed its determination to step up its production of war materials.

In addition, 20,000 shipyard workers in Vancouver, at a meeting called to find ways of increasing production, resolved that "every possible effort be made by labor, management and government to develop fullest efficiency in the shipyards through labor-management councils."

Decision to set up councils in the logging camps was made at a conference in Vancouver between the owners, Timber Controller Nicholson, and workers' representatives headed by Harold Pritchett, district president of the CIO International Woodworkers of America.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS

Recognizing that bad working conditions have been holding back production of timber on Queen Charlotte Island, the conference decided to introduce the following improvements immediately.

Each camp will now have a hospital and doctor; seriously injured loggers will be flown out by planes of the Royal Canadian Air Force; mail will be flown to the island by the RCAF; ships carrying food to the island will have better refrigeration; free transportation to the island will be given to men willing to work for three months, round trip fare to those working for six months.

USSR Decorates Factory Heroes

KUIBYSHEV, July 11—(AIN)—In ceremonies taking place this week in industrial centers all over the Soviet Union, workers in important war plants are receiving government decorations for their performances in last month's production drive. In some cases the decorations are given to entire factories.

The presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR has awarded the Red Banner of Labor to Tank Factories 38 and 183 for finished tanks, to Tank Factory 76 for tank diesel motors, and to the Ural Machine Works for tank bodies. The Tank Builders' Union has announced that 949 of its members received orders and medals in June.

The Kirov Works, manufacturer of the famous KV (Klim Voroshilov) heavy tanks in the Urals, is regularly producing more than 17 per cent above its quota, and the extra tanks are now in action between Kharkov and Kursk.

"RED BANNER" PLANT

When a tank plant receives the Red Banner it adds "Red-Bannered" to its stationery, the signs outside the plant, and the insignia stamped on the side of its finished tanks.

Last week there was a ceremony in a bomber factory near here which had received the Red Banner from the State Committee of Defense. The ceremony was much like similar ones in the United States and Britain, with one exception: the banner was presented to the union's production committee by a delegation of Red Army fliers.

The leader of the delegation, congratulating the workers on their victory in last month's All-Union bomber competition, said, "The front expects more and more planes from you. Our fliers like your planes. The enemy detests them."

'Tripe Calls' Hotly Debated By British Postmen's Union

LONDON, July 11—(ALN)—Delegates to the annual convention of the 150,000-strong Union of Post Office Workers, held recently in Blackpool, passed a resolution demanding that employes be given a share in the management of the postal services.

The resolution requested the Government to set up a Post Office Administrative Council, with the Postmaster-General as president and a trade union nominee as vice-president. This Council would run the affairs of the service, which operates the British telephone and telegraph system as well as the mails.

SOLDIERS CALLS

A heated debate took place as to whether telephone girls, who are members of the union, should continue to put through the one-shilling (20c) night calls, mostly made by soldiers separated from their friends.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the conversation on these one shilling calls is tripe," said Delegate H. Herod, London night telephonist. "They are put through to some charming young woman. It is not a case of husbands and wives but other people's husbands and wives."

Miss M. Bollen, London trunk operator, put the opposing point of view. "Girls do not like working until 11 p.m. to operate the shilling calls, but they do it because it is part of their war effort. If men and women in the Forces want to talk tripe, let them."

The convention voted to continue the cheap night calls.

Auto Union Canadian Chrysler Poll

Toronto, Ont., July 11.—Final steps towards complete organization of the "big three" auto corporations in Canada were taken last week when the CIO United Automobile Workers was chosen collective bargaining agent at the Chrysler plant in Windsor by a 4-1 margin.

The UAW-CIO already has contracts with Ford of Canada and General Motors, as well as a score of feeder plants.

Significant was the fact that the Dominion Dept. of Labor held the election over the protests of the company. In the past the department has permitted such polls only when the company approves—which usually means when the union has not a chance of winning.

Russian Unions Described In Pamphlet

New York, July 11—Trade unions in the USSR "pervade every phase of the war effort" just as they do here, according to a pamphlet, "Trade Unions of Our Soviet Ally" just published by the American Council on Soviet Relations, 112 East 19th St., New York City. The unions are organized on industrial lines.

The war activities of the unions include responsibility for air raid precautions in factories and living quarters, welfare activities among soldiers in the Red Army and relief work among their families at home, military training and actual fighting when the Nazis get close to their cities, as at Leningrad.

These activities are in addition to the work of the unions on production, the author—Clofford T. McAvoy, legislative representative of the New York City CIO Council—points out. Here the unions have taken the initiative in working out new production techniques, mobilizing "two hundred percenters"—workers who pledge to double their output, and similar production spurs.

Contrary to the assertion of Teamsters' President Daniel Tobin in his widely-publicized attack on Soviet trade unions, all their officers are elected by secret ballot for terms of one year, can be recalled by majority vote, and elections are invalid if less than two-thirds of the members vote. Monthly dues are one per cent of the workers earnings.

Same Tune, Same Words

London, July 11—(ALN)—Powerful British employers, encouraged by the efforts now being made by American business to lower the living standards of workers, and alarmed at the recent 50-cents-a-shift rise in miners' pay, have launched a new all-out campaign to freeze wages.

Appealing for "a uniform national wage policy," they are attempting to peg wages at the low level prevailing in the badly organized industries.

Their propaganda takes two forms. First, trotting out the bogy of inflation, they argue that wage increases will lead to dangerous rises in the prices of consumers goods, the supply of which is necessarily limited by the needs of wartime production. Second, they say that in this war, unlike the last, it is not the employers who are profiteering but the workers.

Labor has fought these arguments in the past, and is fighting them again. The General Council of the Trade Union Congress, in a memorandum issued in July, 1941, set down its basic policy on wage increases and the danger of inflation.

Agreeing that inflation would certainly handicap the war effort, it emphasized that the remedy was not wage freezing but strict price control and rationing.

URGE RATIONING

"The General Council supports the general policy of checking rises in the cost of living through controlling the selling prices of essential commodities, by rationing these articles so as to ensure equality of distribution, and urges that such measures should be further developed," the memorandum declared.

"The General Council further supports the policy of controlling profits arising through the war. At the same time it stresses the necessity for all members of the community to make all possible savings, and to lend these to the government."

Stop Jim Crow

New York—"We will set the example for all others by completely abolishing Jim Crow aboard ship, pledging to work, live and fight alongside all those devoted to the destruction of fascism," 2,500 members of the Natl. Maritime Union pledged at a recent meeting here.

Free Speech Gets Bounce As Texas Labor-Haters Renew Propaganda Blitz

AUSTIN, Tex., July 11—Deep in the heart of Texas a noisy new anti-labor campaign is making its bid for national recognition from foes of unions and the President's war program.

Texas and Oklahoma constituted the scenic backdrop for last spring's phony "grass-roots" crusade against unions, collective bargaining and labor's wage standards. Set back on their heels by the united front of labor, the Administration and many business men, the sponsors of that campaign are apparently beginning to feel their oats again, according to Federated Press, labor news service.

SPREAD POISON

In recent weeks an organization called the Christian Americans, which features anti-labor and anti-minorities propaganda, has been spreading its activities. Sen. Lee O'Daniel, seeking re-election from poll-tax vooters, plans to key his campaign on hatred of labor.

And in a number of Texas cities, businessmen, corporation officials and foremen have been busy circulating a "declaration of war by the unarmed forces of America." Principal objects of attack are the working rules and provisions found in almost every union contract.

FIRE INSTRUCTORS

The campaign against labor and the President burst into full bloom when the Board of Regents of the University of Texas here refused to reappoint four instructors who had sought to place the viewpoint of labor and the New Deal before a reactionary "grass roots" meeting in Dallas last March.

The Board of Regents, after interviewing the instructors for almost an entire afternoon, ruled "that Messrs. Fagg Foster, Wendell Gordon and W. N. Peach by their conduct incident to the patriotic mass meeting . . . in which the Rev. Umphrey Lee, the Rev. George W. Truett and Mrs. Karl Hoblitzelle were the principal speakers, have violated the rules and regulations of the board of regents for the government of the U. of Texas. They were not re-employed."

CIO, AFL and civic leaders, together with representatives of the school's students, offered immediate protests. CIO Councils in Houston and Corpus Christi pledged a "fight to the finish."

WIDESPREAD CAMPAIGN

Shipyards, oil refineries and department stores have been circulating the "declaration of war" petitions, which hint in subtle fashion that collective action by workers, as through a union agreement, is against patriotism and all-out production.

Beaumont's largest department store, the White House, took a six-column advertisement on the back of Martin Dies' mouthpiece — the Beaumont Enterprise — to reprint the full declaration. It boasted that everyone associated with the store had signed the document—neglecting to point out that the $12-a-week sales-girls had no other choice.

FASCIST GROUP

The Christian Americans—which many Texans believe to be financed by the oil companies — has been branching out in recent months. Its platform is full of anti-Negro, anti-Semitic and anti-labor slogans reminiscent of the stuff turned out by Hitler's Nazis.

Louisiana legislators recently turned down a stringent anti-union bill proposed by the Christian Americans, and in effect told the crowd to get out of the state. With O'Daniel echoing their platform in his election campaign, the group may win considerable strength, however, in Texas.

STORM CENTER: University of Texas is the scene of last academic freedom fight. Reactionaries have pressured officials into dismissing three instructors who offended the big-wigs by speaking up for labor at a "grass roots" anti-union meeting in Dallas last spring. One of the fired men is J. F. Foster, inset. CIO, AFL and railway brotherhoods have asked the governor to rescind the firings.

Ask Better Pay for U. S. Employes

Washington, July 11.—All CIO affiliates were urged to write their Congressmen and Senators supporting the administration's federal employe wage program, in a letter sent out by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, this week.

Cowan's letter was sent on behalf of the United Federal Workers of America, which has been campaigning to correct substandard wage conditions affecting the war effort of thousands of government workers.

NO WAGE FREEZE

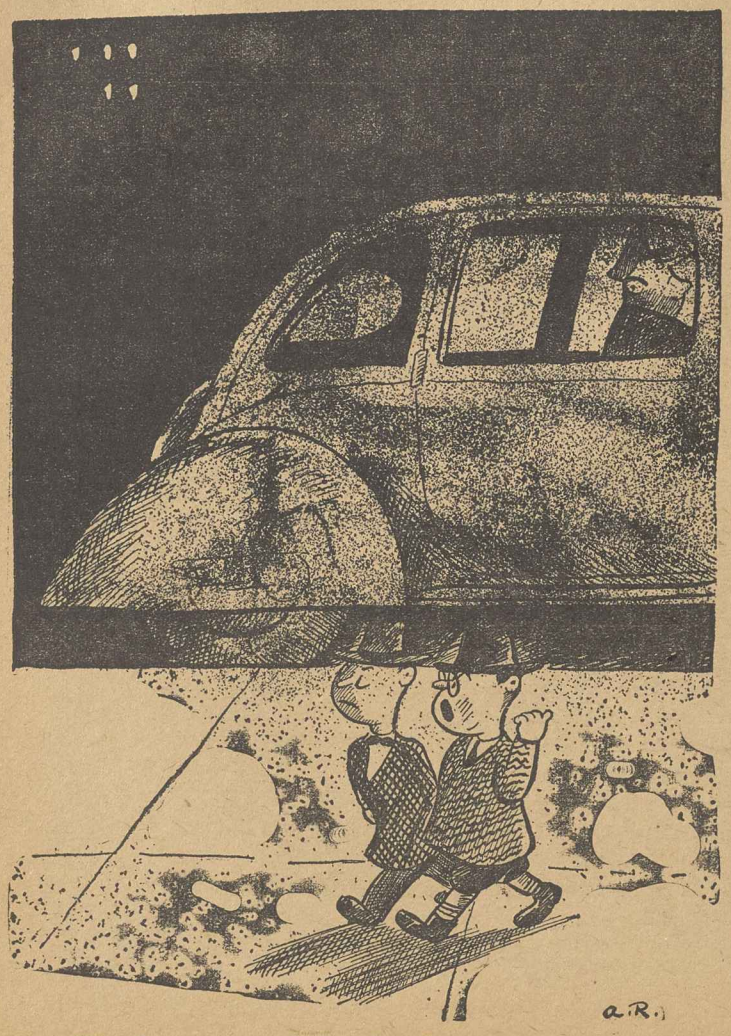
"Passage of the pending legislation," Cowan said, "would demonstrate that the President's seven-point economic program does not mean wage freezing, as some in high places have interpreted it, but provision for fair adjustment to increased living costs."

Cowan added that "the $1,200 minimum bill, which raises the salaries of nearly 200,000 lowest income workers, has finally passed the House after more than six months delay and is now before the Senate as S. 2150."

"President Roosevelt's proposals," he said, "would assure the same standard of overtime pay in the Federal service as now exists in private industry. The importance of this step is emphasized by the fact that there are now more workers in the Federal service than in any other single field, and that the government is daily coming into closer contact with private industry . . .

"Federal workers need this legislation in order to be able to buy the necessities of life. The legislation would add to total war efficiency."

The Upper Crust



"You know, Oswald, the chauffeur seems to be getting uppitty—saying he's going into the Army and do some good for people."

Union Security Won for 7,000 At Shipyard

Philadelphia, July 11—Cramps shipyard, one of the oldest in the United States, has signed a union security agreement with the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, covering the 7,000 men now employed at the yard.

Terms of the new contract call for maintenance of union membership, voluntary check-off of dues, and wage increases ranging up to 20 cents an hour for some unskilled workers. Union officials said the agreement included one of the best vacation provisions in any of the major shipyards, among other benefits.

SET MINIMUM

The wage adjustments in the contract, the union stated, went into effect June 23, even before the contract was signed, and set a new minimum of 82 cents an hour, in addition to other raises.

Although negotiations on the terms of the contract had been deadlocked on the issues of union security and the minimum wage, and the dispute certified to the National War Labor Board for settlement, an agreement was reached before the case came up for hearing before the Board.

Honor M. A. Coffey, Hotel Union Leader

Philadelphia, July 11—Death of Martin A. Coffey, business agent of the CIO Hotel & Restaurant Workers here, has been announced by officials of this Local Industrial Union. He was buried last Monday at Veterans Cemetery with military honors. Officers and members of the union attended the ceremony in a body.

Tannery Wages Lifted $350,000 In New Pacts

NEW YORK, July 11—Wage increases of more than $350,000 were negotiated in recent contracts, the CIO International Fur and Leather Workers announced today.

Biggest of the quartet was a first agreement with the Armour Leather Company, of Western Pennsylvania, which netted a $260,000 annual boost for 1,200 workers. Supplementary increases of three to six cents an hour were gained in the negotiations, which followed recommendations handed down by the War Labor Board.

The average increase won for leather workers since last November in Armour's Williamsport plant amounts to 11 cents an hour.

An additional $80,000 increase for 900 employes of the Keystone Tanning & Glue Co., also located in western Pennsylvania, was reported by the IFLWU in a recently-signed contract renewal.

In Toronto, Canada, renewals brought a 10 per cent increase, averaging from $2 to $7 a week, while Washington, D. C. fur workers won $3 to $5 raises.

Employes of the C. S. Walton Tannery in Baltimore gained a 25 per cent boost—amounting to 10 cents an hour—in the union's first contract with that firm.

Jersey CIO Raps Bias In Army Contract Awards

NEWARK, N. J., July 11—Chargse that the Army Ordnance Division in charge of contracts for the manufacture of parachute flare cloth is discriminating against the city of Paterson and the Northern New Jersey area were made jointly by the New Jersey CIO Council and representatives of the manufacturers' associations this week.

In a letter sent to Donald Nelson, War Production head, the joint committee stated that there were 6,000 textile workers engaged in weaving in this area, in addition to about 10,000 dyers about "to turn out millions of yards expeditiously."

SKIP JERSEY

In spite of this, the letter stated, out of contracts for many million yards recently handed out by the Ordnance Division, there wasn't "one single yard given to the state of New Jersey."

Irving Abramson, president of the New Jersey CIO Council, who called the conference of labor and industry representatives together, said that "every sign points to a very serious unemployment situation in the immediate future unless something is done . . .

"With no silk available at the present time from Japan, and with a serious rationing of rayon, there is an immediate prospect that weaving mills will have to shut down and perhaps go out of business."

OPA Asked To 'Enlist' CIO Price Police

New York, July 11.—CIO members and their wives are "mobilized and ready" to help police retail prices under the control regulations, the New York City CIO Council today told the Office of Price Administration.

It asked the OPA to make use of established CIO machinery in communities and neighborhoods to help keep retailers in line with maximum price rulings.

"CIO members and their wives are already organized on a community and neighborhood basis, as well as in the shops where they are employed," Council Secretary Saul Mills wrote to the OPA. "They are functioning as air raid wardens, auxiliary firemen, war bond and stamp solicitors, and in other civil defense work.

WLB Spurns Panel Report, Refuses $1 Steel Increase

Labor Group Voices Dissent; Union Wins 5 1-2c Raise, Security, Dues Check-off

WASHINGTON, July 17—With its labor members strongly dissenting, the National War Labor Board this week rode roughshod over its own fact-finding panel's report by turning down the CIO United Steel Workers demand for a dollar-a-day increase for Little Steel's 175,000 employes.

Instead the Board ordered a 5.5 cent hourly increase—far less than the CIO union had estimated would be sufficient to overcome the 13.3 per cent rise in the cost of living between April, 1942, time of the last steel pay raise, and March, 1942.

Committeemen from USA-CIO locals in the plants of Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown and Inland are meeting in Pittsburgh today at the call of Pres. Philip Murray to discuss the Board's turndown of their demand. The union and the companies—long notorious for their anti-labor bias—have been negotiating since last September.

The WLB decision granted the union a maintenance-of-membership form of security in Little Steel, and provided for check-off of union dues. It also ordered a guaranteed minimum wage rate of 78 cents an hour for piece work employes of Bethlehem Steel, who have long been the victims of a vicious and confusing system of wage determination.

The labor dissent to the majority decision was largely based on the fact-finding panel's report—which was practically "ignored" by the Board. It revealed that the union representatives—in an effort to quiet the majority's fears of inflation—had offered to take either the full $1 pay increase or 56 cents of it in war bonds—but the majority turned the proposal down.

Gain Union Security At Tractor Plant

PEORIA, Ill., July 18—Union security for workers at the huge Caterpillar Tractor plant here is assured by a decision of the National War Labor Board granting maintenance of membership, the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee announced this week.

The decision also calls for a fact-finding survey on the wage question based on the company's agreement "to pay wages as high as generally prevail in the industry for like work under like conditions."

Negotiations will then take place on the union's demand for a wage increase, using the board's wage survey as a basis. If the two parties fail to agree on the increase, the matter will go to the board for final decision.

A provision for preferential seniority and payment for union representatives for time lost in handling grievances was also included in the decision.

The board ordered that the number of stewards coming under preferential seniority and the payment for union representatives should be mutually worked out between the union and the Caterpillar management.

Jap Scrap Made in U.S.A.

So said Calvin Jones and Please Scaggs, members of the CIO Marine Cooks & Stewards Assn., who were on an Army transport in Dutch Harbor during the bombing.

They saw a flat piece of iron into which was cast the words "Singer Sew——", originally Singer Sewing Machine.

"An Army gunner had the piece of scrap iron," Scaggs said. "We tried to buy it, but he wouldn't sell it. We wanted to bring it back to show the people here—to show that we were right when we fought back in '36 and '37 against sending scrap iron to Japan."

Gen. MacArthur Greets Auto Union Parley

CHICAGO, July 18—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, United Nations' commander in the Far East, today sent greetings to the United Automobile Workers, CIO, whose seventh annual convention opens at the Hotel Sherman here Aug. 3.

"In time of peace you made the world's finest motor vehicles, its best civil aircraft, its most advanced agricultural machinery," MacArthur wired to Executive Chairman Albert Glenn of the UAW convention arrangements committee. "No developments of the century contributed more to the comfort and well-being of America.

"Now you have turned your mechanical genius and magnificent craftsmanship to forge the tanks, the planes, the automotive weapons we must have to win. Just as you led in peace, I have supreme confidence that your brawn and skill will lead in war.

EVERYBODY FIGHTS

"Men in overalls as well as men in khaki now fight. Every rivet you drive echoes victory. The glare of your torches is a beacon light to tomorrow's triumph. The men at the front will bless your name as weapons reach us."

More than 1,800 delegates are expected to attend the UAW's 10-day session, while an additional 200 women will attend the fourth annual conference of the union's women auxiliaries. CIO President Philip Murray is expected to address the convention.

CIO Artists Paint Army Mural

New York, N. Y., July 18—Mural decorations for the Army's station hospital recreation buildings are being provided by the United Scenic Artists of America, under an arrangement made with the American Red Cross which operates the buildings.

Work already has been started at the hospital recreation building at Fort Monmouth, N. J., one of 70 operated by the Red Cross. Work on the others will follow.

The buildings, run for the benefit of convalescent service men, are equipped with games, books, lounging space and other facilities designed to aid recovery of patients.

Citizen's Committee Set to Aid Bridges

WASHINGTON, July 18 — Formation of a Citizens' Committee for Harry Bridges, with Prof. F. O. Matthiesen of Harvard as temporary chairman was announced this week by the CIO Bridges Victory Committee. The announcement was made by CIO Vice-President Sherman Dalrymple and USA-CIO Secretary-Treasurer David J. MacDonald, who head the CIO Bridges committee.

"This committee is being set up in response to hundreds of letters and personal appeals from educators, clergymen, businessmen and other public spirited citizens who see the deportation order against Harry Bridges as a threat to American civil liberties and to the nation's war effort," Dalrymple and MacDonald said in making the announcement.

At the same time, more than 600 prominent citizens joined in signing an open letter to President Roosevelt, asking him to rescind Biddle's deportation order, on the ground that it "jeopardizes our war effort, not in terms of production—for it is clear that labor will continue to surpass its own high records—but in terms of national morale."

COMMITTEE FUNCTION

Function of the new citizen's committee will be to work with the CIO committee in publicizing the case and bringing the issues to the people.

"These issues," the CIO Committee said, "as President Murray stated at the time of the Biddle order, involve 'a blow not only to all concepts of American justice but even more a blow at national unity and morale necessary for victory in the war against the Axis.'"

Meanwhile additional protests continue to pour in from unions calling on Biddle and on President Roosevelt to rescind the deportation order. These unions include the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, meeting in executive board session at Denver, Colo., Local 924 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, Local 348 of the AFL United Brewery Workers of Martins Ferry, O., and many others.

READY TO VOTE: California CIO is making sure that every member registers to vote in coming elections. Refugees From Hitlerland Hit Back With Relief Gifts

WASHINGTON, July 18—Anti-Nazi German refugees have joined in the CIO campaign to aid the victims of war in the United Nations, by participating in the drive of the CIO War Relief Committee. Without solicitation, a group of young German refugees who have been in this country only a few years, sent in their first contribution of $54. This represents donations of an hour's pay a month made by young men and women who are barely earning a living.

Upon their arrival in this country a few years ago, several thousand young German refugees who are opposed to Hitler's tyranny, organized hiking clubs known as the Nature Friends of America.

They publish a monthly magazine, the Nature Friends, and are located all over the country. The Youth Section of this organization is composed of youngsters between the ages of 18 and 25. Some of them belong to CIO unions, some to the AFL, and a few are not members of any existing trade organizations. Nevertheless, all the members of the Youth Section enthusiastically joined the campaign of the CIO War Relief Committee, and have made their first monthly contribution of an hour's pay.

The secretary of the Youth Section, Nelly Sokolski, and an active member of their War Relief Committee, Miss Ursel Ksinski, plan to intensify their drive on a national scale and to make monthly contributions until their former homeland is liberated by the United Nations.

GOVERNOR'S PRAISE

The Governor of Connecticut, Robert A. Hurley, has joined the list of prominent officials who have endorsed the CIO War Relief Committee. The following statement of official approval was issued by the Governor last week:

"The National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief is to be commended for its program in raising funds to alleviate the misery of workers and peoples of those countries fighting Fascism and Nazism.

"The method of raising these funds, a minimum of one hour's pay per month from every CIO member, is indeed unique, and should result in the fulfillment of the CIO's pledge to aid war sufferers of the United Nations as well as to give comfort to the boys in service of our own country.

"I have no doubt but that the members of the CIO in Connecticut will join wholeheartedly in ratifying the program to the end that they not only will give financial strength to our victory program, but will work all the harder at their defense jobs in speeding up that victory."

Following this endorsement by the Governor of Connecticut, Local 1486 of the United Steelworkers of America, of New Haven, Conn., contributed over $300 to the CIO War Relief Committee, their first contribution of regular monthly donations. The United Packinghouse Workers of America, Local Union No. 11 also in the New England area, contributed $200.

Ten Union Conventions Scheduled

Washington, July 18—Ten CIO international unions and State Councils have scheduled conventions during the next two and a half months, according to information received at the national CIO office. They are:

West Virginia Council, Wheeling, W. Va., July 27.

United Automobile Workers, Chicago, Aug. 3.

Minnesota Council, Ely, Minn., Aug. 7.

Colorado Council, Denver, Colo., Sept. 4.

Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers, Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 5.

United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Indianapolis, Ind., Sept. 7.

Indiana Council, Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 18.

Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, Atlantic City, Sept. 22.

Pact Lifts Pay, Brings Security At Ward Bakery

Indianapolis, Ind., July 18—Workers at the Ward Baking Co. gained dime-an-hour raises and the union shop when Local 273 of the United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes signed a contract with the Ward Baking Co. here.

Lewis' Yoke Cast Aside

Detroit, July 18—Seven Michigan local unions heretofore affiliated with the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee and District 50 of the United Mine Workers, have thrown off the yoke of John L. Lewis and voted to continue their affiliation with the CIO, according to reports received by August Scholle, regional CIO director.

The total membership represented is approximately 3,000.

FIGHT RAID

An eighth local, No. 307 UCWOC, made up of employes of the Kerry-Hanson Flooring Co., at Grayling, Mich., is fighting off a raid by District 50 organizers. This group had been issued a Local Industrial Union charter on June 22 when the membership refused to go along with the attempt of A. D. "Denny" Lewis to deliver them lock, stock and barrel to District 50 UMW without their even being consulted.

The District 50 local voting unanimously to sever relations with District 50 and apply for a LIU charter in the CIO, is No. 12211, made up of employes of the Antrim Iron Company at Mancelona, Mich.

ONLY TWO OPPOSED

The other locals severing connections are former UCWOC locals. Local 307 with a membership of 165 workers employed at the Petoskey-Portland Cement Co., at Petoskey, Mich., voted for a LIU-CIO charter after listening to spokesmen who presented both sides of the dispute. District 50 UMW was represented by James Scanlan and Chas. Thomason. Regional Director Scholle spoke for the CIO. There were only two dissenting votes when the motion was put.

In Detroit, Local 297, UCWOC, made up of employes of the Vernor Ginger Ale Co., decided to apply for a charter in the United Retail and Wholesale Employes-CIO.

FILE APPLICATIONS

Local 373, Detroit Building Service Employes, applied for its LIU-CIO charter as far back as June 22. Local 223, also made up of building service employes, has voted to present its application.

Last Friday Local 98, made up of 500 Building Construction Mechanics, turned down the plea of District 50 organizers and asked for a LIU-CIO charter. That action followed twenty-four hours after Local 185, employes of the Chamberlain Metal Weatherstrip Co., Detroit, took similar action.

New Tax Bill Far Short Of War Goal

Washington, July 18—This week the House Ways and Means Committee finally got around to reporting out a tax bill—lacking 2.5 billions of the amount the Treasury asked and lacking almost all the points that would go to make the bill adequate to the needs of victory and to the fight against inflation.

One bright spot showed up in the bill as finally reported, in which corporate profits taxes were set at 45 per cent of normal profits and 87.5 per cent of excess. The rest of the bill falls short not only on the amount of money needed but on the whole principle of ability to pay. And to top it off, the House Rules Committee gave the bill a gag rule, that permits no amendments when the bill hits the floor for debate and vote this Monday.

THE PARTICULARS

As reported out, the bill falls down on these particulars—all of them asked for in the Treasury's recommendations and urged on the Committee by the CIO and labor generally:

1. All the old loopholes that allow wealthy families to escape taxation are left in the bill, including the scandal of tax exempt securities, and the failure to require joint mandatory tax returns by wealthy couples.

2. The income tax exemptions were lowered to levels that will hit the low income groups proportionately much harder than those in the higher brackets.

3. It still leaves the sales tax open as a threatening possibility, since the revenue deficit must be made up and the bill as reported and voted now can be supplemented with a later bill that can include the sales tax.

CIO officials here pointed out that the tax bill will now go to the Senate, where hearings will begin next week that will give CIO unions and members a second chance to present their views on the need for a tax bill based on ability to pay.

Sweatshop Dispute to WLB

New Orleans, July 18.—Underpaid workers in the Bemis Bag Co. here are awaiting certification of their wage dispute with the management to the War Labor Board, following complete breakdown in negotiations between the company and Local 394, Textile Workers' Union.

The minimum pay here is 40 cents as compared to rates of from 47 to 53 cents in mills in St. Louis and Seattle, doing similar work.

WLB Spurns Steel Union Demand; Decision Seen Affecting All Unions

OPA Meddler Stopped Talks On Plane Pay

LOS ANGELES, July 18 — Interference from an official of the OPA, who took a strong stand against wage increases, this week was a major cause for postponing the War Production Board's airplane wage stabilization conference here.

Richard Gilbert, lieutenant of OPA Director Leon Henderson, barged into the meeting to express opposition to wage increases of any sort, except for "elimination of substandards of living and inequalities." He claimed that wage increases of any other character would be opposed by government agencies with "all the powers at their command."

UNIONS PROTEST

The OPA official's entrance into the stabilization conference brought immediate and bitter protest from leaders of the CIO United Automobile Workers and the AFL Intl. Assn. of Machinists, the two labor organizations represented.

Washington newspaper stories asserted that Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board—whose labor production division sponsors the plane conference—was incensed at Gilbert's statements.

In Pittsburgh, CIO President Philip Murray revealed that he had been informed by the west coast auto union officials that "they can't continue the conference" while an OPA official sits in at the meeting.

PORTER PRESIDED

The conference consisted of eight representatives of labor and eight from industry, with Paul Porter of the WPB in the chair. Representing the UAW-CIO were William Taylor, Jack Montgomery, Charles Kerrigan and Delmond Garst.

The UAW-CIO enters the stabilization meetings with a 10-point program designed to increase productive efficiency and morale in the West Coast's huge and booming aircraft industry.

ASKED WIDE VIEW

Chief among the UAW-CIO proposals were a demand that the problem of wages be treated as a national rather than a district question; that wage increases be made retroactive to July 6; that overtime pay in accordance with the policies of the UAW-CIO be granted, and that there be established vacations with pay or bonuses to take their place.

The CIO union leaders proposed a 90c minimum for unskilled labor, with a 75c rate for new workers undergoing training. It urged a minimum of $1.35 and a maximum of $1.60 for skilled workers and a minimum of 95 cents and a maximum of $1.335 for semi-skilled workers.

Under the UAW-CIO proposals, the minimum rate would be lifted 15 cents an hour over current levels, with proportionate increases among the better-paid.

Win 8c Raise At Navy Yard In Philly

Philadelphia, July 18.—A wage increase of eight cents an hour for most of the job classifications at the Philadelphia Navy Yard was announced this week by the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

The union stated that the raise was granted after Samuel McAndrews, president of Local 101, had asked Admiral C. W. Fisher for an increase for the Navy Yard workers here to equal the eight cent increase won for commercial shipyards at the recent Shipbuilding Stabilization Conference in Chicago.

FDR's Inflation Bar Is 'Lost or Stolen'; CIO Seeks Return

WASHINGTON, July 18.—"Lost, strayed or stolen—one indivisible seven-point anti-inflation program while being taken for a ride down Pennsylvania Avenue; reward for prompt return will be national stability, greater war production, greater striking power, advancing the date of victory, saving millions of lives and billions of dollars."

This is how CIO's statement on the seven-point message put out by President Roosevelt led off this week. With this preamble, the statement went on to point out:

1. The President called for higher corporate taxes, ceilings on prices and rents, stabilization of farm prices and wages, rationing, early payment of debts, more and more billions in war bonds.

2. "We accepted this program on the word of the President that it was necessary on the home front and that it was 'indivisible.' We now renew that acceptance. We challenge all who have not accepted it to do likewise. We challenge the executives of the Little Steel companies and of the great industries of America, growing fat on war contracts, the commercialized and boulevard farms and the Congressional spokesmen of all these groups.

SEEDS OF INFLATION

3. "Seventy priceless days have passed since the President made his proposal. Seeds of inflation and of distrust and disunity have been sown. We, representing the steel workers and, we believe, speaking for millions of other workers, say: We will toe the line.

"We are enlisted for the duration. This is our war. The battle against inflation is part of that war. Let those who have laughed off limitations of income and pressured the House Ways and Means Committee into going easy on war profits now join up or be inducted. It is very late to check inflation. It is not too late."

Following up these thoughts, the statement goes on to point out that the seven-point program has "been punched full of holes"—by the House tax bill, by Leon Henderson's failure to fix solid ceilings on prices, by the failure to ration, by the failure to stabilize wages in the real sense—that is, by failure to raise wages where raises are needed.

'BURP IN CHURCH'

And on the President's proposal to limit incomes to $25,000 a year, the message says: "In Congress, where constitutional lawyers are a dime a dozen, it was treated as a burp in church, something to be overlooked and forgotten as quickly as possible."

Labor Supply 'Drying Up,' McNutt Warns

Washington, July 18—War Industries are rapidly drying up the available labor supply, War Manpower Commission Chairman Paul V. McNutt warned today. More than 12.5 million men and women were working in war industry on July 1, he said, and five million more will be needed in the last half of 1942.

"We must move very quickly now to utilize our reserves—our women Negroes, older workers, disemployed white collar workers, aliens and others who are or can be qualified for war jobs," McNutt said.

Navy Halts Brush-Offs Of CIO Men

Washington, July 18 — A high Navy Department official today ordered an end to the curt brush-offs that labor leaders have frequently met when attempting to adjust grievances with the Navy.

In a circular letter on labor policy, Rear Adm. Ben Moreell, chief of the Bureau of Yards and Docks, took note of the fact that "scant consideration" has frequently been given to cases presented by labor union officials.

HEARINGS ASSURED

"The Chief of Bureau realizes that in many instances excessive amounts of time are required to straighten out labor difficulties," the admiral wrote. "However, it is believed that much can be accomplished toward establishing cordial labor relations if the accredited representatives of labor are convinced that any legitimate proposal which they make will receive careful consideration and will not be subject to peremptory rejection.

"The Administration policy with respect to the recognition of the legitimate place of labor organizations is well known, and has been enacted into law. The spirit of this policy be carried through all of our dealings with the representatives of labor."

USA-CIO Plea For $1 Raise Turned Down

WASHINGTON, July 18 — Brushing aside the report of its own fact-finding panel, the Natl. War Labor Board today turned down the demand of the CIO United Steelworkers of America for dollar-a-day increases in Little Steel, and recommended in its stead a raise of only 5½ cents an hour.

In a vigorous dissent, the Board's four labor representatives charged that the increase failed to meet the 13.3 per cent of living increase between April, 1941, and March, 1942; that it would injure the morale of the steel workers in the nation's basic war industry; and that it would serve to draw off many workers into more lucrative jobs in other fields. The labor group urged adoption of the $1 increase clearly indicated in the panel's report to the WLB.

AFFECTS ALL UNIONS

The USA-CIO led by Pres. Philip Murray, entered its first collective bargaining negotiations with Little Steel in September, 1941, and the case went to the Board in February of this year. The wage increase is retroactive to the date when the WLB took over the case.

The Board majority's decision was of importance to every nation in the country, for it outlined a "stabilization procedure" which will limit increases in hourly wage rates to a maximum of 15 per cent over the Jan. 1, 1941, level. At that time, the WLB said, prices and living costs were in a harmonious relationship which the Board will endeavor to re-establish in a bevy of important cases — concerning at least a million workers—which are now on its docket.

UNION SECURITY

To a crowd of nearly 75 newspapermen who crowded its hearing room in the Dept. of Labor Building, the Board revealed that it had also ordered union security in the form of a maintenance of membership clause, as well as the check-off of union dues among the 175,00 workers in the far-flung plants of Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown and Inland Steel.

The employer representatives dissented from the majority report on union security, which provides a 15-day period for Little Steel workers to quit the union if they so desire. After that time, union

A Seven-Horse Job

Where's the Extra Money?

Where is all that extra purchasing power which has to be cut, we are told, to prevent inflation?

To listen to the propaganda of the publishers and politicians who are more intent on fighting labor than on fighting Hitler, you'd think it was all in the hands of the working people, and that wage-cutting, sales taxes, etc., were the only solution. But what are the facts?

Department of Labor figures just published show that 71% of all American industrial workers earn less than $40 a week—which is less than a "health and decency" standard for an American family; and that 50% do not earn even a "bare subsistence" family wage of $30.

Who are really getting the extra purchasing power then?

The OPA estimates that 77% of the $93,200,000,000 national income that will be divided this year between America's 32,650,000 families, will go to families with incomes of more than $2,000 a year—which excludes more than 70% of the workers.

OPA figures also show that only 8% of American families will have incomes above $5,000 this year, but their incomes will total almost $34,000,000,000, or 36% of all income available.

When labor seeks to remedy wage inequalities and to raise substandard wages, it is not creating an inflationary surplus of purchasing power. It is simply trying to assure living standards adequate for the health and efficiency of America's war workers.

The place where the extra purchasing power exists that really causes inflation is in the higher-income brackets. And the way to reach this is through progressive taxation, as proposed by the U. S. Treasury and the CIO tax program. This won't deprive low-income workers of the necessities of life, but it will cut down the inflationary surpluses now in the hands of the well-to-do and the wealthy.

Unconquered People

The "Unconquered People" of Europe have never given up the fight against their Nazi slave-masters and every day they prepare the ground for a second front, according to the story told in the Office of War Information's new pamphlet, released this week.

The pamphlet, under the title "The Unconquered People" tells the heroic story of the men and women who slip out at night to blow up German munition trains, who speed the Gestapo hangmen to hell with bullets, who sabotage the production lines in Czech arms plants, who stage lightning raids on Nazi garrisons in Yugo-Slavia.

Their fight is carried on against the most fearful odds, with death the lightest penalty for being caught, the pamphlet points out. Every weapon in the arsenal of barbarism is used against them, including the worse than barbaric shooting of hostages.

And still they fight—so bravely and tenaciously that scores of thousands of German troops are on active duty in the occupied countries, taking them out of the front lines against the United Nations.

These troops undergo a constant lowering of morale, for they never know when a patriot knife will be stuck in their backs or a home-made grenade spread them over the countryside.

"Some day the full story will be written for all to read, with names and dates and places," the pamphlet says. "How soon? The patriots in all occupied lands now resist against all odds. But fearless spirit and fiery determination and the willingness to die so that freedom shall live are not enough.

"The full story will not be told until the United Nations, by military action, have joined hands with the patriots in final battle for the ultimate victory."

"The Unconquered People," first pamphlet put out by the newly formed Office of War Information, is illustrated by Edmund Duffy. Copies can be obtained by writing the Office of War information, Washington, D. C.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

SOME months ago a national conference of CIO editors publicly called on the daily press to "follow the example of other private industries by abandoning policies which hinder successful prosecution of the war and convert itself into a war industry dedicated to the defeat of the Axis."

Unfortunately the daily press, by and large, has completely failed to follow such advice. It has continued business as usual as a special pleader for the selfish interests which control it. It has failed in its all-important war duty of promoting national unity and mobilizing the united effort of all groups to win the war.

Pres. Roosevelt's seven-point anti-inflation program is a case in point. This has been treated as a stick with which to beat labor, in line with the consistent wage-cutting propaganda of most of the big dailies; while all of the points which might adversely affect profit interests have been deliberately ignored or misrepresented.

Of course, the press does not bear the sole responsibility for failure to enact the President's seven-point program. Congress has failed to act upon the most important points and bureaucrats have bungled. But the press has failed to create and in informed public opinion which would quickly whip politicians and bureaucrats into line, if the American people knew the real facts.

The seven points are: (1) an effective tax program directed against high profits and surplus wealth—to which the President coupled a limitation of personal net income to $25,000 a year, after taxes;

(2) Effective price control; (3) wage stabilization; (4) stabilization of farm prices; (5) greatly increased war bond purchases; (6) more extensive rationing; (7) reduced installment buying and paying off of debts and mortgages.

For its own selfish purposes, the business-controlled press has completely distorted the true picture of this program. It has misrepresented wage stabilization as wage freezing. It has concentrated nearly all its attention on attacking labor for demanding adjustment of present wage inequalities and for resisting undue cuts in real wages caused by sharply increased living costs.

Actually labor has accepted the principle of wage stabilization, and the wage adjustments it seeks are not of an inflationary character. The most immediately urgent steps necessary to prevent inflation are a progressive tax program and effective price control and rationing.

These are the points at which the seven-point program is really breaking down. But you'd never guess it from reading your daily papers.

The U. S. Treasury presented to Congress a tax program, approved in general by the CIO, which would have taken the most effective step against inflation by progressively taxing surplus wealth and purchasing power.

The House ways and means committee has shamefully mutilated this tax program, with never a protest from most of the daily press. It has distorted it into a soak-the-poor-and-spare-the-rich program, which falls billions of dollars short of raising the necessary revenue.

(1) It fails to limit annual incomes of the wealthy to $25,000, thus completely violating the equality-of-sacrifice intent of the President's program, and depriving our war effort of close to two hundred millions in tax revenue.

(2) It gives special privilege to the rich by failing to require compulsory joint income tax returns by married couples. This deprives the war effort of about $300,000,000 and benefits only a small group of wealthy families.

(3) It favors the rich again by failing to tax tax-exempt securities, retaining this tax-free special privilege for banks, corporations and the wealthiest individuals, at a cost of between two and three hundred million dollars to the war effort.

(4) It fails to raise normal and surtaxes on corporation profits to the 55% rate asked by the Treasury, limiting this taxation to 45%. This means a saving of about a billion for the wealthiest corporations, and a corresponding loss to the country.

Meanwhile Congressional tories are sabotaging an effective price control by refusing necessary funds to the OPA; and OPA Administrator Henderson is himself playing into the hands of the saboteurs of the seven points by concentrating on wage-freezing propaganda and neglecting to install a widespread and effective rationing program.

members must continue their affiliation that the USA-CIO for the duration of the agreement or forfeit their jobs.

In a third section of its decision, the Board ended the crazy quilt pattern of piecework wage payments at Bethlehem which has been under criticism from labor, government and civic groups for three decades. It directed Bethlehem to pay a guaranteed minimum hourly wage of 78 cents an hour to all piece-rate workers.

LABOR DISSENTS

The labor group dissented on this issue, too. Approving the Board's action in ending the chicanery which Bethlehem has long practised in computing piecework rates, the union representatives urged that the minimum should be higher than the 78 cents an hour approved by the majority.

Labor spokesmen on the Board were CIO Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas, Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers; Sec.-Treas. George Meany and Robert J. Watt of the AFL. The majority opinion on the wage question was written by Dr. George W. Taylor, a public representative, while Dr. Frank P. Graham wrote the section upholding the union's demand for security.

The labor minority, in its five-page dissent, charged that the Board had "substituted rhetoric for analysis" in going all-out "for the inflation thesis, a thesis compounded of conjectures and prophecies, fears and hysteria . . .

EXERCISE OF WORKERS

"In short, the Board has acted, as the chairman points out, on the assumption that the cost of living will now be stabilized. Obviously and incontestably, now means—at the expense of the workers.

"To single out the workers for such discriminatory treatment is to risk a serious blow to their morale and thereby dangerously to undermine the war effort . . .

"Denial of the union's request, under the circumstances of this case, and for the reasons assigned by the majority, gravely jeopardizes continuance of the truly remarkable spirit these workers have thus far demonstrated."

REVIEW FINDINGS

Carefully reviewing the report of the Board's own fact-finding panel, the union representatives noted that living costs had advanced 13.3 per cent since the date of the last steel wage increase in April, 1941, while weekly earnings had fallen almost 1 per cent during the same period.

The panel's findings of a 13.3 per cent living cost rise made no allowances for increases since March 15 of this year, the labor group reminded the Board.

"It (the Board) is obviously aware that the Office of Price Administration has permitted increases in the price of gasoline, canned goods and other commodities, with warnings that further price increases must be anticipated," the minority report declared.

LOST BUYING POWER

"The loss in the buying power of the earnings of the steel workers since the last general change of wage rates in the steel industry will therefore substantially exceed 13.3 per cent. The loss in real wages exceeds the $1 per day wage adjustment requested by the union."

Upholding another section of the panel's report, the labor group warned that continued increases in weekly earnings in other industry where overtime is being worked will draw workers away from the steel industry, which operates on close to a 40-hour week schedule. It quoted from the panel findings to show that the companies can easily afford the cost of the dollar increase out of their war-swollen profits.

Rather than denying the validity of the panel's claims that the wage increase was justified, the WLB "ignored" them, the minority charged.

By refusing to accept April 1, 1941—when the steel workers gained their last increase—as the starting point for determining the loss in labor living standards through rising consumer costs, "the Board has struck a serious blow at the foundations of the collective bargaining process," the labor group declared.

"The wage rates then established were obtained by collective bargaining," it continued, "the fundamental purpose of which is to obtain a fair and equitable distribution between labor and management of the product of their joint efforts."

In granting the 5.5 cent increase, the Board majority indicated it was establishing a "stabilization policy" that will affect every union coming before it in the next few months.

Asserting that cost of living had increased 15 per cent since the first of 1941 until Pres. Roosevelt offered his 7-point economic program in May, 1942, the WLB majority hinted it will permit no increase that will bring hourly wage rates to more than 15 per cent above their level of Jan. 1, 1941.

TECHNICAL REASONS

The steel union's 5½ cent increase was based on a highly technical bit of reasoning by the Board. It argued that the dime-an-hour increase won in the spring of 1941 amounted to 11.8 per cent, leaving the workers in the industry 3.2 per cent short of the 15 per cent cost of living rise.

Since average steel wages are about $1, the Board granted the workers a 3.2 cent increase based on the cost of living.

The remaining 2.3 cent increase was based on extraordinary living cost increases in the steel towns, together with the fact that the "rules had been changed in the middle of the game." That reference was to the President's 7-point anti-inflation program speech, which occurred more than two months after the Little Steel case went to the Labor Board.

CASE SACRIFICES

Questioned closely by reporters on the future effects of their new stabilization policy, the public members of the Board agreed that their recommendation would cause a heavy sacrifice by the steel workers. But they maintained a complete lack of responsibility for considering other sections of the President's 7-point program—limitation of incomes to $25,000, high taxation on company profits, rationing of scarce materials and strict price control regulation.

Despite failure of Congress and the the administrative agencies of the government to move aggressively against these problems, the Board majority said it could see no alternative but to take its decisive action against the steel workers.

Dr. Tayor, spokesman for the Board on the wage issue, ducked a newspaperman's question about future living cost increases by expressing hope that there would be any. Asked to look at the question "realistically," he merely expressed hope once again that other sections of the anti-inflation program could be enacted.

Labor Group Sought Raise In War Bonds

Washington, July 17 — Labor members of the War Labor Board, fighting the inflation theories of the majority, offered a compromise solution whereby the $1 steel wage increase would be paid in U. S. war bonds—but the suggestion was voted down.

The minority report revealed the labor group then suggested that the 44 cents a day increase approved by the majority be paid in cash, with the remaining 56 cents to be paid in bonds. This too was turned down.

"The majority insists that a wage adjustment of $1 per day in cash would be dangerously inflationary and must therefore be reduced," the labor group declared.

"But inasmuch as the majority does not, and cannot, contend that granting the wage adjustment of $1 per day in the form of war bonds would be inflationary, its whole argument collapses."

Lumbermen Laud Murray, CIO Policies

Portland, Ore., July 18—CIO's Intl. Woodworkers are solidly behind Philip Murray and President Roosevelt in their victory program, and solidly against the disruptive work of John L. Lewis, according to a unanimous resolution of the IWA's executive board passed here at this week's meeting.

The board's resolution quoted from the recent declaration of the national CIO executive board, which bluntly accused Lewis of using his position as leader of the United Mine Workers "to hamper the nation's victory effort not only by failure to extend positive support to the nation and to our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, but also by a studied campaign of disruption and disunity, both within and outside the labor movement."

British Wages Up 46 Percent Since Oct., '38

London, July 18—A rise in the average weekly earnings of six millions of British workers in 56,200 plants was announced last week by the British Ministry of Labor.

Between October, 1938, and January, 1942, British labor's income rose about 46 per cent. During this same period the cost of living index rose approximately 29 per cent, leaving workers 17 per cent to the good.

Much of the extra money brought into the homes of England has gone out again into the war effort through the medium of small savings, which have passed the four-billion mark.

WLB Opinion:

Union Security Seen as Buttress To U.S. Democracy

WASHINGTON, July 17—Union security strengthens industrial democracy; industrial democracy gives added power to American democracy and aids in the critical attack on humanity being waged by the fascist axis.

That was the theme of the opinion of Dr. Frank Graham, president of the University of North Carolina and public member of the War Labor Board, backing up the Board's decision for maintenance-of-membership and the check-off of union dues in Little Steel.

Citing the heroism of the British, Russian and Chinese peoples on the battle-lines of the world fight for freedom, Graham said:

"One of the youngest of these free institutions would, by this decision (of the WLB) be made more secure for the all-out effort to win the war. By provision for the freedom and security of this union, the empire of steel becomes potentially the commonwealth of steel.

BASIC RESOURCE

"The commonwealth of steel becomes even more a basic resource of the American Commonwealth in the production of ships, planes, tanks and guns for the mighty forward fronts of democracy which will beat back the Axis powers and make possible at least the advance of freedom and the organization of justice and peace in the world."

Graham's opinion suggested that the maintenance of a "stable union membership makes for the maintenance of responsible union leadership and responsible union discipline, makes for keeping faithfully the terms of the contract, and provides a stable basis for union-management cooperation for more efficient production."

LAUDS CHECK-OFF

Similarly, Graham wrote, check-off of union dues by the companies will avert the necessity of union officials devoting large amounts of their time to collecting dues. He pointed out that is is a particular problem in steel, where the workers' homes are frequently at considerable distances from the factory, and where questions of language and custom make collection more difficult.

"The time, thought and energy given in tense struggles for the organization, maintenance of membership, and collection of dues, necessary and educationally valuable as they are, should as fairly and wisely as possible now be concentrated on winning the war," he continued.

"The intense struggle to maintain the labor unions should, by a stabilization of the union, give way to the more intense and larger struggle to maintain the American Union as the hope of freedom and peace in the world."

The Board's decision provides that members may withdraw from the union during a 15-day period following the order, but after that time must continue their affiliation with the USA-CIO for the life of the contract. The employer members of the Board dissented.

Ballad Heroes Join CIO Fight To Beat Hitler

New York, July 19—Paul Bunyan, John Henry, Jackhammer John and Driller Drake, legendary American work-heroes, got together on this Saturday's CIO "Labor for Victory" radio show, heard over NBC's Red Network at 10:15 p.m. EWT.

They got together as principals in a new Ballad of Production, put on by CIO to show again how union men and women throughout the county are working at the job of preparing the second front that will knock Hitler and the Axis down for good.

The ballad, sung with guitar by Woody Guthrie, opens with four men sitting around on a mountain top, boasting about the work they've done in their time. As they brag, the "Girl in the Red, White and Blue" tells them to look down and find out there's a war on.

So the four look down and decide they'll go to work for the country again to make sure we win the war and the one that works the hardest will have a date that night with the girl. They work all that day and come back to claim the date—only to find that the girl has taken a job in a war factory on the late swing shift, and can't meet them.

This week's "Labor for Victory" was written by Woody Guthrie and Peter Lyon. Next CIO show will be Saturday, August 15, NBC Red Network, 10:15 p.m. Eastern Wartime.

STAINLESS STEEL...
the Ageless Metal

• Thousands of products which are contributing to the American ability to produce more and more of the essential goods are better because they are made of stainless steel.

This ageless metal will not rust, tarnish, or stain and requires no lacquer or other protective treatment to preserve its smooth, hard, bright surface. It can be easily cleaned. It is strong and tough. It is highly resistant to corrosion, oxidation, and scaling at elevated temperatures. Because of this unique combination of strength and durability, products and equipment made of stainless steel are light in weight and give long, trouble-free service with a minimum of maintenance.

Consequently, stainless steel has become tremendously important in the food, textile, aircraft, petroleum, chemical, and other essential industries.

CIO Officials To Lecture At School

MONTEAGLE, Tenn., July 18—Union men and women from the southern states will study "Labor's Part in Winning the War" at the Highlander Folk School this summer under the direction of government and labor officials.

The OPA will be represented by Edith Christianson of the consumer division and R. R. R. Brooks, author of many well-known books on labor. The WPB program will be explained by T. F. Burns. Other agencies are sending speakers to assist with a new course on governmental programs affecting labor.

Unions must overcome the opposition to Production Councils in the South. What labor has done to put the request of the War Production Board for management-labor cooperation into effect in other parts of the county will be described by Edwin Smith, director of the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign and former member of the NLRB; Len de Caux, editor of the CIO NEWS; Ted Silvey, Secretary Ohio CIO; and Frank Winn, Editor Ford Facts, UAW-CIO.

What southern workers must do will be discussed by labor officials in the south. Problems of war workers will be stressed throughout the entire six weeks, August 3 to September 12. Methods of carrying the story of labor's effort to defeat fascism will be studied for two weeks under the leadership of Robert Cruden, publicity director of the United Rubber Workers, and Travis Hedrick, publicity director, Oil Workers Organizing Campaign.

Richard Deverall, educational director of the United Automobile Workers, will hold a three-day institute at Highlander for aircraft and auto workers in the South during the term. A state CIO conference will also be held under the leadership of Paul R. Christopher, President of the Tennessee CIO Council.

Following the term, the Highlander staff will conduct a union training conference in New Orleans at the request of Fred Pieper, CIO Regional Director for Louisiana.

Mrs. Roosevelt Praises Union Women's Activities

West Park, N. Y., July 18—"The best thing you women could do is to use your organizations to inform the citizens why everyone must voluntarily take personal responsibility to help the war front," Mrs. Roosevelt told 50 representatives of CIO, AFL and independent auxiliaries at a weekend conference, July 11-12, sponsored by OPA's Consumer Division.

She stressed the pivotal importance of women in the community, and urged them to understand price control, rationing and other war measures and explain them to their neighbors. Trade union women, she said, possess a greater responsibility than other women to educate the public because they are part of a closely knit group with organizational experience.

Because of the pivotal position of women emphasized by Mrs. Roosevelt, the delegates voted to recommend to the OPA that women be called to serve on War Price and Rationing Boards and as volunteer price wardens, and that classes be set up at once to train women volunteers. They also urged establishment of nation-wide rent ceilings.

Miss Woodruff of the Child Care Committee of the New York State Department of Education, told the delegates that in addition to consumer education, auxiliaries had another job to do, "the education of Congress to appropriate money for wartime nurseries."

Urge War on Finland

Baltimore.—Declaration of war on Finland as part of the campaign to open a western front in Europe against the Nazis was advocated last week by the Baltimore Industrial Union Council.

Rousing the people in all communities to the need for a second front in Europe was urged on all affiliated organizations in a special letter issued today by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO and signed by all its officers.

"Hitlerism classifies women as 'midway between ape and man'" the letter points out and "under Hitlerism we and our daughters would lose our rights as human beings and be reduced to abject slavery."

The letter concludes:

"We adopted a resolution on the second front. We urged your auxiliary to pass a similar resolution to send to the President. But resolutions are not enough. We must rouse the people in our communities to the need for a second front.

"We must make them see that we can only defeat Hitler by dividing his forces, by making him fight on two fronts. We must make them realize that Hitler cannot be defeated without great sacrifice of the lives of our loved ones; but that fewer American lives will be lost in the immediate opening of a European front than will be lost if Hitler marches on to victory in Europe and then turns his full strength against us.

"The women of Britain, China and Russia are cheering their men on to fight and to die. Their voices are united in pleas for a second front in Europe to crush Hitler's power in 1942. Let us add our voices to theirs.

"We urge you to get in touch with your union and with other groups in your community. Suggest the calling of a mass meeting for a second front. Rouse your friends and neighbors. Your life and ours, of humanity for years to come is hanging in the balance."

Britain Honors Woman Worker

London, July 18—(ALN)—As a means of stimulating production in Britain's key war industries, the Ministry of Supply has adopted the plan of naming a "Worker of the Week."

First to receive this title is Mrs. Edith Foster, 26-year-old wife of an Army sergeant. She is group leader in a South Wales Royal Ordnance factory, which has the highest production record in the British Empire for certain types of artillery.

"After the blitz I felt I only wanted to make guns," Mrs. Foster said in a broadcast interview. "I left my baby with relatives and took a six weeks' engineering course at a technical school."

ALL DAY DRESS—Long straight lines running from shoulder to hem give it a smooth silhouette, flattering for every wearer. Pattern No. 8141 comes in sizes 36 to 52. Send 15c in coin, your name, address, pattern number and size to CIO NEWS Pattern Dept., Federated Press Pattern Service, 106 Seventh Ave., New York City. Enclose 1c for postage.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Columbus, Ohio, plant: USA-CIO, 2,050; Independent, 372; neither, 220.

Under the direction of Walter H. Harris, CIO director of the Shoe Workers Organizing Drive, many elections have been won. A total of 18 elections were won during the period June 1, 1941, to June 30, 1942, in which CIO received a total vote of 6,692; no union, 2,320; AFL, 172; Western Brotherhood, 171.

Anther election which was lost by the CIO by 33 votes was in the Windsor election. We protested this election and an agreement was reached between the company and the Labor Board whereby the company agreed to another consent election. In addition to these victories, the United Shoe Workers of America have also won several other important elections. Organizing activities are being carried on now at 18 plants of the International and Brown Shoe Companies. This is a great showing and demonstrates that the workers in the shoe industry want CIO.

The American Newspaper Guild, CIO, has chartered a new local at Fort Worth, Texas, on the Scripps-Howard Fort Worth Press where a substantial number of the editorial department was organized.

Little Steel Case

The great issue before the nation is the Little Steel case now awaiting decision by the War Labor Board. The workers want to know if, through all the machinery set up, they are going to be awarded on the merits of their case. Some cockeyed economists or high pressure columnists are trying to dictate the policies of the Board. Members of the United Steelworkers of America presented their case to a panel of the board upon which were representatives of the employers, public and labor. The panel unanimously found that the Steelworkers' demands were meritorious and so recommended.

The latest reports indicate there are attempts to negate the panel's report. If the War Labor Board is going to have the confidence of the workers of the nation, it must have the courage to decide cases on merit and facts, otherwise it fails in its mission. The working people of the nation, particularly CIO, are carrying most of the load in taxation and are the ones producing the materials of war and have made an enviable record. They are now demanding that the steelworkers get their just rewards.

More Elections Won

CIO Sub-Regional Director in Connecticut, Edward McCrone, reports an overwhelming election victory at the Bolton Manufacturing Company with a vote of 238 for UAW-CIO to 14 for no union.

C. H. Gillman, CIO Regional Director in Atlanta, reports the winning two elections the past week, as follows:

Quality Service Stores: CIO, 19; against, 4. Also Feed Company: CIO, 15; against, 8.

Francis M. McMahon, Utility Workers Organizing Committee representative stationed in Tennessee, advises that with a 100% membership the UWOC has been certified as the bargaining agency for all the employes of the Smoky Mountain Railroad.

Regional Director A. F. Hartung of Oregon assisted the International Woodworkers of America in negotiations with the West Fir Lumber Company. The case was presented to a three-man panel of the Department of Labor and we came out with a pretty good settlement, which gave a union maintenance clause which is the best ever seen, according to the Union. They also received wage increases from 7½c to $1.00 a day and vacation clause.

British Workers Toiling Long Hours for Victory, Curran Reports After Trip

NEW YORK, July 18—Britain's shipyard and other war production workers are putting in long hours turning out the goods for an offensive against Hitler—and, together with the millions of troops in the British Isles, are anxiously waiting for the offensive to begin, Joseph Curran, just returned from a flying trip to England, told newsmen here.

Curran, who is president of the National Maritime Union and a vice-president of the CIO, attended an international maritime labor conference called by the Intl. Labor Office in London. He reported that labor proposals for increased safety at sea were unanimously endorsed by the conference.

"They're working hard," he said of the shipyard workers, "56 and 60 hours a week—and they're turning out the ships. They look tired, both the men and the women workers, but they keep at it. The shortage of manpower and the blackout are the only things that prohibit three shifts."

SECOND FRONT

Asked about the British people's reaction to a second front, Curran said that the soldiers and the workers want it immediately. "Some of the people on top are confused—they want it, but they argue that perhaps it wouldn't be safe. But the rank and file—they want it now."

"What impresses a visitor more than anything else," he added, "is the tremendous number of soldiers of all nationalities you see in England."

All Groups Helped On Sea Safety Rules

New York, July 18—(ALN)—The international seamen's safety charter, adopted at the recent London meeting of the Joint Maritime Commission of the International Labor Office, was the result of unity of all nine labor delegates and cooperation on the part of shipowners' representatives, in the opinion of Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union (CIO) and Morris Weisberger, vice-president of the Seafarers' International Union of North America (AFL), U. S. delegates who returned here this week by Clipper.

This information, which is regarded as an augury of further joint action by the organized labor movements of the United Nations, corrects a false impression created by a dispatch last week from the London correspondent of Allied Labor News, indicating a difference of opinion among the labor delegates.

Heroic Chinese Workers Risk Death to Aid Nation

By I. EPSTEIN

CHUNGKING, July 18—(ALN)—The problem of how China is to find enough skilled labor to man her growing war industry is being solved, according to information made available to this correspondent, by the bravery of Chinese workers who risk death to escape into the interior from enemy-controlled coastal areas around Hongkong and Shanghai.

GAME'S UP: These German soldiers will do no more fighting in this war, as they head for a military prison camp somewhere behind the Soviet lines. That's a dead Nazi in the foreground.

Despite drastic measures taken by the enemy, hundreds of skilled machinists, transport and textile workers have reached here in past weeks.

Among the latest to arrive are: five hundred workers formerly employed in a Chinese government diesel plant in Hongkong; the China Aviation Corporation ground staff from the Kai-tak air base at Hongkong; and a large group of workers from the Shanghai tea factories, which the Japanese seized from the British.

The Chinese government paid for the transportation of these workers and their families, and found jobs for them in arms factories shortly after their arrival.

China's allies are also helping to find immediate employment for the escaped workers. The British government, through its embassy here in Chungking, is financing workshops for the employment of men who formerly worked in British ordnance plants in Hongkong. Indusco (Chinese Industrial Cooperatives), which depends largely on financial support from America, will employ hundreds of escaped workers in new cooperative factories.

GUERRILLA ARSENALS

Several hundred Chinese machinists who escaped from Hongkong shortly after its capture last December are now operating guerrilla arsenals in Kwangtung province.

Already they supply most of the arms for the guerrilla units which, during past weeks, have played a major role in preventing the enemy from capturing the southern end of the vital Canton-Hankow railway. Whenever it becomes necessary to defend their arsenals, these machinists join the guerrillas and take part in the fighting themselves.

In an interview I had today with a number of escaped workers, I learned that the Japanese are using new methods, learned from the Nazis, to enslave Chinese workers in the Hongkong and Shanghai areas.

JAP BARBARISM

"Hundreds of thousands of our people are now being forced not only to toil in Japanese-controlled factories, but also to assist the invaders in their actual military operations," one man said.

"Chinese mechanics and railwaymen now have to carry out tasks for the Japanese army. If they refuse, they are tortured and starved until they die. The Japanese, we know, have learned new barbarities from the Nazis, but they are no more able to subjugate our people than the Nazis themselves were able to subjugate the Russians."

Where the Chinese workers fail to escape, or are starved into submission, they have other methods of frustrating the enemy.

"Our people conceal their skill, passing themselves off as unqualified laborers," the spokesman continued. "By this means, workers on industrial and military jobs have lowered their efficiency by as much as 75%. This the Japanese have admitted."

Mexican Unions Seek Drastic Action Against Saboteurs

By CESAR ORTIZ

MEXICO CITY, July 18—(ALN)—"We demand the liquidation of the fifth column and ask for the punishment of traitors," Fidel Velasquez, general secretary of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM), told President Avila Camacho this week. Official investigation has disclosed that Axis submarines knew the exact sailing dates and destinations of the Mexican tankers Choapas and Tuxpan, sunk in the Gulf of Mexico a few days ago.

On behalf of the CTM, Velasquez demanded the internment of all Axis nationals, the expropriation of Axis properties, complete mobilization of the Mexican people and more adequate protective measures for Mexican ships.

Axis-owned properties which were taken over by the Mexican war decree June 12 are now being directed by Mexican managers, it is reported by the U. S. Department of Commerce. The most important Axis firm, according to this report, were German drug companies and German and Japanese department stores. German-owned coffee plantations in the State of Chiapas have been taken over by producers' cooperatives; profits are being paid into the National Bank of Mexico in earmarked accounts.

GERMANS ARRESTED

Within the past few days three Germans, with powerful short-wave sending sets in their possession, have been arrested in the small port of Tuxtla, State of Vera Cruz, near the scene of the recent sinkings. Several other German and Japanese have been arrested in Zimapan, State of Hidalgo.

Deputy Jose Ramirez and Senator Vidal Diaz Munoz, CTM representatives in Congress, presented documents to the government proving that the region near Tuxtla in Vera Cruz is the country's most dangerous breeding-ground for spies and fifth columnists.

Ramirez charged that the Spanish Falange, which is active in Vera Cruz, sells oil and gas to Nazi submarines and is in constant communication with submarine captains through hidden radio stations.

HIT AXIS STOOGE

Both Congressmen blamed this situation on Governor Jorge Cerdan of Vera Cruz, who has been accused of pro-Nazi sentiments.

"Cerdan is creating in Vera Cruz an ideal climate for the activities of traitors and Axis agents," Munoz said. The CTM is campaigning for forthright governmental action against the Vera Cruz governor.

Toledano Asks All Hemisphere War on Axis

Mexico City, July 18—(ALN)—In an address broadcast simultaneously over five short-wave stations this week, Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), called on all members and affiliated organizations of the CTAL to campaign for an immediate declaration of war by the twenty Latin American republics.

Declaring that the present war is a continuation of the wars of liberation fought by Latin American countries in the 19th Century, Toledano said:

"I ask you to make known to all sections of your people the urgent necessity of strengthening their internal unity, of declaring war against the Axis powers, of making the Latin American republics a single will in defense of the best aspirations of our peoples."

The CTAL has affiliates in Argentina, Bolivia, Chile, Columbia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Equador, Mexico, Panama, Puerto Rico, Uruguay and Venezuela. Seven of these countries, most important of which are Argentina and Chile, have not joined the United Nations in war against the Axis.

Union Greets Free French

New York, July 18—A message was sent to General Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Free French forces, by the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes this week, on the occasion of the 153rd anniversary of the storming of the Bastille.

"The American workers, as labor is everywhere, are behind you in your glorious effort to free your country of traitors and Nazi butchers," the message said, "so that French will be free and prosperous again among a free and peaceful family of the nations of the world."

Telegraph Merger Held Real Menace

By CHARLES SILVERMAN

NEW YORK, July 18—Leaders of the American Communications Association, scheduled to appear before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce on July 21 to fight against adoption of a war-be-damned, union-busting bill to permit merger of Western Union and Postal Telegraph, called upon CIO unions throughout the country to join in the protest with letters and telegrams to Rep. Clarence Lee, chairman of the committee, and other members of the House.

The bill, which was blitzed through the Senate on June 22 without debate and with no record vote, threatens now to be shoved through the House in similar fashion unless Congressmen are brought to the realization that its passage will constitute a direct and devastating blow to the telegraph industry—the vital nerve center of the production program. Heads of both Western Union and Postal Telegraph have made it abundantly clear that their merger drive contemplates abandonment of vital telegraph facilities, despite the fact that present facilities are overburdened and service has slowed down to snail's pace. Passage of the bill will give the consolidated company a virtual carte blanche to discharge thousands of essential workers while dropping an estimated $10,000,000 plum into the pockets of the security-holders.

BOTTLENECKS OF 1942

Merger, the ACA points out, is the exact opposite of what is needed in the telegraph industry today. In 1939 Maj. Gen. J. O. Mauborgne, then Chief Signal Officer of the War Department, said that the telegraph system was "entirely inadequate for the needs of national defense . . . in case of war." The inadequacy of 1939, ACA declares, threatens to become the bottleneck of 1942.

Banker Jesse Jones and other government officials are pressing for the adoption of the business-as-usual merger bill which would work further havoc on telegraph service.

As a solution of the war needs of the industry, the ACA has proposed a five-point program:

FIVE POINT PROGRAM

1. Set service goals on the standard of 20-minute service from sender to receiver, which was achieved in peace-time 1929. (The present service average is over two hours from sender to receiver.)

2. Eliminate all traffic not vital to the war effort, such as singing telegrams, theater ticket and package delivery by messengers, taking dogs for walks, etc.

3. Introduce a program for labor recruiting and training.

4. Raise wages from their present sub-standard level and thereby stabilize the industry by checking the present disastrous labor turnover and raising morale.

5. Provide for government financing of the cost of the conversion along the lines established in the auto, shipping, and other war industries.

Glass Union Parley Opens This Week

Clarksburg, W. Va., July 18—Vital problems affecting the union under the present war economy will face some 75 delegates gathering here for the fifth biennial convention of the Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers which opens Monday at the Stonewall Jackson Hotel.

Union officials say the parley will be the most important in the union's history. A constitution committee was in session for a week before the convention opened, to prepare a report on proposed constitutional changes proposed by the locals.

All changes made in the constitution by the convention will be voted upon by the membership, and must obtain a majority vote before becoming effective.

Labor and the Law:

LITTLE STEEL

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

The Little Steel case which has been pending before the National War Labor Board for over 5 months presented two very important issues. One involved the question of necessary wage adjustments to eliminate certain inequalities which prevail for the steel workers. The second problem involved the establishment of union security.

The United Steelworkers of America started their negotiations with the four Little Steel companies in September 1941. Under normal conditions a collective bargaining agreement would have been consummated with the Union. However, the four Little Steel companies, with their traditional background of anti-unionism, adopted a most uncompromising position. As a result, negotiations were deadlocked and the cases were certified to the National War Labor Board in February 1942.

FOUR-MONTH HEARINGS

A fact-finding Panel was designated by the War Labor Board. Four months were taken by this Panel to hold hearings, receive voluminous briefs from the parties, and submit a comprehensive report of facts to the Board.

Over 1,500 pages of testimony were taken before the Panel. Over 1,000 pages of briefs were filed by the several parties. The fact-finding Panel submitted a report of over 60 pages.

On the fundamental question of wage adjustment the Union requested a $1-a-day wage increase. The Panel's unanimous report completely substantiated the position of the Union on this issue. The Chairman as the public member, the industry member and the labor member all subscribed to the findings of fact upholding the justness and soundness of the Union's request for a $1-a-day wage adjustment. The Panel found:

(1) The four companies clearly had the ability to pay the wage adjustment within the present price structure.

(2) Because of the freezing of the work week for the steel workers at less than 40 hours, the weekly wages of these workers have been frozen. On the other hand, the weekly earnings of the workers in all durable goods industries have increased approximately 15 per cent since March of last year as compared to the steel workers.

(3) On April 1, 1941, the steel workers obtained their last wage increase. From that date to March 15, 1942, the cost of living has risen over 13 per cent. Since that date the cost of living has increased several per cent for all workers.

INFLATION PROBLEM

(4) The Panel analyzed the problem of inflation. It pointed out that while the consumer goods available for consumption will decrease, the national money income will of course increase. The Panel pointed out that the share of this national income going to workers has steadily decreased. This means that the rich will be getting richer and the poor poorer. To avoid this the Panel points out that wage adjustments must be granted even though they cannot be spent on goods. The money can be and should be saved to protect the workers.

The Panel also completely substantiated the position of the Union on the need for union security. This union security included a provision for check-off of union dues and initiation fees. The Panel recommended that the form of union security should be one of maintenance of membership. This recommendation was that all members of the four companies who would be members of the Union in good standing 15 days after the decision of the Board, together with all employes who may thereafter become members, must continue their membership for the duration of the contract.

WLB'S DECISION

The National War Labor Board has now rendered its decision. On the issue of wages the Board, for the first time in its history, has reversed a unanimous finding of its Panel. The Board completely disregarded the problems of the steel workers, their rising cost of living, and their prevailing inequality and recommended that only a 5½c per hour wage increase should be granted.

This decision of the Board is predicated upon the policy promulgated by Leon Henderson, head of the Office of Price Administration. That agency, instead of concentrating its attention on price fixing and democratic rationing of scarce consumer goods, has maintained its attack against legitimate and equitable wage adjustments for the workers. The fact that such a policy would have a devastating impact upon the health and morale of the workers has been completely disregarded by Henderson and the OPA. Unfortunately the Labor Board accepted this policy of Henderson.

The Labor Board, however, completely upheld the recommendation of the Panel on union security and check-off. The Board's decision grants union security by way of maintenance of membership and the check-off for all the members of the Union. The basis of the Board's decision on this issue is that the establishment of union security would assure more intensive production and improve the morale of the American workers for the furtherance of the war program.

JUSTIFIABLE DEMANDS

The United Steelworkers of America submitted its case both in collective bargaining and before the War Labor Board on the basis that its demands were justified in the interest of the war program and therefore in the interest of the nation. The Union demonstrated on each issue that its demands, if granted, would improve the production program, whereas their denial may well retard and endanger the war effort. It is unfortunate that the Board did not fully appreciate the problems which the workers now have in making their paychecks meet the rising cost of living. The Board's decision in effect reduces the standards of the steel workers below the 1937 level.

It now becomes more important than ever for the national administration and for Congress to intensify their efforts to really put into effect the President's 7-point national economic program. Congress must enact a really effective tax program, and the national administration must impose effective price fixing and rationing, the failure to do so will be a direct blow against the war program. These policies must be put into effect and it is up to the workers to see to it that they are.

Wage freezing must be fought by the workers. The National War Labor Board must not be permitted to adopt any wage freezing program as demanded by Leon Henderson.

Stabilization of the cost of living is necessary. This means for wage standards, an elimination of inequalities and the elevation of substandards. National stabilization must also mean the acceptance in full of the President's 7-point program.

CIO Seeks War Work For Firm As 450 Negroes Face Job Loss

NEW YORK, July 18—Failure of the Spring Products Manufacturing Co., of Long Island City, to secure war contracts may force the plant to close down, throwing 450 workers, 95 per cent of them Negroes, out of work, unless Government officials heed the protests of CIO and Negro groups.

Local 91 of the CIO United Furniture Workers, which has a contract with the firm, is planning a mass meeting here to arouse interest in the plight of these 450 workers who face the loss of their jobs and $300,000 in annual wages, unless War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson acts at once to prevent the sale of the plant at public auction.

WASHINGTON PARLEY

A delegation of CIO union officials, including Morris Muster, international president of the UFW, and a co-chairman of the Negro Labor Victory Committee conferred in Washington with McNutt and other government officials, and also told their story to Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York, who promised to help them.

As explained by members of the delegation, Spring Products, a plant covering more than a city block, manufactured box springs, studio couches, steel beds, inner springs for mattresses and units for upholstered furniture.

A part of the plant has already been converted for the production of war materials. The firm won high praise from the government when it completed a war order for 800,000 bomb springs more than a month ago. It has also turned out thousands of army cots.

For several months, the head of the firm, working closely with officials of the union, has attempted to get war contracts from Washington. He offered to spend $50,000 to complete the conversion of plant machinery for war work, and sent a detailed report to the War Production Board on 16 types of war materials which his plant can turn out. These include ammunition belts, steel helmets, army cots, bunks for ships and other articles needed in the war.

UNION ACTIVE

A few weeks ago he notified the union that unless he was able to get war contracts, the plant would be forced to close. Horace Small, vice president of the UFW local and a member of the labor-management committee at the plant, called a union meeting, and plans were formulated to conduct a campaign to get war contracts for the plant.

"Loss of these jobs," Small said, "hits Negro workers a body blow, particularly because of prejudice as usual on the part of many employer, makes it difficult for them to get jobs in war industry, despite their skills."

Action in support of the Spring Products workers was taken by the N.Y. CIO Council which sent a request to the War Production Board urging that war contracts be given to the plant.

Negro Group To Meet FDR On Rights

Washington, July 18—Assurances that a declaration "re-defining the citizenship rights of Negro Americans" will be discussed with President Roosevelt were received by a delegation of Negro union and civic leaders that visited the Justice Department here this week.

The delegation, led by Ewart Guinier, president of the N. Y. District of the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers and Dorothy Funn, of the Teachers Union, of N. Y. C., called at the Department to protest recent Negro lynchings and to point out the dangers to national unity and the war effort that are involved in continued anti-Negro discrimination.

PRESENT STATEMENT

The delegation presented a statement adopted by the Negro Labor Victory Committee in New York, which said in part:

"We call upon our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, to issue a proclamation re-defining the citizenship rights of Negro Americans; to ask the governors of the 48 states and the mayors of our cities to issue like proclamations; and to order all Federal agencies, especially the Department of Justice, to take swift and appropriate action to safeguard the rights of Negro Americans."

U.S. Indicts Fascists, Labor-Haters

WASHINGTON, July 25—A group of fascists who won their publicity spurs attempting to smear America's organized workers before they moved on to the greener pastures of disruption, were among the several score individuals, organizations and papers indicted this week by a federal grand jury probing Axis fifth column activities.

Among the persons and organizations mentioned by the grand jury were:

1. Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, long an hysterical crusader against the right of workers to organize into unions.

2. The Constitutional Educational League, whose pamphlet "Build the CIO for a Soviet America," received a warm welcome from hundreds of anti-labor companies during 1936-37-38. The libelous document was distributed by the hundreds of thousands.

3. The American Vigilante, published by Harry Jung of Chicago. Jung, an oldtime foe of labor, has secret offices in the Chicago Tribune Building.

4. The Black Legion, Ku Klux Klan, National Workers League, Silver Shirts and the German-American Bund—all of which had as their original goal the destruction of American unions.

Also named were a wide variety of anti-Roosevelt, anti-American outfits and individuals, including William Griffin, publisher of the New York Enquirer, who was frequently quoted by William Randolph Hearst; the America First Committee; Gerald Winrod, who unsuccessfully campaigned for Senator from Kansas on an anti-Semitic, anti-labor platform, and a number of others who advocated a fascist overthrow of our government.

CIO Won 155 Polls In June

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, July 25—Unions affiliated with the CIO won 155 elections, carrying a total of 96,303 votes in elections conducted during June, according to figures released by the National Labor Relations Board this week.

AFL union won 70 polls with a total of 11,760 votes. The Board conducted 325 elections and pay roll checks altogether during the month, with a total of 133,665 valid ballots cast for collective bargaining agencies.

Eighty-eight per cent of the elections during June were won by some union. Unaffiliated unions won 33 elections with a total of 8,046, and 17,556 votes were cast for no union.

WAR INDUSTRIES

The Board noted that there were increases over the previous month in the number of elections and votes cast in the iron and steel industry, ordnance, textile mill products, lumber, chemicals and nonferrous metals.

Of the 29 major industrial groups in which the NLRB conducted polls during the month, the leading five were closely connected with war industries.

About 87 per cent of the 420 unfair labor practice cases handled in June were closed before formal action was taken, the Board reported. A total of 829 cases of which 409 involved representation were closed during the month.

Australia will soon have more acres under vegetables than at any time in its history as a result of a nation-wide scheme to step up production.

Cuban Workers Back War Effort

Havana, July 25—(ALN)—The Federation of Cuban Workers, at a convention of the workers of the province of Oriente a few days ago, registered the support of the workers of this island for the cause of the United Nations.

The 300 delegates to the convention voted to raise the equivalent of $15,000 for allied war relief.

Shipyard Parley Goes to New York

Camden, N. J., July 25 — The eighth national convention of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, previously scheduled to be held in Atlantic City, N. J., will be held in New York City, Secretary Treasurer Philip Van Gelder announced this week. It will open September 22.

Poll Tax Bill Petition Near Goal in Congress

WASHINGTON, July 25—Reacting to a stream of letters and wires from labor and civic groups throughout the country, 161 members of the House of Representatives had placed their signatures this week on a discharge petition aimed at bringing the Geyer Anti-Poll Tax Bill on to the floor for debate and vote.

Officials of the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax, which has been leading the fight against the tax said only 57 more names are needed. The Committee renewed its appeal to labor groups to contact those Congressmen who have not yet signed the petition.

Pennsylvania and Illinois Congressional delegations have been slow to act, it was pointed out. If a majority of both groups were to sign the petition, it would bear close to the 218 names necessary to blast the Geyer bill out of the reactionary judiciary committee.

That committee, headed by Rep. Hatton Summers of Texas, has been keeping the bill on ice for months.

The poll tax is levied in eight southern states, and works to keep all but a small number of top-income citizens from exercising their right to vote.

In addition to robbing millions of workers and farmers of this constitutional right, the tax has enabled the southern bourbons to maintain a large reactionary bloc in Congress, ready and eager to snipe at all progressive legislation.

Ask Congress End Attack on OPA

St. Louis, July 25—A demand that Congress restore budgeted appropriations to the Office of Price Administration and halt any further drive against Pres. Roosevelt's 7-point anti-inflation program, was voiced today in a resolution passed by the St. Louis Industrial Union Council.

The CIO group asserted that when the House cut OPA's appropriation from $161,000,000 to $75,000,000, it "placed in jeopardy" control over the price of food, rents and rationing."

Coast CIO Paper Charges:

Lewis Dickering With Company Unions

SAN FRANCISCO, July 24—John L. Lewis, waging a campaign of disruption against the CIO, is conspiring with the head of a notorious Los Angeles company union outfit, the Labor Herald, California CIO organ, charged this week.

The paper asserted that Lewis had sent his brother, A. D. Lewis of District 50, United Mine Workers, to Los Angeles for secret hotel-room conferences with Richard Franklin, a renegade who now heads the American Union Alliance, Inc. Michael Widman, District 50 organization director, and William Dalrymple, the district's west coast director, have also conferred with Franklin.

Lewis is believed to have provided Franklin with funds for a cross-country airplane trip to meet with him in Washington, the paper said.

LINKED TO BOSSES

The American Union Alliance is a clearing house for a dozen big company unions in southern California, and is closely linked with the Merchants & Manufacturers Assn., big anti-union employers agency which was under close investigation by the LaFollette Committee two years ago.

The Labor Herald charged that Lewis plans to put the employer-controlled leaders of a number of these company unions on the District 50 payroll, and with a base of operations thus established, place himself in a position to launch a campaign of disruption against California labor's unified political and production program of supporting the war effort.

A. D. Lewis, the story said, offered the Alliance top dogs lucrative positions as representatives of District 50. He is also said to have discussed the California political situation with the company unionists.

One of the Alliance leaders who joined in this latter discussion is known to have close tie-ups with the campaign for governor of Earl Warren, anti-labor candidate on the Republican ticket, who often has been branded as unsympathetic to the war and a close friend of the isolationist group with which Lewis has been alligned.

SEEK 'FOOTHOLD'

The Labor Herald said it had learned that A. D. Lewis, Widman and Dalrymple insist that the time has come for the UMW's catch-all division to get a foothold in California, no matter how it is to be achieved. Unable to accomplish any legitimate organizing, District 50 officials here turned to the Alliance's company unions, and the deal to "buy over" those who control the Alliance was hatched.

The American Union Alliance, after starting in a small way a year ago, blossomed out as a big league "central body" for company unions only a few days before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. At that time, the Alliance became incorporated under the laws of California, and the word went around that its founders had made "big connections."

TESTIFIED FOR DIES

Franklin, the head of the Alliance, was expelled some time ago from the CIO longshoremen's union for non-payment of dues after he had headed a small group of disrupters. Another Alliance big shot is Hugh Inzer, an ex-convict, who was expelled from the CIO auto workers after he poured a batch of anti-union lies into the record at Dies Committee hearings.

In plant after plant where legitimate CIO and AFL unions were organizing, the Alliance undertook a role of disruption in collaboration with anti-union and often bitterly anti-Roosevelt employers. Entrance of the company union outfit repeatedly threw many plants into turmoil and brought disruption of war production efforts.

Bosses' Pay Up

Washington—(FP)—The salary of every officer of the Emerson Electric Co. of St. Louis was increased 66 per cent after the company received a war contract, Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee told Congress this week.

Ohio Council Raps Lewis Disruption

Columbus, O., July 25—Condemnation of "the arbitrary tactics of John L. Lewis in his fight against the national CIO and President Roosevelt" was voted unanimously at a recent meeting of the executive board of the Ohio CIO Council here.

"Our membership throughout Ohio is determined to go along 100 per cent with National CIO President Philip Murray and the war production program to insure a full victory for America and the United Nations, and to establish a peace for the benefit of the common man everywhere," the resolution said.

"President Murray has followed a course of action in support of President Roosevelt and our national war effort which reflects the desire of our Ohio membership to assume — as organized workers through our unions—the responsibility we must share with all other organized segments of the population to bring this devastating war to a prompt victory."

Security Gained at GE

New York, July 25—The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, CIO, announced today that the union and the General Electric Co. have agreed through collective bargaining to a maintenance-of-union-membership formula affecting approximately 100,000 employes in 30 plants of the company covered by the union's contract.

The announcement was made by the union's national officers—Albert J. Fitzgerald, president, Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer, and James J. Matles, director of organization. They said the formula had been negotiated in April, but that public announcement was withheld until today. The provision, which is added to the contract between company and union, went into effect in July.

The union has approximately 240,000 war production workers, employed in more than 800 electrical and machine manufacturing plants,

To Arbitrate Inter-Union Dispute

Washington, July 25—Arbitration of disputes between CIO and AFL unions at the Kelly-Springfield plant in Cumberland, Md., and the Frigidaire plant at Dayton, Ohio, is acceptable to the CIO unions involved, President Murray said today in a letter to President Roosevelt and to Chairman Davis of the War Labor Board.

"This is to advise you that the CIO unions involved are agreeable to these matters being disposed of through arbitration," Murray wrote. "We suggest that an arbitrator be chosen by mutual agreement between Mr. William Green, president of the AFL, and myself, and if we cannot agree, then the public members of the National War Labor Board shall arbitrate the disputes.

"The CIO and its affiliated unions have an outstanding obligation, in the interest of assuring maximum production, to permit no jurisdictional dispute to cause any stoppage of work. For this reason, we submit the foregoing proposal."

CIO Tackles Copper Bottleneck

Denver, July 25—Plans to break one of the most serious bottlenecks in war production — manpower shortage in copper and other war metals—were drawn up at the executive board meeting of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union here this week.

"There is probably no other production problem which is more of a bottleneck and which so widely jeopardizes the production schedule of the war industries — ordnance, shipbuilding, tanks, aircraft — as does this shortage," the board said in analyzing the problem and presenting a solution.

Seriousness of the problem is shown by the fact that copper mines need an immediate 3,000 workers that they cannot find, with a longer-term shortage of 6,000 and that lead and zinc require an immediate 2,500 workers that cannot be found under present conditions.

CONDITIONS

Causes of the shortages are found in wage levels considerably below comparable industries, totally inadequate housing and poor transportation, and other bad conditions that result in large scale migration from the industries. To remedy these conditions, the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers proposed:

1) Raising of wages to the levels of other industries; 2) an end to threats of "job-freezing" which cause workers to leave the mines; 3) elimination of job hazards and unsafe working conditions; 4) adequate housing and transportation; 5) elimination of discrimination on grounds of race, creed and union membership; 6) a campaign to make the workers feel the importance of their place in the war effort and 7) selective service deferment for miners.

The program was presented to officials of the War Production Board following the union's action here.

Army, Navy Set Labor Policy For Govt. Plants

WASHINGTON, July 25—A statement of the Army and Navy labor policy covering some 100 large government - owned, privately - operated munitions plants was released here by the Office of War Information.

Evolved after months of collaboration with representatives of both the CIO and the AFL, the policy guarantees that no employe or person seeking employment shall be discriminated against for reasons of race, color, creed or sex.

It provides for the orderly selection of a bargaining agent after a majority of the estimated number of employes in any appropriate unit have been hired, and sets up procedures in establishing wage scales, handling grievances, protecting plants against sabotage and guaranteeing the rights of discharged employes.

NEW RELATIONSHIP

The statement of policy was drawn up, it was declared, because "these plants embody a new and unique tri-partite relationship among government, labor and management. They are sufficiently different from traditional government establishments so that existing government policies regulating labor relations are not entirely suitable."

The statement expresses the desire "to preserve the greatest freedom of organization and collective bargaining by the employes which is compatible with the necessary discharge by the War and Navy Departments of their responsibility for maximum production and the safe and efficient operation of the plants."

Under the system set up by the government for operation of the plants, the contractor is paid a fixed fee which is not affected by wages or other costs, production delays or stoppages.

The government reimburses the contractor for all costs, including wages, and in most instances must approve such costs, including wage scales, in advance.

J. C. Lewis Resigns Post

Pittsburgh, July 25—J. C. Lewis resigned this week as chairman of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, CIO. His resignation was made public at a meeting of PWOC district directors and CIO leaders here.

Samuel Sponsellor, who has been a CIO field representative assigned to the PWOC, was named chairman to succeed Lewis, who requested that his leave start immediately.

Lewis J. Clark was named secretary of the organizing committee. Committee members are R. J. Thomas, CIO vice-president; David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers of America; Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; Roy Franklin and Oscar Wilson.

AFL Machinists Union Flouts Premium Pay Pledge, CIO Leaders Tell FDR

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Complaints that certain affiliates of the American Federation of Labor are publicly urging defiance of the waiver of premium pay for Saturday and Sunday work, which was accepted by both the CIO and the AFL at the urgent request of President Roosevelt last spring, were forwarded to the Chief Executive today by three leading CIO officials.

The letter—which cited numerous examples of this type of propaganda circulated by the International Association of Machinists, an AFL affiliate, during a recent National Labor Relations Board election campaign at the Curtiss-Wright plant in Buffalo, New York—was signed by President Philip Murray of the CIO; President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers, CIO; and Richard T. Frankensteen, national director of aviation for the UAW-CIO.

Largely as a result of this propaganda, the AFL union was victorious in the election.

'HELPS OUR ENEMIES'

"These appeals resulted in the defeat of the UAW at the Buffalo plant of Curtiss-Wright—a defeat, Mr. President, inflicted by an organization which attained its ends by resorting to means tended, in your words, to 'help our enemies'," the CIO officials wrote.

"Is this to be tolerated? Is the CIO to be expected to make sacrifices which may result in its own destruction to the aggrandizement of those who are lending aid and comfort to the enemies of our country?"

The letter declared that the policy of waiving extra pay for Saturday and Sunday work in the middle of a worker's 40-hour shift "involved sacrifices which we were called upon to make and which we have been making.

OBLIGATION

"There is now a solemn obligation to compel all organizations to accept a similar policy. Failure to do so would obviously continue the very severe inequity for the members of our organization and give comfort to those who seek to create disunity between the CIO and AFL.

"And we believe that we have the right to expect that the gross injustice which was perpetrated at the Curtiss-Wright plant in Buffalo will not be permitted to go unremedied."

Labor United Against Pay Freezing

WASHINGTON, July 25—Labor's united position against wage freezing and for continuance of collective bargaining on wage questions was re-affirmed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. Wm. Green in a talk with President Roosevelt this week.

The restatement took place at a meeting of the "Labor Victory Board" composed of Murray, Green and two representatives each from CIO and AFL with the President in the White House.

Talking to newsmen afterwards, both Murray and Green repeated the labor formula of collective bargaining, conciliation and recourse to the War Labor Board, which was worked out at the time the AFL and CIO laid aside the strike weapon for the duration.

UNITE WITH EMPLOYERS

Earlier on the same day that the Victory Board met, Murray and Green joined with representatives of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and with the U. S. Chamber of Commerce in a unity declaration to the President, which said in part:

"At our initial meeting, it was agreed to call upon you, Mr. President, to reaffirm jointly our wholehearted cooperation for uninterrupted war production, and to give a demonstration to our own country and to the whole world, of the unity of purpose and action of American management and labor.

"That is the sole reason why we are here."

Steel Union Accepts Wage Award; Seeks Raise From All Firms

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

PITTSBURGH, July 25—Demands for new union contracts calling for a general 5½-cent-an-hour wage increase, union maintenance and the check-off have been made on virtually every large steel producer by the United Steelworkers of America.

Proposals for improving existing wage contracts were drawn up by a special meeting of the steel union's policy committee meeting here July 21. They represented several hundred thousand steel workers employed by:

U. S. Steel Corp. subsidiaries, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., Pittsburgh Steel, Sharon Steel, Wheeling Steel, Allegheny-Ludlum, Otis Steel, Great Lakes Steel, Hanna Furnace and Crucible Steel.

Each company was sent formal notice by USA-CIO officers asking that present contracts be reopened and that negotiations be launched to consider the union's demands.

OTHER DEMANDS

In addition to the demands for wage increases and the union shop and check-off, the union's statement of policy asked for establishment of a minimum daily guarantee of the individual employe's occupational hourly rate times the number of hours worked in any one day, or the earnings for the individual employe for each day, whichever alternative is higher. The minimum rate in steel would be boosted to 78 cents an hour by the 5½-cent increase.

All of those points were lifted from the National War Labor Board's directive order in the "Little Steel" case.

SEEK NEW PACT

While collective bargaining contracts are in effect at U. S. Steel subsidiaries and the ten other firms, the 200-man committee which drew up the seven-point policy directed national union officers to take immediate steps to negotiate new contracts, and conferences are now under way with several of the firms.

The provision calling for union security and check-off suggests that effective as of the date of convening of the collective bargaining conferences, "all employes when members of the USA-CIO and all employes who may thereafter become members, must continue their membership in good standing for the duration of the contract."

"Furthermore, each corporation shall, for all said employes, check-off on the first day of each month their union dues and transmit the same to the international secretary-treasurer of the union. Initiation fees shall be checked off and transmitted in the same manner."

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, July 25—Acceptance of the War Labor Board's wage-increase and union security recommendations by the United Steelworkers of America and by three of the Little Steel corporations, today paved the way for final contract negotiations winding up a six-year organizational effort by the CIO.

Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Republic accepted the WLB recommendation, calling for 44c-a-day wage boosts, maintenance of union membership, the check-off and guaranteed minimum daily wages for piece rate workers.

INLAND TO FIGHT

But Inland Steel, smallest of the quartet of Little Steel companies, indicated it would take to the courts the Board's union security recommendation. Such a challenge of WLB powers may take months, if not years, for a final decision.

President Philip Murray of the USA-CIO announced the union's acceptance of the Board's recommendation at a policy meeting of leaders of locals in Little Steel plants throughout the country. He said the union was seeking immediate resumption of conferences with the steel corporations.

Negotiations started last year, but were interrupted in February when the parties deadlocked on the question of wage increases and union security. The cases went to the War Labor Board at that time, and the WLB's decision came down a week ago.

Although the Board's fact-finding panel report pointed clearly to the need for the $1-a-day increase sought by the union, the WLB recommended only 5.5 cents an hour. Its decision was based on a "stabilization plan" aimed at bringing wages and living costs in line with their relationship on January 1, 1941.

In a resolution accepting the decision, the USA-CIO committee made clear its doubt that the "wage award will meet the living cost problem of the steel workers."

7-POINT PROGRAM

"This wage award of the Board is based upon the President's 7-point national economic program, calling for national stabilization of the cost of living," the USA-CIO declared.

"Wages cannot and must not be the sole object of the stabilization effort. The workers now look toward the President and Congress to carry through the remaining portions of the national economic program, such as an effective tax program and a real effective freezing of prices of goods, rents and other items of cost to the people."

Sen. Murray Licks Appeasers In Montana Vote

Helena, Mont., July 25—Carrying strong support from all branches of the labor movement, Senator James E. Murray, veteran progressive, swept to an easy victory in Montana's Democratic primaries this week.

Murray's decisive triumph over Joseph P. Monaghan was a vote of endorsement for the Administration's war policies. Monaghan had the active backing of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, a leading member of the America First Committee and a consistent, bitter foe of President Roosevelt's foreign policies.

Murray Greets Soviet Rail Workers

Washington, July 25—Greetings and assurances of united effort for victory were sent by President Philip Murray to the Union of Railway Transport Workers in the Soviet Union this week. The greetings marked the annual "Railway Workers' Day" held in the USSR.

"The workers and the people of America are united in applauding the bravery and sacrifice of the armed forces and the people of your country and its other allies whose resistance to Hitler's armed might has won the admiration of the entire free world," Murray said.

"The United Nations have pledged their mutual honor to the just cause of destroying Hitlerism and freeing the oppressed people of Axis conquered nations. The men and women of the American labor movement are wholeheartedly carrying out this pledge and will continue to do so until victory is ours."

CIO Demands Action To Halt Shutdowns

DETROIT, July 25—While lack of steel is causing a "creeping paralysis" in output at scores of war industry plants, the Army, Navy and Air Corps are needlessly using 2½ million tons of steel a year for temporary barracks and warehouses.

That was the complaint made today by Walter Reuther, head of the United Automobile Workers' GM division, in a long letter of particulars to WPB Chief Donald Nelson.

Shortages in steel production—which Philip Murray, steel union head, has repeatedly warned against and offered plans to avert—are "causing shutdowns, costly delays in war production and widespread unemployment," Reuther charged.

CITES CASES

He cited the closing of the Chevrolet Gear & Axle Division of GM; serious layoffs at Yellow Truck & Coach; imminent closing of the Chevrolet plant in Flint, and serious effects on the Chevrolet Gray Iron Foundry at Saginaw, Mich.

Reuther warned of fears that "current lay-offs and others to come may irreparably impair the morale we have been striving to create and maintain. We appear to be in the untenable position of having urged all-out, speedy production, only to have the response to this appeal followed by shutdowns."

Should the Army, Navy and Air Forces use wood or other materials in its barracks and warehouses, the savings in steel would go far to provide the needed metal for war plants, Reuther wrote to Nelson.

Murray told the WPB: "It does not make sense to close up Cannonsburg, and to continue to roll tinplate on continuous strip mills when these mills are more urgently needed for the production of plates to break the steel bottleneck in the shipbuilding program."

ASKS CONVERSION

Murray's wire to WPB Chief Donald Nelson added that "in view of the shortage of plate for the shipbuilding program and other primary war uses, on behalf of the USA-CIO I urge the WPB to require Carnegie-Illinois to convert its strip mills further to the production of plates and keep the Cannonsburgh tinplate works operating to produce tinplate."

The steel union leader asserted that Carnegie-Illinois, a U. S. Steel subsidiary, bought the plant a year ago from Continental Can Co. "and its obvious purpose in purchasing it was to close it up. Now Carnegie-Illinois has an excuse to do so—the shortage of steel."

Joint Campaign

New Orleans—(FP)—Labor, employer and city officials have united to fight cancellation by the U. S. Maritime Commission of a contract for 200 cargo ships at the Higgins Corp.'s uncompleted yards.

NEW YORK, July 25—Needless bottlenecks are holding up the production of war vital machine tool instruments, representatives of 10,000 CIO unionists complained today to regional officials of the War Production Board.

Speaking for members of Local 475 of the United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers, the delegation complained that the 168-hour week is just a myth to most of the plants under contract with the local.

"Almost every shop within our jurisdiction has several score of idle machines standing around working night and day for Hitler," declared Business Agent Albert Stonkus.

"Out of a dozen plants under contract to us, only one is working to capacity. In the others, some machines are not working at all, and some are utilized only one shift.

WANT 100% USE

"Our union wants all machines in all our plants running as near to 168 hours a week as it is possible to run them," he added. "We in the shops are putting in 10 or 11 hours per day, six days a week. It is not good for the morale to see perfectly good machines standing around the shops putting in time for Hitler."

Managements of nearly all the shops have indicated a willingness to cooperate with the union in getting work to beat the Axis, Stonkus said. They include Mergenthaler Linotype, Intertype Corp., Eisemann Magneto, E. W. Bliss Co. and others.

Steel Workers At Summer School

Hendersonville, N. C., July 25—A group of 25 steel workers, members of the United Steelworkers of America from the Birmingham, Ala., area, will attend a special institute to be held at the Southern School for Workers during the last week of July.

The faculty of the school will be assisted in conducting a series of discussions on shop problems of steel workers in the South, by Noel Beddow, USA Southern director.

Needed: Real Enforcement By Congress Of the 7-Point Anti-Inflation Program

(Following is the resolution adopted by the Policy Committee of the United Steelworkers of America when it accepted the War Labor Board's decision in the Little Steel case.)

This conference has carefully read and analyzed the decision of the National War Labor Board rendered in the proceedings brought by the United Steelworkers of America against the Bethlehem Steel Co., Republic Steel Corp., Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., and Inland Steel Co. We have also read with appreciation the message forwarded to us today by President Roosevelt.

In the presentation of its case before the War Labor Board the union has consistently maintained the attitude that it was presenting demands which would, if granted, aid the nation in prosecuting the war. We are predicating our decision in regard to acceptance of this award upon the same basic objective. Now, more than ever, the nation and its people have a right to call upon all Americans to act in a manner consistent with the national war effort.

Pleased With Security

We are gratified at the decision of the War Labor Board in determining that the United Steelworkers of America both needs and deserves the establishment of union security and the check-off. This decision was based upon the finding that this union is one of the most democratic and most efficiently and economically administered. This is a worthy tribute to the steel workers of the nation who have put their heart and soul into the mighty United Steelworkers of America.

Furthermore the Labor Board upheld the union's contention that through the establishment of union security and the check-off, the full effort and energy of all of the steel workers can henceforth be contributed toward obtaining maximum production of steel so vital to winning the war. This union has been concentrating its time and energy on this national objective. It is pleased at the opportunity which will now be presented that even greater effort and energy can be given to this vital task.

We do not agree with the analysis of the majority members of the War Labor Board that its wage award will meet the living cost problem of the steel workers. This wage award of the Board is based upon the President's seven-point national economic program, calling for national stabilization of cost of living. Wages cannot and must not be the sole object of the stabilization effort.

The workers now look toward the President and Congress to carry through the remaining portions of the national economic program, such as an effective tax program and a real effective freezing of prices of food, rents and other items of cost to the people.

We shall watch this phase of the program most carefully. The workers are entitled to know whether their living costs are going to be stabilized, upon which principle the present award of the Board in the "Little Steel" case has been predicated.

The National War Labor Board has carefully pointed out that existing inequalities which may now prevail for the steel workers in separate plants are still subject to necessary adjustment. This will be taken care of in the collective bargaining conference between the union and the separate steel companies.

Our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, in his message to Philip Murray today said:

"The Government must have the complete cooperation of the people and I have confidence that we shall have this cooperation from our citizens in all walks of life including the steel workers who look to you for leadership. With such cooperation we shall win this fight."

The answer of the United Steelworkers of America is that we accept the award of the National War Labor Board. As workers we embrace the opportunity of being in the forefront in carrying out the national policy which will aid our nation in its war for survival.

In the spirit of President Roosevelt's message, we call upon the corporations involved in this proceeding to accept the award of the National War Labor Board in the interest of national unity. Our joint efforts may then be directed toward the single common national objective of winning the war.

The People Still Fight

Following are brief excerpts from a new government pamphlet, "The Unconquered People." Copies of this exciting story may be had by writing to Office of War Information, Washington, D. C.

EUROPE is fighting back. From the Continent comes word of resistance to Hitler in occupied countries. But the voices reaching the outside world tell more than stories of heroism. They carry a warning which says: "We cannot do this job alone. We will keep the fires of resistance burning to show you—in the lands still free—that our mutual cause is just, our courage high, our faith unflinching."

Not until the ultimate victory of the United Nations has been achieved can the full story of this heroic resistance be told.

The black curtain of tyranny is now drawn across Europe. But occasionally the curtain blows back for an instant and we see a continent struggling in its chains.

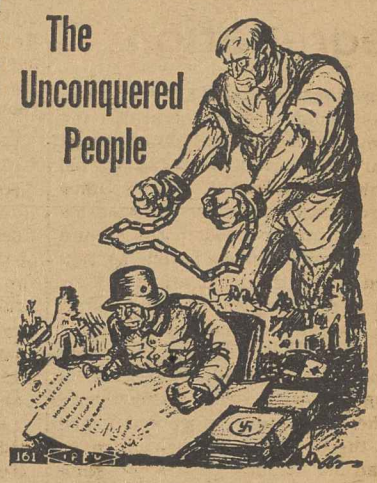
For an instant we see the streets and shuttered houses of an occupied town. We sense the cold relentless fury that peaceful citizens feel toward those who bombed their homes and destroyed their liberty. We see the dull expressionless faces of the occupying troops—men surrounded by an invisible wall of contempt, forever on guard and forever marching through streets whose very stones are hostile.

We sense, too, the strength of people united in a cause that knows no boundary—the individual Norwegian nodding to the Pole, the Dutchman to the Czech, all the occupied people nodding silently one to the other, and meaning, "The invader must go."

A New Brotherhood

We sense, too, that out of the misery that Hitler has inflicted on Europe there has risen a new brotherhood of man, that any act of resistance to Hitler, however feeble, is part of that new unity. Out of the misery, the united people of Europe are writing a noble page in the history of human freedom.

Hitler's victories came so suddenly that for a time the people in the occupied countries were stunned beyond measure. The main problem was to keep alive, eat and find a place to sleep. Moreover, the policy of the German Army in countries such as France, Belgium, and Norway was to appear as "correct" as possible.



Part of Hitler's strategy of plunder was for his army to seem good-natured and mannerly. The Nazis believed, or pretended to believe, that people whose homes had just been destroyed would take the invader to their hearts.

Smoke Signals

Gradually small fires of resistance were lighted on the Continent. Resistance at first took simple forms, expressive of the deep hatred and contempt felt toward the conqueror. Forbidden to boo when Nazi officials appeared on the screen, those Parisians who went to the movies took to clearing their throats and coughing loudly.

One theater audience coughed so long and so loudly that the auditorium lights were flashed on, and a Nazi officer strode across the stage. "Who coughed?" he demanded. There was no answer until an old man rose in the rear of the theater and called out, "Nobody here coughed." "Who coughed?" again demanded the Nazi. "The Unknown Soldier," quietly replied the old man.

Back in England after a raid over the Continent, a young British bomber sergeant reported that Dutch tulip fields had been planted to resemble huge Dutch flags. People stood in the fields, he said, and waved to him.

In Britanny, when RAF planes flew overhead, the Bretons did not make for cover. "Hurry up, Fritz!" they cried to the disciplined German soldiers who dashed for shelter. "Hurry up, the RAF is on your heels!"

CIO Presses Fight For 'V' Tax Bill As Battered Version Goes to Senate

White Collar Play on Next CIO Broadcast

Washington, July 25. — Next week's CIO Labor for Victory radio show, set for Saturday, August 1 at 10:15 p.m. EWT, takes up the problem of the white collar worker who doesn't think her job is important in the war effort—and proves that it is.

Under the title, "The Bullet That's Going to Kill Hitler," the script shows the amount of office and administrative work that's behind the bullet, shows the way that work has to be organized, and shows that the best way to organize the work for victory is to organize the workers. The girl who doubted her job had anything to do with the war effort is convinced, and winds up the script by saying:

"This all makes sense to me now. Everybody is putting something into that bullet that's going to kill Hitler, and everybody's part is important and necessary . . . and it takes a lot of paper work—white collar work—to keep the job organized."

Next week's Labor Victory will be on the air Saturday, August 1, at 10:15 p.m. Eastern Wartime, over the Red Network of the National Broadcasting Co. Don't forget to tune in—it's your CIO program, every other Saturday.

Blood Donors Hit Red Cross Segregation

Washington, July 25—The Red Cross policy of segregating the plasma of Negro and white blood donors was protested today by 100 members of Local 16, United Office & Professional Workers of America who gave their blood in the second of a series of blood banks participated in by the local union.

In a postcard addressed to Norman Davis, national president of the American Red Cross, union members expressed their pride at being able to contribute their share to the all-out war effort, but urged that the policy of segregation, since it had no scientific basis, be abolished, toward the end of furthering national unity.

Local 16 has been carrying on a vigorous campaign against discriminatory Jim-Crow practices in the armed forces and in the employment field, where the local has been very successful in doing away with racial discrimination in many of its organized offices.

CIO Transit Service Union Busts Bias, Forces Recognition

WASHINGTON, July 25.—Union discrimination in the railroad industry came closer to its Dunkirk as a result of a victory won by the CIO United Transport Service Employes of America this week. The U.S. District Court here ordered the National Mediation Board to certify the UTSEA-CIO as the sole collective bargaining agency for all porters, janitors and red caps at the St. Paul, Minn., Union Terminal Co.

The decision is the result of a petition filed by General Counsel George E. C. Hayes and Judge James A. Cobb in behalf of the UTSEA for injunctive relief against the NMB, which had arbitrarily certified the AFL Brotherhood of Railway Clerks as bargaining agency for these employes despite the fact that over 95 per cent of them had resignated the UTSEA-CIO as their union.

MAJOR VICTORY

As one of the major representation cases before the Mediation Board last year, the background of the issue involved cuts deep into the rampant union discrimination against Negroes in the railroad industry and is one of the most significant cases dealing with minority rights under the Railway Labor Act.

Beneath the surface, the decision affects the "scope" agreement practices of the railroad brotherhoods, which for years has operated unfavorably for thousands of Negro railroad workers who are not permitted to join the brotherhoods, and thereby on many occasions forces out of industry by the job control mechanisms in a great number of the scope agreements.

According to UTSEA Pres. Willard S. Townsend, it has been the practice of railroad brotherhoods to gain complete control of a series of related and unrelated crafts through the majority rule principle of the Railway Labor Act.

ABUSED RULE

"However," Townsend stated, "the majority rule principle of the Act has been over-abused by the brotherhoods through their denial of certain union and seniority rights to minorities, who in these cases happen to be Negroes, Mexicans, Filipinos, Chinese and Japanese railroad employes.

"With bargaining control of these crafts through 'scope' agreements, the brotherhoods in many cases attempted to make the railroads of America a 'white man's industry' by the simple process of eliminating all those who were not 'white, Christian, sober and of good moral character.'

"The scope agreement technique has been one of the major weapons used by the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks against the UTSEA in its attempts to bring democratic security to thousands of under-privileged and disinherited railroad employes," he declared.

Early in 1938, a majority of the station porters employed by the St. Paul Union Terminal Company designated the UTSEA as their collective bargaining agency. The company refused to deal with the union on the grounds that the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks allegedly had maintained a "scope" agreement with the company for 20 years covering the various crafts and classes of station employes working in and around the properties of the company.

Electrical Union Seeks War Jobs For Negroes

New York, July 25—A program aimed to integrate Negroes into war production has been initiated by District Council 1 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. The program, submitted by the Council's Negro Affairs Committee, covers 40 organized plants in New York, Pennsylvania and Connecticut.

It stipulates that the union will attempt to secure, through the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, written letters from employers stating that they will employ minority groups, including Negroes, and that in plants where Negroes are now employed, upgrading will be encouraged, with union and management meetings held to determine the departments where Negroes can best be employed with the least amount of disruption.

GAIN MANY JOBS

Carl Geiser, president of UE Local 1227 in New York City reported that 20 per cent of all persons placed by the local since January, 1942, were Negroes.

"The policy of our union for all-out production to win the war," he said, "cannot be fully carried out unless all available manpower is put to work. We have broken down the barrier of discrimination wherever it has existed in our shops.

"We not only believe the Negro people must be afforded equal opportunity to fight for this country, but we also believe that they must be given equal opportunity to work for this country."

A large "Victory Thru Unity" poster with pictures on it of Cpl. Meyer Levin, Capt. Colin Kelly of the U. S. Air Corps, and Dorie Miller, Negro messman who was awarded the Navy Cross for distinguished service at Pearl Harbor, has been issued by the UE Local in Bridgeport, Conn.

House Measure Falls Short By 2 1-2 Billion of Figure Set by Treasury

WASHINGTON, July 25—The House passed a much battered and badly inadequate tax bill this week, with one improvement over the bill reported by the Ways and Means Committee but still short more than 2.5 billions of the amount the Treasury asked.

The one improvement was in jacking up the excess profits tax rate from 87.5 per cent to 90 per cent, leaving the normal profits and surtax rates at 45 per cent. The vote, under a gag rule that prohibited amendment except those offered by the Ways and Means Committee, was 392 to two. The bill had to be voted either up or down as a whole.

The bill now goes to the Senate, with indications that the Administration will try to restore the missing 2.5 billion dollars needed there. The CIO also declared that it would fight in the Senate for an adequate bill, declaring in a letter to all Congressmen two days before the vote:

SECOND BILL

"The Ways and Means Committee's bill is so hopelessly inadequate to meet the needs of America at war that the adoption of its bill foreshadows a second revenue act this year.

"The Committee's bill fails to provide adequate revenue. It falls nearly 2.5 billion short of the additional 8.5 billion sought by the Treasury, and thus lays the basis for a renewed drive of reactionaries for a Federal sales tax."

The CIO statement, contained in a letter signed by Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan, scored the gag rule that put the power to tax the nation into the hands of 25 Congressmen on the Committee, leaving the other Congressmen helpless to propose changes or even to discuss the bill intelligently.

"We shall continue to fight this vicious and undemocratic practice until it has been broken," Cowan's letter said. "In the meantime, within the limited debate allowed on the bill, it is incumbent on every Congressman who desires to maintain the unity and morale of the American people and who believes in equality of war sacrifice, to denounce the Committee's bill."

LOOPHOLES LEFT

Loopholes in the bill allow holders of big incomes to escape their fair share of taxation for victory. These include the failure to raise rates in the higher brackets, refusal to end the scandal of tax exempt securities and separate income tax returns for wealthy couples, refusal to increase rates on inheritances and gifts, etc.

The bill passed by the House, as the CIO statement pointed out, utterly fails to carry out the President's seven point war economy program, especially in the flat refusal to even think about limiting incomes to $25,000 a year.

"The CIO intends to continue the fight before the Senate for an equitable tax bill, producing adequate revenues, requiring equality of sacrifice," the letter concluded. "It intends to continue its fight for a tax program which will be an instrument of victory."

Dies Wants Public To Pay For Libelous Boner

WASHINGTON, July 25—With a display of gall that would make a dozen brass monkeys blush with embarrassment, Rep. Martin Dies this week sought to make the public pay through the nose for his own mistake.

Dies—who is the Berlin radio's most widely quoted Congressman—asked the House Accounts Committee to pay the $600 it cost the Texas poll-taxer to get out from under a $75,000 libel suit.

The suit was filed by David Vaughan of the U. S. Board of Economic Warfare, whose dismissal Dies had demanded on the basis that he was allegedly once a member of the American League for Peace and Democracy. Vaughan wasn't the man—and he sought to make Dies pay damages for libel.

Two months after the charges were made by Dies—his committee had not been consulted—the Texan returned to Washington. Admitting it was all a big mistake, he sent a public letter to the House clearing Vaughan and eating a lot of dirt in public.

As part of the settlement, Dies agreed to pay Vaughan's legal fees —$600 in all.

Hugh Lyons, CIO Director In Boston, Dies After Illness

Boston, July 24—Hugh Lyons, CIO regional director in New England, died here July 17 after an illness of several weeks. He was 38 years old.

Born in Illinois, Lyons went to work in the coal mines at the age of 14. Later he became an official of the United Mine Workers of America, and served it in several posts. He came to Boston as CIO regional director in 1939. Previous to that he had been regional director in St. Louis for the Steel Workers Organizing Committee.

In 1941 he was named an alternate on the Natl. Defense Mediation Board, and later to its successor, the War Labor Board.

Lyons was survived by his widow and five children.

Retail Union Wars on N. Y. Sweatshops

New York, July 25—Sweatshop wages in New York State's thousands of retail stores will be a thing of the past if a CIO union's latest campaign is successful.

Pres. Samuel Wolchok of the United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes revealed that his organization is seeking 50,000 names on a petition to be presented to the state department of labor, which will ask for minimum wage levels for retail workers.

Representatives of 45 locals met in New York City this week to plan the campaign. It is expected the petitions will be handed to Frieda Miller, labor commissioner, on Aug. 15.

Citing the fact that the New York State CIO executive board had called for minimum wages in the retail field, Wolchok declared: "The resolution of the state CIO body emphasized that retail employes are among the lowest paid of any single industrial group in the state."

Appoint Santo

New York—(FP)—John Santo, former secretary treasurer of the CIO Transport Workers Union, has been appointed director of organization by the union executive board according to Pres. Michael Quill.

Bay State CIO Chucks 'Politics-As-Usual'

BOSTON, July 25—Politics-as-usual went out the window this week as the Massachusetts CIO set a course of action aimed at filling government offices with pro-war, pro-Roosevelt and pro-labor candidates.

During the course of a special one-day legislative conference, several hundred delegates demanded the defeat of a dozen reactionaries whose records have been filled with opposition to the defense program and the war, and urged their replacement by thoroughly pro-war candidates.

In taking this action, the state CIO council cut squarely across party lines. It endorsed a Democratic New Dealer for the Senate; voiced support for Gov. Leverett Saltonstall, a Republican; and urged a special fight to defeat Rep. Joseph W. Martin, Republican majority leader in the House of Representatives.

REP. JOE MARTIN

The CIO attack on Martin came in the form of a resolution charging that the GOP leader "has before Pearl Harbor, and since, conducted himself and led the Republican party along a course of narrow partisanship and disruption of the war effort and against the welfare of the nation."

Citing Martin's record as one of support for disruptive legislation attacking the interests of labor, low income people, farmers and small business, the Council added:

"Joseph Martin, Jr., has attempted to make the Republican party the northern end of an anti-Roosevelt axis on the home front in coalition with the Democratic poll tax reactionaries of the South."

ENDORSE REPUBLICAN

On the other hand, the CIO voted its endorsement of Saltonstall for governor, though in times past labor has been frequently critical of his domestic policies.

"To endorse Saltonstall not on his labor record, but for civil liberties and his stand behind the President, is a sign of courage and leadership," declared Pres. Joseph Salerno of the CIO state council. "The governor's record in the war effort has been splendid."

The conference was severe in its criticism of Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge, Republican, who enters the campaign armed with anecdotes of his recent trip as a reserve Army major to the Libyan front, and a letter of praise from Secretary of War Stimson.

Lodge, the CIO said, is "a man who played politics with the nation's welfare, who failed to see before Pearl Harbor the great danger to our nation from the Axis powers and who voted against the best interests of the people on issues involving national unity." The council's endorsement went to Rep. Joseph Casey, young New Dealer.

Rep. Thomas Eliot, a leader of the House progressive bloc and a strong foe of labor-baiters, won strong endorsement for re-election. Another who gained CIO backing was Raymond Leslie Buell, the editor of Fortune magazine, whom the Council described as a "far-sighted liberal Republican." Buell is opposing Rep. A. T. Treadway, a bewhiskered reactionary who has fought labor and the President.

BROPHY LISTS AIMS

Strong necessity for labor to pitch into the coming elections as preparation for the even more vital battles of 1944, was stressed by John Brophy, CIO director of industrial union councils, who addressed the conference.

"This political responsibility of ours is not easily discharged," Brophy said. "It is not to be fulfilled by fine phrases on the one hand, nor by short-range, piecemeal political bargaining on the other."

Sen. Mead To Seek N. Y. Governorship

New York, July 25—The Empire State's Democratic party this week gained the opportunity of nominating a real New Dealer for governor when Sen. James Mead announced his candidacy for the gubernatorial office.

The announcement of Mead's decision to seek the governor's position was contained in a letter to Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, who had urged that he seek the nomination.

The New York State CIO Council, meeting last month, had warned that the Democrats must nominate a liberal of the stamp of Mead or Lt. Gov. Charles Poletti if they hoped to gain labor support in the coming elections. Thomas Dewey, veteran GOP wheelhorse, is almost certain to receive the Republican nomination.

Warns of Danger to War Effort in Wire Merger Plan

Washington, July 25—Merger of the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies would "intensify a fast-growing bottleneck in communication," a House committee was warned today by Pres. Joseph Selly of the CIO American Communications Assn.

Appearing before the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, Selly voiced his union's opposition to a bill permitting the merger of the two communications companies and warned that it was designed "solely to improve the bad financial position of one of the carriers—a business-as-usual consideration in a period of national emergency and peril."

UNION-BUSTING

The ACA president said the measure's labor provisions were of a "union busting nature" and predicted it would "assure mass discharges, destruction of seniority rights, abrogation of union contracts and the loss of those precious gains won by telegraph workers through many years of bitter struggle."

In place of the bill, he offered a five-point program to convert the industry to war efficiency standards.

'KIDDYGRAMS' GO FIRST

"We cannot permit the airing of milady's dog, or the delivery of theater tickets, to interfere with the war effort," he said.

The union leader revealed that in Hartford, Conn.—a war boomtown—Postal Telegraph has given telegrams of the Travelers Life Insurance Co. preferred status, despite the fact that two large aircraft companies have a large volume of important rush messages.

"In the New York Western Union office," he continued, "birthday messages get the same attention as government work, and kiddygrams go along in the rush hours, sometimes ahead of Army and Navy communications. It is criminal neglect."

BY ELEANOR FOWLER

Council of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Electing win-the-war Congressmen to office this fall is one of labor's most important immediate jobs. The present Congress has consistently sabotaged the war effort. Some two and a half months ago the President of the United States proposed a seven-point war economic program which, if adopted as a whole, would prevent inflation.

The House of Representatives has voted against that program on every issue that has come before it. They refused even to discuss limiting personal incomes to $25,000 a year. They cut the appropriation for OPA so drastically that the enforcement of price ceilings would have been completely crippled. They have repeatedly and criminally hampered the government's program for increasing food production to meet our war needs and those of our allies, by voting against Farm Security appropriations and by opposing sale of grain surpluses below parity.

It is up to labor to give leadership to the nation in defeating the men who voted against the President's program. And here the auxiliaries have a very important task.

Men and women workers—union members—are working longer hours and overtime to produce the implements of victory. They have less time this year than ever before for political activity. Auxiliary women must get into the election campaign and mobilize the housewives to elect a Victory Congress this fall.

The first job is to secure full information on:

1. The record of your Congressman and of his opponents in the election.

2. The times for registration of voters, and the rules about registration.

3. The time of the primaries.

The second job is to get this information to every voter—and especially to every union man and his family. That means getting up leaflets and distributing them.

The third job is the hardest, to see to it that every one who gets the information acts on it—goes out to register, knows how to vote, and goes to the polls. This means a lot of leg work, a lot of door-to-door visits to impress on the people the importance of voting and of voting for win-the-war candidates.

Hitler has deprived most of Europe of the right to vote. There can be no more important use for the votes we can cast this November than to elect men who realize that America's first and only job today is to exterminate Hitlerism.

FIVE CONVENTIONS

Five auxiliary conventions are scheduled for the last week in July and the first week in August. The first national meeting of the auxiliaries of the National Maritime Union convenes at NMU headquarters in New York on July 27. The women expect to set up a national NMU auxiliary as the result of the three day session.

In the same week the West Virginia State Auxiliary Council will hold its second annual convention in Wheeling, West Virginia, and Montana auxiliaries will convene in Anaconda, Montana, to set up a state organization.

August 3 the third national convention of the United Automobile Workers auxiliaries will convene in Chicago with a full week's program. Delegates from all over the country will represent the auxiliaries 15,000 members.

Minnesota auxiliaries will meet in Ely, August 7-9 at the call of the Minnesota State Industrial Union Council, which declares that the establishment of a State Auxiliary Council is "vitally necessary in this period of war."

St. Louis CIO, AFL Unite For Elections

ST. LOUIS, July 24—St. Louis labor—CIO and AFL together—this week rolled up its sleeves in a campaign to throw appeasers and labor-baiters out of office and give their seats to win-the-war candidates.

Some 45 leaders of CIO and AFL unions adopted a statement of policy proposing the formation of a permanent United Labor Committee to speak for both major wings of labor on all legislative and political questions related to winning the war.

The program was announced by A. J. Kojetinsky, CIO regional director, and Pres. Joseph Clark of the St. Louis AFL Central Trades & Labor Council. The statement of policy will be submitted to both CIO and AFL councils. affiliates of both groups and to the railroad brotherhoods.

"WIN-WAR" PLEDGE

"Labor has demonstrated over and over again its realization that winning the war against the Axis is the main order of business today," the statement said. "We know that unless the war results in a complete victory for the United Nations, there can be no labor movement, no democracy.

Defeat of Rep. Walter C. Ploeser, isolationist and labor-baiter, was made a major objective of the committee. Plans are being made to open headquarters in the 12th Congressional district, raise funds for the campaign and distribute literature aimed at defeating Ploeser.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

An important conference was held in Pittsburgh, Pa., with the representatives of the CIO and the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, on Monday, July 20. Most of the PWOC directors were present.

Brother Samuel Sponsellor, CIO representative, was designated as chairman of PWOC in place of Brother J. C. Lewis, who requested to leave immediately. Lewis J. Clark was named as secretary and the other members of the committee are: Roy Franklin, Oscar Wilson, R. J. Thomas (UAM-CIO), David J. McDonald (USA-CIO) and Allan S. Haywood (CIO).

Plan Organizing Drive

Plans were laid out to intensify organization in this important industry. Regional conferences will be held throughout the nation followed up by conferences in each region called by the PWOC directors. Local unions and officers will be invited to attend. A high spirit of enthusiasm prevailed throughout the conference with a united determination to go forward and complete organization of the packinghouse workers into a strong, powerful union. The PWOC is presenting its case now to a panel of the National War Labor Board, from which it expects to obtain wage increases, improved working conditions and security for the Union. This is of interest to every packinghouse worker throughout the nation.

Two other important conferences were held in Pittsburgh this week; one with representatives from Little Steel plants throughout the nation and followed up by a conference of representatives from the plants of U. S. Steel.

The great victory for union security and the obtaining of other important gains by the USA in the case before the National War Labor Board involving Little Steel has inspired the steel workers throughout the nation and will have its beneficial effects everywhere. The steel workers engaged in U. S. Steel plants are determined to obtain similar concessions from that corporation. Conferences with these employers in this all-important basic industry have been called for within the near future.

It is with regret that we announce the death of the CIO Regional Director in New England, Brother Hugh Lyons. He passed away on Friday, July 17, 1942. Brother Lyons served our movement faithfully and well and his many friends will miss him. Our movement suffers a loss and we extend to his wife and five children and his entire family our heartfelt sympathy.

Many More Victories

CIO Regional Director James P. Dean in Oklahoma City reports another PWOC-CIO victory at Armours in Oklahoma City with a vote of 718 for CIO as against 106.

Field Representative Ed Howard reports the winning of the election in behalf of UAW-CIO at the Falls Screw Products in Akron, Ohio, with a vote of 107 for CIO as against 3.

The United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers won a state labor election at the William Sheelhorn Corporation at New Haven, Connecticut, reports CIO Sub-Regional Director Edward McCrone. The vote was 129 for CIO as against 26 for no union.

CIO Regional Director Hodson in Wilmington, Delaware, reports a CIO victory at the election held at the New Castle Defense Plant, New Castle, Delaware, subsidiary of Edgemoor Iron Company with a vote of 540 for the United Steelworkers of America as against 3 for no union.

The UAW-CIO won another victory at the Dain Manufacturing Company's plant, subsidiary of John Deere and Company in Ottumwa, Iowa, reports Regional Director Ben Henry. The vote was 172 for CIO as against 46 for no union.

Jack Mink, business manager for the United Cafeteria Workers LIU No. 471, Washington, D. C., reports the results of the Navy Yard cafeteria election, as follows: Out of 126 eligible to vote, 96 votes were cast for CIO as against 11. They expect to start negotiating for a contract soon.

The American Newspaper Guild received a decision against the New Haven Register News Paper, ordering this paper to reinstate an employe who was discharged over a year ago, with back wages. This decision will have a great effect upon CIO in this area.

The Textile Workers Union of America won a labor board election at Brookside Mills in Knoxville, Tenn., with a vote of 1,308 for CIO as against 420, Joseph R. White, vice president of TWUA and Tennessee Director, and Paul R. Christopher, CIO Regional Director in Tennessee report.

Vichy Forces Workers Into Fascist 'Unions'

LONDON, July 25 (ALN)—When the Vichy government this week began dissolving all French trade unions and turning over their funds to the newly-created Labor Front, it marked the end of a two-year attempt to vary the traditional pattern worked out by other fascist states. Petain has had no success persuading French workers to cooperate in keeping down their own wages and worsening their own working conditions.

Labor officials attached to the Free French here point out that when the General Federation of Workers (CGT) was abolished soon after the Armistice, only nine of over 80 Unions Departementales (corresponding to Central Trades bodies and Industrial Union Councils) voted to participate in the formation of the new Labor Charter.

Rene Belin, former official of the CGT, entered Petain's cabinet as Minister of Labor. Only a handful of other labor officials, however, supported the government.

NO BARGAINING

Among the thousands of laws and decrees promulgated by Marshal Petain were several providing for the continuance of existing unions, and several others providing for a prison term of five years and a fine of 10,000 francs for anyone attempting to engage in collective bargaining. This situation confused even officials of the fascist-minded union organized by the Croix de Feu.

After long disputes between advocates of corporative, employer-controlled labor organizations such as Italy's, and advocates of the mere openly state-controlled Nazi type, a Labor Charter was adopted on October 26 of last year.

Opposition to this charter among the workers has been so pronounced that its provisions are being put into effect now for the first time, when, according to the Free French, the pretense of maintaining free institutions in unoccupied France is no longer considered necessary by Germany.

COMPANY UNIONS

Under the Labor Charter, all unions and employers' organizations are dissolved, to be replaced at once by a hierarchical structure which bears only a superficial resemblance to union federations in democratic countries.

Employers can belong to local union branches. The union executives of local, regional and national bodies are appointed by the government and proceedings of all meetings are secret. Thus the workers neither pick their own representatives nor know what they are doing.

Unions are not allowed to take part in political or religious activities. Strikes are forbidden. Union influence is still further circumscribed by "Social Committees," the Labor Charter's one innovation. These committees, consisting of equal representation from owners, workers and managers, are elected by the hand-picked union executive committees. The social committees in the plant "exchange information regarding the personal affairs of the staff and their families."

WAGES ARE FIXED

Wages are fixed by National Wages Committees appointed by the government controllers for each industry, who in almost every case are chairmen of the largest firms in the industry. There are no negotiations between the workers and the management.

The Croix de Feu unions are permitted to set up separate sections within the Social Committees, and they can take these over when their membership reaches 50 per cent of the total. Present labor officials, according to the Charter, will not be "systematically eliminated" unless they find themselves incapable of adapting to the new system.

Indian Unions Ask Guerrilla Training

London, July 25—(ALN)—Leaders of the Osterley Park guerrilla training school, which has played an important part in the training of Britain's Home Guard, have received an urgent request from Bengal trade unions to send instructors to prepare the Indian people in that area for defense against the Japanese.

The Bengal unionists indicate that they are eager to cooperate with the British military command, but that they also wish to serve directly under their own leaders.

It is believed here that the British government, which previously had turned down the offer of the National Congress to train an Indian army of five millions, may consent to this latest request from Bengal.

One of the Osterley Park leaders invited to India is "Yank" Levy, an American who fought with the British during the Civil War in Spain. Levy is the author of "Guerrilla Warfare."

UNIONS AS AXIS

The Bengal trade unions have also expressed their wish that a delegation of leading British trade unionists, headed by Sir Walter Citrine, be sent to India for the purpose of stimulating the growth of Indian trade unions. This wish, it is declared, is based upon the evidence that opposition to the Axis in India is most determined where the unions are strongest.

British Railway Union Convention Asks 2nd Front

LONDON, July 25 (ALN)—Meeting this week in its annual convention while the Red Army was being pushed back in the Don basin under the impact of the German offensive, the powerful National Union of Railwaymen added its voice to the overwhelming demand by all sections of British labor for an immediate invasion of Europe to carry out the promises of the Churchill-Molotov agreement and destroy the German armies this year.

A significant sign of the railwaymen's keenness for victory was their readiness to let women take over their jobs, if to do so would speed the opening of a second front. "If women in Russia can do any job in the railway industry, our women can in Britain," said F. Bowers, member of the union's executive. "If Russian women can get on the footplate of a locomotive, ours can."

WOMEN WORKERS

"When are the British railway companies going to declare war on Hitler? When are they going to equal the efforts of the workers?" one delegate asked. "There is absolutely no excuse for the companies saying that they cannot replace men with women in our industry."

At the present time more than 50,000 women are working on the railways in Britain, mostly as clerks and porters. About 30,000 are members of unions. The convention of the NUR voted to conduct a campaign to recruit women into the union.

Breaking down ancient prejudices against the membership of women in unions has been one of the major social changes in Britain during the war.

Pledging the 376,000 members of the NUR to keep Britain's wartime transport services operating at maximum efficiency, F. J. Burrows, who has just succeeded J. H. Potts as president, declared that the union's policy was one of threefold unity: First, unification of the railway companies; second, coordination among railway, road, coastwise and canal shipping, and air transport; third, federation of the three existing unions in the railway industry into a unified body.

SEEK VICTORY

Britain's railway workers, numbering almost half a million, together with the miners and engineers, form the section of the people most determined to win the war in 1942.

Soviet Workers Rush New Rubber Factory

KUIBYSHEV, July 25 — (ALN) — Another remarkable achievement of Soviet construction workers, whose feats last winter are largely responsible for the present high level of Soviet war production, was reported this week as a new rubber factory went into full production in what before the war was a small market town in Central Siberia.

Construction of a plant this size would have taken over a year in peacetime. With reports from the front emphasizing the need of the Red Army and Red Air Force for tires, the workers finished the plant in four months.

35 BELOW

Ground was broken in the middle of the Siberian winter, with the temperature 35 degrees below zero. Railroad tracks were laid to the factory site, machinery was installed and work was begun while the factory was still being built.

The construction workers faced tremendous difficulties in opening the factory on time, including the wartime shortage of equipment for installing machinery. Steam-shovel crews, after finishing work on the excavation, used cables attached to the scoops of their steam-shovels to place 15-ton machine parts in place as accurately as if they had used heavy-duty cranes.

SET RECORDS

Huge stills and chemical equipment were set up with ordinary hand winches and tractors. Gigantic rubber rolling mills were assembled in two weeks instead of the six required before the war. Autoclaves were set up in two days instead of five. Calendars were assembled in 12 days instead of two months. Electricians installed three miles of cable in three months.

The first crude rubber was coming out of the retorts while the construction workers were working on the roof. And, in a gesture which is typical of the spirit of Soviet construction workers, the crew drove to its next job on finished tires built in the plant they had just erected.

NEW YORK, July 25—An estimated 60,000 New Yorkers met this week at the call of the CIO city council to hear speakers from the CIO and from public life call for the immediate opening of a second front against Hitler.

The meeting, held in Madison Square, turned out the biggest outdoor crowd in New York's trade union history, to applaud speeches by such men as Senator Claude Pepper of Florida; Senator James M. Mead of N.Y.; Joseph Curran, president of the CIO Council and head of the Natl. Maritime Union; Harold Garno, secretary of the N.Y. State CIO; Mike Quill of the Transport Workers; Lt. Governor Poletti of N.Y.; Mayor La Guardia and others.

A message was sent to the meeting by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, which said in part: "In every section of the country, in every plant where CIO members are forging the instruments of war, American workers are vowing support to our Commander-in-Chief, support for every military move he may order that will help bring about the victory of the United Nations."

They also heard a message from Charlie Chaplin, phoned by the great actor from Hollywood, which said: "On the battlefields of Russia democracy will live or die," and which called for a second front at once as a guarantee of victory.

GREETINGS SENT

The meeting sent greetings to President Roosevelt, declaring "We are united in support of your policies" and urging an immediate second front "for the security of America" and the "hastened triumph of democracy and the freedom of mankind the world over."

Greetings were also sent to President Murray, President Green of the AFL and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. "We greet you for your bold and courageous leadership on behalf of labor and all America for victory over the Axis," the meeting told Murray.

A message from Hillman, read to the meeting, said: "Meetings like this will assure the President that under his leadership we have the solidarity, the courage, the offensive spirit and the will required for the speediest possible realization of this urgent task."

CIO Launches Shipyard Drive In South

Wilmington, N. C., July 25—A strong drive aimed to win union wages and working conditions for the workers at the North Carolina Shipbuilding Company has been launched here by the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Union officials said that scores of membership applications were being signed by employes in virtually every department of the yard. To aid the campaign, the Wilmington Shipbuilding Organizing Committee has started an official publication called the "North Carolina Shipyard Worker."

A series of 15 weekly broadcasts sponsored by the union will be presented every Sunday night at 10:45 over station WMFD, Wilmington.

A basic program formulated by the union calls for a permanent shipbuilding industry in Wilmington; additional housing for shipyard workers; a union-management committee to settle grievances and increase production; a promotion schedule to insure advancement; elimination of favoritism and union standards of work and pay.

Cafeteria Union All-Out To Help War

Washington, July 25—As part of a Victory program initiated by the CIO United Cafeteria Employes Local Industrial Union here, members have set up a labor-management Committee, donated blood for the American Red Cross, entered a class in first aid, and signed up to buy War Stamps and Bonds.

Joseph D. White, president of the local said the union was "100 per cent behind President Roosevelt and CIO President Philip Murray" in the war effort.

The union recently won an election held among workers at the Navy Yard cafeteria, White said. Plans for the future include the setting up of a cooking school in the fall.

Unionists Tell Second Front Stand to FDR

Washington, July 25—The 1,000,000 CIO members in New York state want a second front now, and they fully endorse the Roosevelt - Churchill - Molotov agreement for a second front, according to a delegation of 75 representatives that came here to visit the White House and Congress this week.

"Your agreement with the British and Soviet governments on the urgency of establishing a second front in Europe this year against Hitler has our spirited support," the delegation said in a statement left with President Roosevelt and the New York Congressmen.

"We believe the second front should be opened without delay. We believe further that the speed with which Hitler and the Axis will be crushed by the second front, opened this summer before it is too late, will go into a glorious page of history as proof of the wisdom of your policy."

PLENTY OF SHIPS

Speaking to newsmen for the delegation, Joseph Curran, president of the Natl. Maritime Union who returned from a trip to England last week, said that the United Nations have plenty of ships to open and supply a second front immediately.

He reported that public opinion in Britain is strongly for a second front, adding that British war production, especially in shipping, is well up in all the arms necessary for an invasion of Nazi-held Europe.

White Collar School Ends 10th Season

Chicago, July 25—The tenth annual session of the summer school for office workers which closes here today, brought together 45 students from white collar unions in all parts of the country. The school was in session two weeks.

CIO unions represented were the United Office and Professional Workers; United Federal Workers, and State, County & Municipal Workers. Lewis Merrill, president of the CIO office workers, is a member of the Board of Directors. Miss Eleanor G. Coit is the school's director.

White House Hears Plea For War on Finns

Washington, July 25—An immediate declaration of war on Finland, whose Mannerheim government is a "Hitler ally, waging war on us and on the United Nations," was asked of President Roosevelt by delegates from the Finnish-American Trade Union Committee in a visit to the White House this week.

The delegation, led by Rudy Hanson of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, left a statement with the President praising the government's action in closing Finnish consulates and saying in part:

"The fact that such a step finally had to be taken is only a reflection of the more basic fact that the Mannerheim government is a Hitler ally, waging war on us and on the United Nations.

"We therefore urge that the latest action of the State Department be followed immediately by rupture of diplomatic relations and a declaration of war on Finland. Continued relations wtih the Finnish puppet of Hitler only gives the Axis another base of operations against the United Nations, and still leaves Mannerheim's consular agents here considerable freedom to carry on espionage for the Axis."

Knight, Conarty Unopposed In Oil Union Poll

Fort Worth, Tex., July 24—Pres. O. A. Knight and Sec. Treas. E. C. Conarty of the CIO Oil Workers International Union are unopposed for re-election in the union's annual referendum.

The official list of nominees showed First Vice. Pres. Sam Beers will be opposed by E. F. Loughboro, president of Local 120, Ventura, Calif. Second Vice Pres. A. R. Kinstley will be opposed by W. W. Allen, OWIU representative at Beach, Calif.

Cleveland CIO Boosts Industrial Health Drive

CLEVELAND, July 25—"Keep Fit—To Work—To Earn—To Win".

This is the descriptive title of a health information campaign which the Cleveland Industrial Union Council is preparing to sponsor in every war production plant in the city where the CIO represents the workers, according to William F. Donovan, CIUC president.

Donovan reports that the "Keep Fit" campaign will refresh in the minds of Cleveland's great legion of war workers the fundamental facts on healthful living by means of a series of six original posters, supplementary folders for every employe, home material and by asking them to sign a free health club membership card.

NEW IDEAS

"In this campaign health-crusading and reforming, which leave the workers pretty cold, especially when offered by management, will be replaced," Donovan explained, "by an appeal based on safeguarding the job and the security resulting from its regular pay checks. On top of this we are showing how important the uninterrupted production of every war workers is in the fight to defeat the Axis.

"Our union can see that the worker's pay is commensurate with his ability and production," Donovan added, "and we bring the other advantages of collective bargaining. But we can't keep the members in good health—this is under their own control.

"So the CIO in Cleveland is passing on some popularized health information about food, sleep, fresh air and sunshine, cleanliness, regular physical examinations and the need for moderation in drinking, eating and general living," the CIUC president declared.

Cleveland's leadership in health protection is partially explained, Donovan said, by the existence of the Anti-Tuberculosis League and its willingness to assume the financial obligations of a general health campaign and to administer such a program. The annual sale of Christmas Seals finances the Anti-Tuberculosis League.

CIO Army Handbook Given to 50,000; Receives High Praise

WASHINGTON, July 25—The CIO has become better known to 50,000 American citizens during the past month as a result of widespread distribution of the Servicemen's Manual published by the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief. Fifty thousand is a minimum estimate for many of the individual requests have come from mothers, wives, and sisters of servicemen indicating that the whole family has come to know CIO's special service for the men in our armed forces.

Many of CIO's international unions have mailed out special imprint editions of the Manual to their members in the Army, Navy and Marine Corps. These special editions carry a message from the officers of the union.

WIDE ATTENTION

Quick to see the value of the Servicemen's Manual have been the officers of the armed forces themselves. Requests for copies have been received from Naval Aviation Cadet Selection Boards, offices of the Canadian Department of National Defense, army chaplains, and officers at various camps and training centers throughout the country.

Local Red Cross officials, an executive of Time Magazine, and a director of the Big Brother organization have joined plain soldiers and sailors in requesting the National CIO Committee to send them the Manual.

By far the largest number of individual requests have come from relatives of men in the service. Their brief comments show that they have come to appreciate the CIO as a service organization during wartime.

MANY LETTERS

"Long may the CIO continue its vigorous fight for the social and economic emancipation of labor, which will then make this country truly anti-fascist," one correspondent writes.

The wife of a private in the Engineer Corps states, "I am sure that all CIO members appreciate the help that this booklet, Servicemen's Manual, will be able to provide."

One typical letter begins, "I have three brothers in the Army and would like to send them the CIO Manual to read."

Last week the Committee for American and Allied War Relief sent the Manual to members of the House and Senate. Now the National Office is being flooded with requests from Capitol Hill from congressmen who want to mail the CIO's publication to friends and constituents who are serving in the armed forces.

Mexico Represented

Washington (FP)—The Mexican government will be represented at hearings in El Paso, Tex., to be conducted by the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee, looking into discrimination against Spanish-speaking workers. The Mexican government praised the committee for what it has done to end discrimination against Mexicans.

'Pass Victory Tax Bill,' CIO Asks Senate

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—Demands of CIO President Murray, Vice-President Reid Robinson and representatives of the CIO maritime unions, the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers and the CIO Auxiliaries for a victory tax bill for 1942 were expressed at hearings before the Senate Finance Committee this week.

The CIO spokesmen sharply criticized the House version of the tax bill, which they said followed a "soak-the-poor" line, and urged the Senators to write and vote a bill that would raise the revenue we need to win on ability to pay and in line with the Roosevelt anti-inflation program.

The same CIO leaders also spoke out against the polltax at Senate hearings on the Pepper repeal bill, urging its adoption as a necessary step toward national unity and morale for winning the war.

In outlining a victory tax program, the CIO leaders called for an end to tax loopholes, an income tax to take the load off the low income groups and place it on those who can bear it easiest, for higher excess profits taxes, and for strict avoidance of the sales tax as a grave danger to the health and productive efficiency of war workers.

WLB Grants Security At U. S. Rubber

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—The United States Rubber Co. was ordered last week to include a maintenance of membership clause in contracts with the United Rubber Workers covering about 21,500 workers in eight of its plants. The Board's decision was made by a six to three vote with the employer members dissenting.

The action followed a majority recommendation made by a three-man panel composed of Lloyd K. Garrison, public representative; D. R. Stewart, for labor; and F. S. Fales, employer member, who dissented.

On the question of the union's demand for a 12½ cents hourly pay increase and a night shift bonus, both sides agreed to the appointment of three fact-finding arbitrators to make a study of these issues and report their recommendations to the panel.

MAKING STUDY

This study is now being made by Professor Douglas Brown of the Mass. Institute of Technology; Prof. William Dawson, Western Reserve Law School; and Edgar Rowe, San Francisco attorney. On recommendation of the panel, the Board decided to make retroactive to May 28, date of certification, any wage increase or night shift bonus which may be granted.

The maintenance of membership clause which is the same recommended in other recent cases, will not be effective for 15 days, to permit members of the union to resign if they wish. After this time they and other members who join later will be required to remain in good union standing during the life of the contract.

Pact Protects Women's Jobs

Erie, Pa., Aug. 1—An agreement affecting the employment of married women has been reached with the General Electric Erie Works here, Local 506, United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers, announced here.

The management agreed that for the duration of the war, no women now married or who marry in the future will be laid off, and that those who left GE since March 1, 1942, because they married, will be recalled as jobs open for them.

Wives of draftees laid off since June 1, will also be called back as soon as jobs for them open up. The union urged these women to apply for work at once.

Soldiers' Vote Angers Tories

Washington, Aug. 1—Something new in new lows—even for poll-taxers—was reached this week when a handful of southern Bourbons tried to block the soldiers' vote bill in the House on the ground that it was "the opening wedge" to abolition of the poll-tax.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Ramsay of W. Va., passed by 134 to 19 as outraged Representatives denounced the poll-taxers' tactic of calling repeated roll call votes in an effort to filibuster the bill out of existence.

It remained for Rep. Rankin of Mississippi, one of the most bitterly reactionary men in the House, to declare: "This is merely an attempt to get the camel's nose under the tent and destroy the election laws of every state in the union."

Packinghouse Parley Praises Murray Stand

Chicago, Aug. 1—Pledges of support for the CIO and the policies of Pres. Philip Murray were voiced at a conference of leaders and officials of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee in Pittsburgh last week.

"Efforts are being made to undermine the CIO in its determination to lend every aid to the nation's war program, both by attacking the leadership of this great organization and by jurisdictional raids," the PWOC leaders noted.

Their resolution praised Pres. Murray for "his far-sighted and courageous leadership" which "has directed the destinies of the organization along the road to victory, both in the war and in organizing the unorganized."

Gas, Coke Parley Set For Sept. 10

Washington, Aug. 1—The Natl. Council of Gas Coke & Chemical Workers will hold a convention at the Niagara Hotel, Niagara Falls, N. Y., starting Sept. 10, it was announced today by Chairman Martin Wagner.

The Council will apply for a charter as a CIO national union affiliate at that time, it is expected.

Scores of former locals of District 50, United Mine Workers, have left the Lewis-dominated organization and joined the ranks of the Council. Estimates of the number of workers who have quit the Lewis ranks in disgust at the lack of democracy and opposition to both President Roosevelt and the CIO policies of President Philip Murray, run close to 40,000.

Evidence of the unpopularity of the Lewis family position on the war was seen in Texas this week where a company union, using as its campaign argument the isolationist policies of John L. Lewis and the America First membership of Kathryn Lewis, defeated District 50 three to one in an NLRB election. The Natl. Council was not on the ballot.

Bittner Urges Real Democracy In Mine Union

Bittner is now assistant to Philip Murray, president of the CIO United Steelworkers of America. An officer of the United Mine Workers for more than 30 years, Bittner was recently removed as president of District 17 in West Virginia by Lewis.

The 400 delegates, nearly a third of whom were coal miners, cheered when Bittner declared that real democracy in the labor movement would take a long step forward if the miners gained their autonomy. He pointed out that the overwhelming majority of the miners do not even have the opportunity to vote for their district officers, but are ruled by officers picked by Lewis.

"I believe the coal miners—with a union shop in almost every coal mine in the nation—should have their autonomy," Bittner asserted. "What right has any man to handpick officers for West Virginia, for example, when there are 120,000 miners right here."

The convention was called to order by E. T. Higgins, local chairman, who introduced Al Schang, president of the Wheeling CIO Council. After the invocation and a welcoming address by Robert L. Plummer, city manager, John B. Easton, state CIO president, took charge of the convention.

In his opening speech, Pres. Easton spoke of the growth and increasing membership of the CIO and congratulated the UMW delegates for attending in spite of the letters sent out by UMW state officials ordering them to boycott the convention.

Later in the session, the delegates heard a speech by John Brophy, CIO director of Industrial Union Councils, who talked on the theme of labor unity and the war.

Declaring that CIO President Philip Murray "has stood unflinchingly" for the war program advocated by President Roosevelt, Brophy said that "the unity of American labor is essential to the unity of America."

Glass Parley Reflects Big Growth

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 1—Reflecting a rapid growth in activities and membership during the last two years, the largest number of delegates in its history attended the fifth biennial convention of the Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers, now in session here.

President Irwin L. DeShetler was in the chair as the delegates took up a number of problems vital to the union in the war days ahead. Early in the sessions, the convention passed a resolution unanimously endorsing the policies of the CIO.

John Brophy, CIO director of Industrial Union Councils, representing the national CIO at the convention, spoke to the delegates earlier this week on the subject of labor unity and the war.

WARNS OF DANGER

Warning that America was in mortal danger, Brophy declared that "only by facing our peril and by going forth to meet the enemy in full knowledge of his strength and ours, can we hope for success."

He said that American labor is firmly on record in support of the foreign policy of our country "and is resolved to fight this struggle through, both on the production line and in all-out support of our fighting forces."

In the face of the danger confronting America, Brophy said, the CIO must be on guard against those "who would divide us, who would foster conflict between workers and farmers, or between men of one religion and another, or one race and another, or one labor organization and another."

W. Va. Miners Ask Murray Seek Union Presidency

The mine workers held a special meeting in conjunction with the regular convention sessions and voted overwhelmingly to demand that Murray run for the office.

He was vice-president of the union until recently, when he was "purged" by John L. Lewis and his executive board.

Pamphlet Cites Miners' Demands for Democracy

Pittsburgh, Aug. 1—Further evidence of growing discontent in the United Mineworkers against Lewis tyranny and a strong showing of faith in the leadership of CIO President Philip Murray was gathered in a pamphlet this week put out by the United Steelworkers, USA-CIO this week.

Under the title, "Coal Miners Rally to Phil Murray," the pamphlet describes the miners' anger with the Lewis attacks on Murray and the CIO, listing the Lewis refusal to pay CIO per capita, his arbitrary ousting of Murray, his refusal to give the UMW locals autonomy, and a wholehearted backing of Murray's leadership in the war.

Here are a few of many examples cited: From Shenandoah, Pa.: "We have backed you 100 per cent before and we'll do it again . . ." From Local 6004: "We strongly condemn any efforts to take the UMW out of the CIO . . ." From Local 2109: "We are 100 per cent here for President Murray and the CIO and pledge our cooperation that all workers be organized under the banner of CIO . . ." From Local 5509: "May we wish you every success in your undertakings and with our support we encourage you to press forward more and more to win the war."

That's only a few, culled from thousands of letters, wires and resolutions that Murray has received from UMWA locals and individual members. They show how strongly the anti-Lewis, anti-dictatorship trend is going.

Smashing of Unions Goal of New Outfit Set Up in Michigan

By HARRY READ

DETROIT, Aug. 1—The modernized technique of union-busting evolved in California by the San Francisco Employers Council, has finally come to Michigan.

The outfit calls itself the Michigan Labor Relations Service. Its headquarters are at 511 Mutual Building, Lansing.

Labor union officials who have seen the MLRS program, brand it as a plan for American fascism.

While its claimed mission is the representation of employers in collective bargaining negotiations, the literature issued by the MLRS brazenly reveals its intention to hamper and destroy organized labor unions through legislative lobbying for new laws and through nationwide resistance to demands made on any employer.

SPONSORS LISTED

The trustees and the board of advisers of the MLRS is made up of a group of professional politicians, business association promoters and corporation executives. The literature lists only one member who is now or ever has been a member of a labor union. And that member, his biography reveals, abandoned the labor movement long ago for more lucrative fields.

The prospectus of the MLRS sets forth on its cover that the group is a "voluntary association" of business establishments for the solution of labor problems."

There is a tabulation setting forth some fifty points, many of which will be of interest to the organized labor movement.

The first item dished up in the way of service for the employer is to "Tell you whether or not on what terms you should talk to organizer and committee when a plant is being organized."

It has been assumed by organized labor all along that the National Labor Relations Act gives a legal formula on that point.

Also the MLRS will "tell you how to operate our business during the time or organizing or negotiation, to avoid charges by NLRB." It will "explain to you the nature of the organization and individuals you are dealing with."

This sounds like the jolly old practice some years back of employer groups maintaining a file of information obtained by spies and stool pigeons for interchange among themselves. The LaFollette Committee published many volumes on that subject.

Only the highlights of the plan have been covered in this analysis. It is when the reader plods on through the prospectus that he is hit between the eyes with the heading: "Socialism of Industry."

Here we learn that there is a "desire and purpose of certain groups of organized labor to take over industry for their own benefit and to the complete loss of the stockholders whose hard-earned money is wrapped up in industry."

HEROES AND VILLAINS

There are some heroes in this section of the prospectus. They are Edsel Ford, C. E. Wilson (GM), C. C. Carlton (Motor Wheel), and Donald M. Nelson (War Production Board).

There are also villains. They are R. J. Thomas, UAW, president; George F. Addes, UAW secretary-treasurer; Dick Frankensteen, Walter Reuther, and, of all people, Father Raymond Clancy, Detroit priest and close friend of CIO President Philip Murray. It will be recalled that Father Clancy delivered the invocation at the last CIO National Convention in Detroit, and at the Michigan CIO convention in Muskegon.

CIO Wins Big 'Plane Election

HAGERSTOWN, Md., Aug. 1—The CIO United Automobile Workers swept to an overwhelming victory this week in Maryland's largest aviation NLRB election.

Workers at the booming Fairchild Aviation plant gave the UAW-CIO an 11-1 majority over the AFL, and a 6-1 margin over

The vote:

UAW-CIO	3,065
AFL	262
No Union	528

Frank Bender, CIO regional director in Baltimore, who supervised the results, predicted a similar margin of victory for the UAW when it enters an election at the Glenn Martin plant near Baltimore, one of the largest aviation units in the country.

"The tremendous support shown for the clean, progressive program of the UAW-CIO in Hagerstown is being duplicated every day at the Glenn L. Martin plant," Bender added.

"The workers at Martin's cannot be fooled any more than their brothers and sisters at Fairchild. The Martin workers also see that their only hopes for better wages, working conditions and union security lie with the UAW-CIO."

Elect Kroll President Of Ohio CIO

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 1—Jack Kroll, manager of the Cincinnati Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, has been elected president of the Ohio Industrial Union Council.

Kroll's election took place at a board meeting here, during which John Owens, head of the mine workers union in the state, tendered his resignation. Kroll will serve Owens' unexpired term until Nov. 27, when the council will open its annual convention in Toledo.

In its resolution, the council voiced strong endorsement of the policies of the CIO and Pres. Philip Murray, and charged that Lewis' actions arising out of his hatred of President Roosevelt "are harmful to the workers of Ohio, including the members of his own union in this state."

To Negotiate At Biggest Mill In South

Danville, Va., Aug. 1.—Negotiations for a contract between the CIO Textile Workers Union and the giant Riverside and Dan River Mills here are scheduled to begin shortly, J. D. Pedigo, TWU field representative announced here.

The TWU won a Labor Board election June 26, held among the 13,000 production workers in the mills.

One of the main demands of the union will be for a ten-cent hourly increase in pay, plus an additional amount to reduce the wage differential between northern and southern mills.

Workers Scotch Lewis Try For 'Back-Door' Contract

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 1—An effort by agents of John L. Lewis to keep employes of the Harbison-Walker Refractories Co. at Chester out of the CIO through a secret contract clause, ended in failure this week.

The workers formerly belonged to the United Construction Workers, which Lewis has attempted to affiliate with District 50 of the United Mine Workers. But the 325 employes, determined to stay in the CIO, formed a new local of the CIO, United Brick Workers 1203.

Officials of District 50—which has been widely criticized for its defeatist policies and its raiding of half a dozen industries—got together with the management and signed a back-door agreement aimed at keeping the contract with the Lewis outfit.

When the Harbison-Walker employes heard the news, they staged a three-day work holiday, according to George Craig, CIO regional director in Philadelphia. The company finally agreed to recognize the shop committee on all questions—wages, hours and working conditions—pending an NLRB election.

Improve Tax Bill, CIO Asks Senate

Union Representatives Cite Need for Fair Tax Measure

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—The tax bill passed by the House and now before the Senate "fails miserably to carry out either the President's tax program or the reasonable and necessary proposals of the Treasury," CIO Pres. Philip Murray declared this week in a statement submitted by CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan to the Senate Finance Committee now holding hearings on the Senate version of the bill.

Murray's criticism of the House bill and his outlines for a victory tax bill were followed up in testimony by Reid Robinson, a member of the CIO Tax Committee and a vice-president of the CIO; Russ Nixon of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, David J. MacDonald, secretary treasurer of the United Steel Workers of America, and Hoyt Haddock for the CIO Maritime Committee.

Employer interests at the hearing testified in favor of a tax kick-back for corporations and the sales tax.

SOAK-THE-POOR

The House bill "follows a soak-the-poor line throughout," Murray's statement said, by placing higher taxes of lower income and lower taxes on the higher brackets, by failing to close loopholes that permit the wealthy to evade taxes, by failing to tax excess profits adequately, and by utterly failing "to carry out the principle of equality of sacrifice for victory, thus striking a serious blow at national unity and national morale."

"It resolutely ignores the President's call for a $25,000 limit on net income, treating it as something that should not be mentioned in polite society, as though it were slightly indecent," Murray said.

RAP SALES TAX

Appearing for the Steelworkers, MacDonald declared in a statement read to the committee: "An attempt to impose a sales tax would be a vital blow at national war production. An attempt to impose a sales tax would be a vital blow at national morale. An effective tax program which imposes equality of sacrifice with an eye to ability to pay will constitute a long step in the direction of military victory."

Other testimony, including a brief statement form the CIO Congress of Womens' Auxiliaries, also stressed the dangers to war production in a sales tax that would hit the already strained food budgets of war workers.

"The United States and Britain face the gigantic task of opening a second front against Hitler," Robinson said in appealing for a tax program to back up the second front with a sound economic front.

"Our second front must be backed up by an economic front at home, dedicated to the offensive and victory. President Roosevelt's seven-point program must be carried out to make this economic front secure."

Nixon's testimony urged the committee to "make the 1942 tax bill an instrument of victory" by taxing according to ability to pay and by using the tax measure as a major

Auto Union At Peak As Parley Opens

Chicago, Aug. 1—Delegates gathering here this week-end for the seventh annual convention of the United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers were told today that the big war-industry union had increased its dues-paying members by 220,320 during the past year.

Some 1,600 delegates are expected to be present when Pres. R. J. Thomas, a vice-president of the CIO, calls the convention to order on Aug. 3.

The report on the union's status made public by Sec.-Treas. George Addes, revealed that its dues-paying membership now stands at a monthly average of 512,411, with a total membership of well over 700,000.

"This year's figure of well over a half-million compares to 292,091 the previous year, an increase of 75.6%," Addes said.

INCOME FIGURES

UAW's total income in the year since its last convention amounted to $3,459,276.23, an increase of 80% over the preceding year. Expenditures ran to $2,981,749.79, a jump of 93.2%. The balance in all accounts at the end of the year totaled $917,490.04, up $477,526.44 from the previous 12-month figure.

Addes hailed the growth as "most encouraging," but warned the union it "must take steps towards the establishment of a reserve fund to meet post-war contingencies. I am convinced that a reserve fund of at least $5,000,000 is a requisite if we are to be successful in protecting labor's rights and privileges during the post-war period."

The convention is expected to last about a week. Vice-Pres. Henry Wallace and CIO Pres. Philip Murray will be the principal speakers, with a number of other persons prominent in labor and public life also invited.

Better Auto Labor Relations Seen

New York, Aug. 1—A report on how collective bargaining works in the automobile industry was announced this week by the Twentieth Century Fund. It was made as part of a forthcoming survey, on this subject in 16 major industries.

"The rapid evolution of unionism has been accompanied by equally striking changes in the attitudes and tactics of both management and union," the report states.

Security, Raises Won In Movie Pact

New York, Aug. 1—Contracts covering 1500 home office workers in four major movie companies were signed in Wendell Willkie's office this week by the CIO United Office & Professional Workers and representatives of Columbia Pictures, RKO, Loew's-MGM and Twentieth Century-Fox.

Negotiations were initiated at a conference in Willkie's office on May 6, where principles of collective bargaining for white collar workers in the industry were worked out. Present at this conference were: CIO President Philip Murray, UOPWA President Lewis Merrill, Jack Cohn of Columbia Pictures, and Spyros Skouras of Twentieth Century-Fox.

WON ELECTIONS

The UOPWA entered the movie office field last September. Affiliations of independent office guilds in New York City brought into being the Screen Office and Professional Employes Guild, Local 109, UOPWA. A series of labor board elections at the major companies rolled up consistent victories for the union.

The CIO organizing efforts have brought union security, 10 per cent retroactive wage increases and improved working conditions to the employes of the four companies.

Bargaining on the basis of the President's seven-point program, the UOPWA won not only general 10 per cent increases but established a $20 weekly minimum and secured the right to raise individually questions of inequities. Wage discussions will be renewed after one year, and within the year company and union will meet to set up a wage classification scale.

UNION SECURITY

Maintenance of membership as defined in the pacts provides that all who are now members of the union shall remain members in good standing for the life of the pact. Other clauses guarantee grievance and arbitration machinery, improvement of general personnel practices and continuation of liberal practices already in operation.

CIO President Philip Murray wired the UOPWA his congratulations on the completion of the first negotiations conducted by the CIO in the movie industry.

"This latest victory," he said, adds to the successes the UOPWA has been registering in the white collar field and deserves the congratulations of the labor movement and the nation."

Holland Raps Tories' Hate Of Workers

Washington, Aug. 1—Here's a Congressman who knows that the CIO is doing a job for victory unequalled by any other group in the country—and who stands up in the House to tell his fellow-Congressman so.

He is Rep. Elmer J. Holland of Pennsylvania, and this is what he said recently about the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, and Philip Murray:

"It is a commonplace occurrence for some member of this House to take the floor and vent his spleen on labor and labor leaders.

"We have men here who seem to suffer from an overdose of Westbrook Pegler. In a little more than a month in this House, I have heard more speeches denouncing American labor than I have heard denouncing Hitler. I have sometimes wondered whether these labor-baiting Representatives think we are fighting the Japs or our own working people."

CITES USA-CIO

Holland then cited the patriotic example of the USA-CIO accepting the War Labor Board award in Little Steel, though it was short 56 cents of the $1 a day they had asked. In return, labor wants Congress to quit "sabotaging price controls on the things they eat and the things they wear. And the working people expect Congress to take the profits out of this war.

"But labor has not heard a peep out of Congress on limiting incomes to $25,000 a year, as the President suggested. Instead, it hears chatter about a sales tax to raise the cost of living," Holland said.

Iowa-Nebraska Convention, Aug. 20

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 1—The fifth annual convention of the Iowa-Nebraska Industrial Union Council will be held in Cedar Rapids, Ia., August 20-22, President Ben Henry and Secretary-Treasurer Tom B. Hadden announced this week.

Editorial:

Demand A Victory Tax Bill

This is a warning to all CIO members and all Americans who want to see our country's economy geared for the offensive and victory. The warning concerns the 1942 tax bill, now before the Senate Finance Committee.

The House version of the bill is 2.5 billion short of the amount asked by the Treasury. The shortage is due to refusal to tighten up on excess profits, refusal to eliminate loopholes, to a general aim on the part of the House Ways and Means Committee to write a bill that protects the rich first and considers winning the war a secondary problem.

The labor movement has been talking about the tax bill for almost six months now. In a few days the 1942 bill will be on the Senate floor. It's up to us to see that the Senate gets a real victory tax bill to debate on, to see that needed amendments are offered on the floor, to see that a real fight is put on to tax on ability to pay.

The way to do this is to write, wire, call your Senators. Their address in Washington is Senate Office Building.

It's up to us to make the 1942 tax bill, as President Murray said, one that "will raise all the added revenue we need for victory, that will raise it in the quickest, most efficient way, and that will strengthen rather than weaken the economic front at home."

Barking Up the Wrong Tree

Congratulations, UAW

The CIO is making great organizational strides in this war period, because its policies are exactly those desired by the American working people.

The workers want strong industrial unions more than ever before, not only to protect their economic interests in these days of change and turmoil, but also to mobilize their democratic efforts for the supreme task of winning the war.

The success of CIO unions in Labor Board elections and the increased membership of every affiliate reflect the confidence of the workers in this great labor movement.

Most noteworthy is the progress reported by the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers to its Chicago convention.

The total membership of this great union now exceeds 700,000, making it one of the largest in the world. Its actual dues-paying membership has varied somewhat from month to month, but the monthly average increased from 292,091 in 1941 to 512,411 in 1942. Paid-up membership for May, the latest month for which figures are available, was 612,702.

This is an industry that has been almost entirely converted from peacetime to war production. Its workers now produce tanks, planes, guns and hundreds of other weapons of war.

These workers are close indeed to the fighting men of our own country and all the United Nations, to whom they supply the most needed weapons. They have chosen the CIO to express their collective will for victory.

The whole CIO joins in congratulating the UAW-CIO on its splendid organizational progress and in wishing it ever greater triumphs in the future.

Register To Vote

Hitler sneers at democracy as incapable of successfully conducting a modern war. But labor and the whole American people are dedicating their very lives today to wipe that sneer off his face—to prove that the free institutions we fight to preserve are also among our most powerful weapons for victory.

But if we are to place our democracy on a successful war footing, every phase of it must be converted for supreme war effort. Our industries are being converted, one by one, from peacetime to war production. Our labor unions have made themselves an integral and basic part of the war effort.

But more perhaps than anything else we need to convert Congress from its peacetime habits and pursuits into an all-out war Congress.

Too many members are still pursuing politics-as-usual, catering to wealthy special interests, trying to smash labor instead of Hitler, dividing instead of uniting the American people. There are scarcely concealed appeasers, isolationists, defeatists, who pay lip service to the war effort but constantly sabotage it.

CIO unions and councils throughout the country are uniting with all other good citizens to see that only real win-the-war candidates are elected in this year's elections—to make sure that we have a real win-the-war Congress.

This is one of labor's most important war activities, and the whole membership of the labor movement must be aroused to its urgency.

The first step necessary is a simple one, but on it labor's whole political effort depends. It is to see that every member fulfills his individual duty by registering to vote. Registration dates and requirements vary from state to state, and it is up to every union and council to make sure the membership know when and where to register—and that they do not fail to do so.

Hitler's slaves may leave everything to the Fuehrer. But a free people must depend for its freedom on the initiative of every one of its citizens. It's up to every one of us if we're going to have a real victory Congress. We have the right to vote; let's be sure now to register so we can use it—for victory.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE AMERICAN people are far ahead of Washington in regard to aggressive all-out war effort. A number of Congressmen with labor-baiting-as-usual records have already discovered this to their cost in recent primaries. And the coming elections will give the voters a further chance to emphasize that only real win-the-war candidates are wanted.

The corrupt press, which sets money-making ahead of victory, realizes this. It is working overtime to confuse the issues and to divert attention from necessary steps to harness wealth as well as workers to the victory drive.

A sample of this propaganda is a recent editorial in Life magazine which pays lip-service to the urgency of all-out economic mobilization, but then proceeds to lambast labor for three columns, as if pressure from the workers and farmers were the only factor preventing adoption of effective anti-inflation measures.

Not a word is said about the selfish lobbying of wealthy interests to prevent adoption of a real anti-inflation tax bill; of the rejection of the $25,000 limit on war incomes; nor of the failure to adopt those points of the seven-point program that adversely affect business rather than labor.

The real picture is the very reverse of that painted in the Life editorial and throughout the big business press.

American labor is already stripped for action. It has set an example to the whole country by relinquishing its right to strike—thus foregoing the opportunity to raise wages to the extent of its present economic power.

It has accepted wage stabilization as part of the President's seven-point program, despite the real sacrifices this means.

American working people are already paying far more than their fair share of taxes. They are willing to do their full part in any new tax program, no matter how stiff, that fairly distributes the increased tax burden.

The present acid test of America's readiness for all-out mobilization does not relate to wages at all as such. It is the tax program now before the Senate which concerns wealth and profits as well as labor's income.

★ ★ ★

In accepting the wage decision of the War Labor Board, the United Steelworkers declared: "Wages cannot and must not be the sole object of the stabilization effort. The workers now look to the President and Congress to carry through the remaining portions of the (seven-point) program, such as an effective tax program and a real effective freezing of prices of goods, rents and other items of cost to the people."

CIO witnesses have appeared before the Senate finance committee, one after another, to protest against the shameful spare-the-rich-and-soak-the-poor tax bill adopted by the House; and to demand adoption of tax proposals made by the U. S. Treasury for capital and high incomes to pay their fair share.

The present tax bill falls nearly 2½ billion dollars short because of many exemptions and special privileges for the wealthy. On the other hand, it sharply increases the tax burden on low incomes.

For instance, the bill increases income tax on incomes below $4,000, but decreases those on higher incomes, as compared with the Treasury's proposals. It puts an income tax on people earning only $10 a week, but completely ignores the President's proposal to limit incomes of the rich to $25,000 a year.

The bill also favors the wealthy by failing to require joint income-tax returns from married couples; by limiting normal and surtaxes on corporation profits to 45 per cent, instead of raising the rate to 55 per cent, as asked by the Treasury; and by failing to tax tax-exempt securities.

The tax program is the real test of Washington's readiness to catch up with the American people's demand for all-out economic mobilization to win the war.

Repeated elections have shown that the powers of the big business press to confuse the voters are limited. Members of Congress will, therefore, be well advised to read fewer labor-baiting and coddle-the-rich editorials, and to listen more to the testimony of labor witnesses, if they want to know what their constituents are really thinking.

They will find the folks back home are ready for every sacrifice to win the war. But they also insist on all groups doing their fair share, and they won't stand for special privilege-as-usual for wealthy profiteers.

On Foreign War Fronts

Japs Found CIO Members Tough Customers at Hongkong

By I. EPSTEIN

Special Correspondence to Allied Labor News

CHUNGKING, Aug. 1—(ALN)—In the battle for the British colony of Hongkong last December, a group of some 40 CIO workers resisted the Japanese with all the courage of the famous AFL construction workers on Wake Island, this correspondent, who was an eye-witness of the fighting, is now able to reveal.

Most of the American unionists were National Maritime Union members off the Admiral Williams, the only U. S. ship in Hongkong harbor at the time of the attack. The few others were doing odd jobs ashore, waiting for ships, or nursing injuries in the hospitals.

One was a girl—Elsie Cholmeley, member of Local 18, United Office and Professional Workers, CIO, New York.

All Volunteered

When the attack came, all the unionists, volunteered for duty. The deck crew of the Admiral Williams drove trucks carrying munitions and food through the heaviest shell fire in Kowloon and Victoria Island.

Among them were Slim Wiseman, engineer from Texas, and Mike Casales of Boston. The galley crew of the Admiral Williams also drove for the various auxiliary services throughout the battle. One of them, the ship's mess boy, was killed.

Slight, red-headed Frank Meehan of Long Island, NMU member and steward aboard the President Madison, was caught in the Kowloon hospital when the fight started, recovering from an infected arm.

As soon as the bombs began to fall he stopped being a patient and got out of bed to help the hundreds of air-raid victims who poured in, overwhelming the permanent staff. He learned as he worked, carrying stretchers, putting on emergency dressings, assisting at operations.

72 Hours on Duty

Parker (Dutch) Van Ness, of Sanford, Fla., formerly an active NMU member on both coasts, was working ashore as ground mechanic with the famous China National Aviation Corporation. After the attack he went 72 hours without sleep on Hongkong's much-bombed airport, while transport planes shuttled over the heads of the Japanese back and forth to Chungking.

Dutch had been in China for three years. For two of these he had worked in the interior, for practically no pay, setting up some of the best machine-shops of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives and training their members.

Ray O'Neill, NMU, an Irish rigger from Chicago, was left ashore sick in November by a Greek ship of Panama registry. He volunteered for the Fire Brigade and gained citations for work in the midst of falling bombs. When regular Food Control drivers were unwilling to go over especially dangerous routes, he transferred to that organization.

O'Neill gained a reputation among the staid, peace-minded officials for doing the impossible. When trucks were destroyed, and Food Control officials were frantically filling sheets of paper applying for trucks from other organizations which needed the trucks themselves, he got what was needed by the simple expedient of breaking the windows of deserted showrooms and driving brand-new Fords and Chevrolets straight out and onto the battlefield.

As a result, the men on his beat always got fed and the officials, shocked at first by his downright methods, finally gave him another citation.

Six days before the surrender O'Neill was seriously wounded in the back by what he ruefully swore was good American scrap iron.

Elsie Cholmeley, who was a member of the Book and Magazine Union while working in New York, helped care for the wounded in one hospital until it was destroyed by enemy bombs, then she moved to another hospital.

Unionists Lead

After the surrender, 350 Americans and 2,500 British were shut up in an internment camp on Stanley Peninsula. Each group was ordered to elect its own committee, the first democratic elections Hongkong had ever had. Significantly, the British did not elect to their committee a single former official of the Hongkong government.

The CIO unionists worked untiringly to see that democracy ruled in the American section of the camp, the committee of which was overweighted with Standard Oil executives and other China Coast tycoons.

Tall, blond, 25-year-old Slim Wiseman was one of the outstanding workers. He helped everybody and repaired everything. He was active at meetings in our block, insisting on proper procedure and the democratic running of affairs.

Against the general picture of demoralization which rapidly set in among the businessmen in the camp, the conduct of the unionists, who were quickly recognized as natural leaders, provided a striking contrast.

Cooked for 300

The survivors of the galley crew of the Admiral Williams cooked for a block housing 300 Americans. Rations were low, they had to build their own stoves out of concrete blocks which were lying around, and the Japanese did not allow nearly enough fuel. The galley crew not only made food and fuel go a long way but contrived to make plain rice taste different at every meal.

Red Meehan worked in the second U. S. kitchen, under the huge 400-pound Ed Gringle, retired U. S. Navy steward and well-known restaurateur, famous as "Jingles" to every seaman who ever hit Hongkong. Like Slim Wiseman, Meehan never failed to speak up for democracy in the camp.

Group Escaped

The first duty of anyone who falls into the hands of the enemy is to try to escape. Out of the total of 3,000 prisoners in Stanley camp, the first five to escape were CIO members—four NMU-ers and Miss Cholmeley.

In Stanley, I managed to get into the same room as Dutch Van Ness. While we plotted to escape, he fixed up a derelict boat that had been left on the beach, working secretly at night to hack oars and a rudder out of a stolen door, getting everything in shape for a getaway.

When we broke camp on March 18, he crawled out over a shore we knew to be mined to cut the barbed wire, and, once on the water, he rowed 15 hours straight in a rough sea before reaching safety.

Miss Cholmeley Had Toured China

Elsie Cholmeley, the girl mentioned in this story from Hongkong, was formerly an assistant research worker at the Institute for Pacific Relations, which is under contract with Local 18, UOPWA.

She went to China early in 1939 to continue her research assignment and to work for the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives movement. She traveled extensively through the Chinese Republic, learned the language and lived Chinese style. Before the fall of Hongkong she was working for the Currency Stabilization Board.

Honor Seaman 3rd-Degreed On Nazi Sub

New York, Aug. 1—Archie Carr Gibbs, member of the National Maritime Union, who was forced at the point of a gun to spend four days in a Nazi submarine, was awarded a medal today by his union.

In presenting the medal before the National Council of the NMU, Pres. Joseph Curran said:

"Archie Carr Gibbs, the National Maritime Union is proud of you.

"A merchant seaman for 17 years, you have done honor to your calling."

Gibbs' ship was torpedoed on June 14. Eighteen hours later he was picked up by a freighter, but the next day that boat too became Nazi sub fodder.

The second U-boat picked Gibbs up, and he was held captive for four days during which the Germans tried to worm military secrets from him at gunpoint. They sought names of ships, destinations and home ports, and information about military airplanes. Gibbs gave the Nazis incorrect information—a fact of which the Germans were unaware when they set him free on the open ocean.

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Food Industry

• Purity and cleanliness dictate the selection of equipment used in the preparation of foods. For this reason, many manufacturers of food processing equipment are using stainless steel.

Stainless steel is immune to practically all types of food acids, and will not affect the taste, color, or keeping qualities of the foodstuffs with which it comes in contact. It can be quickly and easily cleaned, and is not attacked by chemical sterilizers, cleaners, and brines. Equipment used in preparing various foods has shown greatly improved performance when stainless steel has been used for parts subject to rusting or corrosion.

Today, more than ever, the food industry is relying on stainless steel equipment to help assure high quality and maximum output of essential foods.

Bulletin for Adolph:

Saboteurs' Nemesis Was CIO Union Member; Joined Coast Guard in '41

Washington, Aug. 1—Memo to Adolph Hitler, Wilhemstrasse, Berlin:

It was a CIO member who put the kibosh on your agents' plans to sabotage America's war effort.

For John Cullen, the smiling Coast Guardsman who accosted the saboteurs on the deserted sands of eastern Long Island, belongs to the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes.

That fact was revealed today by the union's official organ, which said Cullen, a former driver's helper at the R. H. Macy store, had been a member of Local 1 since January 29, 1941. He enlisted in the Coast Guard right after Pearl Harbor.

Joe Pastore, president of the local and driver of the truck on which Cullen worked, was the man who signed up the Nazis' nemesis as a union member.

"He was always a fine, willing lad," Pastore said this week, "quiet, well-mannered and well-liked. Like a true delivery-man, he knew when he was being short-changed."

Cullen was walking along the beach at Amagansett, L. I., when he detected three "fishermen," who joined by a fourth accomplice in their plot. The Nazis offered him $300 to keep quiet about the incident.

U. S. Suggests 48-Hour Week As Maximum

Washington, Aug. 1—Recognition of the fact that over-extended working hours may boomerang into lower efficiency and lower output was voiced this week in an important government policy statement signed by the heads of eight Federal agencies.

The statement, which explicitly recommended retention of eight-hour day, 40-hour week wage standards, urged that not more than one additional day of eight hours, at time-and-a-half rates, should be worked in war industries.

At the same time, the government urged industry to continue towards its goal of 24-hour-a-day, 168-hour-a-week factory operation. It called upon industry to give each worker one day off in seven, to permit one week's vacation a year and at least a 30-minute lunch hour daily.

LOWERED RETURNS

Basis of the Federal policy statement was the fact that production reaches a point of "diminishing returns" when workers are not given sufficient rest.

"After a while, the extra hours add little or no additional output," the government noted. "The quality of work may deteriorate, absenteeism rises sharply, the loss of time due to accidents and illnesses increases," the statement noted.

"Effects on health and morale may be slow in appearing, but they are cumulative in nature."

Signing the statement were leading executives of the War, Navy, Commerce and Labor Departments, the War Manpower and the Maritime Commissions, the WPB and the Public Health Service.

Gets Thanks China Aid Gift

New York, Aug. 1—The Intl. Fur & Leather Workers, CIO, today received a letter of thanks for its $5,000 gift to United China Relief from Wendell Willkie, national honorary chairman of the relief agency.

The contribution made by the union is for the establishment of a hospital wing in China. The union also pledged an additional $2,500 to maintain the 50-bed wing for one year.

Charge Dies Whitewashed Seditionists

NEW YORK, Aug. 1—(FP)—The majority of the 28 persons indicted as seditionists by a U. S. grand jury were able to carry on their pro-Axis activities as the result of collaboration with Rep. Martin Dies of Texas, the Natl. Federation for Constitutional Liberties charged this week.

The accusation was made in telegrams to President Roosevelt, Attorney General Francis Biddle and other government officials urging that the Dies Committee be terminated at once and that a federal investigation be made into its activities.

LIST IS LONG

Among those indicted whom Dies refused to investigate were, according to the Federation:

Elmer J. Garner, editor of the fifth columnist sheet, Publicity.

William Kullgren, publisher of the anti-American Beacon Light.

C. Leon de Aryan, California storm trooper organizer and publisher of the fascist paper, Broom.

Court Asher, publisher of X-Ray.

Elizabeth Dilling, author of the Red Network, a book that described Mrs. Roosevelt and other prominent citizens as "communists."

NAME OTHERS

Gerald B. Winrod, who broadcast pro-fascist, anti-Semitic and anti-union propaganda on the radio and in pamphlets. He was given a whitewashing by the Dies committee.

James C. True, organizer of the notorious James True Associations and the Coalition of Patriotic Societies, both of which were named in the indictment. Dies once spoke from the same platform with True at a meeting sponsored by the Coalition.

E. J. Smythe, fascist leader of the Protestant War Veterans, Dies suppressed correspondence revealing the pro-Hitler activities of Smythe and refused to subpoena him before the committee.

STOOGE ON PAYROLL

The federation also pointed out that Dies has on his committee's payroll Hazel Hoffman, former agent of the Constitutional Educational League, which was named in the indictments.

It also called attention to the fact that practically all the 28 indicted seditionists had been vigorous supporters of the Dies Committee.

Cleveland CIO Wars On Appeasers

Cleveland, Aug. 1—Declaring war on appeasement-minded Congressmen, the Cleveland Industrial Union Council this week set in motion a campaign to rid the House of Rep. Martin Sweeney, a consistent foe of President Roosevelt's foreign policy.

The council will throw its weight behind Michael A. Feighgan, Sweeney's opponent in the Democratic primaries.

Sec. A. E. Stevenson of the council described the campaign as "bigger than a matter of 20th district concern. It concerns all of us. It is of national importance.

"Sweeney has been an outstanding leader of Hitler's appeasement bloc in Congress, which has sabotaged the President's war program. The eyes of the nation are on us so far as this specific campaign is concerned."

In the Ohio gubernatorial contest, the Cleveland council voted to endorse John McSweeney, who has actively supported the war effort.

The primaries are scheduled for Aug. 11.

Bare Coughlin Ties of Lewis 'Researcher'

Ogdensburg, N. Y., Aug. 1—John L. Lewis has appointed a close associate of Charles E. Coughlin, publisher of the now-banned Social Justice magazine, to an important post in his dairy farmers organizing drive, it was charged today by Archie Wright of the Farmers Union of the New York Milkshed.

The man is Edward Kennedy, who has been named head of Lewis's dairy research department. The dairy campaign, which has brought widespread criticism from both labor unions and progressive farm organizations, is part of District 50 of the United Mine Workers, which is headed by Lewis's daughter.

Kennedy, it was pointed out by Wright, was once secretary-treasurer of the Natl. Farmers Union, but was removed from office when he conspired to endorse the Coughlin-Lemke Union Party in 1936 without the consent of the membership.

With Father Coughlin's help, Kennedy then tried to split the Natl. Farmers Union by setting up a Natl. Farmers Guild, which flopped in short order.

Conn. CIO Plans Political Confab

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 1—Mounting interest in Connecticut's election contests this year was reported today by the Connecticut Industrial Union Council, which plans a statewide conference on political action Aug. 22.

The meeting, to take place in Waterbury, has as its slogan the election of win-the-war pro-Roosevelt candidates on election day.

Endorsements of Gov. R. A. Hurley and Lt. Gov. Odell Shepard, both seeking re-election, have been voted by a large number of unions throughout the state.

A new U. S. Naval Reserve Aviation Base will be built at Hutchison, Kansas, to provide facilities for student aviators in the Navy's 30,000 pilots-a-year training program.

CIO Leaders Demand End Of Poll Tax

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—Action aimed at removing the poll tax as a qualification for voting in eight southern states took place in both branches of Congress this week.

In the House the number of signatures on a discharge petition to bypass the Geyer anti-poll tax bill around the bottleneck of the House judiciary committee and on to the floor for debate and vote, gained 30 signatures.

Some 190 Congressmen have now signed the petition, with 28 more needed for the requisite majority. With the House in a state of partial recess for the next several weeks, however, further signatures may be slow in coming.

The National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax, which has wide labor support, urged all unions to continue showering their Congressmen with demands that they act against the tax—which bars millions in the South from exercising their constitutional voting rights.

APPEAR AT HEARINGS

Meanwhile, CIO President Philip Murray, Vice-President Reid Robinson, General Counsel Lee Pressman and Russ Nixon, representative of the electrical union, submitted statements to the Senate Judiciary Committee at hearings on the constitutionality of the Geyer-Pepper bill.

Murray said the Pepper bill to abolish the poll tax "is as important for victory in our war against the Hitler Axis as an appropriation for tanks, planes or ships. It is a war measure that will do as much—if passed—for victory on the home front as any that has come before Congress."

MORALE PROBLEM

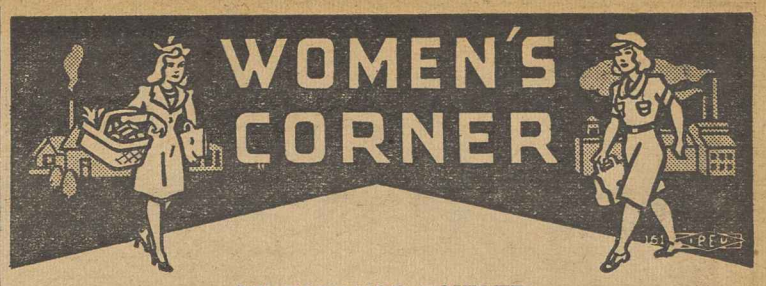
The CIO leader warned the Senate group that our war must be conducted both on foreign battlefronts and in the communities of the nation.

"The victory that we must win at home is the victory of national unity and national morale," he explained. "Without unity, we cannot meet our enemies in the way that they must be met—with the determination and single will for victory of all our people.

"The Pepper bill now before you is a measure to increase the unity that we need for victory. It is a measure that will, if passed, repair a serious breach in the wall that our armed forces and our people are manning against the Axis aggressor."

Pressman submitted a brief examining court precedents on the right of Congress to remove the tax from all federal elections. He argued that Congress has the right to pass legislation enforcing the rights guaranteed by the Constitution, and pointed to a mass of evidence that the poll tax deprives millions of Southerners from exercising their voting rights.

"Congress has ample power to take action to remove the effect of the poll tax by this bill," Pressman said.



BY ELEANOR FOWLER

CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries

The Women's Auxiliary of the National Maritime Union, new organization of women in the families of our merchant seamen, will have a warm welcome from the labor movement. These are the women behind the men that keep 'em sailing and it is partly due to their firm patriotism that badly needed arms and supplies reach our allies daily.

The need for winning the war and the immediate importance of opening a second front if we are to win, were the keynotes of the three-day conference in New York which established the new auxiliary. These women are determined that the sacrifice they and their families are making to beat Hitler shall not be in vain. They, like their union brothers, demand that the United States and Great Britain carry out their agreement with the Soviet Union and open a second front now. They say that if we wait while Hitler defeats the Red Army we will have lost the war.

YOUR NEXT SUIT: Chic in gabardine, covert, rayon or corduroy—start sewing this trim suit now so that you will have it ready for fall. Pattern No. 8161 comes in sizes 12 to 42. Send 15c in coin, your name, address, pattern number and size to CIO NEWS, Pattern Dept., Federated Press Pattern Service, 106 Seventh Avenue, New York City. Enclose 1c for postage.

The heroism of the merchant seamen gives their words special weight. When the second front is opened they will have a big job to do—a job of speeding troops and supplies to Europe. Thousands of them will be lost—but they are not afraid.

Seamen have been militant anti-fascists for years. Hundreds of them gave their lives to defend democracy in Spain. They know what the score is—that Hitlerism means the brutal suppression of the labor movement, ruthless tyranny over the people. Their heroism is only equalled by our servicemen. The labor movement is justly proud of the magnificent part these seamen are playing in winning the war.

AUTO AUXILIARIES CONVENE

"Service on the home front" was declared by Helen Goldman, executive secretary, to be the theme of the Fourth Annual Auto Auxiliary Convention which opens in Chicago on August 3. Speakers at the sessions will include Miss Thelma McKelvey of the War Manpower Commission, Miss Ruth Ayres of the Consumer Division of the Office of Price Administration, Dr. Grace Langdon, head of the Nursery School program of the WPA, and Mrs. Eleanor Fowler, secretary-treasurer of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

The convention is expected to last for four days, with speakers limited as to time in order to give plenty of opportunity for discussion from the floor.

NMU Women Form Newest Auxiliary

By HELEN LAWRENSON

"Open up a Second Front—our men will deliver the supplies to it!" was the slogan of the First National Conference of Women's Auxiliaries of the National Maritime Union, held in New York July 27-29.

The women, who are the wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of NMU merchant seamen, unanimously adopted a resolution urging the immediate opening of a second front, as well as resolutions pledging themselves to fight for the election of a win-the-war Congress.

Two widows of torpedoed merchant seamen who recently lost their lives while delivering the goods were among the delegates at the convention: Mrs. Birdie Lewis of New York and Mrs. Micaela Vaca of New Orleans. Other delegates represented NMU auxiliaries in the ports of San Pedro, San Francisco, St. Louis, Buffalo, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Providence and New York.

WELCOME FROM CURRAN

In a keynote speech of welcome to the Conference, President Joseph Curran of the NMU stressed the immediate importance of women's auxiliaries in connection of the winning of the war and pledged the union's full support to the Auxiliary.

The Conference organized a national Women's Auxiliary of the National Maritime Union, adopted a constitution affiliating them with the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, and planned a unified national program to help win the war.

WANT ACTION: Wives and mothers of CIO men now in the armed service give their assistance to the campaign being waged by the Los Angeles CIO Council to make the city conscious of need for a western front. They're members of the CIO women's auxiliary.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Negotiations got under way with the United Steelworkers of America and the nation's largest steel corporation in an effort to consummate an agreement around the decision of the War Labor Board on the Little Steel case. Included in these negotiations will be the United States Steel Corporation.

I met with Mayor LaGuardia in New York this week, accompanied by Michael Quill, president, and Douglas McMahon of the Transport Workers Union, to discuss opening up negotiations on wages and working conditions for the workers engaged in New York City's transportation lines. We were assured by the Mayor that he would endeavor to arrange a conference at an early date with the TWU representatives and the City Board of Transportation. The workers on the lines are determined to maintain the CIO and are looking forward to obtaining improved wage rates and working conditions.

Frank Carmichael has been appointed regional director of the New England states (excepting Connecticut) to fill the vacancy created by the untimely death of Hugh Lyons. His office is at 73 Tremont St., Boston.

Win Agreements

Regional Director Mosele of New York City reports concluding agreements for the United Steelworkers of America at three plants, as follows: National Can, Maspeth, Long Island, with union security provision, five cents an hour increase retroactive to May tenth and wage question can be reopened in December; Irving Subway Crating, five to ten cents an hour increase, minimum established with a seventy-five cent bonus; Mohegan Steel, five cents per hour increase, an additional week's vacation with pay. CIO Representatives Thomas Cometa and others led negotiations for the union.

United Office & Professional Workers came to the fore again in a big way, signing a contract covering workers at Columbia Pictures, Loew's, MGM, 20th Century-Fox, RKO, which includes ten per cent wage increase and maintenance of membership.

Walter Harris, director of the shoe organizing drive comes through with another fine victory at the Washington (Mo.) plant of the International Shoe Company. CIO received 641 votes as against 371 for no union. CIO Regional Director E. B. Pugh of Virginia sends in notice of a victory for the United Paper Novelty and Toy Workers at the Old Dominion Box Company, Lynchburg, with a vote of 77 for CIO as against 29, Without the legal machinery of the N,Y. Labor Relations Board the American Advertising Guild won recognition as the collective bargaining agent for the employes at the Caroline Davis Studios.

Aircraft, Oil Victories

The Oil Workers Organizing Campaign under the directorship of Edwin Smith, reports a victory in the five Skelly Oil plants, Texas Panhandle area, with a vote of 56 as against 28. They also report the winning of the NLRB election on July 9th at the Shamrock Oil and Gas Company, Borger, Texas.

Sub-Regional Director Edward McCrone in New Haven, Conn., advises that the NLRB has held hearings on the Bolton Manufacturing discharge case and same resulted in the reinstatement of all of those discharged, thirteen in all, with back pay for time lost.

Lidgerwood Manufacturing Co., Elizabeth, N. J., UERMWA, 181; against, 38; Newark Newsdealers Supply Co., Newark, N. J., UOPWA, 21; against, 20; Accurate Tool Co., Newark, N. J., UAW-CIO, 32; against, 7.

OWOC Moves Offices

The Oil Workers Organizing Campaign under the direction of Edwin S. Smith is moving its offices, effective August 1, 1942, to Houston, Tex., and will be located in Room 1101, Scanlon Building, 305 Main Street. This move of office brings this organizing campaign closer to the area where the greater part of the oil industry is concentrated. We wish them continued success in their efforts.

Thomas E. Andert, chairman, Optical Workers Coordinating Committee, reports the successful establishment of a strong militant local in Kansas City, Mo. The optical companies in Kansas City have a strong optical association and used every known device to destroy the local union.

Contract negotiations are resuming this week and they expect to secure an agreement at that time. All locals affiliated with the committee assisted the Kansas City local with financial and moral support and the Optical Workers Coordinating Committee expresses its thanks to all unions that assisted them in their fight.

Hosiery Union, Employers In Joint Bond Campaign

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—The American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, and three employer associations which are under union agreement, have set up a joint labor-management War Bond plan described by Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., as "setting a pattern which may well be followed in many other American industries."

The plan, covering 40,000 hosiery workers and employers in mills spreading from New Jersey to California, was developed by top-flight officers of the union and of the trade associations to insure complete participation in Payroll Savings, and to increase workers' investments to an average of ten per cent of payrolls. The goal is $5,000,000 in War Bonds within the next twelve months.

To the joint Hosiery War Bond Committee, Secretary Morgenthau wired:

"I am especially pleased because this is an undertaking which is based on the work of a joint committee on which management and labor are equally represented. In this way you are setting a pattern which may well be followed in many other American industries."

PRAISED BY McKEOWN

"The joint labor-management effort," declared President McKeown for the union, "follows the basic tenets of democracy. This is representation to the fullest extent and is the best way to insure success for payroll savings and the ten per cent quota drive of the Treasury Department.

"Ten per cent," he added, "is a small figure for workers to give for victory. Dictatorship is the enemy of democracy and of the trade union movement which can function only in the free air of democracy."

British Electrical Union Joins 2nd Front Demand

By GARRY ALLIGHAN

LONDON, Aug. 1—(ALN)—By unanimous votes at their annual conventions this week, the 700,000-strong Miners' Federation of Great Britain and the 100,000-strong Electrical Trades Union have raised to more than four million the total of organized British workers who in the past four weeks, through the medium of conventions, have urged the immediate opening of a second front in Europe.

Addressing the ETU delegates yesterday, Frank Wollstencroft, president of the TUC, declared: "Your aim is to get on with the job of speeding up production for a second front. Britain is honor bound to launch a second front to alleviate the pressure on our Soviet ally, whose armies have fought so long without aid, except for supplies.

"Our people are getting impatient and the workers feel that sufficient time has passed to bring preparations for a large scale diversion, so long promised, to an advanced stage."

The Miners' convention unanimously voted approval for the message of their president, Will Lawther, which is now being circulated throughout the coalfields: "Miners of Britain, your duty is clear and unmistakable. You must never lose a chance to do your full share, every way you can, to supply coal for the munitions needed to open a second front and destroy fascism!"

The London Daily Herald, official Labor Party organ, referring to the fact that both the Labor Party and the eight-million-strong Cooperative Union had voted recently at their annual conferences for an immediate offensive, said in an editorial last week: "As a nation we have been pledged by our government, in the recent treaty with Russia, to establish a second front. When is that promise going to be kept?"

Last week the National Council of Shop Stewards, which represents more than a million key workers in Britain's arms factories, sent a delegation to the government on the question of the second front. Len Powell, secretary of the council, stated: "It is up to the workers to make up the government's mind to get a second front. We guarantee the utmost industrial effort in support of the utmost military effort."

TRANSPORT PLEDGE

It is significant that this prodding of the government now has the support of the powerful 500,000-strong National Union of General and Municipal Workers, which previously cautioned the TUC to leave questions of a second front to military experts.

"We pledge ourselves to play our full part in transporting the troops and materials essential for this offensive," Fred Seamen, president of the General and Municipal Workers, declared this week.

Beaverbrook Renews Plea For Offensive

London, Aug. 1 (ALN)—Addressing a group of labor leaders at a National Trade Union Club luncheon this week, Lord Beaverbrook declared that a second front in Europe is now more than ever necessary.

Beaverbrook, who as former production minister in the Churchill Cabinet is in possession of the facts about British preparedness, said: "I can state that we have the equipment to open a second front now.

"If we can transport a large army 12,000 miles to the Middle East without air support, we can transport an army of a million across 21 miles of English Channel, under an air umbrella provided by the RAF.

NEEDED NOW

"If it's necessary—and I don't think it is—to reduce shipping to Russia for that second front, then it must be reduced. Stalin agrees with that.

"Even if it entails great sacrifices, we must open the second front in order to divert Hitler from Russia.

"Such diversion will win the war quicker than any other strategy. The organized workers of this country assure me that they'll work harder, produce more and make greater sacrifices for a second front than for anything else."

'Song of Volga Boatwomen' Replaces Classic As Men Fill Red Army Ranks

KUIBYSHEV, USSR, Aug. 1—The first thing that strikes you as you walk in the large and bright premises of the pattern shop of the river-ship repair plant is the fact that all the workers are women. About the only man there is the department chief and he will tell you that while work there was always considered strictly a man's job, since November of last year women—200 of them—make up the shop's personnel.

Last November when it became clear that the small pattern section could not keep pace with war orders, the management decided to open a large new shop. Then arose the problem of finding workers. The trade union was turned to for assistance and the very same day an announcement was posted in various parts of the plant.

The notice contained an invitation to the wives of all plant employes and the wives of Red Army men to a meeting to discuss the problem of labor power. About 200 housewives came to the meeting. They promised to start work the next day and become full-fledged fighters on the labor front. As Shor's production record shows, they've kept their word.

11% WOMEN

The help of the plant's trade union committee in setting up a shop manned by women is but one instance among the many activities of the trade union of river workers in the Volga basin. Since the beginning of the war, the union has been drawing women into production to take the place of men called to the colors. By April 1, 1942, fully 11 per cent of the workers in the river transport system were women.

Unwilling to stand aside when their country needs them, women with no training whatsoever apply for work on ships, landing stages and freight docks. These new workers must be trained at once. The trade union is doing invaluable work in this field. Stakhanov schools function here as in all other industries of the Soviet Union.

TRAINED WORKERS

A newcomer is put under the guidance of an experienced and qualified worker, who initiates her in secrets of the trade. And if we take Larinova, newcomer to a Kuibyshev ship repair plant, as an example, the results are excellent. Two weeks after beginning work she was doing more than the normal set for this type of workers. She is only one of many who have reached this level of productivity. In fact, there's not a single woman worker who produces less than 150 per cent normal each day.

Special attention is paid to increasing production and the development of the Stakhanov movement by the trade unions of the river workers. River workers, crews of ships, workers in ship repair yards, loaders at docks and landings have all entered competition of productivity.

By April 1, 1942, 99 per cent of the members of trade unions were competing, wherever they may be working, whether near the zone of hostilities or deep in the rear of the Soviet. Rivermen consider themselves fighters on the labor front. "Like soldiers at the front who'll take no rest while the battle lasts, so do we fulfill our assignment first, and then rest," say rivermen.

EVERYTHING FOR VICTORY

Volga vessels make nonstop runs from Gorky to Astrakhan to deliver urgent freight. In order to save time and speed deliveries, the crews often do repair jobs themselves. This innovation to promote speed during the war spread rapidly, thanks in no small degree to the trade union.

With the slogan, "Everything for the front—everything for victory," trade union workers in the Volga River basin headed a drive for presents and warm clothing for the Red Army. The sum of 1,514,000 rubles was contributed to the defense fund, 9,241 articles of warm clothing and 330 kilograms of wool were sent to the men at the front during the Winter.

Military training for both men and women is held regularly on board all ships, on docks and at ship repair shops. The river workers are ready at any moment to take up arms against the enemy.

Australian Women Get 90% Pay Rate

By BRIAN FITZPATRICK

Melbourne, Aug. 1 (ALN) — The new Women's Employment Board, established here recently, ruled this week that women replacing men in the munitions industry should be paid 90 per cent of the men's rate for the same job.

This was on the assumption, nowhere borne out by experience, that women are capable of doing precisely 10 per cent less work than men. "The rate for the job" and "equal pay for equal work" continue to be the watchwords of unions here as in Britain and the United States.

The 90 per cent ruling, however, is an important advance toward the principle of equal pay. Before the war, to discourage employment of women, the national women's minimum wage, which varies in different industries, averaged 54 per cent for men.

Australian minimum rates are fixed by arbitration courts, most important of which is the Commonwealth Court. After the basic wage is set, it is altered in accordance with changes in the cost of living.

Double Talk!

Camp Lee, Va., Aug. 1—When the mail clerk at Company F, Tenth Quartermaster Training Regiment, eyed the name of Pvt. John Johns, a former organizer for the CIO Steelworkers Union in Canton, Ohio, on the list of newly-arrived recruits, he was amused at the duplicate name.

But then he began finding others: Pvts. Andrew Andrews, Stephen Stephen and William Williamson. "Huh!" growled Sergeant McCormick. "Suppose my folks had named me McCormick McCormick?"

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—A growing and insistent plea for a second front against Hitler in Europe was made by CIO and AFL unions and councils from all parts of the country this week.

Messages and statements were sent to President Roosevelt from large industrial centers and small towns, from offices and ships at sea, all of them endorsing his second front agreement with Churchill and Molotov and urging him to put it into effect at once, to smash the heart of the Hitler Axis and bring victory in 1942.

In Pittsburgh, more than 100 prominent CIO and AFL leaders wired the President supporting his second front agreement with Britain and the USSR and assuring him that "workers will hail an offensive for victory this year."

Signers included Clinton S. Golden, assistant to President Murray of the United Steelworkers of America, P. T. Fagan, president of the Steel City CIO Council and head of District 5 of the United Mine Workers, Leo Abernathy, president of the AFL Central Trade Union, Frank Burke, Jas. Thomas and Joseph Goney, sub-regional directors of USA-CIO, and other leaders of CIO and AFL locals and districts.

ON THE WEST COAST

In Los Angeles, the CIO Council passed a resolution declaring that "the opening of this second front will assure ultimate victory" and thousands of CIO war workers wired their support to the President, circulated petitions, distributed posters and leaflets, etc., all on the theme "Open the second front now."

In Washington itself, the CIO Council scheduled a second front mass meeting for this Monday, with Sen. Claude Pepper and Reid Robinson, a vice-president of the CIO, as featured speakers. Henry Rhine, head of the council, said in announcing the meetings: "Hitler has drained Europe of troops to throw against the Soviet Union. Now is the time to strike him in the rear, to save millions of lives and years of future war."

CIO seamen, who risk, and frequently lose their lives to keep supply lines open, renewed their plea for a second front at a meeting of the Natl. Maritime Union's national council in New York. They heard Harry Bridges, west coast longshore leader and subject of the Biddle exile order, say of the union's war program: "That hard fight is not yet won—not by a long shot. Nor will it be until we have fired our best shot, the opening of a second front."

IN CONNECTICUT

Connecticut CIO and AFL workers went all-out for the second front, the New Haven AFL Central Council calling on Roosevelt to "use the power and influence of his office to see to it that a second front in Europe is opened."

More than 15,000 key arms workers at the Colt plant in Hartford added their plea during the week, as did the CIO councils in Hartford, Torrington and Bridgeport. Fifty AFL and CIO leaders signed a second front telegram.

GREETINGS FROM LONDON

British workers demanding a second front in a huge mass meeting in London cabled greetings and support to American workers meeting last week in New York, and received a cabled greeting in return.

In Massachusetts, the CIO council circulated 100,000 copies of a second front petition for forwarding to President Roosevelt, and in New York, the newly formed CIO Auxiliary of the Natl. Maritime Union added its voice to the demand.

Reorganize Council

Portland, Ore., Aug. 1—The Portland Industrial Union Council, inactive for almost two years, has been reconstituted and is ready to tackle an aggressive program for labor and the nation, Regional Director Al Hartung reported today.

Jack Shankles has been elected president and Joe Lee secretary-treasurer.

Prize Winner Gives Part Of Award to CIO Relief Fund

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1—Machinist Al Weiner, member of Local 1225, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, won a $25 war bond last week for offering the best production slogan in his factory.

The winning slogan was "Production Spells Victory. Victory Spells Freedom." Weiner immediately translated his phrase into "Brains Win Money. Money Saves Lives."

He decided to share his prize with the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief. So he dug down and came up with $10 which he turned over to Sidney Mason, business representative of Local 1225.

The contribution went to swell the total of more than $100 per month that the organized workers of Weiner's shop, the Sel-O-Strain Corporation, Brooklyn, N. Y., are contributing to the National CIO Committee.

The company offered the prize for production slogans on the occasion of opening a new wing of their factory, which is engaged in war work. The workers, 100 of them, are contributing one hour's pay each month for CIO War Relief.

STRIKERS HELP

On strike since early November, the Chester (Pa.), unit of the American Newspaper Guild this week voted unanimously to donate one hour's pay each month from their strike benefits to the Relief fund.

Servicemen in camps throughout the country have come to consider the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief their special trouble-shooter. Each day brings an unusual request for information or assistance which has been directed to the Committee because the soldier has seen and read the Servicemen's Manual.

One soldier had not received his last pay check from his employer and asked the Committee to help him collect it. The staff was able to speed the check on its way. A changed address had delayed the mailing.

WLB Overrules Meat Packer's Phoney Beef

Washington, Aug. 1—Objections of Wilson & Co., Chicago, to the jurisdiction of the National War Labor Board in its dispute with the CIO Packinghouse Workers' Organizing Committee have been over-ruled by the Board. It has ordered the union and the company to begin negotiations at once for a contract. Five of the company's plants, employing 5,850 men, are involved.

The Board's action was based on the unanimous recommendations of the three-man panel which held hearings on this dispute and also disputes between the union and the other three of the "Big Four" meat packers—Swift, Armour and Cudahy,

The panel pointed out that there was nothing to keep either the company or the union from bringing local representatives to the negotiations if they chose.

The Upper Crust

"My dear, that man Wallace is simply terrible—saying that this is a war for the common people."

Feudalism Dies Hard In Ohio Small Towns

GREENFIELD, Ohio, Aug. 1—Industrial feudalism is not dead in Ohio. At least that is the opinion of Russ Hutchinson and George Fecteau, organizers for the CIO United Shoe Workers of America, who went into Greenfield last month to organize the plant of the United States Shoe Corp. there.

This company, which makes Red Cross shoes, has its main plant in Norwood, near Cincinnati, where it is trying to build up a company union as a means of fighting the United Shoe Workers. Some years ago it opened branch plants in Greenfield, Harrison and Chillicothe and these are the factories that the USWA now seeks to organize.

When Hutchinson arrived in Greenfield, he was quizzed by the mayor, who wanted to know if he was an American citizen and if he intended to come into town and cause trouble. The mayor said that the city and the merchants had built the plant for the company, claimed the workers were satisfied and did not need a union, and added that he was opposed to a union of any kind!

Hutchinson said he was there to organize the workers and proceeded to make contacts. Twice in the public street he was threatened by a group of men, headed by two foremen from the plant. Failing to draw him into a fight, they urged him to get out of town and stay out if he did not want to get hurt.

Hutchinson and Fecteau returned to the city and gave out leaflets in front of the factory. While doing so, they noticed the superintendent inside talking with another man, one Burden, who had previously threatened Hutchinson. The conversation evidently had to do with the leaflet distribution, for when the distribution was over, the organizers were surrounded by a group of men who abused them and urged them to get out of town.

Police were nowhere in sight, though they had been notified that there might be trouble. As the organizers drove off, they were followed by several cars loaded with men. The union officials were able to elude them and get home safely.

The Ohio State CIO Council issued a strong statement that efforts to organize small town industries would continue in spite of threats, and the USWA lodged a charge against the U. S. Shoe Corp. of violating the Wagner Act. Since then the company has not interfered with the latest distribution of leaflets.

Jersey Unions In Joint Action

Newark, N. J., Aug. 1—CIO and AFL labor unions in Hudson County have united to make sure that win-the-war candidates are elected to Congress in this year's elections, and to retire defeatists and appeasers to private life.

Principal target of the United Labor Committee for Victory is Rep. Fred A. Hartley, Jr., whose record described as "a disgraceful exhibition of pro-Nazi, un-American activities that have given aid and comfort to the enemies of our country."

CIO Wins Three Pacts In Texas

Houston, Tex., Aug. 1—Three new contracts are evidence of CIO progress in the Lone Star State, Frank Hardesty, regional director, announced today.

In El Paso the CIO gained the union shop at the Globe Mills. Hardesty said it was "a hard-fought battle, but again the CIO has been selected by a majority of the workers as the union that can render the best service."

BIG RAISE

At Sugar Land, the utility workers gained exceptionally good wage increases, union security and check-off of union dues. Hourly rates went up by 17½ cents, and many employes paid on a monthly rate basis registered gains of $20.

Several months of negotiations conducted by the Houston Newspaper Guild with the Houston Press, Scripps-Howard paper, ended in a victory for the union. The Guild gained sizeable increases, union security and check-off of dues.

Hardesty said the contracts were typical of the "fine progress in the state of Texas," and predicted that in the near future the CIO would win elections and negotiate agreements with "the largest steel interests in the state of Texas."

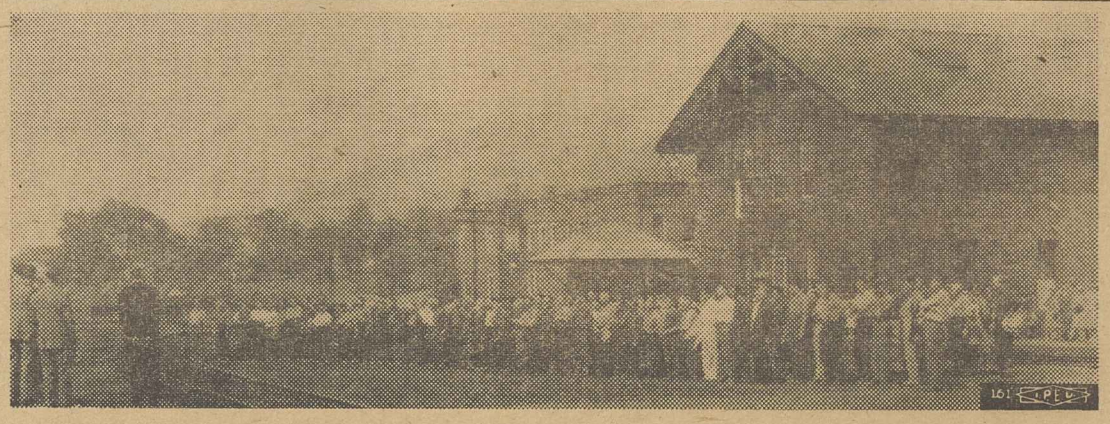
Union Sweeps Poll, Gets Jobs Back for 15

New Haven, Aug. 1—A near-unanimous CIO victory in a Labor Board election, preceded by a four-day demonstration of the union's strength, this week had helped to end the long-time antilabor attitude of the Bolton Manufacturing Co. at nearby West Haven.

The company had previously broken three efforts to organize the plant, twice by the AFL and once by the CIO. But on this occasion, the United Automobile Workers showed that it meant business.

When the firm fired 15 of the most active union members, the result was a dispute that required the help of the Conciliation Service, the WPB and the War Labor Board to settle. A few days later the NLRB ran an election at the plant.

The UAW received 238 votes, while only 14 voted against. Then, in the midst of hearings about the 15 discharge cases, the company agreed to reinstate all the workers with back pay, according to Edward McCrone, CIO subregional director.



VERMONT CEREMONY: In the shadow of the Green Mountains at Northfield, Vt., workers and management of the Rock of Ages Corp. prepare to raise the war-bond Minute Man flag. All 200 employes have authorized payroll deduction for bonds, and award of the flag was recognition of their part in helping win the war. Speakers at the ceremony included Pres. H. C. Ledyard and Sec.-Treas. John Lawson of the United Stone & Allied Products Workers, Frank Ozella of the AFL, and Athol Bell of the company.

WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

CONVENTION: Over 612,000 workers in key victory plants are represented at the UAW-CIO convention held this week in Chicago. Convention is the huge CIO affiliate's seventh. CIO Pres. Philip Murray was featured speaker, with UAW-CIO Pres. R. J. Thomas heading the delegates.

CIO-AFL Unity Urged by Murray; UAW in 'V' Drive

CHICAGO, Aug. 8—Complete support for CIO Pres. Philip Murray's leadership and for President Roosevelt as commander-in-chief of the nation's victory effort, a demand for a second front and for equality of sacrifice to win the war marked the seventh annual convention of the CIO United Automobile Workers meeting here this week.

President Murray, who was the featured speaker at the convention, received prolonged applause when he called for united effort behind the victory drive and when he urged practical unity between the CIO and AFL for a united drive to defeat the Axis.

Murray also referred to the AFL Executive Council meeting here at the same time, declaring: "I hope, I pray, that experience has taught them the need of giving greater consideration to the aspirations and objectives of the great organizations which make up the CIO."

Acceptance of the CIO's peace talk proposal came from the AFL Council, and a committee of three from each side will meet resume talks. CIO's committee was named to consist of Murray, soon to resume talks. CIO's committee was named, consisting of Murray, R. J. Thomas, president of the Auto Workers, and Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. The AFL's committee consists of Harry C. Bates of the Bricklayers, Daniel J. Tobin of the Teamsters and William L. Hutcheson of the Carpenters.

See Grave Threat in Alabama Race Strife

Washington, Aug. 8—Grave threats to national unity in the South were reported to President Roosevelt and high government officials by a delegation of CIO leaders that came here from Birmingham, Ala., this week, to describe a mounting terror being promoted against Negro and white workers in the area.

The delegation reported on activities of the "League for White Supremacy," on inflamatory speeches by Ku Klux Klan gangsters, and on the bitterly anti-Negro policies of Alabama's governor. In a letter presented at the White House, the delegation said:

"This new Nazi-like movement raises the slogan of 'segregation.' But this, Mr. President, is not the issue. The issue is simply whether a united Southern people will work together effectively for the defeat of the Axis, or whether the people shall be disunited and demoralized by racial strife injected into our ranks deliberately by evil men in order to weaken our war effort."

Singers of the letter included Noel Beddow, director of the United Steelworkers of America in the South; Bernard Borah, of the Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers; Van D. Jones, board member of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and Alton Lawrence, Frank Allen and Leo Kendrick, local officials of the same union.

The delegation's letter praised President Roosevelt for his leadership and for creation of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, which includes CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. William Green as labor members.

Murray, Green On Institute

New York, Aug. 8—CIO President Philip Murray and AFL President William Green this week respectively were named an honorary vice-chairman and honorary chairman of the American Labor Archive and Research Institute, according to Algernon Lee, president of the Rand School of Social Science.

The purpose of the institute is "to collect and make available the historical records of the labor movement" and "to promote research studies."

Issue Time Study Manual

Detroit, Aug. 8—Joint efforts of the United Auto Workers Union and the Murray Corp., which is building planes for the government, this week resulted in publication of a time-study manual, written in everyday language. The book takes the mystery out of time-study and will go far in smoothing relations between labor and management on questions involved in it, the UAW stated.

AFL Closed Shop Thrown Out

Washington, Aug. 8—Charging that the Premo Pharmaceutical Laboratories, Inc., New York City, had signed a closed shop contract with an AFL union which did not represent a majority of its employes, the NLRB this week ordered the agreement discarded.

The company was also ordered to stop discouraging membership in Local 65, CIO Wholesale & Warehouse Workers Union.

Clothing Union Sends News to Service Men

New York, Aug. 8—Publication of a special news letter called "Amalgamated News and Views," to be issued periodically to Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union members and close relatives of members serving in the armed forces, was announced today by the union.

The news letter, which is believed to be the first publication of its type issued by a union during World War II, will go to nearly 6,000 fighting men.

"Rest assured that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers to the best of its ability, will stand guard over your rights and freedoms at home while you fight for liberty and justice on the battlefront.

"Our union is now using its every ounce of energy in a double task, helping to mobilize America for this contest of force and helping to advance in America that spirit of equality, kindness and tolerance which we call democracy. We mean to make sure that when we win, it will be a victory with peace and security."

Cracks Down on Steel Co.

Washington, Aug. 8—The NLRB announced an order this week directing Johnson Steel & Wire Co., Worcester, Mass., to stop discouraging membership in the CIO United Steelworkers of America, or any other labor organization of its employes.

Boss Must Pay

Washington, Aug. 8—Time spent by an outside employe driving an automobile on business of his employer must be considered as time worked under the Fair Labor Standards Act, the Wage-Hour Administration ruled this week.

BEATING SUBS: These workers learn how to beat the Axis subs by studying riveting and chipping under actual conditions. Men shown are students in a Kearny, N.J., shipyard organized by the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, CIO. The school has more than 1,600 pupils, learning 17 different phases of shipbuilding.

USA-CIO Writes '30' To 1st Stooge Union

PUEBLO, Col., Aug. 8—The last chapter of that blood-stained phase of Colorado's industrial history, based on the vital issue of union recognition, was concluded peacefully this week when the United Steelworkers of America won an NLRB election 2,723 to 1,986 at the Rockefeller controlled Colorado Fuel & Iron Co., largest steel plant west of the Mississippi.

With this mopping up victory for the USA, now 660,000 strong, only two more steel producers remain unorganized in the nation, American Rolling Mills and National Steel (Weirton).

Thus long overdue and lingering death came for company unionism at the place of its birth.

And John D. Rockefeller Jr., like Henry Ford, has been obliged to eat his words of nearly 30 years ago, that he stood ready to lose every cent put into the C. F. & I. before he would capitulate to the union plant.

It was only after the nation saw a second Civil War, genuine and fierce and bloody if small scaled and short lived, that Rockefeller set up a safety valve of fake collective bargaining by instituting his own company union, known as the Rockefeller plan and blueprinted at his request by Canada's present Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, at the time a former labor minister of the dominion.

And it is only after an embittered and often frustrated organizing attempt by the CIO under the protection of the National Labor Relations Act that yesterday's election returns give them initial victory and the right to negotiate a contract for the largest steel plant west of the Mississippi.

NEGOTIATIONS

These negotiations will be under the personal supervision of James G. Thimmes, director of USA District 38, comprising California, Washington, Oregon and just recently Colorado. Success of the election is essentially attributable to Thimmes' dynamic organizing program. Thimmes previously secured contracts with California subsidiaries of all three of these "tough" setups, Rolling Mills, Weirton and C. F. & I.

A responsible C. F. & I. official let it be known before the election that the only reason the management did not continue its ruthless opposition to CIO union recognition in the Pueblo mill was the war.

"If it weren't for our working on war orders, we would lay so many men off, those voting tents would be deserted," he said.

Even so, the company refused to take the implications of the Labor Act lying down, to put it mildly. Instead, the company union known as the Employees Representative Organization persisted. It was aided and abetted by its years of infusion into local politics, a bitterly anti-union press, the conflicts of mixed nationalities, and according to USA officials, acts of violence to intimidate certain groups of the workers.

TWO VOTES

Among its 7,000 employes were hundreds who were half starved by the depression. Many young men were grateful for first jobs. They were unaware of the principles of union recognition and collective bargaining. They were 1,500 miles from possible employment in any other steel mill. All the factors contributed to the need for two NLRB elections before the workers voted CIO.

After three years of indifferent success at outright organization of the plant, the CIO in 1940 obtained from the Labor Board a decision, which was later upheld by the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, holding the ERO to be company dominated and ordering it dismantled.

In August of that year the CIO reported to the Board a clear majority signed up and asked an election, whereupon the C. F. & I. instituted a series of deliberate delays which held up the election until March 1941.

By this time thanks to defense orders, the company had hired several hundred additional men. The firm discriminated against predepression employees and against local young men, instead handpicking with forethought young men from the neighboring states of Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas where the CIO neither flourished nor found favor.

NARROW MARGIN

These men, together with the regular members of ERO, were prevailed upon in an active campaign of opposition to the CIO to vote for no union. Management won by a comparatively narrow margin. One factor in the defeat of the union was the holding of the election before the Circuit Court upheld the NLRB ruling outlawing the company union.

Thus encouraged, another organization known as ERO, Inc., was set up to supplant the outlawed ERO, and last December the company recognized this union and entered a backdoor agreement with it. The CIO promptly challenged this illegal action, with both the Board and Circuit Court of Appeals giving modern day version to that ancient Biblical saying: "The voice is Jacob's voice, but the hands are the hands of Esau."

They both found the C. F. & I. had dominated and interfered with the administration of ERO, Inc., and the three Federal judges held the company to be in contempt for violating the Court's previous decision by making a contract with ERO, Inc. They ordered the company to abrogate the contract and refuse to deal with this new setup in any manner whatsoever.

The United Steelworkers of America promptly sought this second election and at last secured victory. It has already launched an energetic follow-through campaign to organize those workers not previously signed up.

Watch Out For A Sales Tax

An Editorial

Perhaps you've written your Congressmen and Senators telling them what damage a sales tax would do to the health of the workers and how it would cut war output.

If you have, it's a good idea to do it again. The 1942 tax bill is before the Senate Finance Committee now. A steady stream of witnesses—from the upper crust and the employer interests—has been appearing all this week to testify for the sales tax. Several Senators on the committee have come out openly for it. The newspapers of course are continuing their pressure on the Senate.

The House version of the tax bill is short 2.5 billions of the amount the Treasury said we would need in added revenue for victory. The shortage is due to the House refusal to tax excess profits steeply enough, to its gentleness with holders of big incomes, to its refusal to plug up loopholes. It was done deliberately, to pave the way for a sales tax.

The President of the United States, President Murray of the CIO, and all labor and other progressive groups are opposed to the sales tax as a threat to war production and victory. We must continue opposing it—if we don't want to wake up very soon with a tax on food, clothing and all our basic necessities.

Write to your two Senators now. If you've done it before, do it again. Tell them no sales tax—tell them to tax profits and big incomes, to plug loopholes. Make the 1942 tax bill an instrument of victory.

Negro Teachers Want Equal Pay

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 8—An injunction restraining the Nashville school board from discriminating against Negro teachers on salaries was granted by U. S. District Judge E. D. Davies. The board had argued that it paid Negroes less than white teachers not because of their color but because it could get them cheaper.

JACK KROLL, new president of the Ohio CIO Council, elected to fill the unexpired term of John Owens, district president of the United Mine Workers, who recently resigned. Pres. Kroll is a member of the general executive board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and manager of the ACW joint board in Cincinnati.

CIO Urges Willow Run Housing

Washington, Aug. 8—The CIO Housing Committee today threw its full weight behind disputed proposals of the National Housing Agency to erect homes near Henry Ford's Willow Run bomber plant. Ford has opposed the plan.

The CIO Housing Committee, headed by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers Union, said that evidence introduced recently at a Truman Committee hearing in the Senate showed that labor turnover at Willow Run has far exceeded that at other aircraft plants.

"The reasons for this high turnover rate," the committee said it believed, "can be directly attributed to the lack of adequate housing facilities and the long distances the workers must travel each day."

The committee pointed out that a UAW survey showed that almost 70 per cent of the workers travel more than 30 miles a day to and from work, and that 45 per cent spend over an hour going from their homes to the plant, while 46 per cent spend another hour going home.

USSR Posters

Washington, Aug. 8—Fifty contemporary Russian posters, recently received from the Soviet Union, went on display this week at the office of Russian War Relief, Inc.

Ships Exist For 2nd Front, Report Finds

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—The shipping shortage bugaboo raised by those who question a second front was blasted this week by a CIO Maritime Committee report to the National Council of the National Maritime Union, meeting here.

A report signed by Committee officials Bjorne Halling and Hoyt S. Haddock said that:

"It is true that the shipping situation is tight; however, intelligent and effective use of our existing tonnage would provide sufficient ships for any second front operation.

"The argument of the defeatists to wait until a later date when we will have enough ships and will be able to master the submarine menace is utterly false," the report continued.

SUB CONTROL

"The submarine menace will never be controlled as long as we continue scattering our ships over all the oceans, and our shipyard construction will at best provide us with an additional 15 million tons by July, 1943. This, together with the fact that it is estimated that some 10 to 12 million tons will be sunk yearly, clearly shows us that the position of the United Nations, as far as enough shipping for a second front is concerned, will not be materially improved by July, 1943."

Halling and Haddock said that the United Nations control about 30 million tons of active shipping, much of which, however, is scattered over the world "because of the official concept of defensive warfare and a business-as-usual attitude."

"If a second front is opened, shipping will have to be concentrated, thus making it possible to provide more effective convoying," they pointed out.

The report criticized the backwardness of stevedore operations in most foreign countries, listing as an example six Barber Line ships that spent an average of 66 days in African ports.

"The streamlining of longshore operations throughout the world controlled by the United Nations would materially add to our shipping facilities," the report stated. "The adoption of methods used by the Int'l. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union on the west coast would be a great help in solving the problem."

Urge Jews Aid USSR Army

New York, Aug. 8—The Jews of America this week were urged to raise funds to provide the Russian army with 1,000 tanks and 500 bombers. The appeal came from 212 Jewish officials of the CIO and AFL who, in a statement, declared:

"Our Jewish brothers in the Soviet Union do not ask for charity. They do not bemoan their fate in an ocean of tears. They do not cry on bended knee. They are proud and brave fighting men and women, striking back, hitting at the enemy together with all of the gallant and valiant peoples of the Soviet Union. And every blow that they strike is a blow in our defense, in America's defense. We are one with the stubborn fighters of the Red Army."

Freedom of the Press

Lewis Tries Crackdown On CIO Union Paper

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 8—President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers Union so fears the sand blast of honest criticism that this week he attempted—and failed—to destroy the CIO-sponsored VOICE OF LABOR here.

Irked by an editorial which described him as, in effect, "working for Hitler," Lewis through local stooges forced the Times & Alleganian Co. to stop printing the VOICE OF LABOR.

Furthermore, Lewis' stooges threatened legal action on the basis of the editorial, which contained statements such as:

"Lewis, by not taking a clear cut position of all aid and support to our war effort, and by merely paying lip service to our war against the Fascists, is working for Hitler."

Lewis' attempt to throttle the VOICE OF LABOR flopped, for the paper immediately made plans to print in Washington, as an edition of The CIO NEWS.

SOME DIFFERENCE: One of the voting tents set up by the National Labor Relations Board at the gates of the Pueblo C. F. & I. steel plant,where workers voted for CIO recognition, offered historic contrast this week to the Ludlow, Col., tent colony which was burned to the ground nearly 30 years ago as company gunmen in State Militia uniforms massacred men, women and children. They were striking for the same basic principle of union recognition.

UAW Backs Murray, FDR; Asks 2nd Front' Sets Million Goal

By LEN DE CAUX

CHICAGO, Aug. 8—Setting a million members as its immediate goal, and claiming already to be the largest labor union in existence, the CIO United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers brought some 1700 delegates to Chicago this week. They voted unqualified support of CIO Pres. Philip Murray, backed the war leadership of President Roosevelt, called for the speedy opening of a second front, and demanded that there be equality of sacrifices to win the war.

Murray was given the biggest ovation of the convention, was voted "full and unqualified membership" in the UAW-CIO, and was praised by resolution for his "able and courageous leadership" and his win-the-war policies.

The CIO president called for the utmost effort and sacrifice to win "this war of labor against the forces of tyranny and aggression," asserting that "we stand four-square behind the President in the prosecution of this war."

He spoke vigorously against wage freezing, and demanded enactment of all seven points of the President's seven-point program. In the course of his speech, Murray also made specific proposals for the arbitration of jurisdictional dispute.

He criticized the leadership of the AFL for its refusal to deal with the unions of the Soviet Union and with the CIO and the Railroad Brotherhoods in the matter of international labor unity.

Pres. R. J. Thomas declared that the UAW-CIO not only has a paid-up membership of 612,000, but also speaks for an additional 300,000 covered by its union contracts. He called for a drive to bring into the union all workers covered by its contracts, "so we may become the first union in this country with 1,000,000 members."

SECOND FRONT

The resolution calling for a second front was adopted by an almost unanimous vote. It pledged support to Roosevelt and the other leaders of the United Nations on the pact calling for a second front in 1942, urged that preparations be begun at once "for the launching of a western European front," and

Murray Protests AFL 'Backdoor Deal' on Int'l Union Relations

CHICAGO, Aug. 5—A strong protest against the agreement between the AFL and the British Trades Union Congress, which freezes out the CIO and precludes direct contact between the AFL and the labor unions of the Soviet Union, was today cabled by CIO Pres. Philip Murray to Sir Walter Citrine, secretary of the British TUC.

Murray revealed his action for the first time in his address to the UAW-CIO convention. He referred to the Anglo-AFL pact as a "backdoor agreement which runs counter to our way of doing business," and related the inside story of the unsuccessful negotiations conducted by Citrine in the United States for Anglo-Soviet-American labor unity.

AFL BALKS

Due to the reluctance of a majority of the AFL executive council to have any dealings with USSR labor and the council's insistance on exclusive right to represent American labor, the only result of Citrine's visit was the formation of a so-called Anglo-American Trade Union Committee including only the AFL and British labor.

Under the agreement, the AFL leaders authorize the British TUC to act as "liaison" between them and Soviet labor, and the AFL is supposed to be empowered to select "representatives of any other bona fide trade union body."

Murray's cable reminded Citrine that in personal conversations he had assured him the CIO was prepared "to extend fullest cooperation with the British TUC in the promotion of the war effort.

"I am surprised," Murray continued, "that the British TUC should have taken this action without extending an official invitation to CIO and the Railroad Brotherhoods to work with the British TUC and other bona fide independent labor movements in the United Nations."

Murray pointed out that the CIO represents five million workers in most vital basic war industries and "because of its size and strategic importance" should participate directly in any arrangements for international labor unity."

"I also call your attention to the

AFL Accepts Murray Call for Unity Talks

CHICAGO, Aug. 8—CIO President Murray's proposal for the initiation of discussions looking toward organic unity between the CIO and the AFL, has been accepted by the AFL executive council, meeting in Chicago.

"The standing peace committee of the AFL is ready to meet with the committee appointed by Mr. Murray," AFL Pres. Wm. Green declared. "Steps will be taken at once to arrange a time and place of meeting convenient to both sides."

Speaking before the UAW-CIO convention here, Murray expressed the hope that the discussions will reveal a change of attitude on the part of the AFL. "I hope, I pray," he said "that experience has taught them the need of giving greater consideration to the aspirations and objectives of the great organizations which make up the CIO.

"I hope the executive council of the Federation will empower its president to mediate, conciliate and and arbitrate jurisdictional disputes.

"If they do, I am prepared to assure America that there won't be another strike caused by jurisdictional disputes for the duration of the war."

RACE DISCRIMINATION

Murray also expressed the hope that the AFL "will agree to discontinue its practices of race discrimination in any agreement reached."

The peace committee of the AFL includes Harry C. Bates of the Bricklayers, Daniel J. Tobin of the

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Food Industry

• Purity and cleanliness dictate the selection of equipment used in the preparation of foods. For this reason, many manufacturers of food processing equipment are using stainless steel.

Stainless steel is immune to practically all types of food acids, and will not affect the taste, color, or keeping qualities of the foodstuffs with which it comes in contact. It can be quickly and easily cleaned, and is not attacked by chemical sterilizers, cleaners, and brines. Equipment used in preparing various foods has shown greatly improved performance when stainless steel has been used for parts subject to rusting or corrosion.

Today, more than ever, the food industry is relying on stainless steel equipment to help assure high quality and maximum output of essential foods.

Unity Discussions

The proposals of Pres. Philip Murray for unity discussions between the CIO and the AFL are in line with the consistent policies of the CIO.

The CIO has repeatedly sought to achieve the goal of a unified labor movement, since the time when the AFL executive council split labor's ranks by ousting its unions. It has also consistently maintained that real unity can only be achieved by upholding the right of industrial organization.

Since the war began, the CIO has held that united labor effort for victory is even more important than the formalities of organic unity. It has rejected friction-breeding proposals to rush unity negotiations, where it felt these might interfere with the promising developments of labor action, for war purposes.

The President's Combined Labor Victory Committee, with both CIO and AFL represented, has seemed to the CIO the best medium for securing agreement between the two labor bodies on war issues, and Murray still stresses the importance of intensifying the work of this committee.

However, the CIO president also points out in his unity proposal that the usefulness and need of this committee is by now so well established that the groundwork has been laid for discussions looking toward the achievement of organic unity.

In his unity letter, Murray makes two important points that are indicative of the CIO attitude that war interests must come first. The first is an immediate proposal for the arbitration of jurisdictional disputes, which he says cannot be permitted to interfere with continuous war production. And the second is that unity discussions must not be allowed "to interfere with the all-important matter of continued joint action between the CIO and AFL on issues affecting the fullest possible prosecution of the war effort."

Now that the AFL has accepted Murray's proposal for the initiation of unity discussions, it is sincerely to be hoped that the Federation will evidence a change of attitude in the direction of recognizing the rights of the great unions which make up the CIO, so that a real labor unity may be achieved for the benefit of all American working people and the promotion of victory over the Axis.

Petty Stuff

Speaking at the UAW-CIO convention in Chicago, CIO Pres. Philip Murray revealed a story of finagling on the issue of international labor unity that reflects little credit on the AFL leadership.

He told of a visit paid him by Sir Walter Citrine, representing the British Trades Union Congress, on May 27, at which Citrine reported the refusal of the AFL executive council to enter into a tripartite arrangement linking together the unions of Great Britain, the Soviet Union and the United States for joint war effort. The council would go no further than a joint agreement with British labor.

But the AFL council not only refused to deal with the unions of the Soviet Union, Murray pointed out, it also refused to deal with the CIO and other sections of American organized labor on this issue. It rejected a proposal of Citrine that the CIO and the railroad Brotherhoods be invited to participate with it in working for international labor unity.

And now an agreement is announced between the British Trades Union Congress and the AFL, under which the AFL is supposed to have the sole right to speak for American labor and to select representatives of the CIO and railroad Brotherhoods, at its discretion.

Murray has made clear, in a cable to Citrine, that such an insulting arrangement is totally unsatisfactory to the CIO; and that any real international labor unity must involve direct recognition for all American labor.

The AFL leaders should be reminded that such policies of petty exclusiveness were one of the leading causes of the organization of America's mass-production workers outside instead of into the AFL.

The AFL leaders should be reminded that our country is one of the United Nations, bound together with its gallant allies in a world war upon which the fate of civilization depends. Our country needs the support of all the freedom-loving peoples, just as they need ours. And labor's interests, as well as our country's interests, demand an all-inclusive unity for war effort of all labor in all the United Nations.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

ONE OF the best places to find out what is on the minds of American workers is a convention of the United Automobile Workers. For delegates to these conventions suffer from few, if any, inhibitions and whatever they have on their minds comes out on the floor.

This year's convention in Chicago was no exception in the outspokenness of its delegates. The 1,700 delegates who jammed the ballroom of the Sherman Hotel, by their speeches, their demonstrations and their votes, left no one in doubt on the following points:

(1) The more than 600,000 workers represented by the UAW-CIO set victory over the Axis ahead of all other considerations.

(2) They are 100 per cent behind CIO Pres. Philip Murray in his support of Pres. Roosevelt's war leadership, and equally emphatically opposed to the policies of John L. Lewis.

(3) They are indignant that employers and competing unions should take advantage of their war sacrifices—as for instance, the relinquishment of premium pay; and determined that there must be equality of sacrifice by rich as well as poor to win this war.

★ ★ ★

The debate on overtime pay for Saturday, Sunday and holidays ran into two days. The vehemence of the feelings expressed on this subject revealed a basic dissatisfaction running deeper than the immediate issue involved.

At the urging of Pres. Roosevelt, both CIO and AFL agreed in principle to the relinquishment of special overtime rates on Saturdays and Sundays, where these fall within the 40-hour week.

This meant a substantial wage sacrifice, but the UAW-CIO loyally accepted the recommendation at a special convention. At the same time it demanded equality of sacrifice, through a $25,000 limit on incomes, through progressive taxation of profits and wealth, etc.

Since then AFL and independent unions have taken advantage of the loyalty of the UAW-CIO, by stressing their own refusal to relinquish premium pay as an inducement to vote for them in Labor Board elections.

The convention, therefore, adopted a resolution pointing out that the UAW-CIO had sacrificed premium pay with the understanding that this policy was to be of universal application; and that if it is not universally applied within 30 days, the union will deem itself released from its commitment.

This resolution was adopted only after hours of opposition by delegates who considered it not strong enough.

The whole debate revealed a burning indignation among American working people that labor should constantly be expected to bear the brunt of war sacrifice, while industrial big shots get hundreds of thousands in salary increases; while profits soar, and while nothing is done to bring about equality of sacrifice through a $25,000 income ceiling, through effective taxation of wealth, and through adoption of the whole of the President's seven-point program.

The convention, therefore, coupled with its resolution on premium pay a demand for speedy adoption of all the measures in the seven-point program, and a call for a nation-wide campaign by the CIO to secure such action.

The opening of a second front to crush Hitler while he is so deeply engaged with the Soviet Union, was the dominating war issue of this convention of the men and women who make most of the country's tanks, planes and other essential war weapons.

It was the theme of nearly every banner carried in the parade of the UAW-CIO delegates through the Chicago Loop; and the resolution for a second front was adopted by an all-but unanimous vote.

Murray recalled the early days of bitter factionalism within the UAW, when he addressed the convention, reminding the delegates that their union used to be known as the "Dead-End Kids" of the labor movement.

"But now you've attained man's stature," he said. "You're no longer kids in knee britches, and you must assume the responsibilities of one of the mightiest unions in the world."

The Chicago UAW-CIO convention lacked none of the color, high spirits and sometimes uproarious democracy of previous conventions. But at the same time it was the least factional and most unified convention the UAW-CIO has yet held.

It revealed this giant of labor unions assuming its great responsibilities in a world at war, and rolling up its sleeves for a finish fight against all enemies of labor, democracy and freedom.

AFL Accepts Murray Call for Unity Talks

It will meet with a CIO committee including Pres. Murray, R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO, and Julius Emspak of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

VICTORY COMMITTEE

The CIO president stressed in this letter the importance of intensifying the work of this joint CIO-AFL Victory Committee 'in order that labor may lend every possible assistance to the outstanding national objective of winning the war against the Axis."

He expressed deep concern over "stoppages which have been caused by certain affiliates of the AFL because of some jurisdictional dispute," and reminded Green that he had a number of times suggested the settlement of such disputes by arbitration.

ORGANIC UNITY

In regard to organic unity, Murray declared that this problem should not be permitted "to affect or interfere with the growing unity of action between our organizations in regard to the war effort," saying that was why the CIO had suggested concentration on the work of the Combined Labor Victory Committee.

Such discussions, however, Murray concluded, must not be permitted to interfere with "the all-important matter of continued joint action between CIO and AFL" in respect to the war effort.

(Following is the full text of CIO President Murray's letter to AFL President Green urging a meeting of a CIO and AFL committee to examine the problems of organic unity between the two organizations.

Mr. William Green, President
American Federation of Labor
Washington, D. C.
Dear Mr. Green:

In the interest of our nation the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor, during the past several months, have been attempting to join on many issues which would afford greater strength to the national war effort.

At the present time there is a Combined Labor Victory Committee, consisting of representatives of the CIO and AFL which meets with the President of the United States regarding all issues affecting labor's participation in the prosecuting of the war. I am sure that you will agree with me that it is extremely important that the work of this committee be intensified in order that labor may lend every possible assistance to the outstanding national objective of winning the war against our Axis enemies.

END STOPPAGES

In December, 1941, organized labor, with representatives of management and representatives of government, adopted a national policy that there would be no stoppages of work, but that in the interest of securing maximum production, all industrial disputes would be submitted to the National War Labor Board. The CIO assumed tha this commitment included jurisdictional problems between affiliates of the AFL and affiliates of the CIO. We have therefore been deeply concerned about the stoppages which have been caused by certain affiliates of the AFL because of some jurisdictional dispute.

As you know, from time to time I have suggested to you that these disputes be submitted to arbitration. Recently I have suggested that such disputes be submitted to arbitration by the War Labor Board. These suggestions have not been accepted.

I am firmly of the opinion that no stoppages of work can be permitted because of a jurisdictional dispute. The interest of our nation demands that there shall be continuous production and nothing must interfere.

To this end I now suggest to you that the CIO and AFL establish a committee of representatives from both organizations, with an impartial arbitrator, to which shall be submitted all jurisdictional disputes which may arise between us. Pending a decision by such committee there shall be no stoppages of work.

ORGANIC UNITY

The problem of organic unity has also been under discussion by our respective organizations. The CIO has felt that we should not permit this problem to affect or interfere with the growing unity of action between our organizations in regard to the war effort. It is for this reason that we suggested that our energy be concentrated on the work of the Combined Labor Victory Committee. With the usefulness and need of that committee having been established, I believe that we can initiate discussions regarding possible establishment of organic unity between our organizations.

I am therefore naming a committee consisting of R. J. Thomas, Julius Emspak, and the undersigned, to meet a committee named by your organization to probe into this question.

However, I wish at this time, to repeat the need of guaranteeing that the discussion between these two committees will not under any circumstances, be permitted to interfere with the all-important matter of continued joint action between the CIO and AFL on issues affecting the fullest possible prosecution of the war effort.

Protest 'Backdoor' Deal

Railroad Brotherhoods, likewise unaffiliated with the AFL, but having more than a half million workers in the vital transportation industry, in addition to other bona fide national and international unions whose combined membership exceeds the AFL," Murray said.

"To secure fullest participation, unity and cooperation, these organizations should be extended the direct recognition that their numerical strength and strategic position in the war program warrant.

"The CIO enjoys recognition and representation on various U. S. government war agencies on a basis of equality with the AFL. The relation of organized labor to the United Nations' war effort attains much greater significance if all bona fide labor organizations are extended direct recognition and representation on the Anglo-American Trade Union Committee."

Murray told the UAW-CIO delegates that the "AFL is not at liberty to enter into an agreement of that description on behalf of the CIO." He said he had been contacted by Railroad Brotherhood officials, who also said they were not prepared to have the AFL select any delegates for them.

CITRINE'S VISIT

The CIO president related that on May 27 Citrine had met him informally and stated he was not authorized by the British TUC to negotiate with any American labor organization except the AFL. Citrine said the AFL executive council had refused to enter the tripartite Anglo-Soviet-American agreement desired by British labor.

The British union leader added he had requested the AFL to invite the CIO and other labor organizations into the discussions on international labor unity.

"The AFL, according to Mr. Citrine, not only refused to deal with the Soviet unions," Murray said, "but it stated in substance that it did not care to deal with a delegation representing the CIO because the CIO was a rival labor union."

The British unions have for some time been linked with those of the Soviet Union in a joint committee, and Citrine was instructed to try to extend this committee to include American labor as well.

The CIO is on record, by executive board action, in favor of the widest possible international labor unity, including labor in all the United Nations and the countries of Latin America.

Appointed to Board

Washington, Aug. 8—Joseph W. Knapik, national president of the Federation of Dyers, Finishers, Printers and Bleachers of America, this week was appointed as a special mediation representative for the War Labor Board.

pledged the production of war weapons "in ever-increasing numbers" for this purpose.

The resolution referred to statements of United Nations' leaders that "our only hope for an early victory over the Axis lies in opening a new front in western Europe in 1942, and by so doing crush the forces of Hitler between two mighty offensives and give much needed relief to the brave people of Russia, who have long held back the Nazi tide alone at a tremendous cost of lives and equipment."

TRIBUTE TO OFFICERS

Murray, in his speech, paid tribute to the officers of the UAF-CIO for "the energetic, courageous, able and statesmanlike leadership they have given the United Automobile Workers during the past three years."

R. J. Thomas and other officers were also praised by CIO Secretary James B. Carey, who urged the delegates to appreciate the serious war responsibilities confronting their union and to give united support to their elected leaders.

He told of his meetings with John Husemann, leader of the German miners union, who was shot to death by the Nazis when they seized power, and warned that death, imprisonment and slavery would be the lot of American labor unionists also, if Hitler is not defeated.

Opposing wage freezing, the CIO president denounced the "fallacious economic theorizing indulged in by the OPA, declared that price control was breaking down and demanded "universal democratic rationing of goods that people need to live upon.

He also dwelt at length on the failure of Congress to adopt a tax program that will impose on profits and wealth their fair share of the tax burden, hitting particularly at the failure to adopt a $25,000 limit on personal incomes.

Demanding equality of sacrifice, Murray read many figures showing the huge profit increases of industrial corporations, and the salary increases, running into hundreds of thousands, of industrial executives.

INTERNATIONAL LABOR

He publicly related for the first time the inside story of the negotiations conducted by Sir Walter Citrine in the interests of Anglo-Soviet-American labor unity.

The AFL executive council, Murray reported, not only refused to deal directly with the Soviet trade unions but also rejected a proposal of Citrine to invite the CIO and the Railroad Brotherhoods into the unity discussions.

Murray read to the convention a cablegram to Citrine denouncing the agreement between the AFL and the British TUC, under which the AFL assumes the right to select CIO representatives, at its discretion. The cablegram called for direct recognition and representation for other bona fide American labor organizations besides the AFL on the Anglo-American trade union committee.

The resolution adopted in support of Murray's leadership joined its praise of the CIO president with a denunciation of "the disruptive, anti-labor and anti-war activities of John L. Lewis," The honorary membership previously granted to Lewis was withdrawn by convention action.

OVERTIME PAY

One of the most long and vigorously debated issues of the convention related to the union's relinquishment of premium pay for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays, where these fall within the 40-hour week.

It was charged that AFL and independent unions had failed to make a similar sacrifice and had used this to the detriment of the UAW-CIO in Labor Board elections.

The delegates also expressed great indignation over the failure to require appropriate war sacrifices from capital as well as labor, instancing the rejection of the President's proposal for a $25,000 income ceiling and failure to tax profits and surplus wealth inadequately.

The resolution finally adopted on the subject demanded universal application of the policy of relinquishing premium pay, and declared that unless this policy is "universally applied throughout industry within 30 days from the adjournment of the convention," the UAW-CIO will deem itself released from its commitment.

The resolution also called for a nationwide campaign to secure speedy enactment of the whole of the President's seven-point program.

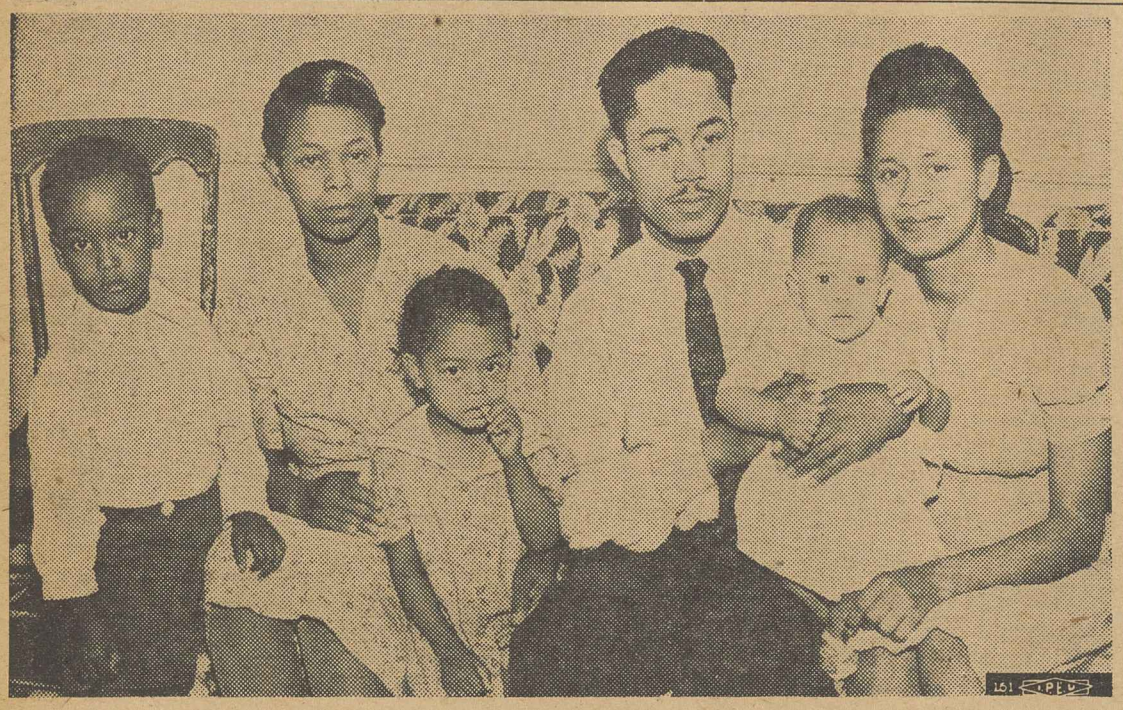
The National War Labor Board was criticized for delay in handing down decisions, and a resolution adopted calling for the setting up of regional war labor boards to expedite matters.

POLITICAL OFFENSIVE

The convention called for "an immediate offensive on the political field to elect a win-the-war Congress, whose domestic, social and economic program will make certain the winning of the peace for which the war is being fought."

Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, was warmly greeted by the delegates when he addressed the convention. He was assured full support in his fight against deportation.

Other speakers in the first few days included Bishop Bernard J. Sheil, Bishop Edwin J. Randall, Mayor Edward J. Kelly, CIO Regional Director Fullerton Fulton, Capt. Cecil Poole, a British member of Parliament; Irving Abramson, chairman of the CIO War Relief Committee, and Col. A. Robert Ginsburgh.



ALL GIVE, NO TAKE: The dependent family of 19-year-old Samuel Funderbark, a National Maritime Union member killed in a torpedoing, this week declined assistance offered by the CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, explaining that they could make other arrangements for aid and that the money should be used for others who need it worse. Above, in their Harlem home, are: Carson Funderbark, Mrs. Lizzie Funderbark, Samuel's mother; Ruth, Simon, Samuel's twin brother; Wallace and Ing. The father, Frank, is a veteran of World War I, and is a semi-invalid.

Negro Hero's Family Passes CIO Aid to One in 'Greater Need'

NEW YORK, Aug. 8 — The Funderbark's of Harlem believe in democracy. They also believe in independence. Their philosophy boiled down this week to "all give, no take."

Their gift, to the cause of crushing fascism, was the life of their 19-year-old son, Samuel, a member of the National Maritime Union. He was the substantial support of his semi-invalid father, his mother, and six other children ranging from eight months old to 19 years. They learned recently of his death from a torpedoing.

With Samuel's death, the family's main source of income vanished. During the three months' period they have to wait for insurance payments, they have faced eviction.

They were stunned with grief and didn't know where to turn when a representative of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief heard of the case and offered assistance.

REFUSE AID

Discussion of the problem led the family to discover that they could raise enough money to tide them over the insurance waiting period.

This week, therefore, they declined the Committee's offer of assistance, saying that the $200 that was offered them should be used to help some other family that needed it more.

Committee representatives said the sum will be placed in a reserve emergency fund that is drawn on for demands that cannot be met immediately by any other means, such as money needed for taxes, illness, rent, urgent installment payments or necessary travel.

Murray Renews Backing For FDR in War Drive; Asks Victory Program

The CIO through its national conventions and through its National Executive Board meetings has repeatedly stated to the people of the United States and the people of the universe that we stand foursquare behind the President in the prosecution of this war.

We may have our misunderstandings, we direct our shafts of criticism at certain of the leaders in the administration, but we want the nation to distinctly understand that no matter what shafts of criticisms may be directed against certain individuals in government or in industry, that American labor stands shoulder to shoulder behind the President of the United States of America.

I say to you now, as I have said before, both publicly and privately, that I am unalterably opposed now, as I think I will be in the future, to the establishment of any kind of national wage freezing.

I believe today, the 5th day of August, as I did believe the 23rd day of January of the present year, that the kind of mechanism necessary to prevent strikes and create opportunity for workers to engage themselves in true independent bargaining were by those processes created and set into motion by the President of the United States when he created the National War Labor Board.

I am unalterably opposed to the creation of any super-agency, such as a moderator to control wages, a wage czar, or an inter-departmental committee consisting of certain bureaucratic leaders, to pass upon labor's right to participate in the benefits accruing in our national economy even during a war.

RATIONING

Insofar as I have been able to observe there has only been one commodity in the United States since the beginning of the present war that has been rationed, and that is sugar. Tires, Frigidaires, and a number of other things have been frozen, but not necessarily rationed. Gasoline has been rationed in seventeen states along the Atlantic seaboard.

You cannot put into effect, or no one can put into effect, effective price controls that will satisfy the people of the United States of America unless those price controls are rigid, and unless there is universal democratic rationing of goods that people need to live upon.

TAXATION

The Congress of the United States, the House Ways and Means Committee particularly, have repudiated the President's proposal for a $25,000 ceiling on wages for executives; they have said, "We don't want any part of it." The Congress of the United States has repudiated the combined tax return. The Congress of the United States has repudiated through the House Ways and Means Committee provisions which would provide for the imposition of taxes on bonds which are now tax exempt.

I will be perfectly frank with you about this phase of the situation when I say to you that is not and cannot be construed by any stretch of anyone's imagination, equality of sacrifice. That is not what the United Auto Workers, CIO and all of American labor are demanding of our government in this war.

* * *

WAR PROFITS

Here is a rather interesting and very illuminating picture. Acme Steel in 1940 earned $3,500,000.00; in 1941 it earned eight and one-half million dollars. It increased its profit picture by approximately 136 per cent.

Allegheny Ludlum Steel increased its profit situation from $6,000,000.00 to $15,000,000.00—123 per cent.

American Radiator went from $9,000,000.00 to $17,000,000.00. Its profit picture improved 75½ per cent.

Bethlehem Steel—and I know something about that little company—57 per cent; Bell Aircraft, 2,820 per cent; Bendix Aviation, 212 per cent; Consolidated Aircraft, 1,000 per cent; General Electric, 80.5 per cent; DuPont, 41.6 per cent; General Motors, 52.7 per cent; Hercules Powder, 105 per cent.

And so on right down the line did the increased earnings of these companies go in the year 1941 over the year 1940.

* * *

EXECUTIVES SALARIES

Let's see how far the leaders of American industry have gone in the field of regulation insofar as wages are concerned. Mr. C. R. Smith, of the American Airlines, got $35,000 in 1940 and $50,000 in 1941. That is an increase of 49 per cent. Mr. Smith didn't do so badly.

Mr. Prentis, of the Armstrong Cork Company, got $100,000 in 1940, $125,000 in 1941. He didn't do so badly, either. Victor Emanuel, of Aviation Corporation, got $25,000 in 1940, $79,150 in 1941, an increase of 217 per cent.

Now Mr. Eugene Grace, of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, said that five and a half per cent, or 44 cents a day increase to the steel workers was too much money. Let's see what this old boy got. He got $478,144 in 1940. Not bad! He got $537,720 in 1941. Now as percentages go that doesn't mean much, because it was only 12.4 per cent, but it represented an increase of $55,000 for the year 1941 for Mr. Grace.

I do not know what the attitude of the American Federation of Labor is going to be when we next meet for the purpose of trying to effectuate a common understanding or agreement. I hope, in fact I pray, that the attitude of the Federation will be changed, that experience has taught them the need, the greater need of giving recognition to the aspirations and objectives of these great organizations which now comprise the National CIO.

I hope that whilst and before unity conferences take place the Federation of Labor will empower its President with the power to mediate, conciliate and arbitrate. I hope the Executive Council, which is now meeting in the city of Chicago, will delegate that kind of authority to the President of the American Federation of Labor.

If the Executive Council in its wisdom agrees to delegate that kind of authority to the President of the American Federation of Labor I am prepared to assure America that there will not be another strike caused by a jurisdictional dispute during the war.

That phase of this situation rests rather securely in the laps of the members of the Executive Council of The American Federation of Labor. I, speaking for my own group, five million organized workers affiliated with CIO, am prepared to arbitrate to stop strikes during this war. I am ready to do it.

Another important phase of our problem to which I hope the American Federation of Labor will address itself in the consideration of organic unity is one which troubles a great many of us, and that is this, that any kind of an agreement which may be perfected—and we hope will be perfected—the Federation will agree with CIO to discontinue its practices of racial discrimination.

First "Little Steel" Pact Won by USA-CIO

INDIANA HARBOR, Ind., Aug. 5—The CIO today signed its first contract with one of the "Little Steel" companies, signaling the end of years of active opposition to collective bargaining by these powerful corporations.

Philip Murray, as president of the United Steelworkers of America, and a negotiating committee of 17 union members signed the agreement, which was with the Inland Steel Co. J. H. Walsh, Inland vice-president, signed for the company.

The contract covers 14,000 employes of the Indiana Harbor plant and the mills at Chicago Heights, Ill. It follows the lines of the recent War Labor Board decision, including a wage increase of 44 cents a day, union security in the form of maintenance of membership, and the check-off of union dues.

The other Little Steel companies—Republic, Youngstown and Bethlehem—are expected to sign similar agreements in the near future.

Praise UAW Aid to Red Cross

Washington, Aug. 8—High praise for the United Auto Workers Union's support of the American Red Cross was expressed today by Chairman Norman H. Davis in a letter to the UAW Convention, in Chicago.

"In this crisis," Davis wrote to UAW President R. J. Thomas, "the spirit of America has been shown in the response of your union and auxiliary members to the call from the American Red Cross for volunteers and funds to carry on our services to the armed forces and our work of mercy among the victims of war."

Textile Pay Below 1920 Level, Union Tells WLB; Asks 10c an Hour Boost

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8—Firmly maintaining its stand for a ten-cent hourly increase for employes in 28 of the Northern cotton mills covered in cases now pending before the National War Labor Board, the Textile Workers Union told the board at hearings held here this week that the increase "is proper and justified and in conformance with the President's seven-point program."

In Southern mills where wages are lower than those paid in the North, the TWU is asking for an increase of 20 cents an hour to remove this differential.

A board panel previously recommended a 7.5 cents hourly increase in two cases involving 40 New England mills, while in a third case, involving 11 Southern mills, the labor member recommended ten cents increase and the employer member 7½ cents. The public member of the panel indicated that some increase should be given, but made no definite recommendation.

In its arguments for a 10-cent increase in Northern mills, the union stated: "The agreement among all three panel members that the Northern cotton textile industry is sub-standard is indicative of the need of a substantial wage increase to correct this lamentable condition."

WAGE AVERAGE LOW

In a summary of wage data in Northern mills, the TWU stated that the average hourly wage in February, 1942, was 58.8 cents including overtime, or 57 cents without overtime, while weekly earnings were $24.46 including overtime.

Pointing out that Northern textile workers are among the lowest paid workers in America, the TWU said that 43 per cent of them earned less than 50 cents an hour and 69 per cent earned less than 60 cents.

Figures on weekly earnings show that 50 per cent make less than $20 a week, while the percentage for all manufacturing workers is $24. In February, 1942, only 12 out of a total of 87 manufacturing industries reported lower average hourly earnings than those for the Northern cotton textile industry.

Not only are wages of these workers sub-standard under present conditions, but they are lower even than in 1920, the TWU said. In February, 1942, they were earning $1.22 a week less than in 1920, while the average amnufacturing worker was earning $4.09 a week more in February, 1942, than in 1920.

The effect of these inadequate wages, the TWU stated, is to impair the health and vigor of the textile worker, making him less fit than other groups to do his share for the war effort, "despite his every willingness to fight the present battle for the four freedoms and for the liberation of the oppressed."

The TWU statement in concluding, declared that textile workers "are willing to make their sacrifices toward victory. From their homes come thousands of our men for the armed forces.

"They are contributing financially to the success of the war effort. Generally through the initiative of our union, practically every mill in New England has a payroll allotment plan in effect by which workers are contributing from their meager earnings that their Government may finance their struggle for democracy and victory.

"A 10-cent hourly wage increase will relieve distress, elevate a sub-standard group, align wages in New England textile industries and achieve the major purposes of the President's current wage policy."

(With auxiliary conventions being held these weeks all over the map, the national officers of the CWA-CIO are doing a bit of traveling, and are coming home with new enthusiasm. We therefore thought that this would be a good time to introduce them to you and let their enthusiasm flow through this column to our readers.—E. Fowler)

BY JULIA KATZ, National Director,
Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, CIO

In West Virginia the UMWA auxiliaries have a slogan, "If you've got two banners, you're not union." This slogan, which has shielded the West Virginia Mine Workers Auxiliary against jim crow disruption in past struggles, was the theme of the Third Annual Conference of the West Virginia CIO Auxiliary Council, which condemned the attempts of John L. Lewis to split the labor movement.

From mine camps deep in the hills of West Virginia, representatives of hundreds of organized wives, sisters, mothers and daughters of coal miners, brought pledges of support to President Roosevelt as Commander-in-Chief of our country at war and President Murray as leader of the CIO in the war effort. They brought reports of magnificently organized war activity programs in their mine camps, including civilian defense, war saving, Red Cross, and war relief activities.

Their adoption of resolutions condemning John L. Lewis's appeasement policies, urging the opening of a second front immediately, endorsing the President's seven point program, supported the policies developed at the West Virginia State Industrial Union Council which was in session at the same time.

CWA-CIO TESTIFIES ON TAXES

Reading a message from the coal miners' wives of West Virginia, which said in part; "We miners' wives of West Virginia want to win this war. We are sending our boys into the army and we know they are fighting hard because they are tough coal miners' sons. But if you take 2½ billion dollars off the tax bill, you take that many guns out of the hands of our boys", the CWA-CIO testified before the Senate Finance Committee as one of several representatives of the national CIO, who testified for five hours urging the passage of a war tax program which will give everything the country has to give to the war effort and which will leave workers' living standards high enough to enable them to work and fight for victory.

It was apparent from the lack of interest which the Senators displayed in the five-hour testimony of the CIO that great pressure will be needed to insure the passage of a proper tax bill. For that reason, the CWA-CIO has issued a request to all CIO auxiliaries to write to Congressmen urging the passage of a win-the-war tax bill and opposing a sales tax.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

All roads led to Chicago this week for the men engaged in the important industry making planes, tanks, guns and all materials of war—members of the UAW-CIO. The largest delegation ever assembled by that great, powerful, gigantic union. A Streamlined program of activities prevailed; typical of the spirit that these workers have demonstrated in their service to the nation and the United Nations in production of these war materials. A great and inspiring sight and shows to all what industrial unionism can do.

The results of these deliberations will radiate throughout the industry and inspire workers in every industry to join unions for the protection of themselves, their families and for the good of the nation. President Murray addressed the convention on its third day and gave a very inspiring address.

Does the AFL want peace? That is the big question. Industrial unionism is here to stay. That must be recognized.

James McCormick, known to all his friends as "Butch", passed away on August 1, 1942, at his home in Coschoton, Ohio. Funeral services were held on the afternoon of Monday, August 3rd. An old timer in the labor movement, Butch will be greatly missed and we extend our sincerest sympathy to his family.

LEATHER WORKERS WIN

Isador Pickman, secretary-treasurer, Leather Division, reports a victory for the IF&LWU-CIO, in the NLRB election held recently at the J. O. Whitten Company, Winchester, Massachusetts, with a vote of 87 for CIO as against 18. Brother Coleman Flaherty, Business Agent Local 22, and a Committee from the factory headed by Carl Hubbard assisted in this victorious campaign.

George Craig, CIO regional director in Philadelphia, reports winning an election at the Malatesta's Parkway Villa, Camden, N. J. with a vote of 18 for CIO to 1 for the AFL. He also reports signing a contract in behalf of the employes of the Heimbach Baking Company, with a 10 per cent wage increaase. A contract with the Ajax Metal Company and the IUMMSWA was negotiated granting a 6 cent per hour increase. The IUMMSWA also secured a 7 cent per hour increase in negotiation of a contract with the Superior Zinc Company in Philadelphia.

The United Steelworkers of America scored two more victories, as follows:

Coatesville Paint, Bethlehem Steel, Coatesville, Pa., USA-CIO: 222; against: 116.

The victory at the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company's plant in Pueblo is particularly significant in view of the fact that this is a famous Rockefeller outfit. This splendid victory will prove a springboard for further victories for CIO not only in the State of Colorado, but elsewhere.

L. H. Goldsmith, CIO Field representative, in Newark, N. J., reports winning of an election at the American Transformer Company in Newark, with a vote of 220 for the UERMWA-CIO, to 120 for the IBEW-AFL.

UWOC-CIO has signed an argreement with the Smoky Mountain Railroad in Knoxville, Tennessee, the negotiating committee composed of Representative Francis M. McMahon (UWOC-CIO), assisted by Joseph R. White, international vice president, Textile Workers. A very fine contract was secured and increase in wages were obtained from 8 cents to 29½ cents per hour. The membership is 100 per cent.

Assails Lewis for Opposing 2nd Front, Sniping at FDR & CIO

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 8—President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers Union is playing Hitler's game by opposing President Roosevelt's policy for the opening of a Western Front against the Nazis, State CIO President George Myers charged this week in a letter sent to UMW members in this district.

"Every effort has been made to weaken the CIO because its leaders have refused to support John L. Lewis in his opposition to Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mr. Roosevelt's leadership in the war effort," Meyers declared.

"A classic example of this opposition is the Lewis attempt to ridicule and deride the people's support of President Roosevelt's policy to open a second front in 1942 to fight Hitler.

"The CIO and many prominent citizens are committed to the urgent need of creating a second front in Europe immediately, a second front established before Russia, and possibly England, have been knocked out of the war.

TO SHORTEN WAR

"A second front now will shorten the war, and save the lives of hundreds of coal miners in Maryland and their sons' lives. To oppose or ridicule the second front proposition because President Roosevelt, or Wendell Willkie, or Russia, or the CIO, or the Democrats or the Communists support it, is to play Hitler's game."

Meyers, who is president of the largest Textile Workers Union local in Maryland and comes from a family of coal miners, declared that the attitude of Lewis toward the war against Hitler and Fascism is the true measure of difference between him and the CIO.

"The disagreement exists with Mr. Lewis and not with the rank and file of the United Mine Workers, Meyers said, pledging the CIO Council's support "in any mutual undertaking which leads to the betterment of the lives and the living conditions of the members of District 16 of the UMWA."

Urge Allied Labor Body

London, Aug. 8—(ALN)—A plea for the formation of an international Council of Trade Unions, "to consider questions of common concern in relation to the war and the coming peace," is made by A. M. Wall, general secretary of the London Society of Compositors, in an article in the July issue of the London Typographical Journal, his union organ.

"Though the unity of organized labor in all the United Nations is beyond question, it has so far found no organic expression," writes Mr. Wall, who is one of the leading figures in the Trades Union Congress. "It is of vital importance to create an international organization for the trade unions of the British Commonwealth, the United States, the Latin Republics of South America, for India and Asia as well as for the countries of Europe and the USSR. The International Federation of Trade Unions, which is largely European in its outlook and policy, does not fill the bill."

Europe Awaits 2nd Front

London, Aug. 8—(ALN)—The peoples of Europe are eagerly awaiting a second front, Walter Schevenels, secretary of the International Federation of Trade Unions, told the annual convention of the National Federation of Building Trades Operatives, recently held in York.

"When you start your second front on this side of Europe," Schevenels said, "you will find everybody ready, as ready as the French people of St. Nazaire, to fight with you and take any of the risks which you have taken alone for so long."

George Gibson, ex-chairman of the Trades Union Congress, speaking to the convention as a fraternal delegate from the TUC, warned that certain persons in Britain did not want to see the total destruction of German fascism.

"Beware of the Sixth Columnists, who might make peace with the German army once it had kicked Hitler out," Gibson said.

The Building Trades Operatives, with a membership of more than 300,000, voted to open negotiations for a three pence an hour (8 cents) increase in the basic wage rate for the industry. J. W. Stevenson, president of the union, announced that building workers expect a full meal per day at their place of work. The whole rationing scheme, he said, was built on the assumption that the worker would get at least one meal a day away from home.

Urges British War Workers To Visit U. S.

London, Aug. 8—(ALN)—The surest and most effective way of telling the people of America what the British people are doing to win the war would be to send to the United States a delegation of British factory workers, Negley Farson, noted American author and war correspondent, wrote in a recent article in the London Daily Mail.

"I know some of the people you send to America," Farson wrote. "I cannot imagine any American workman listening to them with any other feeling than frustrated rage. Unless you arrange some immediate interchange of the national workers of this country and the United States, you are letting go by default the one battle against the Nazis which you might have won without losing a man. And when I say 'workers,' I mean a man, say, in an airplane factory here, taken straight from the lathe or the assembly line."

Pointing out that such a rank and file delegation would not only be able to obtain an accurate picture of what U. S. workers are thinking and doing, but would also be able to learn valuable lessons in production technique, Farson added: "Send some young, representative, eager engineers, who would both give and gain greatly from this trip. Send some Yorkshiremen—some steel workers from Sheffield.

Two Million English Workers Ask MP's 'Why Are We Waiting?'

LONDON, Aug. 8—(ALN)—Reflecting the growing impatience of the British people, particularly the five million well-equipped soldiers and the organized workers, at the delay in attacking Hitler at a time when his forces are being withdrawn from France to bolster the Nazi offensive in the Caucasus, a delegation of more than a thousand trade unionists, representing over two million key war workers, yesterday besieged the House of Commons to urge the immediate opening of a second front in western Europe.

This delegation climaxed a week of mass second front meetings throughout the country. A petition for a second front, signed by four hundred shop stewards representing the workers in London's aircraft factories, was yesterday taken to No. 10 Downing Street and handed to the Prime Minister.

Reports reaching here indicate that the importance of last Sunday's Second Front Rally in Trafalgar Square, attended by nearly 70,000 people, was not fully conveyed to the United States. Trade union leaders who spoke represented two and a half million British workers. Members of Parliament from three political parties were on the platform.

A highspot of the Trafalgar Square rally came when the chairman, William Rust, read a cabled message of greeting from New York's Madison Square second front rally, held last week. A message was also read from "that Cockney lad, Charlie Chaplin." The crowd shouted back the last five words of his message: "What are we waiting for?"

After standing for three hours tightly packed around the base of the towering Nelson Column, the vast crowd resolved: "Expressing our ardent will to win, and inspired by the heroic deeds of our Soviet allies, we address this message to the Prime Minister with the demand that the agreement made with the USSR on the second front be carried out with audacity and despatch. Strike now in the west!"

A considerable proportion of the crowd consisted of uniformed soldiers, sailors and RAF men. Private Constantine Olynyk, who fought in the International Brigade in Spain and who is now in the Toronto Scottish regiment, was one of the speakers. He brought a message from his six brothers, all of whom are in the Red Army. Peggy McCilven, wife of a British corporal now fighting in Egypt, came straight from work in a war factory employing 13,000 workers. Her husband, she said, kept writing home to say that his comrades were impatiently awaiting a second front in Europe. "As for the women," she said, "the factories are our battlefields, and we are ready to work until we drop to provide arms for that second front."

This correspondent, who conducts a Servicemen's column in the London Daily Mirror, which has a circulation of over two million, can attest to the fact that the men in Britain's armed forces want a second front. Last week-end a delegation representing the entire sergeants' mess of a brigade of Guards came to see me with this unanimous resolution: "We feel ashamed as we read of the magnificent exploits of our Russian allies, while we stand by idle. We are not amateur strategists. We are fully trained professional soldiers who know that a second front is technically possible. We who would do the fighting and dying are ready to fight and die."

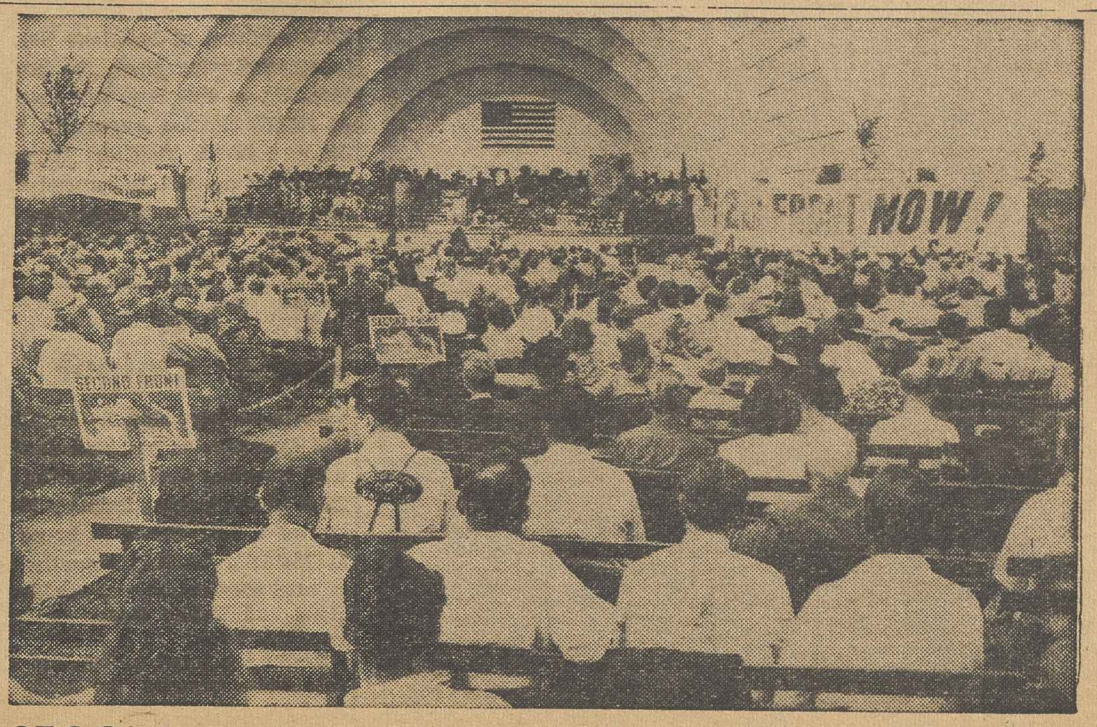
Chinese Miners Study U. S.

Chungking, Aug. 8—(ALN)—Chinese miners, in the small coal and iron mines organized by Chinese Industrial Cooperatives deep in the interior of China, are studying the early history of Ohio, Pennsylvania and Kentucky to learn how American industrial pioneers solved the same problems now facing China: lack of skilled labor, shortage of machinery, slowness of communications.

Indusco miners in the hills of Szechwan are turning out coal and iron with methods remarkably similar to those used by hardy American miners in the Appalachians at the end of the 18th century. Hundreds of small new mines have been opened and old openwork mines are being dug six or seven times deeper. American experience has been used to improve drainage and ventilation.

USE WATERWHEELS

Waterwheels, adapted by Indusco engineers, are bringing power to the countryside for the first time. Cooperative machine shops are making sewing machines and looms. One wool spinner in the mountains of Kansu read about Indusco in a month-old paper, trekked twenty days to the nearest regional headquarters, and came away with drawings of a new type of broad loom. As a result, cooperative and private shops in an entire new district are now producing cloth which is distributed throughout China.



SECOND FRONT: 20,000 workers gathered in Chicago's Grant Park to pledge support for President Roosevelt and the U. S.-British-USSR agreement for a second front and to urge its immediate opening against Hitler in Europe. Meeting was called by the Chicago CIO Council.

Why We Fight

The Nazi 'Race Heroes' At Work in Poland

(This is a story as horrible as anything in the bloody history of aggression. It tells a brutal history of German Nazi sadism against the Jewish people of Poland, whom the Nazis have decided to exterminate. It was received from underground sources, and put out by the American office of the General Jewish Workers' Union of Poland. Similar stories of officially ordered Nazi cruelty have been told of every country the German army has invaded. Hitler's killers of course don't confine themselves to Jews. Conquered and invaded people of every race, color, creed and political belief are similarly murdered every day.)

In October 1941, the entire Jewish population of Konin County—some 3,000 persons—was driven together in Zagorov (Germans today called the village—Hinterberg). Every Jew, previous to his arrival in Zagarov, was compelled to pay 4 Reichmarks tax per head, and to subject himself to medical examination. This examination was imposed on all men, ages 14 to 60, and all women, ages 14 to 50. Its purpose, ostensibly, was to determine everyone's ability to work.

Following this examination routine, the transportation of the Jews took place. They were herded into trucks and sent off—60 at a time. Each could take with him a kit of personal necessities weighing no more than one pound.

EVERY TRACE LOST

Their journey was to end at the Kaszimir woods, in the area of Zagorov. At that point, the truck was to stop and the Jews were to be led into the woods. From that moment on, no more would be heard of the Jews, and every trace of them would be lost. Searches, letters of inquiry, or specially-dispatched messengers—in the Reich itself or in Districts controlled by the Government General—would prove fruitless.

There is no doubt, however, that the German gendarmerie knew the real purpose of the trip. All Jews who had been taken, disappeared. There were rumors that they were being confined in a castle in Chelmno from where they would be taken, in groups, into the neighboring Lubrotzk woods and murdered.

The arriving groups would first be taken into the Chelmno church. The church and its vicinity would be lined with uniformed Gestapo agents and civilians. Then, too, there would be stationed, in the area surrounding the church, a large number of gendarmes. At no time did it happen that victims of two separate transports had the opportunity of meeting, or that an outsider found himself on the castle grounds. The arrivals were, at the start, treated very courteously and kindly. They were helped in getting down from the truck, etc.

TO THE SLAUGHTER

Finally, the entire group would be led, through the previously-mentioned steps, into the "bath;" in reality, however, they were taken through a bitterly-cold hallway to the ramp. There, the Germans' treatment of the Jews would suddenly change. With whips and gun butts the Jews would be driven into the execution auto.

SCENES HORRIBLE

Here occurred scenes of intense despair and horrible fear. Jews would pray loudly. The auto—there were two of this type—was a large, gray truck. Its rear door locked hermatically, permitting no air whatsoever to get in. The walls of the truck were lined with tin, the floor—with ladders, under which were pipe-openings, approximately 15 centimeters in diameter, covered with sieve wire. These pipes were part of the gas mechanism found at the front of the auto and regulated by the chauffeurs.

After the victims were thrown into the truck, it was hermetically sealed. The auto would drive into the woods, located some 7 kilometers away, in the direction of Kolo, and travel about 15 minutes. On the left of the road, some two hundred steps from the path, one came upon the execution place, encircled with gendarmes who were armed with machine guns. In one corner was a big dugout, 5 meters deep and one by one-and-one-half meters wide—below, and five meters wide—above. At this spot were gathered about 30 Germans (gendarmes, SS men, and civilians), and from 20 to 50 Jewish grave-diggers, naked, but for the shirts they wore. The truck would halt about 100 meters from the grave. The chauffeur, who served both as chauffeur and as executioner, would turn on the gas apparatus and leave the truck. Both chauffeurs were SS men in uniform.

From the truck would come stifled cries, howls, and pounding on the walls. After a quarter-hour, however, all was quiet. Then the chauffeur would go into the truck driver's compartment, and turning on an electric switch-light, peek through the window into the truck's gas chamber. Having made certain that the victims were dead, he would drive the truck nearer towards the grave.

After a five-minute wait, the SS officer, commander of this execution area and sadist par excellence, would order the truck opened. The command of this chief—known as "Bikovitz," because he always paraded with a "bikovitz" (whip) in hand—was instantly obeyed. No sooner was the truck chamber opened than a stinging odor of gas filled the air.

A little while thereafter, eight Jewish gravediggers would proceed with their job. Four would toss down the dead bodies, two of their colleagues would hurl the corpses into the graves, while two others would place them in position. The truck chamber itself had a horrible appearance, although the men and women who perished in the chamber looked as if they were simply asleep. All the victims were, however, smeared with excrement—probably because of the effect of the gas and the horrible fear.

NAZI GHOULS

The burial itself was likewise beastly brutal. Two German civilians would again examine every corpse, so as to rob the dead of their last belonging. They would fling off rings from the fingers, and lockets, too. With pliers, they would extract golden teeth from the mouths of the victims, and make certain that there were no hidden articles of value on the backs of the men, or in the sex organs of the women.

The desecrated and robbed bodies would then be placed in rows in the grave, under the direction of the SS man who, twig in hand, supervised all operations. The head of one victim would be laid at the feet of another, and in the spare room which remained children were placed. One such sector totalled 200 victims. Following their burial, a second layer of victims would be placed upon it.

"GRATIFICATION"

The 60-year old German "Bikovitz," to whom we previously referred, was often drunk, and would lash the grave-diggers mercilessly. Almost daily, SS officers would arrive at the execution place, to "see how things were going." In audible voices, they expressed their gratification.

One day—on January 13th—this incident occurred: a baby, bundled in a pillow, chanced to survive the gas in the execution truck—and lived. The child was promptly murdered with machine gun bullets.

The neighboring Polish population displayed a great deal of sympathy for three who escaped, and aided them. These Poles realize that the same horrible fate might also await them, and they say: "In Chelmo, both Jews and gypsies are being slaughtered. When the Nazis will be finished with them, they will turn on us."

Biggest Brass Election Set

Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 8—Over 7,000 employes at America's largest brass fabricating plant, the Scovill Mfg. Co. in this city, will vote in an NLRB election August 19. The Mine Mill & Smelter Workers Union has the AFL to contend with at a small plant unit employing 400 and only "no union" as opposition at the main plant.

Talk Over Timber Output

Portland, Ore., Aug. 8—An informal discussion of problems dealing with traveling time and waiting periods in the logging industry highlighted a CIO dinner in honor of L. Metcalfe Walling, recently appointed administrator of the Wage-Hour and Public Contracts Acts, here this week.

Walling pointed to benefits the acts have brought thousands of workers and said that the Wage-Hour Act will be of even greater use after the war as one of the buttresses to support a system of economic equality.

The Upper Crust

"The way I figure it, dear, if they freeze wages we'll have more money."

Lewis Goon Squads Beat Up CIO Men, Sign Stooge Contract

FT. SMITH, Ark., Aug. 8—Ernest Marsh, international secretary of the United Furniture workers and Vice President Bernard Hiatt were set upon and beaten by henchmen of John L. Lewis' District 50, it was reported here this week.

"Spiritual and financial leader of this disruptionist attack is Dave Fowler, provisional head of District 21, United Mine Workers," Local 281 of the Furniture Workers declared in a statement on the campaign being waged against the local by Lewis forces.

UFW leaders accused Fowler of conspiring with the management of the Ward Co., which is preparing to produce gliders on a government contract, to break up the UFW local.

'INDECENT HASTE'

"A handful of employes were herded together and voted to dissolve UFW Local 281," the union stated. "Hardly had this been done, when with almost indecent haste, the management signed a contract with District 50, despite the fact that the UFW agreement has until 1943 to run."

Announcing that warrants charging assault and battery had been sworn out against the men who attacked Marsh and Hiatt, Local 281 stated that "the disruptionist District 50 elements are becoming panicky. Despite collusion and threats, there has been remarkably little enthusiasm aroused for the Lewis organization."

CIO Unions Fight Defeatist Congressmen

Washington, Aug. 8.—One of the most vocal anti-labor candidates in the country took a sound drubbing this week in Kansas as reports from primary elections there and elsewhere over the nation poured into the capital.

The man who stuck his neck out to get it chopped off was U. S. Senator Clyde M. Reed, who was bested for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination by Andrew Schoeppel, former football star.

Reed, whose Senatorial term expires in 1944, promised that he would sponsor anti-labor legislation if elected governor.

Meanwhile, in preparation for later primaries, organized labor was uniting to elect win-the-war, progressive candidates and to defeat reactionaries opposed to the Roosevelt Administration's program.

In Baltimore, the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods joined to form an organization known as the Maryland Labor Unity Conference, which will try to elect several candidates from labor's ranks as well as those deemed friendly to labor.

In New York, the Book & Magazine Guild and the American Communications Assn. joined with other union and progressive forces in supporting the candidacy of Senator James M. Mead, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for governor.

Endorsement of Representative Vito Marcantonio for re-election came from the Greater N. Y. Industrial Union Council.

And in New Jersey, representatives of all camps of labor were uniting behind the campaign of President Irving Abramson, of the State CIO Council, for Congress from the fifth district.

Jersey's American Labor League, which is backing Abramson, also endorsed the candidacy of U. S. Senator William H. Smathers for reelection.

The league cited his consistent voting record in favor of measures designed to aid labor and his staunch support of President Roosevelt's foreign and domestic policies.

Spy Suspect Gained Spurs by Union Busting!

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 15—(FP)—The Rev. Kurt E. B. Molzahn, now on trial here as a Nazi spy, was formerly adviser to a company union at the Philadelphia plant of the General Electric Co. This was revealed by the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Molzahn's red-baiting resulted in a defeat for the union in the first Labor Board election at the plant several years ago. In a subsequent election, the CIO union was the winner.

Molzahn was indicted with Wilhelm Kunze and Otto Willumeit, Bund leaders, and Count Aniastase Vonsiatsky, head of the Russian fascists.

WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

Labor Warns:

Shortages Threaten War Output

Washington, Aug. 15—Shortages in basic war materials may cause a slow-down of vital production, or even complete factory shutdowns in 1,000 plants, the Labor Advisory Committee of the WPB has warned high government officials, it was learned this week.

In a resolution passed at a recent meeting of the six-man committee, the union officials reported that several thousand men had been laid off during July because of shortages which hampered war output.

The committee is a six-man group, three from CIO and three from AFL. The CIO members are Clinton Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers; Pres. John Green of the shipyard union; and Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak of the electrical workers.

Reports indicated that Lt. Gen. Brehon Somervell, chief of the Army Service of Supply, had sent a number of messages to WPB Chief Donald Nelson warning of shutdowns and lay-offs.

CIO'S PREDICTION

All the storm warnings bore out predictions of CIO labor months ago when it criticized business-as-usual policies among the dollar-a-year men and demanded adoption of a series of production plans along the lines of the Murray Industry Council Plan.

Meanwhile the Tolan committee investigating interstate migration of defense workers added its voice to mounting criticism against bungling on the production front.

The committee confirmed frequent labor charges that conversion is still just getting under way, that the durable goods industries are still producing more civilian material than munitions, that peak war production will not be attained until the end of 1942, and that small firms are still on the outside looking in at war contracts or sub-contracts.

"There has nowhere been evidence of any intention on the part of the responsible officials, civilian or military, to regard it as their job to demand maximum output or to move heaven and earth to get it," the committee asserted.

Warner Bros. Signs With CIO In Jersey

Newark, N. J., Aug. 15—An agreement covering all the Warner Brothers theaters and buildings in Passaic county was announced here this week at the CIO regional office.

The contract which covers 200 employes, including cashiers, ushers, porters, cleaners, matrons and doormen, is the first of its kind to be signed by a major movie company in the country.

ESCAPED FROM JAPS: Miss Elsie Fairfax Cholmeley, member of the CIO Office & Professional Workers in New York, who escaped from Japanese-controlled Hong Kong last December. A research worker for the Institute of Pacific Relations, Miss Cholmeley nursed the injured in Hong Kong hospitals during the battle, later escaped to China with four members of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union.

Back FDR's 7-Point Program

New York, Aug. 15—Full endorsement of President Roosevelt's seven point anti-inflation program was expressed by the Joint Board of the Fur Dresser and Dyers Union, CIO, in a resolution passed this week.

The resolution called for taxation based on ability to pay, for an avoidance of the sales tax, for democratic rationing and strict price fixing.

Murray Talks In Pennsy Labor Day

Pittsburgh, Aug. 15—Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO will deliver his Labor Day address at a big victory rally sponsored by the Allegeny County Industrial Union Council at New Kensington, Pa., on Sept. 7.

Thousands of unionists from the coal mines, steel mills, aluminum, electrical, glass and other factories in this industrial area will hear his address.

Members of local unions within a 100-mile radius have been invited to attend. A huge parade, in which several thousand coal miners will participate, is planned for the holiday. Several hundred air raid wardens are also expected to march, along with a detachment of Army troops from the camp at Indiantown Gap.

Invitations have been extended to all civic and fraternal organizations in the area to participate in the festivities. The Office of Civilian Defense will stage a bomb demonstration at Falcon Park, where the field activities will take place, and the Red Cross is preparing special exhibits.

A campaign for the sale of war bonds and stamps will be staged all along the route of the parade.

Renew Plea For Victory War Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Labor testimony for a victory tax program from two unions—the CIO American Communications Assn. and the New York Teachers Union—and a demand for a tax bill to carry out the President's seven-point war economy program marked the third week of hearings before the Senate Finance Committee here.

The week was also marked by a new appeal for the sales tax from the Natl. Association of Manufacturers, which had the dubious honor of first raising the outcry for an eight percent levy on workers' food budgets before the House Committee some months ago.

Meantime, the tax bill crawled slowly toward a vote in the Senate, with all indications that it would be put over until a more comfortable time for a record vote—that is, after the November elections.

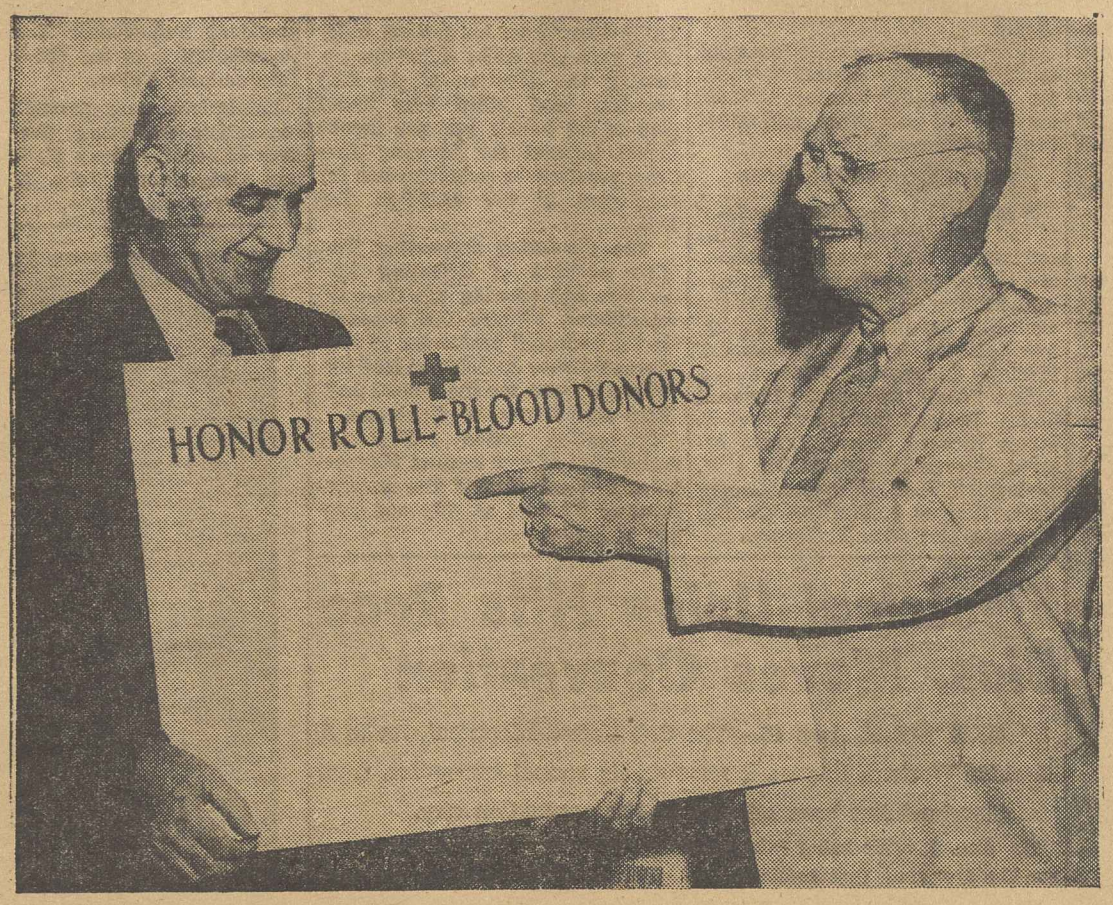
ABILITY TO PAY

Both the CIO Communications Assn. and the Teachers Union of N. Y. made strong pleas for taxes based on ability to pay, and for an end to all talk about the sales tax as a threat to workers' living standards and to war production.

"Victory in this war depends on soldiers in production as well as soldiers in the battlefield," the ACA said. "These production soldiers must receive enough for themselves and their families to produce the materials of war. We must have a tax program that does not hinder America's ability to produce."

Labor observers here pointed out that the delay in the Senate vote on the bill could serve two functions—one to allow sales tax promoters to continue whipping up their propaganda for a tax on food and other necessities, the other to allow labor and progressive forces to redouble their campaign for a victory tax bill for 1942.

They urged union men and women to keep on bombarding their Senators with these demands—taxes on ability to pay, an end to loopholes, no sales tax.



BACK BLOOD DONOR PROJECT: Pledging support of their organizations to the Red Cross drive for blood, CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. William Green examine an honor roll for posting union blood donations. Local unions in cities having Red Cross blood donor centers will appoint committee chairmen to encourage members to volunteer as donors. Goal is a total of 50,000 donors weekly.

Big Steel Pay Hearings Open Aug. 19

Washington, Aug. 15—The War Labor Board ordered hearings Aug. 18 on the United Steelworkers' demands for wage increases, maintenance of membership and check-off of union dues among the quarter million employes of the powerful United States Steel Corp.

The union's demands, identical with the recommendations of the War Labor Board in the Little Steel case a month ago, were unacceptable to Big Steel during conferences last week. The meetings broke up without an agreement being reached.

In taking jurisdiction over the case, the WLB indicated swift action would be in order. The board dispensed with its usual procedure of setting up a fact-finding panel for a study of the case.

Joe Murray, Son of CIO Head, Enlists in Army

Pittsburgh, Aug. 15—Joseph Murray, son of CIO Pres. Philip Murray, has enlisted in the Army as a private.

Young Murray, 26 years old and the father of a three-year-old boy, has been official photographer of the United Steelworkers of America for the past several years.

'All-Out For Victory Over Axis' Theme of CIO Unions' Conventions

Auto Union Assails Pay Freezing, Asks 'Economic Council'

CHICAGO, Aug. 15—Pres. R. J. Thomas and Secretary-Treasurer George Addes were reelected by acclamation as the biggest and most unified convention yet held by the UAW-CIO drew to its close. The convention adjourned late Sunday after adopting a win-the-war program dealing with most of the major national and international issues of the day.

Two vice presidents were added to the international officers, and Richard T. Frankensteen and Walter P. Reuther were elected by acclamation to these positions, after other nominees declined to run.

HIT CONFUSION, DELAY

Criticizing lack of coordination and "confusion, waste and delay" in the organization of war production, the convention called upon President Roosevelt to create a Supreme Economic Council, including representatives of management, labor and government, "to act as the Economic High Command in the organization and direction of our entire war economy."

Denouncing jurisdictional disputes as harmful to the war effort, the 1700 delegates urged the establishment of a national board for the settlement of such disputes. The resolution called for a board composed of one CIO representative, one AFL representative and a third member to be mutually agreed upon.

STAND ON INDIA

Taking note of the present conflict in India over national independence, the UAW-CIO declared that "the claim of the Indian people to their independence is a just and democratic one, fully in accord with the liberating and democratic aim of this war."

The convention asked President Roosevelt to request the British government to "take steps necessary to win the support of the Indian people and to avert civil strife in India," urging an agreement with the Indian Congress. While declaring that independence is necessary to make India a "full-fledged ally of the United Nations" and to win the war, the resolution criticized Gandhi's tactics as placing a barrier in the way of the United Nations' war effort.

HIT WAGE FREEZING

The convention adopted strong resolutions against wage freezing and in favor of wage stabilization as proposed by President Roosevelt. It criticized the War Labor Board for refusing to raise wages sufficiently to meet higher living costs in the Little Steel case and urged a wage stabilization program that will: (1) raise sub-standard wages to guarantee health and productive efficiency; (2) eliminate wage inequalities on a plant, regional and national basis; and (3) safeguard workers against loss of established real wage levels through increased living costs.

The OPA was denounced for its "false economic theories" and for its attempts to establish wage freezing. The inflationary menace should be met by checking "its real causes—speculation, hoarding and profiteering," the resolution declared, calling for "a full system of rationing."

BACK ROOSEVELT

In repeated unanimously adopted actions, the delegates threw all their support behind President Roosevelt and the war effort, expressing their solidarity with labor and the peoples of all the United Nations. They urged the national CIO to initiate an international labor conference, to which the labor organizations of all the world, including the AFL and the railroad brotherhoods, should be invited.

After the first resolution against anti-Negro discriminations had been rejected as too weak, the convention adopted a stronger resolution urging enforcing powers for the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee; investigation of KKK and other anti-Negro activities; the introduction of Negro workers into plants where none are now employed; and the establishment of mixed regiments in the U. S. Army.

Salaries of officers were increased to $9,000 for the president, $8,500 for the secretary-treasurer, $7,000 for the vice presidents, and $5,000 for board members.

REFERENDUM ON DUES

A proposal to increase dues from $1 to $1.50 was voted down, but the convention later voted to submit the matter to a referendum vote.

Many Parleys Slated During Next Six Weeks

Washington, Aug. 15—With the approach of September, popular month for conventions, a number of CIO national unions and state councils have issued calls for annual parleys.

According to information received at the national CIO office the conventions called during the next six weeks include:

Iowa-Nebraska Council, Cedar Rapids, Ia., Aug. 20.

Arkansas Council, Ft. Smith, Ark., Aug. 22.

Colorado Council, Denver, Sept. 4.

Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers, Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 5.

United Office & Professional Workers, Albany, N. Y., Sept. 5.

United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, Cleveland, Sept. 7.

Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, Denver, Sept. 14.

Indiana Council, Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 18.

United Rubber Workers, Akron, Ohio, Sept. 21.

Missouri Council, Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 26.

The National Council of Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers has also scheduled a convention to meet in Niagara Falls, N. Y., Sept. 10, to take up the question of forming a national union affiliated with the CIO.

Office Workers To Meet

New York, Aug. 15—Notice that the fourth convention of the United Office & Professional Workers will be held at the De Witt Clinton Hotel, Albany, N. Y., instead of at Atlantic City, was announced this week at the union's headquarters here.

The date has also been changed from Sept. 14-19, as first announced, to Sept. 5-10.

"Directing its every effort toward winning the war, the UOPWA willingly altered its convention plans on the advice of officers of the U. S. Army," the union stated.

"Competent Army spokesmen offered the opinion that, because of the Air Force Replacement Training Center which the Army has established in Atlantic City, no hotels with adequate facilities for the UOPWA's convention would be available in September.

"Since the union's recent victory in an election of the Prudential Insurance Company's agents in New York State and the signing last month of a statewide contract covering more than 4,000 Prudential agents, the UOPWA has received charter applications from Albany and other upstate cities.

"A charter is being granted to a new local of insurance agents in Albany who are already preparing to act as hosts to the convention."

Minnesota Council Urges Offensive

By RAY MUNSON

Ely, Minn., Aug. 15—Urging that a second front be opened in Western Europe now, the Minnesota CIO assembled in its Fifth Annual Convention here last week-end called for enactment of the President's seven-point anti-inflation program and fully supported Philip Murray and the national executive board as against the defeatist policies of John L. Lewis.

Sander Genis, manager of the Twin City Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, was elected president of the State CIO Council to replace Frank Ellis, PWOC, who resigned two months ago because of ill health. Leonard Lageman was returned to the position of secretary-treasurer.

BROPHY CITES TASKS

John Brophy, national CIO director of industrial union councils, addressed the convention on the subject "A Plan for the 1940's," placing the winning of the war as the number-one task facing labor and the nation and stressing the need for full participation of labor and all forward looking democratic forces in shaping the peace.

Convention resolutions backed Philip Murray on his call for unity talks with the AFL; called for extending the adoption of the CIO American and Allied War Relief plan of an hour's pay per month to all unions; for banning Jim-Crow practices in industry; and for enactment of the Anti-Poll Tax Bill.

The resolution supporting the CIO position of defeating appeasers and electing win-the-war candidates, pledged full support to the endorsed candidates of the Farmer-Labor Association lead by Elmer Benson for the Senate and Paul Rasmussen for Governor.

Convention action calling for declaration of war against Mannerheim Finland termed the government of Finland an ally and puppet of Hitler.

Wyoming CIO Hails Murray War Policies

Casper, Wyo., Aug. 15—Policies followed by CIO President Philip Murray and the national CIO were wholeheartedly endorsed by delegates to the fourth convention of the Wyoming CIO Industrial Union Council which met here last week.

It was the largest convention held since the State Council was first established.

In his report to the delegates, Council President Ray Maki quoted the words of Benjamin Franklin at the signing of the Declaration of Independence—"We must hang together or assuredly we shall all hang separately"—as good advice for labor in the present war situation.

He called upon labor to hang together to bring about the early defeat of the tyrannical forces now striving to destroy freedom throughout the world.

Resolutions were passed by the convention endorsing the candidacy of Senator Harry H. Schwartz and Congressman John J. McIntyre for re-election.

Colorado Council to Reorganize

Denver, Colo., Aug. 15—A call to the fourth annual convention of the Colorado State Industrial Union Council to convene here Sept. 4, has been issued by Frank Bonacci, CIO regional director and acting president of the Council.

Bonacci, who has headed the Council since the resignation of Frank Hefferly, district president of the United Mine Workers, said that the convention was called to reorganize the State Council and to conduct such business as may be properly brought before it.

John Brophy, CIO director of Industrial Union Councils, has accepted an invitation to address the delegates.

Farm Equipment Meeting Sept. 11; To Form Union

Chicago, Aug. 15—A constitutional convention to set up an international union in the farm equipment industry has been called by the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee. The parley will be held in Peoria, Ill., Sept. 11-12.

In addition to electing officers and drawing up a constitution, the convention is expected to take action on important problems facing the union in war time, including the conversion of the farm equipment industry to full war production.

FEWOC officials said that from the standpoint of consolidation and organizational gains, the union's first convention will be held at the peak of its progress so far.

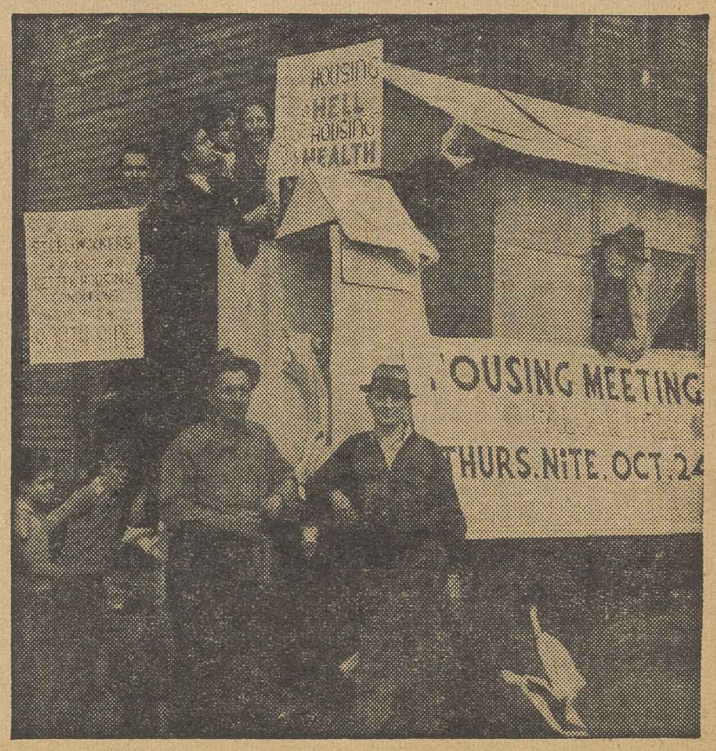
Electrical Union Hits Race Bias, Moves Convention

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers this week removed its annual convention from Cleveland has been selected as the convention city.

On Aug. 7, after being informed for the first time that Indianapolis hotels do not permit Negroes to take rooms or eat in restaurants, the UE gave the hotel owners and the city administration three days to withdraw the discrimination rules.

"We do not intend to bargain on this issue with the hotel proprietors of Indianapolis or any other city," the union statement said. "Either they do the right and American thing—or else.

"This union is not only 100% opposed to such discriminatory practices but it is making in plants and shops of our industry a big contribution to the whole fight against this and all other forms of fascism."



HOUSING for war workers is demand of the United Steelworkers of America (USA-CIO) in a parade at Pittsburgh which dramatized importance of adequate housing in the heart of the steel industry.

Labor Backing Mead at New York Democratic Parley

Supported by labor, progressives and President Roosevelt, Sen. James Mead is seeking the Democratic gubernatorial nomination against John J. Bennett, state attorney general. Bennett's political field marshal is Jim Farley, former Postmaster General, whose longtime friendship with the President developed first into cool aloofness and now into an open fight.

Tom Dewey, who fell before the Willkie forces at the 1930 GOP convention, will undoubtedly be the Republican candidate. Labor and progressive groups in the Empire State have warned that only Mead can defeat him. The Senator has strong support from the American Labor Party.

The convention comes less than a week after primary election contests for all other offices. The voting found Ham Fish, discredited pal of Nazi agents walking away with the Republican nomination in his largely rural area along the Hudson. Fish will probably be re-elected by his traditionally Republican district, which includes the Hyde Park home of Pres. Roosevelt.

In New York City, Rep. Vito Marcantonio won renomination on all three tickets—Republican, Democratic and American Labor Party. He had the endorsement of the New York City CIO and of Mayor LaGuardia.

OHIO VICTORIES

From other sections of the nation came reports of the defeat of two outstanding foes of the win-war program. In Cleveland, Rep. Martin Sweeney was defeated by a CIO-endorsed opponent, Michael Feighen. Sweeney's bitter criticism of the President had gained him strong opposition from labor groups.

John McSweeney, a former Representative, gained the Democratic nomination to oppose Republican John Bricker for the Ohio Governorship. He had the endorsement of the CIO throughout the state.

Nebraska's Senatorial primary found Rep. Harry B. Coffee, an outspoken foe of labor, badly licked in a seven-man contest. Coffee's opponents charged his war record was "obstructionist."

Foster May, a 37-year-old radio announcer, won the Democratic nomination, but friends of Sen. George W. Norris indicated the veteran dean of Senate liberals might run as an independent. In 1936 he defeated both Republican and Democratic conservatives to win another term in the Upper House.

Another labor victory occurred in the recent Kansas voting, where Sen. Clyde Reed sought the Governorship nomination on a platform almost entirely concerned with alleged racketeering by labor. Opposed by CIO, AFL and the railroad brotherhoods, Reed was soundly trounced, with the labor-supported candidate, Andrew Schoeppel, receiving a 40,000 plurality.

Harvey Fremming, CIO regional director in Kansas City, commented that workers' votes were largely responsible for Reed's defeat.

"We have beaten back one more distinct enemy of labor," Fremming said. Reed will continue to fill his unexpired term in the Senate. The Kansas primary found many workers temporarily changing their party affiliation from Democratic to Republican in order to help defeat their foe.

In New Jersey, meanwhile, CIO, AFL and brotherhoods are warming up for the state primaries in September. Irving Abramson, president of the state CIO council and head of the national CIO war relief committee, is a Congressional aspirant from the heavily-industrialized eighth district near Paterson.

Essex County (Newark) labor is mobilizing for the defeat of Rep. Fred Hartley, a long-time Republican isolationist and enemy of labor. A united labor victory committee hailed the action of a "clean government" group within the GOP which is seeking Hartley's defeat.

Big Electric Firms Grant Pay Increase

New York, Aug. 15.—Consideration of a wage offer from General Electric was scheduled at a meeting of all GE locals of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers called here today.

At the same time, an increase won by the union's Westinghouse workers was confirmed following action of the War Labor Board in Washington. The increase, amounting to $25,000,000 annually, had been secured but was held up pending government approval.

The amount of the wage offer by General Electric was not made public as the GE meeting got under way, but it will be retroactive April 8 if accepted by the union.

More than 100,000 workers are affected, according to Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the UERMW. The GE conference consists of elected delegates from all GE locals in the country, with 32 plants represented. Negotiations have been going on since February.

CIO Broadcast Dramatizes Relief Drive

Washington, Aug. 15—A program based on the CIO Allied War Relief Committee's appeal to CIO workers features the regular CIO Labor for Victory broadcast, over the NBC Red Network at 10:15 p.m., Eastern War Time, Saturday, Aug. 15.

The program, part of the regular CIO radio show put on every other Saturday, is a dramatization of the war relief appeal and has Irving Abramson, head of the New Jersey State CIO Council and head of the Allied War Relief Committee, as a main speaker.

CIO's Labor for Victory goes on the air every other Saturday, at 10:15 p.m., over NBC's Red Network. Dates for August and September are: Aug. 15 and 29, Sept. 12 and 26. Tune in on Labor for Victory. It's CIO's own program.

Rally for War

Perth Amboy, N. J., Aug. 15—Thousands of CIO and AFL workers in this busy industrial community turned out for a huge parade and war production rally held here last Sunday night.

Workers and employers from 50 factories in Union and Middlesex counties were behind the demonstration, which was officially called the "United We Stand Victory Rally."

WLB to Review Pay Boosts Won with Aid Of U.S. Conciliators

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—An agreement giving the War Labor Board power to review voluntary wage contracts where the federal Conciliation Service assists in the negotiations, was announced today by heads of the two government agencies.

Signed by Chairman William H. Davis of the WLB and John Steelman of the Labor Dept.'s Conciliation Service, the compact gives the board vastly expanded power to supervise wage rates in American industry. Hitherto, the WLB's direct influence has been limited to cases certified to it for mediation or arbitration.

First case in which the wage agreement was given to the WLB for ratification was that of the CIO electrical union and Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. The board authorized an o. k. for the 5½ cent hourly increase which the union and the company had worked out.

LITTLE STEEL FORMULA

Davis said the board will look into all settlements worked out by the Conciliation Service where the wage stabilization formula worked out in the Little Steel case might be affected. In that case, the board said it would authorize increases of 15% in hourly wage rates over those of Jan. 1, 1941, to allow for the higher cost of living.

"It should be made clear that we have not decided to allow everybody a wage increase of 5½c an hour," Davis added. "In consultation with Dr. Steelman, we have devised a scheme of general application, but we are going to make sure that all increases are within the formula."

Murray Offers Plan To Settle CIO-AFL Disputes

Washington, Aug. 15—Pres. Philip Murray this week reiterated CIO's willingness to have the War Labor Board's four public members arbitrate jurisdictional disputes between CIO and AFL unions.

"The problem is now entirely with the AFL to consent to the proposal made by CIO for peaceful disposition of all jurisdictional disputes without any stoppages of work," Murray wired to Chairman William H. Davis, of the War Labor Board.

The CIO leader's message was the second within a few days on the subject of inter-union disputes—a question that has been brought to the public attention by a strike of AFL construction workers at the General Motors Frigidaire plant in Dayton, Ohio.

AFL WALKED OUT

In that case, AFL members walked out for several days because a CIO unionist was doing some painting work at the plant, which is under contract with the CIO electrical workers union. Davis had replied to Murray's earlier arbitration offer by proposing that the case be brought before the WPB Labor Division's Board of Review, which is dominated by the AFL and usually rules in intra-AFL disputes on war construction jobs.

"We cannot agree to any procedure such as submitting AFL-CIO jurisdictional matters to a Board of Review whose sole purpose is to settle jurisdictional matters affecing only the interests of AFL international unions," Murray told Davis.

Inequalities

CIO President Murray presented to the recent UAW-CIO convention some amazing figures on inequalities which are most harmful to the war effort.

They included the swollen war profits of scores of corporations and huge salary increases for corporation executives. Murray contrasted these with the meager wage increases granted to low-paid workers, which do not even offset increased living costs.

Consider, for example, the following profit increases between 1940 and 1941: Bell Aircraft, 2,820%; Bendix Aviation, 212%; Consolidated Aircraft, 1,000%; General Electric, 80.5%; Acme Steel, 136%; Bethlehem Steel, 57%; General Motors, 52.7%; Hercules Powder, 105%; American Woolen, 409%; American Rolling Mills, 138%.

Murray pointed still further huge profit increases for these and other corporations in the first six months of 1942, ranging from 37 to 326%.

As to the corporation big shots, who have been arguing so fervently against wage increases of a few cents for their employes: Eugene Grace considered 5½%, or 44 cents a day, too much of a boost for the steelworkers. But he took a raise of $55,000 himself—from $478,144 in 1940 to $537,724 in 1941.

Murray put into the record a list of scores of similar salary increases for corporation executives. They range as high as 218%, and all of them involve increases of tens of thousands of dollars in salaries which run into six figures. Included are huge increases for men who do not even have management functions, but just sit on boards of directors to keep an eye on the profits.

We called the above-mentioned figures "amazing" because they will amaze most newspaper readers, who read columns of complaint daily about alleged high wages but not a word of objection to such tremendous profit and salary increases.

Labor does not call attention to such inequalities in any carping spirit. "Its complaint is not one of a selfish nature," Murray said, "calculated to improve its position against somebody else's position."

Labor seeks an end to profiteering inequalities in the interests of national efficiency and morale to win the war. It demands equality of sacrifice so all may do their fair share in a united nation for this all-important purpose.

If maximum war effort is to be achieved, labor and the other low-income groups must not be made to do all the sacrificing. A tax program must be adopted that reaches deep into war profits, that limits the individual incomes of the rich to $25,000, and that distributes the burden according to ability to pay.

Such taxation is one of the President's seven points. All the points of his seven-point program must be equally applied if our whole economy is to be mobilized for speedy victory over the Axis.

A Political "Must"

Abolition of the poll tax is a war measure of immediate importance for victory.

So long as democracy and the right to vote are denied to some 10 million Americans in eight states, Hitler's propagandists can question the sincerity of our democratic war aims.

But, more than that, our democracy must function effectively if we are to have really united effort for victory. To deny large sections of our population their constitutional rights and treat them as Grade B citizens, is to deprive them of their voice in shaping our Victory Drive.

Because so many Americans are denied the right to vote through the poll tax, our country is cursed with a bloc of poll-tax Congressmen, elected by a small minority, who constantly hamstring measures needed to win the war.

The worst enemies of labor in Congress belong to this poll-tax group. Most of them are guilty of disrupting national unity by their constant efforts to turn rich against poor, race against race, middle class against labor, and by their consistent opposition to progressive social legislation that benefits the masses of the common people.

Here are some of the things you can do to remove this poll-tax obstacle from our road to victory:

1. Urge your Congressman to sign the petition to discharge the Geyer anti-poll tax bill, so Congress may vote on it.

2. Write the Senate judiciary committee to report out the Pepper bill, the Senate companion piece of the Geyer bill.

3. Make certain that all candidates for Congress in this year's elections declare themselves at once on the poll-tax question.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE SNEAKING propaganda of racial prejudice and intolerance is the poison gas with which Hitler seeks to prepare the way for his troops in every country. Its stench is now clearly perceptible in the United States. And it is to labor's credit that it is the first to sound the alarm.

A delegation of southern labor representatives has recently visited Washington to call to the attention of President Roosevelt a series of events which fit into a pattern of conspiracy to promote racial strife endangering war production and war unity.

Among these events are the following:

1. An inflammatory speech by Horace C. Wilkinson, former Ku Klux Klan leader, at Bessemer, Ala., which has been widely circulated through the South. Appealing throughout to anti-Negro prejudice, Wilkinson attacked the administration, the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee, and both the Republican party and the New Deal Democrats. He called for formation of a "statewide, southwide and nation-wide" League to Maintain White Supremacy.

2. The rejection by Gov. Dixon of Alabama of a war production contract because it contained the usual non-discrimination clause, and his attack on the Fair Employment Committee, followed by a flood of propaganda against federal attempts to prevent anti-Negro discrimination in war jobs.

3. Dixon's action has been used by anti-union company officials to inflame racial feelings and to attack labor unions—resulting in threats and beatings for union officials and strikes of whites against Negroes or vice versa in ore mines and elsewhere.

4. An outbreak of anti-Negro violence, including the beating and jailing of Roland Hayes, Negro tenor, his wife and daughter at Rome, Ga.; the reported murder of a Negro shipyard worker in Mobile; the lynching of Willie Vinson in Texas; the killing of a Negro soldier in Flagstaff, Ariz.; and the beating of many Negroes in Beaumont, Tex.

5. The political campaign of Gene Talmadge in Georgia based on the single issue of race prejudice, which he is deliberately exploiting.

Racial intolerance and violence are not in themselves a new phenomenon. But the above-mentioned incidents, and others that could be cited, bear evidence of being part of a concerted campaign to promote racial strife for selfish political purposes.

It is reported, for instance, that before Wilkinson made his violent anti-Negro speech, he met with some 25 reactionary southern Congressmen. The widespread propaganda around his speech and Dixon's action also indicate they were more than isolated individual outbursts.

Southern progressives point out that racial prejudice is being deliberately exploited to build a political movement directed against President Roosevelt's war policies, against progressive social legislation and against labor.

One of the most serious immediate effects of all this propaganda of racial intolerance is its impact on war production. Racial disturbances have occurred in northern as well as southern plants, promoted by similar elements in both cases.

The labor unions, particularly those of the CIO, are the strongest forces working to scotch this dangerous conspiracy against national unity and our war effort.

The CIO Steelworkers' locals in Ensley and Fairfield, Ala., for instance, have issued leaflets declaring that "an appeal to racial prejudice is reprehensible at any time, but when made in time of war it is plain treason to our country."

The CIO and its unions have long been doing a splendid job of improving race relations by their insistence on organizing both Negroes and whites and by their opposition to anti-Negro discriminations—so that all workers may come to know each other as fellow-unionists and fellow-Americans, rather than as members of different races.

Liberal southern papers are also joining with labor in opposing the present campaign of race incitement. The Montgomery Advertiser, for instance, takes issue with Governor Dixon in an editorial which emphasizes the importance of Negro labor in war production and declares:

"Whites who understand the war know that defeating the fraudulent New Order based upon German enslavement of other peoples will stand or fall upon success in rallying brown men, yellow men, black men and whites, to the cause."

Reference must also be made to the untiring activities of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare to unite all groups behind the war effort.

The CIO is proud to join with all such patriotic Americans, in north and south, in guarding the home front against disruption through racial strife and other Hitler devices to divide and conquer.

Labor Heads Pledge Full War Output

Washington, Aug. 15.—Short speeches by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, CIO Pres. Philip Murray, AFL Pres. Wm. Green and high government officials and war officers were heard on a national broadcast marking the first combined Army-Navy production award this week.

President Roosevelt's message, while noting the great progress made in victory production, warned that "we have only just begun to get into our stride" in terms of the huge amounts of material needed for final victory.

"The men and women of management and labor who provide such material are performing a task without which victory would be impossible," he said.

"The united efforts of our Army and Navy striking at the enemy on every continent and every ocean, and of our people at home working without interruption to turn out the weapons of war, cannot fail to produce the victory which will again establish the tradition of free men throughout the world."

LABOR'S STAKE

Pres. Murray's speech stressed the full support and united effort of all CIO members to produce the goods that will crush the Hitler Axis.

"We recognize the need for more copper, more lumber, more steel—and all the other materials. We'll give them to you if hard work and cooperation is what it takes. Nothing else is really important now. You can count on the CIO 100 percent."

AFL Pres. Green saw only one objective—"to free the world from oppression, brutality and the creed that one nation has the right to impoverish and enslave all opposed nations. To this task our untiring efforts are dedicated."

Proper use of the materials we have will speed our victory, Wm. L. Batt, vice-chairman of the War Production Board, said in his speech. He appealed to workers to increase raw material output and to all Americans to turn in the scrap needed for victory production.

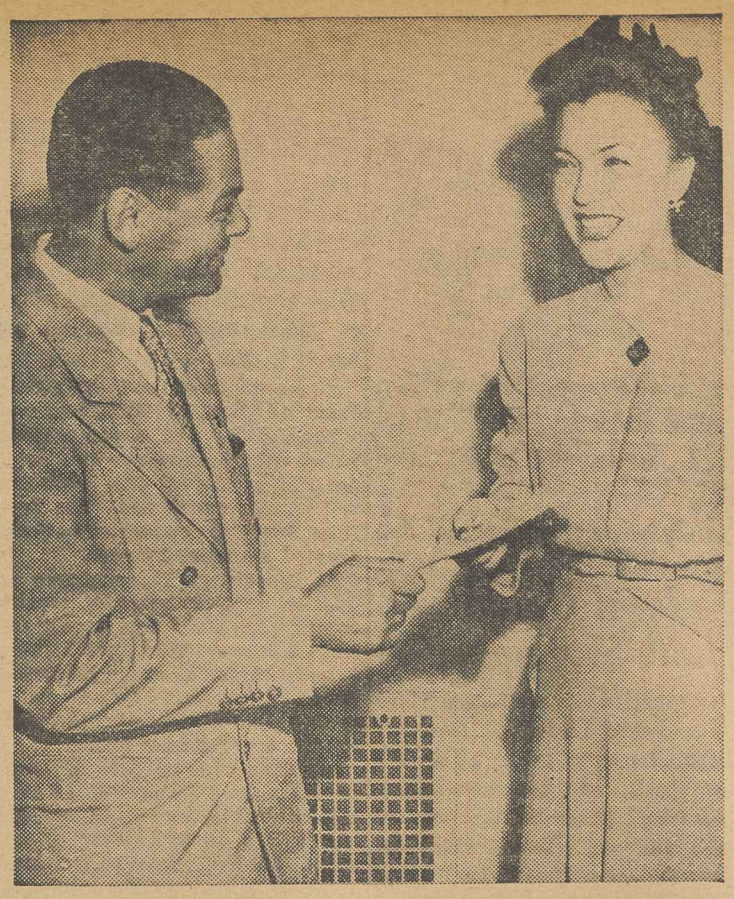
WAR OFFICIALS SPEAK

Elmer Davis, speaking for the Office of War Information, urged increased raw materials output by tapping new sources, reviving abandoned mines and plants, getting in the scrap, and other means.

A brief description of the sufferings of the French people, typical of all who fall under Axis conquest, was given by Admiral Wm. D. Leahy, newly appointed Chief of Staff and former Ambassador to Vichy, France.

Brief speeches from Lt. General Dwight D. Eisenhower in London and Admiral Chester W. Nimitz "somewhere in the Pacific" also featured the program.

Gen. Eisenhower referred to production as a key to a second front, saying: "I will leave it to our enemies to guess where, when, and how we will use the supplies you send. I understand their suspicions have been aroused of late."



ALL OUT FOR CHINA: Pres. Ben Gold of the CIO Fur and Leather Workers Union and Margo, the famous screen star, were all smiles and all-out in helping beleaguered China. The union gave United China Relief $5,000 for a hospital for guerrilla warriors in China's northwest.

28 Union Leaders Ask Housing Funds

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15—Speedy enactment of the Lanham bill, providing $600,000,000 to build additional housing for war workers, was urged upon Congress today in a statement by 28 officers of CIO and AFL international unions and state bodies.

"About 2,000,000 war workers are moving to production centers that have no homes for them. To crowd these workers into hallways and attics, to put them into makeshift trailer camps, to compel them to travel long distances to and from their jobs, or to separate them unnecessarily from their families will inevitably reduce working efficiency and injure morale, while increasing absenteeism and turnover.

ONLY HOPE

"The only immediate hope for housing at least a portion of these workers before winter comes is offered by President Roosevelt's request for a $600,000,000 appropriation. This request, made in May, has been favorably reported by the Public Buildings and Grounds Committee of the House of Representatives.

"Speedy authorization of this minimum amount is essential if America is to produce its sorely needed quota of war materials."

Among the CIO leaders who signed the statement were Vice-Presidents S. H. Dalrymple, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson and R. J. Thomas. Others were heads of several CIO international unions and of state industrial union councils.

Knowles, Bitter Foe of Unions, Gets Army Post

New York, Aug. 15—Appointment of Harper Knowles, notorious anti-Bridges witness in the 1939 deportation hearings, to an Army post was vigorously protested by the Citizens Victory Committee for Harry Bridges this week.

Describing Knowles in the protest, the committee quoted from the report of Dean James M. Landis, Government inspector at the first hearing, who wrote at the time:

"He (Knowles) is neither a candid or forthright witness . . . it was impossible to listen to Knowles without being convinced that on occasion he lied when he dared to."

Knowles' appointment to the Service and Supply Division of the Quartermasters Corps in San Francisco was seen as a slap in the face to CIO longshore workers there.

Greater Efficiency Helps Output 25 Pct., CIO Pamphlet Says

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—War production can be increased as much as 25 per cent without additional manpower or equipment if proper use is made of present supplies of both, the CIO said this week in releasing its newest pamphlet, "Producing for Victory, a Labor Manual for Increasing War Production."

This can be done, the pamphlet says, by planning and carrying out four main steps to increase productivity of labor, and of equipment, and by making most effective use of materials and a system of accurate production controls.

Joint labor-management committees are the logical agency for putting these improvements into effect, and the pamphlet points out that their mainspring in the union, "for only where there is such a union does the problem of fullest possible production in all its aspects get serious recognition and attention."

TIMELY

The pamphlet is timely, CIO Pres. Philip Murray says in a brief foreword, since it is published at a time "when the efforts and energies of all who value freedom and cherish democratic institutions" are going into the job of destroying the Hitler Axis.

A chief factor in increasing production is labor morale, which must be regarded as "a key problem in plants and factories," it points out. This involves proper attention to workers' suggestions, full cooperation between workers and management, careful attention to health, elimination of fatigue, good safety conditions, etc.

The first step to the 25 percent increase, the pamphlet says, is a complete survey of existing plant equipment. This survey will show where bottlenecks exist or are likely to occur including supervision, handling of materials, wasteful use of materials and manhours, faulty or inadequate training of workers and the like.

WORK WITH UNION

The joint committee, in correcting these problems, must work with the union at all times, the pamphlet emphasizes, not only for planning and suggestions, but also to eliminate grievances and other bad conditions that might slow production.

"Pre-planning" is another important link in the production chain, the pamphlet points out. This pre-planning is a war industry must, since it avoids the waste in materials and time that inevitably comes if planning is left until after the operation starts. Its main aim is to see that machines, materials and manhours are used to the full limit of capacity, with a minimum of waste and spoilage.

Mastery of war production problems now will lead to victory by offensive action, the pamphlet concludes, and will lead to great changes in American living standards after the victory is won.

"We shall be living in a new time, in a new period made possible by the tremendous strides we have made and the unbelievable heights we have reached in mass production," the pamphlet concludes. "Then too, as now, we shall always be available for the common effort in our common solution of the problems facing us as victorious and free Americans."

"Producing for Victory" was prepared for CIO publication by its affiliated union, the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians. Price 15 cents a copy, quantity prices on request; 64 pp., illustrated. Order from CIO Publicity Dept., 1106 Connecticut Ave., Washington, D. C.

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Food Industry

• Purity and cleanliness dictate the selection of equipment used in the preparation of foods. For this reason, many manufacturers of food processing equipment are using stainless steel.

Stainless steel is immune to practically all types of food acids, and will not affect the taste, color, or keeping qualities of the foodstuffs with which it comes in contact. It can be quickly and easily cleaned, and is not attacked by chemical sterilizers, cleaners, and brines. Equipment used in preparing various foods has shown greatly improved performance when stainless steel has been used for parts subject to rusting or corrosion.

Today, more than ever, the food industry is relying on stainless steel equipment to help assure high quality and maximum output of essential foods.

Traditions Sink as Navy Sets New Labor Policy

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15—The U. S. Navy, in a major statement of policy, this week announced a precedent-smashing program aimed at enlisting the full co-operation of several score thousand workers in navy yards, ordnance plants and other naval shore establishments.

The announcement, made public almost simultaneously with the news of the U. S. offensive in the Solomon Islands, indicated a sharp break with decades-old Navy tradition of giving labor a complete cold-shoulder.

Asst. Sec. of the Navy Ralph Bard revealed that the Navy would shortly call the first of a series of quarterly meetings aimed at attaining "closer cooperation, more understanding of each other's problems, more friendliness in our relationships and undoubtedly greater sacrifice on the part of all of us.

"This is a sincere attempt to bring together in a harmonious unit all men and women of the Navy family for the sole purpose of winning this war and achieving victory for our country and our common cause," Bard added.

The announcement said that wages, shorter hours or "less discipline" would not be on the agenda, but it indicated methods would be sought for reducing or settling grievances and seeking the most cordial labor-management relations.

BREAK WITH POSTS

Indicative of the changes in Navy thinking on labor, was a frank admission that much of the responsibility for previous friction has come from the Navy higher-ups.

"It is apparent that we have not yet attained that measure of cooperation which is possible and vital in this all-out war," the Navy said, "and we in the management end of the Navy admit our share of the responsibility for this lack of unity, and express our determination with the cooperation of labor to rectify this situation in every way possible."

Signing the statement were Sec. Knox, Under-Secretary Forrestal, Bard and Asst. Sec. of the Navy for Air, Artemus Gates, together with Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. Fleet; Vice-Admiral F. J. Horne and S. M. Robinson, and Rear Admiral C. W. Fisher.

NAVY BELONGS TO ALL

Their statement pointed out that the Navy is the largest single employer of labor in the country and, as an integral part of the government, "is the Navy of the farmer, the businessman, the banker, and it is the Navy of labor of all types and categories; in short, it is the Navy of all the people of the United States."

As a fighter for the democratic rights and principles of this country, the "aims, ambition, plants and hopes of the Navy are identical with those of the vast majority of the men and women who work for the Navy," the officials continued.

". . . The Navy and its employes are engaged and joined in a common cause and a common objective which can be achieved to the fullest degree only by wholehearted cooperation between those responsible for the operation of the Navy in all stages of management, and those who labor to produce the ships, guns, planes and ammunition so vital to its program."

About 250 representatives of Navy labor will attend the meeting, it is expected. They will be selected by the workers, with representation for unions in those plants where they exist.

Get in the Scrap

New Orleans—New Orleans' growing CIO movement is going to celebrate Labor Day with deeds rather than words. Union members have offered to provide free labor for the day to help remove 2,900 tons of scrap steel in the form of unused street car tracks.

Federal Union Hails Statement

Washington, Aug. 15—The Navy Department's pledge of increased cooperation with labor "on an all-out basis of open-mindedness, friendship, tolerance, and mutual good will" was received with a reciprocal pledge here today by the CIO United Federal Workers of America.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Ralph A. Bard, sent the Navy Department's statement on labor relations to UFWA Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Nelson yesterday. The statement was signed by Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, Under-Secretary Forrestal, Mr. Bard, and other leading officials.

"This move on the part of the Navy Department is a major step forward in furtherance of our war effort," Sec.-Treas. Eleanor Nelson stated.

Atlantic Shipworkers Offer Production Plans To Speed War Program

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—A program aimed to promote maximum efficiency in the construction of ships was drawn up at a two-day conference held here last week by the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers. Members of union production committees representing 150,000 workers in Atlantic coast shipyards attended the meeting.

John Green, national president of the union, said that the parley was the first coast-wise production conference of its kind to be held in the country.

Standardizaton in the design of ships, restriction in the use of scarce metals, regulation of the steel supply and improvement in inspection procedure was called for in the program.

The conference also urged that the full facilities of ship repair yards be utilized and that machinery be allocated so as to be available when needed instead of being allocated by a prearranged schedule.

MOBILE SQUADS

Other points called for the organization of a mobile labor battalion for repair of damaged ships lying in foreign ports, and the speeding up of the barge and lighter construction program.

Ralph A. Bard, assistant secretary of the Navy, who spoke at the conference, told the union representatives that the Navy's labor policy "recognizes that the aims, ambitions, plans and hopes of the Navy are identical with those of the men and women who work for the Navy and that we are joined in a common cause which can be realized only by wholehearted cooperation between those responsible for the operation of the Navy and those who labor to produce the guns, planes and ammunition so vital to the program."

OTHER SPEAKERS

Other Government speakers included Director Wendell Lund and Assistant Director Philip Clowes, of the War Production Board's labor production division.

The conference adopted resolutions recommending the eight-hour day, 48-hour week; investment of 10 per cent of wages in War bonds; equal opportunity for Negro mechanics in shipyards; labor representatives on Government bodies; opening of a second front against the Axis, and wholehearted support of the national war effort.

Stone Union Gets 4 Raises

Barre, Vt., Aug. 15 — Four new contracts, bringing wage increases of from 5 to 14 cents an hour, were announced today by Sec.-Treas. John Lawson of the United Stone & Allied Products Workers of America, CIO.

At two plants of the Certain-Teed Products Corp., in York, Pa., and Albany, N.Y., the union gained nickel raises retroactive to July 1 for 600 employes, plus seniority and vacations with pay. The Keystone Roof Co., also located in York, granted a similar increase.

At Woodbury, Vt., employes of Granite, Inc., operators of granite quarries granted 9-cent hourly increases retroactive to April 1. The wage boosts, establishing minimum rates ranging from 64 to 97 cents, established uniform scales throughout the Barre granite belt.

Increases of from 6 to 14 cents were won at the Baker Wood Preserving Co., in Marion, O., according to Rep. Robert Boyer of the union. Minimum rates at the plant are 57 cents an hour, the maximum 95 cents.

CIO Greetings Go to Workers Of Spain

Washington, Aug. 15—Fraternal greetings from the CIO to the workers of Spain were sent by Pres. Philip Murray, in a shortwave broadcast from here this week. The greetings were coupled with a warning against going to Nazi Germany to work in Hitler's war industries.

"We hear that Hitler is very much interested in having you come to Germany to work in the Nazi war industries," Murray said. "Labor's mortal enemies are making you many fair promises. But once you get into Germany you will suffer the same disastrous conditions conditions the workers the world over suffer under Fascism."

NAZI DEATH TRAP

After warning the Spanish workers that United Nations bombers were making Nazi Germany "a death trap," and that Germany had no food to spare even for German workers, Murray said:

"Spain's common people never bred traitors to the workers' cause. We, the workers of America, are working night and day to forge the implements of war for the destruction of Hitler and the liberation of the peoples of Europe.

"We are confident that you will not make arms to be used against the heroic Russian workers — against the brave British workers, or against us and the workers of the United Nations engaged in this titanic war."

Urge Offensive

New Orleans—Speaking for 35,000 CIO members in this city, the New Orleans Industrial Union Council sent wires to FDR and Secretary of State Hull this week urging an immediate offensive against Hitler in western Europe, and a declaration of war against Vichy France and Finland.

Benson Gets Labor Backing In Minnesota

Minneapolis, Aug. 15—(FP)—Former Gov. Elmer A. Benson has become the candidate of the Farmer-Labor Assn. for U. S. senator with the full support of the overwhelming majority of all Minnesota unions.

Benson, who declined the nomination at the recent Farmer-Labor convention, was drafted after Judge Harry H. Peterson had double-crossed the labor movement and rejected the indorsement given him by the convention.

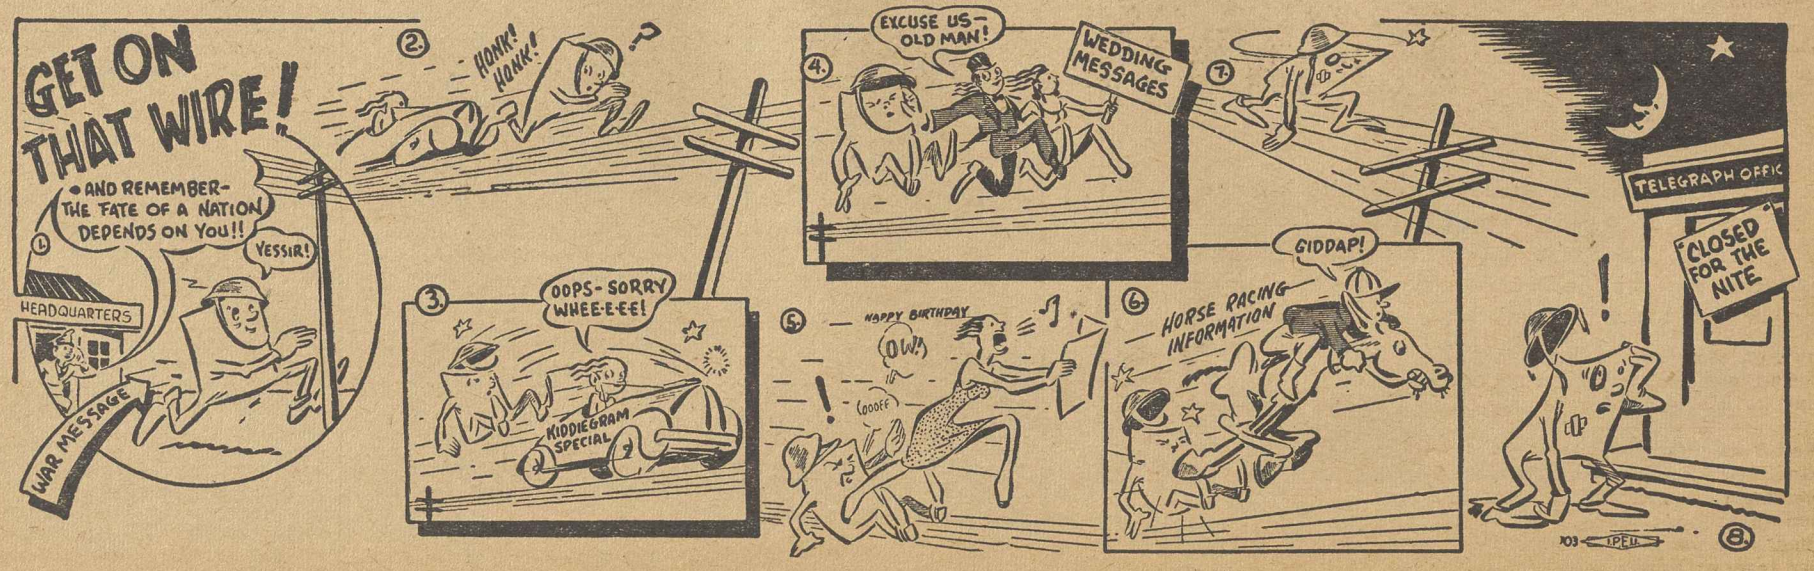
While there are less than 2/3 of the number of locomotives on hand today as in 1929, the larger engines now used handle heavier loads and longer hauls.



IT'S A DISGRACE, says the CIO American Communications Assn., that war telegrams are being held up on the wires while the telegraph companies continue to feature all sorts of non-essential services. The union's asking Chairman Fly of the Federal Communications to bar services like kiddie-grams, walking of dogs, etc., for the duration so that vital war messages can get through in faster time.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The convention of the Automobile Workers adjourned after electing R. J. Thomas and George Addes, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, by unanimous vote, and creating two vice presidents' positions to which Richard T. Frankensteen and Walter Reuther were elected by unanimous vote.

The convention endorsed the President's program on war and the CIO's position throughout.

A greater degree of unity was demonstrated than at any convention heretofore. Delegates left for their homes proud of their union, its achievements and determined to build it even stronger. Election of the above officers by unanimous vote is typical of the fine spirit prevailing. This team working together, nothing can prevent the auto workers from attaining their just aims and rendering service unsurpassed by none to the nation and the workers engaged in this industry.

Big Steel Negotiations

Negotiations with U. S. Steel have broken off; the company remaining adamant and refusing to negotiate with the United Steelworkers what the War Labor Board awarded them in the Little Steel case. The U.S. Steel case will now go before the National War Labor Board presented by President Murray and his able staff.

Frank Bonacci, CIO Regional Director, wires in another victory in Denver, Colorado, at the Kuner-Empson Cannery with a vote of 161 for CIO as against 13 for no union.

The Packinghouse Workers' Organizing Committee won three elections this past week, as follows: Wilson & Co., Refinery, Chattanooga, Tenn., PWOC, 69; AFL, 21. Armour Lookout Refinery, Chattanooga, Tenn., PWOC, 114; AFL, 16. Armour Plant, Dennison, Iowa, PWOC, 129; no union, 8.

Paul R. Christopher, CIO Regional Director in Tennessee, also reports a victory at the White Swan Laundry, Chattanooga, in behalf of Local Industrial Union 1187, where the employes received wage increases amounting to 4c to 10c per hour; vacations with pay; maintenance of membership and the check-off. Approximately 120 members are affected.

More NLRB Victories

The Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee report the seventh election victory this year as follows: Altorfer Brothers Company, Peoria, Illinois, for CIO: 309; against, 166.

Don Harris, CIO representative, assigned to the Brass & Copper Workers Drive, in Connecticut, and officers of the Chase Brass and Copper Workers Local 565, IUMSWA, announce the winning of the second Chase election by a vote of 370 to 74 in favor of the CIO. Negotiations for a contract are expected to commence shortly.

H. C. Fremming, CIO Regional Director in Kansas City, reports the winning of the election among the employes of the Davis-Noland-Merrill Grain Company in Kansas City, with the following results: Local Industrial Union 1192, CIO: 24 votes as against 5 for the AFL.

Victor R. Osuchowski, CIO Field Representative, in Camden, N.J., reports that the strike at Howard Johnson's restaurant in Pennsauken, N.J., has terminated after a three-day period; contract has been secured and all employes have been reinstated to their former positions.

Harry Sayre, UPNTWA Field Representative, reports a blanket labor agreement covering approximately 1,700 employes of the Consolidated Paper Co., became effective August 10th. The new agreement includes union shop, check-off, vacations with pay, blanket wage increase of 5c per hour in general wage increases granted by the Consolidated since January, 1941.

Regional Director Pete Mosele in New York City reports that two cases have been decided by the NLRB affecting the S. Haydue & Sons, Inc., and the John Engelhorn & Sons Company, both of Newark, N.J. The victory in both cases is very significant as it vindicates our union in a fight that dates back to April, 1941. Men had been discharged at both places and the board ordered them reinstated with back pay and ordered the company to deal with the PWOC-CIO.

In the Engelhorn case, an AFL contract has been consummated which the board outlawed. Brother Mosele states that the victory in these cases will be a stimulant to further organization in that industry on the eastern seaboard.

British Shipyard Workers Offer to Forget Old Rules As Aid to Offensive

LONDON, Aug. 15 (ALN)—Britain's shipyard workers, among the most persistent in demanding a second front now in the West, are stepping up their production of ships to land British and American troops on the continent of Europe and keep them supplied with war materials.

In Glasgow the Clyde district committee of the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions, which has a country-wide membership of over 2,000,000, offered to give up its time-honored union rules in return for an immediate conference of shipyard workers, owners and government officials to deal with the shipping problem.

Workers will abandon, among other things, "demarcation lines" which prevent members of one craft from finishing a job when it falls outside their jurisdiction. Distinctions like these have been jealously preserved by the 29 unions in the yards.

SEE SOLUTION

Shipyard workers refuse to consider that the shipping shortage, the stock-in-trade of last-ditch opponents of a second front, is insoluble. Addressing the Clydeside workers, H. N. Harrison, president of the Confederation, appealed directly to Prime Minister Churchill.

"Call the unions and employers together for a frank discussion of how to get greater output," he said, "and we'll make the utmost sacrifices to guarantee that production will increase.

"The workers have not been consulted respecting methods to increase production, the type of ship which could best be produced, or indeed anything else about the nation's most vital industry."

In most cases, shipyard employers have successfully resisted attempts of the workers to establish joint production committees, which have been set up in all government factories and most British industries. Despite employer opposition, the workers have forced up production 62 per cent above 1940.

"Our men working in yards with four building berths are turning out 13 ships a year, as fast as their American comrades," Harrison said. "The Americans work three shifts a day but because of the nightly blackout our men can work only two shifts of ten hours apiece. British craftsmen have not let the nation down."

Subjects to be taken up at the shipping conference, if the union's offer is accepted by Churchill, will include: training of skilled labor, allocation of raw materials, elimination of inefficient managers left over from the depression days, when there was no hurry about building ships, and elimination of bottlenecks.

BUILD WING SHIPS

Union seamen agree with the shipyard workers.

"The government is relying on the guts of the merchant seamen to pull them through the battle of the oceans," Charles Jarman, secretary of the National Union of Seamen, told this correspondent.

"But it is still building the wrong ships, using them in wrong ways and wasting cargo space. The whole shipbuilding program is off-course because owners insist on building ships for voyages after the war."

Greet King Haakon

New York, Aug. 15—Greetings to King Haakon VII of Norway on his 70th birthday and a renewed plea for a second front to liberate the Norwegian people and all Europe were sent by the 2,000 Norwegian seamen working on United Nations ships out of this country.

The message praised Haakon's "bold and courageous stand" when Norway was over-run by the Nazis and urged a second front "for an early victory over the Nazis and for freedom of our fatherland."

Argentines Cold-Shoulder Fascist Plan

Buenos Aires, Aug. 15 (ALN).—Francisco Perez Leiros, member of Argentina's Chamber of Deputies and vice-president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers, has turned down Axis-minded President Ramon Castillo's invitation to appoint two representatives of Argentina's Confederation of Workers to a corporative governing body, modeled on the Italian fascist pattern, which Castillo is attempting to force upon the 2,500,000 residents of Buenos Aires.

Toledano Sees Second Front As Aid to Mexico

Mexico City, Aug. 15 (ALN)—. Popular interest in the opening of a western front has spread among Mexican unions since Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers, declared that "the second front in Europe is a necessity we must face at once."

Addressing the 22nd anniversary celebration of the Union of Graphic Arts Workers last week, Toledano said:

"Only a second front in Europe will force Hitler to divide his forces. Under these conditions he can be defeated—we hope this year. But if he is allowed to concentrate the whole power of the Nazi Wehrmacht on a single front, the outlook will be dark indeed for the peoples of the world.

"Some Mexicans still believe that we are not in peril when the actual battle front is so many thousands of miles away. But the war that is being fought abroad can envelop our own land. The longer the war lasts, the more sacrifices will be required of the entire Mexican population, workers, peasants and the middle class as well."

Soviet Labor Head Demands Higher Output Levels

KUIBYSHEV (ALN)—Every Soviet trade union official has a personal responsibility for increasing war production in line with the Anglo-Soviet trade union agreement, Nikolai Shvernik, secretary of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, told a meeting of union leaders from the Moscow area recently.

"Friendly relations between the Soviet and British trade unions were first established during the heroic defense of Moscow," he said. "That friendship must be strengthened, for it is based on the deepest interests of the working men and women of Britain and the USSR. Today the organized labor movement in both countries subordinates every consideration to the cause of struggle against Hitlerism."

The Anglo-Soviet Committee, he said, has contributed both toward increased international understanding and increased production of war materials. "Both Soviet and British trade unions have had tremendous experience in increasing industrial output," he said.

"Continuous exchange of their experiences will enrich the practical work on both sides. More information should be exchanged reflecting the work of the trade union movements as a whole as well as of individual Soviet and British unions."

SPEED PRODUCTION

He cited Stalin's call to Soviet workers to produce "more tanks, planes, trench mortars, machine guns, automatic rifles and munitions every day than the day before," and said: "In the struggle for increased productivity of labor, the unions and their factory, shop and departmental committees must put to use every proven device. They must develop socialist competitions, production conferences and the voluntary acceptance of responsibility by experienced workers and Stakhanovites for new workers coming into industry.

"There are today in our factories a large number of workers who regularly turn out twice their daily quotas. Workers who hold down the general average of productivity can be brought up to the level of the leaders if the unions will stimulate socialist competition.

UNION'S JOB

"The creative initiative and wisdom of working men and women are well known. The job of the trade union is to develop, encourage and support the workers' initiative, and nowhere does that initiative manifest itself more fully then at a production conference."

"The next question with which I should like to deal, as one of the most important requiring our attention, is the matter of working and living conditions. This is of particular importance for working men and women who have been evacuated to new localities along with their factories.

"They undergo any number of hardships which they have not previously had to face. Whose job is it, if not the trade unions', to eliminate these hardships and create the best possible living conditions for evacuated workers?

"Housing, transportation, the provision of restaurant and lunchroom facilities, the establishment of day nurseries and kindergartens—these questions are now of particular importance and the trade unions must give them constant attention."

Pledge Sent To All-India Congress

New York, Aug. 15—Greetings to the All-India Congress from the Council of the Natl. Maritime Union were cabled to its head, Jawaharlal Nehru, this week, together with a pledge of support "of your fight for freedom as in keeping with your desire to play full and equal part in our war of liberation against the Axis."

The cable also said that "India's participation in this people's war is essential to a speedy and complete victory over barbarism."

In a later membership meeting of the NMU here, a message was sent to President Roosevelt urging him to "prevail upon the British War Cabinet to reopen negotiations with the All-India Congress, Moslem League and other people's leaders in India for the purpose of assuring mobilization of the Indian people to defend India."

New York, Aug. 15—A resolution asking the U. S. to urge the British government "to withdraw its opposition to the establishment of an Indian government for India" in order to draw India's millions into the anti-Axis war was passed by the Book and Magazine Guild, CIO, at a meeting here this week.

Unity Celebration

Cleveland—The Cleveland Federation of Labor this week agreed to participate in a joint Labor Day celebration at Public Hall with the CIO. The demonstration will follow a parade of CIO unionists through the city's streets.

See Klan Propaganda In Anti-Negro Attacks

BESSEMER, Ala., Aug. 15—New reports of the KKK-supported anti-Negro drive in this war industry center show a determined plot to stir up race hatred and destroy national unity behind the Administration's win-the-war program.

These reports followed warnings by CIO officials, including Noel Beddow, USA-CIO southern director, and officials of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, that the campaign was planned and already well under way.

Chief clue to the anti-victory plot is found in a speech delivered by Horace Wilkinson, one time political boss, before the local Kiwanis Club, whose members include some of the leading local employers and their agents working on war contracts.

'WHITE SUPREMACY'

The burden of Wilkinson's speech was a long tirade to the effect that Negro workers were guilty of "insolent, impudent conduct" and that they could only be put in their place by organizing a "League for White Supremacy" to put and keep them there.

In between, the speech was well larded with attacks on the President, on the Fair Employment Practices Committee, on Wendell Willkie for his recent speech to Natl. Association for the Advancement of Colored People, on the War Dept. for stationing Negro troops in the South, on the Supreme Court for ruling that Negroes must be put on juries (citing the Scottsboro case) and generally on the Government's effort to break down discrimination against Negro workers.

Wilkinson did not confine his plans to this area alone, saying: "There is need for a league to maintain white supremacy . . . The time to act is now. An organization should be formed, so strong, so powerful and so efficient, that this menace to our national security and our local way of life will disappear. Alabama must lead the way."

'McCosmic,' Chicago Tribune Under Fire as U. S. Probes Printing of Navy Secrets

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The McCormick-Patterson newspaper axis—publishers of the Chicago Tribune, N. Y. News and Washington Times-Herald—was on the receiving end of sharp attack this week in Congress, following an investigation ordered by the Justice Dept. on the basis of newspaper stories said to have revealed military secrets.

The attack in Congress came from Rep. Elmer Holland, of Pa., who bluntly charged that N. Y. News editorials "tie in with the propaganda war waged by Hitler and Goebbels." While Holland was telling these home truths to the Patterson-McCormick trio, isolationist Sen. Wayland C. Brooks, of Illinois, was defending them.

Holland's offensive was thoroughly documented by editorials from the N. Y. News and the Times-Herald, all of which were written after Pearl Harbor and similar examples. He cited two editorials on liquor, one advising News readers to get drunk and stay drunk for the duration, the other complaining that the "personal liberty" of people who like Martini cocktails was being destroyed because there was a shortage of gin.

In addition, Holland accused the McCormick-Patterson axis of hinting at the assassination of President Roosevelt as the only way to end his tenure of office in an editorial comparing him to Julius Caesar.

Co-ops for FDR's War Program

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 15—The two and a half million cooperators in this nation, who understand President Roosevelt's seven-point anti-inflation program, will support it to the utmost, Leslie E. Woodcock, manager of Eastern Cooperative Wholesale, promised a nation-wide audience over the Mutual Network last week.

"The prescription against inflation is a complicated one," Woodcock said. "It requires a number of separate operations and a simultaneously coordinated acceptance by 130,000,000 people. It will require great personal deprivations, from heavy taxes, stabilized wages and farm prices to rationing and buying of war bonds as outlined by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress on April 28.

"Our political government is, necessarily, the active agent in such a program, but the heart of it and its sole chance for success lies in the general understanding and acceptance by the economic groups into which people are divided."

Urge FDR Act In Indian Crisis

New York, Aug. 15—President Roosevelt was asked to use his good offices with Britain to secure a National Government for India in the interests of the war by Max Perlow, manager of Local 76-B of the United Furniture Workers, CIO.

Perlow's letter to the President expressed disapproval of Gandhi's tactics "in shifting the fight of the Indian people from the Japanese militarists into the channels of inner strife and civil war," while urging a measure of self-government as a means of lining up the Indian people behind the United Nations.

Win Fight On Race Bias At L. A. Plant

Los Angeles, Aug. 15—A crushing blow against racial discrimination in local aircraft plants was struck this week when an arbitration panel handed down a decision which reinstated a CIO Negro worker who had been fired from his job at North American Aviation, Inc. plant for talking with a white woman.

Horace Dickey, the Negro employe, was given back pay for some of the time off and was reinstated to his former position by the board's decision.

Officials of the CIO's United Auto Workers local at North American, which fought the case for Dickey, hailed the decision as a complete victory.

"This is just the first step in our drive to end for once and for all racial discrimination in hiring and treatment of Negro workers," Paul Lindsay, local president said.

Ask Better Care for War Workers' Kids

Washington, Aug. 15—Better protection of children in wartime is an objective of the Children's Bureau of the U. S. Labor Dept., according to an announcement by Leonard W. Mayo, chairman of the Commission on Children in Wartime.

Measures urged on states and local communities include guarding children from injury in danger zones, protecting them from neglect, exploitation and undue strain in war industry areas, strengthening the home life of children whose parents work in war plants, and similar measures.

NLRB Official To Rubber Union

Washington, Aug. 15—Garnet L. Patterson, director of the field division of the National Labor Relations Board, today announced his resignation in order to accept a post as general counsel of the United Rubber Workers of America.

'Probe KKK' Demanded As Negro Dies

Suffold, Va., Ang. 15—The recent murder of a young Negro worker by police here is part of a KKK conspiracy "to drive a wedge between the growing unity of the Southern people who are working together in the factories, fields, mines, in the armed forces to defeat Hitlerism in 1942," the Suffolk Citizens Committee said this week.

The committee asked for indictment of Police Officer McKenzie, who shot the Negro worker, and urged protests to J. M. Butlera, chief of police in Suffolk. The Negro worker, Herman Jones, was killed during an arrest on a misdemeanor charge.

The Upper Crust

"You know, it's the first time since 1918 that I've come downtown without the limousine."

Co-op Gas Station Signs With CIO

Washington, Aug. 15—A cooperative gas station this week was the first in this city to sign a contract with a labor union, and two cooperative grocery stores were the first of the "service" type to establish a work week as short as 48 hours, according to the Cooperative League of the USA, with which all three enterprises are affiliated.

The gas station signed with the CIO Oil Workers International Union and the two other stores have contracts with the AFL Retail Clerks Protective Association.

LAUDS CO-OPS

The CIO pact cites increased mass purchasing power as essential for prosperity, points out that ways must be developed to prevent rising prices from wiping out wage gains, and says that "the development of an adequate system of consumer cooperatives may be an effective weapon directly available to wage earners to control the prices of the things they buy."

Loose-Leaf Union Wins 5-Year Fight

New York, Aug. 15—Five years of determined struggle has won the right of collective bargaining for 550 workers of Boorum & Pease, loose-leaf manufacturers of Brooklyn, the United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers announced this week.

52-Year-Old Group Joins Fur Union

New York, Aug. 15—Two important gains were announced today by the CIO Int. Fur & Leather Workers Union.

In Milwaukee the IFLWU swept to victory at the Greenebaum Tanning Co., long a stronghold of company unionism. And in Lowell, Mass., one of the oldest unions in the country—the independent United Leather Workers Union—voted to affiliate with the international organization.

The Lowell union consists of employes of the American Hide & Leather Co., a calfskin tannery. It was established in 1890.

VOTE 2-1

In a secret ballot, the workers voted 230 to 117 for affiliation with the CIO union. It is expected that this step will greatly strengthen the workers' bargaining position when they open negotiations for wage increases later this month.

The Milwaukee NLRB election found 568 voting for the IFLWU, with 270 opposing. The balloting climaxed a four-year campaign of organization, during which the company was charged with violation of the Wagner Act.

Abe Feinglass, vice-president of the fur and leather union, said organization drives in other Greenebaum tanneries at Milwaukee and Chicago would be launched immediately.

Vote Aug. 19 At Biggest Brass Plant

Waterbury, Conn.—Aug. 15—The CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers this week entered the home stretch of an organization campaign that will come to a climax Aug. 19 with an NLRB election at the Scovill Manufacturing Co., largest brass fabricating plant in the nation.

Some 7,000 employes are eligible to vote. At the main factory, workers will choose between the CIO affiliate and no union. At the Waterville unit, the choice will be between the CIO and the AFL machinists.

In recent weeks, the MM&SW has won two polls in smaller Waterbury plants. It rolled up a 5-1 majority over no union at the Chase Brass & Copper Co., with a vote of 370 to 74, and won another 298 to 13 at the Shoe Hardware Co.

WLB Studies Textile Demands

EMIL RIEVE

NEW YORK, Aug. 15—The demand of the CIO Textile Workers Union of America for wage increases in the northern and southern rayon-cotton industries is now in the hands of the National War Labor Board, and a decision can be expected within the next few weeks, it was announced here this week at TWUA headquarters.

President Emil Rieve and other union officials attended a public hearing on the TWUA's case held last week in Washington. Research Director Solomon Barkin and Isadore Katz, the union's general counsel, "demolished the desperate, feverish defense put up particularly by the spokesmen for the Southern mills," the union stated.

"Observers could see great social consequences arising from the long, hard fight of the TWUA to raise the living standards of the cotton-rayon workers and to eliminate at least a part of the unfair and unjustified differential which exists in the Southern cotton industry."

Executive Officers Assail WPB's $1-a-Year Men; Call For 'V' Tax Bill

(See Story Page Three)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—CIO's executive officers today demanded that the Government take immediate steps to remove a host of barriers to the nation's war production program.

In an action-studded one-day session, Pres. Philip Murray, Sec. James B. Carey and the six vice presidents demanded Congressional action to put President Roosevelt's 7-point anti-inflation program into full effect; assailed Congressional tories who are mauling the Treasury's tax proposals and called for passage of an equitable revenue bill; and endorsed a statement by CIO advisers at WPB calling for a shake-up of the government production agency to cleanse it of dollar-a-year-men and other tools of the big corporations.

The officers recommended to the CIO Executive Board that the CIO's Fifth Annual Convention be held in Boston starting Nov. 9. The board will meet Sept. 4-5, one day after the next meeting of the vice presidents.

Murray Orders Study of Negro Job Equality

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—CIO Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO today announced appointment of a CIO committee to investigate and study the entire problem of equality of opportunity for Negro workers in American industry.

Named to the committee were James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO; and Willard S. Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employes of America, a CIO affiliate with headquarters in Chicago. Townsend is the first Negro member of the CIO executive board.

President Murray instructed the committee to report on its investigation to the next meeting of the CIO's general executive board.

In announcing the survey, Murray reiterated the CIO's affirmative stand against anti-Negro discrimination as a danger to American democracy, especially in war time. The CIO head is a member of the Fair Employment Practices Committee with John Brophy serving as alternate member. This committee has investigated discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups in a number of areas throughout the country.

HIT DISCRIMINATION

Carey and Townsend, in announcing their survey, charged:

"Discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups has always been a blight and a paradox in this democracy, the very existence of which is based on a declaration that 'all men are created free and equal'.

"Since its inception, the CIO has vigorously opposed racial bias and intolerance. The constitution of the CIO expressly outlaws membership barriers based on differences of nationality or race. In every national CIO convention, and in hundreds of regional and local meetings, members of the CIO have indicated their opposition to discrimination.

"The war has taught many Americans a long-needed lesson: that a divided nation cannot stand up against the Axis, that a solid unity of all the people is a vital necessity if we are to preserve and amplify our American democracy against its foes at home and abroad.

HAIL PROGRESS

"We are gratified that some progress has been made in recent months toward bringing about the equality of opportunity which is the goal of labor and progressive Americans. The Fair Employment Practices Committee has served a highly useful purpose in putting the spotlight on some of the worst examples of Hitlerite discrimination and bias in industry, and its work should be supported and strengthened.

"It is the intention of this committee to make a thorough investigation of race relations among the workers of this country, and of the employment practices of industry in general. We know that passing resolutions in conventions is not enough.

"We anticipate that the CIO will set an affirmative course of action on the basis of our report to the General Executive Board."

Labor, WPB to Study Material Shortages

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—A major step forward in the solution of the serious problem of shortages in the vital metal producing industries was taken here by the Labor Production division of the War Production Board which slated a conference of 18 CIO and AFL officials here Monday.

Called at the recommendation of the six-man CIO-AFL Policy Committee of the Labor Production division, the conference will discuss labor's proposals to crack the major bottlenecks holding back the production of arms and munitions.

Wendell Lund, administrator of the Labor Production division, who invited the 18 labor officials to the conference, announced that consideration will be given to the amount of metal scrap available, the existence of large inventories of materials and unemployment caused by shortages.

The conference will be faced with the problems of preventing the shut-down of 1,000 war plants which the Labor Production division said would be forced to close because of the raw material shortage.

CIO MEN INVITED

Invited to the conference are the following CIO officials:

CIO President Philip Murray; Secretary James Carey; Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood; President N. A. Zonarich, Aluminum Workers; Pres. R. J. Thomas, Auto and Aircraft Workers; Pres. Albert J. Fitzgerald, Electrical, Radio Workers; Pres. Grant W. Oakes, Farm Equipment Workers; Pres. John Green, Shipbuilding Workers; Pres. Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; and Murray as the head of the Steelworkers.

Aircraft Drive In Southwest

St. Louis, Aug. 22.—A CIO United Auto and Aircraft organizing drive in Southwestern states was planned today by John W. Livingston, new director of Region 5, UAW-CIO, who replaced Delmond Garst after an election at the UAW Chicago convention.

Livingston reported that organizing work around the Dallas and Fort Worth, Tex., Wichita, Kan., Kansas City and Oklahoma City areas was gaining momentum.

Wire Union Asks Faster Service

New York, Aug. 22.—A nation-wide production conference aimed at speeding delivery of vital war messages on the nation's telegraph network was called this week by the CIO American Communications Assn.

Pres. Joseph Selly said local leaders from all parts of the country would participate in the meeting, and that a committee would be sent to Washington next week to bring its recommendations to leading government officials.

Meanwhile the ACA hailed partial acceptance of some of its earlier suggestions for ridding the wires of non-essential messages and services, Western Union and Postal Telegraph announced that "singing telegrams"—through which birthday and other greetings are delivered by musically voiced messenger boys—were out for the duration.

The companies have also asked the Federal Communications Commission to cancel special low rates on all sorts of birthday, holiday and special event greeting messages. Union spokesmen expressed belief that abolition of the bargain rates would substantially cut the volume of these telegrams and permit war industry messages to move at faster speed.

Free Labor For Red Cross Mercy Ship

San Francisco, Aug. 22—A Red Cross relief ship, bearing supplies to U.S. Armed Force members now being held prisoners by the Japanese, will be loaded by CIO longshoremen who voted to repay the cost of the longshore labor to the Red Cross.

WLB Sets Textile 7½c Boost

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—An increase of 7½ cents an hour for 61,000 workers in 40 New England and 11 southern textile mills was announced last Saturday by the National War Labor Board.

The CIO Textile Workers' Union of America, which represents the workers in 28 of the New England mills and all of the 11 southern mills, had asked a ten-cent hourly increase in the north and a 20-cent hourly increase in the south, to wipe out the north-south wage differential.

UNANIMOUS

The board's decision on the general wage increase was unanimous, the public, labor and employer members all agreeing that the raise was needed to narrow inequalities between the pay of the workers involved in this case and wages paid in other industries in the same areas. The increase was made retroactive to June 15.

Average hourly earnings in the cotton textile industry in April, 1942, were only 51.5 cents an hour, the board declared, in comparison with 81.9 cents for all manufacturing, a difference of 30.4 cents. Weekly earnings in February of this year averaged $24.46 in the north and $19.82 in the south, the board reported.

Both labor and employer members of the two panels which heard the northern textile cases, had recommended an increase of 7½ cents, while in the southern case the labor member had recommended a 10-cent boost, and the employer member 7½ cents.

Panel Urges Nickel Raise At GM Plants

Washington, Aug. 22.—Labor and public members of a War Labor Board panel this week jointly recommended nickel-an-hour wage increases for nearly a quarter-million General Motors employes.

The majority recommendation to the Labor Board was signed by Fowler Harper, deputy director of the War Manpower Commission and by Patrick Fagan, head of District 5 of the United Mine Workers.

William H. Doran of the Metropolitan Edison Co., employer representative, advocated only a 1½ cent hourly raise, on the ground that any more would go beyond the "Little Steel" formula, in which the Board said it would limit increases to a maximum of 15% over the hourly rates in effect on Jan. 1, 1942.

WOULD CUT DIFERENTIAL

But the labor and public members advocated an additional 3½ cents to help narrow down the 6.7 cents differential between average rates at GM and Ford.

Also recommended were a maintenance of membership clause; retroactive payment of wage increases to April 28, when the cases were certified to the WLB; equal pay for women workers performing the same jobs as men; and increase of the premium for night work from 5% to 10%.

Involved in the case are the United Automobile Workers, representing about 200,000 GM employes; and the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, which speaks for 25,000 workers in the company's electrical division.

The panel found that average hourly earnings at GM had risen from 94.1c an hour in January, 1941, to $1.06½ in May, 1942. Addition of 1½ cents an hour would fill out the increase to 15%.

"General Motors has proved to be one of the most profitable corporations of American industry," the panel said in a moment of understatement.

GM's operating profits, the WLB group found, had risen from $111,120,000 in 1938 to $478,551,000 in 1941 when the company was first getting its teeth into war production.

WLB Labor Members Warn Of Threat To Bargaining

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Sharp warnings that further extension of the War Labor Board's power may place collective bargaining in a "strait jacket" was expressed this week by Emil Rieve, CIO vice-president and head of the Textile Workers Union, and by Sec.-Treas. Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers.

Their blast came in the form of a dissent to the WLB's decision in the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co., in which the Board gave its official OK to a 5½ cent increase previously agreed to by the company and the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

After the company and the union had signed their agreement, the WLB issued its "Little Steel" formula, based on keeping wage rates within 15% of the Jan. 1, 1941, level. The company withheld payment of the increase and submitted its contract to the WLB for approval.

POWER TO REVIEW

It was this procedure of giving the Board power to review voluntary agreements that brought criticism from the Board's two CIO representatives.

Charging that the WLB had been correct when it earlier refused to authorize hearings on a union contract with Postal Telegraph Co. that does not expire for some time, the labor members accused the Board of inconsistency in agreeing to review the Westinghouse pay scale.

"At the same time the agreement herein was executed, the Board did not, nor does it now, have the authority to review wage agreements voluntarily negotiated," they declared.

LIMITS BARGAINING

"The Board's entry into that sphere is another step in the direction of placing collective bargaining in a strait jacket, confirming the apprehension we expressed in our dissent in the "Little Steel" decision.

"Step by step, wage negotiations have been limited to a very narrow area, so that the term 'collective bargaining,' at least so far as wages are concerned, is rapidly being sapped of all significance."

Aluminum Union Hits WLB's Refusal To Grant Pay Raise

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—A decision of the National War Labor Board denying any wage increase for 32,000 workers in 10 plants of the Aluminum Co. of America was denounced this week by N. A. Zonarich, president of the CIO Aluminum Workers of America.

The Board also denied an increase in pay to 900 workers in the plant of the American Magnesium Co. at Buffalo, N. Y.

Three CIO unions involved in the Alcoa case — the Aluminum Workers, United Automobile Workers and Die Casting Division of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers — had all demanded a $1 a day raise.

The Board claimed to base its decision denying the increase on the wage stabilization policy applied in the Little Steel case, where a 44c increase was granted to compensate for the 15 per cent rise in the cost of living which it stated had taken place between Jan. 1, 1941 and May 1942.

'UNFAIR ACTION'

In the Alcoa case, the Board by a vote of 8 to 4, the labor members dissenting, held that since wage increases previously granted covered the 15 per cent rise in living costs, "the workers' peacetime standards had not been broken and that they were thus not entitled to any further general wage increase."

In his statement protesting the Board's failure to grant a wage increase, AWA President Zonarich denied that Alcoa workers had received pay increases sufficient to cover the increased cost of living.

"Aluminum workers represented by the AWA have received a total hourly wage rate increase of eight cents since Jan. 1, 1941," he said. "On the basis of the Board's own formula, therefore, we are entitled to a wage increase. The refusal of the Board to grant an increase is not understandable except as a concession to Mr. Leon Henderson's wage freezing demand . . .

"By its unfair action and its disregard of the people involved in the dispute, the WLB has endangered the whole aluminum production program. We were making fine progress in improving relations with the Aluminum Co. of America and in tackling vital production problems. This progress is now set aside by the Board's arbitrary action.

"The aluminum industry is now confronted with demands from the rank and file for a general strike. The Board has failed to settle this case, and therefore, if a strike is to be avoided, either the Board must reconsider its decision or President Roosevelt should intervene directly.

"The workers in this industry have proved their patriotism by their performance on the production front and their extreme patience with the Board's long delay. They will not allow eight men in Washington to rob them of justice."

Aim Attack On Illness

Washington, Aug. 22.—A three-frontal attack aimed at keeping American production soldiers fit on the job and reducing the number of man hours lost monthly through workers' sickness will be launched through industrial plants, homes and communities, Paul V. McNutt, Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services administrator, announced today.

"At least 80,000,000 working days can be saved this year if war workers keep fit," McNutt declared. "That means 14,000 more bombers, 10 dreadnaughts, 33,000 tanks to help us win the war," he added.

Standard Oil's 'Cave-Man' Tactics Assailed by Union

HOUSTON, Tex., Aug. 22—The "cave-man era" labor policies of Standard Oil came in for sharp criticism today from Director Edwin S. Smith of the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign as he filed charges with the Natl. Labor Relations Board that Standard of California has been maintaining illegal company unions since 1934.

Declaring the OWOC's action to be a "public duty," Smith asserted that employes of the Rockefeller-dominated company are living under a reign of fear and intimidation.

With the CIO oil organizing campaign making considerable progress among employes of the big oil trust, the NLRB has already ordered dissolution of the company unions maintained by Standard Oil of New Jersey at three plants in that state, and has filed a complaint against Standard of Ohio on similar charges.

FAVORS FROM U. S.

Smith recalled that Standard, "has enjoyed particular favors at the hands of the U. S. government during the war" through appointment of many high officials to posts in the Office of Petroleum Coordinator.

"Months ago an appeal was made by Deputy Coordinator Davies (a Standard executive on leave to the government) to give representation to oil workers on the committees having to do with the formulation of the oil industry's policies during the war.

"Davies has done precisely nothing in regard to this appeal, despite the national policy which seeks to enlist both labor and industry representatives to collaborate with the government on war policies and programs."

AFFRONT TO PEOPLE

The CIO oil official added that Standard of California's violation of its workers' rights is an "unbelievable affront to the American people when they are engaged in a war for demorcacy."

". . . The other night," Smith said, "a Standard oil employe of more than 20 years standing received me in his house to discuss organizational problems. His first act was to draw all the blinds in his living room, lest someone report to the company that he was seen talking with me."

Standard wants to convince the public that its long-time anti-democratic alliance with IGF, big Nazi chemical trust, is a closed chapter and that it now ardently supports the war, he continued.

"One way for Standard of California to prove its good faith and its democratic intentions is to abandon at once and completely its anti-democratic labor policies."

Union Relief Gifts Pour In To Committee

New York, Aug. 22.—Representatives of three unions appeared at the New York meeting of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief this week to present in person the funds raised by their organizations to further the work of the Committee.

Locals 287 and 1268 of the Retail Shoe Clerks gave the Committee checks amounting to $10,000 through Sam Loewenthal, manager of Local 287, and Irving Simon, manager of Local 1268.

Three thousand dollars was contributed by Pietro Lucchi, Secretary-Treasurer of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union, as a gift from the union to British War Relief.

$1,200 FROM GUILD

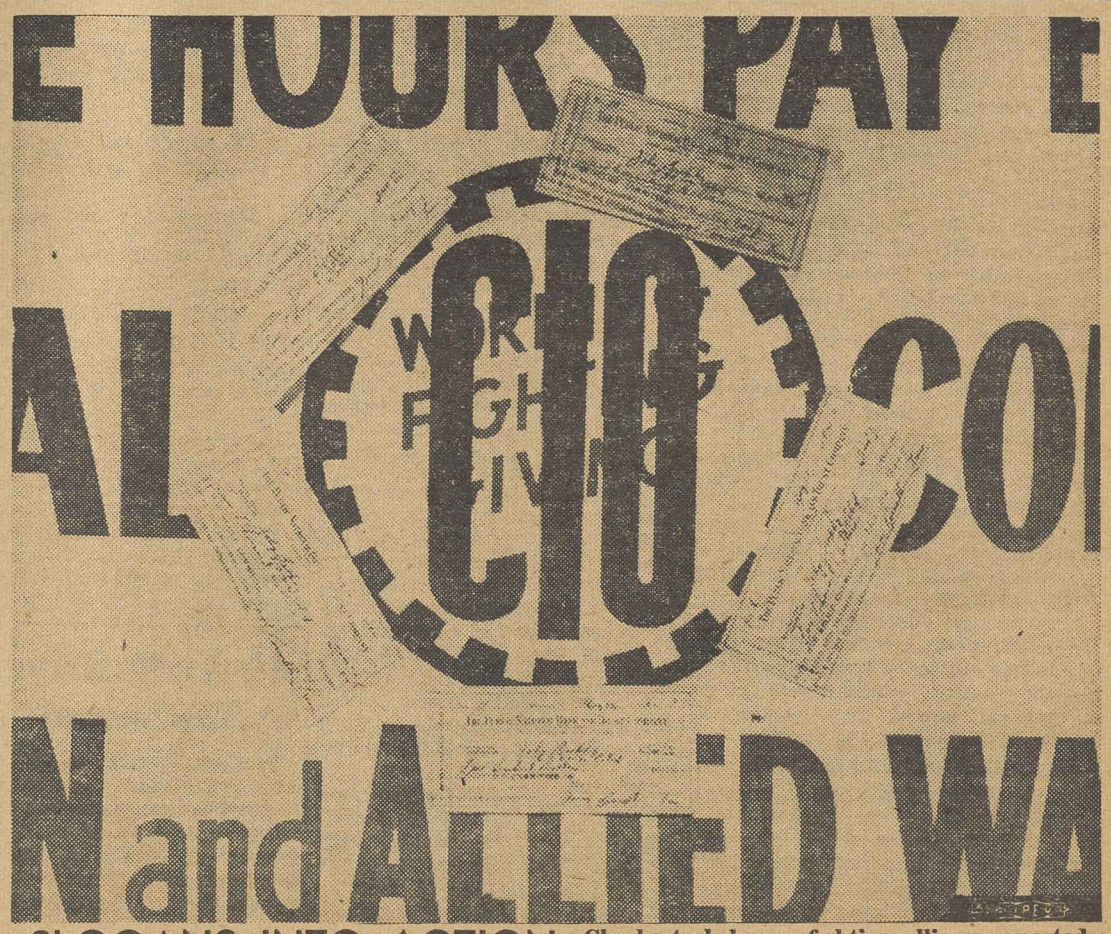
United China Relief will be the beneficiary of a check for $1,200 presented by Milton Kaufman, organizer of the New York Newspaper Guild, and Betty Townsend of the War Activities Committee of the American Newspaper Guild.

Chairman Irving Abramson received the contributions on behalf of the CIO War Relief Committee.

The Committee announced the conclusion of an agreement with Community Chests and Councils whereby CIO war relief activity will be geared into the fall drive of the War Chests.

CIO drives in War Chest cities will be conducted with the cooperation of the War Relief Committee and all contributions will be recorded as coming from CIO locals. In addition, through the efforts of the Committee, special labor projects will be included in the budget of British, Chinese and Russian war relief agencies. These projects—gifts of Labor to Labor—will be directed by the CIO Committee and administered in allied countries by official trade union leaders.

As a result of the negotiations, two labor representatives, the first in its history, have been added to the Budget Committee of Community Chests and Council.



SLOGANS INTO ACTION: Checks to help our fighting allies are posted on a big CIO War Relief Committee banner —but they'll soon be cash to help the people who are fighting Hitler. Amounting to $10,000, the checks were presented to the CIO War Relief Committee by the joint war relief committee of the Retail Shoe Salesmen's Union in New York City.

It's Moving Day For CIO; New Offices Provide Better Location, More Room

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Today is moving day for CIO's national headquarters. Last night, movers piled loads of furniture and office records into several huge moving vans, and carted them three blocks downtown to the CIO-owned edifice at 718 Jackson Place N. W.

The new five-story building, only a few doors from the entrance to the White House executive offices, is a decided improvement over the "temporary" quarters that CIO has occupied at 1106 Connecticut Avenue since early in 1937. The old offices were hot as Libya in summer, often cold as Siberia in winter—and overcrowded during all seasons.

New headquarters are far more appropriate a home for an organization representing five million American war workers.

CENTRALLY LOCATED

Purchased for $300,000, the Jackson Place office building is one of the most desirable locations in the nation's busy capital. Across LaFayette Park is Washington's "downtown" shopping district; down the street is the White House; and snuggled right next door is the ultra-conservative Brookings Institution, where a crew of ultra-conservative economists study and toil to prove that unions are unnecessary, wages too high and the union shop a crime against natural law!

CIO HEAD ON THIRD FLOOR

President Philip Murray's offices are at the front of the third floor of the five-storey edifice. Also on that floor will be the offices of the legal, legislative and research departments.

Secretary James Carey and his assistants will occupy the front of the fifth floor, at the back of which will be the bookkeeping department.

At the front of the fourth floor will be Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood and his staff. In the center of that floor John Brophy's department of industrial union councils will be situated, while in the rear will be the publicity department and the staff of The CIO NEWS.

NEW TELEPHONE NUMBER

The ground floor and part of the second are occupied by a commercial bank. The rear of the second floor will be available for small meetings and conference among CIO officials.

CIO's new telephone number, incidentally, changes to EXecutive 5581

CIO Officers Demand Removal of Barriers To War Victory Drive

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—CIO Executive Officers, meeting in all-day session here, demanded a victory tax bill based on ability to pay, and urged every union member to become an active worker for the election of win-the-war candidates in coming primary and election contests.

In a series of other actions, the officers—Pres. Philip Murray, Sec. James B. Carey and Vice-Presidents Curran, Dalrymple, Rieve, Robinson, Rosenblum and Thomas—voted:

1. Authorization to publicize a resolution of the CIO members on Labor's Advisory Committee of the WPB attacking the recent dismissal of Frederick Libbey, a technician in WPB's Iron & Steel Branch, who had antagonized dollar-a-year men by reporting favorably on Pres. Murray's plan to avert steel bottlenecks. The resoluion also demanded that WPB Chief Donald Nelson clean up dollar-a-year men who are retarding the war program by catering to corporate interests.

2. Unanimous opposition to any super-board or czar over wages.

3. Anxiety over the failure to enforce most of the sections of the President's 7-point anti-inflation program, particularly price control, rationing, and progressive taxation.

4. Endorsement of the recent decision of the United Auto Workers to withdraw its concession on premium pay rates for Saturday and Sunday work occurring in the middle of 40-hour work weeks unless this policy is universally applied.

5. Support for President Murray's stand for arbitration of jurisdictional disputes.

RECOMMEND BOSTON

6. Recommendation to the CIO Executive Board that it vote to hold the CIO's fifth constitutional convention in Boston, Mass., starting Nov. 9.

The Executive officers will meet again in the nation's capital on Sept. 3, and on Sept. 4-5 the Executive Board will convene.

In commenting on the Senate Finance Committee's "refusal to report an adequate and just tax bill," the CIO executive officials said the present bill "threatens not merely the living standards of the men and women engaged in war production, but also the entire foundation of the President's seven-point program."

"The committee has given encouragement by all its actions to the drive of reactionary groups for the passage of a sales tax with all its burdens on the poor and with all its dangers to national health and welfare," the statement added.

CAN'T BE IDLE

At the same time, the CIO officials warned "that no member of CIO union can afford to remain simply a passive onlooker or a silent voter" in the approaching elections. "The outcome of these elections is too closely related to the winning of a quick victory

Text of Statements By Executive Officers

Elections

In the approaching elections no member of a CIO union can afford to remain simply a passive onlooker or a silent voter. The outcome of these elections is too closely related to the winning of a quick victory over the Axis.

Labor has abandoned for the duration its right to strike and has pledged uninterrupted production of the instruments of war. Labor has therefore a redoubled duty to take every possible step to secure full unity behind every aspect of the Administration's war program to secure full effectuation of the President's Seven-Point program against inflation at home and to secure full support of the President's plans for effective and aggressive prosecution of the war abroad.

This means that the interests of the war effort, of the people and of labor require the election to Congress and other public offices of representatives who can be depended upon to support the CIO program for control of the cost of living, for curbs on profiteering, for an adequate and equitable tax program, for elimination of the poll tax, for protection of worker's health and welfare, and for winning the war.

Tax Bill

The history of the 1942 Tax Bill now before the Senate Finance Committee poses a sharp challenge to the people of the country. In the House, the Treasury program to raise funds for victory by taxation of those best able to pay was sabotaged and warped by the small group of Congressmen dominating the House Ways and Means Committee. A gag rule in the House thereafter prevented a large majority of the members of the House from making any effort to improve the bill.

The House Bill has now reached the Senate Finance Committee and the Treasury has again urged that additional revenue be raised and that it be raised by placing adequate income taxes upon the higher brackets and by plugging loopholes used by wealthy individuals and corporations to evade their tax obligations.

FLOUT PROGRAM

The Senate Committee has wantonly brushed aside the Treasury's program even before entering executive session for deliberation. The Senate Committee has given every indication of an attempt to emasculate even further the bill as received from the House and of an intent to impose the tax burden on those least able to pay. The Committee has given encouragement by all its actions to the drive of reactionary groups for the passage of a sales tax with all its burdens on the poor and with all its dangers to national health and welfare.

The Senate Committee's refusal to report an adequate and just Tax Bill threatens not merely the living standards of the men and women engaged in war production, but also the entire foundation of the President's Seven-Point Program,

It is essential that every member and every CIO affiliate take active steps to communicate with Senators in their respective States and make known the fact that the workers of America insist on an adequate tax bill based on ability to pay in general conformity with the program of the Treasury Department.

Murray Not To Run For Mine Post

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—CIO President Philip Murray announced this week that he would not accept nomination to run for the presidency of the United Mine Workers of America.

Since the blitz removal of Murray from the UMWA's vice-presidency several months ago by John L. Lewis, hundreds of locals have nominated the veteran union leader for the presidency of the miners.

Murray's statement in full:

"Innumerable locals of the United Mine Workers of America have communicated with me urging that I be a candidate for international office in the United Mine Workers of America. This is the highest honor which could be bestowed upon any man—the democratic and spontaneous call from his fellow coal miners to be their leader.

"For reasons which must be clear to all, I am compelled to announce that I cannot be a candidate at the present time for any international office in the United Mine Workers of America. I wish to extend to every coal miner my heartfelt appreciation for the many honors which they have so frequently conferred upon me."

Stone Union Wins Raise

York, Pa., Aug. 22.—Two cents an hour wage increases on August 1 and October 1 were negotiated by Local 27, CIO United Stone and Allied Products Workers for employes of the Thomasville Stone & Lime Co., John H. Lawson, secretary-treasurer of the union, reports.

The wage increase follows increases negotiated earlier this year, he said.

CIO Spokesmen Hit WPB For Firing Stuffed Shirts' Foe

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Reinstatement of an honest man in the War Production Board who was fired "for telling the truth" about the nation's steel shortage, was asked today by the CIO members of the Labor Advisory Committee of the WPB.

The CIO committee, whose sharp resolution against the blocking of maximum steel production by dollar-a-year men received the approval of the CIO executive officers, also called for the immediate discharge of the men in the Iron and Steel Industry Branch of the WPB who are "responsible for the present steel shortage."

HIT VESTED INTERESTS

The resolution, adopted by Clinton Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers; John Green, president of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, and Walter Reuther, vice-president of the CIO United Auto, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers, charged that every effort to expand steel production facilities "has been blocked by vested interests of the steel industry, who have been given aid and comfort by the dollar-a-year men" in the WPB Iron and Steel branch.

The CIO Labor Advisory Board members said that Libbey was fired after filing a report on CIO President Philip Murray's recommendations, made on behalf of the United Steelworkers, to eliminate steel production bottlenecks. Libbey's report confirmed "the merits and practicability" of Murray's suggestions, the resolution declared, and the only conclusion to be drawn from Libbey's dismissal "is that he was fired for telling the truth."

SEEK CLEAN-UP

War Production Chief Donald Nelson, in addition to being asked to reinstate Libbey and discharge the dollar-a-year men responsible for the steel shortage, was asked to dismiss the dollar-a-year men in other branches of the WPB "who are responsible for similar shortages in their respective business."

A realistic approach to the entire question of providing an adequate supply of materials to maintain maximum war production schedules, is an acknowledged necessity, the CIO officials declared.

Grillo Resigns Rubber Union Post To Join Army

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 22—Frank Grillo, secretary-treasurer of the United Rubber Workers since its inception in 1935, has resigned his position to enlist as a private in the Army.

Announcement of the move was made in a letter to the URW's general executive board, which is due to meet just prior to the union's annual convention here next month.

Thirty-nine years old, Grillo is married and lives in Akron. He told associates he expects to enter the armed services late this month.

Red Cross to Give Unions Honor Rolls

Washington, Aug. 22 — Unions helping the Red Cross meet its new blood plasma quota will receive honor rolls on which names of donor's can be posted, the Red Cross announced.

The plan, endorsed by CIO President Philip Murray and AFL President William Green, calls for the posting of honor rolls in union meeting

Urge Probe Of N. Y. News

New York, Aug. 21.—Support of Congressman Elmer J. Holland's demands for a grand jury investigation of the New York Daily News was voted by New York port members of the National Maritime Union.

"The Daily News," the NMU resolution said, "has launched torpedoes at our backs, which are as dangerous as those we face from Nazi U-boats." New York City organizations were called upon to join the seamen in a boycott of the Patterson-controlled paper.

The CIO's Stand

The demand of the CIO for a real win-the-war economic program occupied the attention of the CIO executive officers at their recent Washington meeting. They dealt vigorously with a critical situation in which all the forces of stupidity and reaction are ganging up on labor, while the greater part of the President's seven-point program is rejected or ignored.

One of the chief actions of the CIO executives was to declare their unanimous opposition to current proposals for a super-agency of governmental bureaucrats and a wage czar to freeze the workers' wages.

The CIO has agreed to wage stabilization as part of the seven-point program. But this does not mean wage freezing, nor does it mean that labor alone must sacrifice, while executives' salaries and corporation profits soar and no adequate taxation is applied to them. The CIO executives therefore again stressed labor's demand for equality of sacrifice.

They also expressed labor's anxiety over the failure to adopt any effective measures against inflation, through real price control, universal democratic rationing and progressive taxation.

The CIO executives issued a special statement on the tax bill, which as it stands is one of the worst wage-cutting, soak-the-poor and spare-the-rich measures that could be devised. They pointed out that the "Senate committee's refusal to report an adequate and just tax bill threatens not merely the living standards of the men and women engaged in war production, but also the entire foundation of the President's seven-point program."

It is urgent that all CIO unions and members communicate with their Senators at once, the CIO executives pointed out, to express labor's insistence on an adequate tax bill based on ability to pay, in conformity with the U.S. Treasury's proposals and the President's seven-point program.

Wages and Inflation

The favorite argument of wage-freezers is that increases in wages cause inflation, because increased purchasing power means more buying by workers, and this increased demand for a limited amount of goods results in scarcities and increased prices.

The current issue of the CIO Economic Outlook brings out some very pertinent facts that shoot this theory full of holes. In the past year, it shows, consumer income has increased some 21 per cent; yet retail sales actually decreased by 3 per cent in the same period.

One of the reasons for this is the recent increase in saving, particularly in the form of War Bonds. Over 21 per cent of current income is now being saved by consumers, as compared with only 7 per cent in 1939 and 1940, and 10 per cent in 1941.

Another reason is that workers, even with increased wages, have not been able to buy so many goods because of increased prices. A greater part of workers' income is also absorbed by paying off back debts, by increased medical care, and by the purchase of more and better food.

The Outlook cites British experience to show that wage increases do not cause inflation if proper price controls and rationing are enforced. British wages increased over 10 per cent between December, 1940, and March, 1942, but cost of living increased only one per cent in the same period.

There has been no wage-freezing in Britain, and wages have been raised continually through recent years. Cost of living rose as much as 26% between 1939 and 1940, but after effective price control and rationing were enforced toward the end of 1940, though wages continued to rise, the cost of living remained almost stationary.

In other words, the American wage-freezers' arguments about inflation are completely phony. The way to prevent inflation is not by cutting real wages, as they argue, but by progressive taxation, effective price control and widespread rationing, as proposed in the President's seven-point program.

The people who advocate wage-freezing and ignore all points of the seven-point program that don't apply to wages are more interested in doing a job on labor than they are in preventing inflation.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE SIGNING of CIO union agreements last week by the Little Steel companies marks the end of an epoch. It represents the final capitulation to collective bargaining of those industrialists who were so long the backbone of America's anti-union forces.

This event also has deep and encouraging significance for our war effort. It marks the almost complete organization of our most basic war industry. It means that steel labor and management can work together in democratic fashion, and in the spirit of national unity, on the all-important task of out-producing the Axis.

The last-ditch fight against unionism of Little Steel, and the other industrialists who took their lead from it, was all the more violent because it was a losing fight. It reached its height after U. S. Steel, General Motors and other big interests had already recognized collective bargaining was here to stay.

The Chicago Memorial Day massacre was the bloodiest example of the anti-union terror that marked this fight. There were also mass firings and wholesale intimidation of active unionists, and one of the most vicious and widespread propaganda and political campaigns against labor in our history.

The purpose of this campaign was to destroy the right to organize, as embodied in the Wagner act, and to restore the industrial serfdom which the big organizing campaigns of the CIO were rapidly bringing to an end.

The signing of the Little Steel contracts is the death warrant for this particular anti-union drive. True, there are still employers who resist union recognition and collective bargaining, and union organizers must still almost take their lives in their hands in certain sections.

But the heart has been taken out of open anti-unionism, and its financial backbone has been broken, by the capitulation of Little Steel.

All of this, however, does not mean that labor's struggles are over, nor even that it can rest on its oars.

When the United States entered the war, open and outspoken opposition to President Roosevelt's foreign policies was generally dropped. America's appeasement, isolationist and pro-fascist groups proclaimed their loyalty to the nation's war effort.

But that did not mean an end to the activities of such elements. Many of them simply changed their tactics from open opposition to under-cover sniping and divisionist propaganda, designed to cause disunity within the United States and between the United Nations.

The none-too-subtle innuendoes of such papers as the Chicago Tribune and the New York Daily News are a good example of this type of propaganda.

Similarly the anti-labor forces which rallied around Little Steel in its drive against unionism are not going to fold up, just because these companies have finally accepted collective bargaining.

Anti-unionism today does not feature the open union-smashing slogans of the drive which reached its height in 1937—though individuals like Pegler still continue to echo them.

But, as in the case of the recent campaign for abolition of overtime rates after 40 hours, labor's enemies are ready at a moment's notice to jump into the fray around any one of a dozen issues.

Wage freezing is one of these issues at the present time. The same publishers and politicians who made a hero of Tom Girdler when he was heading the anti-union drive are now exuding endless propaganda against wage increases which do not even offset the sharp increases in living costs.

Though strikes have been virtually abolished by the voluntary action of labor itself, demands for laws to hamstring the unions are constantly being revived on the slightest pretext.

Meanwhile, misleading propaganda about alleged high wages, strikes and soldiering on the job is constantly fed to farmers and the middle classes, to turn them against labor.

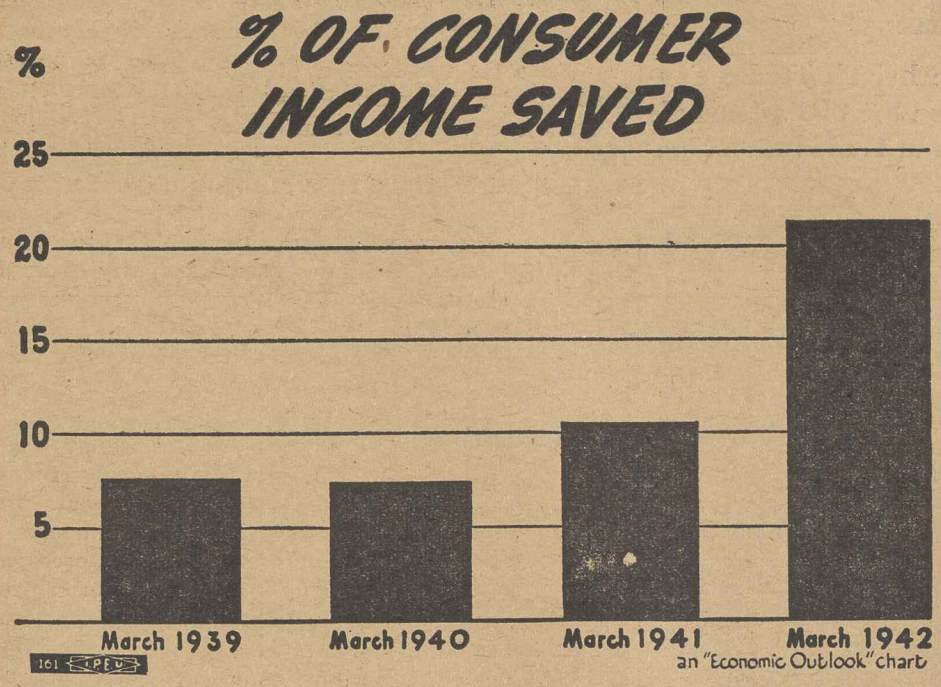
By such means, the anti-labor elements are seeking to keep their forces intact and to prepare the ground for an outright open-shop and union-smashing drive at the first opportunity.

★ ★ ★

Labor has constantly to be on guard against the new tactics of anti-unionism, both for its own protection and in the interests of our national war effort. For its enemies are closely linked with appeasers and fifth columnists, and their divisionist activities fit exactly into Hitler's game.

Labor's interests, on the other hand, coincide with our country's interests in this people's war for freedom, whose very backbone is a strong and vigorous labor movement.

Little Steel Signs CIO Agreements, Ending Long Epoch of Anti-Unionism



This chart is based upon data on disposable income, consumer expenditures and individual savings published by the U. S. Department of Commerce.

SAVINGS GROW: Americans are putting away more of their money for a rainy day, both through War Bonds and through savings accounts, this CIO Economic Outlook chart reveals. Figure has risen from 8% in March 1939 to 21% in March 1942.

Girdler's Vow to 'Dig Potatoes' Rather Than Sign, Was Phoney

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—In a series of almost routine negotiations that were definitely an anti-climax to five years of steady organizing, turbulent striking and fiery Labor Board hearings, the CIO has in the last fortnight brought Little Steel under contract.

Moving quickly after the War Labor Board's decision in the steel case, the United Steelworkers of America have signed agreements with Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown Sheet and Tube and Inland. The pacts bring union protection to some 175,000 workers, most of them in the northeastern and central sections of the nation.

Through the efforts of the USA-CIO under the leadership of Pres. Philip Murray, this huge bloc of vital war workers have gained 44c-a-day wage increases, check-off of dues and security for their union organizations.

The pacts leave only two significant steel producers outside the USA-CIO tent—Ernest T. Weir's National Steel Co. in Weirton, W. Va., and the American Rolling Machine Co. in Ohio, the latter dominated by reactionary Charles Hook, for years a power in the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers.

Only a few weeks ago the union swept to victory at another open shop factory, John D. Rockefeller's Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. at Pueblo, Colo., long a stronghold of anti-unionism.

Signing of the Little Steel contracts in so quiet a fashion that they scarcely received mention in the nation's newspapers was an indication of the vast progress made by CIO and its steel union during the past five years.

The spring of 1937 found the union—then the Steel Workers Organizing Committee—with U. S. Steel and a sizeable number of independent corporations under its belt but faced with the stubborn anti-union Little Steel bloc standing squarely across the path to further gains.

Tom Girdler, spokesman of the die-hards, vowed he'd rather go back to the farm and digging potatoes than sign a union contract. This week, when the pact was completed, Tom Girdler wasn't present and he wasn't digging potatoes either—he was on the West Coast bossing a booming aircraft company.

STRIKE MADE HISTORY

Forced to test its economic strength, the union called its strike late in the spring of 1937 to force the Little Steel bigwigs to back down. Chicago cops massacred 10 innocent pickets on the moors of South Chicago outside the Republic plant; Ohio's Gov. Davey called out the troops; in Johnstown, Pa., a phoney citizens' committee worked hand-in-hand with the strikebreakers supplied by Bethlehem Steel.

Throughout the nation's newspapers the worst propaganda in a generation was at work day and night to enflame the public's mind against the strikers.

Investigating this cesspool of corporate reaction, the LaFollette Civil Liberties Committee later exposed the inner workings of this elaborate machinery that provided or provoked violence and death in the steel towns. The money came from the companies; the stooges did their work on supposedly innocent and impartial citizens' committees; public officials were bribed or cajoled or removed.

UNION RALLIED FORCES

The steel companies' millions won the battle but lost the war. As the workers trooped back to work, sullen but determined to avenge their defeat, Little Steel had become the symbol of reaction to an entire nation.

Under Murray's leadership, the SWOC rallied its forces and set in motion the long series of organizing campaigns and Labor Board cases that finally ended in this month's contracts.

The union charged all four companies with scores of Wagner Act violations; it demanded $7,500,000 back pay for the strikers and a return of their jobs. Stockholders sued the companies for mismanagement and loss of profits caused by the unnecessary strike.

Girdler answered with a $7,500,000 anti-trust suit against CIO and SWOC, to the delight of anti-labor newspaper commentators, and Eugene Grace moved to buttress Bethlehem's company-union setup.

But one by one the union's cases came before the Natl. Labor Relations Board, and each time the NLRB's decision was outspoken: the companies were guilty. The corporations appealed the ruling. Finally, the U. S. Supreme Court handed down its orders backing up the NLRB and the CIO.

By 1940 the steelworkers were regaining confidence and strength in the plants of Little Steel. When Bethlehem got tough, they struck at Lackawanna, Johnstown, Bethlehem—and won.

70% WANTED UNION

About that time Little Steel threw in the sponge. The companies agreed to bargain with the SWOC provided the union could show a majority of the workers. Throughout last summer and autumn, elections and cross-checks of union cards and company payroll lists showed over 70% of the employes wanted to be represented by the CIO.

Bargaining started late last year, following NLRB certification of the union. But Little Steel was still no sissy, and the negotiations snagged on the questions of pay raises, union security and the check-off of union dues.

In February the case went to the new War Labor Board. Through weeks of argument and debate it progressed through a fact-finding panel and up to a decision granting 5½ cents an hour increases, maintenance of union membership and the check-off.

ANTI-CLIMAX

That's why the final lap was almost an anti-climax. In fancy company offices at New York and Pennsylvania and Ohio and Chicago the WLB decision was incorporated into agreements.

President Murray and other steel union leaders placed their names on the contracts. Little Steel executives signed on the dotted line.

The battle against unionism in the last major sector of the nation's basic industry was over. Now, with peace on the home front, steel management and steel labor can get together as they never could in the past to help fight another war—to whip the fascist Axis.

Economic Outlook:

Charges Facts Don't Bear Out OPA's Pay-Freeze Theories

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22 — The CIO Economic Outlook today challenged the inflation theories of OPA economists, charging that predictions made by the government agency have not been borne out by facts.

Basis of the OPA's actions on the economic front has been a theory that in-creased purchasing power, caused by the war effort, would bid up the prices of consumer goods, which are gradually being cut in volume as the nation gears itself to munitions output.

Fear of this inflationary gap—the difference between money in consumers' pockets and the value of available goods on the markets—has led OPA into a so far unsuccessful assault on wage standards and disputes with both organized labor and the War Labor Board.

In its current issue, the Economic Outlook asserts that war conditions have altered the financial habits of the nation and thereby put the kibosh on the "economics as usual" calculations of many economic theorists.

INCREASED SAVINGS

The Outlook, relying on government statistical sources, asserted:

"Thirteen billion of the 19 billion dollar increase in consumer income was saved by the American people. That is, almost 70 per cent of the increased income during the past year has been saved, and not spent, as some prominent government economists were saying would happen."

Accelerated buying of war bonds and deposits in savings accounts are draining off much of the excess purchasing power, the Outlook said.

Instead of a wild scramble for consumer goods, which might skyrocket prices, sales are beginning to slacken and retail trade papers are beginning to complain of the situation.

"Reports show that inventories or stocks have increased 72 per cent during the past year," the Outlook said.

SAVING 21%

"Consumers have been saving a much greater proportion of their income within recent months than they have ever before saved . . . over 21 per cent of current income is now being saved by consumers. This compares with only 7 per cent saved in 1939 and 1940, and 10 per cent which was saved in 1941. Indications are that the rate of savings will ocntinue to increase."

Inflation can be completely averted, the Outlook continues, by adoption of the President's 7-point anti-inflation program, with its calls for rationing, price control, equitable taxation, etc.

"This anti-inflation policy has not been followed," the publication charged. It added that "30 per cent of the cost of living items purchased by workers have been excluded from the price control ceilings. The effect of these exclusions has been that the cost of living index of the Department of Labor has continued to increase. . . .

'ONE-POINT PROGRAM'

"Wages, on the other hand, have been the only one of the seven points of the President's program that has been effectively carried out by the responsible administrative agencies handling their respective parts of the 7-point program.

"Thus it can be seen that the President's 7-point program has deteriorated into a 2½-point program, with only one of these parts—wages—really controlled."

In another section, the Outlook warned of the effect of vital material shortages on the war program, and pointed out that adoption of the United Steelworkers production program would have eliminated many bottlenecks and avoided present output curtailment.

Packing Union Takes Two Polls In South

Chicago, Aug. 22 — The CIO's southern organizing drive went up another notch as workers in two Tennessee packinghouses voted in a National Labor Relations Board election for the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, the union reported.

The PWOC announcement said workers in the Wilson and Co. Refinery voted 69 to 21 for the PWOC and at the Armour Lookout Refinery 114 to 16 for the PWOC. Both plants are at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Guild Wins Chester Walkout

Chester, Pa., Aug. 22.—The CIO American Newspaper Guild wrote off another stubborn strike today after the signing of a Guild shop contract between the Chester, Pa. Times and the Philadelphia-Camden Guild.

Concluding a ten-month struggle, the Guild won a contract providing wage increases up to 50 per cent, a five-day, 40-hour week, and other standard Guild terms.

Chester Times employes, who had published their own daily community paper during the strike, were guaranteed reinstatement to the Times which recently was leased by a new publisher from its owner.

$1 Increase Granted By Quaker Oats

Akron, Ohio, Aug. 22.—A dollar-a-day wage increase for more than 500 workers at the Quaker Oats Co. plant here was announced today by the CIO United Cannery, Agriculture, Packing and Allied Workers after the signing of a contract culminating five months of negotiations.

The agreement, retroactive to May 1, also provides paid vacations, a grievance structure, plant-wide seniority, double time for holiday work. Each Quaker Oats worker will receive from $50 to $60 in back pay as a result of the retroactive clause, the union said.

The union estimated that close to $120,000 will be added to the workers pay under the increased scale which brought the hourly rate of male workers up to $1.16 and for female workers up to 85c.

Argue Big Steel Case Before WLB

Washington, Aug. 22—Pres. Philip Murray and other officials of the United Steelworkers of America appeared before the War Labor Board to plead the union's case for 5.5 cent wage increases retroactive to February, union security and the check-off at U. S. Steel.

Principal opposition by the company was focused on the retroactive raise, similar to that granted by the WLB in the Little Steel case.

British Labor Heads Refuse To Alter 'Deal' With AFL

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Speaking in behalf of the British Trades Congress, Sir Walter Citrine has passed the buck back to the AFL on the CIO's demands for equal representation on the newly-formed Anglo-American Trade Union Committee.

President Philip Murray two weeks ago wired the British labor group that CIO could not participate in an international set-up in which the AFL would be the only spokesman for American labor.

Murray's cable protesting exclusion of the CIO and the railroad brotherhoods from equal status on the international labor committee has had marked repercussions among English war workers, it was reported from London by Allied Labor News.

Under the terms of the agreement reached by the AFL and the TUC, the AFL is empowered to appoint "representatives of any bona fide U.S. trade union body" to the Anglo-American Committee. These American representatives will keep in touch indirectly with labor in the Soviet Union through British union officials who are members of both the Anglo-Soviet and the Anglo-American Committees.

Citrine's original proposal, on behalf of the TUC, was for an Anglo-Soviet-American Committee to embrace all labor unions in the three principal anti-Axis nations.

MURRAY'S PROTEST

(Pres. Murray's cable to Citrine described the British unions' agreement with the AFL as a "back door deal", since the CIO's five million war workers would be represented on the international committee only through representatives picked for them by the AFL leadership. The railroad brotherhoods are similarly treated in the agreement.

"To secure fullest participation, unity and cooperation, these organizations should be extended the direct recognition that their numerical strength and strategic position in the war program warrant," Murray cabled.)

BRITISH DELEGATION

Members of the British delegation to the Washington conference, appointed this week, are Frank Wolstencroft of the Amalgamated Society of Woodworkers, president of the TUC; John Marchbank, who retired this week as secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen; Andrew Conley, secretary of the National Union of Tailors and Garment Workers; H. N. Harrison, president of the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions, representing 29 unions with a membership of over 2,000,000; and Sir Walter Citrine.

Hillman Hopes For Labor Unity In CIO-AFL Talks

Washington, Aug. 22.—Hope that the meetings of the CIO and AFL peace committees will be able to "find the way to a united labor movement today so urgently needed for labor's well-being and that the whole nation" was expressed today by Pres. Sidney Hillman of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America.

His views appeared as a signed editorial in Advance, ACWA publication. It was Hillman's first public statement since recovery from a long illness following his retirement from government service.

The ACWA leader listed two fundamentals for labor unity:

"First, no step must be taken that will in any way tend to impair labor's contributions to the war effort;

"Second . . . nothing must be done which will sacrifice any of the great organizational gains made since 1935 or exclude any organized workers from a united movement."

Union Seeks Output Council As Army Swats Balky Boss

By MEL FISKE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22—Extending its hand to the War Department, the CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers offered to assure maximum production in the now Army-operated S. A. Woods Machine Co. plant in Boston by proposing the establishment of a Joint Union-War Department Production Committee.

This joint committee, the UE suggested, shall have "sole responsibility for production." The proposal, in line with the War Department's oft-repeated request for the setting up of joint labor-management committees, was made by Neil Brant, UE international representative, soon after President Roosevelt ordered the War Department to take over the Boston war plant.

FIRM SPURNED WLB

Roosevelt sent troops into the plant because of the company's repeated refusal to abide by a unanimous War Labor order granting the union maintenance of membership and arbitration. Thus, for the first time in history the President decreed that workers who belong to a union in a government-operated plant must remain members in good standing of the union as a condition of employment.

In a statement ordering the Boston Ordnance Dept. to seize the war plant, Secretary of War Patterson said the refusal of the company "has jeopardized the continued efficient functioning of the mediation and arbitration machinery of the Government which representatives of industry and labor have promised to utilize as a substitute for strikes and lockouts."

The President acted after the company refused to heed the appeals of the WLB, its employer-members, the War Department.

Chicago, Aug. 22—Production and maintenance workers in the Columbia Metal Co. will cast ballots in a Labor Board election to decide between representation by Local 758, CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers or an AFL union.

Rubber Union, Companies In Joint Bond Drive

AKRON, O., Aug. 22—Labor and management in the Rubber and Allied Industries have banded together to conduct the first joint nation-wide War Bond Campaign, it was announced here yesterday.

The three week drive, scheduled to open on Monday, August 24, will cover more than 125,000 workers in 167 plants in 21 states and will be a cooperative war effort between the companies and 154 local unions of the United Rubber Workers of America, CIO. National headquarters for the campaign have been established in this city, center of the rubber industry.

WIRE FROM MORGENTHAU

In a telegram to the heads of the plants and the presidents of the local rubber unions, Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, expressed his gratification that the War Bond drive "is being conducted through the joint efforts of both management and labor."

"We at the Treasury Department are regarding this joint management-labor War Bond drive in your industry with unusually keen interest, for its success will be most valuable in establishing the pattern of similar drives in other industries," the Secretary said.

"This nation-wide campaign offers renewed opportunities to do the job so urgently needed by your country and to show that the rubber industry has the qualities of leadership so necessary to any successful campaign."

Under the slogan "Banded Together to Bond-Bard the Axis," the rubber industry drive has a two-fold objective; "All-out for 100 per cent War Bond participation, and all-in for 10 per cent of payroll."

The basis for the campaign is a Labor-Management Agreement establishing a Labor - Management War Bond Committee in each plant. This War Bond Contract, and many other features of the drive were originated by Frank Grillo, secretary-treasurer of the URWA and director of the union's nation-wide War Bond drive, in consultation with leaders of management and labor in the rubber and allied industries.

Hit Sales Tax

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 22—Outlining the CIO Victory Tax Program in a letter to Indiana senators, Walter Frisbie, secretary of the Indiana State Industrial Union Council, protested against passage of a general sales tax, explaining "the workers have enough to bear without a discriminatory class tax."

Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Work for the election of Win-the-War Congressmen was emphasized as one of the most important ways in which CIO auxiliaries can help their unions at two recent auxiliary conferences.

Leonard Lageman, state secretary of the CIO in Minnesota, stressed the role of the women in the election campaign in his speech at the opening session of the first CIO Auxiliary Convention in that state. Delegates from a majority of the Minnesota auxiliaries applauded heartily, adopted a resolution stressing the need to replace the appeasers in Washington with men who will give all out support to the President's program, and made election activity one of the main headings in the fine Victory program they adopted.

The new Minnesota State CIO Auxiliary Council which was created during the three-day women's meeting in Ely, August 7-9, will make an immediate drive to build auxiliary organization.

Mrs. Margaret Flom, of the United Electrical and Radio Auxiliary of Minneapolis, was elected president of the new council. Mrs. Anne Kuryatnik of the Steel auxiliary in Chisholm was chosen first vice-president in charge of organizing new auxiliaries.

CHICAGO CONFERENCE

A city-wide auxiliary conference in Chicago on August 10, heard Fullerton Fulton, Illinois CIO Director, express his belief in the immediate importance of building the auxiliaries so that the women can be mobilized to defeat "Curly" Brooks and Stephen Day in Illinois.

Representatives of seven Chicago auxiliaries present at the conference decided to create a co-ordinating committee of at least two women from each auxiliary in the city to serve as a clearing house for ideas and a central body for assisting new auxiliaries.

The delegates approved the suggestion of Eleanor Fowler of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, who presided at the meeting, that they ask the local unions to pledge weekly contributions for salary and expenses of a paid auxiliary organizer for the Chicago area.

MONTANA COUNCIL FORMED

More than 100 women attended the first state-wide auxiliary conference in Montana and established a State CIO Auxiliary Council. Mrs. Harriet Duffin, vice-president of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries in charge of council organization, attended the conference and inspired the delegates with her fine address.

The social and entertainment program included demonstrations by the auxiliary drill teams of Butte and Anaconda, a luncheon and a banquet.

over the Axis," they explained.

The officials outlined a guide for the election of Congressmen and other public office holders. The guide included support of the CIO program for control of the cost of living, for curbs on profiteering, for an adequate and equitable tax program, for elimination of the poll tax, for the protection of worker's health and welfare and for winning the war.

It is labor's duty, the statement on the coming elections noted, to take every possible step "to secure full unity behind the Administration's war program, to secure full effectuation of the President's seven-point program against inflation at home, and to secure full support of the President's plans for effective and aggressive prosecution of the war abroad."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

A great event occurred during the past week—after the climax of years' struggle on the part of labor to establish proper recognition of unionism in the steel industry—that tends to change the course of the thinking of industry throughout the nation in years to come as well as enhancing labor's position.

The event was the signing of contracts with the Inland Steel Corporation, Republic Steel Corporation, Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company and the unbelievable, Bethlehem Steel Corporation. These contracts are written around the National Labor Board award and provide for the increase of wages, granted by that board, and wage adjustments; union security, including maintenance of membership and check-off.

Six short years ago the most optimistic member of trade unionism would not dare predict this. Not even an optimist such as Vin Sweeney, who has always shown himself to be a good predicter. This achievement writes a new page in the history and struggle of labor for recognition in this nation. The accomplishment beats down many of the arguments that industry has resorted to against recognition of unions. The old saying was "as steel goes, so goes the nation." That is expected to be the result for other unions in other industries. The CIO tips its hat to its great president, Philip Murray, David J. McDonald, Van A. Bittner, Clinton S. Golden, Vin Sweeney, Harold Ruttenberg and all others who participated in this great victory.

We can look back now at the struggles of the past in which organized labor always met with reverse at the hands of the management of this industry. Not until the CIO entered this field did it begin to take shape in such a manner that unions could be recognized at all. It can be truly said now that those martyrs who gave their lives in this struggle did not die in vain. The United Steelworkers of America stands out today as one of the largest, most powerful and constructive unions of the world and its influence of good, will be felt throughout the years to come. May all our other unions, their representatives and membership, be inspired by this super-human accomplishment and go out with renewed confidence to build up their unions likewise.

100 Per Cent For CIO

The AFL intervened in a PWOC election and petitioned for certification, involving the Wholesale Market employes of Wilson and Company in Kansas City. The results were CIO got all the votes and not a single vote was cast for the AFL, reports CIO Regional Director Harvey C. Fremming.

George Craig, CIO Regional Director in Philadelphia, advises the winning of an election at the Nicholson File Company for the UERMWA by a vote of 243 for the CIO as against 85 for no union. Brother Craig also reports the securing of a 5c an hour increase by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers for the employes at the Pennsylvania Smelting Company.

The Howard Johnson Restaurant Chain Company of Camden, N. J., signed its first contract with the union, obtaining wage increases for the workers amounting to from $2 to $7.50 per week. Brother Victor Osuchowski represented the CIO in these negotiations.

The Columbia Casket Company workers through the able assistance of Brother George Bucher obtained a closed shop contract, reinstatement of all employes that had been discharged, with wage increases from 7½ to 10 cents an hour.

CIO Field Representative F. J. Michel of Chicago, advises that the NLRB election at the Buckley Studios, Inc., South Chicago, Ind., manufacturing Army tents and belts, voted: CIO, 164; against, 36.

Theatres Sign Contract

A contract was signed at the Stanley Corporation of America, Warner Bros., subsidiary in Passaic County, N. J., covering 150 ushers, cashiers and maintenance workers. This was originally a local industrial union. Wages were increased considerably; securing a maintenance of membership clause in the contract. The CIO representatives cooperated with the UOPWA in obtaining these provisions and as a result has inspired workers in this indutsry in other communities nearby. The UOPWA also terminated a five-year struggle with the Efficient Direct Mail Service, Inc., covering 75 workers, securing wage increases, etc.

Indian Labor's Aim: To Win The War

NEW YORK, Aug. 22 (ALN)—The All-India Trades Union Congress, which this week was reported to be meeting to determine its position on the civil disobedience movement now sweeping India, declared its basic policy toward the war in a resolution last December, passed shortly before the Japanese attacked at Pearl Harbor.

"The war which the Soviet Union and Great Britain are jointly waging against Hitler fascism, with the assistance of the United States," the resolution said, "is one and indivisble and can no longer be regarded by the workers or the people of India as an imperialist war to which they can afford to take a neutral or hostile attitude. The defeat of fascism now becomes the pre-condition of the achievement of independence and complete democracy in India."

Last week, in reply to suppression of the Indian Congress and arrest of many Indian leaders, a number of union locals in India took spontaneous strike action.

Significance was attached to the fact, however, that the first and most widely publicized strikes took place in the textile mills of Ahmedabad. The Ahmedabad Labor Association, to which the strikers belonged, is the only section of Indian labor not affiliated with the TUC and the only one influenced by Gandhi's philosophy of pacifism and non-violent resistance to Axis aggression.

MANY OPPOSED

Labor delegates from the Railwaymen's Federation and the unions in the new war plants in Bengal were among those who rejected the original Gandhi resolution expressing a neutral attitude toward Japan, and forced the later resolution of the Congress Working Committee to be expanded to include an unequivocal declaration of unity with the United Nations against the Axis.

Most Indian unions, reports indicate, are working to transform the Volunteer Groups of the All-India Congress into Civil Defense Committees for mobilizing the Indian people against the increasing threat of Japanese aggression.

INDUSTRIAL UNIONS

All Indian unions are now organized on an industrial basis, enrolling skilled and unskilled workers and ignoring the religious distinctions which Indian nationalists accuse British authorities of fostering. The extraordinary degree of Hindu-Moslem unity achieved by labor is the chief reason for its position of influence.

Despite the expansion of Indian industry since the start of the war, the number of industrial workers is still no more than 5,000,000 out of a population of 400,000,000.

The number enrolled in unions, which is far smaller proportionately than in the U.S. or Britain due to the low level of literacy, bad living standards and the effect of several generations of police repression, is now approximately 500,000. Membership in Girni Kamgar, famous union of Bombay textile workers, is 90,000.

British Labor Endorses Allied Labor News

London, Aug. 22 (ALN)—The General Council of the Trades Union Congress, meeting here this week, gave its full approval to Allied Labor News as an agency contributing toward international labor understanding.

The General Council has informed Allied Labor News' London office that it is communicating this decision to its 223 affiliated unions, with a total membership of nearly seven million.

"Full enquiry has satisfied the council," the communication says, "that Allied Labor News, with representatives in all capitals, is an independent organization which, although it has no direct connection with the labor movement, is one wherein unions will find benefit." Affiliates were urged to cooperate with ALN's London office.

2nd Front Plea Continues In England

London, Aug. 22 (ALN) — With German troops driving each day deeper into the Caucasus, British labor's campaign for an immediate blow by the U.S. and Britain against Nazi forces in Western Europe was greatly intensified this week.

Second-front meetings, organized by union committees, were held in the public squares of a dozen large cities.

Recently a deputation of 171 shop stewards, representing 110,000 workers in 78 war factories in the London area, was received by Churchill at No. 10 Downing Street. The workers presented a petition which read, "We have helped produce weapons to destroy Hitler. Hitler can be defeated on two fronts in Europe. We're ready to make sacrifices; we cannot longer allow the USSR to suffer and sacrifice alone."

SHOP STEWARDS

A similar deputation of shop stewards speaking for 150,000 workers in every war factory in Manchester presented a second-front petition to the Lord Mayor to be forwarded to Churchill. The mayor told them he was forcibly impressed by the postcards and letters in favor of immediate action he had received from wives and mothers of men in the services.

He promised the delegation that he would call a second-front town meeting next week, which would compare in size and importance with the one which at that moment was packing George Square in Glasgow with 20,000 workers.

Soviets Rush New Oil Fields To Offset Nazi Seizures

KUIBYSHEV, August 22 (ALN)—The German armies, in a desperate attempt to seize the Caucasus before they are caught up and crushed between two fronts, have taken the rich oil fields of Maikop and are nearing Grozny.

The loss of these fields will be a serious blow to the Soviet economy. But because of the heroic accomplishments of members of the Oil Workers' Union in recent months, this year's output of oil without Maikop and Grozny will be as great as the total Soviet production in 1941, the best year in the history of the industry.

Even without Baku, Soviet oil center on the Caspian, the new oil fields between the Volga and the Urals will produce 14,000,000 tons this year, more than a third of last year's total.

The Maikop workers who have not joined guerrilla brigades are now on their way to the new fields. Each week the Soviet press reports new wells blown in beyond the Urals. Vast tank farms built early this year by welders from the oil industry, many of whom received military decorations, ensure a steady flow of oil to the tanks and the planes of the Red Army.

The government has assigned its best engineers and production experts to the oil fields. This correspondent recently asked a high oil executive why the performance of the oil workers was so frequently above the target set by the engineers. The executive replied that engineers could calculate exactly such things as machinery, reserves and labor supply, but they had not yet discovered a way to allow for workers' enthusiasm and creative initiative.

In the last few months the fight of the oil workers to increase production has been as intense as the fighting on the battlefront.

At the end of May Pravda carried a three-column appeal from "workers, engineers, technicians and office employes of the Stalin Field No. 2, the Ordzhonikidze drilling crews, the Andreev Refinery and the Lieutenant Schmidt Oil Equipment Works."

The workers from these four enterprises, which are leaders in their branches of the industry, pledged to increase production.

Dies Lied In '41, Said Nazis In U. S. Were Busted Up

Washington, Aug. 22.—Nineteen months ago Martin Dies boasted to the House of Representatives that the Nazi movement in the United States was smashed. Today his boast is smashed—by himself.

Dies, last week, submitted a list of 17,000 names of Nazi sympathizers to President Roosevelt. Dies, on Jan. 2, 1941, claimed in a report to the House that his "exposure" of the Bund "smashed the Nazi movement even before it was able to go under way."

Ask FDR Seek Solution In India

New York, Aug. 22.—Calling upon President Roosevelt to use his good offices with the British government to bring about the immediate granting of independence to India, Local 16 of the CIO United Office and Professional Workers declared were Britain to deal with the Indian demands "in accordance with the Atlantic Charter, the Indian Congress and Indian people would not have become the victims of Ghandi pacifism."

Mexican Union Leader to Visit U. S. Soon

By CESAR ORTIZ

Mexico City, Aug. 18 (ALN)—Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL) will start his tour of the Americas August 21, the CTAL announced here this week. He will first visit the United States, where he plans to confer with CIO and AFL leaders on hemispheric labor unity.

"My principal purpose will be to help the workers of Latin America to contribute to the victory of the United Nations and the defense of the American continent, Toledano said.

"I plan to propose the creation of possible coordinated action of all these countries during the post-war period.

"This action must be along the lines traced by the historic Atlantic Charter and by the declarations of the President and Vice-President of the United States."

Labor Editors Visit Camp:

Signal Corps, 'Eyes & Ears' Of Army, Doing Swell Job

By C. W. FOWLER

FT. MONMOUTH, N. J., Aug. 22—The United States Signal Corps — communications arm of the U. S. Army—has for its slogan: "Get the Message Through." How well it is prepared to carry out that slogan was shown last week to a group of 40 labor press editors who were taken through the huge training center here.

We saw young Americans learning the latest technique of communication in wartime. We were taken through the radio school, we saw the soldiers training on telephone lines and installations, we watched them practicing with blinkers, we walked through lecture rooms where the principles of electricity were taught, we were allowed to play with a "Walkie-Talkie."

In a word, we saw the works, and we found them good. In this camp, and others like it throughout the country (we can't tell you how many or where) the Army is training thousands of young men for one of the most important jobs in opening up and sustaining a second front against the Axis, the job of keeping the communications lines open.

The training course is brief and thorough. Some 16 weeks are required to take an inexperienced recruit (minimum need is high school mathematics) and turn him into a fast, efficient and experienced signal man, in radio, in telegraphy, in telephony and all the forms that are used, including the old-fashioned but still useful wig-wagging.

Soldiers that we talked to told us how thorough the training is, and they all reported that they would leave the Corps with a solid grounding in training and experience to fit them for good jobs in civilian life. And judging from the intense concentration the boys showed in their work, they do get the training.

IN ALL ARMS

The Signal Corps functions in all branches and arms of the Army. No plane can leave the ground without a radio set installed, serviced and operated by Signal Corps trained men.

Every tank has a radio and an interphone system, put there and serviced by the Corps. Every anti-aircraft unit has sound detectors and phones, also the product of the Signal Corps. Telephone, telegraph, radio, blinkers, panels, foot messengers and even carrier pigeons are all supplied by this outfit.

No branch of the Army could move without the work of the Signal Corps. Modern offensive war depends on the closest possible coordination of all arms—tanks, planes, guns, infantry—and the Signal Corps makes it possible.

ORIGIN IN CIVIL WAR

Fort Monmouth is in the region where General Washington fought and won the battle of Monmouth in America's first war for freedom.

The Signal Corps as an entity had its origin in America's second struggle for freedom — The Civil War. Wire telegraphy, then still in its infancy, was the one rapid means of communication the Army had at that time. Much of telegraphy's later development was due to the advances made by the Signal Corps in that struggle. Radio came with the first World War; today, the war for freedom from Axis slavery has at its command the most modern techniques available through America's scientific and industrial developments.

The atmosphere around Fort Monmouth is thoroughly military, as you would expect. It is also a hard-working atmosphere, with a minimum of waste motion apparent to the visitor. As we tramped through the school rooms and the laboratories, guided by an officer, the boys scarcely looked up from their work, only mildly interested in the civilians. In the radio training rooms, almost no one so much as looked up—they were concentrating too hard.

The officers themselves are experienced and veteran signal men. Lt. C. T. Bruton, who guided my party, is a veteran of 25 years in the Corps, up from the ranks. Brig. Gen. G. L. Van Deusen, commandant of the post, welcomed us briefly and spoke with obvious pride of his men and the work they were doing. Col. W. O. Reeder, assistant-commandant in charge of the schools, spoke on the needs of the Corps—more men and above all more equipment, more and still more from America's factories.

It was a swell trip for a union press editor to take. We looked at the equipment, heard its good points praised, listened to explanations of how it worked—and thought with satisfaction that it was made by union men and women, CIO members. We could see too that the enlisted men and the officers knew what the equipment was for, knew the kind of war they were preparing to fight with it.

NEGRO SOLDIERS

One of our party was Charlie Silberman, editor of the CIO's "Signal Corps" union, the American Communications Association. Charlie bumped into a friend, an ACA member who had taken the officers' training course at the camp.

This friend pointed out a number of Negro student officers in the review that the post staged for us. They were trained along with the white students and with an occasional Chinese and a Filipino. There was no discrimination of any kind, either in training or in living quarters.

The Signal Corps is doing a job, a job that means the difference between victory and defeat in the offensive against the Hitler Axis. It's doing the job with all the resources of American inventive genius—the telegraph, the radio telephone, the telephone—to back up their work and their devotion to their country. And back of the boys who get the message through are the millions of organized American men and women who make the equipment in union factories throughout the nation.

With that combination, and with the will to take the offensive against Hitler that fills every man and every officer, the Axis can't win. As one of the boys pointed out, the Signal Corps is ready and itching to play its part in the second front drive that will bring victory and peace to the United Nations.

Pennsy R. R. Locks Out CIO Workers

New York, Aug. 22—(FP)—Two thousand track workers have been locked out by the Pennsylvania Railroad because they rejected transportation facilities worse than those given cattle, the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee charged this week.

The UWOC requested the Natl. War Labor Board, the Natl. Railway Mediation Board and the U. S. Conciliation Service to take action to return the men to their jobs.

The railroad, UWOC Organizer Eugene Teeter said, used freight cars about half the normal size, into each of which 100 workers were packed to be taken from New York to various points between here and Philadelphia. The men were crowded so tightly that a man could not move his arm to turn to see who was behind him.

MEN REBEL

There was neither light nor air in the windowless cars. The men were compelled to ride an average of three hours daily.

The men refused to ride in these cars and they struck on July 29. The union persuaded them to go back to work after two days and then for a week the company provided passenger coaches. But on Aug. 10 the men found the freight cars waiting for them and refused to work for a second time.

After being out for a week, the men returned to their jobs but this time the company said there were no jobs for them.

Plan Rallies On Transit Pact

New York, Aug. 22.—Mass rallies of members of the CIO Transport Workers Union were held last week to bring out the progress of negotiations between the city and the union now conferring on union demands for wage adjustments and better working conditions for the 32,000 employes on the city-owned transit system.

The TWU seeks the adoption of a four-point union program.

Biggest Brass Plant Votes CIO by 3-1

In one of the largest NLRB elections ever held in Connecticut's heavily-industrialized "Brass Valley", the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers ran up a 3½-1 margin over no union.

The vote:

CIO—4,892;

No Union—1,325.

In the company's smaller Waterville Division, the MM & SW polled 233 votes to 119 for the AFL and 11 for neither.

ASK COUNCIL

Al Skinner, union international representative, immediately wired President John Goss of the company asking for the speedy establishment of a joint labor-management war production committee, and for negotiations looking towards the first union contract with the corporation.

Skinner's wire asserted that the "cause of freedom for which the United Nations are fighting requires joint labor-management cooperation behind our Commander-in-Chief. We urge that you join us in putting it into effect at Scovill in the interest of victory for America and her allies."

The Scovill election victory came as the climax to a long organizing campaign in the Connecticut area by the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers' Union. In recent weeks it has been victorious in several other smaller plants.

Work With Unions, Landis Tells OCD

Washington, Aug. 22.—The nation's civilian defense program must tap the energy and abilities of American labor if it is to be successful, OCD Director James Landis warned all civilian defense councils this week.

"Civilian Defense needs even more labor participation," Landis wrote. "Again and again it is revealed that where labor has been adequately represented on a Defense Council, you have a healthy, functioning, realistic council.

"On the other hand, in those instances where labor has been denied its legitimate seat, the council has not proven as effective as it might be.

". . . How can a Defense Council pretend to speak for the community without a clear labor voice? If only for its unique skills and vast manpower (which is so essential to cope with modern war-time conditions) labor's presence on every council is obligatory.

"Without labor representation, an effective Defense Council is a contradiction!"

Union Blood

New York, Aug. 21—Union blood flowed into the Red Cross blood bank when Michael J. Quill, CIO Transport Workers Union president and Vincent J. Ferris, AFL Allied Printing Trades Council secretary, and three other CIO and AFL officers, donated their blood on New York's Atlantic Charter Day.

Newspapers' Double Standard: Play Down OPA Chief's Remarks on 400% Profit Jump

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—The big business press last week pulled another distortion.

Reporting a speech by Leon Henderson, the big business press palmed off two-third's of the price czar's ideas and omitted his serious indictment of the nation's big corporations' profit orgy.

By omission, it was noted, the press violated its own repeated request of government agencies to tell the truth about the war effort. This omission was seen as another effort to hide from the American public the unwarranted and rising corporate profits which President Roosevelt publically considered some time ago as detrimental to our war effort.

The big business press, of which the New York Times, the New York Herald Tribune, Washington Post, and many of the so-called "impartial" papers, were the most serious offenders, reported that Henderson condemned wage increases and farm income increases and said such increases must stop if inflation is to be prevented.

That was only two-thirds of the story. The other third was Henderson's exposure of the enormous profits marked up by business interests since 1939.

Henderson revealed that corporate profits this year are nearly 400 per cent over what they were in 1939.

At the same time, he said, "wages and salaries" increased 70 per cent since 1939, while farm income increases amounted to 75 per cent.

The press, however, forgot the "negligible" 400 per cent, and forgot, also, to point out that Henderson considered wages and salaries one and the same. Government figures, released a few weeks ago, showed that salaries of hundreds of corporation executives had been boosted as much as 218 per cent over their last year's salaries.

WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

Greater Voice for Labor At WPB, Unions Demand

Army, Union Cooperate At Seized Plant

BOSTON, Aug. 29—The CIO United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers and the War Dept. were teamed up today in the operation of the S. A. Woods Machine Co. after Major Ralph F. Gow, directing the plant for the Army, ousted the company's president.

A joint announcement by the War Dept. and UE, after a conference between Army and union officials, said that mutually satisfactory working relations had been established between the War Dept. and the union and that discussions were to be continued.

Union officials reported that the Army ordnance officers were "interested" in the UE proposal for the establishment of a joint union-War Dept. production council.

While Major Gow announced that "all connections of Mr. Harry G. Dodge with the possession and operation of the S. A. Woods Machine Co. in South Boston were severed today," the union reported the reinstatement of three workers fired by the company.

Hit Discrimination

Denver, Colo., Aug. 29—Trial Examiner Mortimer Riemer of the National Labor Relations Board announced an intermediate report ordering the Gates Rubber Co. here to cease discouraging membership in the CIO United Rubber Workers.

Rest Camp Set For Seamen In Maryland

Baltimore, Aug. 29 — A rest camp for seamen returned to port after delivering the goods to United Nations' armed forces will be established at a former CCC camp near here, National Maritime Union Port Agent James Drury announced.

Confer With CIO Head

FASTER SERVICE: on the nation's telegraph system is the demand of these CIO Communications Assn. representatives. They came to Washington for talks with labor and government officials following a national production conference in New York. CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Pres. Joseph Selly of the union are shown discussing the union's case, while other members of the delegation look on.

Equal Pay for Women Hailed By Labor Dept. Official

WASHINGTON, (FP)—Millions of women workers will benefit from the equal pay for equal work recommendation of the War Labor Board's panel in the General Motors wage case, if the WLB approves the panel report, Mary Anderson, directress of the Labor Dept.'s women's bureau announced this week.

Hailing the recommendation as "the most significant step ever taken by the federal government" for equal pay for women, Miss Anderson predicted that other industries will follow the pattern set for General Motors.

An investigation by Elizabeth Christman of the women's bureau has disclosed widespread inequalities in wage payments for identical work in war plants where men and women work side by side. In some instances women are paid 47c an hour on the same job that pays men 67c, she found.

The wages and hours act outlaws differentials in minimum wages, Miss Anderson pointed out. An agreement has been reached among the Army, Navy and Labor department on the equal wage policy.

Ask U. S. Seize Dayton Firm Fighting Workers

Dayton, Aug. 29 — Government seizure of the Brown & Brockmeyer Co. which, under the threat of firings, ordered its employes to stage a 1-day stoppage, has been asked by Local 768, CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, in a wire to Pres. Roosevelt.

The union charged the company with engineering the walkout, in conjunction with a company union, and pointed to threats of firing leveled against 150 workers by foremen who forced the workers out of the plant. The night shift was locked out, the union added.

Coops Nail Canners' Stall On Food Packing

Washington, Aug. 29—Unwillingness of part of the canning industry to cooperate in the country's war effort was again brought to the surface, the Cooperative League said this week, "when the soup canners of the U. S., with one outstanding exception, fought to the last ditch the government's proposal to conserve tin by putting more soup and less water in canned condensed soup.

The government won, the League declared, but not before the Columbia Conserve Co., packer of CO-OP label soups, proved by their experience that soup could be further concentrated by about 50%.

Nelson Sets Parley With Joint Group

(Stories on Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 — A joint committee of 20 CIO and A F L representatives warned Donald Nelson this week that dollar-a-year-man control of the WPB endangers the war effort. They demanded more equal voice for labor throughout the war production agency in order to blast at bottlenecks created by the "profits-as-usual" attitude of many of the officials loaned to the government by big business.

After meeting with the group, Nelson agreed to a longer conference with a six-man subcommittee to investigate every aspect of the war production program.

During the conference Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers, reviewed the WPB's failure to adopt CIO suggestions for increasing steel output, and assailed the dismissal of Frederick Libbey, a WPB technician who dared to criticize the dollar-a-year men and laud labor's ideas.

Meanwhile CIO Pres. Murray and AFL Pres. Green met with President Roosevelt to discuss the general question of wage stabilization, which a White House aide has been studying in recent weeks.

Found: That 'Strike Wave'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29— Man-days lost from war production by strikes in July dropped to 8/100 of 1% of total man-days worked, the WLB announced this week. In June the figures were 9/100 of 1%.

Telegraph Inefficiency Under Fire

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—In less time than it takes a telegram affecting the war effort to get through the nation's jumbled communications system, CIO President Philip Murray this week sharply rebuked the business-as-usual telegraph industry policies which "threatens a serious bottleneck in war production."

"Business-as-usual policies are resulting in serious delays in the delivery of telegrams affecting munitions manufacture, orders for medical supplies for our armed forces, air-raid warnings and even messages to General MacArthur," he said in a statement outlining a program for the conversion of the telegraph industry to war needs.

President Murray's statement was the newest development in the drive of the CIO American Communications Assn. to get the nation's telegraph system on a war-time footing.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

The ACA, at the same time, reported that:

1. Negotiations between the union and Postal Telegraph Co. had gone to the Dept. of Labor Conciliation Service after a breakdown of week-long contract talks.

2. A union security contract covering 238 workers had been signed by the union and the Western Union Cable System. The contract gave the cable system workers approximately $45,000 a year more in wages.

3. The union reiterated its no-strike policy, and accused government agencies and Western Union and Postal Telegraph Co. of taking advantage of it.

4. A protest over the buck-passing policies of the War Shipping Administration and eight tankship companies was made to Admiral Emory S. Land.

CONVERSION PROGRAM

The union's conversion program, prepared by ACA President Joseph Selly, proposed the establishment of 20-minute sender-to-receiver service, the abandonment of non-essential telegraph service, the raising of telegraph workers' wages to prevent the huge labor turnover in the industry, labor recruiting and training, and government financing to place the industry on an efficient war-time basis.

Murray characterized as "ridiculous" the telegraph industry's policy of giving horse racing results priority over essential war messages, and cited the ACA program as another instance in which a CIO union has been the first to bring forward an affirmative solution to a critical problem of war production.

Selly, pointing out that the telegraph industry had achieved 20-minute sender-to-receiver service between 1926 and 1929, revealed that vital war messages are "delayed from two to 24 hours."

ASK PROBE BY TRUMAN

Asserting that the ACA was "sharply critical" of the Federal Communications Commission, which has not seen the necessity of converting the telegraph industry to a war-time footing, Selly revealed that the union had asked the Senate Committee to Investigate the National Defense Program, headed by Senator Truman, to probe the communications industry.

Selly explained that the communications system was being hampered by a large exodus of workers from the industry, and concluded that wage increases to the 60,000 telegraph workers was necessary to stop the "disastrous labor turnover." The average weekly earnings of telegraph employes is $20.77, Selly reported, and compared the wage to the $32.40 a week earnings of other war workers.

Examples of the effect of poor telegraph service on the war effort were cited by Selly who told of a message from the Secretary of State being delayed for seven hours while messages from a prominent New York insurance agency got the right of way. In St. Louis, he noted, production in two war plants were delayed because of slow telegraph service, but the messages of a brewing company receive "priority over all other sources."

Iowa-Nebraska CIO Backs FDR, Murray

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa, Aug. 29—Unqualified support to President Roosevelt in the prosecution of the war and wholehearted backing of the policies of CIO President Philip Murray were voted in resolutions passed at the three-day convention of Iowa-Nebraska convention held here the end of last week.

John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils, who represented the national CIO at the convention addressed the 150 delegates the last day.

Ben Henry, president of the two-state council, stressed the leading part played by labor in the war in his speech to the delegates. "The working man will do the fighting, the dying on the battlefield and will pay the taxes to fight this war," he declared.

"We want to help work out the rightful place of the working man in the world when this war is over."

URGE SECOND FRONT

The council went on record in favor of opening a second front against the Axis; voted to petition WPB Chief Donald Nelson for a further study of the need to allocate contracts and materials to pro-administration candidates with records indicating support for the government's war program, and called for the removal from the union of "all disruptive activities whether it be John L. Lewis and his henchmen or Axis agents."

Resolutions were also passed strongly denouncing discrimination against Negroes in the armed services and war plants, and protesting the unfairness of the deportation charges against Harry Bridges, president of the CIO Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union.

POST-WAR PLANNING

A plan for economic, political and industrial re-organization after the war was outlined by Brophy in his speech on Saturday. "By the time this war is over," he declared, "our plants and machinery will be capable of producing 120 billion dollars worth of goods and services a year," he declared.

"We will have to see to it that enough purchasing power is put in the hands of the American people in the form of wages and salaries so that they can buy these goods which our modern equipment can produce."

Such a goal, he said, would require "continued regulation of price levels and maintenance of adequate wage levels through the machinery of collective bargaining and minimum wage levels."

The council voted unanimously to hold next year's convention in Fort Dodge, Iowa. Officers of the council, who hold office for two years, did not come up for election this year as their term does not expire until 1943.

Gain Security At Memphis Oil Plants

Memphis, Aug. 29 — A union security contract, embodying the decision of the War Labor Board, was signed by the CIO United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing, and Allied Workers and the Buckeye Cotton Oil Co., a Proctor and Gamble subsidiary, whose two cotton seed oil plants are the largest in the world.

Wage increases of six cents for workers earning less than 50 cents an hour and four cents for those making more than 50 cents were included in the contract covering more than 1,000 workers, a majority of whom are Negroes.

The WLB, in its decision granting the union maintenance of membership, took note of the fact that business elements, city government officials, and the Memphis press were hostile toward organized labor, particularly the CIO, and that an anti-Negro feeling in the city "is inimical to any organization which seeks to grant Negroes any kind of economic equality with white men."

Arkansas Council Reorganizes

Ft. Smith, Ark., Aug. 29—A special convention of the Arkansas CIO Industrial Union Council was held here Aug. 22 to reorganize and consolidate the CIO in the state.

Delegates took up the question of combatting the raiding tactics of District 50, United Mine Workers, and adopted resolutions condemning the poll tax; asking equal rights for women in industry; opposing discrimination against Negro workmen; and urging unity between the different branches of the labor movement and between farmers and labor.

The convention also condemned the policies of John L. Lewis and urged that more organizers be put to work in the South and called for support of the Government's Defense Bond sales.

New officers elected to head the Council are: President, Otis Nation, of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers; vice-president, J. E. Keene, Aluminum Workers of America; and secretary-treasurer, E. B. Epping, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

Labor and the Law:

New Procedures at Hand Against Bosses' Stalling

By LEE PRESSMAN
CIO General Counsel

A very important problem which now confronts organized labor arises out of the desire of a number of employers to take advantage of the fact that labor has given its commitment that there shall be no strikes during the war. Prior to the war, where an employer indulged in unfair labor practices, the workers through their union had a choice of weapons to meet such attacks.

Labor could call a strike in order to compel the employer involved to meet with the union in collective bargaining and to grant the legitimate demands of the workers. Either as an alternative or at the same time, labor could also appeal to the National Labor Relations Board and obtain an order from the Board compelling the employer to comply with the Wagner Labor Act.

UTILIZE NEW TACTICS

Today, strikes or stoppages of work are no longer available to the workers. We have given our commitment, in the interest of achieving maximum production, that there shall be no stoppages of work of any kind. It, therefore, becomes important for labor to utilize all other measures that may be available to achieve relief. Appealing to the National Labor Relations Board is but one course of action. Labor must recognize, however, that this opportunity is one that does not afford complete relief.

There are long delays inherent in the procedure before the National Labor Relations Board. Not only are there long hearings before the trial examiner designated by the Labor Board, but the employer may appeal the order of the Board to the Federal Courts. These long delays very frequently mean that by the time the union or the workers involved have obtained court approval, the relief is purely academic in that the union has been destroyed and the employer has achieved his objective.

IMPORTANT WLB DECISION

The National War Labor Board has issued an opinion in a recent case which shows how organized labor may obtain very effective relief against those employers who are using the war situation for their own selfish purpose. In a case involving the Lebanon Steel Company, the United Steelworkers of America had been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as a collective bargaining representative for the employes. The corporation refused to meet with the union and was taking its easy course through the courts to delay the collective bargaining conference. The United Steelworkers decided not to permit that employer to evade its responsibility.

The case was, therefore, certified to the National War Labor Board. Before that board, the corporation took the position that nothing could be done with it until it had exhausted all its rights by appealing to the U. S. Supreme Court.

The National War Labor Board adopted a very simple policy. It ordered the corporation to meet with the union and engage in collective bargaining.

After this order was issued, if the corporation failed to meet with the union, then, of course, the authority of the President of the United States would be invoked—which means the Government taking over the plant and operating it on a basis consistent with the orders of the War Labor Board.

BASIS OF DECISION

The basis for the War Labor Board's opinion was simply that, in the words of the Board:

"Whatever may be the situation in times of peace, this board does not hesitate to exercise its authority to require the company to proceed with collective bargaining negotiations with the union in order to avoid interruption of work which might contribute to the effective prosecution of the war . . .

"The decision of the National Labor Relations Board affirmed by the Court of Appeals must and will be given full faith and credit by the board. The decisions of the National Labor Relations Board are recognized by this board at whatever stage they may have reached. For the purposes of the National War Labor Board, they are assumed to be valid unless and until they are reversed by a superior authority."

PROTECTION FOR LABOR

This opinion is extremely important. It demonstrates that the strike is not the sole weapon that labor has at its disposal to obtain its just demands. Today, labor must recognize that through concerted action and a unity of purpose, heretofore demonstrated on the picket line, but now before the Government agencies and in political activities, labor can protect itself and procure the safeguards which it merits.

The National War Labor Board has demonstrated that it recognizes the need for protecting and assuring the existence and continuance of labor unions. As in the case of Lebanon Steel, the Board will compel employers to recognize their responsibilities in connection with the national war effort to meet with unions and consummate collective bargaining agreements to assure industrial peace so necessary for the maximum war effort.

Aluminum Expansion Sought

WASHINGTON — More rapid expansion of the aluminum industry and labor representation in the Government's aluminum set-up was urged by N. A. Zonarich, president of the Aluminum Workers of America, at conferences held here this week under the auspices of the Labor Production Division of the War Production Board.

Leaders of the CIO and AFL were summoned to the conference to discuss the crucial material shortages which are hindering the nation's all-out war effort.

WRITES TO NELSON

In a letter to War Production Chief Donald Nelson, Zonarich said that only an all-out production drive to produce all the aluminum necessary can win the war. Charging that the WPB has rejected many requests for aluminum for essential war weapons and yet says there is no shortage, Zonarich declared that there had been a shortage for a year and a half.

"The Aluminum Workers of America has repeatedly called these matters to the attention of the Government and the public," the AWA president wrote.

"We have proposed the methods to overcome the aluminum bottleneck.

"As early as July 1941, we showed how to expand the industry, how much to expand, how to train labor and assure an efficient working force in new plants, and how to build new facilities with a minimum use of strategic materials.

Senate Group Mauling Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29. — Apparently attempting to outdo the House of Representatives in its efforts to put across a soak-the-poor tax bill, the Senate Finance Committee today plotted to highjack the nation's workers and farmers while protecting the profits and high incomes of the corporation interests, the CIO charged.

The Senate version of the tax bill, now being deliberated behind closed finance committee doors, this week shaped up as a measure even worse in its soak-the-poor features than the recently adopted House proposal. At the same time, the Senate committee rejected a Treasury Department plan to limit the benefits accruing to large incomes.

Foregoing the Treasury Department's tax proposals and President Roosevelt's "equality of sacrifice" program, the Senate committee is preparing to reach into the pockets of workers and farmers earning from $10 to $23 a week. Even married men with two children to feed, clothe and shelter on $35 a week will come under the new tax bill proposed by the committee which cut the exemptions for dependents from $400 to $300.

CAREY RAPS PROPOSALS

The results of the current tax proposals for soaking the poor were pointed out by CIO Sec. James B. Carey, in an address on the American Forum of the Air. Carey revealed that the contemplated tax measures, if passed, would "undermine the living standards and health of some of our most essential works, destroying their efficiency for war production."

"One of the freedoms for which we are fighting is freedom from want," Carey declared. But the rich and powerful, he continued, are inclined "to shift the heaviest burdens onto the little people through wage freezing, unfair taxation, and other measures that make a mockery of our slogan of "freedom of want."

FAR SHORT OF GOAL

The tax proposals made by the House and Senate falls billions of dollars short of the Treasury Department's program to provide necessary war revenue because it fails "to reach deep into profits and surplus wealth," Carey explained.

WLB Grants Raise Union Security At Big Steel

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25—The War Labor Board today extended the benefits won by 175,000 employes of four Little Steel corporations to the quarter-million men and women on the payroll of U. S. Steel.

Upholding arguments of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, the WLB granted 5½ cent wage increases, union security and the check-off at five of Big Steel's major subsidiaries — Carnegie-Illinois, Columbia, American Steel & Wire, Nat'l. Tube and Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. The union security and check-off clauses will apply at the latter company, which operates in the southeastern states, when the NRLB has certified the USA-CIO as a sole bargaining agency.

RETROACTIVE

Though the three-point victory for the USA-CIO had been generally predicted, the union won another major point when the board ordered the 44-cent a day wage increase made retroactive to Feb. 15, 1942.

USA Pres. Philip Murray and Lee Pressman, general counsel, had argued insistently for the retroactive award when they appeared at the WLB hearings two weeks ago.

The union spokesmen pointed out that denial of the six-month retroactive payment would in effect cut the pay raise by 50 per cent.

Officials of the big Morgan-dominated steel trust based their opposition on the fact that the union hadn't filed notice of termination or change of contract last February when the Little Steel case—involving Bethlehem, Republic, Youngstown and Inland—went before the Board.

AVOIDED CONFUSION

Murray and Pressman both pointed out that to have terminated the Big Steel agreement and hundreds of others with smaller firms, would have thrown the entire industry into chaos for months. The USA-CIO leaders noted that it was known to everyone in the steel industry that the Little Steel case was a test, and that none of the other cases could have been decided ahead of it.

The four public and the quartet of labor leaders on the Board accepted the union's reasoning on the point. The employer group accepted the wage increase, but dissented both on the retroactive clause and the checkoff-union security issue.

Dean Wayne Morse, public member of the Board who wrote the majority decision, noted that the "union officials' postponing such formal notices (to terminate the contracts in February) until after the Little Steel decision was in the best interests of maximum steel production."

Further Conferences Slated This Week

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 — Representatives of American labor demanded this week that the "buck-a-year" crew that controls most important sections of the War Production Board be removed from power. They presented to Donald Nelson a four-point program aimed at converting WPB into an agency that will smash bottlenecks and pave the way for greatly expanded war production necessary to defeat the Axis.

At the end of the two-day verbal battle, the 20 spokesmen for CIO and AFL named the six-man joint Labor Policy Committee of the WPB to meet with Donald Nelson in a few days for further talks aimed at carrying through the unions' program.

Called originally by the WPB's Labor Production Division, the meeting soon broadened out from its original agenda on certain material shortages and examined the entire organization and policies of WPB. Recent dismissal of Frederick Libbey, a technician in the Iron & Steel Branch, shortly after his criticism of the dollar-a-year men, helped precipitate the sharp criticism of WPB which has been growing in labor ranks for the past several months.

FOUR PROPOSALS

The labor group proposed:

"1. A War Production Board with direct and effective representation of the nation's organized workers in the Board's membership.

"2. A Production Planning and Coordination Board with authority to plan, coordinate and integrate all phases of the war production program, with direct representation by organized labor.

"3. Representative joint policy committees of labor, management and government in each of the branches and divisions of the WPB established to assure realistic formulation and speedy and effective execution of the War Production Board's plans and policies in the various industries.

"4. Elimination of overlapping jurisdiction and conflicting functions of the several government agencies responsible for war production and integration in the Labor Production Division of the WPB of procedures related to labor policy in war production.

ESSENTIAL MOVE

"Only when these conditions essential to the attainment of maximum war production are met can labor assume its full responsibility, and effectively discharge its duty of bringing the nation's war effort to the maximum in every sector of American industry," the resolution concluded.

Earlier both Secretary James B. Carey and Allan S. Haywood, director of organization, had expressed the CIO viewpoint at the meeting.

"Labor knows production problems, and should be brought in to help solve them," Carey declared, adding that to date labor members of WPB had been "placed in positions where they constitute mere window-dressing."

"Labor is tired of being treated as a stepchild in this war production picture," Haywood asserted, "when it has something constructive to offer in achieving all-out production." He attacked the corporation-dominated officials who dream of doing business in the "same old way" regardless of the war.

NELSON ADDRESSES GROUP

Nelson, in his formal talk to the meeting, reviewed in some detail the operation of joint management-labor production committees, stressed the need for policies that will aid the nation, and called for ideas on how to boost output.

The WPB chieftain said that in his meeting with the labor group's sub-committee, he would welcome the "frankest kind of talk. You have said that you want to participate more fully in the war effort. All right—then I say, tell me how and when and where, and tell me specifically. . . . I promise

Advice on Labor Day:

'Celebrate Holiday . . . If Output Won't Be Lost'

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—Reiterating the nation's need to out-produce the Axis, WPB Chief Donald Nelson urged American workers to arrange their Labor Day celebrations on a schedule that would not hinder continuous operations in plants where shut-downs would hurt the war effort.

Writing to CIO Pres. Murray and AFL Pres. Green, Nelson noted that in many plants it may be possible to rearrange schedules so that Labor Day may be celebrated as a holiday.

"Wherever this is possible, I am confident that our national unity and the morale of labor will be stimulated if workers take one day to review the contributions they have made to the war effort, to discuss the stake that free labor has in the world-wide conflict in which we are engaged, and to make plans for intensifying their efforts towards increased output," Nelson said.

He added that local representatives of the armed services will be prepared to tell management and labor in various localities specifically which plants and mines should have continuous operation through the holiday.

In such places, he suggested, brief celebrations should be planned within the shops. In all other cases, Nelson concluded, he believed that observance of the holiday would be desirable.

CIO Board Meets Sept. 1

Washington, Aug. 29 — The meeting of the CIO Executive Board, originally set for Sept. 4-5, has been moved ahead to Tuesday, Sept. 1, Pres. Philip Murray announced this week.

Cause of the change in dates was a scheduled meeting of Murray and AFL Pres. William Green with Pres. Roosevelt on Sept. 4.

Give Labor a Say

The joint statement made by CIO and AFL representatives attending the recent meeting called by the War Production Board reveals a critical situation which labor demands must be remedied in the national war interest.

Layoffs are already occurring in a number of industries and others are threatened on account of bottlenecks and other obstacles to war production to which labor has repeatedly called attention.

The constructive suggestions which the unions have made, on the basis of their expert knowledge of the situation in their particular industries, have not received proper attention, however, due to the lack of adequate labor representation in the administrative set-up of the War Production Board.

The key positions are occupied almost without exception by men whose experience and background are those of corporate management, the labor representatives pointed out. Consciously or unconsciously these men take management interests and attitudes into account in their policy-making and administration, while they are hostile or give slight attention to labor attitudes.

Labor, on the other hand, is represented only in a single labor production division which does not have administrative authority and whose advice may be accepted or ignored at will.

The result is an unbalanced and one-sided approach to production problems which is badly hampering our all-out production effort.

Organized labor has extended its complete cooperation to government and industry in all measures necessary to increase production. It is not making a fuss now for the sake of hell-raising, nor to advance any selfish group interests. It has carefully avoided any form of destructive criticism that might create controversy or divide our united war effort.

Labor's representatives find it necessary to speak up vigorously at this time solely in the interest of assuring adequate supplies of tanks, ships, planes, munitions and other war materials to our armed forces and those of our allies.

It demands direct and effective representation for the organized workers in the WPB and its administrative divisions, in order that labor's constructive proposals for increasing production may receive proper attention, and in order that an effective and balanced production program may be worked out through the closest cooperation of labor, industry and government.

All labor asks, in effect, is that the workers be given an opportunity to render the fullest service to the war effort of which they are capable, because this full participation is necessary for victory.

The War Has First Call

The communications industry is the life-line of our national war effort. An army which can disrupt the enemy's communications has won half the battle. And our war production program depends completely upon speedy and efficient intercommunication.

CIO President Philip Murray has therefore performed an important war service in calling public attention to a threatening bottleneck in the American communications industry.

"Business-as-usual policies are resulting in serious delays in the delivery of telegrams affecting munitions manufacture, orders for our armed forces, air-raid warnings, and even messages to General MacArthur," Murray declared.

The American Communications Association of the CIO reports innumerable instances of unessential messages cluttering up the wires, while telegrams vital to the war effort are delayed.

In one city, for instance, a beer company received priority service because it represents a profitable account. As a result, messages calling workers to their jobs in a munitions plant were delayed in such a way that a whole day's work was lost.

In this industry, as in every other important war industry, it is the CIO union that has been the first to advance a constructive program to remedy such bottlenecks and to convert the communications industry to an all-out war footing.

This is one more instance in which labor's voice must be heeded in our national war interest.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THERE was once an ancient king who called in his wise men to ask their advice as to how he might win the war in which he was engaged.

His military strategists presented him with their best thoughts on a successful offensive. His technical experts gave him plans for new and more terrible engines of war. His propagandists told him how to cause unrest among the enemy.

The king listened to them all politely, and when they had finished, he arose and said: "Thank you, gentlemen. I have graciously allowed you to have your say, and your reports will be duly filed in the royal archives.

"But you may as well know I'm running this war the same way as I've always run this country, and I don't intend to take anyone's advice.

"Don't be offended, however, for as a token of my esteem, I am going to provide you with a large room at government expense. There you may meet as often as you like and talk your heads off.

"I will even provide secretaries to take down your plans and proposals. And to expedite the disposition of your suggestions, and cut through government red tape, there will be a built-in incinerator in which you may file your briefs as fast as you produce them."

And that is how the first "advisory committee" came into existence.

★ ★ ★

Of course, all of this was long before the days of democracy. Nowadays the government really takes the advice of all sorts of people—particularly if they are dollar-a-year men.

There are lawyers, bankers, salesmen, real estate operators, manufacturers, advertising men and coupon-clippers who participate actively in the administration of our war effort.

There are also some 12 million organized workers, who do the most essential work of war production and know more about industry than anyone else. But the assorted corporation vice presidents, salesmen and other dollar-a-year men don't think much of their advice.

So labor's only place in the Washington administration of the war effort is on seats reserved for a few labor leaders around nice big tables—on advisory committees!

★ ★ ★

All the recent rumpus about the Libbey dismissal from the War Production Board and the fireworks at the WPB meeting of CIO and AFL representatives arise from labor's basic dissatisfaction at being given representation only on advisory committees, whose advice is seldom taken.

Almost a year before Pearl Harbor, CIO President Murray advanced his industry council plan. One of its most important ideas was that labor should be drawn into direct representation and participation, along with management and government, in the actual planning and administration of the defense program.

The CIO unions, in all the major war industries, have proved their capacity for such participation by presenting constructive proposals for increasing war production.

Many of their ideas have been placed into operation with beneficial results, though usually after undue delay. Failure to adopt others has resulted in serious bottlenecks. The joint labor-management committees are also a partial response to the Murray plan.

But by and large, labor is still treated as a step-child in the administrative set-up of the WPB —while dollar-a-year men are given all the privileges of running the show.

The dismissal of Frederick I. Libbey, a WPB steel expert, was the spark that ignited the recent explosions. He was fired shortly after completing a report which upheld proposals of the United Steelworkers for increasing steel production and that union's criticisms of dollar-a-year maladministration of the iron and steel branch of WPB.

The CIO statement on the subject pointed to "increasing shutdown of vital war plants as a result of the mal-distribution and inefficient planning and routing of critical war materials."

It blamed vested interests in the steel industry, aided by dollar-a-year men, for blocking expansion of steel production; and called for the removal of "the deadwood, the misfits and those who think in terms of competitive business habits and business-as-usual."

Similar complaints have been made in all the subsequent labor statements and speeches. And through them all has run the insistent demand that labor be granted real representation in the administration of war production, so it may pull its full weight for victory.

ALL HANG TOGETHER: Mussolini, Hirohito and Hitler hang in effigy as thousands of CIO electrical union members at the RCA Victor plant in Camden, N.J., stage a happy mock funeral. Accorded a trial, with a local judge presiding, the Axis trio were condemned to death by the jury of workers. The trial was sponsored by the labor-management production committee.

Murray, Green See FDR; Renew Fight On Wage Freezing

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—All signs pointed this week to new government action aimed at putting a lid on wages and farm prices.

Pres. Roosevelt announced a major radio speech for Labor Day in which he will discuss both these problems. The President has had an old friend and associate, Judge Sam Rosenman, making a study of the wage problem during recent weeks.

CIO Pres. Murray and AFL Pres. William Green saw the Chief Executive on Aug. 26. At a press conference later, Murray gave no official word on the subject of their conversation, but he reiterated to newspapermen his belief that the subject of wage stabilization should best be left to the War Labor Board.

Asked if Green's views on the subject coincided with his own. Murray replied: "Bill and I are together on this question."

MEET AGAIN SEPT 3

The two labor leaders will meet with Mr. Roosevelt again on Sept. 3. Immediately after his visit to the White House, Murray pushed ahead to Sept. 1 a CIO Executive Board meeting that had been scheduled for the end of next week. Presumably the meeting will discuss CIO's views on the entire wage stabilization program.

Many observers believe that the President may be contemplating a super-board on wages, which would set general policies for the War Labor Board and other government agencies.

SPEECH TO UAW

Murray's views on the subject were stated early this month at the United Automobile Workers' convention in Chicago, where he emphasized that the best method of preventing strikes is to permit independent collective bargaining, with the WLB settling disputes that might in peacetime have ended in strike action.

"I am unalterably opposed now, as I think I will be in the future, to the establishment of any kind of national wage freezing," Murray told the UAW-CIO.

"I an unalterably opposed now, to creation of any super-agency, such as a moderator to control wages, a wage czar, or an interdepartmental committee consisting of certain bureaucratic leaders, to pass upon labor's right to participate in the benefits accruing in our national economy even during a war."

U. S. Indicts Cable Firms In Profits Plot

Washington, Aug. 29 — To the accompaniment of an almost deafening silence from the nation's editorial writers and radio commentators, the federal government this week announced the indictment of nine companies on charges of defrauding Uncle Sam on war contracts for cables.

Among the firms was General Cable Co., whose plant was taken over by the Navy to break an illegal strike of AFL electrical workers for a contract. Despite every precaution, however, the Navy was heartily greeted by the strikers, who had bitterly assailed the management's stubborn labor policies. Frequent Navy statements to the workers that the armed forces were "punishing" them fell on deaf ears.

In its announcement of the indictment, the government revealed the action against the cable firms had been kept secret for a week in order to avoid giving encouragement to the company's employes.

GOT HUGE PROFITS

The Dept. of Justice said the nine companies had conspired to fix prices on more than $50,000,000 worth of cables sold to the Navy since 1940, with the result that profits had ranged between 35% and 70%.

Atty.-Gen. Biddle revealed that General Electric Co. had already turned back $250,000 profits on orders of $2,000,000, and that other companies may do likewise.

The indicted firms, in addition to GE and General Cable, are Rockbestos Products Corp., New Haven, Conn.; Okonite Co., Passaic, N. J.; Collyer Insulated Wire Co., Pawtucket, R. I.; American Steel & Wire, a U. S. Steel subsidiary; Natl. Electric Products Corp., Pittsburgh; Anaconda Wire & Cable Co.; Pand Phelps-Dodge Copper Products Co. In addition six company officials were named. They face a possible two year prison sentence, a fine of $10,000 or both.

Labor Group Asks WPB End Bottlenecks

you I will give these suggestions and criticisms the most earnest consideration."

The CIO members of the WPB Labor Policy Committee who are to talk with Nelson are Clinton S. Golden, assistant to President Murray of the steel union; President John Green of the Shipbuilding Workers, and Vice-President Walter Reuther of the United Automobile Workers. The AFL members are Secretary-Treasurer George Meany, Frank Fenton and George Masterson.

The joint resolution passed at this week's meeting of the 20-man group warned that today's shortages may spell a "disaster" six months hence unless immediate steps are taken to offset it. It said the present WPB set-up provides no channels "which would enable labor to make its maximum contribution.

CORPORATE BACKGROUNDS

"Within the WPBs own organization, the key positions are occupied almost without exception by men whose experience and background are those of corporate management," the labor group charged. "Consciously or unconsciously, these men establish guarantees that management interests and attitudes are taken into account in policy making and administration. The Board's whole approach to its gigantic task is, therefore, unbalanced and one-sided."

Underscoring its demand for full labor representation throughout WPB, the resolution asserted that labor's influence is "relegated" to the labor production division, which has almost no authority or power within the agency.

The committee listed eight points necessary for full war output: all-out expansion of the production of critical materials; balancing of military requirements with the scheduling of production; a procurement and sub-contracting policy to enlist the facilities of small plants; conservation of critical materials; an improved, "streamlined' scrap collection program; speedy utilization of the skills of workers now unemployed; labor-management output committees in all war factories; and wage stabilization program designed to achieve "uninterrupted maximum production."

CIO representatives at the meeting, in addition to Carey and Haywood, were Clinton S. Golden and Harold Ruttenberg of the steel union; Russ Nixon of the electrical workers; President John Green of the shipbuilders; President N. A. Zonarich and Ben Fischer of the aluminum union; Victor Reuther of the auto workers; Clifford Shorts and Joseph Scanlon.

Golden Warns U. S. Of New Shortage In Vital Steel Supply

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—The War Production Board was warned again of an impending steel shortage when Clinton S. Golden, assistant to United Steelworkers President Philip Murray, presented a detailed report to Labor Production division officials of the WPB meeting with CIO and AFL representatives this week.

Demanding greater participation for labor in the war production councils, Golden declared that "without this participation by labor, effective co-ordination of the entire industry cannot be achieved, chiefly because the several steel corporations are simply incapable of subordinating their individual corporate interests sufficiently to achieve the highest degree of productive efficiency on an industry-wide basis."

LOOK TO PROFITS

The large dominant steel companies, Golden said, "have consistently shown more regard for their selfish postwar monopolistic interests than for the war."

Reviewing the suggestions offered by President Murray, on behalf of the steel workers, to the WPB, Golden sharply criticized the ignoring of Murray's proposal for a meeting of government, labor and management to draw up a program keeping the steel furnaces "burning at full capacity."

"Not only must labor's suggestions be adopted," Golden said, "but labor must be given participation in the war production program" so that it can follow its suggestions to the end and continue to make contributions toward total war production.

HITS LIBBEY FIRING

The discharge of Frederick I. Libbey, WPB engineer, who made a study of President Murray's suggestions on steel production, was protested by Golden. Libbey was fired "for telling the truth about certain dollar-a-year men in the Iron and Steel branch" of the WPB, Golden declared.

Recent developments in the steel industry indicate that 100 per cent production is not being attained, Golden declared, disclosing that 4,404,000 tons of steel ingot production is being lost annually through the inability of the steel industry to operate on a maximum basis.

Hit ODT Order Cutting Bus Service

New York, Aug. 29 — Taking issue with the Office of Defense Transportation's proposed order to curtail bus service in Manhattan, the CIO Transport Workers Union charged that the action will defeat its own purpose.

Secretary-Treasurer Douglad L. MacMahon, in a statement, said more gasoline and tires will be used by taxicabs and private car owners who will be forced to use their automobiles if adequate mass transportation is denied them. The TWU, he noted, proposes complete elimination of "wasteful consumption of critical materials by private automobiles and taxicabs."

Landis Asks CIO Back Fire Prevention Week

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—Full labor participation in national Fire Prevention Week, Oct. 4-10, was urged today by Director James C. Landis of the Office of Civilian Defense.

Writing to CIO President Murray, Landis declared:

"Fire is always serious, but now, as the President pointed out in his proclamation, every loss of life, every interference with production, every loss of critical materials, delays victory. Fire Prevention Week affords an opportunity to impress all the people with the present urgency of protecting our resources against destruction by fire."

Landis called for active cooperation in the fire prevention campaign by every union local throughout the country.

FOUR PROJECTS

The OCD head listed four general lines of activity for union groups to help the campaign:

"1. Sponsor meetings on fire prevention and control problems, fire ordinance enforcement and clean-up for fire prevention.

"2. Place fire prevention bulletins on headquarters as well as factory bulletin boards.

"3. Participate in plant or community activities such as parades and home inspection programs.

"4. Publicize Fire Prevention Week activities, and facts and figures about factory fires in their local papers and bulletins."

Senate Hits Tax on Vote Of Soldiers

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—The Senate this week passed a bill giving members of the armed forces a right to vote in the November Congressional elections and removed the poll tax as a qualification for military men from the southern states.

The poll tax ban, passed as an amendment to the bill, was passed by a 33-20 vote, with the Republicans playing smarter-than-usual politics in a move which found them splitting away temporarily from their allies among the poll-tax southern bloc. The bill now goes to a joint conference committee of House and Senate members, where the poll tax amendment will probably face heavy weather.

Stubborn resistance of the poll-tax Democrats from the South, which paralyzed the party's leadership, gave the Republicans a chance to make political hay. Sen. "Curley" Brooks of Illinois, a reactionary GOP-er who is the darling of Col. Bertie McCormick's Chicago Tribune, raced back to Washington from his home state and in a series of rapidfire moves pushed the anti-poll tax amendment through to victory.

COMMITTEE COMMENTS

Commenting on the confused legislative situation, the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax, which has received considerable backing from labor and progressives, called upon the Democratic leadership to overcome the obstructionist policies of its southern defeatist wing and force a vote for complete removal of the poll tax in federal elections.

The committee declared:

"The overwhelming majority of the American people who have expressed themselves clearly in favor of anti-poll tax legislation in this session of Congress are confronted with a peculiar set of circumstances: Senator Barkley, spokesman for the Administration, declares himself in favor of the abolition of poll tax laws and in favor of the men in the armed forces having the right to vote. But at the same time he confesses his impotence to prevent a wilful group of defeatist, obstructionist poll tax Congressmen in his own party from sabotaging the war effort by preventing congressional action on both of these important war measures.

JOINT RESPONSIBILITY

"The responsibility rests with Senator Barkley and Majority Leader McCormack in the House with the Administration to see to it that the House and Senate are permitted to vote on both he Pepper-Geyer anti-Poll Tax Bills and the Pepper-Brooks amendment to the Soldiers Vote Bill.

"The Republican leadership in the Senate has declared itself in favor of immediate passage of anti-poll tax legislation both as an amendment to the Soldier Vote Bill and in terms of legislation such as Pepper-Geyer bills.

"The Republican leadership, therefore, has the responsibility to secure 15 signatures needed to House Discharge Petition No. 1 from among the many Republican Congressmen who have not yet signed this petition.

'Win-War' Candidates Victors In Two States

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—"Win-the-War" candidates captured Democratic nominations in keen contests in two important primary elections this week.

In California, Gov. Culbert L. Olsen won the Democratic nomination for a second term, while in South Carolina Senator B. R. Maybank, a supporter of President Roosevelt, had an apparently safe lead over Eugene S. Blease, who campaigned for office on a platform consisting mostly of ultra-reactionary talk about "white supremacy."

Olsen's renomination was a victory for California labor, which had actively campaigned in his behalf. Earl C. Warren, who has gained a reputation as a leading west coast labor-hater, won the Republican nomination but failed by a sizeable margin to get the Democratic designation as well.

Olsen predicted that he would be the victor in the election contest, and said his victory in the Democratic primaries had not been a runaway only because large numbers of Democrats failed to vote.

Lt. Gov. Ellis E. Patterson, liberal Democrat, easily captured his party's nomination and will be opposed by James Rolph, 3rd, son of a former conservative Republican governor.

TOLAN RE-NOMINATED

Rep. John M. Tolan, whose Congressional committee investigating defense problems, has won wide acclaim, was a victor in the Democratic primaries and appeared likely to get the GOP nomination as well.

Southern California progressives were heartened by the nomination of Lt. Will Rogers, Jr., son of the late humorist, for Congress. He will oppose Rep. Leland Ford, Republican, one of the top leaders of the House "hate labor" bloc, who made an unsuccessful attempt to get the Democratic nomination as well as that of his own party.

Rogers, now serving with the armed forces in foreign territory, has been consistently pro-labor in his Beverly Hills daily paper.

ALP'S CHOICE

Meanwhile, the American Labor Party in New York chose Dean Alfange as its standard bearer in the state's scrambled gubernatorial contest. Nomination by the Democrats of John Bennett, who was Jim Farley's choice for governor, left labor groups cool. The GOP candidate will be Tom Dewey, who also fails to ring a bell in labor breasts.

The ALP vote, which reached 400,000 in the 1940 presidential elections, may be the deciding factor in the autumn balloting.

Virginia Unions Plan Joint Action

Washington, Aug. 29 — Resentful at the absence of labor representatives on state and local agencies of the WPB and the OPA, unions throughout Virginia are meeting here this weekend at the call of the Virginia United Labor Committee.

Immediate aim of the conference is the placement of representatives of workers on rationing and price-fixing boards throughout the state. The United Labor Committee is composed of representatives of CIO, AFL and railway unions.

Places can be won on the local boards and in the higher policy-making agencies "if we pull together and coordinate our activities, forces and combined strength," the call to the meeting said. "Help form the present and long range program of labor to provide for labor's fullest contribution to the all-out war effort and morale building now, and to the writing of a democratic peace document after the war shall have been won."

Signers of the call were Ernest B. Pugh, state CIO director; J. F. Joinville of the AFL and E. H. Thompson of the railway brotherhoods.

Medicine for China, Ambulance For Britain Donated by Unions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29—The New York Newspaper Guild forwarded last week the funds raised as the result of a week's drive among its members in behalf of China.

A total of $1,200 was raised which the New York Guild has asked be turned over to the American Bureau for Medical Aid to China for the purpose of establishing a Sanitary Corps Field Unit behind China's fighting lines. The CIO War Relief Committee will transmit the funds to United China Relief with instructions to establish such a unit in the name of the New York Guild.

An ambulance will soon be traveling down British roads bearing the insignia of the Intl. Fur and Leather Workers of America. This gift is to be purchased with the $3,000 fund raised by the Fur and Leather Workers and transmitted to British War Relief through the CIO Committee.

GIFT FROM ALASKA

In far-off Fairbanks, Alaska, the members of Local 444 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers have heard the call for war relief and assistance.

Their first contribution arrived at the CIO War Relief office this week. It represents the first donation received from Alaska by the Committee. Members of Local 444 are near the actual theatre of war and responded readily to the relief appeal of their International Union.

WOMEN'S CORNER

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Council of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

In accordance with its pledge of aid to CIO unions in campaigns to elect Congressmen who will work to win the war, the CWA-CIO has issued an emergency letter to all affiliated auxiliaries outlining ways in which they can help before and during the November election.

Pointing out that "many union men who used to help in campaign work are now working full time and overtime in war production" and many others are fighting on battlefronts far from home, the letter urges "wives, mothers, sisters and daughters to carry on for them." Congressmen elected in November will remain in office during the most critical period of the war. Their actions will determine the course of the war and the fate of the country. It is therefore urgent that women help to elect Congressmen who will give wholehearted support to the President's victory program, who will defend and protect the rights of and the welfare of American workers and who will work for the complete destruction of the Axis abroad and reaction at home.

In addition to urging all auxiliary members to register and vote, the CWA-CIO suggests house to house canvassing to ensure large registration of women and their vote for candidates backed by labor. Through the cooperation of the CIO War Relief Committee, the CWA-CIO is also prepared to supply lists of CIO members in Army camps to whom absentee ballots may be sent. Voting records of Congressmen running for reelection will also be sent on request.

AUTO AUXILIARY ORGANIZER

At the request of the Fourth Annual Conference of the UAW Auxiliaries an international representative of the Auto Union has been assigned full time to auxiliary organization. He will work under the joint direction of the Coordinating Committee of the Auxiliary and the International Union.

CIO-USSR Union Accord Proposed

Washington, Aug. 29 — A proposal that the CIO form an agreement with the Russian labor movement, similar to the one now existing between the British Trade Union Congress and the AFL, was made in an open letter to the CIO Executive Board by Philip H. Van Gelder, secretary-treasurer of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, it was disclosed today.

Van Gelder, after reviewing CIO President Philip Murray's protest to the TUC over the shunning of the CIO in the recent establishment of "allied labor unity" between the AFL and TUC, also suggested that the Russian labor movement act as intermediaries between the CIO and the British group.

The Anglo-Soviet Labor alliance was established many months ago, and the British Labor Congress invited the AFL to join the alliance. The AFL, he said, rejected the invitation and proposed another that left the CIO "completely out of the picture." This was accepted, despite CIO protests.

Assuming that the Russian labor movement would "be glad to accept" his proposal, Van Gelder noted "they can not fail to realize the importance of the CIO in this gigantic war effort."

Honor Members In Armed Forces

New York, Aug. 29—Members of Local 76-B of the United Furniture Workers now serving in the Armed Forces will be honored at a ceremony during which a service flag will be raised outside the union headquarters, the local announced this week. The union now has 250 members in the Army and more continue to leave daily.

Labor Man Wins Office In Tennessee

Wrigley, Tenn., Aug. 29 — Deep in the heart of poll tax Tennessee, labor as represented by Local 314, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, has again hit a home-run by securing the nomination of James R. Brown, a member of the local, as state senator in the Democratic primaries. In this part of Tennessee, nomination on the Democratic ticket is virtually election.

Brown wlil represent Hickman, Cheatham and Williamson counties in the state legislature, as he did last term.

Brown's only opponent in the August primaries, was Floyd T. Williams, also a member of Local 314. So the CIO was sure to have one win-the-war senator, regardless of the outcome.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

A great day for the Steelworkers. The War Labor Board awards 250,000 members of the United Steelworkers of America, employed by the largest steel combine in the world, the U. S. Steel Corporation, provided 5½c hour wage increases, retroactive to February 15th, with daily wage guarantee, union security and check-off. Congratulations to you, President Murray, your associate officers, staff and to the members of the United Steelworkers of America.

Estimates, based on straight time, show that about fifteen million dollars in back pay alone will be paid to the steel workers. Add this on to what Little Steel brought to their fellow members and you've really got something. The Union is secure and ranks as one of the largest in the world. Many old timers who know the history of steel in resisting unionism over a period of many years can hardly realize the truth of the situation.

Those recalcitrant employers who continue to resist unionism would do well to remember the old saying, AS STEEL GOES, SO GOES THE NATION. This accomplishment means much to not only the United Steelworkers of America, but to all the CIO affiliated unions. The time is ripe to organize! So let's get on with the job now—it can and must be done!

New Headquarters

The CIO now occupies its new home at 718 Jackson Place, N. W., near the White House, Washington, D. C. A fine building! A splendid location and fitting for our movement which has done so much for the working men and women, children and the nation and the United Nation's cause in this world-wide struggle to preserve liberty throughout the world; furnishing the materials of war to our and our Allies' armed forces to destroy the Axis, stop aggression and bring world peace based upon the four freedoms. Your movement, your home in the Nation's Capital is dedicated to continuous service to the toilers of the nation for industrial democracy and security.

At a meeting attended by Wendell Lund of the Labor Production Division of the War Production Board, AFL and CIO unions, as well as the AFL and CIO National Officers, whose members are engaged in war production, methods of intensifying war production and dealing with war efforts in general were presented by the two labor organizations in a united front. The representatives of the WPB were told that labor was not satisfied with the present set-up and wanted to be fully represented on policy-making and administration bodies. Labor knows the issues involved in this war and wants to make every contribution possible to the furnishing of materials to win this war. To do so it must be taken into full participation on all matters involving production and offered its services to that end unselfishly and with one desire and that is to serve the nation and the cause of the United Nations. Organized labor must not be treated as a step-child and policy making should not be left to those, who in the main, are responsible for the bottlenecks and shortages.

Win 12 Elections

The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers have won the following elections during the past few weeks:

Scovill Waterville Plant
Waterbury, Connecticut	CIO:	253	AFL:	119
Scovill Main Plant
Waterbury, Connecticut	CIO:	4892	No Union:	1325
American Mag. Co., Cleveland, Ohio	CIO:	80	No Union:	29
Peru Mining Co.
Hanover, New Mexico	CIO:	105	AFL:	2
Empire Zinc Co.	CIO:	110	No Union:	67
New Mexico Consolidated Mining Co.	CIO:	12	AFL:	8
Chase Brass & Copper Co.

Bridgeport,Connecticut	CIO:	346	No Union:	5
Benrus Watch Co., Waterbury, Conn.	CIO:	548	No Union:	62
Chicago Foundry Co., Chicago, Ill.	CIO:	95	AFL:	5

This is a wonderful showing for this Union and makes a total of 31 election victories out of 34 they have held in the past 90-day period; an average of one every three days. That's real pitching boys, real batting and fielding too!

South Keeps Coming In

Regional Director Ernest B. Pugh of Virginia reports a Labor Board election victory at the Consolidated Paper Box Co., in Richmond, with a vote of 31 for the CIO as against 5 for the AFL. Brother Pugh also reports the winning of an election by the Fur and Leather Workers' Union at the Virginia Oak Tannery, Luray, Va., with a vote of 185 for CIO as against 9 for the AFL. This victory is particularly significant in view of the heavy opposition by the mayor and the Chamber of Commerce.

The UCAPAWA won an NLRB election at the Purina (feed) Mills by a vote of 68 for the union as against 12, so reports Regional Director Christopher in Tennessee.

Ben Henry, CIO Regional Director in Des Moines, Iowa, reports the winning of the election at the Ordnance Plant, operated by the United States Rubber Co. The results of the election gives United Rubber Workers, CIO, 50.1% as against 44.5% for the AFL. This campaign was conducted under great difficulties and all who participated are to be congratulated.

Chalk up another election victory for the CIO at the Stanley, Inc., woodhandle factory (subsidiary of the Stanley Tool Co., New Britain, Conn.) with a vote of 23 for IWA as against 22. Brother Ed Blair of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers organized these workers and handled the election campaign for the IWA-CIO. The International Woodworkers of America won another election last week at the Hitchcock Mill at Sisters, Oregon, with a vote of 26 for CIO as against 20 for the AFL.

Brother O. S. Baxter, Sub-Regional Director for the USA, reports the negotiation of a renewal agreement at the Dicky Clay Manufacturing Co., with wages increased to 43c per hour; the wage increase ranging from 5c to 10c per hour, maintenance of membership and check-off.

The United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, CIO, won a sweeping victory at the Saunders Baking Company, Detroit, Michigan, by a vote of 493 for CIO as against 148. This CIO affiliate also signed a contract with the Oakland County Food Dealers' Assn., Oakland County, Michigan, granting a union shop and check-off clause to the employes of 250 stores in the association. Wages were boosted in the "Big Three" Wholesale Dry Goods houses in St. Louis, Missouri; The Butler Brothers, Ely Walker and Rice Stix.

Churchill To Confer With Miners

London, Aug. 27—(ALN)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill, in a move which indicates the increasingly important role of workers in the war effort, has called a special conference of delegates from the principal branches of the Miners' Federation of Great Britain to deal with the serious question of Britain's coal shortage, which now threatens to hold up production of the arms needed for the second front against Hitler.

In a strong appeal for an immediate increase in coal production, issued to all branches of the MFGB, Ebby Edwards, general secretary of the union, declares: "The shortcomings of the mineowners must not be made the excuse for the miners' refusing to face up to their responsibility to supply the nation with needed coal.

If the factories and work yards producing ships, airplanes, and other munitions of war are held up for want of coal, the community well may look at our industry as one which can be charged with criminal neglect in the hour of the country's peril."

INCREASE OUTPUT

Already the South Wales Miners Federation, representing 220,000 workers in Britain's principal coal mining area, has responded to this appeal by setting a production target considerably in excess of present output.

While many coalowners and sections of the press are trying to put the blame on the miners for the coal crisis, accusing them of absenteeism, the government and the general public hold otherwise. "It is doubtful whether, in fact, avoidable absenteeism is greater in the mines than in other industries," a government White Paper stated last June. "In the last week for which statistics are available, the average number of days worked per miner was 5.66—the highest on record."

Australian Unions To Aid Government On Output Problems

MELBOURNE, Aug. 29—(ALN)—The Australasian Council of Trade Unions, at the invitation of Prime Minister Curtin, met here this week to set up a trade union panel to advise the government on all matters affecting the direction of war industry.

The panel, which will hold regular sessions with government officials, will consist of representatives from the production unions, the miners, construction workers, railwaymen, dockers and transport workers.

Because of the growing cooperation between the Australian trade unions and the labor government, the panel is expected to have an important effect on government policy and increase war production. Its first job will be to supervise the application of Labor Minister E. E. Ward's order, announced the first of August, forbidding workers in war industries to change jobs except at the instance of the government.

41% IN UNIONS

The importance of organized labor in the production picture in Australia can be told with figures: Out of 2,800,000 people gainfully employed, 41 per cent, or 1,150,000, are members of unions. This is the highest membership figure in ACTU history. The percentage of organized workers out of the total working population is higher in Australia now than in any country except the Soviet Union.

In Curtin's first broadcast from Australia to the United States on March 14, he observed that four Australian men out of ten were then in the fighting forces or making munitions.

Since then this proportion has been substantially increased, as indicated this week when Curtin announced to a meeting of state premiers that 800,000 Australians are at present in the army, war factories or the Civil Construction Corps, which is building strategic roads and airfields under the direction of the Allied Works Council.

New South Wales coal pits are working without interruption now under the July coal control regulations prohibiting stoppages unless authorized by the executive board of the Australian Miners Federation. The miners are preparing a plan to increase production of coal, needed for Australia's expanding war industry, by opening rich new seams and improving underground transport. The plan will be put into effect within a month.

Mexican Workers Seek 2nd Front, War Training

By CESAR ORTIZ

MEXICO CITY, August 29—(ALN)—At a second-front mass meeting this week organized by Mexico City's twelve leading trade unions affiliated to the Federation of Workers of the Federal District (CTM), leaders of Mexican labor demanded an immediate allied offensive in western Europe.

Speakers at the meeting, held in the Arena Mexico, included Jesus Yuren, general secretary of the Federation; Senator Fernando Amilpa, representing the national committee of the Confederation of Mexican Workers, and Vincente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL).

Local unions sponsoring the meeting represented 12,000 workers in Mexico City's rubber, steel, wood, meat, printing and cigarette industries, as well as its transport and brewery workers. In addition, the meeting was endorsed by national CTM unions with headquarters in the capital and by several unions not affiliated with the CTM, among them the Miners and Metallurgists, the Union of Electricians, the National Union of Telephone Workers and the Union of Railroad Workers.

UNIONS' PRESSURE

Labor pressure for a European offensive has gained momentum in Mexico since Toledano, at a ceremony in Mexico City commemorating the 159th anniversary of the birth of Simon Bolivar, appealed for a second front as the best bulwark for Bolivar's ideals of continental unity.

Proof that the advance of Hitler's armies into the Caucasus has caused genuine alarm among Mexican workers has been given this ALN correspondent in a series of exclusive interviews with labor officials representing a cross section of the national trade union movement here.

ASK TRAINING

Meanwhile compulsory military training under supervision of Army officers was begun this week by the Union of Textile Workers (CTM) in the Federal District of Mexico. Training under the new plan will be given to 7,000 textile workers between the ages of 18 and 45. Women members of the union have formed civilian defense units, specializing in first aid and air raid precautions.

Soon after Mexico's declaration of war, the Construction Workers Union formed a voluntary battalion of engineers under direction of the army. Now 450 skilled construction workers have been trained in fire fighting methods and have learned to lay out trenches, build pontoon bridges and air raid shelters. This battalion is the first of a series which the CTM is organizing throughout the country.

Organization of eight infantry battalions of volunteers in the port of Mazatlan, first proposed by the State Federation of Labor, has been approved by the governor and the army commander of the region. The volunteer battalions are composed mainly of workers, but have also enrolled recruits from other sections of the population, including several priests.

Monopolies Pressure Against Further Probe Of Patent 'Standing'

By MEL FISKE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29 — Another link in the tight-fisted chain of national and international monopolies will be unreeled by the Senate Patents Committee which has been uncovering the amazing control over patents held by America's monopolies in cahoots with Nazi cartels, Senator Homer T. Bone, chairman of the committee, announced.

The nation's optical industry is next to be investigated by the committee which has already revealed the danger to America's war effort of the tie-up of U.S. and Nazi monopolies, the Washington senator reported.

The committee's investigation, covering more than 4,000 printed pages of testimony, has resulted in the unraveling of a story of international intrigue which has been seen as a stab in the back to the United Nations war effort.

At the same time, the investigations have "pointed out that the patent laws have been used in a way that is not beneficial to the people of the nation, Bone added.

HAD MUCH EFFECT

The little-known patent control held by the monopolies was uncovered after investigations of the nation's big name corporations which included General Electric, Standard Oil, Westinghouse, and the synthetic rubber and alcohol and dyestuff industries.

Standard Oil Co., after its tie-up with the Nazi Farben Industries was revealed, immediately sprang to its own defense by buying full-page advertising space in hundreds of daily papers throughout the nation. General Electric and Westinghouse decreased the cost of fluorescent light bulbs after the committee charged the two companies with attempting to stifle the use of this new lamp that uses half the current required by incandescent bulbs.

USING PRESSURE

But the main result of the committee's investigations has been the apparent pressure brought by the nation's monopolies upon a few members of the six-man committee. This monopolistic pressure, it is reported, forced the committee, by a 5 to 1 vote in secret session, to decide to drop further investigations after holding two or three further probes on comparatively small patent monopolies.

Little by little, as the investigations of these smaller national patent monopolies continue, it is expected that the work of the committee will decline even further until the committee's work ceases altogether.

Pressure by the patent monopolies upon the committee and other government figures having influence with the committee members was to be expected, observers noted. While the committee operated, it revealed the amazing extension of monopolistic control to the patent laws under which patents were exchanged between Amreican and Nazi firms up to the time of Pearl Harbor.

FOUGHT CHEAP LIGHTING

The recent exposure of the conniving of General Electric and Westinghouse is an example of the lengths to which big business goes to prevent improvements in industrial products from being passed off at a saving to the customer.

The two companies hooked up in an effort to prevent fluorescent lighting from coming into widespread consumer use, since the new lamp requires half the amount of electrical current needed for present incandescent lamps, and lasts twice as long as the present bulb.

The attempts of the two monopolies to squeeze out one independent fluorescent lamp product who bucked every effort made to bring him in line with General Electric and Westinghouse plans to throttle the use of the new lamp in the general consumer field, was revealed when General Electric went to court against the independent concerns.

Although General Electric obtained postponement of an anti-trust case pending against them in the Justice Department on the complaint that the case would interfere with the company's efforts to develop war production, the General Electric brought suit against the independent fluorescent lamp company which is working top speed on war orders.

WLB Studies Pay Demands In Metal Plants

Washington, Aug. 29 — A War Labor Board panel today plowed through 37 cases dealing with the demands of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers for wage increases of $1 a day and union shops in plants spread over nine states.

MMSW President Reid Robinson appeared before the panel here last week to open the union's case in the first of the hearings. A probe on the union's demands for workers in the giant American Smelting and Refining Co. are to begin today.

Robinson told the panel that "a critical situation faces the metals industry and the country as well —a situation which jeopardizes the success of the whole war effort." At present, Robinson declared, "the output of copper, lead, and zinc is declining because workers are leaving the industry for higher paying jobs—faster than they can be replaced."

At the same time, War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt appealed to copper, lead and zinc workers to stay on the job and announced a five-point government program, one of which "is intended to make wages of miners more nearly comparable with those in other war industries."

Win Cannery Poll

Longmont, Colo., Aug. 29—In the face of a strong anti-CIO campaign by the Kuner Empson Cannery Co., the CIO United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers drew a 161 to 13 vote in a National Labor Relations Board election.

Women To Get Men's Wages In War Plant

Washington, Aug. 29 — An increase of 7½ per cent in the hourly and piece work rates of 1,260 employes of the Norma-Hoffman Bearing Corp., Stanford, Conn. was ordered this week by the National War Labor Board. The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, which represents the employes, had requested a general increase of ten cents an hour.

The Board's decision was reached by a 4-to-2 vote, with the labor members, Emil Rieve and Robert J. Watt, dissenting.

The order calls for a 56 cent hourly starting rate for men and 45 cents for women, with equal wages for women when they "fully perform all the tasks previously performed by men."

The Board also ordered a maintenance of membership provision which allows union members 15 days durnig which they can resign from the union if they wish.

Retail Union Wins Detroit Election

New York City, Aug. 29 — An election among employes of the Sanders Bakery & Ice Cream plant in Detroit, was won 493 to 148 by the United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, International President Samuel Wolchok announced here this week.

The poll which was conducted by the Michigan State Labor Mediation Board, followed a seven-day strike called by the Dairy & Food Workers Division of the Union to stop the firm's union-busting activities.

Wolchok said the management had previously stalled on the union's request for an election, but the strike changed their attitude.

Murray to Address Big Atlanta Rally

By LUCY R. MASON

ATLANTA, Aug. 29—President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations will speak in the Atlanta City Auditorium, Sunday, Sept. 27, at 3:30 o'clock.

Great interest is being shown in this first appearance of Pres. Murray in Atlanta and it is being shared by non-labor as well as labor groups, including the newspapers, leading business men, and city, state, and federal representatives.

Mayor W. B. Hartsfield of Atlanta will welcome Murray and the great audience which will gather in the auditorium. C. H. Gillman, CIO regional director, will introduce the mayor. Ralph McGill, executive editor of the Atlanta Constitution, will introduce Pres. Murray. John Paschal, editor of the Atlanta Journal, will also be on the platform.

PROMINENT GUESTS

Among the heads of war agencies who have accepted invitations to sit on the platform are Frank H. Neely, an official of the War Production Board and one of Atlanta's most prominent business men; and Dr. B. F. Ashe, director of Division 7 (Southern Area) of the War Manpower Commission, with headquarters in Atlanta.

Station WSB of the Atlanta Journal will broadcast an interview with Murray on Saturday afternoon, the hour to be announced later. This station has a state-wide hook-up.

The Georgia Industrial Union Council will hold its annual meeting on Saturday, September 26, delegates remaining for Pres. Murray's address on Sunday. The Atlanta Industrial Union Council will entertain the State Council delegates with a dance on Saturday evening.

Rap 'Forced Labor' Plan In Northwest

Portland, Ore., Aug 29—A strong protest against proposals that "labor battalions" of U. S. Army troops he sent into the Pacific Northwest to relieve the manpower shortage was made here by the CIO International Woodworkers of America.

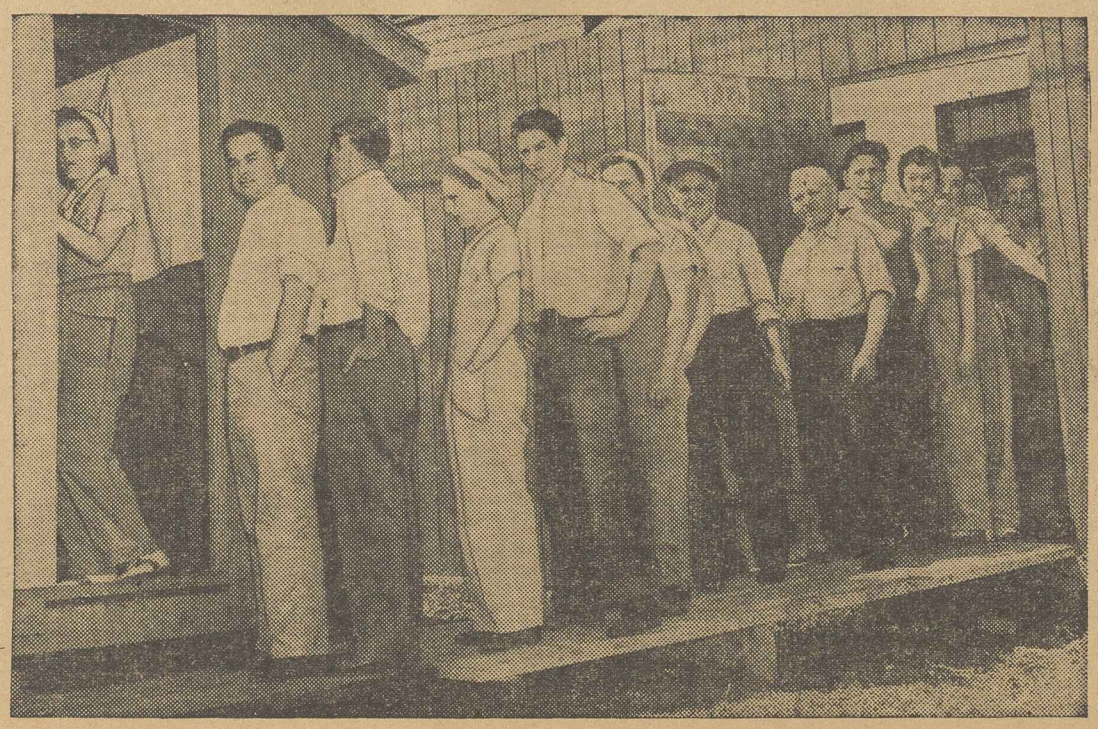
The IWA chraged that the shortage was caused by the refusal of employers to make full use of idle machinery, to run a six-day work week, and to pay living wages.

The proposals for labor battalions were branded by IWA officials as "both un-democratic and unsound from a practical standpoint." They declared that use of troops would merely serve to further dislocate the industry and result in less rather than more log and lumber production throughout the great Douglass fir area.

Origin of the proposals, which were written up in the daily newspapers, is uncertain, but they were viewed generally as a trial balloon to test public reaction.

Fake Union Stifled

New York, Aug. 29 — The National Labor Relations Board ordered the Emerson Radio Co. to cease and desist from efforts to choose a union of their choice and to stop giving aid to a company union. The decision resulted from charges led by the CIO United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers.



LINE UP FOR UNION: This steady parade of workers to the NLRB polling booth spelled death for an old company union at the Greenebaum Tannery in Milwaukee. They voted 4-1 for the CIO Fur & Leather Workers Union.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5—Full support for the President's Win-the-War Program and a series of demands for economic and political action to gear the nation for victory in 1942 featured the special meeting of the CIO Executive Board called this week by President Murray.

The board went on record for immediate enforcement of all sections of the seven-point anti-inflation program and reiterated flat opposition to any form of wage freezing or the setting up of a wage "czar" or supreme economic council to regulate the entire life of the country.

It urged political action at forthcoming elections to clean out appeasers and defeatists and put Congressmen and Senators in office who are all-out in support of the President and all necessary war measures.

It called for working unity of all labor groups throughout the United Nations, including labor movements in Latin-America, rebuking the attempts of leaders of the AFL to exclude CIO and Railroad Brotherhoods from such working unity.

It voted full support to President Murray in his proposals for a committee to work out the problem of unity with the AFL in prosecuting the war. It called for a sound victory tax program based on ability to pay, reiterated demands for all-out war production and full labor representation on war production agencies, protested anti-Negro and other discrimination, and urged full scope and power for the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

Dominant note of the meeting was the urgent need for immediate enactment of President Roosevelt's victory program, which was expressed in the resolution declaring: "It is labor's task to mobilize all the people behind the program, and to sweep aside all enemies of this national war policy of our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt."

Ford Wage Case Goes To WLB

DETROIT, Sept. 1 — The National Ford Council of the United Automobile Workers announced this week that agreement on the new contract with the Ford Motor Co. had been reached with the exception of points dealing with wages and methods of settling grievances.

The wage demands will be submitted to the National War Labor Board for settlement. The union is asking a $1 a day increase; increased pay for skilled Ford workers to equal wages paid in jobbing shops; 60 days' pay for employes entering military service; and 10 per cent bonus for night shifts; and overtime pay for Saturday and Sunday.

The union is also asking for equalization of rates in all Ford plants throughout the country.

Aluminum Union Using 'Every Means' To Settle Dispute With ALCOA

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Sept. 2—No stone is being left unturned to reach a peaceful solution of the wage dispute with the Aluminum Co. of America, officials of the CIO Aluminum Workers of America said here this week.

AWA locals seven in Alcoa plants voted unanimously last week to reject the National War Labor Board's decision refusing a wage increase. Plans were being discussed at AWA headquarters here to reconvene the conference of delegates representing the various Alcoa locals.

President Zonarich expressed confidence that a proper solution could be reached with government authorities if the company would cooperate.

SEEK JUSTICE

In a statement issued last Friday in Washington, Zonarich said that the vote turning down the WLB's decision "represents the determination of our membership to obtain justice in the case we have had before the Board since Mar. 2.

"This action by our locals, and previously by our national conference, has placed the responsibility for further action up to me as president of the Aluminum Workers of America. While in Washington regarding important production problems, I have had the opportunity to confer with government and union officials.

"The Board's decision is viewed widely as unfair, unworkable and dangerous to maximum production. Workers are quitting their jobs. Many more, skilled in the industry's operations, are only remaining at work because they hope this matter will be straightened out."

Mail Overseas Xmas Parcels By Nov. 1

Washington, Sept. 3—November 1 has been set, by an agreement formulated by the War, Navy and Post Office Departments, as the deadline for mailing Christmas parcels overseas.

The present restriction upon overseas parcel post is 11 pounds weight, 18 inches length and 42 inches combined length and girth. The public is urged voluntarily to observe the following limitations: volume should not exceed that of an ordinary shoebox, and weight should not exceed 6 pounds.

Mail officials in the Navy Department have pointed out that packaging should be sturdy, to withstand handling and piling.

All mail matter remains subject to censorship.

Council Gets Blood Donor Exhibit

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 3—CIO unionists witnessed a public demonstration of a blood donation at a rally held here last week under the auspices of the Greater Buffalo Industrial Union Council.

When the council called a "Second Front Rally" in the Front Park, a mobile unit of the local Red Cross Blood Donor Service was parked in front of the speakers' stand, with a cot set up on the stand itself. With a doctor and nurses in attendance, a member of the council donated a pint of blood.

Manning the microphone on the stand was Alfred G. Larke, secretary-treasurer of the council.

Electrical Union, Eyes Set on Lifting Output, In Parley

CLEVELAND, Sept. 3—With the union's job as organizer of production for a victory of the United States over the Fascist Axis as its main concern, the eighth annual convention of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, representing more than 400,000 war production workers in the nation's electrical and machine manufacturing industry, opens Labor Day morning at Hotel Carter.

More than 600 delegates — from 25 states and Canada — with the union's General President, Albert J. Fitzgerald, presiding, will review the production achievements of the organization over the past year and work out the UE's policies for the coming twelve months of victory effort.

In addition to President Fitzgerald, other principal officers of the UE are Julius Emspak, the union's general secretary-treasurer; James J. Matles, director of organization, and nine general vice-presidents.

120,000 NEW MEMBERS

During the three quarters of the 1941-42 union year already reported, 120,131 workers in the industry paid initiations to become new members of the UE. It was said at the union's national office that if the same rate of growth is shown for the final three months of the year, the year's total of new members will be in excess of 160,000.

The UE now has 810 plants under contract, covering approximately 435,000 workers.

Tackling increase of war production as its main job, the UE called on its local unions to set up war production councils immediately after the attack on Pearl Harbor, when the UE's General Executive Board held an emergnecy meeting to work out the production program. More than 100 such labor-management councils were in operation by the time Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, first launched the plan for the Government; the UE now has more than 200 such councils set up.

OUTPUT THE KEY

Throughout the year, all issues—such as wage policy, collective bargaining activities, etc.—were handled by the UE in their relation to production.

It was said at the UE's national office that virtually all major wage negotiations are now concluded, with substantial wage gains ready for report to the convention.

On two other main problems affecting production—maintenance of union membership and equal pay for equal work for women—the UE set precedents during the year.

The UE's Walker-Turner Co. case before the War Labor Board resulted in the first Board ruling on maintenance of membership, with the UE's democratic structure being given specific recognition as a main reason for granting the provision.

The UE's Norma Hoffman Bearing Co. case resulted in the first Board ruling that women workers should suffer no lower wage scales by reason of their being women.

MAJOR PROBLEMS

Major problems for the coming year which the convention will work on, according to a union spokesman, are "the kind of production problem that cannot be settled within the limits of a plant by the plant production council—such questions as raw materials, government policy in organizing production, taxation as it affects production, wage stabilization instead of wage freezing, and other issues of that kind."

This year's convention will be a "streamlined, working convention," it was said. The UE's General Executive Board has declared that in view of the international emergency, social and entertainment features must be reduced to a minimum, leaving delegates free to give undivided attention to the problems of the union.

Originally scheduled for Indianapolis, the UE convention is being held in Cleveland instead because Indianapolis hotels declined to withdraw regulations discriminating against Negroes.

BOOKS FOR SOLDIERS and sailors and marines are being collected through the CIO Office & Professional Workers' Victory Book Campaign. John Stanley, now an Army private, who's coming to the convention from his camp in Mississippi.

Toy, Novelty Union Parley In Pittsburgh

Pittsburgh, Sept. 3—Reports on considerable organizing progress will be made to the United Toy, Novelty & Playthings Workers convention, which opens at the Roosevelt Hotel Sept. 5.

War Activities Drive Brings Office Union To Peak Strength

By HELEN KINGEREY

NEW YORK, Sept. 3—They used to say that it was impossible to organize the office workers. They were too filled with prejudice, too conscious of their nice white collars. So for a long time, the office workers were labor's forgotten men. And they needed organization. Most of them didn't even have enough money to pay the laundry bills to keep their white collars clean; and when the depression made things worse, their prejudice didn't seem so important in comparison with a decent living.

That's how the United Office and Professional Workers of America was born. Chartered by the CIO in 1937, it has grown in five years from a membership of 8,000, made up of people from 23 AFL locals and independent unions, to its present membership of over 40,000.

When Pres. Lewis Merrill calls the union's fourth convention to order in Albany, N. Y., on Sept. 5, delegates will hear reports of solid progress during the past two years.

The past year has marked its period of largest growth, proving that the union's double-edged program of building a strong organization that mobilizes every member for maximum participation in the war effort and at the same time offers the measure of economic security necessary for such participation is what American white collar workers really want.

GOOD UNIONISTS

And that growth is living disproof, too, of the old idea that office workers don't make good union members. The girls at the typewriters and the men at the ledgers may be a little slower in joining a union, but they stick once they get there, if the union gives them real leadership in working out their own collective bargaining problems and making their contribution to the national effort.

Organization and war activities go hand in hand in the UOPWA. In the whirlwind campaign that led to the union's biggest organizational victory—the winning of the New York State election of 4000 Prudential insurance agents—it was not only the idea of higher pay and more dignity on the job that brought the men into the union. It was also the fact that the UOPWA gave them a chance to work more actively toward winning the war—in civilian defense projects, in selling war stamps and bonds, in obtaining equitable gas rationing (a grave problem for the insurance agent).

BIG CAMPAIGNS

By mobilizing entire industries for increased participation in the war effort, the UOPWA has helped thousands of white collar workers to do real war work even though they are not engaged in actual war production. The Advertising Mobilization Committee has completed 14 leaflets, posters and exhibits for government agencies.

The Book Mobilization Committee is at work on projects for publicizing books that are real weapons in the war of ideas. These, and similar committees in other industries, have drawn in employers and unorganized as well as union members, thus stimulating labor-management cooperation and showing the unorganized how they can step up their contribution by working together.

Under the leadership of Lewis Merrill, UOPWA president since 1937, stenographers and insurance agents, editors and newsstand men, copy writers and lettershop workers, and many other kinds of office workers are educating thousands of the once "unorganizable" white-collarites in the basic principles of trade unionism and labor's vital role in the war.

On hand at the Albany sessions will be Pfc. John J. Stanley, international secretary-treasurer of the UOPWA, who was given a special furlough by officers of his anti-tank company at Camp Shelby, Miss., in order to attend. Stanley is one of 800 UOPWA members now serving in the armed forces.

Labor News Service Hails U. S. Indictment of AP

NEW YORK, Sept. 3 —(FP)— The government's anti-trust action filed against The Associated Press in federal court here Aug. 28 "represents a major triumph in the fight which . . . labor and weekly newspapers have carried on to protect the freedom of press from the monopolistic encroachments of a combine of powerful commercial newspapers," The Federated Press, labor news service, said Aug. 29.

The suit is the outgrowth of complaints filed with the Department of Justice by Federated Press and the Chicago Sun. Support of the FP complaint by member editors was a major factor in bringing about the suit.

BARRED NON-MEMBERS

The government demanded that AP divest itself of its monopolistic control of Wide World Photos Inc., saying that "the AP had augmented its own news picture service, furnished only to AP members, and discontinued the news picture service of Wide World Photos Inc., available to non-members of the AP, except as required to carry out existing contracts."

"For example, the Federated Press, an organization furnishing the only daily labor news service in this country, and having more than 125 newspaper clients, which had been receiving Wide World picture service for 6 years, was cut off from this service by this action of the AP," the government suit declared.

BLOW AT MONOPOLY

The FP said that this phase of the government suit "is more than a blow at AP's growing monopoly in the picture field.

"Together with the government's demand that AP membership rules be changed to permit broader and more democratic control of its news distributing service, this action goes a long way to assure the American people that they will be able to read something besides what the AP and the wealthy publishers who control it wish them to read.

"The FP is therefore happy to see the government act on the complaint of the Chicago Sun as well as its own."

Federated Press was first threatened with discontinuance of the Wide World picture, mat service, which it had been using for 6 years, on Dec. 11, 1941, when the Associated Press, which had purchased Wide World a few months before, wrote that due to a "reorganization" the service could not be made available after Dec. 31.

On Feb. 12 Federated Press filed with the Anti-Trust Division of the Department of Justice a formal complaint charging AP with violation of the anti-trust laws.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 22—The Columbian Iron Works was ordered to cease discouraging membership in the CIO United Steel Workers and directed to reinstate Fred E. Exum with $400 back pay, the National Labor Relations Board announced.

CIO Board Urges Quick Action On All FDR's 7-Point Program

'Win The War' Theme Of U. S. Labor Day Speeches, Parades

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3—The shadow of mankind's war for greater democracy will hang over Labor Day celebrations throughout the nation.

In the past a day for relaxation and rest, Labor Day 1942 will find millions of workers busy in their shops turning out the weapons to defeat the Axis. For those who can get away from their jobs, celebrations will have a decidedly military tone—in keeping with the work-to-win spirit of the times.

Appropriately enough, the slogan that will rally millions throughout the country next Monday is: "Free Labor Will Win."

The day will find CIO leaders in all parts of the country appearing at meetings and rallies.

MURRAY IN PENNSYLVANIA

One of the most important will be at New Kensington, Pa., where CIO Pres. Philip Murray will address thousands of coal miners, steel and aluminum workers, glass makers and others in the various industries of the heavily-industrialized Allegheny Valley, not far from Pittsburgh.

Murray's speech will be preceded by a parade, with defense bond and stamp salesmen keeping abreast of the marchers to sell onlookers a share in the nation's ultimate victory. Civilian defense and Red Cross experts will stage demonstrations of their work, and a detachment of troops from the camp at Indiantown Gap will participate in the parade.

CAREY IN CLEVELAND

Sec. James B. Carey will be CIO's representative at Cleveland's big joint labor rally. Donald Nelson, WPB chief; Frank Fenton of the AFL; and A. F. Whitney of the Brotherhood of Trainmen will be other speakers at the affair, which will follow a big CIO parade through the city.

Allan S. Haywood, CIO's director of organization, will spend the Labor Day weekend at two union conventions—that of the office workers in Albany, N. Y., and of the Plaything & Novelty Workers in Pittsburgh. He will address both meetings.

SOMERVELL IN NEW YORK

New York City's tribute to the workers will take place on Sunday at the Central Park Mall, where Lt.-Gen. Brehon Somervell of the Army Supply Services; several union leaders; and six wounded soldiers from the Battle of Bataan; and heroes from other branches of the armed services will share the spotlight.

Sponsored by the state and city CIO councils, in cooperation with the USO, the meeting will hear addresses by CIO Vice-Pres. Joseph Curran; Pres. Gustav Strebel of the state CIO; and C. A. Bernard of the USO. Paul Robeson, noted Negro singer, will contribute some songs, and numerous stage, screen and radio stars will be on hand to entertain the crowd.

Philadelphia's joint Labor Day affair will be air-minded. Lt. Gen. "Hap" Arnold of the Army Air Forces will be chief speaker, and fleets of Army airplanes will provide an "umbrella" over the crowd. At El Paso, Texas, and Juarez, Mexico—just across the Rio Grande—Labor Day will be an international affair, with U. S. and Mexican unionists, military men and government officials participating in a "hands-across-the-border" ceremony. Adolph Germer, national CIO representative, will represent the CIO.

WISCONSIN FETE

Milwaukee is planning big doings at the State Fair Park. Big crowds are expected to hear Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida, an ardent supporter of the second front and of the fight against the poll tax; Sec.-Treas. David MacDonald of the United Steelworkers of America; Pres. Willard Townsend of the United Transport Service Employes, CIO; and Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union.

One unusual feature of the country's tribute to labor will be the launching of six Liberty Ships bearing the names of union leaders. Pres. John Green of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers will make the principal speech at the launching of the SS. John Mitchell at Baltimore, with Miss Mercedes Daugherty, niece of CIO Pres. Murray, swinging the bottle of champagne that will send the ship down the ways and into the service of the United Nations. Mitchell was a one-time president of the United Mine Workers.

Rubber Union Wins Iowa Ordnance Poll

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 3—The CIO United Rubber Workers scored a major victory this week when it won collective bargaining rights at Ankeny Ordnance Works here.

Because the number of persons employed at the arms plant is a military secret, the Natl. Labor Relations Board announced the results in terms of percentages, rather than through the usual procedure of actual votes cast. The results:

CIO	50.1%
Neither	5.4%

Dist. Rep. Floyd Robinson and Field Rep. George Burdon who headed the hard-hitting URWA campaign, hailed the victory as a demonstration "that workers in the midwest definitely prefer clean American unionism as represented by the URWA-CIO." Robinson and Burdon declared that negotiations would be opened just as rapidly as possible on an agreement providing wage increases, job security, paid vacations, special protection for girls, and other improvements.

Robinson and Burdon expressed gratitude for the cooperation given to them by the Des Moines Industrial Union Council and Ben Henry, regional director of the CIO.

British Workers May Visit U. S.

London, Sept. 3—(ALN)—After a month's tour of British ordnance plants, Brigadier General G. M. Barnes, assistant chief of ordnance of the U. S. Army, said yesterday that he fully approved the proposal, first reported in June by Allied Labor News, to send a delegation of rank-and-file British factory workers across the Atlantic to study U. S. production methods and exchange ideas with American workers.

"I think it is an excellent idea to have British workmen see American factories and show what skilled tasks they can perform," General Barnes said.

American workers and engineers, it is recognized, have developed mass production techniques which would be of value to British industry. Similarly, with almost three years of wartime experience, British workers have acquired much knowledge which would be of value to Americans. The use of women in industry, General Barnes pointed out, is widespread in Britain.

Assail Suggestions For 'Czar' Over Wages

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5—Reaffirming a broad economic and political program aimed at gearing the nation for victory in 1942, the CIO Executive Board this week took action to:

1. Support the President's seven-point anti-inflation program, and resist all attempts to freeze wages or set up any sort of wage "czar" as a threat to national unity and morale.

2. Carry out political action in support of Congressmen and Senators who back the win-the-war measures of the President, and remove appeasers and defeatists from public life at forthcoming elections.

3. Reassert CIO demands for a sound victory tax boll based on ability to pay.

4. Bring working unity of all United Nations labor movements, including those of Latin-America, closer to reality.

5. Mobilize all war production resources, plus full labor representation on war production agencies, to "enable our national leaders to put into effect the peoples earnest desire for the supreme offensive—the Second Front—which must carry the United Nations to an early victory.

FIGHT DISCRIMINATION

The Board also took action to halt anti-Negro and other discrimination and to reinforce the work of the Fair Employment Practices Committee recently transferred to the War Manpower Commission. It warned that anti-Negro discrimination was apparently on the increase and pointed out that nothing worse for a united war effort could happen in this country.

On CIO-AFL unity, the Board reviewed the proposals for a working committee made earlier by President Murray and expressed unanimous support for his efforts and for the successful work of the combined Labor Victory Board set up some months ago on CIO initiative.

ECONOMIC FRONT

The biggest portion of the Board's two day emergency session, called by President Murray to review the whole war economic situation, was spent on hammering out the anti-inflation, anti-wage freezing platform.

Here the main emphasis was put on the demand for complete enforcement of all the planks in the Roosevelt seven-point program, including overall price fixing and rationing, taxes for victory based on ability to pay, a limit incomes at $25,000 a year, stabilization of wages and preservation of collective bargaining.

Wage stabilization, the Board pointed out, "does not and must not mean the freezing of wages. Stabilization of wages, consistent with the Presidents national economic program, involves necessary adjustments to meet the rising cost of living, to protect sub-standard wage-earners and to eliminate other outstanding inequalities.

"Further, the procedure of collective bargaining between organized labor and industry must be preserved and protected. To this program, labor gives unstinted support."

WAR LABOR BOARD

The Board's resolution emphatically declared against naming of "any czar or supreme dictator to regulate the economic affairs of the nation," pointing out that the War Labor Board, where labor, employers and government are all represented, should be continued with full powers to carry on its work.

Labor does not seek any selfish ends, the Board said. Its interest is in carrying out a program aimed at winning the war as quickly as possible. This program is summed up in the seven-point message, which must be carried out in all sections.

"Labor is completely and wholeheartedly behind every single phase of the program," the resolution said. "No one point can be sacrificed for any other. All demand immediate enactment.

"It is labor's task to mobilize all the people behind the program, and to sweep aside all enemies of this national war policy of our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

ELECTIONS

In line with this program, the Board in its resolution on forthcoming elections pledged to fight those candidates who oppose the victory drive, identifying them with the same forces that opposed the New Deal, fought labor and generally took a reactionary line in Congress.

The same win-the-war aim was expressed in the resolution on international labor unity and in President Murray's review of talks with Sir Walter Citrine of the British Trades Union Congress.

Citrine, Murray revealed, had taken the position that the British labor movement could not "officially" even talk with the CIO, apparently feeling it necessary to clear everything with AFL top officials before moving. This resulted in the proposal of AFL leaders to the British that the CIO be left out of any working unity arrangements, as well as the exclusion of the trade unions of the USSR.

Murray expressed flat opposition to such a scheme, pointing out that it was vitally necessary for all anti-Axis groups in all the United Nations to work as closely together as possible.

LEGISLATIVE REPORT

The legislative report, submitted by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, reviewed the uphill job the CIO has had in trying to secure win-the-war legislation from Congress and in staving off attacks on national unity and morale through attempts to crack down on unions.

A similar report from the CIO committee on price fixing and rationing, presented by Robt. Oliver for the committee, pointed to increasing dangers of inflationary prices and reiterated the demand for rigid price fixing and for universal rationing.

Convention In Boston, Starting Nov. 9

Washington, Sept. 3. — CIO's fifth annual convention will open in Boston, Mass., on November 9, the Executive Board voted this week.

At the same time the Board authorized President Murray and the Executive Officers to name another location in case military or transportation authorities turn thumbs down on the Bean City.

It will be the CIO's first convention in New England. Previous ones have been held in Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Atlantic City and Detroit.

Early Deadline

This issue of The CIO NEWS is going to press two days early in order that it may be delivered to readers before the Labor Day weekend. Accordingly, some of our usual features are not included, and it will be impossible to give full coverage to the meeting of the CIO Executive Board. Full details will be contained in the next issue.

Farmers Rap Wage Freezing

Jamestown, N. D., Sept. 3—Taking a position close to that of organized labor, the Natl. Farmers Union Executive Board last week asked President Roosevelt to seek full enforcement of all seven points of the anti-inflation program which he set before Congress months ago.

The Farmers Union group asked the Chief Executive to "give at least equal weight and emphasis to limiting to 6 per cent industrial profits, which now stand at 400 per cent of pre-war levels; to a ceiling of $25,000 net on personal incomes; and to rationing across the board, thereby insuring maximum effectiveness in distribution of available civilian goods.

HIT SOLID FREEZING

"We further urge you to stand by your announced intention not to freeze solid either farm prices or wages, but to stabilize both with recognition that the real incomes and purchasing power of working farmers and wage earners must be sustained at minimum living levels, and when necessary, adjusted so as to sustain productive strength . . ."

Calling for action on all seven points in the program, the Farmers Union message concluded:

"The offensive against inflation is not divisible. Let's move on the whole front now. We are ready."

We Are Ready

"The offensive against inflation is not divisible. Let's move on the whole front now! We are ready."

That's the message which the National Farmers' Union has sent to President Roosevelt, calling for immediate application of all of the seven points of his anti-inflation program.

It strikes almost exactly the same note as the resolution on wage policy and the seven-point program adopted unanimously by the recent Executive Board meeting of the CIO.

Despite all efforts to stir up national disunity, by playing off one group against another, the working farmers and the industrial workers are really united today more than ever before—for one purpose, the winning of this war.

The CIO declared its acceptance of wage stabilization, as proposed in the President's seven-point program. The Farmers' Union accepted stabilization of farm prices. But both alike opposed any "freezing."

The Farmers' Union urged the President to "stand by your announced intention not to freeze solid either farm prices or wages, but to stabilize both, with recognition that the real incomes and purchasing power of working farmers and wage earners must be maintained at minimum levels and, when necessary, adjusted so as to sustain productive strength."

The CIO declared that the National War Labor Board was the effective instrument to carry out wage stabilization, as proposed in the seven-point program, with necessary adjustments to meet rising living costs and elimination of sub-standard wages and other inequalities. It strongly opposed the naming of any wage czar or "supreme dictator" to regulate economic affairs, as inconsistent with democracy.

But both labor and working farmers are insistent on one point, above all others, namely that their sacrifices by themselves are not enough to prevent inflation or insure a sound war economy.

Both organizations call for an end to profiteering through progressive taxation as proposed by the U. S. Treasury; for a $25,000 limit on personal incomes; for effective price control; and for universal democratic rationing of all necessary civilian goods.

Labor and working farmers, as shown by these two statements, are the first groups to accept wholeheartedly the President's seven-point program, as a necessary national economic program to win the war. But both groups insist, as they have every right and duty to do, that all seven points be applied simultaneously and with equal weight and emphasis, so that some equality of sacrifice may prevail for all groups and the whole program may succeed.

Hope for United Action

Renewed hope for international labor unity behind the war effort of the United Nations comes from the recent CIO Executive Board meeting and from reports emanating from England.

The CIO Board approved the action of President Murray in protesting against the miserable and insulting agreement reached between the AFL and the British Trades Union Congress.

This agreement deliberately excluded the CIO and the Railroad Brotherhoods in the United States and the labor unions of the Soviet Union, treating them as "untouchables" who can only be contacted through the AFL, in the one case, and through the British TUC, in the other.

At the same time, the CIO renewed its demand for a united world labor movement to win the war, welding together the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods with the trade unions of all the United Nations, including the Latin American nations.

The news from England is that the Soviet trade unions have also notified the British Trades Union Congress of their rejection of the private and exclusive agreement between the TUC and the AFL.

As a result, the general council of the TUC, in its report to the forthcoming British trade union convention, indicates its desire for wider international labor unity; and many powerful British unions are pressing for war unity between the trade unions of all the United Nations.

Let's hope such real unity will soon be forthcoming.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

FREE Labor Will Win is the slogan of this year's Labor Day. It is also the theme underlying all CIO policies and activities during the past year.

Looking back over labor's year, one might think at first that December 7—the day of Pearl Harbor—was a big dividing point.

But actually, labor was not caught by surprise. The CIO had long before chosen its direction and adopted policies which had only to be intensified when the United States entered the war.

In his 1941 Labor Day message, CIO President Murray stressed the leadership of the CIO in increasing defense production. "We have shown," he said, "that labor has the brains and public spirit to take its place as a responsible participant in the national defense effort."

"It is in these efforts to improve the economic and physical strength of the nation that the intense and vigorous patriotism of the workers in the CIO expresses itself," the CIO leader said.

"It is the determination of the CIO that this nation shall be a land worth defending with every effort."

★ ★ ★

In those months before Pearl Harbor, the CIO was fighting to keep labor free, building its strength and demanding a greater voice for labor in the national production effort in which it was playing such a leading part.

The CIO convention last November in Detroit was devoted almost entirely to preparing labor for the great tasks it would have to undertake in the coming war.

All-out effort against Hitlerism was the keynote of nearly every convention resolution and speech. President Roosevelt and the freedom-loving peoples everywhere were assured they would have the CIO 100 per cent behind them in every effort to combat this world menace.

So when America actually entered the war, the production soldiers of organized labor were ready and eager for the fray. There was not a moment's hesitation or doubt.

December saw the calling of the labor-industry-government conference which the CIO had long advocated. Out of this conference came labor's voluntary pledge to lay aside the strike weapon for the war's duration. Out of it, too, came the War Labor Board as the agreed body to settle all disputes which could not be adjusted through direct collective bargaining.

Every one of CIO's pre-war policies stood the test of war time. Its demands for real production planning, for labor-management plant committees, for more labor representation and its opposition to labor-shackling and wage-freezing legislation—all these had but to be pushed more vigorously than ever under war conditions.

Labor unity became a more urgent issue as part of the nation's war unity. CIO and AFL, both nationally and locally, joined hands for united war effort. And the President's creation of Labor's Victory Board, with both CIO and AFL represented, found the two great branches of labor united as never before on all major national issues.

The one discordant note, however, was the disruptive efforts of John L. Lewis, who chose this time for attempts to split the CIO and to disturb labor's war unity.

But such attempted disruptions resulted only in emphatic and unanimous repudiation of the former CIO president by the movement he once led; and a tremendous rallying of the whole CIO behind the win-the-war policies of President Murray.

The success of united action by CIO and AFL led finally to acceptance of Murray's proposal for negotiations looking toward organic unity—with the proviso that these must not interfere with the present healthy growth of united war effort.

This Labor Day finds the CIO still fighting to keep labor free and strong to win the war.

With all the major steel companies under union agreements for the first time, with some form of union security becoming the rule in industry after industry, and with huge increases in union membership, labor is now stronger than ever before in its history.

But it has still to work for a greater voice in our productive effort, to maintain the wage standards necessary for productive efficiency, and to secure a healthy war economy in which equality of sacrifice will prevail—and all points of the President's seven-point program will be equally applied.

In all these policies the CIO has but one aim—to speed the day of victory for the United Nations.

U.S. Hails Heroic War Workers As Output Curve Moves Upward

Officials Laud Labor Cooperation

Washington, Sept. 3.—In unprecedented number, high officials of the government this year issued Labor Day messages lauding the patriotism and courage of American workers in their tireless drive to out-produce the Axis and bring victory to the people of the United Nations.

Topping the list was a statement from President Roosevelt, which was dated for release after this paper went to press. The Chief Executive was understood to have voiced appreciation for labor's contributions, and to have warned that further sacrifices are certain in the struggle to preserve democracy and wipe out dictatorship in the world.

Other statements:

Secretary of the Navy Knox and Undersecretary of War Patterson: "We who represent the Armed Forces know the vigor and resourcefulness of America's fighters on the firing line and on the production line. We are proud to extend to labor, on behalf of the Army and Navy, congratulations on what has been accomplished, and encouragement to go forward.

"Free labor can win this battle of production. Men who love freedom will win."

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau: "The participation of organized labor in the War Savings program has been most encouraging from the very beginning . . . The leaders and members of the AFL, the CIO, the railroad brotherhoods and other recognized labor unions have been the staunchest supporters of the voluntary War Savings program.

"I salute them on this Labor Day, 1942."

Wendell Lund, Director, WPB Labor Production Division: "Labor, more than any other group in the country, has gone 'all-out' in the war effort. Union workers have put their hearts and souls into winning the war, realizing that they have many freedoms, many hard-won gains to lose should the Axis be victors in this struggle."

Office of Civilian Defense: "Labor has done an excellent recruiting job for the civilian defense program . . . There is not a single phase of civilian defense in which labor is not giving wholehearted cooperation and support."

Elmer Davis, Office of War Information: "The labor movement and labor's freedom to organize and improve social and economic things we are fighting to preserve . . ."

Red Cross 'Salutes' Workers

Washington, Sept. 3.—In its first Labor Day statement to organized workers, the American Red Cross this week "salutes the cooperation and generous support given the Red Cross by the soldiers of industry."

Chairman Norman H. Davis said that in the nine months since Pearl Harbor, "labor has put its forces behind the Red Cross, giving its fullest support to our service to the men in the armed forces and to the nation as a whole.

"It has given blood, money, time, energy and skill in response to our appeal for aid to the victims of war . . .

"We shall continue to work shoulder to shoulder to the end that humanity shall live again among all nations, and that labor may work again in freedom from war and destruction."

Equality of Sacrifice Will Spur War Effort, Murray Tells Nation

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 — American labor, fighting against fascism with all its energies, demands that other sections of the population equal the sacrifice to the war effort of the nation's workers, CIO Pres. Philip Murray declared in his 1942 Labor Day message.

Text of the message follows:

Labor today occupies a position of national and world importance greater than ever before in history. Upon its efforts depends victory or defeat in a world struggle involving, directly or indirectly, the whole human race. We call this labor's war, because its great and basic issue is the right of the working and common people everywhere to enjoy liberty, democracy and the opportunity to work out their destiny as free men and women.

In the United States, this Labor Day finds the working people more strongly organized than ever before, and more purposefully conscious of the vital responsibilities which history has laid on their shoulders.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations is at the peak of its numerical strength. It has established collective bargaining in the basic mass-production industries which it set out to organize for the first time a few years ago. To its ranks belong most of the men and women engaged in producing the most essential weapons of war. And the whole CIO today is dedicated to one purpose above all else—namely, victory for the United Nations over the slave forces of the Axis.

Organized labor can be justly proud, on this Labor Day, of its record in war production. Our unions, long before Pearl Harbor, began planning and organizing all their energies to increase production. That record, in terms of tanks, planes, ships and guns, is a good one. But while we are proud of this production record, we cannot be satisfied with it. We must continue to break our own records. For we can never be satisfied until we have produced the last tank, the last warplane, the last war ship and the last gun that we must have to crush the Axis.

Made Many Sacrifices

Labor has made sacrifices for the supreme war effort of our country. It has given up the right to strike. It has forfeited many of the advantages it might have gained by the full use of its economic power. It has given up its young men to the fighting forces. It has led in every sacrifice and every endeavor that is necessary for victory. But I do not wish to dwell on such sacrifices. For labor makes them willingly and without stint—and will make many more before this war is won.

But at the same time labor insists that its sacrifices shall not be in vain through failure of others to do their share. Wage stabilization by itself is not enough. It must be accompanied by a tax program based on ability to pay—taxation that will place a proper share of war burdens on profits and surplus wealth, and that will not soak the poor or spare the rich.

It must be accompanied by really, effective price control over the necessities of life, and by widespread democratic rationing to insure to all our population their fair share of available goods. And labor will insist that the wages and conditions of our working people are such as to assure their maximum health, efficiency and morale for their basic tasks of war production.

American labor realizes too that all our enemies are not on foreign fighting fronts. We have within our own country appeasers, defeatists, divisionists and disruptionists, whose efforts labor is determined to thwart. In the coming elections we shall work to defeat all such elements and to elect only real win-the-war candidates to public office.

On this Labor Day, American labor extends its pledge of solidarity and utmost war effort to the peoples of all the United Nations, fighting with our own people in the common cause of freedom. We pledge to work, to fight, to give, without stint and without limit, until victory is assured.

Six Ships To Honor Men of Labor

Washington, Sept. 3—Bearing the names of leaders of American labor, six Liberty ships will be launched on their careers of service to the United Nations on Labor Day.

Two of the vessels will slide down the ways at the Bethlehem-Fairfield yards in Baltimore, Md., while the other four will be launched at Wilmington and Richmond, Calif., and Portland, Ore.

TO LAUNCH SHIP: Mercedes Daugherty, niece of CIO Pres. Murray, who will launch the S.S. John Mitchell at Labor Day ceremonies in Baltimore. The ship, built by CIO workers at the Bethlehem-Fairfield Shipyard, is named after a one-time president of the United Mine Workers.

The launchings will constitute the U. S. Maritime Commission's salute to the nation's thousands of shipbuilders. President John Green of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers will address the crowds at Baltimore, while Miss Mercedes Daugherty, niece of President Murray will break the champagne on the prow of the two ships.

The two CIO-made ships are the John Brown, named after a 74-year-old veteran unionist who died last year; and the John Mitchell, named after the man who headed the United Mine Workers from 1899 to 1919.

Ships launched in the California yards were built by AFL labor and will be named the Samuel Gompers, the Andrew Furuseth, the Peter J. McGuire and James Duncan. McGuire was the "father" of Labor Day, Gompers the founder of the AFL, Furuseth a veteran seafarers' leader and Duncan an early leader of the granite cutters.

Radio Goes 'All-Out' On Holiday

Washington, Sept. 3—Labor will hold the mike in a series of radio broadcasts this Labor Day weekend.

Here are some of the highlights:

11:15 p. m.—CBS—Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins.

All Religious Groups Praise Labor's Record

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—Leaders of organized religion have voiced words of praise and sympathy to the ranks of organized workers in their annual Labor Day messages.

"The ranks of labor are not adequately represented in the membership and leadership of our churches," stated the Labor Sunday Message of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. "And church people generally are uninformed concerning the purposes and problems of the labor movement."

"The general recognition of the right of collective bargaining long advocated by the churches, has now placed labor in a position to defend itself from many former practices of exploitation," the statement continued.

HARMONY IS GOAL

"Labor has achieved a power which matches the power of management and ownership. The churches cannot be satisfied, however, with a situation in which two massive powers approximately balance each other if their relationship is one of tension and frequent hostility, each merely defending its own rights or privileges.

"If a stable and sound democratic life is to be achieved, consonant with Christian principles and promoting the general welfare, the interests of all groups must be brought into more effective harmony.

"The democracy for which American soldiers are dying is the same democracy for which other American citizens should be living."

As its contribution to a better understanding of labor's problems, the National Council of Catholic Men announced its weekly radio program would be concerned with labor during the month of September.

Aired over the NBC network Sunday afternoons at 6 p. m., EWT, the "Catholic Hour" will feature talks by Rev. John F. Cronin, director of the Institute of Social Studies at Catholic University.

RABBIS NOTE MILESTONE

The Synagogue Council of America, composed of hundreds of Jewish Rabbis, hailed Labor Day 1942 as a "milestone of progress in the development of industrial democracy as part of the American pattern which rejects the dictatorship of any class.

"The Nazi-Fascist threat of world domination which menaces the rights of labor as well as the rights of religious worship according to the dictates of conscience, is our common peril," the statement noted. "The concentration camp and the firing squad have martyred countless champions of the free spirit of men . . .

Russian Unions Turn Thumbs Down On Citrine-AFL 'Deal'

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.—Labor organizations of the Soviet Union have turned thumbs down on the deal worked out by the British Trades Union Congress and the AFL, which would have given the AFL power to choose representatives from the CIO and the railway brotherhoods on the joint Anglo-American labor council, and bar direct labor ties between the U. S. and the U. S. S. R., Allied Labor News reported from London this week.

The CIO has favored a committee representing labor in all three countries, but Sir Walter Citrine and the executive board of the British group accepted a proposal of the AFL for an Anglo-American committee, with the British representatives acting as a contact group with the Russians through the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee.

The Trade Union Congress, despite protests from CIO Pres. Murray, authorized the AFL to choose the CIO representatives for the international meeting, which opens in Washington late this month. The CIO has refused to participate as "Class B" members in such a meeting.

REPORT TO CONVENTION

The Russians' attitude was revealed in a report prepared by the General Council of the Trade Union Congress for the annual congress convention in Blackpool, England, starting Sept. 7.

The report asserts that the AFL's proposal was submitted to the Russians by the British group, "although it was recognized that since the proposals had been made by the AFL to the TUC, and not to the Soviet unions, it was a matter for the TUC to decide its own policy."

No reply was received from the Russians, and so the British accepted that section of the agreement with the AFL concerning American representation on the Anglo-U. S. committee. The question of the British labor group acting as a liaison to the Soviets was deferred pending discussions with the Russian unionists.

"Three days later, Shvernik (Nikolai Shvernik, secretary of the Soviet All-Union Council of Trade Unions) cabled the regret of the All-Union Council at the failure to form a tri-partite body," the report to the British convention continues, "and reaffirmed the Soviet opinion that the enlargement of the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee by inclusion of American labor would considerably enhance the influence of the trade union movements of the three countries for the prosecution of the war against the common enemy and for post-war reconstruction.

RE-AFFIRM SOVIET VIEW

"Shvernik's cable stated that the All-Union Council regarded the creation of an Anglo-American committee as within the competence of the TUC, but added that the Council was not able to accept the suggestion that the British members should act as liaison between the American and Russian trade unions."

AFL'S OBJECTIONS

Proposal for the involved form of relationship among the three nations came from the AFL, whose top leaders objected to membership on the same committee with the Russians.

Allied Labor News predicted in its London story that the British labor convention is "certain" to go on record "for the expansion of the Anglo-American labor committee to include full representation of allied trade unions."

Must Reinstate 12

West Haven, Conn., Aug. 22—The National Labor Relations Board ordered the Bolton Manufacturing Co. to cease discouraging membership in the CIO United Auto Workers and to reinstate, with back pay, 12 union members.

CIO Board's Resolutions Set Policy On Major Questions Facing Labor

Wage Policy And Inflation

The economic front is being sabotaged by certain sinister individuals and vested interests which seek to stir up national disunity by playing off one group against another.

In this manner, the President's 7-point economic program is being undermined. More and more frequently, enemies of the President and of the nation are brazenly showing their heads in sniping and carping at the war program. This is of course aimed at the military effort of the nation.

It is the responsibility and firm duty of labor to assume the leadership in smashing all such attempts to thwart the people's all-out war effort. This can be done through the forthright expression by the CIO of the attitude of the common people toward our present economic problems. The only policy shall and must be that these problems be approached with the single test of what is best for winning the war.

The Entire Program

Therefore be it resolved, (1) It is more important than ever that the President's entire 7-point national economic program immediately be put into effect. The purpose of this program is to prevent inflation and to stabilize the cost of living for all the people. Labor must not permit any selfish group or vested interests to stir up national disunity to undermine the President's 7-point economic program by playing off one group against another. The war program demands the complete and wholehearted support for all of the phases covered by the President's national economic program.

(2) To stabilize the cost of living we must have real effective enforcement of price-fixing and democratic rationing of all necessary civilian goods. This means that the prices for food and farm products which are not now regulated must be brought under control. Only in this manner can the cost of living be stabilized, which it must be.

(3) The tax program originally espoused by the Secretary of the Treasury and the President must be the basis for our national tax legislation. Low income groups will share on an equitable basis whatever burden must be borne to finance the war. But repressive taxes must not be imposed on those least able to pay, which will undermine the health and morale of the workers upon whose strength rests the sucess of our war production. Taxes on middle class and high incomes, both individual and corporate, have not been raised sufficiently. Taxes must be imposed on tax-exempt securities to eliminate such special privileges. There should be a maximum limit on all personal incomes of $25,000. The sales tax in any form must be bitterly opposed because it can only serve to interfere with and undermine the war effort.

The present tax proposals of the Senate Finance Committee are a direct repudiation of the President's program and a blow at the war effort of the nation.

A failure to adopt a sound tax program will defeat the entire national economic program.

No Wage Freezing

(4) Labor accepts, along with the other phases of the President's economic program, the goal of stabilization of wages. The CIO has been consistently behind President Roosevelt's and President Murray's efforts to achieve this end.

This does not and must not mean the freezing of wages. Stabilization of wages, consistent with the President's national economic program, involves necessary adjustments to meet the problem of the rising cost of living, to protect sub-standard wages and to eliminate other outstanding inequalities.

Further, the procedure of collective bargaining between organized labor and industry must be preserved and protected. To this program, labor gives its unstinted support.

The effective instrument for carrying out this program is the National War Labor Board. This board has representatives of labor, industry and the government, thereby assuring adequate protection for all the people. The powers and jurisdiction of this board must be affirmed.

Labor is opposed to the naming of any Czar or supreme dictator to regulate the economic affairs of the nation. Any such proposal is thoroughly inconsistent with the basic democratic principles of our nation.

(5) Labor does not seek any selfish ends. Labor strives for only that program which will serve to win the war. In its judgment, the President's national economic program will accomplish that goal. Labor is therefore completely and wholeheartedly behind every single phase of the program. No one point can be sacrificed for any other. All demand immediate enactment. It is labor's task to mobilize all the people behind the program, and to sweep aside all enemies of this national war policy of our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Unity Talks With the AFL

The position of the CIO regarding the question of labor unity has been a consistent one. The CIO has been unified in its desire to achieve labor unity on a basis that would serve the interests of the nation and of the workers.

The recent proposal of President Murray to the American Federation of Labor furnishes the basis for attaining this end.

First, it is made clear that Labor's Victory Committee, composed of representatives of the AFL and CIO, must continue its work and expand the scope of its activities.

This committee through consultation with the President of the United States, has had the opportunity of intensifying the participation of labor in the war effort and of ascertaining how labor can be of aid to the President and to the nation in the conduct of the war. President Murray has made it clear that nothing should be permitted to occur in any unity discussions between the CIO and AFL which would in any way impede this work or the cooperative relations which have been developed by Labor's Victory Committee.

Joint Committee

Second, President Murray's proposal that there be established a committee, composed of representatives of the CIO and the AFL, to dispose of any jurisdictional questions that may arise between these two organizations or their respective affiliates will prevent stoppages of work which would otherwise result. The objective of this proposal is to make certain that in the interest of winning the war there will not be any interference with production.

Third, under President Murray's proposal a committee has been established by the CIO to meet with the AFL committee for the purpose of discussing the possibilities of establishing organic peace between these two federations.

President Murray has made it clear that such discussions must not in any way be permitted to interfere with the war effort of labor or of the nation. These discussions must therefore be conducted on a basis consistent with the all-out effort of labor to expend all energy toward winning the war.

This purpose would not be served by any unity proposals which in any way would violate or weaken the security of any group of organized workers or the basic principles upon which the CIO was established.

The CIO Executive Board does hereby approve President Murray's proposal to the AFL and the committee designated by President Murray, and specifically authorizes said committee, under the chairmanship of President Murray, to enter into negotiations with the AFL committee on the basis set forth.

Labors' Votes In the Elections

The results of primaries in the various sections of the country re-emphasize the importance of the job which labor must do in connection with the coming elections. As the country prepares itself for the final gigantic drive that will carry our armies to Berlin in 1942, we can have no patience with the chorus of carping critics whose voices are raised in constant attack on the national war effort, who fought the New Deal before the war, and who have lost no opportunity since the war to bait labor, spread distrust and disunity, limit and detract from an all-out prosecution of the war and curb at home the fullest growth of the democracy for which we are fighting abroad.

These groups have fought the President in Congress. As they show their faces more and more brazenly through public statements and press comments, labor in this crisis assumes more than ever its obligations as the firm backbone of a strong nation which will not be swerved from its determination to work with the President to victory over the Axis.

The fight must be carried on with renewed vigor through the remaining primaries and into the elections, and labor is the strongest force which can be relied upon to carry the fight. We know the stake we have in this war and we will not fail the nation and the President.

It is the first task of the CIO unions and members to take active steps in house-to-house and worker-to-worker campaigns to elect to Congress and to other public offices representatives who can be depended upon to support a program for winning the war through aggressive prosecution of the fight abroad and through control of the cost of living, curbs on profiteers, an adequate and equitable tax program, elimination of the poll tax, and protection of workers' health and welfare at home.

Intl. Trade Union Unity

Whereas, the organized trade union movement of the world are engaged in the united struggle against the common enemy and can strengthen the unity within and among the United Nations through greater cooperation with each other in accordance with the experience of the united action which has already been achieved between the British and Soviet Union trade unions; and

Whereas, discussions, recently made public, between the AFL and representatives of the British Trades Union Congress indicate the exclusion from such labor cooperation of the CIO, the Rail Brotherhoods and the trade unions of other United Nations, which action must be deplored as being inconsistent with the aspirations of the workers of the United Nations; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, that the CIO Executive Board approves the action taken by President Murray in communicating the protest of the CIO against any such action to Sir Walter Citrine of the British Trades Union Congress, and authorizes its national executive officers to take steps toward securing closer cooperation and unity of action between the organized workers of America, including the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods, and the trade unions of all the United Nations, including the Latin American nations, to the end that a united war labor movement may be the basis for winning the war against the Axis and securing a peace which will establish for all the people freedom of speech and assembly, freedom of religion, freedom from fear and freedom from want.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Labor Day in 1942, is more significant than ever to the forces of organized labor. The CIO army of production, in the main, will celebrate their holiday at work, producing the implements of war; demonstrating labor's patriotism in the practical way. The CIO and its affiliated unions can feel proud of its achievements since last Labor Day.

Outstanding, of course, is the victory of Steel! All the major combines are either working under agreement now or are about to complete same. Great gains have been made in the white collar field; the movie industry, department stores and Western Union. Every UAW Board Member showed an increase in membership in their area at their convention recently held; Electrical Workers, Shipbuilding Workers, Rubber —all show similar gains.

On this Labor Day when freedom is being threatened, and men and women are dying to resist the aggressors and hold the torchlight of freedom aloft, labor dedicates itself to all-out effort for complete victory over these forces of evil and the winning of a peace that will embody the four freedoms for all peoples, in which organized labor must be given full participation to insure greatest security for the maintenance and perpetuation of the democratic way of life. Our task is clear; we must organize the unorganized to win the war and the peace.

Wind Up Long Effort

The last of the Mohicans: John V. Riffe, international representative, USA-CIO, reports an election victory at the last of the Bethlehem Steel Plants at Lebanon, Pa., by the impressive vote of 1550 as against 337. This completes the organizing job among the workers in the Bethlehem Steel Corporation.

The USA, then to show they could follow up with these, reported the winning of elections at a number of the plants of the Wheeling Steel Corporation, ranging from Steubenville to Portsmouth, Ohio, with a vote of 11,596 for USA-CIO as against 576 for No Union.

Regional Director Pete Mosele adds on to this with an election victory at Scully Steel, subsidiary of U. S. Steel, Newark, N. J., with a vote of 102 for USA as against 97. Sub-Regional Director Edward McCrone throws in an additional one for added weight with a victory for USA at the Apex Tool & Cutter Company, Shelton, Conn., with a vote of 98 to 19.

Other unions take notice!

Many NLRB Victories

Frank Bonacci, CIO regional director in Denver, sends in a report on a victory at the Tempte Brothers Trailer Co., with a vote of 40 for UAW-CIO, with only seven against.

Paul R. Christopher, CIO regional director in Tennessee, adds on with a victory at the Star Laundry Company, with a vote of 80 to 1 for the CIO.

The United Stone and Allied Products Workers comes in with a victory at Ironton, Mich., of 84 to 2 for the CIO.

In the Thunder Lake Sawmill Company, Rhinelander, Wis., the IWA were victorious with a vote of 100 for CIO as against 36 for no union.

The Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers had a real, impressive affair, Sunday evening, August 30, in Baltimore, Md., held at the City Plaza in the open air. The Shipbuilders have been doing a real job in turning out the ships for the United Nations. Among the speakers were Edward Arnold, famous movie star; Governor of Maryland; a member of the National Maritime Union whose ship had been torpedoed returning from Russia; Philip Van Gelder, secretary-treasurer of this splendid union, and myself.

Jack Dempsey Lauds CIO

The one and only Jack Dempsey added great interest to the affair by being present and said a good word for the CIO. He also refereed a boxing bout between Louis Ambers and another opponent; and demonstrated with two performers the ju-jitsu training being given in the Armed Forces. Thousands of people crowded around the Plaza in addition to all seats being taken.

This demonstration will be crowned with a ship launching program on Labor Day. All ships will be named after labor leaders now deceased, who gave their all for our cause. Miss Mercedes Daugherty, secretary to President Philip Murray, will launch one named John Mitchell.

Sabotage By Chinese Weakens Japan Navy

CHUNGKING, Sept. 3—(ALN)—The story of how Chinese workers are sabotaging the enemy's efforts to use the shipyards and dock facilities of Hongkong, left intact by the British after their surrrender of the Colony last December, was told to this correspondent by two Chinese shipyard workers who recently escaped from Hongkong.

'GUNS ON TARGETS': This British woman corporal gives the order to her predictor crew—trained to spot Nazi planes—as she works at maneuvers somewhere in England. Once a drygoods saleslady, she's being trained to take the place of men needed for offensive action on the Continent.

Hongkong's most important industry was shipbuilding. Its two naval and seven commercial shipyards, with a total of ten drydocks and many slipways, represented the greatest single concentration of marine construction plant in the whole of Britain's colonial empire.

OWNERS FOUGHT DEMOLITION

When the military situation became precarious last December, specially-trained British demolition squads were on hand with the training and the explosives necessary to destroy all this plant. The owners of the yards, however, exerted every effort to prevent it, fighting for the preservation of their property with the argument that Hongkong would soon be in allied hands again even if it fell, and that to blow it up would therefore be wanton waste.

Consequently the demolition squads never received orders to begin operations, and with the exception of some equipment damaged by shells and bombs and one cantilever crane slightly bent by the explosion of a charge placed under it by a well-meaning but unskilled patriot, everything passed into the hands of the enemy undamaged.

No attempt was made to put the vital pumprooms, without which drydocks cannot operate, out of commission. Even the secret plans of the Empire Freighters were left on the premises of one plant.

DRAFTED WORKERS

To get the docks working again was the first concern of the Japanese after their arrival. The minor damage done was hastily repaired. All Chinese workers who could be found were immediately pressed into service, at miserable rates of pay, and advertisements appeared in all the newspapers calling for more.

Within two weeks, damaged warships and merchantmen were coming in regularly for repairs, and during the battles of Java and the Macassar Straits, full use was already being made of Hongkong's facilities for the fuelling and repair of the Japanese navy.

NO EFFICIENCY

But like every one of the fascist war machines, the Japanese navy did not realize that it is possible to conscript labor, but not to make it function efficiently against its will.

One of the men I interviewed yesterday, an escaped boilermaker, told me that the dockworkers were allcannying, with the result that the entire enemy repair program was far behind schedule, with efficiency certainly no higher than 25 per cent of normal.

The men are functioning as slowly and as badly as they can. The highly skilled among them are concealing their qualifications. Many have brought in friends and relatives who need food but know nothing whatever about the work to be done, and passed them off on the Japanese as experienced fitters.

Argentine Metal Union Appeals to American Workers for Help

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 3.—(ALN)—In recognition of the importance of their industry to the nation, and in response to assurances by the government that it would intercede with the Employers' Federation on their behalf, 80,000 metallurgical workers and machinists of Buenos Aires, who struck for higher wages late in June, recently went back to work.

To date, however, the government has not interceded, and the employers, far from making any concessions, have undertaken severe reprisals against the strikers, barring more than 1000 from the plants and subjecting others to physical violence.

U. S., BRITISH CAPITAL

Faced with this situation, and not wanting to renew the strike in view of the war crisis, the Metal Workers Union has issued an urgent appeal to workers in similar trades in the United States and Britain to take action on their behalf.

There are practical reasons for this, since two of the firms most guilty of anti-labor practices have close connections with American and British capital.

The company SIAM Di Tella, which hired special factory guards to beat up its workers, and employs as one of its foremen a notorious German Nazi named Carlos Ahuser, is the representative in Argentina of Westinghouse Electric.

Because of its Italian capital, its workers feel that Di Tella would be on the U. S. blacklist if not for its Westinghouse connections.

The second foreign concern guilty of anti-labor practices is the Compania Britanica de Construcciones de Acero (British Steel Company), whose chief manager, William MacCallum, is president of the British Chamber of Commerce in Buenos Aires.

Give All You Can To CIO War Relief

Soviet Unions Keep Managers Toeing Mark on Job Standards

KUIBYSHEV, Sept. 3.—(ALN)—The working people of the Soviet Union, in the year and two months since the German invasion, have repeatedly shown their readiness to make sacrifices in the interests of defeating the enemy: they have given up their annual vacations, have expanded the basic workweek from five to seven- hour days to six eight-hour days, and have modified many union provisions governing overtime.

But they are equally determined that industrial managers will not take advantage of wartime urgency to violate labor legislation or worsen working conditions.

Nikolai Shvernik, secretary of the Council of Trade Unions, said recently: "Prevention of accidents and care of the health of the workers is still one of the most important parts of the unions' work."

"The great increase in the rate of productivity of Soviet workers since the start of the war is partially, at least, due to the efforts of the corps of union-appointed labor inspectors, aided by labor protection committees in each union local."

MORE INSPECTORS

There were 4500 full-time labor inspectors in 1936, and 219,400 more who did volunteer part-time work. Since then the number has almost doubled. Every important union now has several inspectors in each industrial center to see that the labor code is enforced. Labor inspectors, who get their jobs after stiff examination by the union executive committees, are responsible to the unions.

Labor inspectors are required to investigate all industrial accidents and breaches of safety regulations. They have complete access to the books and records of every factory employing members of their unions.

If a labor violation is unintentional, the inspector can fine the manager 100 rubles on the spot; if there is evidence that it was intentional, the case goes to the prosecuting attorney. Under the USSR criminal code, premeditated violation of labor-protection laws by factory managers is punishable by two years in jail and fines of 2000 rubles.

NEED WORKERS' APPROVAL

According to sections 138-148 of the labor code, no factory in the USSR can go into operation or move to new premises without the approval of the union's labor inspector. Labor inspectors in a number of branches of industry have introduced improved safety measures and reduced the accident rate, which has always been high in the USSR because of the necessity of training large numbers of unskilled workers. In addition to enforcing labor laws, inspectors conduct extensive educational work among trade union members on the question of reducing accidents.

To supplement the work of the labor inspectors, factory committees of each union elect labor protection committees, in most cases from among highly-skilled workmen and technicians. In large factories employing thousands of workers in hundreds of workshops and departments, the work of the labor-protection committee is divided among sub-committees which keep a constant check on all sections of the plant.

Anaconda's Chilean Workers Keep Producing To Aid U. S. War Effort

Santiago, Sept. 3.—(ALN)—The miners and white-collar workers at the big Chuquicamata copper mines, owned by the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., this week accepted a proposal by Minister of the Interior Morales Boltrami to submit their case for wage rises to arbitration by the governor of Antofagasta province.

The Chilean Miners' Federation, which is among the leaders in the popular campaign for breaking relations with the Axis, is anxious not to interrupt the United Nations' supply of copper.

"Chuqui," a $220,000,000 property, is estimated to contain one-fourth of the world's available copper reserves. Last year the Chuqui copper miners won substantial wage increases after a long, hard-fought strike.

Dalrymple Hits Smear Attack, Offers Plan To Boost Output

AKRON, O., Sept. 3—Offering a five-point program to improve production in the rubber industry and better living conditions in Akron, Pres. S. H. Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers this week answered a bitter anti-labor blast issued by William O'Neil, head of the General Tire & Rubber Co.

"The charges made by O'Neil . . . that the Akron labor situation 'is a disgrace to the nation' are so far-fetched as to be ridiculous—except insofar as they give aid and encouragement to those forces within our nation which are striving mightily to create that disunity which Hitler so badly wants," Dalrymple said.

The union leader's statement came as a reply to charges of strikes and slow-downs made by O'Neil to a group of newspapermen touring Akron rubber plants under the auspices of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers. One of O'Neil's complaints was directed against the six-hour day in the rubber industry.

UNEVEN PRACTICES

"When full war production can only be secured on an 8-hour day, the union will be glad to cooperate," Dalrymple said, "but what can be done when some groups in the plant are working seven days a week, some are working only 25 hours a week (and not through union order, either) and no one knows from one week to another what is planned ahead."

Asserting that O'Neil is doing a disservice by wantonly branding all his employes as slackers, the URWA leader pointed to labor's eagerness to out-produce and outfight the Axis.

". . . We agree with all Americans that we must have all-out production to defeat our enemies; and we agree that there are certain factors in impeding full utilization of existing machinery and labor.

"Among them we might mention lack of raw materials, failure of plants to relax their employment requirements, lack of coordinated planning between Akron plants and cooperating plants outside, hoarding of skilled labor, acute shortage of housing, failure to plan for the entrance of women into war work, and the failure of some managements to bargain in good faith since our unions gave their no-strike pledge to the government."

OFFERS UNION IDEAS

Arguing about responsibility for past failures won't solve problems, the URWA head declared in offering his five-point program, which calls for:

1. Survey by a responsible WPB official enjoying confidence of all groups to survey Akron plants and recommend how they may be more efficiently utilized for the war effort.
2. An investigation by the War Man Power Commission to determine if there is a labor shortage in Akron.
3. Establishment of a joint management-labor production committee for the Akron area.
4. Cooperation between labor and management to bring adequate housing facilities to the area.
5. Cooperation between labor, management and government agencies to insure adequate centers for the care of children of mothers employed in war factories. A major cause of absenteeism among women workers, Dalrymple said, is lack of provision for the kids.

Winding up his statement, Dalrymple expressed regret that "certain managements have chosen to start a row with labor at this time—even if it has been started with the aim of helping anti-labor legislation and sidetracking labor's demand for a real voice on the WPB.

"All of us, labor and management alike, need to be reminded time and time again that we are fighting the Axis, not each other."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1 — An election campaign conducted by the AFL union at two plants of the Curtiss-Wright Corp. was severely criticized this week in a decision handed down by the National Labor Relations Board.

The Board charged the AFL Intl. Assn. of Machinists with basing its campaign for votes among some 20,000 workers at the company's plants in Tonawanda and Cheektowago, N. Y., on promises of premium pay for Saturday and Sunday work in violation of a pledge to President Roosevelt to give up this demand.

In its 2-to-1 decision, however, the Board refused to set aside the results of the election in which the AFL union defeated the CIO's United Automobile Workers by a small margin.

REILLY DISSENTS

Gerard D. Reilly, Board member who gave the dissenting opinion, objected to the decision on the basis that it recognized results of an election "won over a rival union by repudiating a solemn compact with the President of the United States made in the interest of prosecuting the war by the national leaders of its parent organization."

The majority decision stated that refusal to certify the election results would disfranchise "the employes who have freely selected a representative" under the guise of penalizing the union officials.

Complaints against the type of propaganda used by AFL unions in election drives at the Curtiss-Wright plants involved in this case and at other plants, were made in a letter sent to President Roosevelt in July over the signatures of CIO President Philip Murray, UAW President R. J. Thomas and Richard Frankensteen, UAW director of aviation.

Cincinnati, Sept. 3 — The CIO United Electrical Radio & Machine workers swept to victory in another Labor Board election this week when it defeated a company union at the Allis-Chalmers plant here by a 754-483 margin. Only 36 voted for no union.

Name Edelman OPA Contact Man With CIO Unions

Washington, Sept. 3.—Appointment of John W. Edelman to act as contact man between the Office of Price Administration and the CIO was announced this week by OPA Chief Leon Henderson.

In recent months Edelman has been serving in the OPA's consumer division. From 1924 to 1937 he was research director for the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, and he was CIO regional director for eastern Pennsylvania from 1937 until 1939.

At the same time Henderson named John T. Burke, an official of the teamsters' union, as OPA contact man with the AFL, and Glenn R. Atkinson, former legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railway Clerks, to be liaison with the railway brotherhoods.

WLB Asks Lumbermen's Cooperation

Washington, Sept. 1—Cooperation of all unions and employers in the Douglas fir industry of Washington and Oregon in establishing a voluntary program for stabilizing employer-employe relations on an industry-wide basis in the interests of the war effort, was asked by the National War Labor Board.

Wayne L. Morse, public member of the Board has left for the Northwest to begin a series of conferences with lumber and sawmill operators and with officials of the CIO International Woodworkers and the AFL Lumber & Sawmill Workers

Farm-Labor Interests Stressed on CIO Program

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3.—Common interests of the nation's millions of farmers and workers were stressed in CIO's "Labor for Victory" program over the NBC Network Saturday, Aug. 29.

A playlet by Peter Lyon, songs by Woody Guthrie, talks by Donald Montgomery, Consumers Counsel for the Dept. of Agriculture, and Len De Caux, CIO publicity director, all stressed the fact that labor and farmers must join their political and economical strength to achieve prosperity and security for all.

The program quoted a statement by Vice President Wallace when he was head of the Agriculture Dept. to the effect that "if we are to continue along progressive lines, and if we are to prevent the development of a special brand of fascism here, farmers and city workers must learn to work together in mutual confidence and respect."

NEED FOR UNITY

Seconding that thought, DeCaux added that "today, when we're fighting a desperate battle against the Hitler Axis, it's more important than ever that the farmer and the city worker forge their interests into an unbreakable unity.

"But the CIO has evidence—and it's confirmed by government representatives returning from the field—that there are those who knowingly or not are doing the work of Axis agents by spreading lies to disrupt the unity that's so necessary for victory."

Montgomery referred to recent U. S. statistics showing that a "great many farm and city families—far too many" had incomes so low in 1941 that "they couldn't break even.

"Now that's not something for farmers and wage earners to fight each other about, and it's not something for either of them to forget. It's a fact they had better take a good look at together, and decide together what can be done to get these families into the parade. The sooner we are all at it, full speed together, the sooner we'll finish the job."

This week's program under joint CIO-AFL auspices, will feature a talk by Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, veteran friend of labor, and a reading of Pres. Roosevelt's Labor Day message.

It's on the NBC network Saturday, Sept. 5, at 10:15 p. m., eastern war time.

OWI Hails Papers Killing Race Rumors

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 3 — Four Southern newspapers, one a Negro weekly, were commended this week by Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information, for investigating and exposing false undercover rumors of impending racial conflicts in Southern communities.

The papers praised by Davis are the Virginian-Pilot, Norfolk, Va.; the News and Observer, Raleigh, N. C.; the Richmond Times-Dispatch, Richmond, Va., and the Journal and Guide, a Negro weekly published in Norfolk.

The Virginian-Pilot and the Journal and Guide exposed word-of-mouth rumors that Negro residents of Norfolk had purchased all available ice-picks in that area with the intention of making a mass attack on white residents during a recent blackout in the city.

NAIL SLANDERS

Both papers also attacked another unsupported rumor that Negro domestics were organizing "Order of Eleanor," "Daughters of Eleanor" and "Eleanor Clubs" in Norfolk and other Southern communities as a means of making extraordinary demands on white housewives.

An editorial in the Virginian-Pilot declared:

"It is time to haul these things out of the whispering gallery, identify them for the fakes that they are and stop peddling them. It is the belief of City Manager Bolland that these rumors are planted and propagated by enemies of our domestic peace."

GOOD CITIZENS

The Journal and Guide under the heading, "Tracking down dangerous and inspired false rumors," stated:

"White people in Norfolk have nothing to fear from an 'uprising' among Negroes. They should disabuse their minds of any fears that Negroes are going to do anything illegal or insane to reflect discredit upon themselves or upon their city in these critical times, or in normal times."

The Richmond Times-Dispatch in assailing the "Eleanor Club" myth said:

"We must nail these rumors for they spread bigger and more dangerous lies, including reports of plots and counter-plots. If we can't kill them promptly when they arise, they work overtime, and with great effectiveness—for Hitler."

CAUGHT WITH THE WIND: CIO seamen spreads out a tarpaulin in downtown Baltimore streets recently, and hauled in several hundred dollars in contributions for Russian War Relief, Inc. Money will send American medical supplies to the heroic battlers against Hitler.

Promise More Steel Output In Cleveland

Cleveland, Sept. 3 — Production will be the keynote of every steel worker in the Ohio area during the months to come, District Director William Donovan of the United Steelworkers of America declared in his Labor Day message.

"A tremendous responsibility lies on the shoulders of organized labor," Donovan, who also heads the Cleveland CIO Council, asserted.

"With practically the whole world aflame in this brutal war of aggression by the hordes of Hitler and Hirohito, and with our own land thus far untouched by the actual conflict, it behooves us to produce, produce, produce, and to let nothing occur which would prevent or hamper the steady flow of arms, planes, ammunition and supplies to our troops and those of our Allies.

DOING THEIR SHARE

"Everywhere the workers are doing their share—a tremendous share—toward the defense of our own country and toward offeensive operations of our armed forces and those of our Allies."

Mexican, U. S. Workers In Joint Celebration

EL PASO, Texas, Sept. 12—A great drama of international labor friendship and solidarity unfolded here Monday when the labor movements of the United States and Mexico marched shoulder to shoulder in an International Labor Day parade and demonstration of goodwill.

On the Santa Fe International bridge, spanning the historic Rio Grande, uniformed detachments of the armed forces of both these great American nations stood facing one another as bands played the two national anthems.

At the conclusion of bridge ceremonies, the Mexican military units and more than 5,000 Mexican workers, divided into units under the identifying banners of their various organizations, marched into El Paso where they were joined by marching units representing CIO, AFL and rail brotherhoods.

Adolph Germer of Portland, Ore., northwest director of CIO, who represented President Philip Murray at the international celebration, termed it a "magnificent and beautiful demonstration of labor friendship and solidarity, which will be remembered for decades."

Washington, Sept. 12—Joint labor-management victory production committees now total 1,300, War Production Board chief Donald Nelson announced here this week.

Labor Day Finds Millions Fighting Axis in Plants

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—There wasn't a thing about America's Labor Day that Adolph Hitler could enjoy.

In thousands of war plants throughout the nation, workers stuck to the job of turning out munitions to defeat the fascist Axis. It was a fitting celebration of the ninth anniversary of the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor.

In many cities, rallies were set for hours when workers were coming off shift. Pres. Murray addressed more than 5,000 workers at New Kensington, Pa., while Sec. James B. Carey and Donald Nelson spoke at a big Cleveland rally. Most elaborate of the celebrations was staged in New York on the Sunday before the holiday, with 100,000 workers and members of the armed forces turning out for speeches, demonstrations and entertainment.

Office Union Sets Course for More Help to War

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 12—Keying its new program to the country's war needs, the United Office & Professional Workers met here this week in its fourth constitutional convention and passed a series of resolutions aimed at assisting the country to overcome Axis fascism.

"If our entire program in every respect helps the war effort, our union should, with proper policies, enjoy continuous expansion," the UOPWA board told the convention in its report.

Since 1940, the report showed, UOPWA has chartered 32 new locals, signed contracts for an additional 21,000 white collar workers, and given 800 of its members to the armed forces. Union members, the board reported added, have put $1,000,000 into war bonds, contributed $35,000 to the CIO War Relief Campaign, and enlisted by the hundreds in civilian defense activities.

SUPPORT FDR

Amid loud applause, the delegates voted unqualified support to Pres. Roosevelt in "any steps he may find necessary" to carry out his 7-point anti-inflation program and pledged the union would "redouble its efforts to get action by Congress and the proper government agencies immediately." The resolution was forwarded to the Commander-in-Chief as a reply to a message of greeting from the White House.

In another resolution the UOPWA voiced support of CIO Pres. Philip Murray's efforts to obtain international trade union unity and called for close co-operation among all the labor movements of the United Nations.

Many of the resolutions were aimed at seeking to strengthen democracy on the home front. The delegates protested against deportation of Harry Bridges, west coast longshoremen's leader; expressed opposition to discrimination aganist members of minority groups in industry; asked government action against Coughlin, Pegler, Rep. Dies and Gerald L. K. Smith; urged a boycott of the McCormick, Patterson and Hearst newspapers; and characterized efforts by the New York State American Legion to bar the Communist Party from the ballot as a move to "disrupt the war effort by creating disunity."

URGE OFFENSIVE

Opening of a second front in Europe was described by the convention "as the imperative step for victory over the Axis," and they coupled the plea for offensive action with a warning that war developments "have underscored that delay strengthens the Axis powers."

Pres. Lewis Merrill and Sec-Treas. John Stanley, now an army private in Mississippi, were re-elected to office.

Guest speakers included Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers; Gov. Lehman of New York; Dean Alfange, American Labor Party candidate for governor, who has UOPWA support, and Mrs. Mary Pond of the American Red Cross.

Paper Union Heeds Murray Unity Plea

Pittsburgh, Sept. 12—Some 250 delegates to the convention of the United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers were returning to their homes today with a plea from CIO Pres. Murray to seek unity in their organization to help the war effort.

Representing an estimated 35,000 workers in 148 local unions throughout the eastern half of the country, the delegates debated a number of changes in their constitution, passed resolutions supporting the nation's fight against the Axis and adopted a harmony program suggested by Pres. Murray and other CIO leaders.

Pres. A. Esposito was re-elected by the delegates. Harry Sayer of Munroe, Mich., was elected secretary-treasurer, succeeding Alexander Ravitch of New York City.

During its four-day session—which included one all-night meeting—the convention heard speeches by Mayor Scully of Pittsburgh and Allan S. Haywood, director of organization for the CIO.

Resolutions praised Pres. Roosevelt's 7-point program against inflation; warned that wage freezing would endanger the war effort and cause hardship among workers; assailed the "appeasement" policies of John L. Lewis and attacked his raiding of CIO unions; pledged full support to CIO Pres. Murray; and called for the opening of a second front in Europe.

Big Steel Signs; Raise Retroactive

Pittsburgh, Sept. 12—Some 250,000 employes of powerful U. S. Steel Corp. worked on Labor Day under terms of a new company contract with the United Steelworkers of America, CIO.

Signed by union leaders and company officials on Sept. 5, the agreement incorporates recommendations of the War Labor Board for a 44-cent-a-day wage increases, check-off and maintenance of union membership. The pact covers five U. S. Steel subsidiaries: Carnegie-Illinois, Natl. Tube, American Steel & Wire, Columbia Steel and Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co.

The 44c raise is retroactive to mid-February, the date when the Little Steel case went to the WLB. It was on that point that the company centered most of its objections but the Board's decision confirmed union arguments that the Little Steel case has been considered a test for the entire industry, with an unwritten agreement among the other companies and the union that they would follow the lead set in the Little Steel decision.

MURRAY PLEASED

USA-CIO Pres. Philip Murray hailed the decision as a "great victory" for the steel workers. The agreement was ratified by 250 heads of Big Steel locals called to Pittsburgh the day before the formal ceremonies.

UNION HERO: Demetri Goulandris, member of the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, who survived five ship sinkings. Goulandris has been assigned by the War Shipping Administration to a speaking tour of war plants.

CIO to Fight Bias Against Negroes; Forms Committee

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—Establishment of a national CIO Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination was one of the highlights of last week's CIO Executive Board meeting here. The committee consists of Willard S. Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employes and James B. Carey, national CIO secretary.

At the same time, the Board adopted a resolution again calling on the government to move strongly against discrimination in war jobs, which is costing the victory effort the services of hundreds of thousands of efficient and patriotic American workers.

Both the resolution and an accompanying report praised the work of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices, now part of the War Manpower Commission, and reaffirmed full national CIO cooperation.

SEEK ACTION

They also warned against the possibility that Manpower Commission officials might "be induced to bow to the wishes of big corporative interests, particularly in the Southern states, and throttle the Committee's highly commendable activties," and called on the Commission to give the Committee full aid and scope for its anti-discrimination work.

The report called for legislation to implement the executive order against discrimination and make it permanent, and urged a detailed survey of war plants, community meetings on the problem, and similar steps to abolish jim crow throughout government and industry.

Farm Implement Workers Open First Convention

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 12—Delegates to the first constitutional convention of the Farm Equipment Workers' Organizing Committee which opened here at the Jefferson Hotel on Thursday, took up the serious task of working out a hard-hitting "Win the War" program for their new international union.

The constitutional committee proposed as the new name for the union, the United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers of America, subject to the ratification of the convention and the approval of the CIO.

Grant Oakes, FEWOC chairman, sounded the keynote of the convention—all-out effort to win the war—when he told the delegates: "Our great CIO movement has spared no effort to speed victory. Our own union has consistently, daily, hour by hour, geared every plan and action to the achievement of the earliest possible victory over Hitlerism and the Axis."

MURRAY'S GREETINGS

CIO President Philip Murray in greetings sent to the delegates said:

"I can assure you that the national CIO will give you every support in the building of your important organization. The CIO is committed to all-out effort to win this war, behind our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt.

"We are counting on the Farm Equipment Workers to do their full share, in line with the basic CIO policy, to increase war production, and to back to the limit the war effort of our country and the United Nations, until Hitler and the Axis are only a hideous memory.

"I hope you will have a most successful convention which will lay the basis for an ever greater and more powerful union dedicated to the constructive and beneficial policies for which the whole CIO stands."

MESSAGE FROM FDR

Greetings were also received from President Roosevelt, praising the Farm Equipment Workers for their efforts in speeding war production.

Another Win For CIO In 'Brass Valley'

Waterbury, Conn., Sept. 12—Collective bargaining for employes of the Waterbury Manufacturing Co. was assured today when the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers added to its long string of NLRB election victories in "Brass Valley" by a sweeping 1,139-411 margin.

The poll covered the last unorganized stronghold of the Chase Brass & Copper Co., of which the Waterbury firm is a subsidiary.

The union had previously won bargain rights at the Chase Metal Works on May 28 by a vote of 1,591 to 456, and at Chase Rolling Mills on Aug. 6 by 370 to 74.

Union Representative Don Harris, in charge of the Chase drive, announced that negotiations for a master contract covering all Chase workers in this city would be sought immediately.

The latest victory completes organization of Waterbury's "Big Three." The others are American Brass and Scovill Manufacturing Co., where bargaining rights for 7,500 workers were won in mid-August.

Relief Gifts Near $100,000 A Month

Washington, Sept. 12—Income of the CIO Allied War Relief Committee will "probably pass the $100,000 a month mark in September," Irving Abramson, chairman, reported to the CIO Executive Board meeting here last week.

This income is being distributed by agreement among the three principal war relief agencies, British, Russian and United China Relief, Abramson reported. He also reported that an agreement for cooperation with the Red Cross was close to completion, whereby CIO Relief will aid in the coming Red Cross drive.

Abramson also reported on Committee activities in publicity, services to men in the armed forces, and in cooperation with local Community Chests. CIO unions "are giving splendid cooperation to the work of the Committee," he said.

Board Hears 'Down Under' Leaders

Washington, Sept. 12—A United Nations angle was added to last week's meeting of the CIO Executive Board with the appearance of the Hon. Peter Fraser, Premier of New Zealand, and Walter Nash, New Zealand minister to the U.S. Both men were introduced by Pres. Murray, who welcomed them to the meeting.

Premier Fraser brought greetings from the workers of New Zealand, whose Labor Party he heads, and spoke on the solidarity of all peoples fighting the war for survival against Hitlerism.

ALL TOGETHER

"All the free peoples are together in fighting this war for survival," he said. "We know that everything we have won would vanish if the Axis wins—and we would find out that death is better than a Hitler victory.

"We're going to win," he added, "because all the free people are united in the common victory effort." Minister Nash, who also spoke briefly, told of social gains in New Zealand over past years, and warned that they would be "utterly destroyed" if the United Nations should lose the war.

GREETINGS OF CIO

Pres. Murray urged the two visitors to take the wholehearted greetings of the members of the CIO back to New Zealand, and assured them that American workers were united in one purpose—to win the war against Axis slavery.

Colorado Council Reorganizes; Hail Murray War Policies

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 12—The Colorado State Industrial Union Council, CIO, ended a two-day convention Sept. 5—first convention of the state CIO body since resignation from its presidency of Frank Hefferly, regional president of the United Mine Workers.

Firmly united on a program placing winning of the war ahead of every other purpose, the delegates expressed pleasure at the absence of Hefferly and othr followers of John L. Lewis' defeatist policy toward the war. Speakers at the same time expressed the identity of their own interests with those of the rank and file of the UMW and hoped they would soon rejoin the state CIO.

Hugh Mathews of the United Steelworkers of America was elected president of the council, and Thomas Long of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee was named secretary-treasurer. Nine vice-presidents were also elected.

Chairman of he convention was Frank Bonacci, regional CIO director, who was appointed to fill the vacancy created by Hefferly's resignation from the state CIO presidency last March. A resolution unanimously adopted today praised Bonacci's work and asked that he be retained as organizational director for Colorado, Utah and New Mexico.

GUEST SPEAKERS

Guest speakers were Mayor Ben Stapleton; Reid Robinson, CIO vice-president and president of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers; Allan McNeil, assistant to Robinson; Ray Maki, president of the Wyoming State Industrial Union Council; John Doherty, assistant midwest director for the United Steelworkers, and Adolph Germer, Rocky Mountain area CIO director.

Resolutions endorsed the leadership of CIO President Philip Murray, and a sharp attack on the "anti-labor, anti-war" attitude of John L. Lewis; urged President Roosevelt to bring about immediate opening of a second European land front "in order that this struggle of blood, sweat and tears may culminate in early victory and avoid an era of war weariness and famine which may result in the very thing against which we are fighting, fascism"; and called for increased cooperation among all branches of organized labor "so that we may be able to weld the strongest possible weapons with which to defeat our common foe, Hitler."

OTHER SPEAKERS

In a series of other statements, the convention voiced support of Pres. Roosevelt's 7-point anti-inflation program; urged regular monthly gifts by workers to the CIO War Relief Committee; sought city and state fair employment committees to investigate racial discrimination; and called for labor support of "win-the-war" candidates in the Colorado primaries.

An Editorial

Get in the Scrap

"The shortage of materials, more than anything else, threatens America's production of war goods.

"Of the important shortages, that of steel is the most serious. Therefore, the importance of collecting all available scrap iron and steel cannot be exaggerated. They are vital to the production of steel. This war is being fought with metals."

Donald Nelson, head of the War Production Board, said this to a meeting of American newspaper publishers and editors this week in Washington. Nelson was talking in deadly earnest—unless we get in the scrap, America's whole victory drive will slow down.

As Nelson spoke, it was revealed that the country's steel mills had only two week's supply of scrap on hand. That was a week ago. This past weekend, a number of furnaces closed down—for lack of scrap. Unless the scrap drive is carried to every cellar and attic, to every farmyard and barn, to every source where old metal can be found, more will close down and finished steel for ships, planes, tanks, guns will be lacking.

Labor's Job

President Philip Murray and the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, have repeatedly pointed out that the scrap situation can be and is a serious bottleneck in the production of steel. Now our government calls on us for emergency action—and the CIO must step forward with every union and every member to do the job for our country.

The biggest supply of scrap metal is in the homes and yards of America—a government survey indicates that each urban home has about 100 pounds of scrap lying around, each farm about 600 pounds. Most people don't know that the old, discarded junk they have in basements and attics is good scrap, of the kind the furnaces need. It is—and it must be put into circulation at once.

How to Get It Out

In Nelson's appeal, backed up by similar appeals from the heads of the Army and Navy supply services and from other war agencies, he pointed out that scrap can be collected most efficiently by the Salvage Committees that have been set up in each area. These agencies will see that it moves quickly into the furnaces, that proper payment is made, that the individuals and organizations collecting the scrap receive proper cooperation and recognition.

Every CIO union and every individual member should get busy on this vital job at once. Many are already hard at work, and many CIO unions and active members have already done a good job. If they have, they should do it again—and if they haven't, they should start right now.

Look around your own home. After you've cleaned out there, enlist your neighbors in the hunt. Look around the plant where you work, the neighborhood you live in. Find out where your Salvage Committee functions. Report every scrap source you find.

The nation's steel mills need scrap desperately. The men in the armed forces need all the weapons we can make, and weapons need scrap. No more urgent job faces the American people today.

Get in the Scrap

Haywood Urges Unions Aid 'Scrap'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—Every pound of scrap metal in homes, farms and plants is needed to keep the victory production drive going, Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, wrote this week in urging CIO unions and members to get behind the collection drive.

Haywood's letter went out in response to an emergency appeal from Donald S. Nelson, head of the War Production Board, who pointed out that the lag in scrap collection has already closed down a few steel mills, will close more unless remedied.

Haywood called on CIO affiliates and individual members to redouble their efforts in scrap collection, if they were already in the campaign, and to get in at once if not yet started.

"Remember," he wrote, "half a ton of scrap is needed to make one ton of steel. If we don't get the scrap into the mills, our men in the armed forces will lack the weapons needed to take and sustain the offensive against the Hitler Axis. Get in the scrap!"

WPB Acts On Labor Complaints

Washington, Sept. 12—Setting up of a new committee of five—two from CIO, two from AFL plus an impartial chairman—to help the War Production Board was announced last week by Donald Nelson, WPB head, after a meeting with CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. Wm. Green.

Following the conference, Murray expressed satisfaction with the new set-up, which will give labor greater participation than it has had before.

"Out of this new development we expect a closer working alliance with the Board and with industry than ever before," he said. "We want to give every aid we can to the Board in reaching the ultimate in production to win the war."

A new set-up to help the 1,300 labor-management production committees was also discussed at the meeting, Nelson said, in announcing that regional groups similar to the top five-man committee will soon be established.

Nelson added that both Murray and Green would submit names to the Board of people they considered qualified to help in the victory production drive, and that he would be glad to consider them. "I believe in picking men for their qualifications, regardless of where they come from," he said.

Murray added that he believed labor should name two vice-chairmen to the Board, to act not simply in an advisory capacity but as full-time government officials.

Wire, Radio Problems On CIO Broadcast

Washington, Sept. 12.—This Saturday's "Labor for Victory"—CIO's semi-monthly NBC radio show on the Red Network at 10:15 p.m.—deals with the role communications workers' play in the war.

The script, written by Peter Frye, shows a member of the American Communications Assn., CIO, sticking to a vital job despite the fact that wages and working conditions are lower than those in other indusries, and working with the union to improve them and to speed war messages through.

CIO's Labor for Victory goes on the air over the NBC Red Network every other Saturday at 10:15 p.m. EWT. Listen in—it tells in labor's own language what labor is doing to win the war.

Appeasers Wail At FDR Messages

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—Two emphatic messages—one to Congress and one to the people of the U. S.—showed this week that President Roosevelt is pressing for action on his seven-point victory economy program, and that he is determined Germany must be smashed by offensive land action in Europe.

In the message to Congress, the President not only re-affirmed his earlier program but warned bluntly that Congress must fix farm prices by October 1 or he would act himself under his powers as Commander-in-Chief.

In the radio speech, which, after a review of the economic message was devoted to an analysis of the war situation, Roosevelt declared that "the power of Germany must be broken on the battlefields of Europe."

Immediate Congressional reaction was sharpest from the "farm bloc" which represents big commercial agricultural interests, but their first protests were scarcely uttered before responsible Congressional leaders were assuring the President they would take action at once along the lines he demanded.

Farm prices, which have been pushed well above 110 of parity in many items important to war workers were the main object of the demand for effective price control.

TALKS ON WAR

The message was outspoken in warning on the dangers of inflation, which it described as the greatest menace to the war effort that could occur on the home economic front.

"We are fighting a war of survival," Roosevelt said. "Nothing can yield to the over-all necessity of winning this war—and the winning of the war will be imperilled by a runaway domestic economy."

In his talk to the people on the radio the President reviewed the war saying that the Soviet Union, despite enormous difficulties, is still holding out and Hitler has failed as yet to destroy a single Russian army.

With U.S. and other allied help, the USSR "will ultimately drive every Nazi from her soil." He also praised the Russian armies for destroying more Nazis and more enemy material than are being destroyed on any other front.

OFFENSIVE IS AIM

The Middle East, another danger point, is being watched and we are hopeful of the outcome, he said. In Europe, "the aim is an offensive against Germany" which can be launched from a dozen points. In the Pacific, we have stopped the Japanese at several points, principally at Midway, but we must prepare for further heavy attacks from Japan and must press our own attacks.

Senate Still Flirts With Sales Tax

Washington, Sept 12—Results of another week of Senate Finance Committee maneuvers on the 1942 tax bill boiled down to two main points:

Only brief consideration was given to a new U. S. Treasury proposal for a "spending tax" that would levy graduated taxes on all expenditures. Then Committee Chairman George of Georgia trotted out a "victory" tax that would lay a straight five percent surtax on everything from $12 a week up.

REGRESSIVE TAX

This tax would amount to a sales tax under the "victory" banner, since it would hit the lowest paid groups hardest. It would violate all sound tax procedure in applying the same rate to all regardless of income, the $50,000 a year man paying the same as the $12 a week worker.

It was preceded by an elaborate comedy in which the Senate Committee rejected a straight sales tax proposal of Sen. Guffey of Pa., who wanted a five percent levy without benefit of fancy name. The "victory" tax, like the sales tax, would operate without regard to marriage or dependency status, and would be collected at the source.

In the meantime, the Senate Committee, like the House Ways and Means Committee before, continues to blandly ignore the taxes on corporations, and treats the $25,000 income level proposal as something so indecent that it should not be mentioned in public.

Fired by Navy, Fascist Gets Army Post!

Pt. Pleasant, W. Va., Sept. 12—(FP)—George E. Deatherage, avowed fascist and former leader of the Knights of the White Camelia who was discharged as an executive engineer at the Norfolk Navy Yard after Sec. of Navy Knox described him as an undesirable person, is now working as an engineer in the U. S. Army ordnance plant here.

Poll Tax Out For Soldiers

Washington, Sept. 12—Anti-poll-tax champions won a real victory this week when the soldiers' vote bill went through the House by 247 to 43 with an amendment exempting the armed forces from payment of the tax on voting.

At the same time, some 18 signatures are still needed on the House petition to bring the Geyer-Pepper anti-polltax bill on the floor for debate and vote.

Polltax statesmen from the deep South, where workers and farmers don't vote because they can't pay the taxes that eight states exact, went down to defeat on the soldiers vote bill with loud cries of "state's rights" and an accurate prophecy from Rep. Rankin of Mississippi that this was "just the beginning" of a fight to abolish the polltax completely.

Rankin and Rep. Hobbs of Ala., author of concentration camp and wiretapping bills that have been defeated in the past, also blamed their defeat on "communism"—despite the vote of 247 Congressmen.

The Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax urged redoubled action to get the remaining signatures needed to force the Geyer bill past the polltax-dominated Rules Committee, where it has been held up ever since it was put in the hopper.

Congressmen who haven't signed should be urged to do so at once.

For All Seven Points

Speaking in New Kensington on Labor Day, CIO President Philip Murray reaffirmed labor's loyal support of our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, in the prosecution of this war to a victorious conclusion.

"I have made my personal commitment to labor and to President Roosevelt," Murray said, "that I will stand by his side, and that the CIO will stand by his side, come what may. This fight is America's fight, and it is our bounden duty to support the President of the United States in this war."

Labor welcomes the forthright stand of the President for the application of all seven points of his seven-point anti-inflation program. It will vigorously oppose those elements which raise spurious issues to camouflage their obstructions, and which seek to serve wealthy special interests by placing most of the war's burdens on the backs of those least able to pay.

Labor and working farmers alike have accepted the principle of wage and farm price stabilization, as envisaged in the seven-point program, with proper safeguards against substandard incomes and inequalities, and with assurance that living standards will not be lowered below health and efficiency levels.

How necessary such safeguards are is shown by recent government figures on farm and labor incomes. These figures reveal that one-third of farm families have averaged annual incomes of only $636 this year, and one-third of town and city family incomes average only $1,064. Ten out of every 100 families in towns and cities average only $591 a year, and this average falls as low as $338 for the same proportion of farm families.

Meanwhile war profits are at record heights and the incomes of the well-to-do are at the most extravagant luxury levels.

Labor insists that if the anti-inflation program is to be successful, it must include not only wage and farm price stabilization, but rigorous price control, universal democratic rationing, a limit of $25,000 on personal incomes, and a tax program that will not spare the rich and soak the poor as does the present legislation before Congress.

The reactionaries who are now raising fake constitutional issues against the President are the same people who are obstructing all measures to make the wealthy pay their fair share, while they try to soak the poor to a degree that can only undermine our whole war effort.

By Any Other Name

At the center of President Roosevelt's seven-point victory program is the need for an adequate and fair tax bill, one that will raise the billions in tax revenue we need for victory this year.

But a minority of wilful men in Congress has refused to go along with the Commander-in-Chief and with the people of the United States. This minority, controlling Congressional committees that deal with the tax bill, has so far deliberately refused to prepare or pass an adequate, sensible tax bill based on the needs of victory and on the ability of the people to pay.

Instead, they have tried to push the tax burden on the backs of those least able to pay. The principal device in this game has been the sales tax, disguised under a variety of names.

Latest disguise the sales tax wears is the so-called "victory tax," produced by Senator George of Georgia—a polltax state, incidentally. The "victory tax" lays a straight 5 per cent surtax on every income from $12 a week up. The worker with $624 a year (and there are plenty of people who earn that little) and the coupon-clipper with $50,000 pay exactly the same percentage. Five per cent of $12 a week is a lot more in terms of reduced living standards than 5 per cent of $1,000 a week.

The "victory tax" was evidently so named on the Mein Kampf principle of making your lies big ones while you're at it. Actually it is a sales tax pure and simple, with the heaviest burden on the workers who produce the weapons of war.

It must be exposed and fought as a sales tax and as a complete negation of the tax plank of the President's seven-point victory program.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

"This has been the best response I've had anywhere," Under-Secretary of War Patterson told reporters, as he left the Cleveland convention of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. "These people really mean to win this war in the shortest possible time."

The Under-Secretary was obviously and genuinely pleased with his reception. Not that there was any flowery flattery about it, nor any inflated ballyhoo. It wasn't one of those ovations which reporters take out their watches to time.

But what the Under-Secretary could not fail to note was the sincerity, vigor and directness of the 600 delegates, and the win-the-war spirit that pervaded the whole convention.

★ ★ ★

Of all the unions with distinct personalities, the UE has one of the most distinct.

This huge industrial union—third largest in the CIO—stands less on ceremony and hidebound formalities than any existing aggregation of human beings.

The nominating and acceptance speeches, when officers were elected at the recent convention, averaged only about a minute apiece. And for that matter, this reporter didn't hear a single speech, from officers or delegates, that wasn't brief, business-like and to the point.

One gets the impression that this most serious-minded of unions is so intent on practical matters that it just forgets about oratorical flub-dub, and cuts out ballyhoo to get right down to cases.

★ ★ ★

The report of the UE's international officers—President Albert J. Fitzgerald, Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak and Director of Organization James J. Matles—is a remarkable labor document, which reflects as well as explains some of the special characteristics of the UE.

It includes many charts and figures to illustrate the extraordinary growth and achievements of this great CIO union.

For instance, the UE has taken in as many as 168,945 new members during the past year. It now has 810 plants, employing 435,000 workers, under UE collective bargaining agreements.

It has won some form of union security, through maintenance-of-membership and the like, in 591 plants employing some 275,000 workers. And gains secured for its members during the year include $60,000,000 in wage increases and countless other improvements.

The record of the UE—achieved quietly, persistently and with a minimum of disturbance and public controversy—is one of the most outstanding for any labor organization at any time.

The officers' report relates all of these great achievements factually and without bragadocio. It even exhibits unusual modesty, as when it says that the bringing of the notoriously anti-labor Remington-Rand under union agreement for the first time would have been "an occasion of real celebration throughout the labor movement" in any ordinary year; but this year "was taken as something to be expected from a large organization like this one."

But what is most remarkable in the UE officers' report is the way all its union achievements are related to the major theme of the war effort.

The document is not a series of reports on different kinds of labor activity. It is one well-coordinated whole, dealing with the greatest crisis in world history; with all the major national and international issues of the day; and with the important part played by the UE as an organizer of the workers, an organizer of production, an organizer of distribution, and an organizer of labor's victory effort.

The distinct personality of the UE—as revealed in this report and by all its convention actions—is the personality of a self-reliant group of young Americans who, with little help from outside, have built one of the strongest and most progressive unions in the world.

They have not achieved their present success on waves of union revivalism, or through great national strike struggles, though struggle they have had aplenty; but rather through intelligent, energetic and unremitting application to the day-to-day tasks of unionism—guided throughout by a clear-sighted vision of labor's great historical role.

So today the UE prides itself not only on its bread-and-butter achievements for the workers, but equally on its pioneering and militant leadership in the wider spheres of labor activity—economic, legislative and political.

It also prides itself on the part it has played in building the CIO, whose major policies represent, according to the UE officers' report, "the kind of clear-cut, progressive position that meets the needs of the nation's crisis."

Labor Day, Anniversary of Attack, Dedicated to Out-Producing Axis

U. S. Leaders Laud Work Of Unions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—Labor Day, 1942, was both a grim reminder of the seven months that have passed since the dastardly attack on Pearl Harbor and a welcome indication that industrial America is rolling up its sleeves to outproduce and outfight Adolph Hitler's barbarian Axis.

Gone were the holiday factory shutdowns, the big parades, the automobile tours that occupied the nation at peace on Labor's own day. Labor Day, 1942, found plants open, products pouring out, men and management hard at work.

There were a few exceptions, of course. In Detroit, the United Automobile Workers protested the shutdown of several big auto factories now devoted to war production. "These idle plants are working for Hitler today," the union said.

But generally men were at their jobs, and parades and rallies—where they did take place—were scheduled for times and places where men and women could participate en route to their work or on the way home.

NEW YORK CELEBRATION

New York's big celebration, sponsored by the state and city CIO and the USO, brought 100,000 persons to Central Park Mall on Sunday afternoon. It was a gala affair, with speeches by union leaders, members of the Armed Forces and government officials. Speakers included Lt. Gen. Somervell of the army, Mayor LaGuardia, CIO Vice-Pres. Joseph Curran, Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Soldiers who fought on Bataan brought greetings to Gotham's production workers, and silver awards were presented to representatives of the United Nations' fighting services. Lt. Liudmila Pavlichenko, the keen-eyed Soviet girl guerrilla who is credited with knocking off 309 Nazis, received the award for the USSR.

Philadelphia CIO and AFL workers flocked into Rayburn Plaza to hear words of praise from Lt. General Brett of the Army Air Forces in the southwestern Pacific.

SHOULDER-TO-SHOULDER

Pointing to the close relationship between the men in the factories and the men in the planes, Gen. Brett declared:

"Yours is not a glamorous part, sweating along the production lines. You will get no cheers, there will be no parades for you. But without you there will be no victory. On you depends everything we do. You've got to give.

"You keep them coming. We'll keep them flying."

Bridgeport, Conn., another vital armaments center, heard high government officials and local labor leaders. The city presented a fighter plane to the Army. At El Paso, half way across the nation, Mexican and American workers got together on the International Bridge across the Rio Grande. And up in the district of Rep. Martin Dies—who doesn't care for unions—oil workers heard talks by Edwin S. Smith, director of the oil workers organizing campaign and by Philip Connelly, president of the California CIO.

NELSON, CAREY SPEAK

Cleveland workers paraded to a rally where Donald Nelson, WPB chief, and CIO Sec. James B. Carey addressed the throng. Nelson reminded the Ohio city's war workers that this is the biggest fight in the nation's history. He continued:

"Every single thing we have has been laid on the line, and the game is being played for keeps. We won't get a second chance at it. We're going to win the greatest gain any men and women ever fought for—or we're going to lose more than anyone ever lost before. And win or lose, it'll be final."

Pres. R. J. Thomas of the auto workers delivered his Labor Day address at the convention of CIO white collar workers in Albany, N.Y. Speaking on a national network the CIO vice-president warned of the dangers inherent in labor baiting. He declared:

"If the attacks on labor succeed, if American labor organizations are reduced to impotence, their influence destroyed, we will have taken a long step toward losing the war. There is no group which is more determined than labor to see the war through to a victorious conclusion, no matter what the cost may be in men and money."

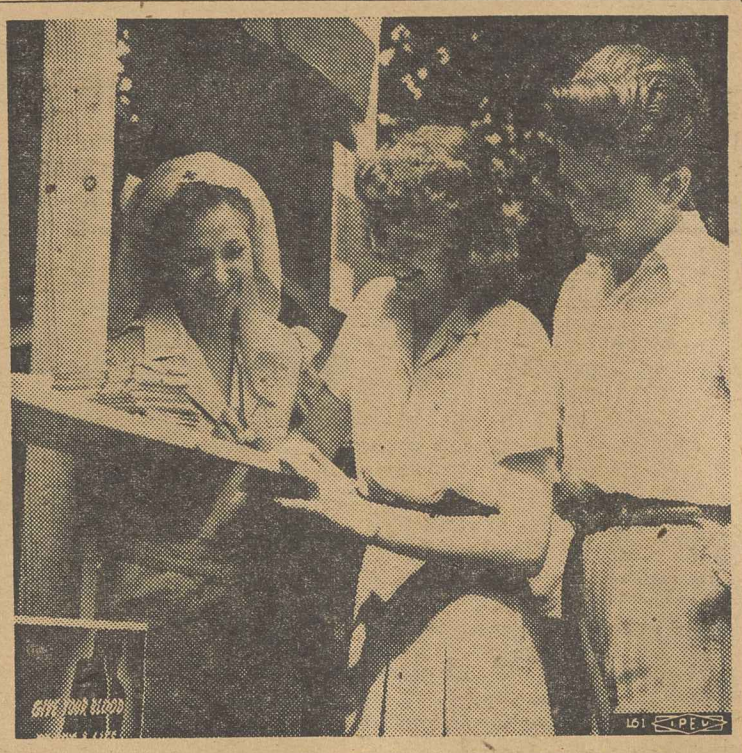
At Williamsport, Pa., workers held their first Labor Day celebration and sent pledges of support to Pres. Roosevelt. They heard talks by Frank Ritter of the United Steelworkers, and by E. J. Lever of the WPB.

Down in North Carolina, Gov. J. M. Broughton together with CIO and AFL leaders, saluted the "soldiers of production."

'GET IN THE SCRAP'

New Orleans CIO members, aided by the OCD, Boy Scouts air raid wardens, observed the holiday by "getting in the scrap." A goal of 1,000 tons of scrap steel was set as the day's goal, with CIO workers scouring the town to help collect it.

Los Angeles unionists celebrated the holiday with a banquet at the CIO headquarters building. Scheduled to speak were representatives of the Army and Navy, State Senator Robert Kenney and Harry Bridges, CIO regional director.



VOLUNTEER: Joe Clark, member of the Aluminum Workers of America and his companion, Miss Madeline Peiffer, register as volunteer blood donors to the Red Cross bank, following the CIO Labor Day rally at New Kensington, Pa.

Camp Honors 'Soldiers In Overalls'

Camp Lee, Va., Sept. 12—There were no colorful Labor Day observances here last Monday, but the soldier in overalls was not forgotten. High tribute to labor was paid in official proclamations by both Major General James E. Edmonds, post commander, and Colonel George A. Horkan, acting commandant of the Quartermaster (officer's candidate) School.

"This Labor Day . . . sees no holiday for either the laboring man or the soldier," declared Gen. Edmonds. "Both are working and working with all their might toward a common goal, victory."

Col. Horkan observed: "During the past year we have come to really know labor and appreciate the fact that American labor is motivated by the highest ideals in this war. They are willing to work, and to pay the price to win this war."

The Camp Lee Traveller, edited by enlisted men for the enlisted man, editorialized: "There has been much comment pro and con about the excessive labor demands, strikes, walkouts, etc.," the Traveller observed. "Here in Camp Lee, however, we know American labor as a group of workingmen who voluntarily, in addition to their many hours of toil spent building Camp Lee, have to date contributed more than $2,500 in gifts to add to the soldiers' comforts."

Murray Cites CIO Help To War Effort, Renews 'No Strike' Pledge

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Sept. 12—Into his home district, one of the busiest war production centers of this busy nation, Philip Murray came on Labor Day to renew before a crowd of five thousand workers the determination of CIO to help the war in every possible way—and to have a voice in the establishment of a democratic peace dedicated to the common man throughout the world.

New Kensington, home of the Aluminum Co. of America, was the only community in the Pittsburgh area to hold a Labor Day celebration this year. On their own holiday, workers in western Pennsylvania were busy turning out the steel and munitions to wipe fascism from the face of the earth.

The crowd at New Kensington, too, was far smaller than usual, for the aluminum plant and neighboring steel and glass factories were all operating. But the people who gathered to hear the CIO president were a typical cross-section of this industrial area — aluminum, steel, glass workers, coal miners and others.

TRIPLE THEME

Introduced by Pres. Ted Settlemeyer of the Allegeny Industrial Union Council and by the mayors of New Kensington and neighboring Arnold, Murray devoted his speech to a triple theme: CIO support of President Roosevelt's war policies, labor's determination to avoid wartime strikes, and the loyalty of workers everywhere to the CIO against those who would destroy it by "bickering, maligning and slander."

"Our country needs this movement," Murray said in referring to CIO's success in organizing six million American workers. "Workers need their union, and when the great war is over and victory is attained through the efforts of our armed forces and our nation, all the people in America are going to need this CIO."

HITS DISRUPTERS

"There must be no man allowed to stand in the way of this movement," the CIO president continued. "Don't let the slander-monger pour forth lies. Don't let the man with the money come around you and buy whiskey for you in order to steal elections and corrupt your union. Remember your boys and mine are fighting a war to build democracy. We are not fighting a war to corrupt unions."

The United States is at war to eliminate "filthy dictatorship," Murray pointed out, "no matter what form it may be, either inside of government or outside of government." Recalling that a "former friend who thought he could run me" had given "me the boot," Murray added that "I know coal diggers . . . they do not like dictators and czars. Nobody can dictate to me without a fight."

PLEDGE TO FDR

Along with the membership of the CIO, "I have said to President Roosevelt, 'I am going to support you and the CIO is going to stand by your side, come what may'," Murray told the cheering audience of workers. "This fight is America's and it is our bounden duty to support this country in war.

"This is a universal battle for production throughout the world. The country can win that can produce the most. That's why I say America is going to win the war.

"I ask you to join with us today in pleading no strikes for the duration—to help lick the Germans and Japs and everyone else who's trying to lick us.

Union Family

New York — (FP) — Sgt. Meyer Levin, Capt. Colin Kelly's bombardier, who sank the Japanese battleship Haruna and recently sank another Japanese battleship in the Coral Sea battle, comes of a family that has been fighting for human rights for a long time. His father is Samuel Levin, an active member of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers for the past 25 years.

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Aircraft Industry

• High strength with minimum weight. This is the basic principle underlying the construction of everything that flies—from birds to airplanes.

Stainless steel—with its exceptional strength-weight ratio—makes possible greater strength with lighter weight. In addition, stainless steel is highly resistant to corrosion—requires no protective coating. Therefore, no allowance need be made for weakening by corrosion, and thin-walled, lightweight structures can be built which will retain their full strength indefinitely. In addition, stainless steel can be rapidly fabricated at relatively low cost by spot-welding methods.

The increasing need for airplanes by the Army and Navy has emphasized the wider use of stainless steel in aircraft construction.

Your cooperation in demanding the Union Label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has demonstrated once more the effectivness of organized labor's purchasing power. There are still a few open-shoppers left in the men's and boys' clothing industry who deny their workers the basic right of organization. Each demand for the Amalgamated Union Label is one more blow against all anti-labor employers. Always ask for the Amalgamated Union Label on all men's and boys' wearing apparel that you buy.

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS OF AMERICA

Electrical Union Asks Greater War Effort

CLEVELAND, Sept. 12—After re-electing its three international officers by acclamation and adopting a well-rounded victory program, covering the major labor and political issues of the day, the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers yesterday adjourned its eighth international convention.

President Albert J. Fitzgerald, Secretary-Treasurer Julius Emspak and Director of Organization James J. Matles were the three officers re-elected, without opposition. Their report revealed the greatest year of union progress in the organization's history.

As many as 168,945 new members joined the union's ranks during the year, and it now has 810 plants employing 435,000 workers under union contract.

Winning the war was the theme which dominated every report, resolution and action adopted by the 600 delegates, who came from many of the most important war plants of the nation.

Only one outside speaker—Under-Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson—was invited to address the convention, which was purposely kept as brief and businesslike as possible, so as not to keep war production workers too long from their jobs.

A big convention streamer paid tribute to the 30,000 members of the UE who are now with the armed forces.

Patterson dwelt chiefly on war production in his speech, declaring that the United States is now producing tanks and planes whose combat record shows them to be superior to any produced by the enemy.

"As to quantity of planes," he said, "our production in August was larger than that of Germany, Italy and Japan combined."

OFFICERS FROM RANKS

The Under-Secretary stressed the democratic policy of the U. S. Army in the matter of promotions. "Two years ago we had only 14,000 officers in our Army. Today we have more than 200,000 officers. The policy is to select our future officers from the privates in the ranks.

"The War Department firmly believes that this system of selecting officers from the ranks on the basis of merit and capacity for leadership will give us the best body of officers we have ever had. It is the American way to afford an opportunity to the best men to become leaders in the Army."

Major war resolutions adopted were those on a second front and on war production.

SECOND FRONT

A long and vigorous debate occurred between supporters of a majority report calling for immediate opening of a western front and supporters of a minority report which recognized the desirability of a second front "as soon as possible." CIO Secretary James B. Carey, former president of the union, who attended the convention as a delegate, was one of the leading sponsors of the minority report.

The majority report was finally adopted by a roll-call vote of 1,417 to 623. It declared that the national security of the United States, as well as Great Britain, "is bound inseparably with the success or failure of the Red Army on the Soviet-German front," and urged "the immediate opening of a western front so that the war can be brought to a more speedy conclusion, thus saving millions of lives."

The resolution also condemned "pro-Nazi appeasers, fifth columnists, enemy agents and those who speak for them wittingly or unwittingly, delaying the opening of the western front by spreading rumors against the power of the armed forces of the United Nations."

WAR PRODUCTION

The resolution on war production was adopted after the delegates had heard a comprehensive report from Russ Nixon, Washington representative of the UE. Nixon criticized governmental failures to meet the problems of supplying raw materials and plant conversion, due to top-heavy representation of industry representatives, with business-as-usual attitudes, in war agencies.

The resolution called for establishment of a single national government Production Authority, in which labor and the employers will have equal status, with full authority to plan and carry out production policies.

It urged a number of practical steps to assure maximum production and proper allocation of raw materials; elimination of non-essential civilian production; unified control through the management-labor policy committee of allocation of manpower; recognition of the bearing which wages, taxes, prices, rationing and control of profits have on ability of workers to produce; spreading of orders to small business; and reallocation of orders held by overloaded plants to underloaded plants.

The need for full labor participation in policy-making and administration of war production was vigorously stressed.

SUPPORT MURRAY

The convention unanimously adopted a resolution of wholehearted support for the policies of CIO President Philip Murray, and of condemnation of John L. Lewis "for his betrayal of the labor movement through his association with appeasers and enemies of labor . . . and above all, his Hitler method of splitting the labor movement through his 'red-baiting' of Philip Murray and other leading CIO members."

Red-baiting also came in for special denunciation in another resolution, which described it as "the desperate tool of reactionary, anti-labor employers, the chief instrument of Nazi oppression and of the pro-Fascist fifth column in America."

Condemning "red-baiting in all its forms," the resolution stated red-baiting aims to disrupt American unity, divide the United Nations and "sow mistrust against the Soviet Union, which is doing most to defend the well-being of the world and of America."

A prolonged debate took place on proposals to bar Communists, Nazis or Fascists from holding office in or being employed by the UE. Characterized by administration forces as a "fake issue" and an attempt to inject "red-baiting" and dissension, this move was finally voted down by a substantial majority.

In a resolution on international labor cooperation, the convention urged the CIO to seek affiliation with the Anglo-Soviet trade union committee and the labor movements of the other United Nations and to work for unity with the AFL and the railroad brotherhoods for the welding of international labor solidarity against the Axis.

The convention went on record "to support the just request of India for national independence," requesting President Roosevelt to urge on the British government immediate steps for Indian independence, so the Indian people may have a "place as equals in the council of war of the United Nations and at the table of peace which will follow our victory over the Axis powers."

The United States was also urged to show its good faith, in accordance with the Atlantic Charter, by granting national independence to Puerto Rico.

POLITICAL ACTION

A particularly strong resolution was adopted on labor political action, advancing practical suggestions as to how the union, its locals and its members may be active to secure the election of win-the-war candidates, "in the interests of victory, progress and labor's rights."

Other resolutions adopted voted full support to Harry Bridges in his fight against deportation, setting up a special union committee for this purpose; opposed "any discrimination against Negroes, Jews or any other minority group in industry, in the armed forces or in civilian life"; called for immediate passage of the anti-polltax bill; and praised women's auxiliaries as "schools for unionism," calling for union appointment of a national organizer for the UE auxiliary with adequate financial assistance.

Mrs. Eva Taylor of Schenectady was elected president of the UE Women's Auxiliary. She is the mother of two sons who have been in the thick of the fighting in this war, one of them at Pearl Harbor and the other in the Dieppe raid.

Mrs. Esther Harmon was elected secretary of the Women's Auxiliary and Mrs. Katherine Beecher, educational director.

Dies 'Snoop' List Proves Red Herring

Washington, Sept. 12—The great Dies Committee snooping campaign against U.S. Government employes, designed to break down morale and hinder war work, blew up in the Texas witch-hunter's face this week when the Justice Dept. reported on the results of a Dies inspired investigation of some 1,100 employes.

Of the total investigated, the department reported only two had been considered "subversive," and these two were fired. The rest were cleared, with blunt comments on the amount of time and energy put in on the hunt.

Observers here pointed to the $100,000 wasted on the witch-hunt as additional proof that the Dies committee should be folded up quickly and its "investigators" looked into themselves.

Metal Mine Jobs Not Frozen--- Stabilized

Denver, Sept. 12—The government's recent order stabilizing manpower in metal mining is not "job-freezing" as many newspaper stories have tried to indicate, Reid Robinson, president, and James Leary, secretary-treasurer of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, said here this week.

The order, issued by War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, is intended to halt the alarming drift of labor from non-ferrous metal mining and porcessing, and also applies to the lumber industry.

The attempt to describe the order as job-freezing is "the wishful thinking of the enemies of our war effort and deliberate distortion of the facts," the union leaders said. They pointed out that the order was worked out with union cooperation, that many safeguards exist against discrimination in hiring and firing, and that it fully protects union rights.

'Get in the Scrap' Plea to CIO Women

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Declaring September to be "Get in the Scrap Month," the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO urged auxiliaries throughout the United States to make plans to help in the national metal scrap drive.

"They tell us here in Washington that there is only a two-weeks' supply of scrap on hand—that three big blast furnaces have already shut down—and that we'll be out 5,000,000 tons of steel this year unless we get scrap into the mills," the September Washington News Letter says.

"They tell us also that one of the biggest sources of scrap in the country is our own homes. 12,000,000 tons of scrap steel are estimated to be hidden away in our attics and cellars.

"All scrap metal except tin cans (unless you live near a detinning plant) and galvanized iron will be useful. Don't forget old keys, old nails—little scrap as well as big pieces.

"Scrap makes steel for tanks and ships and guns for Victory over Hitler.

"Let's get busy today."

AUXILIARIES AID SERVICEMEN

September is "Hospitality to Servicemen" month in the calendar of the Los Angeles Auxiliary Council of the CIO. The Council reports that a survey reveals that what members of our armed forces want most is not excitement and swing, but a chance to relax in a home and eat home-cooked meals. As a result they are urging every Los Angeles CIO auxiliary woman to entertain servicemen in her home—beginning this month.

Los Angeles auxiliaries have been competing for honors for helping the boys in service. Six auxiliaries won awards and were presented with orchids at the monthly Council luncheon. The selections were based on the following points: Auxiliaries which write regularly to servicemen, which send presents to them, which see that they get the Labor Herald, and which bring rummage to the luncheons.

Charles City, Iowa, Farm Equipment Auxiliary goes to the bus terminal each time new Charles City boys leave to enter the armed forces . They wear badges saying "CIO Women's Auxiliary" and give each new recruit a candy bar as a parting gift. The buses often leave at 5:30 a.m., but that doesn't daunt the CIO women.

Newspaper Guild auxiliary women in Denver man the USO booth at the Denver station one day a week and hand out cookies to troops passing through. The women make 600 cookies a week to meet the demand.

TO BUY JEEP

Purchase of a jeep for the Army is the immediate goal of Detroit auto auxiliaries of the Automobile workers. By unanimous decision at a city-wide meeting August 31 each of the UAW auxiliary groups in Detroit will help to raise the necessary funds. The jeep will be presented to the Army some time in October.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The Utility Workers Organizing Committee came through with a fine victory throughout the State of Michigan among the employes of the Consumers Power Company. This climaxes four years of persistent struggle. The vote was 1,023 for the CIO against 881 for the AFL. Regional Director August Scholle was in charge of the drive, assisted by five CIO organizers and several Utility Workers representatives, including Herman Chadwick.

CIO Regional Director R. J. Davidson reports that one of the most impressive and inspiring patriotic demonstrations that Cincinnati has ever witnessed took place on Tueday, September 1st, highlighting the Veterans of Foreign Wars National Encampment, being held in this city. The CIO unions played a very prominent part in the parade. They were joined with the AFL unions in a program of labor united for victory.

The Labor Division was one of the most colorful sections of the parade and more than 2,000 officers and members participated and impressed on the citizens of Cincinnati the seriousness with which labor is approaching the present struggle in which our nation is engaged and the role that organized labor is playing in the battle of production.

Ship Launchings

Another impressive event took place on Labor Day at the Bethlehem Steel Company Shipyard in Baltimore. Two large cargo ships were launched, named after men of labor who have passed on; one for a great leader of the Mine Workers, John Mitchell. These ceremonies were performed by Miss Mercedes Daugherty, niece and secretary of President Murray. The other ship launched was named after John Brown, who served the Mine Workers and the Shipbuilders. These ceremonies were performed by Mrs. John Green, wife of the president of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers.

The affair was significant in view of the fact that management and labor addressed the gathering and that this was the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. It proved beyond a doubt the progress made by the CIO in establishing labor relations with the gigantic corporations of our country.

Adolph Germer, national representative, reports that at the International Labor Day celebration in El Paso and Juarez, the CIO was greeted all along the line of march with the cry of "Viva CIO."

More Shoe Victories

Chalk up another victory for the United Shoe Workers organizing drive under the able direction of Brother Walter H. Harris, in the winning of the election at the Sports Specialty Shoemakers, Inc., at Chaffee, Mo., with a vote of 232 for the CIO as against 219.

UAW-CIO Regional Director Charles H. Kerrigan reports winning an election at Fleetwing in Bristol, Pa., in behalf of the CIO with a vote of 1332 to 173.

The FEWOC were successful in winning three more victories, as follows:

Power Works Unit at Caterpillar Plant in Peoria, Ill.: FEWOC-CIO, 19; against, 6.

The International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers won a Labor Board election at Jenkins Valve Co., Bridgeport, Conn., with a vote of 690 for CIO to 212 for the AFL, so reports CIO Sub-Regional Director Edward McCrone.

CIO Regional Director Harvey Fremming reports winning an election held among the employes of the Glasser Provisions Co., St. Joseph, Mo., as follows: PWOC-CIO, 104; AFL, 35.

Chicago Transformer Co., Chicago: UERMWA, 454; independent, 276.

National Representative Adolph Germer, who is also director of organization for the IWA, reports an election victory at the Tite Knot Mill Co., in Sisters and Redmond, Ore., with a vote of 59 for CIO and 45 for no union. He also reports a victory at the Graeagle Lubber Co., in Graeagle, Calif., with a vote of 105 for IWA-CIO as against 99 for the AFL.

Contract Won for 6,500

Under the direction of California District Director for the USA, Brother James S. Thimmes reports concluding a contract with the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, Pueblo, Colo., embodying all provisions of Little Steel directives, including retroactive pay back to February 15th. Approximately 6,500 members are involved.

CIO Regional Director H. R. Ballard of Omaha, Neb., reports concluding an agreement with the Sioux City Stock Yards Co., covering 200 employes in which they received substantial wage increases, maintenance of membership, seniority rights and vacations with pay.

The NLRB cracked down in no uncertain manner this past week on the Mount Clemens Pottery Co., Mount Clemens, Mich., whose labor policies have been an affront to federal law enforcement since August, 1940, when its employes began organizing into LIU 1083, Un. Pottery Workers, CIO, under the direction of CIO Regional Director August Scholle.

British to 'Crack Down' On Coal Operators Hindering War Effort

LONDON, Sept. 12—(ALN)—Colliery owners who continue to hold up Britain's production of coal, either through inefficiency or selfish consideration for their post-war competitive position, will be removed by the government and their duties will be taken over by labor-management pit production committees, Gordon MacDonald, holder of the newly-created post of Controller-General of Fuel, announced today.

"I intend to dismiss colliery bosses who refuse to carry out instructions," he said. "Reports show that employers have not gone to the limit to secure maximum coal output by using better methods of production and increased mechanization.

"To secure this increase, I am going to revitalize pit production committees.

SIT ON IDEAS

"By usurping the position of chairman on production committees, employers have heavily sat upon workers' suggestions for increasing output. I'm going to put a stop to that by arranging weekly meetings of production committees, presided over alternately by representatives of workers and management.

"In order to prevent the practical suggestions of miners from being suppressed by management, I am ordering that an idea box be installed at every pit. The suggestions will go straight to the production committees, and the miners will not have to sign their names. In this way victimization, which has taken place in some mines, will be prevented."

Pointing out that the solution to the coal problem does not lie in pleading with housewives, who already have done wonders as regards economy, to cut down consumption in their homes, the Fuel Controller, an ex-miner himself, warned that "if colliery owners insist on working their worst seams, in order to save the best ones for post-war exploitation, the government will apply the shoehorn to them and give the miners full opportunity to produce a maximum amount of coal for the war effort."

OUTPUT UP

Coal output is likely to increase this month, following the introduction, on September 6, of the government's new bonus system.

Each district will have a standard production figure, based on production over the past year. Miners will get bonuses ranging from 6 cents per shift for a one per cent increase, to a dollar per shift for a 15 per cent increase.

Will Lawther, who as president of the Miners Federation of Great Britain had a considerable hand in working out the new national coal plan, told this correspondent: "Workers in each colliery will know from day to day the comparison of their output with the target."

Potofsky, in Mexico, Hails Inter-American Labor Cooperation

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 12 (ALN)—The principle of working collaboration between the labor movements of the U. S. and Latin America has been considerably advanced by the visit here of Jacob L. Potofsky, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America and a member of the CIO Executive Board.

Potofsky was a guest of honor at a banquet given by 100 Mexican labor leaders and political figures for Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers, shortly before Toledano left for the United States.

Potofsky, after addressing a mass meeting here protesting Nazi terror in Europe, emphasized his concern for hemispheric labor unity in an interview with this correspondent.

COMMON IDEALS

"The labor movements of the United States and Latin America," he said, "have a great deal in common, ideals, historical parallels, and common contemporary problems. We have much to learn from each other.

"Unity of labor in the Americas can be the most important factor in establishing real continental solidarity.

"We of the CIO are looking forward to the day when we shall have unity in our own movement in the United States, so that we can extend more effectively the hand of fraternal brotherhood to the Latin American labor movements as well as to organized labor in Great Britain and the Soviet Union.

"In these days of world conflict and ruthless aggression, all of us must think in universal terms, without discrimination against any of the countries and peoples that participate in this struggle with us. Only in this way will it be possible for the workers to have their say as to the kind of peace we shall have after victory."

Murray, Green Greet Heroic Filipinos

Washington, Sept. 12.—Greetings to the Filipino people, now under Japanese tyranny, were sent this week in a joint statement signed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. Wm. Green. The message was shortwaved to the islands by the Office of War Information.

"The voice of American labor, in condemning totalitarian slavery, vows that the proponents of this way of living shall be destroyed, for it is evident that totalitarianism and decency cannot both abide in the same world," the two union leaders said.

"American labor believes in the motto, 'United We Stand.' That is why American labor insists that the liberation of the Philippines must be attained."

British Labor Conference Hears Report On Unity

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—New developments in the international labor unity situation were learned in early reports from the convention of the British Trade Union Congress reaching here this week from Blackpool, England.

(Last week's CIO Executive Board meeting called for close cooperation for victory by labor movements in all United Nations, including the Soviet Union and Latin America, and rebuked the attempt to exclude the CIO and the railroad brotherhoods.)

According to brief cabled reports reaching The CIO NEWS by press time, Sir Walter Citrine of the TUC charged at the Blackpool convention that the British government was responsible for the postponement of an international conference scheduled for Sept. 23 in this city.

At the same time, The CIO NEWS learned that it had been quoted—approvingly, too—in the London Times, which cited a CIO NEWS editorial of Sept. 7 describing the AFL-Citrine attempted deal as "miserable and insulting."

The Times, however, did not go all-out for international trade union unity, since its leading article was understood to have approved the AFL-TUC refusal to bring all the United Nations in on a full and equal basis. This was a reference to the original AFL proposal that would exclude not only the CIO and the brotherhoods but also the trade unions of Soviet Russia.

The CIO plays a part in American industry that is "essential to victory," the Times said—showing at least that it has a better knowledge of the place of the CIO than some of the leaders of the TUC and the top command in the AFL.

Church Group Urges Labor Aid Peace Planning

Washington, Sept. 12—Labor must put all its strength to the task of bringing about support for an international, poliical, economic and social reconstruction which will secure the future safety of this country and the rest of the world. This is the theme of latest Social Action pamphlet, "Labor in the World Crisis" just published by the Council for Social Action of the Congregational Christian Churches.

Problems confronting labor since America's entry into the war are taken up in a section on "Labor in the World Crisis" written by Joseph Mire, research economist and instructor at the University of Wisconsin School for Workers. Mire was formerly secretary of the Austrian Chamber of Labor.

Dr. E. E. Schwarztrauber, director of the Wisconsin Workers School, contributes an introductory section, "Labor Emerges" and an article on workers' education, Church and Labor and Labor and the War.

Pay Boosts, Security Won for Thousands In WLB Orders

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 12—The War Labor Board order granting maintenance of membership and voluntary checkoff to the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, in eight shipyards of the Bethlehem Steel Co., was hailed here at the national headquarters of the CIO union as a major triumph.

The order involved a master agreement between the union and Bethlehem covering some 70,000 workers in the company's eight Atlantic Coast yards in which the union is certified as sole bargaining agency.

"The board's decision brings under the IUMSWA banner the dominant employer in the industry," a union statement declared, "and climaxes successfully the union's fight dating back as far as 1936 for recognition in some of the yards involved."

The maintenance of membership clause, the board reported, "is identical with that granted in many recent cases and provides for a 15-day period during which members of the union can resign if they do not want to remain members for the duration of the contract."

The board's decision reached by a 6 to 0 vote, followed the majority recommendations of the panel to which the employer member dissented. On the question of check-off of union dues, the majority recommendation of the panel stated that it was based "to no small extent upon the fact that the check-off of union dues prevails in other divisions of the company as a result of previous action of the National War Labor Board."

DENY VACATIONS

In denying the union's request for two weeks' vacation with pay for employes with one or more years' service, the board said that it had decided that the same policy should be followed by the Shipbuilding Division which is now in existence in other divisions of the company "in the best interests of stable operation."

13,000 Benefit At Tractor Firm

Washington, Sept. 12—A general wage increase of five cents an hour for 13,000 workers of the Caterpillar Tractor Co., Peoria, Ill., was ordered this week by the National War Labor Board.

The Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, sole bargaining representative for the workers, had asked a 10-cent hourly increase.

The Board stated its order was in accordance with "the principles of its wage stabilization policy enunciated in the Little Steel case," which maintained that wage increases granted should be based on an estimated 15 per cent increase in the cost of living since January 1941.

LITTLE STEEL FORMULAE

The Board's action was taken on the recommendation of Robert W. Fleming, mediation officer, who reported that a wage survey showed that average straight time hourly earnings in January 1941 were 81.9 cents. Since then a general increase in wages of 8.7 per cent had been granted, necessitating a further increase of 6.3 per cent to bring the increase up to the 15 per cent rise in the cost of living.

"This company believes," Fleming reported to the Board, "That the wages it has paid have been above the industry. If this is so it must indicate that competitors have recently given increases unmatched by Caterpillar, for the survey certainly does not show that Caterpillar is presently ahead of the industry."

Narrow Differential

Washington, Sept. 12—A ten-cent differential between the starting rate at the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Company's main operations at Birmingham and its Holt Blast Furnace at Holt, Ala., was narrowed to five cents in an unanimous decision announced this week by the War Labor Board.

The United Steelworkers of America, CIO, had asked that the entire differential be eliminated.

'Monky-Ward' Must Lift Pay

New York, Sept. 14—A pay increase of five cents an hour for 6,800 employes of the warehouse, mail order house and retail store of Montgomery Ward Co. in Chicago, ordered by the National War Labor Board, was announced here by Samuel Wolchok, president of the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employees.

The increase was made retroactive to June 2, when the case was certified to the Labor Board by the U. S. Dept. of Labor.

CHALLENGED WLB

The mail order house, second largest in the world, had challenged the WLB's jurisdiction ever since the Board agreed to consider the CIO union's grievances.

On June 30 the WLB took jurisdiction of the case and notified the management that since it had refused to submit the dispute to arbitration, it was imperative for it to assume jurisdiction in order to avert a strike which might spread among the more than 70,000 Montgomery Ward employes in offices and warehouses throughout the country.

In directing the five-cent pay boost, the Board adopted a unanimous recommendation of a panel headed by Dean Lloyd K. Garrison, which said the increase was necessary to bring wages up to the 15 per cent increase in the cost of living between Jan. 1, 1941 and May 1942.

HIGH TURNOVER

The Board also cited the low wage scale at Montgomery Ward and pointed to "an abnormally high turnover indicative of employe unrest" as additional reasons for granting the increase.

Wolchok said that the Board's decision was only a partial adjustment of the dispute, the issues of union security, the check-off, the 40-hour, five-day week and arbitration machinery being still unsettled.

Union Wins Job Back For Negro

Rockwood, Tenn., Sept. 12—A union grievance committee at the Tennessee Products Co. here went to bat for the Negro workers at the plant in a meeting with the management in which a foreman was sharply taken to task for displaying racial prejudice by aiming insulting remarks at Negroes.

Local 579, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, is the union representative of the workers, two-thirds of whom are white.

In bringing charges against the foreman, Roy Hurst, chairman of the union committee, said that with Negro boys "risking their lives for our country, the union could not permit them to be insulted while they were working to produce the war materials needed for victory."

The superintendent said that although he, himself, was not prejudiced toward the Negro people, it was difficult to change "Southern prejudice."

Gain Security

Washington, Sept. 12—Union security through a maintenance of membership clause was granted by the War Labor Board this week to the United Steelworkers of America, sole union representative for 450 employes at the Englewood plant of the American Can Co. in Chicago.

Launch 'CIO Ships' As 20,000 Cheer

By FRED D'AVILA

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12—CIO women this week launched two Liberty ships named after union leaders in a Labor Day ceremony that drew 20,000 spectators at the Bethlehem-Fairfield yard to hear speeches urging creation of a second front now against the Nazis as well as increased production to further that victory in the war.

The affair was sponsored by the yard's labor-management production committee, composed of representatives from Local 43, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, and from Bethlehem Steel.

The scheduled double launching became unexpectedly a triple one when the S. S. Benjamin Hawkins was rushed to completion in 39 days, to set a new East Coast record. The former record from keel laying to launching was 45 days.

NAMED FOR LEADERS

The two other vessels were christened by women of labor—by Mrs. John Green, wife of the president of the IUMSWA, and by Miss Mercedes Daugherty, niece and secretary of CIO President Philip Murray. Miss Daugherty sponsored the S. S. John Mitchell and Mrs. Green the S. S. John Brown. Both ships were named after now dead labor leaders.

By launching three ships immediately after setting a national record of 12 launchings in a month, the Fairfied yard has sent 15 ships down the ways in the last 32 days, which is an average of almost a ship every other day.

SEEN AS SYMBOL

President Green of the IUMSWA described the jointly sponsored launchings as "symbolic of labor's new activities" in a speech that was broadcast from coast to coast.

"We are all united," he said, "to ensure that America's contribution to the effort of the United Nations shall be the decisive factor in the outcome of the war."

Workers Win Treasury Flag

River Rouge, Mich., Sept. 12—A Minute flag is flying over the Whitehead & Kales Co. plant here as a result of 100 per cent participation in war bond buying by members of Local 2341 of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO.

Survey on Unions' Growth Describes Bargaining As Vital in Wartime

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12—Development of the actual workings of collective bargaining in 16 major American industries are outlined in the latest survey made by the Twentieth Century Fund, "How Collective Bargaining Works," just off the press.

This book of nearly a thousand pages analyzes actual methods and procedures of bargaining both from labor's and industry's point of view, aims to point out successes, failures and lessons to be learned, and traces dominant trends.

Most of the field work was done in 1939, while developments studied cover 1940 and 1941 in part. After it was written, says Evans Clark, executive director of the Fund, in the foreword, the United States "was catapulted into the most gigantic war of all history."

Although collective bargaining is likely to change its form and procedure under the pressure of the war, he says, "the experience of the last war, at least, indicates that the basic problems of industrial relations remain after the end of hostilities.

"It also showed that during the conflict sound labor policies are essential elements of victory. In war time both the area of collective bargaining and its importance are increased."

Six of the industries covered in the survey are essential to war production—steel, electrical products, bituminous coal, railroads, automobiles and rubber.

William H. Davis, chairman of the National War Labor Board, is chairman of a special Labor Committee of the Fund, which helped to outline the scope of the survey and supervise the work of the research staff. Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers of America, is one of the eight other members of the committee.

GREATER COVERAGE

General findings of the survey made at the peak of union membership in the country note a tendency toward regional and national coverage in union contracts, greater organization of employers and a trend toward industry-wide collective barbaining.

In the opening chapter, a section on recent growth of union membership states that between 1933 and 1938 the total number of union members increased from slightly less than three million to about eight million. Continued expansion brought the total figure to about eleven million in 1941, or more than one-quarter of the country's 40 million workers.

Surveying the entire field of collective bargaining, as revealed in a detailed study of practices in the 16 industries included, the report finds that "the rise of industrial unionism . . . was partly, if not largely, responsible for the extension of collective bargaining. Today industrial or semi-industrial unions provide the dominant organizational and bargaining patterns."

FDR Order Bans Wage Premiums

Washington, Sept. 12.—Acting on complaints of the CIO United Automobile Workers and other unions, Pres. Roosevelt this week issued an Executive Order banning premium wage rates for work done on Saturdays, Sundays or holidays when they fall within an employe's 40-hour week period.

Following the President's request, both the CIO and AFL waived the premium pay last spring. Subsequently, hundreds of union contracts were amended to include the waiver, which the President asked as an aid to the war effort.

Resentment grew in some places, however, when corporation managements sought to embarrass unions by asserting that the overtime wage payments need not be waived. In recent months, a few AFL unions have been using the CIO's waiver of the premium as a "sales argument" in NLRB campaigns. The UAW-CIO blamed loss of a recent election at the Curtiss-Wright plant in Buffalo to such propaganda by the AFL machinists union.

The UAW-CIO convention called for spreading the waiver to all plants, warning that the union would end its pay sacrifice if such action were not taken within 30 days. The President's order followed a conference with UAW leaders at the White House a week ago.

GM Workers Get 4c Pay Increases

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Throwing out the recommendations of a fact-finding panel, the War Labor Board this week ordered General Motors Corp. to raise the wages of its 225,000 workers by 4 cents an hour.

Labor members of the Board dissented in the 6-3 vote. They upheld the panel's suggestion for a nickel increase based partly on the "Little Steel" cost-of-living formula and partly on the need for equalizing GM wages with those in force at the Ford Co. on its "Little Steel" cost-of-living formula and party on its need for equalizing GM wages with those in force at the Ford Co.

The Board majority argued the panel had incorrectly computed the GM wage situation. While the panel urged a 1½-cents increase under the formula and 3½ cents for equalization purposes, the WLB ordered the full 4 cents under the Little Steel pattern and turned down completely the equalization bid.

In other sections of the decision, the Board voted for maintenance of membership, equal pay for women doing men's work and retention of the 5 per cent night bonus.

The two unions involved—the United Automobile Workers and the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers—had originally sought a 12½ cents an hour raise.

OTHER ORDERS

In a series of other actions, the Board ordered the Firestone Rubber Co. and the B. F. Goodrich Co. to sign union security contracts with the United Rubber Workers; announced it would set up a five-man "subsidiary board" representing labor, industry and the public to settle all disputes in the Pacific Northwest lumber industry, and asked 41 steel companies to show cause why they shouldn't make 5½-cent wage increases retroactive to Feb. 15, as the Board had ordered both Big and Little Steel to do.

The independent companies have been refusing the United Steelworkers' demands for back pay.

Back FDR, Unions In Jersey Ask

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 19—Organized labor in New Jersey this week demanded Congressional support for Pres. Roosevelt's anti-inflation program, and then mapped plans for the election of "win-war," pro-labor candidates in the coming elections.

The American Labor League, comprising CIO, AFL and railway brotherhood locals, called for conference this week-end in Newark and Camden to "mobilize labor's voting power" at the polls.

Meanwhile Carl Holderman, chairman of the league and an official of the Textile Workers Union, CIO, sent letters to Jersey's Congressional delegation explaining labor's support for the President's policies.

HEED THE CALL

Calling attention to the league's insistence that "the President's call for action be heeded," Holderman added:

"We are certain that all Americans are ready to make sacrifices in order that the war may be won.

"We consider it a disgrace that more than four months have passed without an end to the political game-playing and buck-passing on the inflation menace by the Congress."

Rubber, Hosiery Drives Send Bond Sales Zooming

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—The joint labor-management drive to spur sale of War Bonds in the nation's CIO-organized rubber plants is moving ahead at a fast clip, the Treasury Department revealed today.

Instituted by the United Rubber Workers and 157 rubber companies, the campaign is looking towards a goal where every worker in the industry will be setting aside a dime of each dollar in his paycheck for bonds.

Preliminary reports show that in 23 companies, 10% of the payroll is already being allotted to bonds, while in 65 other firms 90% of the workers have signed up for the payroll deductions, with the bond "check-off" ranging between eight and ten percent.

Leading the pack among the larger concerns are the Akron plant of General Tire & Rubber, and the Los Angeles and Clarksville, Tenn., factories of B. F. Goodrich.

The Treasury also revealed that a similar campaign among CIO hosiery workers is nearing its goal.

Sponsored by the American Federation of Hosiery Workers and three employer associations, the drive has brought workers in one-fourth of the 60 firms up to the level of 10% of payroll for bonds.

Cut Taxis, Save Buses, Union Asks

New York, Sept. 19—(FP)—In the campaign to conserve rubber and gasoline, the taxicab and sleek limousine must be removed from the streets before bus service is cut.

This stand was taken by the Transport Workers Union, CIO, in supporting an ODT order which reduces the number of New York taxis by 30 per cent as of Sept. 20, while opposing a proposed ODT order which would reduce bus service by 25 per cent.

To combat the proposal for bus reduction, union drivers are asking passengers to sign petitions opposing "curtailment of service in any of the franchised bus lines in the City of New York so long as non-essential consumption of rubber and gasoline by private automobiles and taxicabs is permitted in this city, as well as throughout the country."

Reduction of the number of taxis had been asked by the TWU long before the war and has been one of the demands in every New York cab strike. The companies have flooded the streets with cabs and driven down the wages of all the drivers, the union pointed out.

Describe Soldier Vote Law

Washington, Sept. 19—A full explanation of the voting rights secured for men and women in the armed forces was circulated to CIO unions in a letter this week from Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative.

The letter points out that men and women in service can vote, provided they meet the usual requirements, that the law applies to Congressional and Presidential elections, and gives detailed instructions of the steps the soldier has to take in getting his ballot in.

The letter also calls on CIO unions for renewed work for abolition of the polltax.

Seattle—Typical Boom Town

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 19—The University of Washington this week made public a survey of the changes wrought by the war in this typical boomtown.

Some 110,000 workers migrated to Seattle between January, 1940, and March, 1942, the university social science researchers found. Half of the new war workers were under 25 years old.

One-third of the new workers came from farm areas; another one-third left homes in towns ranging between 2,500 and 25,000 population. Only one in ten came from other cities of Seattle's size.

Local merchants and landlords have been quick to take advantage of the boom, and as a result, the cost of living has risen faster here than in any other city in the U. S., the survey found.

V. P. Wallace In Movies!

New York, Sept. 19—(FP)—Vice-President Henry Wallace's now famous Free World Association speech last May—the Century of the Common Man—which only the labor press and a few liberal dailies gave any kind of a break, is the basis of a movie short, The Price of Victory, which Paramount is making here.

The star will be Wallace himself, who came here Sept. 15 for the shooting of the film.

1942 Model Race Bias

Gary, Ind., Sept. 19—(FP)—The United Steelworkers of America, CIO, has protested against a new method of anti-Negro discrimination here.

There is only one job-training class in the city for Negro workers. It is held at 4 o'clock in the morning.

Rubber Union Rolls Past 100,000 As Parley Opens

By PAT CROZIER

AKRON, O., Sept. 19—With a record-breaking membership of over 100,000 the United Rubber Workers' Seventh Annual Convention opens here Sept. 21 on a keynote of all-out production to help the United Nations carry the war to the enemy.

Declaring the slogan of the URW for the coming year "may well be 'Everything for Victory'," Pres. Sherman Dalrymple in his report to the delegates points out that now, when our government and military leaders "have declared for an offensive against our enemies," labor must assume even greater responsibilities.

S. H. DALRYMPLE

PROUD OF LABOR ROLE

"We can be proud of the leading part which American labor has played in the war effort—and it is a fact that no other single element in America has done so much as labor has, editors and propagandists to the contrary notwithstanding. Nevertheless we must recognize that labor must shoulder new responsibilities and broaden its viewpoint if it is going to make its full contribution to preserving the American way of life," Dalrymple said.

Labor must see that "fomenters of national disunity, Nazi sympathizers and politics-as-usual Congressmen are not elected to Congress," the rubber union leader warned. "Instead, we must exert our strength to elect a 'Win-the-War' Congress."

Dalrymple called on labor to take a more active part in the production picture. "The functioning of joint management-labor committees must be one of the chief duties of every local union," he emphasized.

Paying tribute to Pres. Murray of the CIO he said, "Labor in America can be thankful that when this crisis came upon our country there was a man like Philip Murray at the head of the CIO. Only future historians will be able to do justice to his contributions to our country and to the cause of labor."

Percentage of union members to total employment in the industry rose in the last 12 months, Vice-Pres. L. S. Buckmaster reported.

As of June, 1942, 71.9 per cent of the industry's employes were union members, as against only 55 per cent in June, 1941. Buckmaster reported that membership topped the 100,000 mark in July, despite declining employment and the lay-off of thousands of rubber workers in the early months.

Calling for "firm and unwavering support to our President in his war policy of carrying the war to the enemy through offensive action," General Sec.-Treas. Grillo, in his last report prior to enlistment in the Army, stressed the need for the union to act "more decisively and more aggressively in helping to win the war than it ever has—and I want it said on the record that I think our union has done a good job in the past."

Electrical Union Winds Up Parley On Output Theme

Cleveland, Sept. 19—The CIO United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers wound up its eighth annual convention last week pledged to seek all possible means to boost the nation's vital war production program.

The union suggested creation of a single national production authority with labor and employer representation to direct the country's out program and plan for future developments. Earlier the convention heard a talk by Allan S. Haywood, CIO organization director.

In its final session the UE upheld the right of international representatives to serve as elected delegates to the convention. It was pointed out that the paid officials attending the convention numbered only 24, that they had been elected by UE locals, and that the international does not pay their expenses at the convention.

John Green, Labor M. P., In Radio Chat

Washington, D. C., September 19—An exchange of greetings via short wave radio between Pres. John Green of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America and David Kirkwood, Labor Member of Parliament, is scheduled for Wednesday, Sept. 23.

The program will be available to station WNYC in New York and to stations of the Mutual Network at 4:45 p.m. EWT, on that day. Unions are urged to ask their local Mutual stations to broadcast the 15-minute program.

President Green will speak from New York City where the annual convention of his union is in progress.

David Kirkwood has been the Labor M. P. from the Clydeside District of Scotland for over 20 years. He was a shipyard worker and union member before entering Parliament. President Green is also a Clydeside man; he served his union and trade apprenticeship in th Clyde Shipyards.

St. Louis—(FP) — The circulation department of the Globe-Democrat voted 49-1 for the CIO St. Louis Newspaper Guild as its bargaining agent in an NLRB election.

Gas, Chemical Workers Meet; To Ask CIO Charter

BUFFALO, Sept. 19—An enthusiastic first convention of the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers of America ended its work in an overtime session Saturday with the unanimous election of Martin L. Wagner of St. Louis as president.

Other officers named are: Vice-President, William Ross, Newark, N.J.; Secretary-Treasurer, Cecil Martin, Joliet, Ill.; Western New York regional director, Charles A. Doyle, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; plus ten other regional members on the executive board.

Chief resolutions passed instructed the new officers to seek immediate affiliation with CIO; urged opening of a second front now; demanded congressional action passing the entire anti-inflation program proposed by President Roosevelt; commended the Pittsburgh Pirates on hiring of Negro ball players; unanimously endorsed the union policies of Philip Murray and the national policies of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

HIT DISCRIMINATION

In addition, the convention demanded an end to discrimination in industry and called for union cooperation with the President's fair employment practices committee; hit red tape and delay in the work of the WLB and WPB and demanded greater labor representation on the WPB in the interest of more efficient conduct of the war; called for a Federal commission on labor education to supply educational needs of workers and farmers.

The delegates also called for development of women into positions of leadership in labor and ordered an immediate campaign to train women members of this international; advocated a congressional legislative program embracing higher corporation taxes, joint income taxes for married persons, elimination of tax exempt securities; extension of social security to Government and domestic employes and laborers; outlawing of American corporation participation in foreign cartels.

HEAR FR. MAXWELL

One hundred and fifty-seven delegates heard the Rev. Charles A. Maxwell of our Lady of Nativity Church in Buffalo, chaplain to the United Steel Workers of America in western New York, praise their devotion to Philip Murray and the war program of President Roosevelt.

"We must win this war," Father Maxwell said, "and to do that we must support President Roosevelt because if we fail to win the war, we would not be sitting here after the war deciding whether to have a gas, coke and chemical workers' union or join the dairy maids' union. I believe in organization for the dairy maids and the farm hands and the farmers, but this is not their union."

Attacking John L. Lewis without mentioning him by name, the priest told the delegates they did well to break with the man who has "tried to disrupt the greatest labor movement this nation has known."

He predicted "a revolution—but not a bloody one—when this war is over; a revolution that will bring more of the world's goods to the common man. For, if we are not fighting for a better world, what in the name of God are we fighting for?"

He received great applause when he asserted, "We are going to hold them (the world leaders) to the Atlantic charter when we have won the war."

NEW BOARD

Oil Union Cites Gains in Texas

FORT WORTH, Tex., Sept. 19—Membership gains in the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union have been paced by a 16 per cent increase along the Texas Gulf coast, where the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign has been concentrating its activities, delegates to the OWIU convention were told today.

The information was contained in the report of Pres. A. R. Kinstley. The parley opens Sept. 21 at the Texas Hotel here.

Coupled with Kinstley's report, other support for the OWOC-CIO came from President O. A. Knight who reported to the delegates that previous campaigns conducted by the International Union had failed because of lack of funds and its inability to concentrate on single objectives. In contrast, he noted the "Organizing Campaign, under the direction of the CIO has been able to concentrate instead of scatter its fire. Had the Organizing Campaign chosen to neglect Standard Oil and to organize where organization is easy, we would have got many more members but lost our main objective.

"Now, with the groundwork solidly laid in the first year of the Organizing Campaign, subsequent developments should move much more quickly. The rapid progress now being made in the Gulf area is an indication of what can be expected in the next few months in California and New Jersey," Knight's report said.

The four administrative officers of the OWIU-CIO were to be installed for new terms on the opening day of the convention, which is being held at the Texas Hotel here. Re-elected in the recent national referendum of the International union were President O. A. Knight, Sec.-Treas. E. C. Conarty, First Vice-Pres. Sam Beers and Second Vice-Pres. A. R. Kinstley.

Sec. James B. Carey of the CIO will address the delegates, while Director Edwin S. Smith of the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign will deliver a report on the campaign's activities and successes during the past year.

The convention is expected to continue through Sept. 25.

GREETINGS FROM MURRAY

Progress made so far in organizing the Standard Oil interests was praised by CIO Pres. Murray in a wire of greeting to OWIU Pres. Knight.

"Failure to organize Standard in the past has been a continuing handicap to your other organizational efforts," Murray wired. "To have the great Standard Oil companies outside the democratic fold of collective bargaining—particularly in war time—is a situation which neither the CIO nor the OWIU could view with anything but deep dissatisfaction. . . .

"I am sure your convention will wish to continue and support this campaign under CIO auspices during the coming year.

"We are organizing not only to advance the workers' economic interests but also to enable them to throw their full weight behind the war effort."

Implement Union Sets Constitution; Elects Oakes

PEORIA, Ill., Sept. 19—After charting a rounded win-the-war program, delegates to the first constitutional convention of the CIO Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee which met here Sept. 10-13, re-elected by acclamation their three international officers and laid down important policies to guide the new international union during the coming year.

President Grant Oakes, Vice President John Schaffer and Secretary-Treasurer Gerald Fielde received a prolonged ovation at their unopposed re-election, as a demonstration of unity and confidence in their leadership.

The four-day convention held in this center of war industry, and home of the union's largest local, marked the transformation of the former Organizing Committee into the United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers of America.

On acceptance by the national CIO executive board of the new constitution drawn up at the convention, the union will be chartered as a full fledged member of the great CIO family of industrial unions.

Both President Oakes and Secretary Fielde, stressed in their speeches to the delegates, the responsibility of labor to see that every aspect of the war effort is safeguarded and accelerated.

The name of CIO President Philip Murray evoked applause at every mention. The convention adopted a resolution declaring its complete solidarity with his policies, and as an expression of their regard, voted to bestow an honorary life membership on him. Allan Haywood, CIO director of organization, and Powers Hapgood, Indiana regional director, were similarly honored.

In his speech to the delegates, Director Haywood praised the spirit and unity of the convention, the serious consideration given to problems and the excellent program adopted which he said was in complete accord with the CIO program.

Other speakers included Fullerton Fulton, Illinois regional director, and Robert Travis, vice president of the Illinois Council.

URGE CONVERSION

The convention adopted resolutions urging the speeding up of the complete conversion of large farm equipment plants for war production; calling for increased labor representation on all policy-making boards, and for compulsory formation of a network of labor-management committees throughout industry.

The delegates went on record in favor of an immediate Second Front in Europe as the wisest and most effective defense of America, in a resolution addressed to Pres. Roosevelt.

Oil Workers Ask Safety Council as Blast Kills Two

TEXAS CITY, Tex., Sept. 19—A renewed CIO demand for a definite fire protection and safety training program is expected to be made at the Pan American Refining Co. here following a terrific Labor Day explosion and fire that fatally burned two men and brought injury to a dozen others, two of them seriously.

Earl Sonnier, Lester Ingram, Felix Vicknair and Charles M. Wilkes, all members of Local 449 of the CIO Oil Workers International Union, were hailed as heroes of the blast.

The four men remained dangerously close to the searing heat of the refinery blaze following the explosion, to rescue the two men who later died of their burns.

W. V. Johnson, one of the fatally burned Pan-Am employes, was a veteran member of the union. Leonard Zaringue, the other victim, had told his buddies Labor Day morning that "I'm going to join up today."

Director Edwin S. Smith of the Oil Workers' Organizing Campaign, immediately sent condolences to the family of the two men, pointing out that they "died in the task of making gasoline to defeat Hitler."

Smith called upon the Pan-Am management to bare all details of the blast, and demanded "that management leave no stone unturned to prevent repetition of such accidents in the future. We ask also that management establish a working committee with our union to promote refinery safety."

Labor Votes Score In Primaries; Jersey CIO Head Nominated

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Labor and other progressive "win-the-war" sections of the public united in state primaries during the past fortnight to out-vote the political bids of numerous appeasers and haters of President Roosevelt.

Although results of the primaries in recent months have been spotty, unionists could look with satisfaction at many victories:

Massachusetts: Rep. Joseph Casey was nominated as Democratic candidate for Senator, to run against Republican Henry Cabot Lodge in the autumn elections. Casey, warmly endorsed by the State CIO, defeated John Fitzgerald, 79-year-old father-in-law and stooge of Joseph Kennedy, one-time Ambassador to England and a close associate of many defeatist America Firsters.

New Jersey: Labor helped renominate Sen. William Smathers, who will oppose ultra-reactionary A. W. Hawkes, labor-hating former president of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, in the November contest.

NAME CIO LEADER

Nomination of Irving Abramson, head of the Jersey CIO and of the Natl. CIO War Relief Committee, as Democratic candidate for Congress in the eighth district was a clear-cut labor victory. Many CIO and AFL leaders were selected as Democratic contenders for the Assembly—including Pres. James McLeish of District 4, CIO electrical workers; Thomas Saul, vice-chairman of the American Labor League, and Frank Bailey, Union County CIO council head.

Connecticut: Democratic state convention nominated for re-election Gov. Robert A. Hurley, whose efforts in bringing about labor peace and helping to spur the war effort, have brought wide acclaim. Lt. Gov. Odell Shepard and Rep. Lucien Maciora, both labor-endorsed, also were named. In Hartford, the Democrats picked William Scott, city AFL head, for State Senate and Harold Conroy, treasurer of the state's largest union local—at Colt Arms—for assemblyman.

Michigan: Michigan's gift to American fascism, Gerald L. K. Smith, was buried in an avalanche of votes in the Republican primary contest for Senator. Smith, who campaigned on the phony issue of "a tire for everyone," was defeated by Judge Homer Ferguson, Detroit racket-buster. Sen. Prentiss Brown, Democrat, was unopposed.

Rep. Rudolph Tenerowicz, who gained labor's enmity by supporting the Dies Committee, attacking auto union Pres. R. J. Thomas, and slandering Negroes during the recent Sojourner Truth housing incident, was badly licked by former Rep. George Sadowski, who had strong labor support.

Georgia: Gene Talmadge, who

LABOR FOR VICTORY

CIO Supports Bill As 'Step Forward' To FDR 7-Point Plan

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—CIO support for the Brown bill as a "step forward" in carrying out President Roosevelt's economic victory program was expressed this week before the Senate Banking Committee by Van A. Bittner, assistant to Philip Murray as president of the USA-CIO. Bittner appeared as Murray's representative, since Murray was absent on a visit to the Canadian Congress of Labor in Ottawa.

Making it clear that the CIO was completely behind the President's war leadership, Bittner demanded enactment by Congress of the full seven-point program outlined by the President in April and reaffirmed in his most recent message to Congress and to the people.

"Our position is a simple one," Bittner said. "We want the President's entire seven-point national economic program put into effect at once. The purpose of this program is to prevent inflation and to stabilize the cost of living for all the people.

"We do not intend to permit any selfish group to stir up national disunity and undermine the President's seven-point program by playing off one group against another. The war program demands the complete and wholehearted support for all of the phases covered by the President's proposals."

STEP FORWARD

The Brown bill (SJ Res. 161) is a step forward but by no means covers the problem that now faces us, Bittner said. The bill, he pointed out, should fix farm prices at actual parity—as asked by the President. As written, it would empower him to fix prices at the highest level between Jan. 1 of this year and Sept. 15.

The bill must also be considered along with the tax bill, Bittner said, pointing out that the tax bill as at present drawn utterly fails to carry out a most important part of the seven-point program. He called for a tax bill in line with the needs of victory sharply criticizing the soak-the-poor spare-the-rich proposals coming out of the Senate Finance Committee.

The CIO answer to this maneuver was given both in Bittner's prepared statement and in answers to queries by Sen. Taft. The CIO accepts the principle of wage stabilization, he said, which does not mean wage freezing, and the CIO insists that wages be left to collective bargaining and the War Labor Board, where labor has a voice.

Bittner called for four necessary amendments to the bill to make it an effective step in carrying out the seven-point program:

1. The bill should not have a proviso now in it giving the authority to reduce wages below their present level; (2) the bill should extend the wage stabilization date from August 15 to September 15, to take into account the sharp costs increase in that month; (3) the bill should incorporate the $25,000 income level in the seven-point program; (4) the bill should have a provision to prevent reduction of wages for a two-year period after the end of the war.

Auto Workers Move Office

Detroit, Sept. 19—The United Automobile Workers, CIO, have moved to new national headquarters at 411 West Milwaukee, Detroit, Michigan. The union was formerly located at 281 W. Grand Blvd., Detroit.

7½ Million Get Less Than 40c an Hour

New York, Sept. 19—Despite the white light of publicity on the wages of the relatively few highly-skilled and highly-paid workers in industry, some 7,500,000 American wage earners still make less than 40 cents an hour, L. Metcalf Walling, administrator of the newly consolidated Wage-Hour and Public Contracts Divisions of the U. S. Dept. of Labor, stated recently.

"Some 7,500,000 American wage earners still get less than 40 cents an hour. This represents 19 per cent of the 40,000,000 American workers exclusive of proprietors and Government employes. Of this number 1,500,000 covered under the Wage-Hour law are getting between 30 and 40 cents," he said.

Bulletin:

Murray Hits Pay-Freeze Proposal

Washington, Sept. 19—President Philip Murray today sent a telegram sharply protesting reported amendments to the Brown Bill that would hold wage increases down to 15 per cent over the level of Jan. 1, 1941.

Describing this move, Murray told Senators Robert F. Wagner and Prentiss M. Brown that it is "thoroughly unjust and must result in weakening the war program.

"Labor has expressed its willingness to accept stabilization of wages under the jurisdiction of the War Labor Board with full discretion to meet problems of past and possible future rises in the cost of living," Murray's wire said.

"Freezing of wages cannot function and will destroy the morale of American workers. Labor must vigorously oppose any legislative provisions permitting the cutting of wages now incorporated in your bill.

"There is no legislative record justifying any such provisions, as in the case of unregulated farm prices which have gone beyond parity and thereby raised the cost of living for all the people," Murray concluded.

About 50% of every tank, ship, submarine and gun is made of scrap iron and steel.

Metal Miners May Get 12½c Boost; WLB Group Warns Of Manpower Shortage

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Declaring that manpower shortages in copper and other vital war metals has created "an emergency war problem of national significance," the majority panel report of the War Labor Board this week recommended a wage increase of 12.5 cents an hour, union security and the checkoff for 10,000 members of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, CIO.

"In the cases before us," the majority said, "the evidence overwhelmingly establishes the existence of an emergency war problem . . . and our considered judgement is that the making of fair wage adjustments will aid in the solution of the problem, and without such an adjustment the emergency will deepen and the evil consequences to the war effort will be incalculable."

Due to substandard wages in these industries, the report said, more than 20 percent of the working force has been lost in two states alone, Idaho and Utah. Copper production dropped five percent in July, and a big smelter in Tacoma, Wash., is "losing 2,000 tons of copper per month for lack of only 300 unskilled common laborers."

MINORITY REPORT

The majority report was signed by Dean Lloyd K. Garrison of Wisconsin University, representing the public and A. E. Stevenson, secretary of the Cleveland CIO Council. The minority report, which dissented on everything, was signed by Almon Roth, president of the San Francisco Employers Council, representing industry.

Roth's report was a vicious attack on the whole principle of union security, which he said was of no use in boosting war production. He also trotted out all the old arguments against union security, claiming that it forced workers into unions, protected racketeers, etc.—the Westbrook Pegler line.

SAFEGUARD AND JUSTICE

The majority's recommendation on union security was a duplicate of the plan worked out in the Little Steel cases, which calls for maintenance of membership and the checkoff, applying to all good standing members within 15 days of the full Board's final decision.

Commenting on the need for wage increases to offset migration from the industries, the majority said:

"Our conclusion therefore is that, to promote both present and future production, and as a matter of plain justice to the men who have patriotically remained in the mines, mills and smelters, the national interest requires that appropriate upward adjustments be made in those plants which have been affected by the conditions herein described."

Poll-Tax Must Go

The passage by Congress of the Soldiers' Vote Bill is a great victory for democracy, particularly in view of its provision to excuse members of the armed forces from the necessity of paying poll taxes for the privilege of voting.

The votes of our fighting men should help greatly in the election of real win-the-war candidates in the coming election; and CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan has urged all unions to correspond with their members in the armed forces so they may be fully informed on issues and candidates.

This bill should also lend impetus to the drive to eliminate the undemocratic poll-tax completely, and to grant the right to vote to the millions who are now disfranchised in the poll-tax states.

Only a few more Congressmen are needed now to sign the petition to bring the House anti-poll-tax bill to the floor for a vote. All unions and active members should contact their Congressmen, to make sure that the necessary 218 signatures are secured and that there is a substantial majority to speed the passage of this important bill.

In the Senate, the Pepper anti-poll-tax bill is still being held up in the Judiciary Committee. The CIO urges all unionists to write or wire this committee and its members urging an immediate favorable report.

Let's act now to make our democracy effective for winning the war, by abolishing the poll-tax once and for all.

Is This Equality?

Some Congressional apologists for the present soak-the-poor and spare-the-rich tax legislation seek to give the impression that it already cuts the rich to the bone and makes unnecessary the $25,000 limit on wartime personal incomes proposed by the President.

But the current CIO Economic Outlook points out that under the bill passed by the House a man with an income of $100,000 would still retain $32,000; $60,000 would be left to individuals with $500,000; and some millionaires would scrape along on as much as $350,000 a year after all taxes.

If that is "cutting to the bone," what can be said for the job Congress is doing on ordinary working people? Most American workers earn $1,500 a year or less. Out of this $29-a-week income, some $4.80 a week went to federal, state and local taxes last year. Under the current legislation, an additional $2.40 a week would be taken away, leaving the worker only $21.80 a week to support his family. A 10 per cent sales tax would lop off another $2, leaving him only $19.80 a week.

How about cutting a little more from the fat of huge incomes and high profits and a little less from the bone and sinew of low-income American workers?

Fed Up On Dies

Like "the man who came to dinner," Martin Dies and his un-American committee have overstayed their welcome.

The daily press greeted him with open arms when he began his witch-hunt against New Dealers, labor unions and anyone who ever had a liberal thought. And no matter how scurrilous, wild and unproven his smear campaigns have been, the business-controlled press continued to play him up and defend him, with very few exceptions.

But lately, the fact there is a war on seems finally to have percolated into even the most conservative editorial offices; and there has developed a noticeable press coolness toward the Dies committee.

The Analysis of Newspaper Opinion of the James S. Twohey Associates reveals that as much as 45 per cent of the daily press unsparingly condemned Dies for wasting public money in his attempt to smear liberal government employes. (FBI investigation of some 1,100 employes named by Dies showed only two to be "subversive" enough to be fired.) These papers said Dies should be silenced.

Another 23 per cent of the daily press stood by their former approval of the Dies committee, but condemned its present activities. And only 21 per cent of the press "defensively and somewhat weakly" apologized for the committee.

The Twohey Associates comment that "almost all recent activities of Dies have been of a type requiring that portion of the press which strives to support him to take an apologetic, defensive attitude in explaining his actions."

When even the millionaire press finds Dies too hard to defend, that's a sure sign he has overstayed his welcome with all thinking Americans who want national unity to win this war.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

BALLOTS as well as bullets are going to play an important part in this war.

There's a big housecleaning job to be done in Congress this year, if our democracy is to place itself on an all-out war footing.

There's more enthusiasm on the industrial front about producing the bullet that's going to kill Hitler, than there is on the political front about casting the ballot that will make sure this bullet is fired.

It's true that even in poll-tax Georgia, the voters gave the boot to Gene Talmadge, preacher of race hatred, labor-baiter and enemy of Roosevelt's war leadership.

It's true that Michigan voters wouldn't let an outright fascist like Gerald L. K. Smith get to first base.

It is also true that in recent primaries a number of other appeasers, defeatists, pro-fascists and labor-baiting divisionists bit the dust; while some real win-the-war candidates got on the ballot for the November elections.

But, on the other hand, a Hamilton Fish came through unscathed, although his office was one of the main sources of pro-Nazi propaganda, and although his own voting record on war issues was one of the worst in the country. The same is true of Clare Hoffman, the labor-hating isolationist who has also been closely identified with pro-Nazi elements.

And, on the whole, the primaries revealed a shocking degree of apathy, with only a small proportion of the voters bothering to go to the polls. As a result, many of the worst obstructionists in Congress needed to do no more than pay lip-service to the war effort to slip by.

There is no doubt that American voters would give an almost unanimous vote of confidence to the aggressive war leadership of Pres. Roosevelt, if called upon to do so.

Yet the same voters in many states are hoodwinked by Congressmen who constantly sabotage the President's leadership, bait labor and spread distrust and disunity most harmful to the war effort.

The results of this situation can be seen every day in Washington. Consider, for example, the persistent Congressional sabotage of the President's seven-point anti-inflation program; the rejection of the administration's tax proposals; and the constant efforts to grant special privilege to the rich, while placing the whole war burden on the already overburdened shoulders of low-income workers and farmers.

Congress is still overloaded with members whose bitter hatred of Roosevelt and the New Deal makes them emotionally and mentally incapable of wholehearted support of our war Commander-in-Chief.

There are still too many Congressmen who are playing politics as usual, carrying on a private war against labor, and obstructing and delaying the most vital war measures.

Many of these Congressmen will be on their best behavior just before elections. But it is up to labor to prevent their pulling the wool over the eyes of the voters. For if such elements are re-elected, they will be up to their old tricks again; and their return to office would be nothing short of a stab in the back to our armed forces and our whole victory effort.

There are only about six weeks remaining before the most important war elections this country has had. Labor can have the deciding vote in these elections, if it will use this period to mobilize all the voters it can reach for an all-out victory drive.

The primaries have shown that labor is not yet sufficiently organized on the political field. So every union leader and every active unionist should utilize the short time remaining to awaken the whole movement to the grave responsibility it bears to secure election of a real victory Congress.

Three practical tasks are of immediate importance: (1) to see that every union member and his family are registered to vote; (2) to see that the voters are fully informed on the records and attitudes of the candidates, and (3) to see that all labor voters go to the polls to vote on election day.

There is a tremendous educational job to be done between now and November to impress upon all voters the importance of the coming elections for our war effort. It involves a merciless exposure of appeasement and defeatist elements by contrasting their actual records with their election claims and pretensions.

Labor is the strongest force to undertake this task. It is also the most single-minded force behind our victory effort, and the first to feel the underhanded stabs of the obstructionists in Congress. It must not fail the nation by being remiss in its all-important election duties.

CIO Paces New Orleans Scrap Drive

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 19—This city's CIO movement really "got in the scrap" on Labor Day—1,500 tons of it, to be exact.

Five hundred union members, working together with the OCD and Boy Scouts, spent the "holiday" rounding up scrap metal for the nation's war program. At their disposal were 100 trucks lent by the city and by firms under CIO contract. Every truck made at least three trips.

UNION SERVES LUNCH

All day long the trucks roared through the streets, covering various sectors of the city and delivering full loads to the dumps.

At noon the drivers knocked off for lunch prepared and served by members of Local 91, CIO United Tobacco Workers.

The trucks were directed by Warren Horie of the Transport Workers Union, Pres. Harry Turgeau of the Warehousemen and CIO Regional Director Fred Pieper, all of whom pitched in on the scrap loading when they weren't administering the program from CIO offices.

Million Pounds Collected In Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 19—Here's what happened when the CIO and AFL and a number of civic groups got together on a scrap metal drive here last week:

1. One million pounds of scrap metal was collected;

2. The proceeds, amounting to more than $5,000, were turned over to the USO and Red Cross.

The scrap, now on its way to the nation's steel mill furnaces, was collected by hundreds of CIO and AFL workers who donated their time to man trucks also donated by many Cumberland construction, coal and general trucking firms.

Exactly 251 truckloads of scrap were collected in the city-wide, door - to - door campaign. Every conceivable kind of scrap metal, from the old Austrian gun on the Court House lawn to an electric refrigerator, was collected.

The collection ended a two-week publicity drive which resulted in scrap contributions from almost every home in the city and surrounding area.

Editorial

DO IT NOW!

Our country's war production is slowing down for lack of scrap. This means that our men will have fewer bullets, shells, guns, tanks and planes to throw against the Axis enemy. It means that more American boys will die, fewer Nazis and Japanese fascists. It means that offensive action will slow down and victory be delayed—or even lost—

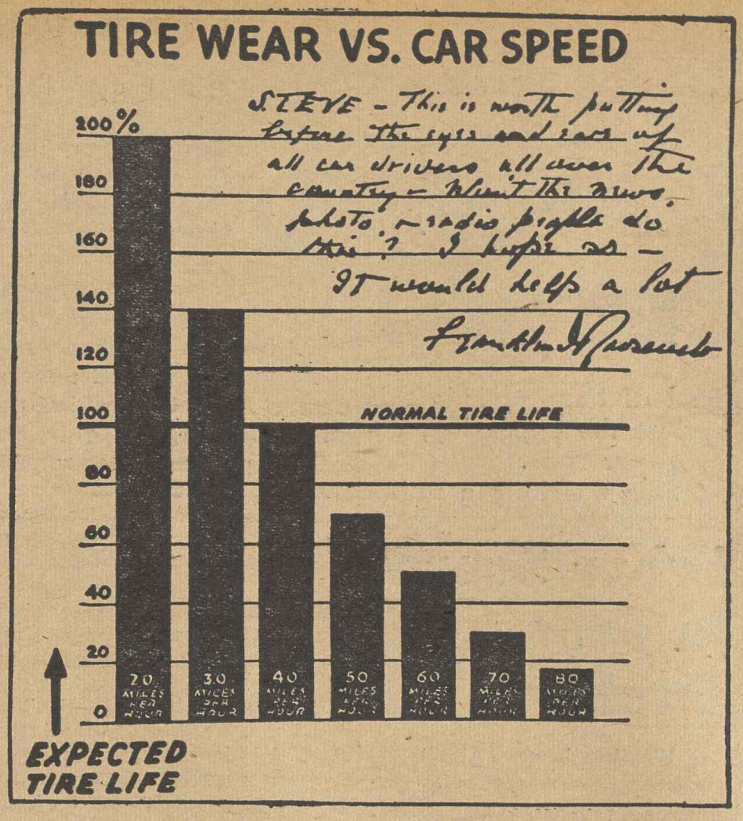
Unless every man and woman, and the kids, too, turn out in every house and every farm and get in the scrap. Every kind of metal object that has no further use to you means the difference between top production and a lack of fighting weapons.

Many CIO unions are taking a leading part in their communities in the scrap drive. The drive is a natural for the labor movement, not only because we know how to organize and how to get things done, but also because we will suffer worst in the event of an Axis victory.

Every worker should get busy in this number one campaign, should get his family busy, should get his neighbors busy. Every community has a Salvage Committee. Find out who is on this committee, get their help on any problem you may have in your area—and get in the scrap.

Victory depends on it—and God help us if we lose this war.

Whenever you address a letter to a soldier, write his Army serial number after his name if you know it.



SAVE YOUR TIRES:

FDR's memo to Steve Early of the White House staff points to the vital importance of driving safely and slowly to conserve the nation's precious rubber supply. Tires last twice as long at 20 miles an hour as they do at 40.

Murray Hails Unity Of U.S., Canada in War

OTTAWA, Canada, Sept. 19—Canadian and American troops fighting side by side in the offensive raid on Dieppe thrilled the whole world and showed again that the two countries are united in one desire to crush Axis fascism, CIO President Philip Murray told 400 delegates to the Canadian Congress of Labor meeting here this week.

In his speech, broadcast over station CBO of the Canadian Broadcasting Company, Murray declared: "This war has drawn us closer together than ever before. For the working people in our two countries, as indeed in all the freedom-loving countries of the world, know that this is labor's war. Every right, every privilege, every opportunity, every freedom that labor cherishes is at stake in this war."

CCL DEMANDS

Earlier, Murray called on the delegates to remember that "there must be no divisions, no contentions, no slandering or abuse of each other" if this war is to be won. The convention urged laws to outlaw company unionism and to make collective bargaining compulsory.

He called attention to the heroic anti-Hitler struggle of the Russian people and of the people of all the United Nations, saying: "We know how closely our fate is linked with that of the gallant Russian people, who are now bearing the brunt of Hitler's attack on the greatest battlefront in history.

"We know that the people of Great Britain are holding the fort for us and protecting our own continent from invasion. We know that the people of China, Australia and New Zealand are holding back the Japanese."

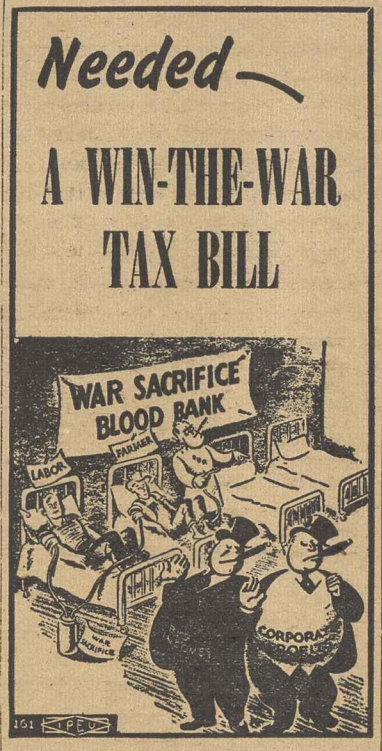
Pamphlet Has Lowdown On Tax Bill

Washington, Sept. 19—"Needed—a Win-the-War Tax Bill" is CIO's newest leaflet urging workers to get busy on Congress before the "handful of wilful men" that control the Senate Finance Committee wreck the first point in the victory program by passing a soak-the-poor, spare-the-rich tax bill.

The leaflet, shown below, tells in simple terms just what a sales tax—whether described as such or by any other names—would do to workers' health and to war production.

Thus, a five percent sales tax on a $1,500 a year income will leave the worker with $17.30 a week for all his needs, after you take the recent rise in living costs into consideration. A sales tax—or a "victory" tax—of eight per cent will leave $16.80 a week. And more than half of all American families have $1,500 a year or less to live on.

Order the new CIO tax leaflet from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Place, NW., Washington, D. C., price: 100 for 60 cents, 500 for $2.75, 1,000 for $4.75.



Seamen Get 'Own' USO

Washington, Sept. 19—Merchant seamen will have a USO of their own and rest homes to recuperate from torpedoing, following establishment of the United Seamens Service by maritime unions, government and shipowners this week.

The USS was incorporated by Joseph Curran, president of the Natl. Maritime Union, War Shipping Administrator Emory S. Land, Capt. Macauley of the WSA, Basil Harris, head of the U. S. Lines, and Harry Lundeberg, head of the Intl. Seafarers Union of the AFL.

The new service started off with opening of the estate of Major Kermit Roosevelt in Long Island and another rest home in Maryland. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt acted as sponsor at the opening of the Long Island home. The USS will also maintain club houses and recreation rooms for seamen in port throughout the country.

WPB Official Hails Metal Union's Aid To War Effort

DENVER, Colo., Sept. 19 — High praise for the union's war work and for its leaders was given to the CIO's Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in a speech at the union's convention by Wendell Lund, director of the labor production division of the War Production Board.

A similar note was struck in speeches of Allan S. Haywood, national director of organization of the CIO and Gen. Wm. H. Harrison of the War Dept. in Washington.

"The world waits on the copper miners," Haywood told the delegates. "Without you the forces of the United Nations are helpless. Labor is not thinking about 'equality of sacrifices'," Haywood added. "What labor is thinking of is equality of services." CIO Secretary James B. Carey was another scheduled speaker.

"Your organization was away out in front in anticipating and pointing out the serious consequences of a manpower shortage in your industry," Lund said, in praising Reid Robinson, MMSW president, and other leaders for their contributions to victory.

"Reid Robinson enjoys the confidence of leaders of government because they know that above all else he is completely devoted to winning the war. They know he is an effective and faithful servant of his union. They have never known him to let his boys down."

REPORT TO DELEGATES

A sixty per cent increase in membership during the past year and more than 80 Labor Board elections won were among the highlights in Robinson's report to the union.

ROBINSON

In addition, the convention opened with news of a War Labor Board panel recommendation for a 12.5 cents an hour raise and union security for 10,000 union members in copper, lead and zinc.

The report urged an all-out union drive for an immediate second front in Europe, and a strong resolution was expected as the delegates met. Robinson's report also urged steps toward international labor unity, to bring workers of all the United Nations together.

BACK FDR, MURRAY

The union's backing for President Roosevelt and for CIO President Philip Murray was also noted in the report, which called for a renewed drive to put the seven-point victory program into effect in Congress. The Murray backing came both in endorsing his stand behind the President and his stand on unity with the AFL, and in describing the disruptive work of John L. Lewis.

A highlight of the convention discussions centered on the recent Manpower Commission order stabilizing the employment situation in copper and other non-ferrous metals. This, together with the War Labor Board panel recommendations was seen as indicating a positive approach to one of the most serious war production bottlenecks—manpower shortages.

The convention was expected to run through the week. It was welcomed to Denver by Mayor Ben Stapleton.

Order Probe At Canadian Steel Plant

Toronto, Sept. 19—A steel strike affecting two-thirds of the industry in Canada was averted last week when Labor Minister H. Mitchell named a three-man commission to probe working conditions.

More than 8,000 steel workers employed at Saulte Ste. Marie, Ont., and Sydney, N. S., were ready to walk out unless some serious attempt was made to settle their problems.

The workers, members of the United Steelworkers of America, were asking an increase in the basic wage from 43-45 to 55c hourly.

National Director C. H. Millard and a committee went to Ottawa to confer with the Labor Minister after the latter talked by telephone with President Philip Murray. President A. R. Mosher, and Sec.-Treas. Pat Conroy of the Canadian Congress of Labour assisted in the settlement.

A representative of the Congress is expected to be named to the commission, whose hearings will speedily get under way. Following the settlement the Government began a propaganda campaign against the workers, publishing statements claiming that only a few hundred workers received less than 55c an hour.

The commission will determine whether steel is a national industry. Heretofore workers in one province have been treated separately from those in another.

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Aircraft Industry

• High strength with minimum weight. This is the basic principle underlying the construction of everything that flies—from birds to airplanes.

Stainless steel—with its exceptional strength-weight ratio—makes possible greater strength with lighter weight. In addition, stainless steel is highly resistant to corrosion—requires no protective coating. Therefore, no allowance need be made for weakening by corrosion, and thin-walled, lightweight structures can be built which will retain their full strength indefinitely. In addition, stainless steel can be rapidly fabricated at relatively low cost by spot-welding methods.

The increasing need for airplanes by the Army and Navy has emphasized the wider use of stainless steel in aircraft construction.

Chi Trib, N.Y. News Echo Goebbels Line, Rep. Holland Charges

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Rep. Elmer J. Holland of Pennsylvania this week continued his courageous Congressional battle against the appeasing, defeatist editorial policies of the McCormick-Patterson newspaper Axis.

The western Pennsylvania Congressman, whose father was long a union man in the big steel mills, renewed his accusation that the Chicago Tribune, the New York Daily News and the Washington Times-Herald reflect Axis propaganda attacks on American unity.

"They cannot deny it," Holland told the House. "All they can do is call me a 'liar' and rattle the bones of their ancestry. And they say that they are just aching to sue me.

"That is a fake."

The Congressman was referring to a statement by Capt. Joe Patterson of the New York News that he would sue Holland for libel if he would drop his Congressional immunity.

AFRAID OF JURY

"If Joe Patterson wants a law suit, he has one," Holland told the House, referring to a libel action brought by the Daily News publisher against the pro-New Deal Philadelphia Record. That suit revolved around a story written by John O'Donnell, head of the News Washington Bureau—a story that Pres. Roosevelt at the time described as a "deliberate lie."

Holland recalled that the Philadelphia paper described O'Donnell as "a great admirer of the Nazis, a hater of the British Empire, an advocate of the destruction of trade unions and quite pleased by the liquidation of the Jews by Hitler."

Patterson filed a $50,000 libel suit against the Philadelphia Record, but his lawyer, John D. M. Hamilton—former head of the Republican Natl. Committee—has been trying to stall action on the case.

SOUGHT DELAY

"Patterson and O'Donnell have twisted, squirmed and wiggled trying to delay the trial of that suit," Rep. Holland asserted. "They are afraid of their day in court. They have put up a bluff about wanting a trial—and they have run away from it."

The Pennsylvania Congressman said that the three McCormick-Patterson papers have abused the freedom of the press to "echo the propaganda of the Nazis and the Japs."

"And, when the seditious character of these newspapers has been pointed out in the halls of Congress, when I have told the people of this country how three powerful publishers—who hate Roosevelt more than they hate Hitler—are daily aiding the enemies of this country, when I have made clear the amazing parallel between their preachings and the venomous lies spread by Adolph Hitler, the publishers of these three newspapers have screamed 'freedom of the press' and cried out: 'Sanctuary, touch me not'."

Holland charged that Bertie McCormick—whose Chicago Tribune is one of the most reactionary, anti-labor sheets in the country—got his commission as a colonel through a political deal several years ago.

"I served in France (in the last war) while McCormick threw wild parties in Paris. I knew his reputation there," Holland added.

Trib 'Expert' Enlists in Army Of Axis Finns

Chicago, Sept. 19—Donald Day, for years the dean of the reactionary Chicago Tribune's foreign staff, has joined the military forces of the Axis.

Day, who has written more wild lies than any other man in the foreign correspondent corps, has joined the Finnish Army. Finland, an ally of Hitler's Germany, is at war with Britain and the Soviet Union, both of which are allied with the United States to defeat Hitlerism. Mannerheim, head of the Finnish army, was visited by Hitler on his recent birthday and given a special Nazi medal of honor.

Day joined the Tribune staff shortly after the last war, and wrote his reactionary pieces from Riga, Helsinki and Stockholm.

Labor Committee

Chicago—(FP)—A labor committee for Russian War Relief has been organized here with John Doherty and Fullerton Fulton of the CIO, John Fitzpatrick and Victor Olander of the AFL and Richard Abram and Thomas Canty of unaffiliated unions, as members.

campaigned for re-election as governor on a program of hate against labor and Negroes, was badly licked by State Atty.-Gen. Arnall.

Minnesota: Elmer Benson, former Farmer-Laborite governor who gave the state one of its best administrations, received the F.-L. vote for Senatorial nomination. He defeated Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, widow of a former Senator who was closely associated with America First and pro-Nazi groups in this country.

ELLIOTT DEFEATED

The victories were offset by some serious defeats. Worst of these was in Massachusetts, where Rep. Tom Elliott, a consistent supporter of Pres. Roosevelt and the union movement, and a serious critic of the Dies Committee, was defeated for renomination by James M. Curley, a veteran Bay State politician. Elliott's district had been altered by the Legislature so that his defeat came as no great surprise.

In Jersey, Rep. Fred Hartley (Rep.) managed to nose in with a lead of 87 votes over W. H. Williams. Hartley, a leading Congressional foe of labor, had been denounced by union groups and clean government associations. Williams announced he will seek a recount.

Rep. Clare Hoffman, a hoary and hysterical foe of labor and Pres. Roosevelt, won the nomination in his southwestern Michigan district despite revelations of his associations with America Firsters and friends of the Nazis.

In Wisconsin the contest between Gustave Keller, who had strong labor backing on his stand for a second front and support of labor's rights, and Dr. W. C. Sullivan for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, seemed still in doubt. With 200 districts still to report, Sullivan had a 229-vote lead. Julius Heil, reactionary corporation president, was renominated for a third term by the Republicans.

Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

A new high level of auxiliary organization was reached at the eighth annual UE convention in Cleveland last week. The General Executive Board of the union assumed responsibility for an auxiliary organizing drive whose goal is a membership of at least 50 per cent of the membership of the union.

A resolution stated that "women's auxiliaries are schools for unionism" because, with our country at war, women are taking their place in production and "many a housewife and mother is taking her place in our unions as a good trade unionist because of her past association with a women's auxiliary."

The resolution instructed the General Executive Board of the International Union to employ national auxiliary organizers and give all other necessary help to the auxiliary organizing drive so that "loyal auxiliary sisters would not have to brave the storm of organizing with little or no help."

ELECT EVA TAYLOR

At the conclusion of their four-day conference, the delegates witnessed with pride the rousing reception by the union convention of the report of their president-elect, Mrs. Eva Taylor of Schenectady, New York, and the installation by President Fitzgerald of their officers: Mrs. Eva Taylor, president; Mrs. Esther Harmon, secretary; Miss Katherine Beecher, educational director.

Mrs. Taylor, whose two sons are serving in the armed forces, one in Pearl Harbor and one in London, three times brought the convention to its feet in tribute to the war mothers and war wives of UE members who through the auxiliaries are doing everything in their power to build and preserve the union for which their men are fighting. Her heartfelt remarks and her report of auxiliary activities brought also a solemn pledge from President Fitzgerald to support and aid the auxiliaries in the forthcoming year.

At the auxiliary conference delegates from every part of the country reported extensive activities for soldier welfare, in war relief, war bond sales, legislation and the solution of consumer problems. Mrs. Faye Stephenson, president CWA-CIO, was the main speaker at the auxiliary conference, and Julia Katz, national director, assisted committees in planning next year's program. Mrs. Bertha Perrin, president of the Ohio State Council of Women's Auxiliaries, spoke at the luncheon which was arranged by the Cleveland Women's Auxiliary Council, of which Mrs. Ethel Drieford of Cleveland was mistress of ceremonies.

Resolutions for the immediate opening of a second front, endorsing the president's seven-point program, and endorsing the union's anti-discrimination program were passed unanimously.

NEW AUXILIARY

A new international CIO auxiliary, the National Council of Ladies' Auxiliaries of the Farm Equipment and Metal Workers' International Union, was formed this week in Peoria, Ill. Representatives from farm equipment auxiliaries met in a three-day session simultaneously with the first Constitutional convention of the union.

Resolutions urging immediate opening of a second front, condemning racial discrimination and pledging all-out aid to the new international union were adopted by the women.

Oregon CIO Endorses Progressives

Portland, Ore., Sept. 19—A number of labor candidates for the State Legislature were endorsed by delegates to a special convention of the Oregon CIO Council held here September 13.

CIO members whom the council voted to back are Ralph Peoples, secretary of the State Council; Jess Bell, Karl Steiner, Manley Wilson and Earl Hill. The delegates also endorsed AFL members Jack Bain, Phil Brady, Ted Wainwrgiht and Ray McInn, and Vernon Bull and J. D. Perry, members of the Railway Brotherhoods.

The convention voted to support legislative measures specifying exclusive uses of gasoline tax; favoring an increase in legislators' pay, and distribution of surplus to school districts. It opposed a cigarette sales tax and restriction of commercial fishing.

Few Women In Auto Plants

Detroit, Sept. 19—(FP)—Only 6 per cent of the workers employed in the converted auto plants are women and very few of the women are colored, reports the United Auto Workers research department in its Sept. 1 research report.

The department surveyed 200 plants under contract with the UAW-CIO. Of these, 110 employ women. Only five plants employ Negro women on production. The 6 per cent for all women employed compares with 5.3 per cent a year ago.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Three important CIO unions conventions were held during the last week. United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers completed their convention Sept. 11. Reports of the officers showed largest membership ever and considerable gain during the past fiscal year. Farm Equipment Workers met in Peoria, Ill., last week and adopted a constitution and elected officers. They are applying for a national charter from CIO. They reported "numerous election victories and considerable increase in membership." The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers met in convention in Denver this week. During the last fiscal year they have won elections, obtaining bargaining rights for some 50,000 workers employed in the copper and smelter industry.

These three unions are all engaged in vital war production. The delegates to a man recognized their responsibility and the tempo of all the conventions was for all-out production to win the war, support our Commander-in-Chief Franklin D. Roosevelt, and intensify organizing activities throughout the nation. I had the pleasure of addressing and attending these three conventions. Officers and members are to be congratulated on fine progress made and the wonderful degree of unity that prevailed throughout their deliberations.

This week the Canadian Congress of Labor, largely comprising CIO unions, convened in Ottawa. President Murray attended and addressed our Canadian members on this occasion. From all reports organizing activities in Canada are picking up considerably.

Win More Elections

Grant Oakes, chairman, FEWOC, reports the election victory at the Peoria Malleable with a vote of 285 for CIO as against 63.

CIO Regional Director George Craig and the CIO boys in that area did a good job in organizing the Fleetwing in Bristol, Pa., culminating in an election victory overwhelmingly in favor of the CIO, with a vote of 1,332 for UAW-CIO as against 173. This concludes a long, tedious job and all who participated are to be congratulated.

CIO Sub-Regional Director Edward McCrone of New Haven, Conn., reports the winning of the election at Chalman-Chuck Company in Hartford, Conn., with a vote of 472 for UERMWA as against 208 for no union.

Alex B. McGowan, Regional Director No. 9, UAW-CIO, reports the overwhelming victory at the election held among the employes of the Houde Engineering Corp. in Buffalo, New York, with a vote of 1,671 for CIO as against 271 for the AFL.

Edward McCrone, CIO Sub-Regional Director in Connecticut, advises that the International Union of Mine Mill and Smelter Workers won the NLRB election at the Waterbury Manufacturing Co., subsidiary of Chase Brass Co., with a vote of 1,139 for CIO as against 441 for no union.

Stone Workers Get Raise

International Secy.-Treas. John C. Lawson of the United Stone and Allied Products Workers of America, reports that their organization has signed a contract effective to August 18, 1943, with the National Tile Co., Anderson, Indiana, granting wage increases of 3c per hour to some 100 employes, including check-off, maintenance of membership, seniority clauses, etc.

The United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes have renewed the contracts with Boston and Fair Stores in Chicago, gaining an additional $80,000 in wage increases retroactive to April for the employes at the Boston store. At the Fair store the employes gained wage raises totalling $96,000. They also signed a contract with the Ward Baking Company in South Bend, Indiana, providing a two-weeks' vacation period, and including the highest hourly wage scale in the mid-west.

In St. Louis, Mo., among the employes at the Meyers Pants Co., they were successful in the NLRB election by a vote of 21 to 5. In New York at the Dreyers Furniture & Radio Co., a contract was signed providing for closed shop, vacation with pay and 10% wage increases. In Toledo, Ohio, this organization signed a contract with the Toledo Art Museum granting pay increases ranging from 10c to 24c per hour.

British Put Off Parley With AFL as Workers Protest Against 'Deal'

BLACKPOOL, England, Sept. 19—(ALN)—The first meeting of the Anglo-American trade union committee, scheduled to have been held in Washington September 23, has been postponed, Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, announced to the annual convention of the TUC here yesterday.

The British delegation to the Washington conference will not leave before December, after the conclusion of the annual AFL and CIO conventions and the November Congressional elections.

"An approach has been made to the TUC to postpone the first meeting of the Anglo-American committee," Citrine said in his report to the 700 convention delegates, who represent 232 unions with a total membership of nearly six millions.

"This approach came from the British government, I am sorry to say. It was reported to us that our visit to America might very well have political consequences and that if we went to the September 23 meeting we might easily start discussion of matters which for the moment had better be left alone."

Citrine emphasized that the TUC would continue its efforts "to establish international labor unity, because, despite everything, we have to bring the war to a successful conclusion."

Welcoming this declaration, a number of delegates from some of Britain's most important unions urged immediate action to bring about real unity between the trade union movements of Britain, the Soviet Union, the United States, Latin America, and other nations allied against the Axis.

The conference opened in an electric atmosphere caused by a dispatch published Monday in the London Times from its Washington correspondent, accusing Citrine of having insulted the CIO and railway brotherhoods by not including them in his U. S. negotiations. The Times Washington correspondent, Sir Wilmott Lewis, is considered here to reflect official British views in Washington.

QUOTE CIO NEWS

Quoting an editorial in the current CIO NEWS, which terms the TUC-AFL agreement "miserable and insulting" because of its neglect of the CIO and railroad brotherhoods, the Times notes:

"It is of the highest importance that British labor understand the bitterness of the feelings aroused. The AFL and CIO are equal in stature and status and it should have been unthinkable—though it apparently was not—to approach one and neglect the other.

"Thus the whole business is dislodged from its labor context and may soon become a divisive element in the larger field of Anglo-American relations."

In an apparent answer to this criticism, Citrine told the delegates: "Before the AFL executive, I raised the position of the relations of the TUC with the CIO, and asked for guidance, stating that our purpose was overwhelmingly friendly to the CIO, but that we did not desire to be drawn into any domestic quarrel.

"It was clear to me after the discussion that the AFL executive was entirely opposed to any direct contact with our Russian colleagues, and I was bluntly told on more than one occasion that if the TUC opened negotiations with the CIO, our relationship with the AFL would be imperiled.

TALKED WITH MURRAY

"I contacted Philip Murray unofficially and explained the situation as carefully and as fully as possible. At that time Mr. Murray's dismissal as vice president of the Mineworkers was being discussed, and I told him that I was unable to negotiate with him.

"I say frankly that I was greatly impressed with Murray's personality and felt confident in his integrity. It is entirely wrong to state that the CIO was unaware of what was being proposed to the AFL."

DISCUSS OFFENSIVE

After a spirited discussion, in which leaders of several of Britain's largest unions argued against the view that the second front issue "must be left to the generals," the following resolution was passed by acclamation:

"This congress, sharing the general desire to give maximum assistance to Soviet Russia and to hasten decisive military action which will bring about the defeat of the enemy, pledges the fullest support of the British trade union movement as soon as the competent authorities decide the time has come to launch effective offensive action in Europe."

TWO-TO-ONE VOTE

An amendment stating that "the urgency of the military situation in Egypt, the Soviet Union and the Far East necessitates the immediate organization of a second front in Europe as the only means whereby Britain may be saved from invasion and the Nazi war machine decisively defeated" was rejected by 3,584,000 votes to 1,526,000.

Will Lawther, president of the Miners Federation, stated that the British miners want a second front now. Lawther said: "I am under pledge to my brother Clifford, who was killed fighting with the International Brigade in Spain, to fight against fascism in every day in every way possible."

This Is Our Enemy—

Washington, Sept. 19 — This is what your enemy is like—

According to the Khabarovsk (Russia) radio, heard by U. S. Government monitoring stations here and released by the Office of War Information, a detachment of Soviet troops recently re-took an inhabited point. They liberated some collective farmers, who told them that the women had been lined up by the Nazi troops, six of the youngest reserved for officers, the rest turned over to the troops for rape. Several were killed.

The men were lined up and told they could go to work in Germany. None answered.

Then one of the men was asked individually. He said: "Better death than slavery."

He was shot. So were a number of the others.

Labor Forms U. S.-Mexico Joint Council

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 19—Plans for a joint labor-for-victory committee embracing all unions in this city and at Juarez, Mexico, just across the Rio Grande, were worked out at a conference here following the precedent-smashing international Labor Day celebration here.

Attending the meeting were Adolph Germer, CIO national representative, and A. R. Hardesty, CIO field representative of Texas, together with representatives of the AFL, railway brotherhoods and several Mexican labor organizations.

Labor spokesmen expressed hope that similar international committees would be established in various cities along the border to further the cause of hemisphere cooperation for victory.

The parley also went on record calling on the parent labor bodies to inaugurate plans for an all-American labor congress.

Proposed by Germer, the resolution asserted that such an international conference would have as its function coordination of "our support to our respective governments and to our Allies in successfully prosecuting the war against the Axis aggressors."

At Hai-phong, French Indo-China, when labor recruiting lagged, a Jap band enticed listeners, Jap troops then surrounded the crowd and allowed only those proving regular employment to leave. The rest were marched off under guard.

'Poor' War Millionaires To Get Budget Tips: How to Live on 25 G's

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—(FP)—To aid in relieving traffic congestion in the top income tax brackets, the National Farmers Union is offering prizes for the best 250-word article on "How to Live on $25,000 a year."

"The purpose of the contest," said the Farmers Union, "is to assist high-income individuals and families to adjust their expenditures, lives and thinking to a proposal repeatedly made by President Roosevelt as an essential part of his 7-point anti-inflation program, that for the duration of the war personal incomes be limited to $25,000 a year after payment of taxes."

The Farmers Union quoted Chairman Walter F. George of the Senate Finance Committee to the effect that his tax bill achieved the President's $25,000 limit for everyone "unless he's a millionaire."

The NFU explained that its $25 prize for 250 words is a dime a word—better than the rate paid by most fancy magazines. Entries should be addressed to the Editor, National Union Farmer, National Farmers Union, Denver, Colo.

SALARIES-AS-USUAL

Hundreds of millionaires were listed Sept. 17 as coming within the President's super-income class, in figures released by the Treasury Department.

Outstanding among all America's billion-dollar corporations were 48 executives in the General Motors-Du Pont axis who received more than $75,000 last year or in 1940 in salaries, bonuses, commissions and other handouts.

Lieut.-Gen. William S. Knudsen GM's gift to the government, got $219,000 for delaying conversion of the auto industry for a year while GM made unparalleled profits.

DU PONTS DO OK

Lammot du Pont, chairman of his firm, just indicted by the Department of Justice for conspiring with the Nazi Farben-industrie to monopolize plastic glass, got a beggarly $91,000 in salary. Fortunately Lammot, as an owner of his company, can eke out his wages by dividends from his stock.

Lever Bros.' soap workers, just denied a wage increase because it would lift them above the subsistence level prevailing in other Cambridge, Mass., plants, can reflect on their F. A. Countway receiving a bonus of $408,000 to add to his salary of $30,000.

STARS OF BETHLEHEM

Thomas J. Watson of International Business Machines Corp., who at one time thought it wonderful to do business with Hitler, topped the salary-bonus list of the Treasury Department with $546,000.

Eugene Grace, who fought a dollar a day raise for his Bethlehem Steel workers recently, got a bonus of $298,000 plus a salary of $180,000. Eleven Bethlehem executives were in the super-$75,000 category.

U. S. Steel was niggardly in comparison, with only three executives reported by the Treasury Department, in addition to several listed by subsidiaries.

Negotiate Pay Boosts

Hamilton, O., Sept. 19—Substantial wage increases were won at the General Machinery Co. here by Local 955 of the CIO United Automobile Workers, it was revealed by Paul E. Miley, regional director.

Covering some 3,500 workers, the and 18 cents an hour, in addition to a 3 per cent quarterly bonus.

Get Pay Raise

Riverton, Va., Sept. 19—Some 125 employes of the Riverton Lime & Stone Co. here have received four cent-an-hour increases as the result of recent wage confabs.

The new rates are in addition to a 3-cent increase granted in January. Other provisions of the company's contract with Branch 47, United Stone & Allied Products Workers, CIO, are extended to December 31, 1943.

DuPonts Indicted; Vital War Products Restricted by Deal

Washington, Sept. 19—The government indicted the duPont de Nemours corporation this week for an international monopoly deal with English and Nazi chemical trusts—while the nation's editorial writers firmly looked the other way towards diatribes about wage-freezing or labor's alleged lack of patriotism.

The indictment, returned by a federal grand jury in Newark, N. J., accused the one-time Liberty Leaguers of violating anti-trust laws by getting together with English and Nazi big business to fix prices, restrict production and divide markets. Working with duPont on the deal were I. G. Farbenindustrie of Germany and Imperial Chemical Industries of England.

DuPont and Rohm & Haas of Philadelphia, the other firm mentioned in the indictment, helped restrict output of acrylic products.

VITAL WAR PRODUCTS

Acrylic products are vital military materials badly needed in plastic glass transparent bomber noses, cockpit enclosures and windshields, synthetic rubber and surgical instruments.

In a second indictment the government charged that the companies sold methyl methacrylate at 85 cents a pound. The same material was sold to the dental trade for use in false teeth at $45 a pound.

The only difference to justify the $44.15 difference in price was that the commercial product contained a bad-tasting substance to make it unusable by dentists and to uphold the price structure.

The government will open trial on the indictments after the war.

Farmers Hail Wallace Drive Against Bias

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 19—Vice-President Wallace, by recognizing that sharp discrimination against Mexican workers exists in the southwest and must be wiped out, "has taken a logical step beyond his 'free world' speech," according to a statement of James G. Patton, president of the Natl. Farmers Union.

"Mr. Wallace's statement calls for action," Patton said. "The Fair Employment Practices Committee set a public hearing on racial discrimination in El Paso for July 24. This hearing was postponed. The only explanation I have been able to get for indefinite postponement of such a hearing is a report that the Mexican government requested the State Department to intervene to bring about its abandonment.

"This does not jibe with the impression of the Mexican government's attitude I received when I was recently in Mexico City. . . . Once this point is established, full public hearing should be held at the earliest possible date. The situation requires a down payment on some of the four freedoms."

Push Campaign To Get Negroes Into Big Leagues

New York, Sept. 19—The drive to break down discrimination barriers against Negro ball players in the big leagues is going forward without let-up, it was reported today by Jack Roth of the War Sports Committee of the city CIO Council.

A citizens committee, comprising union leaders, prominent sports writers and city officials, and several CIO locals in the city have contributed funds to the campaign. The committee has arranged appointments with a number of major league managers, the first with Larry McPhail of the hard-pressed Brooklyn Dodgers.

"Baseball cannot be called America's national sport until the barriers of Jim Crowism have been erased," Roth declared.

Meanwhile Joe Dermer and Harry Jaffee of the CIO group interviewed Josh Gibson of the Homestead Grays and Willie Wells of the Newark Eagles, both outstanding Negro players who are due for try-outs with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Gibson and Wells expressed their deepest appreciation for the New York CIO's support of their fight to lift the ban on Negro players.

CIO, AFL Cooperate In Hartford to Elect Labor Candidates

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 19—Unity between CIO and AFL for the purpose of electing win-the-war candidates on election day has been effected in this key war-production city where some 40,000 workers are in trade unions.

Recognizing that labor must be represented if labor's support is to be obtained, the Democratic party recently nominated William Scott, president of the Hartford Central Labor Council, AFL, as State Senator on the Democratic ticket. Harold Conroy, treasurer of the Colt CIO Industrial Union, largest union in Connecticut, was nominated as a Democratic candidate for General Assemblyman.

ENDORSEMENTS

Immediately following this, the Greater Hartford Industrial Union Council, CIO, went on record endorsing both the CIO and AFL candidate. The CIO also set up a committee of five to meet with the AFL and other similarly-minded groups to assist in a united election campaign.

AFL ACTION

Two days later, at a meeting of the Hartford Central Labor Union, the AFL endorsed the two candidates and authorized the setting up of a similar committee to work with the CIO.

The CIO letter which was endorsed by the AFL central body, stated in part: "Our Council placed great importance on the need for working in cooperation with all other groups and organizations seeking to elect pro-labor, win-the-war candidates this Fall. For that reason we have named a committee of five to meet with any and all groups and organizations, such as your own, whose aims in the approaching Congressional and State elections are similar to our own."

The CIO Council has already set up a united elections committee composed of the legislative committees of CIO unions throughout the city, to plan for victory at the polls on Nov. 3. Connecticut voters elect six Congressmen and a State administration this year.

Women May Enlist In Naval Reserve

Washington, Sept. 19—Application blanks for enlisted personnel for the Women's Naval Reserve will be sent September 11 to applicants requesting them by mail.

Women wishing to enlist should write to the Naval Officer Procurement Office at the nearest District Naval Headquarters and state their age, education, marital status, and if married, occupation of the husband and ages of children.

Stone Workers Get Increase

Anderson, Ind., Sept. 19—Wage increases of three cents an hour were won for a hundred employes of the National Tile Co. in negotiations led by the CIO United Stone & Allied Products Workers of America.

"Call-out" time, seniority, maintenance of membership and a voluntary check-off of union dues were also gained in the contract. US-APWA President H. C. Ledyard assisted a local committee in the negotiations.

Many war plants in Hartford, Conn., had their first holiday this year on Labor Day.

OPEN LOCAL OFFICE: One of the finest local union offices in the country is that of Local 65, CIO Wholesale & Warehouse Workers, in New York. The local bought an 11-floor building, will occupy three floors for its own use. At dedication ceremonies, huge service flag will be raised to honor 2,500 members now in the armed services.

Murray Urges All Unions To Demand Congressmen Act Against Inflation

WASHINGTON, September 26 — Bitterly assailing reactionary forces who are sabotaging Pres. Roosevelt's 7-point economic program, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week called upon American labor "to assume the role of leadership in achieving" a workable anti-inflation plan for the nation.

"The economic program of Pres. Roosevelt is at the heart of the war effort," Murray wrote to all affiliated unions.

"It is now being sabotaged. It is the task of every single member of the CIO to smash any such attempt.

"Victory can and must be won with the successful enforcement of Pres. Roosevelt's entire program."

The CIO leader called upon the Office of Price Administration to abandon its policy of "puttering" with various commodities and institute a thorough-going rationing program and a real campaign to keep prices down.

He also called for passage of the Brown-Wagner stabilization bill, which would authorize the President to act against inflation, without any crippling amendments, and urged Congress to pass a Victory Tax Bill.

First Phone Group Joins CIO Union In California

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 26—The first labor group in the Bell Telephone System became part of the CIO movement here this week, when the Order of Repeatermen and Toll Testboardmen counted up their ballots in a vote for CIO affiliation with the American Communications Assn. and registered a decisive vote of 247 to 115 for the ACA.

Balloting all through the month, the ORTT men sealed their confidence in the CIO Union's bargaining strength and democratic structure in a vote which hewed a path for CIO affiliation for other independent unions in the communications field.

HELD CONFERENCES

Preceding the vote was a series of exploratory meetings held by a special affiliation committee of the ORTT which conferred with CIO representatives, the Intl. Brotherhood of Electrical Workers-AFL and the National Federation of Telephone Workers.

CIO policies and program were explained by ACA International Representative Bruce Risley and Paul Schnur of ACA Local 30, currently acting secretary of the San Francisco CIO Council.

Out of these conferences came a recommendation from the affiliation committee in behalf of the CIO. Spokesman for the ORTT, President George E. King of Sacramento, said that the decision for CIO affiliation followed a study of the comparative merits of ACA and IBEW.

"While both organizations offered about the same in representation, assistance and dues, ACA was chosen because of its more democratic set-up," King said.

A decisive factor in the vote, it was pointed out, was the knowledge that the CIO in five years of existence has secured well over six billion dollars in wage increases for its members.

Telegraph Wires Still Clogged

New York, Sept. 26—(FP)—Although Postal Telegraph and Western Union eliminated singing telegrams and fixed text messages Sept. 18, there will be no real speed-up in war communications until all non-essential services are dropped, President Joseph Selley of the CIO American Communications Assn., said this week.

Non-essential services still crowding vital messages, Selley said, include social greetings, racing information, pep messages and ticket reservations.

PLEASED: Coxswain Claude Becker, U.S.N., who won the Navy Cross for heroic action off Java, holds a plaque which he received on behalf of the Navy from the New York City CIO at its Labor Day celebration. A crowd of 75,000 cheered the CIO presentation to the fleet.

Bond Records Crash In Firestone Drive

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 26—Over the top twice in three weeks, Local 100 of the United Rubber Workers at the Firestone plant here has hung up a statewide record for sale of War Bonds.

Working as part of a national drive conducted by the URWA and employers, the joint labor-management production committee sunk its teeth into the problem of making the local Firestone factory 100% behind Uncle Sam's bond drive. They succeeded well enough to please Mr. Whiskers in his grouchiest moments.

Here's the record:

1. Within two weeks, every one of the 2,760 employes was buying war bonds on the payroll subscription plan.

2. Within another week a second campaign to bring the bond "checkoff" up to 10% of the gross payroll figure, had ended successfully.

Marc Neilson, secretary of Local 100 and labor member of the joint council's bond drive committee, asserted Treasury officials say "there is no other business concern of any nature in southern California of this size or larger, which has achieved 100% participation and 10% gross payroll subscription on a voluntary basis."

Locals seeking information on the successful strategy used in the Firestone campaign here can get the dope from M. R. Neilson, URWA Local 100, 1852 East Firestone Blvd., Los Angeles.

10,000 See CIO Plant Get 'E' Flag

Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 26—Ten thousand persons were on hand here when the coveted Army-Navy E award was presented to Local 755 of the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers and the Delco Products Co.

The "E" flag was turned over to a color guard, composed of members of the Delco World War Veterans' Club, who raised the pennant on a staff just below the American flag.

Lt. Col. William R. Martin of the War Department made the official presentation. It was accepted by E. J. Kraft, local president, and Frank H. Ireland, company general manager.

Kraft pledged cooperation in the war effort on the part of workers, and warned that "defeat means the destruction of everything we cherish."

Chicago, Sept. 26—Members of CIO Page Production Workers Local 1175 have passed a resolution urging all CIO union members to pledge 10% of their pay for War Bonds.

Wisconsin CIO Delegates To Give Blood

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 26—Winning the war will be the main theme when the Wisconsin Industrial Union Council opens its fifth convention at the Hotel Pfister here Sept. 28.

A feature of the convention will be a mass blood-donation to the Red Cross on the third day of the convention. Red Cross officials will register prospective donors at the opening session, and the donations will be made a day or two later during the lunch hour.

A number of prominent union and government officials have been invited to address the delegates.

They include Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers; John Brophy, director of industrial union councils; Len De Caux, editor of The CIO NEWS; Anthony Carpenter, director of the CIO war relief committee in Wisconsin, and Wendell Lund, chief of the Labor Production Division of the WPB.

'Produce for War', Shipyard Parley Urges Workers

BY HOLLACE RANSDELL

NEW YORK, Sept. 26—Faced with the greatest responsibilities in its nine-year history, delegates to the first war-time convention of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers met here this week to hear reports on the achievements of the union under its all-out war production program and to plan further progress.

President John Green in his keynote address to some 300 delegates representing 200,000 CIO shipyard workers said he was proud to report that America's shipyard workers had responded nobly to the war effort, and that on December 7, "production ceased to be a matter of only bread and butter."

FOR DEMOCRACY

"We are not producing for our employers, we are not producing more just for wages; we are not even, as some have said, working for the Government," he declared.

"We are producing for civilization, for democracy, for the freedom and dignity of man and most important, for the very survival of each and every one of us, our families and hour homes."

Declaring that unionism as usual is out, Green said that the policy of the union was that "any delay or stoppage in production can be considered as an aid to our enemies." This does not mean, he added, that the union must be sacrificed to production, for "without a strong and powerful union and mutual respect and cooperation between employer and employe, we can never achieve our goal of bending every effort to further the war program."

Pointing to the continually increasing rate at which ships were sliding down the ways, Green said that labor-management committees had been a major factor in increasing production. But ships must be built still faster, he declared, and suggested that a committee of shipyard workers be sent to Great Britain to study methods of production there.

ALL WELCOMED

Speaking of the manpower needs of the industry, Green asked for further employment of new workers, and said that the union was prepared to "sign up the women, the middle-aged, the Negroes" and that they would find wages and conditions ready-made for them by the union.

In an address to the convention following Pres. Green's speech, Mayor LaGuardia told the delegates that the shipbuilding workers are playing the most important part in the war program. "We can make the guns," he said. "We can make tanks and we can make all the materials of war, but unless you make ships to take them where we need them, they won't do much good."

BARD IN FRANK TALK

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard in a forceful talk delivered toward the end of the convention warned that "we can lose the war . . . we may as well admit it.

"Every time one of us says we can lose the war, we think of this as pure rhetoric, part of the old pep talk. The assumption is, of course we can't lose the war, but scare 'em a little and then in the windup of the talk give 'em the build up about our great American heritage of freedom and whatnot.

"How about, for a change, just saying that we are losing the war, period. And realizing that we damn well mean it, period.

"Such realism, no doubt, would be a heart-racking plunge into cold water, but it would probably give us an idea of what we are up against. . . . It might free us of the calmness with which we read of the ordeals of the Russian army."

ASK INTL. PARLEY

The convention passed a resolution calling upon the national CIO "to invite representatives of free labor organizations of all the world to discuss the conduct of the war and the terms of the peace" and instructed the officers of the shipbuilding union to "promote the calling of such an international labor conference until such time as they have met with success."

CIO Rubber Union Puts Full Strength Behind War Effort

AKRON, O., Sept. 26—America's rubber workers threw the full weight of a united union, at peak strength, behind the nation's victory effort at the seventh annual convention of the United Rubber Workers, just concluded here.

President S. H. Dalrymple and Vice-Pres. L. S. Buckmaster seemed assured of re-election as this paper went to press. Sec.-Treas. Frank Grillo, who enlisted in the Army, is not seeking re-election.

A comprehensive war program was adopted by the delegates pledging full support to CIO President Philip Murray to carry out his call for all-out production for victory; and urging intensified organizing activities to complete the unionization of the rubber industry.

"All-out production can only be achieved through voluntary cooperation between management and labor as equal partners," the statement declared. "Such partnership cannot be brought about when there is no bona fide organization to represent labor . . . Organization of the soldiers of production today is a patriotic duty."

WANT JOINT COUNCILS

The convention called for joint labor-management committees in every shop; for equal pay for equal work when women are put on men's jobs; and for modification of the six-hour day where it is definitely shown a manpower shortage exists.

The resolution adopted on this subject, after considerable discussion, reaffirmed the union's belief in the principle of the six-hour day and pointed out that "the joint union, management, Army, Navy and Manpower Commission representatives have all agreed that the basic six-hour day written into collective agreements shall remain as a normal working day."

It stated, however, that "in view of the expected manpower shortage, the URWA agrees to waive the six-hour day where it is proven a manpower shortage exists; and the URWA further pledges to our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt and to our armed forces that our members will work any number of hours to win the battle of production."

RUBBER AS UTILITY

In regard to synthetic rubber, the convention urged that the government treat it as a public utility and that the Rubber Workers Union be given "full and responsible voice" in the rubber organization set up under the direction of William Jeffers.

A resolution on the subject urged protection against health hazards involved and pledged support to Jeffers in formulating plans for production of synthetic and natural rubber, and conservation of rubber resources.

The Rubber Workers reaffirmed their "faith and confidence in the capable leadership of Philip Murray" in a laudatory resolution, after discussion marked by unanimous expressions of opposiion to the disruptive activities of John L. Lewis.

International labor unity embracing "all peoples actively fighting the Axis powers," without regard to differences of political philosophy," was urged by the convention.

It endorsed the CIO stand for "forging links between the labor movement of this country and the unions of Latin America, Great Britain and the Soviet Union."

The Rubber Workers pledged to "give their all for the success of the western front to defeat Hitler," in a resolution which expressed "full confidence that our government and that of Russia and Great Britain will fulfill the Roosevelt, Molotov and Churchill agreement and open the vital western front.

FACE BARBARIANS

Haywood was one of the main convention speakers, representing the national CIO. "Labor has everything at stake in this war," he declared. "They don't have labor unions like yours in Germany and Italy and they don't have conventions like this.

"This is not just a war. It is a revolution attempting to create a system that belongs to the jungle. Either democracy or Fascism will go under."

Washington, Sept. 26—Close to 6,000 Negro workers have got jobs in five U. S. shipyards in little more than a year, the Office of War Information said today in a release to Negro newspapers.

The release also pointed to the need for "more rigid price control" to protect earnings of these and all other workers from inflationary price rises. Pointing out that uncontrolled food items have gone up almost 10 per cent, while controlled prices have decreased slightly, the OWI said: "For every dollar we spent on food in the summer of 1939 we now pay $1.35." Prices in the last war, when they were completely uncontrolled, went up 63 per cent, 100 per cent by 1920.

Oil Union Gets Report On Year's Big Gains

FORT WORTH, Tex., Sept. 26—Gains made during the nine months' organizing drive were reported to the convention of the Oil Workers' International Union by Edwin S. Smith, director of the Organizing Campaign, as the parley wound up its sessions here last week.

Delegates also heard James Carey, national CIO secretary, who spoke as a personal representative of CIO Pres. Philip Murray, deliver a forceful speech calling for intensified organization during the war, and by Pres. O. A. Knight and Sec.-Treas. E. C. Conarty of the OWIU.

"We are fighting this war for an opportunity to better our social conditions," Carey said. "We are organizing our unions for that purpose, but we'd better organize them faster than we have been, or possibly there will be no democracy."

DEMOCRACY'S CAUSE

In his report Director Smith declared that the need for organizing Standard Oil became more apparent as the campaign progressed. "Because, with the exception of oil, the basic industries contributing to the war effort were organized," he said, "labor in those industries could make its voice effectively heard in improving efficiency and expanding production.

"By contrast, Standard Oil's feudal and undemocratic labor policy stuck out like a sore and ugly thumb. Its ugliness was even more apparent when by means of the Senate investigation, the disgraceful, anti-American relationship of Standard Oil of New Jersey with Nazi Germany was laid bare to the shocked public.

"The CIO believes in democracy. It will fight for democracy in the future as it has in the past, with all the means at its command. So will America's oil workers.

"We want labor-management committees in Standard Oil. We want representatives nationally to sit with government and management on the policy-making bodies for the oil industry during this war period. We are fighting for this representation right now."

With one lone delegate dissenting, the convention passed a strong resolution calling for the immediate opening of a Second Front in western Europe.

According to the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, $1480 was the income of the typical family unit in 1941. In the first quarter of 1942 it was up 4%, to $1540.

Smeltermen Hear Warning On War Crisis

Denver, Sept. 26—A resolution protesting Attorney-General Biddle's deportation order against Harry Bridges featured sessions of the convention of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, just concluded here.

The delegates also heard a speech from Bridges, who spoke on the extreme danger to our country in the way the war is going today, and who urged an immediate second front and freedom for India as necessary steps in beating the Axis.

"The turning point in the war can come through the opening of a second front," he said. "We had better get started on it before Stalingrad falls, since that can easily mean the loss of initiative and offensive striking power of the Russian armies and could be the signal for a Japanese attack, not only along the Siberian border, but reaching out to the western shores of America."

Turning to the wartime program of organized labor, Bridges said: "We have learned that the job can be done. We have learned that we can build organizationally in wartime and still preserve the fundamental gains and benefits of our workers at the same time. We have learned that we can improve and strengthen our union and still drive for all-out production."

HAYWOOD SPEAKS

Allan S. Haywood, another featured speaker, joined with high government officials in praising the union and its leadership for their major contributions to a United Nations victory.

"The world waits on the copper miner," he said. "Without you armies are helpless. The forces of freedom need copper so we can make guns and planes and everything that goes to build up a modern army.

"Labor in America, like labor elsewhere, knew the issues in this struggle long ago. We have recognized that in the schools of fascism there is no room for freedom of thought and expression, and certainly no room for trade unions and conventions of trade unions."

Ask Probe Of Violence In S. Carolina

Anderson, S. C., Sept. 26—Federal investigation of mob violence against CIO textile workers at nearby La France was called for this week as union leaders charged a conspiracy among the company, public officials "and probably the Ku Klux Klan" to deny the workers their lawful rights.

The request for a federal probe came from Frank McAllister of the Southern Workers Defense League following a conference with Oscar Doyle, U. S. district attorney.

The Pendleton Manufacturing Co. has fired seven leaders of a recent spontaneous walkout, organized forcible expulsion of other workers from the mill community and tolerated attacks on union members at the mill gates.

LOW PAY SCALE

Trouble flared several weeks ago when the workers pulled a spontaneous walkout against $15 a week wages, while organized employes at the company's Philadelphia plant receive about $40 a week. Aided by Witherspoon Dodge, representative of the Textile Workers, the strikers won a promise of pay increases and no firings.

When the mill went back on its promise by discharging eight local leaders, the TWUA's Philadelphia local sent its president, R. Van Ripper, to investigate. He was greeted by a mob of company thugs who beat him and tried to throw him in the mill pond. A 65-year old worker with a son in the armed forces had his shoulder wrenched seriously when he was dragged out of the plant in a company-inspired expulsion.

One of the active workers, Earl Taylor, was beaten twice during one day. When he asked for protection from the sheriff's office, he was told that if he "left those damn union people alone, he wouldn't get into any trouble."

Murray Calls on Labor:

'Smash Tories' Plotting Against FDR's Program'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—It is up to labor—and the CIO specifically—to smash the sabotage of the seven point victory program now going on in Congress, President Murray said this week in a blunt letter to all CIO affiliates demanding that they go into action at once.

"It is not enough merely to wish that the war be won," Murray wrote. "You must actually do something about it so that the job can be done. Labor must assume the role of leadership in achieving this objective.

"The economic program of President Roosevelt is at the heart of the war effort. It is now being sabotaged. It is the task of every single member of the CIO to smash any such attempt. Victory can and must be won with the successful enforcement of President Roosevelt's entire economic program."

Murray's warning was sharply underscored when the so-called "farm bloc" this week over-rode one of the central points in the program in a 205 to 172 vote unplug farm prices over the parity level.

The vote came as an amendment to the stabilization bill and would allow "labor costs" of farmers to be figured in arriving at parity, thus raising parity to 112 percent. This will result in sharp increases in food costs, amounting in some instances to as much as 30 percent.

REACTIONARY MOVE

This inflationary maneuver, described in the newspapers as a "farm-bloc revolt," was engineered by a combination of polltax Democrats and their Republican brothers in reaction. It was carried through despite warnings from Administration leaders that the President would veto the bill, thus opening the whole question again.

In his letter to CIO affiliates, Murray stressed the price stabilization point as one of the most important of the seven, declaring: "This bill (the stabilization bill, SJ Res 161 in the Senate) must be passed without the threatened amendments from the farm bloc leaders in Congress who are not really thinking of the interests of the farmers or of the people, but rather are prompted by selfish motives.

"Parity for farm prices is the standard demanded by President Roosevelt. It is a fair standard for the farmers. It is the standard that must be embraced in the legislation demanded by the President."

SCORES OPA

Murray's letter, a call to action on the whole victory economy program, emphasized failure of the Office of Price Administration, headed by Leon Henderson, to put effective controls on runaway living costs and its evasion of the rationing issue.

The three factors mainly responsible for spiraling costs are the loopholes on farm prices (now blown wide open by the House action), the fact that OPA "has been willing to listen to the wailings of businessmen and has permitted prices to rise," and the fact that OPA "has not really tackled the problem of rationing," which must be done on an overall, democratic basis. The OPA, Murray wrote, "must forget its present approach of puttering around with individual commodities."

TAX SABOTAGE

The Murray letter was equally sharp on the sabotage of the 1942 tax bill by both Houses of Congress.

"If the tax bill is enacted as at present formulated it will be one of the gravest blows against the war effort," he said. Blame for this situation lies on both Congress and Administration leaders, who have both practiced "taxes as usual."

"The present tax legislation," Murray wrote, "will carve out one of the most drastic wage cuts ever imposed on low income groups in this nation. Workers receiving $12 a week will be faced with an income tax. The low income groups, which means your members, will find their taxes doubled and tripled.

"Over and above all these heavy taxes, the Senate Finance Committee has approved a five percent so-called 'Victory Tax' on all gross incomes over $624. This tax is as repressive as a sales tax which Congress has not yet dared to approve. The tax bill takes away

Bridges Case Moves Into U. S. Courts

New York, Sept. 26—Oral argument on the Bridges deportation case began this week before the U. S. District Court of Appeals in San Francisco, with Carol King as chief counsel for the defense.

"I regard the prosecution of Bridges not only as a violation of the constitution but as a blow at the national war morale," Mrs. King said in a report to the Bridges Victory Committee here.

"My argument will be limited to the legal questions before the court, but the reason I am fighting this case is because I believe that winning it will be a substantial contribution to our victory over the Axis powers."

A similar belief is shared by high U. S. war officials, if not by Attorney-General Biddle, who ordered the deportation after his own appeals board had set aside the original verdict and after Dean Landis had found the evidence in the first trial against Bridges to be utterly unworthy of belief.

CITE U. S. OFFICIALS

According to the Bridges Victory Committee, the Office of War Information, Vice-Admiral J. W. Greenslade, commandant of the San Francisco Naval District, and Paul Eliel, chairman of the Pacific Coast Maritime Industry Board, have all praised Bridges and the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen for major contributions to victory.

Arms for the victories in the Coral Sea and at Midway were loaded at top speed and efficiency by the ILWU on the west coast, the OWI said. Ships on an emergency turnaround in San Francisco were loaded with arms "much more rapidly than even the most hopeful predictions indicated would be possible," Eliel said.

Govt. Official Asks Equal Pay for Women Workers

San Francisco, Sept. 19—Four million women will be at work in war jobs by the end of the year, Mary Anderson, head of the Women's Bureau of the U. S. Labor Dept. said at a conference sponsored by Labor's Unity for Victory Committee here this week.

Already 3½ million women are in labor unions, she said, pointing out that women were taking an increasing role as union organizers and officials. She called for an all-out "work-to-win blueprint for women in war production," including equal pay for equal work, no discrimination in employment, adequate rest and lunch periods, and complete training.

Steel Union Officials Hurt In B&O Crash

Frederick, Md., Sept. 26—Philip M. Curran, nephew of CIO Pres. Murray and a member of the staff of the United Steelworkers of America, is in serious condition at Frederick Hospital from body injuries sustained in the wreck of three Baltimore & Ohio trains near here.

Vin Sweeney, publicity director of the USA-CIO, also a passenger on the Pittsburgh-Washington night express, escaped with comparatively light rib injuries.

What Is Parity?

The newspapers and the Congressmen are full of parity these days—the Congressmen full of parity-plus. What is it? According to our farm advisers, parity is:

A price for farm products that will enable the farmer to buy the same amount of things he has to buy as he was able to buy with the prices he got in the period 1904-1914.

Two Bills Entered on Labor Draft

Washington, Sept. 26—Two bills and a welter of statements were tossed into the general manpower situation this week. One bill, offered by Senator Lister Hill of Ala., authorizes the President to mobilize all labor and industry at any time he sees fit. The other, sponsored by Sen. Pepper of Fla., simply calls for a five-man Senate Committee to investigate the problem.

Earlier, the situation was aired in statements by Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, by Secretary of Labor Perkins, and other government officials. All indications point to an early move to pass a national service act that will mobilize every worker in the country for war production.

Meanwhile labor representatives on the Manpower Commission were reported preparing a plan to tighten up existing manpower mobilization facilities before resorting to a service act. These plans include stopping up present leaks in employment, full use of present facilities and powers under the order setting up the commission, and further use of the executive powers of the President.

On Red Cross Board

Bridgeport, Conn., Sept. 26—The local Board of Directors of the American Red Cross here now has labor men as members for the first time—Joseph E. Julianelle, business representative of Local 203 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers (CIO), and Peter Benard, president of the AFL's Central Labor council.

California Parley

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 26—The California Industrial Union Council opens its first wartime convention in this film capital of the world on Oct. 9. The three-day session will be proceded by a meeting of the state CIO executive board.

Gov. Culbert Olson and Allan S. Haywood, director of organization, have been invited to attend the parley.

A Warning Signal

Only one-third of the voters registered and eligible to vote actually cast their ballots in this year's primaries, according to an unofficial tabulation by the Associated Press of primary voting in 35 States.

Fewer than 15 million voted out of a total of more than 42 million who might have voted.

It is true that millions of voters were away from home, either in the armed forces or working in distant defense plants. But even so, this does not explain the apathy of the many millions more who had no excuse for not voting.

These primary figures are a warning signal for the whole labor movement. If similar apathy and failure to vote continues into the November elections, it will be nothing short of a stab in the back to our democracy and a victory for Hitler.

For there are all too many running for office this fall who at best are lukewarm in their support of our Commander-in-Chief and our war effort, and who at worst are outright appeasers, labor-baiting divisionists and defeatists.

It will take an aroused and enlightened electorate to secure the defeat of such elements and the election of real win-the-war candidates.

It is labor's urgent duty to see that every eligible labor and progressive voter not only registers but actually goes to the polls to vote for those candidates who truly stand for all-out effort for victory.

Economic Sabotage

"The economic program of President Roosevelt is at the heart of the war effort. It is now being sabotaged. It is the task of every single member of the CIO to smash any such attempt."

This is the call to action issued this week by CIO President Murray to every affiliated union.

It is some five months since President Roosevelt presented to Congress his seven-point economic program. Since then the wage stabilization point has been applied by the War Labor Board. But little or nothing has been done about the rest of the program.

Control of the cost of living and democratic rationing have not been accomplished, Murray points out. The OPA has just been "puttering around" with a few individual commodities, he says, when what is urgently needed is "an overall rationing immediately of all foods and other necessities."

Cost of living has steadily risen due to loopholes in the Price Control Act and due to the yielding of OPA to business interests at the expense of the consumers. As to farm price stabilization, this is being held up by so-called "farm bloc" leaders, who represent wealthy business interests rather than the working farmers.

But perhaps the most glaring sabotage of all has been committed against the tax program asked by the administration. The tax bill passed by the House and the proposals of the Senate Finance Committee are "a complete denial of the principles set forth by President Roosevelt," Murray declares, and cut the heart out of his seven-point program.

The present tax legislation is one of the worst wage-cutting measures ever proposed. It doubles and triples the taxes on low-income groups, threatening to deprive them of the bare necessities of life. And now the Senate committee has approved a so-called "victory tax" of 5 per cent on all gross incomes over $624, which, like the sales tax, would hit hardest those least able to pay.

On the other hand, the present tax legislation deprives the war effort of some 3½ billion dollars of revenue by refusing to require joint income tax returns from wealthy couples; to tax tax-exempt securities; to increase adequately taxes on those with more than $5,000 a year and enforce a $25,000 limit on personal incomes; to increase normal and surtaxes on corporate incomes to any real extent; and to increase gift and estate taxes.

It is up to labor to take the lead to right a situation which threatens our whole war effort. The unions can do this through conferences and mass meetings and every other means of arousing the people, and by every unionist urging upon his representatives in Congress the effective enforcement of President Roosevelt's ENTIRE economic program.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

NEWSPAPER chain editorials are full of arguments for soaking the poor to relieve the tax burden of the rich.

They don't put it quite as baldly as that, but that's what it amounts to. What they say sounds plausible enough. It is that, though the well-to-do may individually seem to have a lot of money, there are so few of them that no matter how heavily you tax them you still won't raise anything like the huge sums we must have for the war.

The people with low incomes, on the other hand, the same papers argue, have little enough individually, but there are so many of them that together their incomes represent the biggest chunk of national income and must furnish the main source of increased tax revenue.

Those are the practical reasons, they say, for lowered income tax exemptions, sales taxes and other forms of taxation that fall heaviest on the poor.

The chief trouble with this argument, aside from the social injustice it advocates, is that it is not supported by the actual facts on our national income.

The total income of all American families and single individuals in 1941 was $94,840,000,000, according to the OPA Consumers' Division. In 1942, it is estimated that this total will be about $111,000,000,000.

The lion's share of this total income does not go to the great majority of low-income people, as the soak-the-poor editorials would have us believe. It goes to the well-to-do minority whom the press is trying so hard to shelter from higher taxation.

Here are the figures: A minority of 20% of the people, those in the highest income brackets, got 53% of the total national income in 1941—namely, some 50 billion out of a total of approximately 95 billion.

On the other hand, the low-income people with less than $2,200 a year—which group includes nearly all workers and working farmers and represents 70% of the population—received altogether only 36% of the 1941 national income.

Their total take was around 34 billion dollars, as compared with the 50 billion going to the well-to-do minority.

★ ★ ★

Therefore, if we are moved by the purely practical considerations of taking the money from where most of it is available, as advocated by the soak-the-poor editorial writers, we reach conclusions which are the opposite of those in their editorials.

We must logically concentrate on getting the lion's share of increased taxation from the 50 billion dollars of the well-to-do rather than from the 34 billion of the poor.

This is not only the most logical, practical and just procedure, but it is also necessary for the maximum efficiency of our war economy.

For if we cut too deeply into the low-income groups, we lower the living standards of the country's most essential war workers of farm and industry and undermine their health, efficiency and morale for war production.

★ ★ ★

The CIO has emphasized again and again that the tax legislation passed by the House and recommended by the Senate finance committee is the very opposite of a victory tax program.

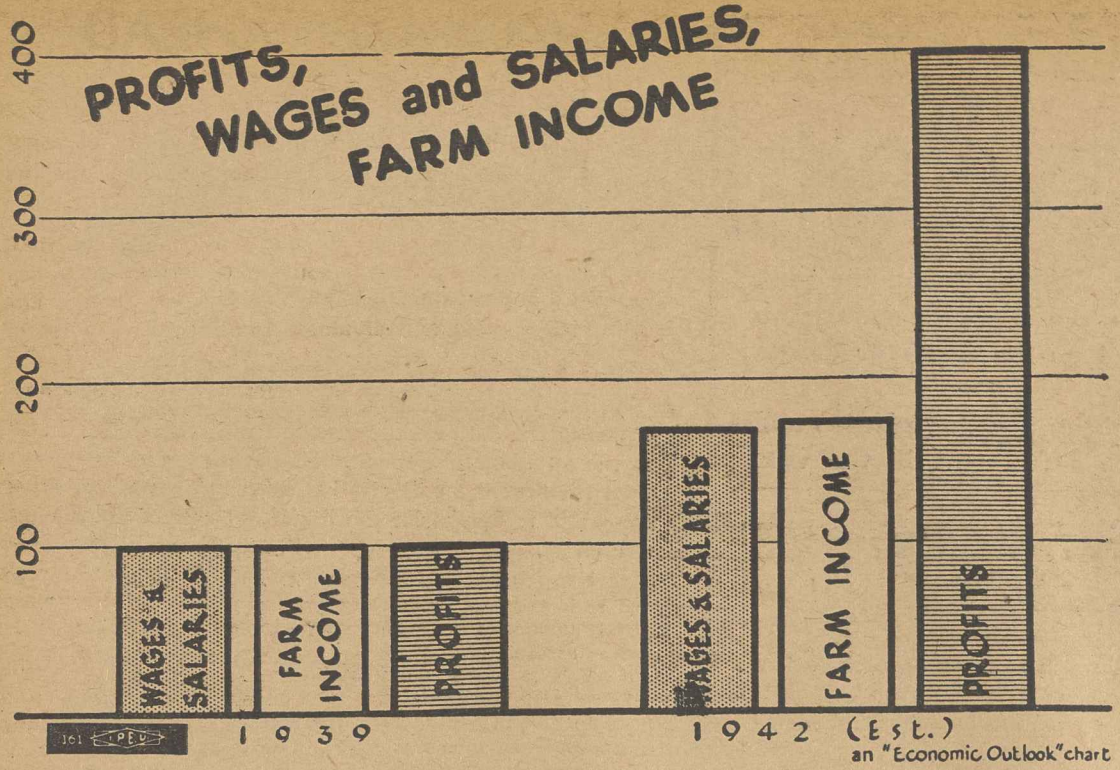
It rejects nearly all the proposals of the U. S. Treasury for raising necessary tax revenue from where most money is actually available—namely from high profits and surplus wealth.

On the other hand, it makes murderous inroads into the low incomes of essential war workers, where least revenue is available and where lowering of living standards can do most harm to war production.

This proposed tax legislation falls billions short of raising necessary war revenue. It is illogical, unjust and impractical in its proposals to relieve those who have most and to soak those who have least.

And, perhaps worst of all, it is sabotage of the President's seven-point program to prevent inflation and to assure a sound war economy. For the very heart of this economic victory program is a progressive tax system based on ability to pay.

That is why CIO President Murray has just issued his call to the whole membership urging every possible activity to get Congress to change the present tax bills, and to adopt President Roosevelt's proposals as part of the simultaneous enactment of the whole seven-point program.



ALL SEVEN NEEDED: Why labor and liberal farm groups demand Congressional adoption of all seven points of FDR's anti-inflation program can be seen in this CIO Economic Outlook chart. Profits have soared.

Price Rises Cost U. S. $9 Billion in 18 Months

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—Rising living costs have taken more than nine billion dollars from American consumers since January, 1941, the Economic Outlook says in its September issue, published today.

This nine billion dollars could have been put in War Bonds, in savings, in debt payment and other means that would help the war, the Outlook points out, if prices are not effectively controlled this unnecessary drain will go on at the rate of $900 million a month.

More rigid price fixing is needed, the Outlook says, pointing out that uncontrolled food prices have gone up 9.8 per cent since the price fixing order in May, while controlled prices have decreased 0.3 per cent.

Main source of inflationary price rises is in the farm price situation, where many items have gone well over 110 per cent of parity. "It is necessary that all prices be stabilized if the standard of living of all our people is not to be lowered," the Outlook says.

"Labor gives its unstinted support to the overall economic program of the President, including the stabilizing of wages," it adds in calling for rigid price control, rationing, and an adequate tax program to prevent inflation and gear the country to a victory economy.

The current Economic Outlook also discusses the tax bill at some length, reiterating the CIO demands for a bill based on the needs of victory and the ability of the people to pay.

Lewis Outfit Runs Away From 3 Polls

Washington, Sept. 26—The United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers of America, fresh from their first constitutional convention, this week announced that Kathryn Lewis' District 50 had "taken a powder" in three NLRB elections ordered on the UGCCWA's petition and surrendered all claims at the three plants without any further fight.

Plants involved were those of the American Cyanamid & Chemical Corp. at Joliet, Ill., and Baer Bros. and Atlas Powder Co. at Stamford, Conn., with a total of more than 600 workers, for whom the UGCCWA now is negotiating contract renewals. The three District 50 instances of withdrawal from the ballot came within 48 hours of each other. The Lewis organization had strenuously opposed the holding of elections in all three plants, according to UGCCWA President Martin Wagner, who said the UGCCWA had 100 per cent membership in each.

ELECTION ORDERED

Just before the UGCCWA convention, District 50 had withdrawn from the ballot at the Burlington (Wis.) Mills, where about 400 workers were involved. An election was ordered this week on the UGCCWA's petition at the De Soto Paint & Varnish Co. in Memphis, Tenn., and the new International Union confidently expects the Lewis organization to withdraw in this case, too.

The first election actually held between the two groups, that at Cleveland Enamel Products Co., went to the UGCCWA by 90-to-10, and a closed shop contract, with 10-cent-an-hour wage increases, has since been signed there. Enamel Products, engaged entirely in war production, is tripling its personnel.

Canadian Labor Parley Ends; Re-elect Mosher

Ottawa, Sept. 26—Final actions of the Canadian Congress of Labor convention, which closed here this week, included re-election of A. R. Mosher as president, A. A. McAuslane of Vancouver and Sol Spivak of the Clothing Workers, Toronto, as vice-presidents, and Pat Conroy of Montreal secretary-treasurer.

Resolutions included a unanimous plea for an immediate second front; a full selective service act for the armed forces and the reserve; labor representation on compensation case boards; increased corporation taxes to limit profits to four percent; and other resolutions to aid the war and protect workers.

In addition, the convention called on the Dominion government to release interned persons known to be anti-fascist and to lift the ban on the Communist Party. Earlier in the week, the convention had urged improvements in labor relations laws to fully guarantee the right of collective bargaining.

Smash Tories' Plot, Murray Urges

from the low income groups money which they actually need to buy the bare necessities of life."

LOOPHOLES LEFT

This has been accomplished, he added, by leaving the scandalous loopholes in the bill that allow the wealthy to evade their full share of taxes, and by refusal to tax big incomes and profits while soaking the low income groups for all and more than they can bear.

"Taxes as usual" by Administration leaders has encouraged anti-war program elements in Congress in their fight for an inadequate and unfair tax bill, Murray pointed out, saying: "Those who have constantly fought our Commander-in-Chief have seized upon this lackadaisical attitude to formulate tax legislation which really strikes a blow at the entire war effort."

DEMANDS ACTION

Murray's letter ended with a sharp warning to labor to go into action for enactment of the entire seven-point program, saying:

"The responsibility for changing the situation is now yours. . . . Now is the time we must marshall all our forces and secure the full cooperation of all the people behind President Roosevelt's economic message.

"Every single member of our unions and all the people in the community must immediately be made aware of this problem."

U. S. Enters Case as Met Life Balks

New York, Sept. 26—The Dept. of Labor today dispatched a federal conciliator to meet with representatives of the CIO Office & Professional Workers and the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., world's largest, as contract negotiations were halted by the firm's refusal to talk turkey with the union.

"We are firmly convinced that the Metropolitan officials are not bargaining in good faith," declared Roy Whitman, local president, "and we offer as evidence the fact that they have continued to deny any increase whatsoever to the men despite the fact that the cost of living has gone up so sharply.

"The company refuses to agree to any form of grievance machinery or arbitration machinery that would protect the men's jobs; and the company refuses to consider any form of union shop."

Metropolitan is an old hand at resisting union efforts for recognition. During a five-year period the UOPWA has won two elections among New York agents of the company and sought repeatedly to get a contract. Last July the company withdrew its theoretical resistant to an agreement, but still fights it out on practical details.

Meanwhile the union received a turn-down on its proposal for joint labor-management production councils. The offer was made to spur sale of insurance, which the local said would help curb inflation and thus benefit the war effort.

N. Y. Council To Endorse Win-War Men

New York, Sept. 26—A political convention of representatives of half a million CIO workers in New York City has been set for October 1 by the Greater New York Industrial Union Council to make endorsements of candidates in the coming elections.

The convention call was accompanied by a preliminary report of the council's Non-Partisan Palitical Activities Committee which roundly denounced the candidacies of both Thomas E. Dewey, Republican, and John J. Bennett, Democrat, for governor, and reaffirmed the council's political independence.

RAP DEWEY, BENNETT

"The New York CIO, at this crucial moment in world history, is not concerned with the selfish objectives or personalities of any political party in New York State," the committee, headed by Pres. Michael Quill of the transport workers, declared.

The report accused Dewey of fronting for "Hoover Republicanism" and assailed Bennett for supporting Franco during the Spanish civil war and for prosecuting union newsdealers in New York who struck for higher income some months ago.

Bennett's nomination, the report added, came from the Farley wing of the party, and his supporters "booed the name of our President, hissed the great progressive governor of New York State and shouted and cat-called at the pro-labor Senators from our state."

VOTE for VICTORY

Petition Forces House To Act on Poll Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—Three years of tough fighting to kill the poll-tax ended in the first stage of victory this week with the 218th signature on the House petition needed to put the Geyer repeal bill on the floor for debate and vote.

The bill, which will enfranchise more than 10 million Southern Negro and white citizens and give them their first chance to take a full part in the war, can now be called up for vote by October 12, under the rules of the petition.

The petition was necessary because the polltax-controlled Rules Committee has refused for three years to allow Congress to even consider the bill. At the same time, hearings in the Senate Judiciary Committee were ended and the bill will come before the Senate in two weeks.

THINGS TO WATCH

The polltax isn't yet repealed, the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax said in announcing the petition victory. Unions and all people who want to see Southern voters take their part in the victory drive must get into action at once by:

1. Writing to Speaker Rayburn, House Office Bldg., Washington, D. C., to urge that he allow any Congressman who signed the petition to move for consideration of the bill. Polltaxers may try to hide behind the fact that the original sponsor of the bill, Rep. Geyer, is dead.

2. Writing to your Congressman urging that he be present and vote favorably when the bill hits the floor.

3. Writing to your two Senators to urge that the Pepper bill be reported out favorably and voted through as quickly as possible.

N.Y. CIO Acts On Scrap

New York, Sept. 26—The New York CIO's 500,000 members are being mobilized for "active and unstinted" support of the metal scrap salvage campaign being initiated in this City.

While full details of the CIO's role in the campaign are being worked out by a special committee of leaders of the 250 CIO affiliates in Greater New York, CIO headquarters here has already issued directions for full mobilization of its members.

Act Now to Get Voice On New 'Rationing Panels'

WASHINGTON, Sept. 26—A union member on each rationing panel!

That must be the campaign cry of local unions and industrial union councils throughout the nation.

Till now, the demand of organized labor was labor representation on each local War Price and Rationing Board. But the situation is changing.

The number of rationed items is due for a sharp increase. The rationing program in each community is under the control of these local War Price and Rationing Boards.

TO SET UP PANELS

These boards, as now constituted, consists in most places of three people. Even where the number of members is larger, they can't begin to handle the work that has to be done in the near future.

A rapid expansion of local boards is about to be started. But, instead, of the boards merely being enlarged, what is going to happen is the introduction of a panel system. Thus, there will be panels for tires, gasoline, meat, price control, and for all other rationed articles.

These panels may consist of three members or more, if necessary. Actually, these panels will be boards in themselves, with the right to make their decisions stick.

NEW SYSTEM

The panel system will actually be a new board system. And, if only one person on the entire board, is a labor man or woman, then labor will not be represented on most of these panels. And the contribution that union men and women may make to important decisions in their local communities will be lost.

Procedure for securing labor participation on War Price and Rationing Boards is this:

1. Get together with other labor unions in your community, if this is possible, and draw up a list of names to be submitted to your local Defense Council. Your local Defense Council is supposed to nominate persons from this list and send them to the State OPA Director, who has the power of assignment.
2. When you meet with your local Defense Council call attention to Section 2-B, Item 6, OPA Field Administrative Letter No. 3, which provides for labor participation, and also Section 2-D, which permits the State OPA Director to enlarge the size of War Price and Rationing Boards wherever necessary.

WRITE TO DIRECTOR

3. Send a letter to your State OPA Director, together with a copy of the names you submit to your local Defense Council. In the letter you should state that these names have been submitted in accordance with the instructions of the Labor Office of OPA.
4. In the event that your local Defense Council refuses to act, write immediately to Newman Jeffrey, Chief, Labor Section, OCD, Washington, and to Robert R. R. Brooks, Director, Labor Office, OPA, Washington, D. C.

BY ELEANOR FOWLER
Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Creation of a $3,000 fund for building auxiliaries to the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union showed the importance which the delegates to the 39th annual convention of that international attach to the auxiliary movement. Delegate after delegate rose to point out the benefit auxiliaries had been in the past struggles of the union and to emphasize the important role of union wives in the war effort.

The part which housewives can play in enforcement of price control and rationing was brought out. Several auxiliaries reported having price control committees whose function is to check ceiling prices in the stores, investigate new brands introduced, and try to insure that storekeepers do not violate price ceilings by substituting new brands of poor quality for brands carried in March.

The importance of rapidly organizing women into auxiliaries now in order to ensure their union-mindedness when they enter industry was stressed by several delegates. Mrs. Harriet Duffin, chairman of the Convention's Auxiliary Committee, and vice-president of the CIO Auxiliaries, reported that a number of auxiliaries were already losing members to war jobs, but that they were convinced that an organizing drive would ensure sufficient members in each auxiliary to hold organizations together and render real service to the local unions.

CHILD CARE PROGRAM

A twenty-four child care program for children from infancy to 16 years whose parents are working in war industry was advocated by the auxiliary committee and unanimously adopted by the union convention. Mine-mill auxiliaries in Utah took the initiative some time ago in making surveys to determine the areas needing nursery schools and urging WPA to set them up. Two are already functioning and three more are planned for the immediate future.

Children burned to death in a trailer while parents were at work in an arms plants, children roaming the streets with keys around their necks or locked in rooms or cars during parents' working hours were reported by Utah auxiliary delegates. The state has changed so rapidly from an agricultural and mining area to a major center of war industry that facilities to meet war workers' needs have not been created. Meeting those needs was the main concern of the Utah delegation.

PAID OFFICIAL

The convention approved establishment of a new structure for the auxiliaries with a paid president-secretary as the executive officer and auxiliary vice-president from each of the districts of the union. The $3,000 fund is to be administered by these officers acting together as an auxiliary executive board. The president-secretary is also to serve as fraternal auxiliary representative on the executive board of the international union.

Plan Now for After War, Murray Urges Miners In Anthracite Area

BY J. M. WALSH

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Sept. 26—Leaders of industry and business in the coal regions as well as unions are preparing today to follow the advice of CIO President Philip Murray during a smoker of St. Mary's Holy Name Society of this city Sunday night to organize a community-wide joint action committee to obtain new industries to preserve the life of the anthracite area after the war.

President Murray, calling upon information of the region gained in 25 years of negotiation with anthracite operators, warned:

"Considering the competitive encroachment which has taken place in recent years upon anthracite, the future of this area is doubtful unless the people here do something about it."

He urged a drive to have the government assist in establishing other industries in the territory.

SPEAKS ON RADIO

Invited here by his old friend, Rev. John J. O'Donnell, St. Mary's pastor, President Murray during the afternoon broadcast on a four-station hookup to the entire anthracite area issued an urgent plea to go all out for maximum production for the war effort "because this is labor's war."

The CIO president did not mention John L. Lewis by name once during his 15-minute broadcast heard by many thousands from one end of the anthracite area to the other but he made reference several times to "dictatorship".

"This is truly labor's war," Murray broadcast. "Dictators seek to break men's spirits, to dominate their very lives. In occupied Europe this takes the form of a firing squad. Dictators in this country resort to other reprisals. Men in all walks of life are paying momentary penalties because they hold principles above positions or titles —because they refused to be a stooge for some self-satisfied official. Of that timber is freedom built.

"Our country is at war to eliminate from the face of the earth every known form of infernal dictatorship, no matter in what form it may be—either inside the government or outside the government. People want to be free."

NO INTERFERENCE

Later in his talk, the CIO president urged workers not to tolerate interference with democracy and maximum cooperation in the war effort. Once he said: "If Phil Murray should get in your way, kick him aside. And if you do that with Phil Murray, do it with anyone else —no matter who he is."

The pledge of millions of union members to President Roosevelt that they will give to him and to the country all their support in this war will be lived up to "without fail," President Murray said.

"As for myself, I have made my personal commitment to labor and to our Commander-in-Chief that I will stand by his side and that the CIO will stand by his side, come what may. This fight is America's fight and it is our duty to support the President of the United States in this war. That we propose to do no matter who is displeased by our actions."

PAPERS EXAGGERATE

The CIO President repeatedly urged all members of all unions to rigidly adhere to the "no strike" policy given to the President after Pearl Harbor. At the evening Holy Name Society smoker, he criticized newspapers for incorrectly magnifying the significance of strikes and their effect on the war effort.

Director of Organization, CIO

Farm Equipment Workers won its 14th consecutive victory this year at Ingersoll Steel and Disc in Chicago with a vote of 321 for CIO to 232 for AFL, reports Grant Oakes, chairman. Regional Director Paul R. Christopher of Tennessee reports that the USA won the election at Virginia Bridge & Iron Company in Memphis with a vote of 132 for USA-CIO to six for AFL. This victory was accomplished through untiring efforts of Organizers Watts and Sorsby of the USA.

Mine Mill Smelter Workers came through with another group of election victories according to Morris Wright, assistant editor, as follows: Waterbury, Conn., French Small Tube Co., MMSW-CIO 441, no union 272; election involving armed guards and time keepers of Waterbury Clock Co., MMSW-CIO 90, no union 16; Miami Copper Company, MMSW 414, no union 216; International Smelting & Refining Co., Miami, Ariz., MMSW 159, AFL 86; Jenkins Brothers Valve Co., Bridgeport, Conn., MMSW 690, AFL 212; Columbia Metal Co., MMSW 13, no union 4; Hughesville, Mont., St. Joseph Lead Co., MMSW 75, no union 68; Belke Manufacturing Co., Chicago, MMSW 45, no union 11; Metaline Falls, Wash., Lehigh Cement Co., MMSW 49, AFL 23; Torrance, Calif., Aluminum Company of America, MMSW 100, AFL 87; Guerneville, Calif., won card check at Magee Quicksilver Company.

This gives Mine Mill Smelter Workers the following record for the fiscal year: 83 elections won out of 90 entered, 11 elections won in the last 90 days in Connecticut. This completes organization of all large brass fabricating plants in Connecticut Valley.

War Industry Unions Growing

Regional Director Powers Hapgood reports completion of agreement in behalf LIU 607 and the Hoosier Veneer Company in Indianapolis. This is culmination of a six-year struggle with this company. Representative Elmer Whitman worked with Brother Hapgood. The highlights of the agreement are 8% per hour increase from May 3rd to September 3rd, an additional 2c per hour increase effective September 3rd; maintenance of membership, check-off, vacations with pay, seniority rights, grievance procedure.

The local union appreciating the good work done for them by CIO representatives voted to have the dues checked off for every month back to and including September, which the company complied with.

United Rubber Workers reported at their convention held this week highest membership on record. Delegates were all streamlined for a unified convention in support of the nation in its war effort, President Murray and CIO. I had pleasure of addressing convention the first day. The Marine and Shipbuilders are having their convention this week. They also report remarkable growth in this one of the great basic war industries. All reports President Murray had very successful meeting in Canada and his presence has done CIO a tremendous amount of good. He met with Prime Minister of Canada Mackenzie King and Cabinet.

Another Shoe Victory

Walter H. Harris, director of the USWA-CIO Organizing Campaign, reports a victory at the election held at the International Shoe Company, St. Clair, Mo., with a vote of 261 for CIO to 101 against.

The United Office & Professional Workers won a state-wide election in New Jersey among the insurance agents of Colonial Life Insurance Company by a vote of 55 for CIO as against 41. A number of elections will be held by this affiliate within the next few weeks and we wish them a victorious outcome.

CIO National Representative Adolph Germer writes in that C. Allen Bisbey of Ione, Wash., reports winning an NLRB election at the Lehigh Portland Cement Company with a vote in behalf of CIO of 49 to 23 against.

James L. Daugherty, national representative of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, advises that an agreement on the contract covering five UWOC locals and the Southern California Gas Company, has been secured. Major points contained in the contract are maintenance of membership clause, wage increases, etc. This will certainly lead to stabilization of this organization within this company and will be a springboard to extend organizational activity in other utility companies in this area.

The United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes won the NLRB election at the A. S. Beck Shoe Company in Baltimore, Md.

Russian Labor Papers Keep 'Supers' On Their Toes

KUIBYSHEV, Sept. 26 (ALN)—Three million workers in Soviet factories are reporters for the labor press, and an important part of the vastly increased Soviet production since the start of the war is due to their activities.

The biggest Soviet plants, particularly in heavy industry, publish daily papers comparing in size and influence with the national dailies issued in the capital. In one-industry towns, where a single factory employs the bulk of the working population, the factory newspaper is the most widely-read in the community.

Of the ten largest dailies in the Soviet Union, three are labor papers: Trud, organ of the Central Council of Trade Unions, with a circulation of 500,000, Goudok, published by the Railwaymen's Union, and Uchitelskaya Gazette, published by the Teachers Union.

WALL NEWSPAPERS

In smaller plants, the weekly or semi-weekly printed paper is supplemented by daily hand-written wall-newspapers posted on bulletin boards in every department.

At the big Stalin Motor Works, now producing tanks and armored cars, in addition to the daily plant-wide newspaper, there are 23 daily wall papers and 326 weeklies. The papers in this one plant are staffed by 350 part-time editors and 6,000 correspondents and reporters.

Plant-wide papers are devoted mainly to solving production problems, although considerable space is also given to national and international news.

Production shortcoming are dealt with in a belligerent manner which gives the labor press an appearance of constant dissatisfaction. On examinaton, the production items prove to be realistically hard-headed and constructive.

DEMAND ACTION

"Brother Ivanov has developed a fixture enabling him to turn out ten times the normal amount of work on his turret lathe." (Here a detailed description of Ivanov's fixture was given, accompanied by a diagram and performance figures.)

"Why hasn't the superintendent seen to it that all other turret lathe operators are equipped with the same fixture and taught Ivanov's method? This is war, brothers. Superintendents and department heads have to realize that they can't be as slow in introducing new ideas as in peacetime."

Soviet labor editors use satire and humor as well as direct exhortation.

Workers who show up late or drunk, collective farmers who are earning more money than they ever saw before, and are thus content with unskilled work, workers who take advantage of high overtime earnings to relax on the job, foremen who are suspicious of new ideas and executives who fail to move with the times, are the subjects of bitter cartoons or humorous sketches written by workers.

'Latin American Workers Back CIO Stand'—Toledano

Havana, Sept. 26—(ALN) — The workers of Latin America fully support the CIO and All-Union Council of Soviet Trade Unions in rejecting the AFL's plan for linking the allied labor movements through the existing Anglo-American labor committee, Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), said in an interview here this week.

"While in Washington recently, I learned of the Soviet rejection of the AFL liaison plan," he said, "and cabled the British Trades Union Congress, in the name of the CTAL, that our policy is to unite the workers of all nations fighting the Axis, not to divide them into separate groups for ideological, racial or other reasons.

"The CIO executive board, which was meeting in Washington at the time, declared the same policy. Mr. Philip Murray personally told me of the decisions taken by the board, and gave me a message of greetings to Latin American workers.

UNITY OF ALL

"The CTAL insists on unity between all labor groups. Its leaders are fully aware of the responsibilities of workers during these momentous days, when the fate of the world for generations is being decided."

Toledano leaves for Bogota, Colorbia, at the end of this week. While here he and Lazaro Pena, general secretary of the Cuban Federation of Workers, met with Fulgencio Batista, president of the Cuban Republic.

British Union Leader Questions Excuses for Delaying Second Front

LONDON, Sept. 26—(ALN)—Workers in Britain's factories and shipyards are "mightily sceptical when inadequacies and inferiorities in war material are used as arguments by opponents of the second front," Jack Tanner, president of the 650,000-strong Amalgamated Engineering Union, writes in the current issue of Reynolds News, Sunday newspaper owned by the British Cooperative Movement.

"We have to remember that in every campaign, from Norway to Tobruk, in which our military forces have been engaged, inferiority or lack of war weapons has been advanced as the reason for defeat," Tanner writes.

"Yet we know, for example, that the British tanks which were not good enough to vanquish Rommel in the Western Desert in June this year, were good enough to help hold back Von Leeb on the Northern Soviet front.

"The Red Army, indeed, far from complaining of our British tanks and guns, has praised them very highly, to the great satisfaction of our industrial workers who, as may be imagined, could hardly be expected to derive much encouragement from the perpetual government excuses about 'inferior' weapons."

PLENTY OF TANKS

Pointing out that British workers "are not concerned with increased production for itself, but with the winning of the war and the defeat of fascism," Tanner remarks:

"They are not likely in the workshops to have overlooked the announcement that 4500 tanks were shipped to the Middle East—more than twice the number that went to Russia—nor that by mid-May we were said to have a superiority in tanks of something like seven to five."

Negro Paper Hails Union

Washington—The Afro-American, important Negro newspaper published here, in a leading editorial this week praises the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, CIO, because that union "moved their eighth annual convention from Indianapolis to Cleveland, Ohio, because Indianapolis hotels refused to withdraw their regulations discriminating against colored persons."

Praise Defi Of Quisling By Workers

Washington, Sept. 26—Mass resignation of Norwegian workers from their labor unions, rather than see them clubbed into Quisling's fake "parliament" was applauded by Philip Murray in a shortwave message sent this week in the name of the CIO.

"The fact that the traitor Quisling has been forced to postpone his grandiose scheme for a national parliament which would include a fake labor representation of slaves reveals to all the world the power and the courage of Norway's working people," Murray said.

"Their action has fired our workers with an even greater determination in their all-out effort to defeat the Axis enemies. The five million members of the CIO in the U. S. salute their fellow workers in Norway. They salute them and they say, 'We are with you now, and in every moment of trouble as well as victory for freedom."

THEIR CONTRIBUTIONS will hasten the day of total victory. CIO shop stewards, members of Local 122, CIO United Shoe Workers, in Los Angeles, look on as Mike Tosney, extreme right, of the CIO War Relief Committee, presents a victory award to the local for going over the top in donating an hour's pay a month to war relief.

British Miners Urge New Talks With Indians

London, Sept. 26—(ALN)—Immediate settlement of the Indian problem in the interests of the United Nations' war effort was urged by the recent annual convention of the Miners Federation of Great Britain. The union has over 700,000 members.

The following resolution was passed by the delegates: "We reaffirm our belief in the absolute necessity for securing the wholehearted cooperation of the Indian people in the common struggle against fascism and to preserve democracy.

"We therefore call upon the government to reopen negotiations with the Indian National Congress in an endeavor to secure a reasonable settlement of outstanding problems immediately with a view to the ultimate granting of complete independence."

Indiana CIO Goes 'All-Out' For War Effort

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Sept. 26—Support for all-out mobilization for victory was the keynote of the fifth annual convention of the Indiana CIO Council held here last week-end.

Delegates from CIO affiliates throughout the state adopted by an overwhelming vote, a program for victory proposed by the officers and executive board of the council.

The program called for all-out, continuous production and elimination of monopolist interests from war production; support for President Roosevelt's 7-point anti-inflation program; political action to insure election of win-the-war candidates; complete national unity around the war program; an immediate Second Front in Europe; condemnation of disruption and disunity; equal rights and pay for women in industry; and passage of the anti-poll tax bill.

LAUD UMW WORKERS

A resolution was also adopted commending the rank and file of the United Mine Workers as "patriotic and loyal trade unionists" and congratulating them for their "splendid contribution to the progress of labor and to the war effort."

This action was taken, the resolution stated, to clear up any confusion that might have been produced by "individuals and the press" that attacks against UMW President John L. Lewis were aimed at the membership.

In other resolutions adopted, the delegates condemned discrimination against Negroes and minority groups; urged education of women for leadership in unions; and called for national and international trade union unity.

On the last day of the convention, delegates re-elected President James McEwan and Secretary-Treasurer Walter Frisbie, and elected O. H. McKinsey of the United Steelworkers of America as vice-president.

Missouri State Council Set For Parley

By C. L. LEATHWOOD

Jefferson City, Mo., Sept. 26—A strictly win-the-war convention is anticipated when 300 delegates, representing more than 60,000 CIO members meet here September 26 for the fourth annual convention of the Missouri State Industrial Union Council.

Resolutions will attack bungling and sabotage by the "dollar-a-year" men in Washington, and support strongly the demand of the CIO's national officials for full labor representation and responsibility in war production management.

St. Louis delegates will bring to the convention a report of serious discrimination against local citizens and union men in the war industries, as well as widespread violations of the President's fair employment program.

ASK NEW CONSTITUTION

As a statewide problem, the current agitation for a new state constitution to replace Missouri's "horse-and-buggy age" covenant ranks high. CIO members declare that they will fight for the drafting of a liberal constitution.

Missouri CIO attention at present is largely centered on the coming drive to organize 400,000 aircraft workers of the Southwest, in new defense plants located in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

John W. Livingston, newly-elected regional director of the UAW-CIO, will attend the convention to ask full cooperation of the Missouri CIO in this huge task. CIO members are fully aware of how much the organization of this great mass of workers in the Southwestern hotbed of the open shop would mean to their organization and to the nation.

Vote CIO, 2-1

Hartford, Conn., Sept. 26—Employes of Cushman Truck Company here have just voted 472 to 208 in an NLRB election for the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, CIO.

Chuck Plant Goes CIO, 2-1

Hartford, Sept. 26—The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers scored a 2-1 victory last week when the workers of the Cushman Chuck Co., one of the largest in the country, voted to be represented by the union.

472 votes were cast for the UE as against 208 for no union. A total of 756 workers were eligible to vote. A new plant has been constructed and it is expected that several thousand workers will be employed by the company within the next year.

The Cushman Chuck Company is one of the oldest plants in Hartford with a history behind it of nearly 100 years. The campaign to organize the shop, which began eight weeks ago, resulted in a speedy victory.

Aluminum Union Officers Join Armed Forces

New Kensington, Sept. 26—Two national officers of the CIO Aluminum Workers of America have entered the armed services.

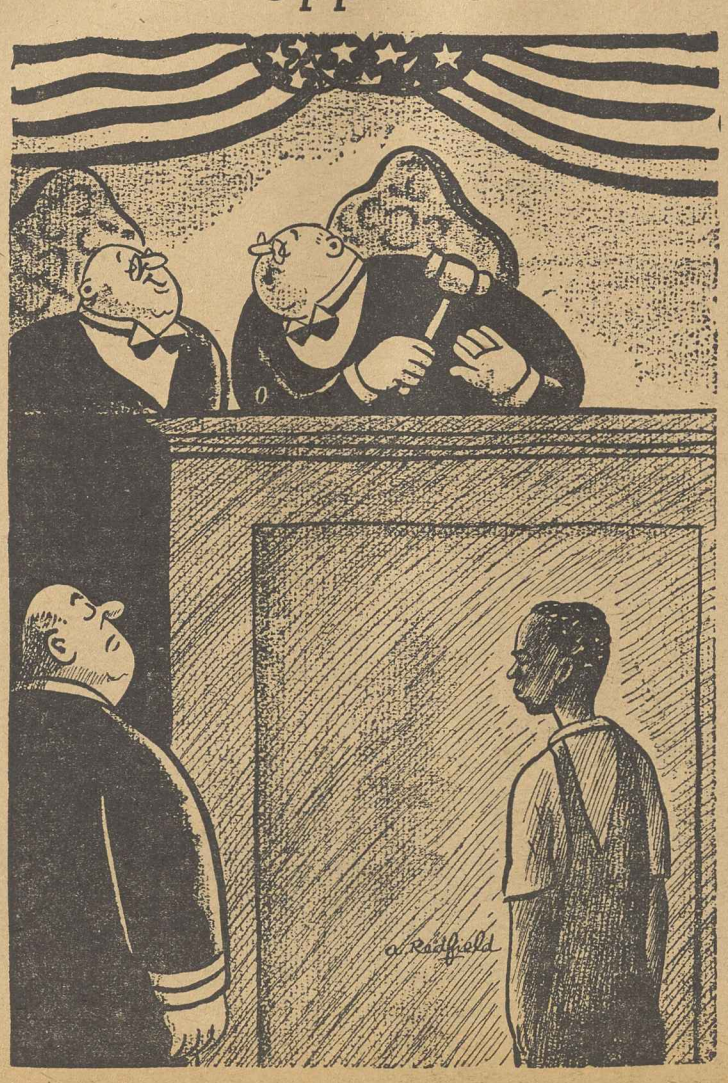
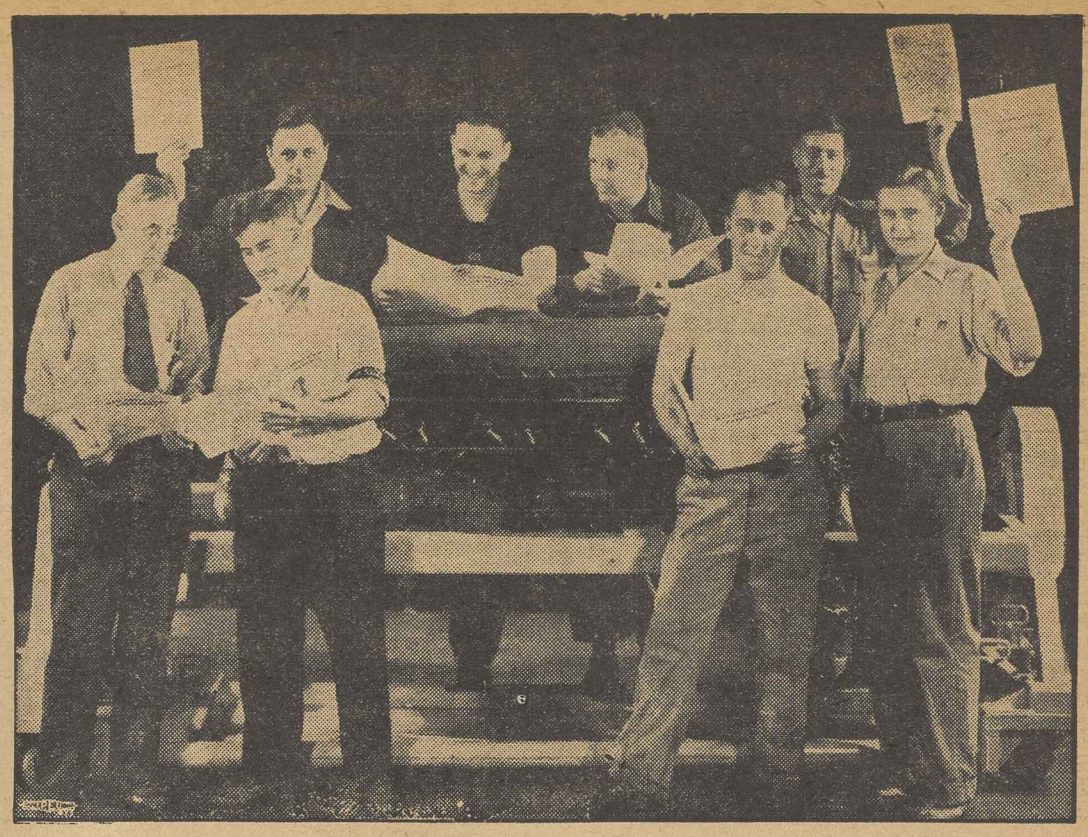
The Upper Crust



"You know, we have to be more careful now. When he gets in the Army he can vote."



OUTPUT BOOSTERS ALL: Holding aloft their WPB awards for outstanding war production, members of Packard Local 190, CIO United Automobile Workers, can well be proud. When WPB handed out merit awards, Packard led with nine, while RCA was second with seven. Both are union plants.

Packard CIO Local Describes Success in Speeding Schedules

DETROIT, Sept. 26 (FP)—Better than anywhere else in the country, labor-management committee teamwork is solving problems at Packard Motor Co. aircraft engine and marine engine plant in Detroit, according to President Curt Murdock of Packard Local 190, United Automobile Workers, CIO. Murdock tells the story in a 32-page illustrated pamphlet, Winning the Battle for Production.

His claim is supported by the WPB, which has just awarded nine Certificates of Individual Production Merit and Honorable Mentions to Packard union members, longest list announced in Washington.

500 A WEEK

The awards were for the most fruitful suggestions to improve production. At Packard, the union, which has sole control over workers' suggestions, gets 500 to 700 a week. They are about equally divided between concrete proposals and pep slogans. A majority are approved by the union and passed on to the joint labor-management committee.

"After several months of the program," says Murdock in the pamphlet, "we are proud to report that abuses of the suggestion campaign are almost non-existent. The number of deliberately malicious contributions is negligible."

Among the concrete suggestions for which the WPB granted awards to Packard unionists are:

Saving two out of three operations in drilling a hole in an aircraft engine; saving 50% of time in milling and finishing marine engine bolthead; re-arranging procedure so that nine men can turn out 14 aircraft motor assemblies instead of 14 men turning out nine, saving $16,000 a year on diamond tools by change in issuance so that same man uses same tool.

The Sixth Column:

Goebbels 'Echo' Under Fire; Pamphlet About Tribune Should Be in Your Library

Wilmington, N. C., Sept. 26—It's only a short hop from attacking unions to attacking the nation's war effort.

Employes of the North Carolina Shipbuilding Co. have had a chance to see that at first hand in the columns of the Wilmington Post, a weekly paper that has long stooged for the company union and launched bitter attacks on the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

ECHOES AXIS LINE

The Post originally confined its attacks to the CIO. Now it's broadened its scope to include these wild charges:

1. The sale of U. S. Bonds puts money in the hands of "union racketeers."

2. The army of the U. S. should be recalled to defend our own shores and "leave Hitler's slaves to their fate."

3. Attacks on Pres. Roosevelt, the Supreme Court, the NLRB and the War Labor Board.

4. Repeated efforts to stir disunity by attacking the 6,000 Negro workers employed at the yards.

5. Suggestions that Russia would sue for a separate peace with Hitler.

FILE COMPLAINT

Union officials, noting that the Post's propaganda line parallels that of Hitler's stooges as outlined by the U. S. Office of War Information, have filed a complaint with the Federal Bureau of Investigation against the sheet.

The CIO shipyard union now represents a majority of the workers in each department at the mushrooming shipyard. The Natl. Labor Relations Board has set October 15 as the date for hearings on charges that the firm is illegally supporting a company union and pressuring workers not to join the CIO affiliate.

Chicago, Sept. 26—Here's a "must" item for any union library—"The People vs. The Chicago Tribune."

A 72-page pamphlet, it's being sold by the Chicago Branch of the Union for Democratic Action, 166 W. Randolph Street, Chicago. The price is 15 cents.

Crammed into its pages are stories, cartoons and quotations that lay bare the brand of American fascism being preached by Col. Bertie McCormick and his cousin, Capt. Joe Patterson of the New York Daily News.

Documented throughout with quotes from the Tribune—which pleases to call itself "The World's Greatest Newspaper"—the pamphlet charges that McCormick's sheet "betrays military secrets . . . parrots the Axis propaganda line . . . adopts home grown fascists . . . and endangers the winning of the war and the peace."

'SNARL, SNAP, SNIPE'

"The Tribune and Col. McCormick are Chicago's problem children, identical twins who snarl, snap and snipe peevishly at all who do not share their narrow hates, fears, prejudices and distortions," the pamphlet asserts.

"They will fight Hitler, Hirohito and Company only if they can uproot all liberal causes in the process. They and their self-seeking crowd want to take over totally. They must be stopped in their tracks."

"The People vs. The Chicago Tribune" was written for the UDA by Elmer Gertz, Chicago lawyer, whose book on the Tribune is now ready for publication.

Shoe Workers Meet

Worchester, Mass., Sept. 29 — The biennial convention of the CIO United Shoe Workers of America will be called to order by Pres. Frank McGrath on Oct. 5 at the Hotel Bancroft in this city.

Your Telegrams Count!

Two bills of crucial importance to America at war need your immediate attention.

1. On October 12, or shortly thereafter, the Geyer Bill to abolish the hated poll tax in eight southern states comes up for consideration in the House. It came up the hard way, with labor and progressive organizations pushing Congressmen to sign a discharge petition. The Tories in the House fought a vicious battle to stifle it in committee.

Today, tomorrow, all this week, every reactionary in the South is contacting his Representative to demand a defeat or a postponement of this bill to give the right to vote to millions of workers and farmers.

You, too, must act. Write or wire NOW to your Congressman and to Speaker Rayburn of the House of Representatives, demanding immediate and favorable action on the Geyer Bill; and to the Senate Judiciary Committee for action on the companion Pepper Bill.

2. The nation needs a Victory Tax Bill. Pres. Roosevelt has asked it; Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau has asked it. The CIO, the AFL, the progressive farm organizations have asked it.

A dangerous cabal of die-hards disagrees.

A telegram NOW, to your two Senators, will help the nation and help you. Demand a tax bill based on Pres. Roosevelt's program, supported by the CIO, which will help your nation at war and which will help you be a better war producer.

FDR Hails Labor Help to War

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—Back from a nation-wide tour, President Roosevelt this week told the country that production figures were steadily rising, that labor-management cooperation is magnificent, and that a minority of newspapers and columnists are giving distorted publicity to the few strikes occurring in isolated war plants.

The Chief Executive called correspondents' attention to the fact that last month's strikes amounted to only nine-one hundredths of one per cent of the total manhours worked in war industries. He noted that a plant working at 100 per cent efficiency isn't news, but that almost every dispute between 25 men and a foreman merits nation-wide attention from publishers.

In praising the degree of cooperation in the country's busy war industries, the President confirmed observations of CIO leaders that labor-management relations are frequently impaired by columnists and editorial writers whose hatred of labor surpasses hatred of Hitler's Fascism.

In the course of his trip the President saw many major war plants working under CIO contract. Among these were the Ford Willow Run bomber factory and the Hudson tank plant near Detroit and the Allis-Chalmers Mfg. Co. near Milwaukee.

In these as in other industrial centers throughout the country, the President's unpublicized visit caused tremendous excitement.

'Junk Axis,' Labor Heads Ask Nation

Washington, Oct. 2—More evidence that CIO is putting its muscle into the scrap drive was seen this week in a circular letter to all affiliates from Pres. Murray and in a radio roundtable in which Van A. Bittner of the CIO joined with Pres. Green of the AFL and Secretary Luhrsen of the Railway Labor Executives Assn.

"Seventeen million tons of scrap are needed to keep steel mills going full blast on victory production—seven days a week, 24 hours a day," Bittner said. "We need this scrap to make the weapons that enable us to take and sustain the offensive against Axis slavery. Without it, we can very easily lose the war."

SCRAP HUNT

Bittner called for an intensive scrap hunt by every CIO member, urging them to join with fellow-workers and all their fellow-citizens in making the drive a continuous, steady campaign for the duration. He praised efforts of CIO unions in widely scattered communities that have already added thousands of tons to the scrap pile, and pointed out that CIO wives are taking a full part in the drive through the Congress of Womens Auxiliaries.

Union Girls Blitz OPA With Pamphlet Ideas

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—Two union girls from New York City came down to Washington a few weeks ago and blitzkrieged officials of the Office of Price Administration. As a result, the consumers of the nation will soon find available some of the most attractive illustrated pamphlets ever issued by a government agency.

The girls were Sylvia Elfenbein and Harriet Gould. The organization they represented is the Advertising Mobilization Committee, sponsored by the United Office and Professional Workers Union of America (CIO), and including both union and non-union advertising workers and commercial artists.

Purpose of the trip was to offer OPA top officials the talents of members of the Advertising Mobilization Committee for popularization, through pamphlets and posters, of price control, rationing, and other consumer problems.

LOTS OF RESULTS

So impressed were OPA officials with the presentation that the girls were rushed from one appointment to another for two days. Then Miss Elfenbein, who is executive secretary of the organization, was called back to Washington for consultation three days later.

Net results of the Washington trip and the later consultation with Miss Elfenbein: a pamphlet on price control will be off the press in a few weeks; a pamphlet on rent control is about to go through the mill; a pamphlet on clothing, how to buy and how to use, will follow quickly.

Union Quits Lewis Outfit, Affiliates to CIO

Detroit, Oct. 3—Local 98, United Construction Workers, announced here this week that it has affiliated with the CIO as a Local Industrial Union. The local was chartered in February 1940 under the United Construction Workers Organizing Committee, headed by A. D. Lewis, brother of President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers.

Treasury Dept. Hails CIO NEWS Work on Bonds

Washington, Oct. 3—The CIO NEWS and its staff have been awarded a certificate of honor "for outstanding service on behalf of the War Savings Program" by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau.

Herman Wolf, chief of the Bond's labor press section, indicated similar certificates are being sent to other union publication throughout the country.

"We are confident that the fine support which you have given to the voluntary War Bond Campaign will continue, so that we may achieve the nationwide goal of 10 per cent of the national income in War Bonds," he said.

Honor 44 Workers For Tips On Output

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—Forty-four suggestions by American workmen for increasing war production have been selected from the 12,000 ideas turned into labor-management committees, and are being "ploughed back" into industry by War Production Drive headquarters, the Office of War Information said this week.

The suggestions, fruits of the awards plan of the War Production Drive, are classified as machine practices, work simplifications, conservation of materials, office and shop practices, new tools, training and miscellaneous.

MANY AWARDS

Three War Production awards are open to men and women who devise methods to increase production, conserve material or better the product. The first, the award of individual production merit, may be awarded by the labor-management committees within the individual plants.

Those suggestions which have been put into practice and which the committees decided may have industry-wide or nation-wide applications are then sent to the WPB headquarters, where they are studied by a committee of technical experts. Upon their recommendations, certificates of individual production merit and the higher citations of individual production merit are awarded.

New U. S. Ship Honors Negro Educator

Washington, Oct. 3—Miss Marian Anderson, famous singer, will christen the Liberty Ship Booker T. Washington when the 10,000 ton vessel is launched in Wilmington, Cal., the U. S. Maritime Commission announced today.

The Booker T. Washington, first ship to be named for a Negro, was built by workers of many origins—Chinese, Filipino and Mexican, as well as Negro and white, the Commission said. More than 500 Negro workers in all skills are employed in the yard where she was built.

The ship will be skippered by a Negro, Captain Hugh Mulzac, following action by the National Maritime Union. Captain Mulzac has held a master's license for 22 years. With the exception of one captain's post on a Negro owned ship, he has been discriminated against by American shipping lines since 1920.

Rubber Union Takes Action On War Problems

By PAT CROZIER

AKRON, Ohio, Oct. 3—Adoption of a union policy streamlined to meet war needs and election of officers pledged to back the government "in carrying the war to the enemy," marked the closing sessions of the United Rubber Convention here.

Pres. Sherman H. Dalrymple and Vice-Pres. L. S. Buckmaster were re-elected by unanimous vote to head the 100,000-strong union of the nation's rubber workers.

LANNING ELECTED

Taking the post of General Secretary-Treasurer Frank Grillo, who resigned to enter the U. S. Army as a private, is Charles Lanning, field representative from Buffalo, N. Y. Lanning won recognition as president of Local 3, Willoughby, Ohio, during the stormy days of its formation.

Raised in the union tradition, he is grandson of a member of the Knights of Labor and son of a man who was president of Local 1 of the United Mine Workers of America for nine years.

The comprehensive war program pledges the union's willingness to work longer hours upon a finding of a manpower shortage by the manpower commission, and warns local unions that disciplinary action will follow any stoppages or slowdowns of war production.

Other points call for equal pay for equal work when women are brought into the shops and ask that the skills of Negro workers be fully utilized.

President Dalrymple struck back at critics who have attacked his all-out war stand when he declared, "If I'm a stooge for the U. S. Government for saying produce, produce, produce—then I'm a stooge. Above all things I want to win the war and maintain our organization, to win the peace after the war."

Pvt. Frank Grillo, former General Secretary-Treasurer, warned that work stoppages turn some soldiers against unions. "They don't have the rights you have in the plant. They lose contact with their fellow-members, start thinking a little differently. If they do its our fault. We can stop it by keeping out of the papers, by stopping strikes.

ASKS NO STOPPAGES

"Any stoppage of work, strike or slowdown on any war production machine is tantamount to treason. Because every person who has anything to do with the production effort, whether in uniform or not, is part of the military machine," he declared.

In his acceptance speech new General Secretary-Treasurer Lanning declared: "Our union's main job now is to back our government in carrying to a successful conclusion the war against the Axis. This is our No. 1 job and it must be done as quickly and as completely as possible."

TWO HEROES: Coast Guardsman John Cullen, a member of the CIO Retail & Wholesale Union, greets Lt. Liudmila Pavlichenko of the Red Army at a rally staged by the RCA Manufacturing Co. and CIO electrical workers in Camden, N. J. Cullen discovered four of the eight Nazi saboteurs who attempted to sneak into the U. S. and damage war production. Pavlichenko, a Russian sharp-shooter, has picked off 309 Nazis who invaded her native land.

Spokane Host to Wood Union

By ROBERT WILMOT

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 3—More than 250 delegates, representing 65,000 members of the International Woodworkers of America, will attend the sixth annual Constitutional Convention of the organization, which is scheduled to open in the Moose Temple here on October 5.

The annual conclave will find the spokesmen of CIO woodworking locals from 23 lumbering states and Canada meeting to formulate a program for the coming year, and to hear reports of organizational progress since the last convention.

Spokane, in the great pine-producing inland empire, and the base of activities for successful IWA-CIO organizational campaigns among the woodworkers in eastern Washington, Idaho and Montana during the past 12 months, will play host to its first major industrial union gathering when the woodworkers convene.

MOST IMPORTANT

International President Worth Lowery predicted today that the coming convention will be the most vitally important in the organization's history.

Woodworkers in western states were recently virtually "frozen" upon their jobs by order of the Manpower Commission, and War Production Chief Donald Nelson, has ordered all mills and camps into production upon a 48-hour workweek basis.

Lowery, who, as spokesman for the International has charged that lumber operators were stalling production, declared that much of the convention delegates deliberations will undoubtedly be aimed at formulating a program by which maximum production may be achieved, and the IWA given the chance "to fulfill its rightful role in a war-winning effort."

Shipyard Parley Ends On Victory Note

By LEN DE CAUX

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—After unanimously re-electing its three chief officers and adopting a program for intensified war effort, the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers last week adjourned the biggest and most enthusiastic convention in its history.

Three hundred delegates attended, representing 200,000 shipyard workers. The union's membership was doubled during the year.

Pres. John Green, Vice-Pres. George Wm. Wright, and Sec.-Treas. Philip H. Van Gelder were the three officers re-elected.

It was a war convention from start to finish. Every action was assessed for the contribution it would make to victory. And there were many ovations and demonstrations of support for the war leadership of President Roosevelt, for the CIO leadership of President Murray, and for the fighting forces of the United Nations.

The convention voted for the "immediate opening of a second front offensive against the heart of Nazi-ism—Berlin"; and called for the establishment of a "single national government production authority" to plan and direct the country's war economy.

ASK MORE PLANNING

Centralized allocation of supplies and manpower, elimination of non-essential civilian production, spreading of work to smaller firms, labor representation on all war boards, and a tax, price, profits, rationing and wage program to meet war needs were among the measures urged.

The convention also approved formation of the "FDR's" (Federal Defense Repairmen), as volunteer units of mechanics ready to go anywhere to repair damaged ships of the United Nations.

TRANS-ATLANTIC CHAT

The delegates expressed their international solidarity in a demonstration for the heroic defenders of Stalingrad, and in their reception of the trans-Atlantic broadcast between Pres. John Green and David Kirkwood, British Labor M.P., and the speech of New Zealand Minister Walter Nash.

Kirkwood and Green once worked together in a Scottish shipyard, and in the course of the broadcast Green urged "links that will endure" between British and American labor, and "getting together with the great Russian trade union movement."

Later Green spoke over NBC's national network on the CIO Labor for Victory program, stressing the win-the-war activities of his union and urging an end to absenteeism and all other obstacles to maximum war production.

HAYWOOD STIRS CROWD

Director Allan Haywood represented the national CIO at the convention, in a stirring speech for all-out war effort. He urged an intensified drive to organize southern shipyards.

The election of the union's executive board was featured by a demonstration against any form of anti-Negro discrimination, when Richard Carter, a Negro from Bay City, Mich., was elected an alternate member.

Other members of the new executive board are Thomas Adkins, San Pedro; Ross Blood, Camden; John Grogan, Hoboken; William Jones, Kearney, N. J., all re-elected; and William Pommerer, Camden; Herbert Moyer, Philadelphia; Jerry Millen, River Rouge; Irving Velson, Brooklyn; James Flaherty, Portland, Me.; and Herman Fornoff, Baltimore.

Disruptive efforts of Trotzkyites were denounced in a speech by President Green and in a unanimously adopted resolution which condemned "the traitorous fifth-column activity and propaganda of this irresponsible gang" and asked the government to investigate and eliminate them "just as other Nazi agents."

Among prominent speakers addressing the convention were Pres. Jos. Curran of the National Maritime Union, Asst. Navy Secretary Ralph Bard, and Mayor LaGuardia, New York.

Every tanker sunk last spring in the Axis submarine drive along the Atlantic Coast cost us enough gasoline to drive 13,000 cars from New York to San Francisco.

Shoe Union Doubles Size In Three Years

By HORACE DAVIS

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 3—The United Shoe Workers of America has doubled its membership since the last convention and is in the best condition in its history, said President Frank R. McGrath. The union's third convention opens here Oct. 5.

Since the last convention, held in 1939, the shoe international has penetrated the South, and conducted successful organization campaigns in every part of the country, McGrath's report emphasized.

The CIO has run a special campaign for the USWA in the plants of the huge International Shoe Co. and the Brown Shoe Co., which campaign still continues. Both companies signed contracts with the union early this year.

Calling for the establishment of a new minimum of 60 cents per hour in the shoe industry through executive order, McGrath pointed to the increasing of substandard wages as the "forgotten point" of the President's 7-point anti-inflation program, which he urged the delegates to back strongly.

The time has come for setting up a joint labor-management-government committee to work out a program of production for the shoe industry, in McGrath's view.

"I feel safe in stating," he continued, "that had labor been given an opportunity to contribute to the proper reorganization of the industry for war production, there would not now be so much confusion in the industry."

LAUDS MURRAY

Paying glowing tribute to the leadership of Philip Murray, McGrath said that Murray had "fought against more obstacles than an ordinary man could overcome in four average lives . . . American workers fully trust their future economic lives in his capable hands."

Several proposals for revising the constitution were before the delegates, including one to elect the national officers at the convention instead of by referendum as at present.

Oil Drive At Standard To Continue

By T. K. HEDRICK

Fort Worth, Tex., Oct. 3— Another year of increased effort to organize the nation's greatest monopoly, Standard Oil, was voted by the Thirteenth National Convention of the CIO Oil Workers International Union.

In a stirring convention that closed Sept. 25, the OWIU-CIO instructed its officers to reach an agreement with the National CIO at the Boston convention to renew the contract under which the two organizations have been conducting the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign under the directorship of Edwin S. Smith.

CHANGE FINANCING

The program adopted by the convention dropped the 50 cent per month assessment voted a year ago, but provided for a continuation of diversion of International union funds, which with money from the National CIO, is to support the drive to organize the Rockefeller empire.

Resolutions adopted by the convention included a call for an immediate Second Front in Western Europe; an end to discrimination against Negroes; and an appeal for the purchase of war bonds and stamps. Another resolution paid high tribute to the CIO National Maritime Union and indorsed the NMU drive to organize the tankermen of Standard Oil.

Speed War Drive, Asks Missouri CIO

By C. L. LEATHWOOD

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 3—Speeding up of war production and preservation of democratic liberties during wartime were called for at the convention of the Missouri CIO Industrial Union Council held here Sept. 26-27.

It was a "win-the-war" affair from start to finish, with more than half the resolutions passed dealing with the war.

James B. Carey, national CIO secretary and John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils both spoke at the convention.

BACK CIO POLICIES

Delegates voted hearty approval of the policies of CIO President Philip Murray and endorsed the newly organized United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers. The convention also voted unanimously to make the St. Louis Union Press the official organ of the State Council.

The following officers were elected:

Lloyd McBride of the United Steelworkers of America, state chairman; James Davis, United Automobile Workers, secretary; Joseph Applebaum, Gas Workers, vice president; and George Seiler, United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, financial secretary. All are residents of St. Louis.

CIO Men Pledge 10% for Bonds

North Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 3—Workers at the American Brake Shoe and Foundry Co. plant claim they're the first of the corporation's employes to pledge ten per cent of their income for war bonds.

Local 1961 of the United Steelworkers started off with 100 per cent support for voluntary payroll deductions last February and have averaged a "bond checkoff" of about eight per cent of the total payroll. On Sept. 8 every man in the factory pledged ten per cent of his income for bonds.

Poll Tax Bill Needs Labor Aid

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—Victory in the first round on the anti-poll tax bill, won with the securing of the 218th signature to the petition for House action on the bill, needs intensive backing up by labor and all win-the-war forces before the measure is finally passed.

This was pointed out here by the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax which has coordinated the struggle for the Geyer-Pepper bill, and by the Natl. Negro Congress, which also led in the campaign.

MANY DANGERS

"There is danger that the bill will be lost by default," the Natl. Committee said. "Poll tax Congressmen will be in Washington en masse to vote against the bill.

"If there are not enough friends of democracy among the Congressmen on the floor for the vote, if Congressmen choose to be home campaigning with lip-service to democracy instead of in the House voting for democracy, the bill may be lost."

URGE CANVASS

A nationwide house-to-house canvass to round up demands for an early and favorable vote by Congressmen on the House bill and for a favorable Senate Judiciary Committee report and a Senate vote on the Pepper bill were urged by the Natl. Negro Congress in a release to all affiliated organizations.

"We have got to win the fight to pass this victory legislation before the life of the present Congress expires Jan. 1, less than three months from now," the Negro Congress pointed out.

Earliest possible date for House consideration of the Geyer bill is Oct. 12, when it can be brought up on request of any Congressman who has signed the discharge petition. The Senate version is still in Committee.

Ask Railroads Grant 20c Pay Hike

Chicago, Oct. 3—The CIO United Transport Service Employes of America this week formally placed before all railroad companies with which it has contracts a demand for a 20c-an-hour increase for dining car employes, train and station porters and Pullman laundry employes. Also requested was a union maintenance clause.

Similar demands have been placed before the nation's railroads by the independent operating men's brotherhoods, all of which are unaffiliated.

The UTSEA, which affiliated with the CIO a few months ago, is collective bargaining agency for over 90% of the nation's station porters and for a large group of dining car employes and train porters.

HIT RACE BIAS

In making its request for the union shop, the CIO affiliate pointed out it is "the only labor organization operating under the Railway Labor Act, as amended in 1934, which is in compliance with the President's Executive Order 8802 forbidding racial discrimination, thereby extending to Negroes and whites alike full and complete membership."

The UTSEA also asked the rail companies to refuse union security provisions to any other union which denies membership to Negroes on an equal basis with white employes.

Get a Microscope For 'Strike Wave'

Washington, Oct. 3 — Man-days lost from war production by strikes in August were only 9/100 of 1% of total man-days worked, according to figures released by the War Labor Board. While the number of strikes in progress during the month rose from 222 to 229, the number of men involved dropped from 80,722 to 79,414, the board said.

TUNE IN FOR A REAL SHOW!

CIO Continues Drive For 'V' Tax Bill As Tories Squirm

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—Renewed CIO opposition to the so-called "victory tax" and to a new wrinkle in the tax bill that would freeze social security at present levels was expressed by Pres. Murray in a letter to Senator Walter F. George, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

"It is the considered judgment of the CIO that these two items endanger the present social security program and eliminate any chance of extending it in accordance with the recommendations that have been made by the President of the United States to Congress," Murray wrote.

In England, Murray pointed out, "the social security program has been broadened and extended. It was recognized at an early date that as part of the war program it is essential to afford greater protection to the workers in relation to those matters covered by social security.

"It would be most unfortunate if in this country we should follow precisely the opposite path."

URGE EXTENSION

American workers are ready for any step necessary to winning the war, Murray said, adding that extension of social security was a necessary part of the war program. The "victory tax," which lays a straight five per cent levy on all gross incomes above $624 a year, was condemned as a step away from the win-the-war program.

Instead, Murray urged, we should make a real move toward extending social security and toward formulating a tax bill that would enable such extension to be carried out.

Insurance Men In Michigan Vote for CIO

Detroit, Oct. 3—Agents of the Prudential Insurance Company in Michigan voted 320 to 188 for the United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO, in a statewide NLRB election.

Some 508 out of 556 Pru agents in Detroit, Saginaw, Flint and other Michigan cities cast their votes in the election.

The union won its first victory in an election of 4,000 New York State Pru men last spring. About 1,600 agents in New Jersey are set to vote in a labor board election on October 22, and petitions for two more state elections have been filed in Massachusetts and Washington.

German-Americans Help Russian Relief

Cleveland, Oct. 3—A group of 350 persons of German origin contributed $200 to the Russian War Relief at a film showing at the Eintracht Farm near Strongsville, O., and voted unanimously to send a letter to President Roosevelt pledging their full support to the war effort.

CIO Leaders Ask:

'Mobilize, Don't Draft Manpower'

Washington, Oct. 3—Two CIO vice-presidents, Joseph Curran of the seamen and R. J. Thomas of the auto workers, were on the air this week-end in coast-to-coast discussions of the pressing manpower mobilization problem.

Speaking over the American Forum of the Air Sunday evening, Curran pointed to the need for full mobilization of present manpower resources before taking action through a national compulsory service act.

Actions recommended by Curran included full employment of women, an end to discrimination against Negro workers, a full training program, adequate day care for children of working women, extension of union hiring and removal of wage and other inequalities leading to acute manpower shortages in certain industries.

FREEZING NOT NEEDED

"Job freezing" or similar coercive devices are not needed, Thomas stressed, since we have not "yet exhausted democratic possibilities; not used efficiently the available manpower. It is therefore premature to urge legislative freezing or dictatorial assignment of labor to specified jobs or areas." Thomas urged a program of full use of available manpower similar to that urged by Curran.

Both speakers emphasized the need for greater planning to end production bottlenecks and to enable the nation to know where and in what amounts manpower is needed.

Curran made a strong plea for an immediate second front in Europe against Hitler, pointing out that labor faces every question in this war—including the manpower question—"with one thought in mind—how will it help in bringing an early victory?"

'Farm' Bloc Still Fights Price Control

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 2—A battered but still kicking "farm bloc" took a licking on the price stabilization bill this week, when the Senate finally voted 82-0 for passage of the bill containing the administration's compromise farm price amendment.

The so-called "farm bloc," which represents corporation farmers rather than real dirt-farmers, and includes appeasement leaders in its ranks, was beaten in the primary attempt to scuttle the whole food price control set-up, but not before it had delayed passage of the vital measure up to the last minute of President Roosevelt's Oct. 1 deadline.

BILL GIVES LEEWAY

The bill as it now stands provides administrative leeway in fixing farm prices, since it instructs the government to take labor costs since Jan. 1, 1941 into consideration and also adds a proviso saying that "adequate weighting shall be given to labor" in fixing prices.

This in effect puts the issue up to the administration, and is a victory over the original "farm bloc" amendment that would have made consideration of labor costs in farm price fixing mandatory.

During the debate, which was marked by bitter-end opposition to the whole idea of price control from many Senators, it was repeatedly pointed out that the Thomas amendment would have increased food costs by at least four billion dollars in a year, adding as much as 30 percent to some basic items in the workers' food budget.

FARM PRICES UP

This fact, plus the further fact that farm prices have already advanced more than enough to take care of increased farm labor costs since Jan. 1, 1941, was cited in the debate and by economists and labor people in opposing the bloc's attempted grab at inflationary prices.

CIO IN FIGHT

Labor opposition to the attempted grab was led by the CIO, during which President Murray testified against the proposed amendment and set forth CIO policy upholding adequate price control and the whole of the President's seven-point win-the-war economic program.

On the wage angle, the bill as it stands provides that wages can be adjusted above the original Sept. 15, 1942 level, if the President finds it "necessary to aid in the effective prosecution of the war." An attempt by Sen. Ball of Minnesota to dub in a wage freezing proposal was defeated by the decisive vote of 69 to 12.

A positive amendment to forbid any discrimination on race, creed or color lines in the administration of any benefits under the act and in the setting up of rationing and price fixing boards was defeated twice by voice vote, the Senators refusing to put themselves on record. This amendment was offered by Sens. Tunnell of Del. and Wiley of Wis. Sen. Brown, sponsor of the original bill, voted for it, as did a number of other administration backers.

Senator Barkley, who led the administration fight on the bill, made a moving speech in which he compared the shameful spectacle of members of the Senate afraid to face "political popguns" while American troops were fighting the enemy and while the Soviet Army held off the Nazis at Stalingrad.

WORKING FARMERS COMMENT

Sharp comment came from the National Farmers Union, which represents working farmers as opposed to the corporate type represented by the heads of the Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange.

"Farmers and labor have come across in the public interest," the Farmers Union said. "This leaves one point to go in the President's program. Let's have the tax bill with the President's specific recommendations so that we can take another step toward parity of sacrifice."

Observers here pointed out that the bill as passed throws the food price problem to the administration, which can use considerable discretion under the terms of the compromise amendment. This, they added, in turn throws the problem to labor, which will have to strengthen the administration's hand in resisting pressure for upward revisions.

Close Labor, Consumer Ties Urged

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 3—Consumer cooperatives, free farm organizations and labor unions are "the first bulwarks of our American democracy and our American liberties against the black tide of bitter reaction which seems at times to be engulfing the entire world," John Brophy, CIO council director, this week told the annual convention of the Cooperative League of the U. S. A.

Extending the warm greetings of the CIO to the organized consumer movement, Brophy recalled that "the CIO has gone on record in convention after convention in support of the consumer cooperative movement, and it is our hope that the ties between organized labor and organized consumers will be drawn closer year by year."

The CIO leader spoke of the eventual need for adoption of the Murray Council Plan for democratic management of industry and noted that the rapid growth of co-ops holds "high promise . . . for effective social control over the distributive industries."

The conference heard reports of increasing development throughout the U. S., a plea for a strong consumer movement to help keep prices down, and a summary of the English co-op experience by Neal Beaton, Scottish consumer leader.

Your Ballot's A Bullet

Mr. Labor Voter, if you were one of the millions of voters who stayed away from the recent primary polls, your unused ballot was cast:

For tax legislation to soak the poor and spare the rich.

For labor-baiting politics-as-usual, and

For countless other obstructions to our victory effort.

Hitler is counting on you to be one of the twenty million who can vote but won't in the November elections, according to Gallup poll estimates. He wants you to believe the elections don't matter. Don't let him kid you.

And don't be kidded by candidates who say they're for winning the war (they all do) but whose record is one of fighting labor more than of fighting Hitler; of obstructing the seven-point program; and of constant destructive sniping at the war leadership of our Commander-in-Chief.

Mr. Labor Voter, your vote COUNTS whether you use it or not. If you don't register and vote, it counts for everything Hitler wants. If you register and vote for real win-the-war candidates, your vote will count for national unity and all-out democratic war effort, through election of a victory Congress.

You can donate your ballot to Hitler, by not using it yourself; or you can use it as a bullet to destroy him. It's up to you.

Be sure to register! Be sure to vote!

What Is NAM Up To?

When the anti-labor crowd goes into one of its periodical union-busting campaigns, it usually prepares the way with a barrage of propaganda about strikes—whether there are any strikes to speak of or not.

Though strikes have virtually disappeared since Pearl Harbor, and the unions themselves are doing more to prevent and end minor unauthorized stoppages than any other agency, the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers has just issued a pamphlet attempting to inflate the strike bogey again.

Chairman Davis of the War Labor Board has effectively exploded the ridiculous NAM claims. "In the first quarter of this year," he says, "the loss in man-hours in proportion to the man-hours worked in war industries was 0.06 per cent. That means, for each man, about one day lost in 16 years.

"In April it rose to the appalling figure of 0.08 per cent and in August to 0.09 per cent. Now those are the accurate figures and they are referred to as an increase of 700 per cent in strikes by the NAM!"

Labor is less concerned with lying propaganda that eventually falls of its own weight than it is with the underlying purposes of the propagandists. Is the NAM plotting another anti-labor legislative drive behind the present barrage?

If so, it is playing Hitler's game. For nothing could be more disruptive of our national unity than such a selfish attack at this time on the movement which is doing most of all to boost our war production.

Giving To Win

The spirit of national unity for victory is reflected in the agreement just announced for national labor cooperation in this year's community war chest drives.

The agreement has been signed by both CIO and AFL war relief committees with Community Chests and Councils, Inc., so that one united drive may bring in the maximum results.

Labor representation is recommended in all local war chest committees, and unions will be given credit along with management for industrial contributions. Money raised will be allocated to war relief for the United Nations as well as for local community needs.

"CIO will not fail the nation's need on any front," says Pres. Philip Murray, in a call for all-out participation in the War Chest drive through the CIO War Relief Committee and local chests.

CIO unions throughout the country will be proud to take the lead, not only in working and fighting but also in giving for victory.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

"We are still flexing our imaginary muscles and shouting: 'Wait 'till I catch that lug who hit me when I wasn't looking!'

"We had better stop for a moment and look in a flat mirror, to see if our gym trunks fit us."

This was one of a dozen darts recently shot by Asst. Navy Secretary Ralph Bard to puncture American war complacency.

If we follow his advice, we'll find in many ways we're not even stripped to ill-fitting gym trunks for this war, but are going into it in zoot suits with a drape shape.

★ ★ ★

For instance, 10,000,000 American citizens of poll-tax states are still deprived of voice and vote in the conduct of this people's war to defend democracy and the right of self-government.

As a result, poll-tax states send to Congress many misrepresentatives who kick labor a dozen times for each shake of their fists in the vague direction of Hitler.

★ ★ ★

And it isn't only the poll-tax states. The shameful mishandling of the President's seven-point program reveals all-too-many politicians from all parts who are more concerned with preserving the paunches of the over-stuffed than with building the muscles and fighting stamina of the whole nation.

Their idea of war taxation is to make the people give till it hurts the little fellow who squawks least.

They are more worried about the claws of the fat cats who finance their election campaigns than about the enemy's bombing planes.

★ ★ ★

We are told it is the "farm bloc" that has been blocking the President's program to stabilize the cost of living.

If these be farmers, they do their digging in bankers' tills and their barn is the U. S. Chamber of Commerce building in Washington.

Look through the list of Congressmen who made up the so-called farm bloc vote against the President's program. You will find in it city tories who don't know a cow from the bull they shoot.

You will find "friends of the farmers" who have voted consistently against the Farm Security Administration, against farm tenant aid, against the agriculture appropriation and against nearly every other measure to aid the great majority of the real toilers of the countryside.

And, after a little more inspection, you won't be surprised to know that the Chamber of Commerce actually joined with the big business farm bosses to plan this whole Congressional drive.

If you get around among the men and women who are actually working and fighting for victory—in the factory, on the farm, in civil defense, in the armed forces—you will find more knowledge of what this war is about than around a hundred conference tables in Washington and Wall Street.

But there is still too much politics-as-usual, too much business-as-usual, too much appeasement and even defeatism in high financial and political circles.

If the few are to be made to toe the line in this war of the many, if this country is to strip for action for an all-out people's war, it's the people themselves who must do the job.

One of the first things is to shuck the zoot suit off Congress and put it in a victory suit.

Popular pressure has forced the anti-poll tax bill to the floor of the House, by petition. No parliamentary tricks must be allowed to prevent a vote. Every Congressman should be urged to vote for democracy and victory by abolishing the poll-tax stumbling block. And all Senators should be urged to get the Pepper anti-poll tax bill out of the committee and secure its passage.

The next opportunity for the people to have their say for the people's war is the coming elections. And here the picture is none too good. The Gallup poll reports widespread election apathy. It estimates 20 million fewer will vote this year than in 1940.

Even worse, it estimates only 45 per cent of eligible voters in the lower income groups will vote, as against 54 per cent in the middle and 62 per cent in the upper economic groups.

It's going to be chiefly up to labor to change this picture before elections. It's not enough for the common people to work and fight for victory. They must also keep their eyes on Congress and government, clean out the slackers, obstructers and appeasers, and elect a Congress that will go all-out for victory behind our Commander-in-Chief.

WATCH CONGRESS!

THIS WEEK—and the next week and the week after that—are the most critical in the history of Congress and our country.

Congress is debating and acting on three major issues that run to the heart of our country's war for survival. These are:

1. The farm price stabilization bill to hold living costs down to levels that will prevent inflation.

2. The tax bill, which must be a victory tax bill, based on war needs and on ability to pay.

3. The poll tax repeal bill, which must be passed to bring millions of Negro and white citizens into full citizenship and full participation in the war.

These three measures are absolutely essential to an all-out war and victory drive.

The first two—price stabilization and the tax bill—are basic parts of President Roosevelt's seven-point victory economy program. They are necessary to gear the country's economy to all-out war. Without these two points—enacted as parts of the entire victory program — we are faced with inflation.

So far, a handful of wilful men in Congress has tried very hard, and with considerable success, to prevent constructive action on these two points. The same handful has tried, and has succeeded over three years, in blocking action on poll-tax repeal.

I. Price Stabilization

In the Senate, the so-called "farm bloc" (which doesn't represent the working farmers) has tried to wreck the nation's economy by insisting on raising the parity level of farm prices to 112 per cent. This attempt was made despite repeated warnings from the President, from the CIO, and from genuine farmer organizations that it would drive food prices to dizzy levels.

The vote in the Senate on the "compromise" plan is a setback for these anti-victory forces. At the same time, the very fact that this debate could go on for days—right up to the October 1 deadline set by the President—is a reflection of the strength of these elements in Congress that put minority interests far ahead of the interests of the nation at war.

The bill as passed allows for leeway in fixing farm prices and instructs the government to take farm labor costs and other factors into consideration. In other words, farm prices can be raised above parity.

It is labor's job, in the cause of preventing runaway food prices, to see that the government's hand is strengthened in its policy of holding these prices down.

The "farm bloc" (which represents only the corporation farmers) has been set back. It is still very much alive and capable of further damage. Workers must not be deceived by names. The "farm bloc" has been consistently opposed by real working farmers—notably the National Farmers Union and sections of the Farm Bureau Federation. These real farmers ask nothing more than parity, because they know inflated farm prices hurt the war effort and the farmers themselves.

II. The Tax Program

In both House and Senate, a minority of wilful men has so far succeeded in sabotaging the 1942 tax program.

The bill as at present written dodges every duty laid on Congress by the needs of the war. It raises taxes on low incomes and lowers them on profits and on high incomes. It falls short of the minimum revenue needs outlined by the Treasury. It leaves the door wide open for a sales tax.

In fact, a few weeks ago the Senate Finance Committee added a new soak-the-poor device—the mis-named "victory tax" that is really a sales tax under a false patriotic covering.

The tax bill is at the heart of the seven-point victory program, as is the stabilization bill. It must be a victory tax bill, to raise the money we need for war by taxing those able to pay and avoiding the abyss of inflation.

There is still time to make the 1942 tax bill an instrument of victory. Write, wire your two senators demanding an adequate tax bill based on ability to pay and on the needs of our country's war for survival.

III. Repeal of Poll Tax

The poll-tax repeal bill may not seem to have much to do with gearing our country's resources to all-out war.

But poll-tax repeal is also at the heart of our victory drive. Today, millions of Negro and white workers and farmers who want to help their country's war are unable to, because they can't vote.

Since they can't vote, they have to sit back year after year and see the poll-tax bloc in House and Senate misrepresent them. This bloc is the center of organized opposition to the President's seven-point program today, just as it has always been the center of organized labor-baiting and organized opposition to every piece of labor legislation ever presented or enacted.

Repeal of the poll tax will do more than restore citizenship to millions of Americans. It will enable them to take their place with their fellow-Americans in their country's war for survival. It will enable them to elect representatives who will represent the people, who will back our Commander-in-Chief, who will put an end to poll tax organized disruption of the victory drive.

All Americans won a real victory when the poll-tax repeal bill petition was finally signed by the necessary 218 Representatives. That victory must be followed up by swift and sustained action by all labor and all anti-Axis Americans.

The poll-tax bill can reach the House floor Oct. 12. We must prevent trickery and sabotage when it does. We must insist that no technical trickery be allowed to keep it off the floor. We must insist that our Congressmen be present when the bill comes up and vote for its repeal.

The poll-tax repeal bill is also before the Senate. Our job there is to get it out of the committee and insist that no filibuster or other technical trickery be allowed to sabotage its immediate passage.

Write, wire to your Congressman at once. Demand that the poll-tax repeal bill come on the floor of the House at the earliest chance—Oct. 12. Demand that your Congressman be present and vote for the bill.

Write, wire to your two Senators. Demand that the Senate version of the bill be brought out of committee at once. Demand that no filibuster or other parliamentary trick be allowed to prevent its passage.

The poll-tax bill is at the heart of the victory drive. It must be passed.

IV. Congress Must Act

The CIO has many times urged its members and all workers to take action on national questions before Congress and the government. Action now is more urgent than ever before. Our country is at war with the strongest enemies we have ever faced. It will take all our strength to win. Our strength comes from a united, democratic nation fully geared to victory.

The seven-point program and poll-tax repeal are vital parts of our victory drive. It is up to labor to put this victory program in action now. It is the duty of Congress to represent the people. It is our duty to make Congress hear and act upon the things our people demand. The course of the war and our future as a nation and a people depend on us. We must act, and act now.

CIO, Community Chests In Alliance To Spur Relief Fund Drives

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—Participation of the CIO nationally in the War Chest drive through the National CIO War Relief Committee has been warmly welcomed by community War Chest officials.

Last week CIO President Murray and AFL President Green announced that the two great labor organizations have joined forces with community war chests to encourage substantial labor contributions to the nation's war chests.

Such cooperation between organized labor and American philanthropy occurs on a national basis for the first time in the history of either, their statement said. The program is sponsored by each of the national and international unions affiliated with the CIO and the AFL, but will be carried out locally in accord with plans developed in each community between the war chest and the unions.

SET PROCEDURE

Contributions will go directly to local war chests to be distributed between local community needs, war relief for the British, Chinese, Greeks, Russians, Dutch, Poles and other allied peoples, recreation for prisoners of war, a social hygiene program in defense communities and the United Service Organizations.

An agreement to this effect has been signed by Community Chests and Councils, Inc., the National CIO War Relief Committee, of which Irving Abramson, president of the New Jersey State Industrial Council, is the chairman, and the United Nations Relief Committee of the AFL, headed by Matthew Woll, vice president of the AFL.

VOICE FOR LABOR

The agreement recommends that labor be represented on local boards of directors of war chests and local allocation committees. Labor representatives will take the leadership in campaign solicitation among employes who are members of the two unions and will cooperate with management in making solicitation within plants and business establishments, the announcement said. Credit for industrial contributions will be given by name to the local union, an innovation in this year's campaigns.

Murray and Green both have informed the affiliated unions of this agreement.

Murray said, "This year we must support with determination the war needs of our allies-in-arms in addition to the usual community services. Particularly we are supporting the campaigns in those far-sighted communities where war chests are established to meet all these needs in a single drive.

MINIMUM EXPENSE

"The overhead costs and the losses of time and energy are cut to the minimum when we give once for all through the National CIO War Relief Committee and the War Chests. . . .

"Therefore I endorse the war chest campaigns, and urge your all-out participation through the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief."

News of the arrangement has been warmly welcomed by community War Chest officials.

Gov. Van Wagoner of Michigan wrote, "When the men and women of Michigan on our industrial front, who make the guns, planes and tanks for our Armed Forces, pledge themselves to donate one hour's pay a month through the CIO War Relief for the benefit of our fighting men and allies, I can only express a feeling of profound gratitude for such help."

Unions Back Democrats In Pennsy

Harrisburg, Pa., Oct. 3—F. Clair Ross, Democratic candidate for governor, has received the endorsement of the state Labor's Non-Partisan League, to which many CIO and AFL unions are affiliated.

A statement signed by P. T. Fagan, United Mine Workers district leader and long-time supporter of CIO President Murray, and by Treas. Lester Thomas, declared:

"Your enemies, the country's enemies, viciously try to whip up war hysteria to destroy the unions, wreck the unity of common action, sabotage production in their greed for blood-stained profits, soak the poor with taxes and destroy morale.

"Pennsylvania labor accepts the challenge."

Ohio CIO Program Aims at Election Day Victories

COLUMBUS, OHIO, Oct. 3—An intensive campaign to get out the vote for all win-the-war and pro-labor candidates has been inaugurated by the Ohio Industrial Union Council.

In a letter to all affiliated locals, Council Pres. Jack Kroll urged a three-point program:

1. A Political Action Committee in every local and shop to see that all eligible voters are registered.

2. A Joint Labor Conference in every city to bring together CIO, AFL and independent unions, farm groups and other civic organizations.

3. Concrete plans for canvassing neighborhoods on a house-to-house basis, explaining the issues to voters and making sure that they turn out at the polls on election day.

The Council has endorsed John McSweeney, Democrat, for governor; Thomas Duffy for Supreme Court Judge; Stephan Young for Congressman-at-Large; and candidates in 17 of the state's 22 Congressional districts.

Joint Labor Group Formed In Iowa

Des Moines, Ia., Oct. 3—(FP)—One hundred representatives of CIO and AFL unions, farmers and professional groups formed the Iowa Committee for United Liberal Action, which will seek to elect progressive, win-the-war candidates this fall.

Committee chairman is Gus Erickson, CIO, of Des Moines. W. M. Shaw, Des Moines, is vice-chairman, and Mrs. George Buresch, Cedar Rapids, is secretary.

Expressing a belief that "the fate not only of our American traditions but the entire fate of civilization" may depend on the elections, the committee voted to mobilize workers and liberals for an intensive campaign."

South's Civic Leaders, Workers Hear Murray

By HOWARD McCARTNEY

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 3—Labor in America cannot respond to the fullest extent in war production unless it is organized into well-concentrated and genuine trade unions, Philip Murray, president of the CIO, declared at a huge mass meeting here.

"Labor is already doing a mighty job," he said. "Labor is baring its breast in every mill, mine and factory to produce the goods our boys need on the fighting fronts."

"But labor must be organized into a well-concentrated union if it is to produce in the most efficient manner possible."

BIGGEST MEETING

President Murray was guest of honor at the largest labor mass meeting ever held in Georgia. On the platform were the most important people in every phase of activity here and in the audience were more than 3,500 people from this district.

They listened to Murray for the first time and heard at first-hand what the aims of CIO are and how CIO unions are participating in an all-out effort to win the war.

They heard in detail of the various CIO plans throughout the mass-production industries formulated to increase vital war production. They were told that CIO, with its 5,000,000 members and 15,000,000 dependents — one-sixth of the nation's population—was solidly behind the war program of President Roosevelt.

PRAISED BY PAPERS

Atlanta newspapers welcomed Murray to the southern city. The Constitution described him as "a man who has served not only his organization, but the nation, well." The Journal editorially urged Atlantans to hear Murray's talk and added that "labor should not be judged by those who misrepresent it, but by those who, like him, have preached honesty and integrity in a day's work and the sanctity of a contract, as well as higher wages and better working conditions."

The CIO leader was roundly applauded when, early in his speech, he voiced his "consistent support" of Pres. Roosevelt. Acknowledging that he has had criticisms and disagreements at various times with the Chief Executive, Murray added:

"But I have always left him believing he's the greatest man this country has in public life today."

CIO's VITAL PART

"CIO is playing a vital part in the war program in our country's affairs," Murray said. "Two years ago CIO was considered by some people to be a reprehensible and subversive organization. But most of these people have now come to recognize that CIO is merely a cross-section of the American people."

"The participation of CIO in every phase of the war program and government activity indicates a trend in the nation. Our government and its people recognize the majesty of labor.

"The country must recognize that if we are to win the war, America must win with the assistance and support of labor. Labor is going to win the war because we recognize and understand that this is labor's war. All of the rights to which labor adheres are involved in this great struggle.

LABOR RESPONDS

"Labor is already doing a mighty job. But labor must be organized into well-concentrated unions if it is to do the job in the most efficient manner."

Appearance of Pres. Murray in Atlanta, and the welcome he was given, is interpreted by CIO leaders in the South as the first step leading to complete organization of Southern workers.

Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta "Constitution," introduced Murray at the mass meeting. Prior to his address at the Atlanta City Hall, Murray addressed delegates to the Georgia CIO Industrial Union Council at the Ansley Hotel, in Atlanta.

Rev. McNamara sketched the details of the CIO's industrial council plan as an example of the contributions being made by CIO to the war effort, and declared that:

"When the peace is won for America and industry is 'democratized' we will thank Mr. Murray and the CIO for leading the way."

CIO Sweeps Georgia Poll

Altanta, Oct. 3—The CIO United Steelworkers of America won an important NLRB election victory here this week, gaining 314 votes at the Murray Co. plant to only 53 opposed.

W. H. Crawford, regional director for the USA-CIO, said the appearance of CIO Pres. Murray in Atlanta last Sunday undoubtedly helped to widen the margin of victory.

"The favorable publicity the CIO received as a result of Pres. Murray's speech was in a large measure responsible for this outstanding victory," he declared.

Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The importance of CIO auxiliary work on price control and rationing was stressed by CIO speakers at the national convention of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Oil Workers International Union, held last week in conjunction with the Union Convention at Fort Worth, Tex. "Auxiliary women should represent the OWIU and the CIO on rationing boards, and on Civilian Defense and other committees, where Labor's point of view must be brought out," said O. A. Knight, president of the International, in addressing the auxiliary delegates.

"Rationing boards are among our most powerful governing bodies during this war period, and there is an executive order, from Washington which says each board must have on it a representative of organized labor. But we find many boards ignoring this order. So it is up to you ladies to help us correct this situation, by yourselves, as accredited representatives of labor, becoming members of these boards."

James Carey, secretary of the CIO and chairman of the CIO committee on Auxiliaries, spoke on the first day of the convention. He urged participation by the women on ration boards and in civic life.

GET BUYING POINTERS

Mrs. Ethel O. Adair, OPA Consumer Representative at Dallas, gave the delegates pointers on how to help in enforcement of price control. "Women must refuse to buy from merchants who do not post ceiling prices, or who lower quality, and must report these infractions of the law to the proper authorities. Any investigation must start with the consumer."

Enthusiastic support of President Roosevelt and his 7-point economic program was promised by the women in one of their resolutions. They applauded him for his promise of militant action in his Labor Day speech. Another resolution urged members to buy bonds to the full extent of their ability. The opening of a second front immediately in Western Europe was called for in a resolution passed by the union convention and concurred in by the auxiliary.

Mrs. A. J. Neal of Houston, Tex., will head the Oil Workers' International Union Ladies' Auxiliary for the next year. Other officers named were: Mrs. Leo Fullerton, Pasadena, Tex., first vice-president; Mrs. William M. Wiles, Ponca City, Okla., second vice-president; Mrs. Beldon W. Todd, Houston, Tex., secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Frances Roberts, Hammond, Ind., recording secretary, and Mrs. W. E. Rogers, Houston, historian.

"MARKET BASKET" PLAN

The Chicago Auxiliary of the Transport Service Employes of the CIO has adopted price checking as its central activity. The "Market Basket" plan calls for turning women's shopping to practical union advantages.

The plan calls for (1) understanding price ceilings in full; (2) knowing laws that control health in stores; (3) reporting violations to their proper sources.

The women will make a daily record of their purchases as to price and quality. They will report violations of price ceilings to their war price and rationing boards. And they expect quick action on complaints, since the National President of their union serves on the Chicago board.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Frank Bender, CIO regional director in Baltimore, reports that the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers are doing a real job there. Following the Labor Day ship launching at the Bethlehem yards, more than 15,000 new members have signed up and paid initiation fees and dues. This is a remarkable achievement and is adding impetus to the organizing drive in the Glenn Martin Aircraft plant, where CIO is conducting a drive. We find again that the AFL Machinists are playing their old role of coming in when the drive is well under way for the purpose of creating confusion; collaborating with company-union, etc.

The CIO in Baltimore has grown by leaps and bounds. Success in organization among auto, steel, shipbuilding and clothing industries, has attracted the attention of all the workers in that city.

I had the pleasure of attending the convention of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers held in New York last week and it was a typical CIO convention; enthusiasm ran high. Their union has made remarkable growth and pledged confidence in their leadership by re-electing them. John Green is president and Philip Van Gelder, secretary-treasurer. They are planning to intensify organizing activities and have selected Brother Gallagher for this purpose. The CIO will cooperate with them in every way in completing the job of organizing the shipbuilders. These workers are determined to turn out ships for the United Nations in a manner that Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito cannot compete with.

Murray In Georgia

President Murray attended the Georgia State Industrial Union Convention in Atlanta. His presence there was appreciated by the workers and the public, in general. He addressed a large mass meeting and the editorial comment on his talk and the program he advocated commend him for his statesmanship. It is felt by all that a great amount of goodwill came from the visit there. As Lucy Randolph Mason, Public Relations Representative for the South says, "Mr. Murray's visit to Atlanta was a glorious success."

President Murray was introduced by Ralph McGill, editor, Atlanta Constitution. Rev. John Moore Walker, pastor, St. Lukes Episcopal Church and bishop-elect of the Diocese of North Georgia, gave the benediction. The chairman of the meeting was CIO Regional Director Charles H. Gillman. Many other dignitaries representing all walks of life were platform guests.

Edward McCrone, CIO sub-regional director in Connecticut, reports winning an election among the employes at the New Haven Quilt and Pad Company in behalf of CIO with a vote of 146 for UPNTWA to 31 for no union.

CIO Regional Director Ernest B. Pugh reports a victory for CIO at the Harris-Woodson Candy Company, Lynchburg, Virginia, with a vote of 53 and no votes against. He advises this plant is shut down by the company on account of no work, but the workers came to the polls nevertheless.

The United Office & Professional Workers won a double-header this week. Prudential agents in the State of Michigan voted 320 for CIO to 188 against. This was the UOPWA's second state-wide election in insurance. Their first was in New York among 4,000 agents. The office employes at United Artists, voted 98 to 37 for UOPWA-CIO.

Leather Workers Win

The United Leather Workers of America, an independent union for Lowell, Mass., which has been in existence for the last 52 years, merged with the International Fur and Leather Workers Union in July, 1942, with a vote of more than two to one. Secretary-Treasurer Isador Piejman assisted the Lowell Leather Workers in their arbitration for a general increase and the board awarded an increase of 7.5c per hour to all employes covered by the agreement effective as of June 14, 1942. The Lowell Leather Workers are now the highest paid calfskin leather workers in the country, averaging approximately $1.09 an hour for more than 500 employes of the American Hide & Leather Company.

CIO Regional Director Ballard of Nebraska advises the conclusion of an agreement with Armour & Company for their egg drying plant in Denison, Iowa, employing 150 people. They received a 10-cent per hour increase, vacation with pay, seniority rights, maintenance clause.

CIO Regional Director Fullerton Fulton of Chicago, reports signing of a contract with the Pioneer Paper Stock Company and LIU 1204-CIO covering approximately 325 members. The contract included increase in wages of seven cents per hour to a maximum of twenty-two cents per hour.

During campaign of organization at this plant 16 workers were fired for union activity and we successfully prosecuted the cases before the NLRB and got these workers reinstated with compensation for all time lost.

White Collar Workers Enter Soviet War Trades

KUIBYSHEV, Oct. 3 (ALN)—Soviet white collar workers are being encouraged by their unions to take training courses and go into war industry, S. Kotlyar, president of the State Office Workers Union of the Central Regions of the USSR, said here this week.

Kotlyar's union has a membership of 260,000 in government offices here and in Moscow, including the State Planning Commission, the Council of People's Commissars and the Commissariats of Food, Light Industry and Social Welfare.

"Many office employes are eager to go to work in factories," Kotlyar said. "One can well sympathize with a person who wants to make with his own hands a mine or a bullet for use against the enemy. The tendency to go to work in industry is very great among all office workers, and our union supports this in every possible way."

The State Office Workers Union, Kotlyar said, notifies its members of factories in need of unskilled labor, arranges their transportation to new jobs, and cooperates with the production unions in providing them with the required skills.

In some cases, while still doing office work, office workers take training courses run jointly by the Office Workers Union and the Armament Workers or the Machine Building Workers. Many office workers are now working on the railways.

EFFICIENCY

To replace union members going into industry, the remaining workers have greatly increased office efficiency and in most cases have doubled and tripled their individual output.

Fight Axis, Not British, Is Plea Of Indian Union

New Delhi, Oct. 3 (ALN)—In a forceful statement issued this week, the Central Provinces Trade Union Council, one of the most important bodies affiliated with the All-India Trades Union Congress, has condemned the use of violence against the British authorities as a means of settling India's political problems. India's fight today, the Council's statement says, must be against the Axis, not against the British.

At the same time, the Council gives strong warning to the British Government that repressive measures, such as the arrest of Congress leaders and the firing upon unarmed crowds by the police, will only drive the nationalist movement underground and still further jeopardize the safety of the country.

Murray Hails Chinese Plant Co-ops

Washington, Oct. 2—Warm greetings to the people of China on the fourth anniversary of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives were cabled by CIO Pres. Murray this week.

"The free peoples of the whole world admire and marvel at the magnificent resistance of the Chinese people to the Japanese invaders, and we in the U. S. in particular know how great is our debt to the Chinese people for their valiant struggle against our common foe," Murray said.

"American labor has a deep interest in the efforts of the Chinese Industrial Cooperatives to produce the goods and supplies which your armies and your population must have to win this war," he added. "We are with you heart and soul in our common struggle to crush Japanese imperialism once and for all."

Similar greetings were sent by Allan S. Haywood, CIO director, and Len De Caux, publicity director. Haywood said: "The American working people represented by the CIO rejoice to know how splendidly the working people of China are straining every effort to produce more and more of the goods and munitions needed for victory."

ORIGIN OF INDUSCO

The Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, known as "Indusco" were set up four years ago as a means of keeping the Chinese armies and people armed and supplied through a myriad of small, cooperative enterprises, and of supplying a livelihood for destitute refugees. The CIO War Relief Committee aids them through funds going to United China Relief.

Today more than 3,000 such co-ops exist, owned and managed by the worker-members themselves. They have proved a tremendous asset in arming the people and in keeping them alive for resistance to the Japanese.

Rap Tin Shipments To Axis

Santiago De Chile, Oct. 3—(ALN)—Salvador Ocampo, sub-secretary of the Chilean Workers Confederation and member of the Congressional Committee investigating Fascist activities, who has recently exposed the shipment of Chilean copper and nitrates to the Axis through Spain and Portugal, this week announced that his committee had obtained information that Bolivian tin is also being shipped to the Axis.

600 TONS SENT

"The Chilean merchant ship Alfonso," Ocampo declared, "recently left the Chilean port Talcahuano with 600 tons of tin and a cargo of Diesel oil, part of which was handed over to another ship on the high seas. As far as the intermediaries in this deal are concerned, I am in a position to give exact data.

"The firm Lehmann and Moiseff and the shipping agents Maura Coll and Company in Buenos Aires regularly import nitrate from Chile and tin from Bolivia and deliver these vital raw materials to Spanish and Portuguese ships leaving for Europe. This traffic is one of the results of our continued diplomatic relations with the Axis."

TIP OFF SUBS

Ocampo named the following ships as participating in the transport of metals from the west coast of South America to Brazilian and Argentinian ports: the Rio Alhue, El Alondra, Rio Dulce, Arica, Arauco and Antofagasta. It was recently revealed that the El Aldecoa, besides carrying tin and nickel, has given the position of Brazilian ships in code to German and Italian submarines.

Rail Unions Condemn AFL Deal

Washington, Oct. 3—The Railroad Brotherhoods have joined with the CIO in urging full representation for all American labor and labor of all the United Nations in win-the-war unity proposals presented to the British Trades Union Congress.

And like the CIO, the Brotherhoods have received the same polite brush-off from Sir Walter Citrine, TUC secretary, who has clung to his original position that the TUC must clear all American overtures it makes—or receives—through the officialdom of the AFL.

According to correspondence now revealed, the four main Brotherhoods, plus an AFL affiliated railway union, cabled Citrine Aug. 6 to point out that the railway unions were separate and independent organizations representing more than a million workers, and that no truly representative international tie-up could leave them out or relegate them to a Class B position.

The Brotherhoods also made it clear to Citrine that they were anxious to work closely with labor of all the United Nations, describing to him: "The sympathetic attitude of the railway brotherhoods in the U. S. and Canada toward the idea of a trade union movement that will link and hold together the workers of the allied countries involved in the present universal war."

'PROVINCE OF AFL'

This drew a reply from Sir Walter on Aug. 12 that the TUC general council had instructed him to say that it "would welcome association of CIO and Railway Brotherhoods with Anglo-American Committee but recognize this is matter within province of AFL who are already aware of council's views . . . council does not wish to be involved in controversy concerning it as they feel this is matter best dealt with by American labor organizations themselves."

Following this, the Brotherhoods cabled to Sir Walter expressing their full support to "an Anglo-American Labor Committee" and reiterating their stand that the AFL did not control their unions. "May we remind you," they cabled, "that except as to the Switchmen's Union of North America (one of the signers of the cable) none of the railway transportation brotherhoods are affiliated with the AFL and that organization is not therefore authorized to speak for or represent us."

CIO ALSO SNUBBED

At the last CIO Executive Board meeting, President Murray revealed that the CIO had had the same experience with the council of the TUC, and repeated his firm belief that true international labor unity for victory must take in all unions of all the United Nations, barring none and relegating none to a secondary place.

The signatories to the Brotherhoods' correspondence with Citrine were: A. Johnston, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, D. B. Robertson, president of the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, H. W. Fraser, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, and A. F. Whitney, president of the Railroad Trainmen. T. C. Cashen, president of the Switchmen's Union, signed the first cable.

'Go Fly A Kite,' Unions In Britain Tell Lady Astor

London, Oct. 3 (ALN)—The recent speech of Lady Astor, owner of Cliveden and intimate of the late Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, in which she criticized the British people for their enthusiastic praise of the Soviet war effort and charged that "the Russians are not fighting for us but only for themselves," has been roundly condemned by the workers of Plymouth

Lady Astor is a member of Parliament for the Sutton Division of Plymouth.

The Plymouth and District Trades Council, central body to which trade union locals in the area are affiliated, unanimously passed the following resolution at its last meeting:

"The views expounded by Lady Astor do not by any means represent those held by the great majority of our local citizens. We regard such statements as highly detrimental to the successful prosecution of the war against Fascism."

A copy of the resolution was sent to the National Council of Labor, with the request that Prime Minister Churchill be urged to secure the immediate withdrawal of the offending statements. Other British labor bodies have taken similar action.

The Daily Herald, organ of the Trades Union Congress and the Labor Party, wrote editorially that Lady Astor's remarks were not only offensive to the Russians but also were "intensely irritating to the British people." The Goebbels-controlled Brussels radio has called the speech "wise and intelligent."

Inflation In Mobile; Unions Want Action

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 3—There's plenty wrong in Mobile—and the nation's newspapers haven't told the story.

That's the comment of the News Digest, southern CIO newspaper, in a story that helps explain the refusal of several thousand shipyard worker to shell out an extra dime a day for what had formerly been free ferry transportation to their jobs at the Alabama Drydock & Shipbuilding Co

Their refusal to pay tolls got a lot of comment in the nation's press, and dozens of columnists with cushy five-figure salaries bemoaned the workers' action. The stoppage was ended through the efforts of CIO shipbuilding union officials, who are seeking some sort of satisfactory solution.

But there's lots more to be done.

INFLATION NOW

"The situation in Mobile is a living illustration of the horrors of inflation," says the News Digest, "only in Mobile it's more than a word—it's a condition in which men live and work for America.

"Milk sells for 30 cents a quart.

"Families live three to a room, if they can get a room, sleeping shifts.

"Many live in tents, many men making over $70 a week have to sleep in the city park. Young girls have been found sleeping in haystacks by day, approaching men by night.

"Streets are like subway jams at all times, service in restaurants is impossible and then the consumer pays three prices.

"The citizens of the town, once happy residents of a quiet little city, hate the present condition. The shipyard workers are continually on edge. Police are corrupt and brutal . . . the city government does nothing to fight against the conditions or to curb them.

"Small wonder, then, when the company ferry to the shipyard, located on an island on which there is nothing else, was taken over by the city and a toll of five cents charged, the feelings of the men boiled over.

"The city was making 50 per cent on its investment, according to estimates. So the men refused to ride it."

LOOK FOR ACTION

Workers in Mobile are looking forward to the arrival of a committee of Army, Navy and maritime officials to probe the local situation, and to investigate repeated charges of law violations by the companies and the municipal government.

"The U. S. experts will have before them the recent report of the National Resources Planning Board which has already fastened the yoke of incompetency on Mobile's city and county government, a report which the Mobile daily press denied indignantly and refused to publish."

Urge Probe of Bureaucrats Barring U. S. Aid to Soviets

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—Dramatic exposure of the part played by international monopolies and their stooges in U. S. government offices in holding back materials and processes from our Soviet Union allies echoed on Capitol Hill today with Congressional demands for an official investigation.

The story, broken wide open by I. F. Stone in the New York newspaper, PM, confirmed persistent reports that reactionaries in government posts were sabotaging lend-lease operations to the fighting Russians .

BARES LONG DELAYS

Stone's series in the New York paper revealed that lesser government officials had held up Soviet purchase of oil refinery equipment for months, despite definite orders from Pres. Roosevelt; that Standard Oil, linked to the Nazi IGF outfit by secret agreement, had stipulated that certain synthetic rubber formulas and processes should be withheld from the Russians; and that Standard attempted to keep in its own control negotiations with the USSR on high-octane gas. Much of Standard's reluctance to turn information over to the Russians sprang from its old agreement with the Nazi chemical trust, the PM story indicated.

In the Senate, Homer Bone of Washington and Claude Pepper of Florida are reported discussing reopening of the Senate Patent Committee hearings to look into the case.

'SHOCKING'—COFFEE

Rep. John Coffee of Washington, veteran House progressive, declared it "shocking" that there should be "the slightest reluctance to aid the Soviet Union at a time when it is heroically defending us all."

He added: "It looks to me as though the same great monopolies which continued to ship oil to the Axis after the war began have since been impeding aid to our allies."

Wisconsin Council Acts On War Issues

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 3—Resolutions calling for election of win-the-war candidates, vastly increased war production and the immediate opening of a western front in Europe featured the three-day convention of the Wisconsin Industrial Union Council.

A spirit of unity carried through the sessions as the delegates examined problems standing in the way of a speedy victory over the Axis fascist forces.

After hearing many reports on the need for increased output, the convention called for creation of a national government "production authority" with equal representation from labor and industry, which would have "full responsibility for planning and policy on production questions."

HIT APPEASERS

The resolution calling for a second front charged that certain appeasement forces "which supported the Munich agreement with Hitler" are now counseling delay in offensive action in the hope of "keeping America only 'ankle-deep' in the war."

Thomas White Sr., of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers was re-elected council president as was Sec.-Treas. Walter Burke, United Steelworkers.

CIO, Rubber Drive For More Bond Sales Ends, Huge Success

AKRON, O., Oct. 3—Representatives of five war agencies joined with CIO and management leaders in the rubber and allied industries in a victory dinner here upon the successful conclusion of the first nation-wide War Bond campaign conducted in any industry.

"No fewer than 63 companies and their unions have achieved the two-fold goal of better than 90 per cent of participation plus at least 10 per cent of gross pay roll alloted to War Bonds every payday," Secretary Morgenthau wired the representatives of management and of the United Rubber Workers of America.

"This spirit that all of you have shown is strong assurance that we can overcome whatever obstacles may lie before us."

REACH GOALS

The first two large plants to achieve the 10 per cent goal were the Goodyear and Goodrich plants here, employing 25,000 and 18,000 workers respectively. Other results from the 21 states covered in the drive indicate that practically the entire industry is above 8 per cent in bond purchases, and attainment of the 10 per cent by all 167 firms is in sight.

More than 400 leaders of labor and management who gathered here from rubber industry centers throughout the nation heard Wendell Lund, director of the WPB Labor Prdouction Division, urge them to carry over the spirit of their labor-management bond drive into production.

Private Frank Grillo, who resigned as secretary-treasurer of the URWA to enlist in the Army, spoke for the rubber workers. It was Grillo, in cooperation with leaders of management and labor who formulated the plans for the bond drive in the rubber industry.

CIO Broadcast Honors U. S. Shipbuilders

Washington, Oct. 2—Listeners to last week's CIO radio show, Labor for Victory, heard a salute to the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers and an account from its President, John Green, of the tremendous effort the union's 200,000 members are putting out to get the ships into the water. The program was broadcast during the union's convention in New York City.

"From start to finish, in our convention and out of it, we make winning this war our full-time job and our first consideration," Green said.

"Our industrial union is naturally concerned with protecting its members' interest. But our big purpose in this is to get the wages and conditions that will assure good health and top efficiency for the shipyard workers to build all the ships we must have for victory, in the shortest possible time."

The next Labor For Victory program will be at a new time, 1:15 p.m., EWT on Sunday, Oct. 11. It will feature the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

WLB Reverses Panel's Union Shop Vote

Washington, Oct. 3—A majority panel recommendation for a union shop in the case involving 1200 employes of the Wilson-Jones Co., in Chicago and Elizabeth, N. J., represented by the CIO United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers, was rejected this week by the War Labor Board, which substituted instead a voluntary maintenance of membership clause.

In its report the panel majority said: "The board has in effect frozen the open shop in plants which were open shop before the war. The board has not ordered a union shop in any case in which there was not one before the war.

"To the extent that existing open shops are frozen for the duration of the crisis, existing union shops should, in fairness, be similarly frozen."

'Tax Bill Disgraceful' Murray Tells Senate

(See Stories on Inside Pages)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—The CIO moved vigorously this week in a last-minute effort to win a victory tax bill for the nation in line with the demands of President Roosevelt and the Treasury Department.

CIO President Murray wrote a letter to Vice-President Henry Wallace and to party leaders in the Senate in which he said the country is "aghast at the spectacle" of the 1942 tax bill, which goes light on high incomes and corporate profits while placing new and heavy burdens on the low income groups.

A Swiss-cheese pattern of loopholes allows the wealthy to escape their just taxation, Murray indicated, and as a result, the bill will bring in six billion dollars less than the Treasury has deemed necessary.

In a second communication to Congress, the CIO leader demanded passage of the Geyer Poll Tax Bill in the House, which would remove the poll tax as a barrier to voting in eight southern states.

Meanwhile Murray and Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, called upon unions throughout the country to work tirelessly for the election of win-the-war candidates in the November elections. The letter called attention to "storm warnings" in the light primaries vote, and warned that apathy would lead to certain defeat in the final balloting.

Every Pound Counts— Get in the Scrap!

This is why our country needs your scrap in our war for survival, and what your scrap, collected and delivered, can do—

Every steel weapon we make consists of half scrap. Using scrap saves time, money, materials, because scrap is already steel, and therefore takes the place of much greater quantities of iron ore, coke, limestone, etc.

This in turn involves more mining and transportation. By collecting and using scrap, we can avoid burdening already over-burdened railways and ships and we can avoid further inroads on already short manpower.

Every pound counts. There's enough scrap in one old electric fan to make steel for two army revolvers, enough in an old refrigerator for a dozen sub-machine guns. Last year we used 27,000 tons of steel for coat hangers. That's enough steel for three heavy cruisers.

OTHER SCRAP

Not only metal is needed. Household fat is another source of scrap that must be collected and turned in to speed our victory. Glycerine is made from fat, and explosives are made from glycerine. Ten pounds of household fat makes enough explosive power to fire 49 anti-aircraft shells. All you have to do is to strain the fat through a mesh strainer, place it in a clean can, and take it to your butcher, who will pay you for it.

The difference between enough scrap and too little can be the difference between enough weapons for victory and not enough. Everybody can work in the scrap drive—and everybody must, to make the difference between victory and defeat.

CIO Aircraft Plants Win 'E' Award

Los Angeles, Oct. 10—"E" pennants denoting excellence in production, were fluttering over two CIO aircraft plants in Los Angeles today after ceremonies this week in which union, company and government representatives hailed the production efficiency at the two factories.

The two plants are the North American Aviation, Inc. plant in Inglewood, under contract to Local 887, United Auto Workers, and the Vultee Aircraft, Inc., where workers are members of Local 904, UAW.

North American and Vultee were the first southland aircraft factories to achieve the coveted pennants, which are given jointly by the Army and Navy.

Identical ceremonies in which the pennants were presented were held at the two plants when government and army representatives expressed their gratitude for the excellent production records of the CIO plants.

HAILS COMMITTEES

Lew Michener, west coast director of the UAW, hailed the achievement of the Vultee and North American workers and said that labor-management production committees were responsible for improving the production efficiency.

He said that the workers "know it is because they are organized into a good team, a strong union that pioneered in establishing good conditions in the aircraft industry," that production records are being smashed.

"Organized production soldiers," Michener said, "present their ideas for winning the war in an organized manner through their shop stewards and officials and then have the backing of their union in carrying out these ideas."

Illinois CIO Convention Maps War on Defeatists

CHICAGO, Oct. 10—Moved from Peoria to Chicago because the Army has taken over key hotels in that downstate city, the second annual convention of the Illinois State Industrial Union Council opens at the Hamilton Hotel this weekend.

More than 500 delegates representing 300,000 CIO-organized workers are expected at the conclave. The figures represent a large growth in membership, coming mainly from new war plans opened throughout the state.

The parley, to be called to order by President Samuel Levin, official of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, "is more than a regular convention—it is a council of war," declared Secretary-Treasurer Francis DeLaurie.

One of the principal speakers at the session will be Rep. Raymond S. McKeough, Democratic candidate for the Senate, who is seeking to oust C. Wayland Brooks, the Chicago Tribune's reactionary Charlie McCarthy. McKeough has strong labor support throughout Illinois.

CIO LEADERS INVITED

Others invited to address the meeting are CIO President Murray; Allan S. Haywood, CIO organization director; John Brophy, CIO councils director; Mayor Kelly; the Most Rev. Bernard J. Sheil; Benjamin Adamowski, Democratic candidate for representative-at-large; and several representatives of government agencies.

Officials hailed the decision of several United Mine Workers locals to send delegates to the convention, despite an effort by Ray Edmundson, state UMW chief, to keep miners away from the convention.

"Coming on the heels of the slugging of two CIO national representatives by UMW thugs in Springfield, the action of these locals is a repudiation of the tactics of UMW officials and is positive indication that most UMW locals are anxious to participate in the coming state CIO convention," Secretary-Treasurer DeLaurie said.

CIO Sweeps Crucible Elections

New York, Oct. 10—Workers in 10 plants of the war-busy Crucible Steel Co. this week gave the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, a 20-1 victory margin in a series of Labor Board elections.

The vote:

USA-CIO	15,535
No Union	703

Largest plant in the Crucible chain, according to District Director Pete Mosele, is the Atha Works at Harrison, N. J., employing close to 10,000 workers. This plant, like the others, gave the CIO affiliate a tremendous majority.

Button, Button!

Winston-Salem, N. C., Oct. 10—Management of the rich, powerful R J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has an aversion to pins

When members of the CIO Cannery & Agricultural Workers—which is organizing the plant—started wearing union pins, the company issued a flat edict against all kinds of pins. Workers wearing safety pins in their clothes were sent home to replace them with buttons!

Reynolds workers, who make Camel cigarettes and Prince Albert tobacco, countered the bosses by embroidering "CIO" in large letters on their work clothes.

Shoe Meet Asks U. S. Offensive

By HORACE DAVIS

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 10—A stirring call for the immediate opening of a second front in Europe now featured the opening of the third national convention of the United Shoe Workers of America.

Joseph A. Salerno, president of the Massachusetts State Industrial Union Council, told the 156 regular and fraternal delegates that "to win this war, we've got to open a second front immediately."

Salerno also stressed that in supporting President Roosevelt's stabilization program the CIO does not advocate wage freezing, but believes that adjustments in substandard wages should be made immediately.

HAYWOOD LAUDS GROWTH

Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, underlined Salerno's remarks on the need for raising substandard wages now. He said that the plants of the International and Brown Shoe Cos. now under contract with the USWA include more than one-half of the workers of those two companies, and called for renewed efforts to "finish the job" which was begun 18 months ago.

"And when we get the International and Brown Shoe Cos. into camp," added Haywood, "I want one more time at bat to tackle Endicott-Johnson."

Haywood also made a strong plea for unity behind the war effort and for equal treatment of Negroes.

MCGRATH'S SURVEY

President McGrath, in a rounded survey of national and world affairs which met with general approval among the delegates, got the most applause for his advocacy of the opening of a second front now. Concerning international trade union unity, McGrath said:

"The CIO stands ready and willing to become part of a united labor movement of all allied nations. Its executive officers are always willing to work towards a goal of labor unity throughout the world. We of the USWA fully concur with President Murray and the CIO Executive Board on this policy."

McGrath praised the leadership of Philip Murray and Allan Haywood in the CIO.

General Secretary-Treasurer Jas. J. Mitchell reported on the assessments collected within the USWA to finance the drive on the International and Brown Shoe companies, and paid personal tribute to all who helped make the drive a success.

Walter Harris followed with a report on the drives in the International and Brown Shoe Companies which he has directed. Harris told of 14,194 new members signed in his drive, of 20 charters issued in plants of the International Shoe Co., eight in Brown Shoe plants, and eight in independents, and 22 elections won out of 23 entered.

DOUBLED SIZE

The net result of the union's organizing efforts has been to more than double the membership since the last convention, which was held in Rochester, N. Y., in 1939, according to the reports of the officers.

SHOE PARLEY: Pres. Frank McGrath talks into the mike as the United Shoe Workers of America opened its third annual convention at Worcester, Mass. Seated at McGrath's right is Sec.-Treas. James J. Mitchell. Others at the table include heads of the convention's committees. USWA has doubled its membership, McGrath reported.

Big Lettuce Sheds Vote CIO, 2-1

Salinas, Calif., Oct. 10—The Salinas lettuce sheds, once the scene of long strikes and brutal police oppression, have gone CIO.

In a major victory, the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers swept an NLRB poll by a margin of 1,130 to 589 for no union.

"Establishment of collective bargaining in this important area of food production helps weld our national unity," declared UCAPAWA President Donald Henderson.

"We must put every ounce of energy into licking the Axis; it is no time for Americans to fight among themselves. I know many of the shed employers themselves agree with this."

With the Salinas area under contract, complete organization of the sheds in the rich Western valleys is only a matter of time.

U. S. 'Initial Girls' Vie for Title In Union Contest

Washington, Oct. 10 — Unsung heroines of the typewriter keys and the telephone switchboard will have their hour in the spotlight next week at a beauty contest sponsored by the CIO Federal Workers.

Miss OPA, Miss WPB, Miss FSA, Miss War, Miss OWI and Miss Republic 7500—the latter's the number of the U.S. war agencies gargantuan phone switchboard—will be selected and glorified at a "Government Gals" beauty contest.

A soldier, a sailor and a stage star will do the picking from among the thousands of pretty girls now working the wartime capital. She'll get a $50 War Bond as prize.

Murray Asks Miners Rally To Back FDR

Cincinnati, Oct. 10—The Mine Workers were urged to rally behind Pres. Roosevelt, the country's commander-in-chief, for national unity and victory, in a message wired by CIO President Philip Murray to Secretary-Treasurer Thomas Kennedy of the United Mine Workers of America at the union's convention here.

"Today the coal miners, because of their glorious tradition, have a grave responsibility which runs to the common people throughout the world," Murray declared. "The world is engulfed in a struggle in which no individual, no group and no nation can remain neutral. . . .

GAINS THREATENED

"All that we as coal miners and our forebears dreamed about, aspired, fought and died for, is now being threatened with destruction by Hitler and his Nazi hordes. . . . The coal miners know best of the gallant struggle which must be fought to remain free men.

"This nation looks to the United Mine Workers of America to join in the onward march of the common people behind our President and Commander-in-Chief Franklin D. Roosevelt toward a decisive and early victory. The CIO has been the most progressive and forthright force in forging national unity of all the people to assure victory against the Axis forces.

SINISTER FORCES

"There are many sinister forces in our country who seek to undermine our national will for victory by maligning the leadership of our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and causing disunity within the ranks of labor, between groups within the nation, and between the United Nations.

"The coal miners of the nation seek, with intensity, to participate with the CIO in our nation's war. The United Mine Workers of America desire to have more than mere defeatist criticism and destructive comments aimed at thwarting their will for victory."

California CIO Offers Job Plan

San Francisco, Oct. 10—A "California Plan" to mobilize every adult in the State either for the armed forces or for war production will be presented to the California CIO "Win-the-War" convention in Hollywood this weekend.

Mervyn Rathborne, secretary of the State CIO Council, said in San Francisco that after action on the plan by the California CIO Convention it will be submitted to the national CIO and the War Manpower Commission.

MANY DISCUSSIONS

"The CIO recommendations for an overall manpower program were drafted after extensive discussions by the State CIO Executive Committee and CIO members of the State War Manpower Advisory Committee with government officials, the War Production Board and various CIO locals in the State," said Rathborne.

"America needs to rally all its resources for victory, and the California CIO has prepared a plan to do this locally on the basis of consultations with leading production and manpower authorities."

Canada Moves Miners

TORONTO, Oct. 10—Canada's system of selective service—to date operating by persuasion rather than by compulsion—emerged successfully from its first test this week when 275 miners were transferred from the gold mines at Kirkland Lake and Timmins in Northern Ontario to the Sudbury mines of the International Nickel Co.

Part of the success in the transfer was due to the assistance of the International Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union, which protested to Premier King and Selective Service officials, nevertheless, that the so-called worker representative on the committee making arrangment for the transfer was appointed by the company union.

UNION CAMPAIGN

Since the strike in the gold mines last fall, the union has campaigned for the complete closing of the mines so that the workers might be employed in operations more essential to a total war effort.

Single men, in the main, made up the first contingent of those transferred to Sudbury. Another 500 at least will be required. Selective service officials have promised that if married men are required they will be given additional compensation due to the necessity of living apart from their families.

One blast furnace at the INCO mine was forced to close due to the shortage of men occasioned by enlistments and workers leaving for the Army and jobs offering better pay.

Western Union Workers Pick CIO

New York, Oct. 10—More than 1,000 Western Union workers, employed by the company's Eastern Division, cast an overwhelming vote for the CIO American Communications Association this week, rejecting an AFL union by a 2½-to-1 majority.

The workers, mainly clerical and white collar employes, joined 6,000 of their co-workers who have already voted for the ACA in the New York area.

New OCD Pamphlets Give Dope on Defense Set-Up

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—Three pamphlets that should be in the possession of every union participating in the civilian defense program have just been issued by the Office of Civilian Defense here.

The first, "An Organization Outline for Local Defense Councils," gives practical suggestions for setting up councils, shows their scope and indicates how they may function.

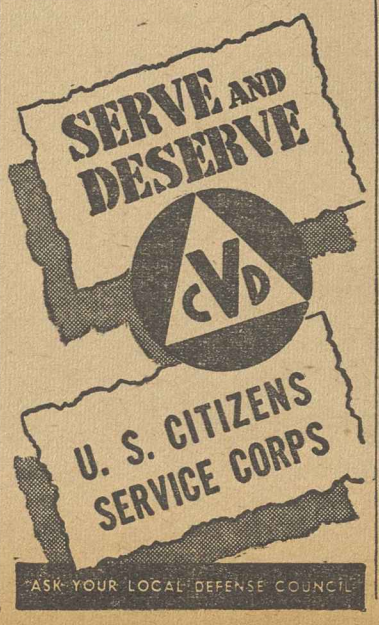
The second, "The Block Plan," gives the essentials of the system of organizing communities by blocks so that every individual and home can be brought into the war effort.

The third is a "Handbook for U. S. Citizens Service Corps." It is designed to instruct individuals who wish to join the Corps and gives the who, what, why of that agency.

NEED LABOR HELP

"The help of organized labor is greatly needed in the civilian defense effort," explains Newman Jeffrey, chief of the OCD Labor Section. "Despite the excellent job that labor has done, there still are not a sufficient number of volunteers to man the community services. We should like to enlist your support by asking you to urge your readers to participate."

Copies of the pamphlets may be obtained at the OCD in Washington or at local defense councils.



J. R. Walsh Assumes Post As CIO Economic Director

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—J. Raymond Walsh, new director of the CIO's Economic Division, started work at his desk in national CIO headquarters this week. He replaces Ralph Hetzel, who enlisted in the Army some months ago and is now a first lieutenant stationed in Washington.

Walsh comes to the CIO with a record of past activities which will make him a valuable addition to the national CIO staff. He received his Ph. D. in Economics at Harvard University and later taught there from 1930 to 1937 as a member of the Department of Economics.

During the early stormy days in 1936-37 when the CIO was taking shape, Walsh took an ardent interest in industrial unionism and decided to see for himself what was happening on the labor front.

J. R. WALSH

He began an intensive study of the CIO and visited the industrial centers where outstanding labor struggles were then going on, interviewing union leaders, rank and file members and others who could help him get a clear picture of the situation.

The result of his observations and study appeared in one of the first books to be written about the new union movement—"The CIO, Industrial Unionism in Action"—in which he traced the background that led to the formation of the CIO and told what the CIO was doing then in the steel, automobile and other industries.

TAUGHT AT HARVARD

Walsh's ardent concern with present-day labor problems displeased some of Harvard's dignitaries, and when he refused to accept their restrictions on his pro-labor activities, his relationship with Harvard was severed by mutual consent.

During the next five years he was a trial examiner for the National Labor Relations Board in 1937-38; did a Wertheimer study of Standard Oil of New Jersey in 1938-39; was head of the Department of Economics and director of the Program of Education for Citizenship at Hobart and William Smith Colleges in 1939-41, and was Professor of Economics at Williams College in 1941-42.

TWO EMERGENCY JOBS!

Two emergency jobs need doing right now—and if they've been done before, they need doing again.

Both concern Congress, which is dealing with two vital war bills this week—the polltax repeal measure and the 1942 tax bill.

1. The Tax Bill

As THE CIO NEWS goes to press, the Senate nears a vote on the tax bill. President Murray has issued an emergency appeal to Senate leaders to reconsider the shameful soak-the-poor bill now before them. He has urged, in the name of the nation's war for survival and in the name of the workers of America, that the bill be re-written and passed to meet the needs of the country and to avoid crippling war production by robbing the workers' food budget.

As soon as you read this, you should wire your two Senators, demanding a tax bill based on the needs of victory and on ability to pay. The bill may have passed by the time you get your CIO NEWS. Even so, you must let your Senators know what labor wants, because this bill is going to be followed almost immediately by another tax measure. The bill as written now is short by billions of the amount needed for victory. The next tax bill must correct the mistakes and sabotage of the present one.

II. Repeal the Polltax

The Geyer polltax repeal bill comes up in the House Monday, October 12. It's Senate counterpart, the Pepper bill, is scheduled for a report in the full Senate Judiciary Committee next Monday, October 19. We don't have to repeat the reasons why the polltax must be repealed. Anything that keeps millions of American citizens outside American democracy keeps them outside the victory drive—and it's going to take everybody to win this war.

Wire the Senators on the Senate Judiciary Committee at once. Urge a quick and favorable report on the Pepper polltax repeal bill, demand an early and favorable vote.

Frederick Van Nuys, Ind.; Pat McCarran, Nev.; Carl A. Hatch, N. M.; Tom Connally, Tex.; O'Mahoney, Wyo.; Jas. H. Hughes, Del.; Albert B. Chandler, Ky.; Wm. H. Smathers, N. J.; Harley M. Kilgore, W. Va.; Abe Murdock, Utah; Ernest McFarland, Ariz.; Wall Doxey, Miss.; Geo. W. Norris, Neb.; Warren R. Austin, Vt.; John A. Danaher, Conn.; Alexander Wiley, Wis.; Wm. Langer, N. D.; Harold H. Burton, Ohio.

And while you're wiring on these two vital war bills, go out and get your shopmate and your neighbor to wire too. Every wire and every minute counts.

'Tax Bill Disgrace', —Murray

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—The nation is "aghast at the spectacle" of the Senate debate on the 1942 tax bill, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said this week in a last-minute appeal to Senate leaders for a win-the-war tax measure based on war needs and on ability to pay.

Murray's letter was sent to Vice-President Wallace and to majority and minority leaders in the Senate as the bill neared a week-end vote, after months of delay and refusal to accept either Treasury or CIO pleas for a sound, anti-inflation tax measure.

At CIO NEWS press time, the Senate had lowered the corporation profits tax from a proposed 55 per cent to 40 per cent, had further lowered income tax exemptions to place new burdens on low income groups, and was proceeding to write the so-called "victory tax," a straight five per cent levy on all gross incomes over $624 a year, into the bill.

Consideration of a sales tax seemed to be out for the time being, its advocates satisfied for the minute that the "victory tax" would bring about the same result—an added shifting of the burden of war taxation to the workers and other low-income groups.

LOOPHOLES PRESERVED

Muray's letter pointed out that the bill as now written ignores every recommendation that the Treasury made, leaving loopholes wide open for tax evasion by the wealthy, refusing to raise income taxes in the upper brackets, and failing to tax war profits to at anything near an adequate level.

He reminded the Senators that they must be aware of the Treasury proposals and of the failure of Congress to carry them out, pointing out that the Senate's actions to date are turning the bill "into

CIO Urges Defeat Of Defeatists

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—Two appeals for CIO action in electing win-the-war candidates in the November elections went out from headquarters this week, one to CIO unions from Nathan Cowan, legislative representative, and the other a special message from Pres. Murray to California workers.

Murray's message, sent to California CIO members through Mervyn Rathborne and Philip Connelly, CIO Council leaders there, appealed for hard work by every member in the current campaign. Cowan's letter called for similar action, laying out a four-point program to be followed by all CIO affiliates.

"It is not enough to pass resolutions," Murray wrote. "It is necessary that every CIO member and every CIO local union take on the responsibility of seeing that each worker is aware of the campaign issues and is aware of the CIO selections.

"This means that every member has the responsibility of participating in the distribution of literature, in the worker-to-worker and house-to-house spread of information and guidance, in every precinct, every district and every state. It is the responsibility of every CIO member to see that he and each of his fellow members goes to the polls on election day."

DRIFT TO REACTION

CIO unions must read "the storm warnings" in the light vote in the primaries and other signs of apathy by the voters, Cowan said in urging hard and continuous work to get out the vote.

If this trend, and the trend toward returning reactionary and

Nelson Asks War Workers To Vote Nov. 3

Washington, Oct. 10—War production workers were urged to vote in the national elections next month in a statement issued by Donald Nelson, chief of the War Production Board. Nelson's statement came in answer to a worker's letter asking "whether it is patriotic to take time off from the plant to go out and vote," or to use the voting time to create more war production.

"I believe there is only one answer to this question," Nelson said. "While I understand fully the men who think they should stay on the job, voting is a duty, not a privilege. It is a duty, however, that is only allowed to free men. The right to vote, in short, is what this war is all about.

"The war worker is first of all an American citizen and the first right and duty of an American citizen is to vote. That is the difference between us and our enemies."

Manpower Seen a Key War Issue

Washington, Oct. 10—The manpower problem—heart of the whole war production setup and therefore a major key to victory—is on everybody's mind here in Washington and throughout the nation.

It has evoked a long series of statements, reports, newspaper stories and just plain rumors from government agencies and war officials, commentators and reporters hard up for a story on a critical subject.

Chief theme of the discussion seems to boil down to a prediction of an early national service act to place everybody in war jobs, or at least a species of new federal manpower commission with authority to supply labor wherever it is needed in war production.

OPPOSE COMPULSION

Labor people are reported opposed to compulsory manpower mobilization until all voluntary methods have been thoroughly tried and until present loopholes in labor supply are plugged. They also point to the need for overall planning of the whole war effort, to give us the real facts on manpower needs.

These were the two main points made in discussion of the manpower problem by CIO Vice-Presidents R. J. Thomas and Joseph Curran, who spoke on the subject in radio broadcasts last week. According to these two CIO officials, we must first end all the slipshod methods now in use that exclude hundreds of thousands of able workers from needed war jobs before we talk of compulsion.

END DISCRIMINATION

Both made the point that industry and government must see that discrimination against women workers, against Negroes and other groups be stopped. More adequate training programs, day care of children to release mothers for war work and arrangements to enable school youth to take part in war production were also called for.

Both Curran and Thomas emphasized the need of unified planning in war production and in the direction of the war itself in their discussion.

Curran called for full application of the Murray Industry Council plan to all industry.

War Needs Theme Of Convention Call

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—Labor's task today is to see that every person is mobilized in our nation's war for survival, President Philip Murray and Secretary James B. Carey said this week in issuing the official call for the fifth convention of the CIO. The convention will be held at the Hotel Statler in Boston, Mass., beginning Nov. 9.

"Our country is now engaged in a struggle," the call said, "the outcome of which will decide whether, as a nation and as individuals—we live or we die. Every American must therefore be made fully aware of his grave responsibilities and his duty to fight for victory. That is the task of labor.

"The CIO has pledged to the President and the Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, the united and unswerving support of organized labor to achieve victory over the Fascist forces as quickly as possible. This pledge was not mere lip service. The CIO has demonstrated through its action that it has assumed its rightful leadership in forging a national unity among all the people to achieve victory.

WAR EFFORT

"The CIO has also continued to safeguard with zealous care the interests of the American workers. This we believe to be essential in that only through a powerful and democratic trade union movement and healthy workers will we guarantee the marshalling of the national strength to fulfill the war effort.

"The CIO has increased its numerical strength. It has increased its economic and political importance in American life. Because of its status and position, today more than ever, the CIO must present to the nation the views of organized labor upon the important questions which today beset the common people throughout the world."

CIO Women Plan Meeting At Boston, Nov. 9

Washington, Oct. 10—The Call to the second annual conference of the Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries, opening in Boston Nov. 9 at the same time as the CIO Convention, was issued today by Pres. Faye Stephenson, National Director Julia Katz, and Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Fowler.

The Call reads in part: "Every month of the war brings new demands for the participation of women in our nation's life-and-death struggle for survival.

"As the war multiplies our tasks will increase. We are ready. We, the women in the homes of organized labor, must do all we can to help our men win the war and to keep the democracy for which they are fighting, safe and strong for their return.

"Planning a program for the fulfillment of that trust is the order of business of our conference, for this is our war, the people's war."

Now's the Time

The wheels of democracy too often grind slowly. It has taken years of agitation and education to bring the movement against the undemocratic poll-tax to its present stage. Every parliamentary trick and obstruction has been used to delay action that will give the right to vote to ten million disfranchised Americans in the poll-tax states.

But this week the Geyer anti-polltax bill is finally to be brought to the floor of the House, thanks to a petition signed by 218 Congressmen.

CIO President Murray has written to every Representative urging that he be present to cast his vote for this vitally important measure. His plea must be backed by wires from all over the country, reminding the Congressmen that now is the time to stand up and show their colors.

The poll-tax Congressmen are sure to be present en masse to vote against democracy. Any progressive Congressman who fails to show up and vote for the Geyer bill will be failing the cause of democracy as much as if he votes against it.

In the Senate, a subcommittee of the judiciary committee has made a report against the Pepper anti-polltax bill. This report is to be considered by the full Senate judiciary committee this week.

It is urgent that every member of this Senate committee be wired or otherwise contacted at once, and urged to report the Pepper bill favorably to the Senate.

Abolition of the poll-tax is of major importance to our victory effort. "In war time," President Murray declares, "the guarantee of full democratic rights to every citizen is a vital war measure essential for the strengthening of our national morale and to assure an impregnable defense against the onslaught of enemy propaganda."

Now, at long last, Congress has the immediate opportunity for decisive action to wipe out the poll-tax blot on our democracy, and to remove one of the worst obstructions to our war effort.

Wire or telephone your Congressman at once to be present and vote for the Geyer anti-poll-tax bill.

Wire or telephone the members of the Senate judiciary committee to report favorably the Pepper anti-polltax bill.

Now is our long-awaited opportunity. Now is the time to act!

Don't Be a Poll-Scab

Millions of our fellow-workers are in the armed forces, fighting or preparing to fight for democracy against fascism.

Millions of our soldiers of production are working day and night on the home front for victory.

Millions of Americans in every walk of life are giving their spare time as well as their working hours in countless war activities.

All of us are one great army under the leadership of our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, fighting the greatest struggle for freedom that has ever confronted humanity.

Every loyal unionist, every true American, can do his part on the election field for victory.

The duty of every one of us is to inform ourselves, and everyone we can reach, on the record of every candidate; to register ourselves and to get others to register; to go to the polls, and get others to go, to vote only for those candidates who are 100 per cent for an all-out victory drive behind our Commander-in-Chief.

If we fail to do these things, we'll be scabbing on our President, scabbing on our fighting men, scabbing on our fellow-workers and scabbing on ourselves.

Our duty as loyal unionists and good Americans is clear. Let there not be one scab among us!

A Workers' Service

WPA is one of the casualties of re-employment. As WPA funds are cut, the Workers' Service Program is also being discontinued in many states.

Unions everywhere have taken advantage of the excellent projects in workers' education which have been part of this program, for classes, for library aid, and for many other informational and educational purposes.

This program was started to give employment to jobless teachers. But it has come to furnish a service of permanent value to labor, which should not be discontinued, particularly now that the war has increased labor's educational needs.

American farmers are served through a regular Extension Service of the Department of Agriculture. Why should not labor also be similarly served by a permanent Workers Extension Service?

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

SOME of our Founding Fathers were worried lest democracy should lead to the oppression of the propertied few by the great majority of underprivileged citizens.

They thought that the working people and low-income farmers, having the most votes, would elect most of the legislators, who as a result would legislate in the interests of the great masses of the common people, without much regard for the special privileges of minorities.

How surprised some of these early Tories would be if they could sit in on the current Congressional debates on tax legislation.

They would find Senators and Congressmen without number ready to fight to the death for the special privileges of wealthy minorities; and only a handful who will go to bat for the great majority of their low-income constituents.

The House has passed a tax bill which rejects nearly all of the U. S. Treasury's proposals for adequate taxation of war profits and surplus wealth, and which takes the very bread from the mouths of millions of the lowest-income families.

In the Senate, the same story is repeating itself. Only nine Senators were found to vote for a slight increase in normal and surtax profits taxation, which would still have left the rate below that proposed by the Treasury.

Senators jumped to their feet to defend the rich against taxation which might "destroy their morale and initiative." But hardly a voice was raised to defend the great majority of poor people against taxation which is destructive not only of their morale but of their health and barest livelihood as well.

More than this, Senator George, chairman of the Senate finance committee, now declares that billions of extra revenue will have to be raised either by a sales tax or by the so-called "victory" tax on gross income—both of which, he admitted, would fall heaviest on the lower incomes.

He completely ignored proposals of the Treasury and the CIO (so far rejected by Congress) for raising from the rich just as much money as would come from either of these soak-the-poor proposals.

CIO President Philip Murray has pointed out that compulsory joint income tax returns would increase revenue from wealthy couples by $420,000,000; that taxation of tax-exempt securities would bring in another $300,000,000; that higher taxation on incomes over $5,000 and a $25,000 income ceiling would bring in about $2,000,000,000; that $250,000,000 more could be raised by increasing corporation normal and surtaxes to 55 percent; and that increased gift and estate taxes, with elimination of special privileges to mining and oil companies, would bring in $525,000,000.

What is wrong with our democracy that so few in Congress will fight for simple justice for the great majority of the people, while so many work and vote only for the over-privileged few?

We know, of course, about big-business control of the press; how money counts in building political machines and winning elections; and many other ways in which wealth and privilege can trick and manipulate the voters.

But, even so, the disproportion in Congress between the many little friends of the rich and the few real champions of the common people is so great as to give serious pause to every labor unionist.

Today when the usual tug and pull of rival group interests must be superseded by maximum national unity behind a real victory program, the Congressional obstructions of selfish privilege-as-usual minorities are particularly dangerous.

★ ★ ★

America's twelve million organized workers have in their hands a means of remedying this situation in the coming elections. As against the old political machines, they have strong union organizations which can reach millions of voters, inform them of the issues and mobilize their voting power.

Consider how much time and effort is spent by the unions in often fruitless effort to influence unfriendly legislators. How much more profitably this effort might be expended in electing the right kind of legislators in the first place!

Now, in the few weeks remaining before the November elections, is the time when our efforts will count most. We can make our democracy work for victory, if we get busy now. For after November our task will be twice as hard, if we fail to elect real win-the-war candidates.

Murray on Price-Wage Board; WLB Keeps 'Steel' Formula

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—Government wage and price stabilization officials were moving on a half dozen fronts this week following President Roosevelt's executive order and the appointment of former Supreme Court Justice James F. Byrnes as Director of Economic Stabilization to supervise price control.

One of Byrne's first actions was to name CIO President Philip Murray and AFL President William Green labor members of the Stabilization Advisory Board created by FDR. Farm representatives are James Patten of the Farmers Union and Edward O'Neal, highly-conservative representative of the Farm Bureau Federation. Industrial spokesmen are Eric Johnston, Chamber of Commerce head, who has worked closely with O'Neal in recent months; and Ralph E. Flanders, head of Jones & Lamson, a Vermont machine tool corporation.

STUDY $25,000 LIMIT

Meanwhile Byrnes directed the Treasury Department to study methods of limiting net salary incomes to $25,000 a year. The executive order gave Byrnes power to regulate such incomes, but left to him the devices under which the regulation will be handled.

The President's order also froze salaries over $5,000, but it appeared that salaries under that figure may be, temporarily at least, in a no-man's land, since Byrnes has no jurisdiction over them and the War Labor Board has declined to touch them without explicit instructions from the White House.

WLB STUDIES POLICY

The War Labor Board, under the grant of authority from the President to stabilize wage rates at the September 15 level, met for a series of policy discussions.

Chairman William H. Davis told reporters the WLB considered the President's Order as "directing the Board to go ahead on the course it has been following." That, he said, meant continuance of the Little Steel formula, which authorizes 15 per cent increases to account for the rise in living costs between January 1, 1941, and May 15, 1942.

The order also gave the Board general supervision of all collective bargaining in the country, both in war and civilian industries, and in voluntary wage agreements negotiated without assistance from any government agency.

In one of its first actions the WLB gave a blanket approval to all such increases worked out before October 3, though reserving the right to order discontinuance of any such pay boost which it may be found to be inconsistent with the policy of the Stabilization Director. An accompanying order also put into effect all wage rate increases recommended by the Board prior to October 3.

APPEAL TO UNIONS

Davis appealed to unions and employers throughout the nation to withhold queries until the Board has time to work out detailed procedure for its vastly-increased jurisdiction.

"We will issue these rules and regulations as promptly as we can," he said, adding that they will be in "such form that there will be a minimum of misinterpretation, misunderstanding and confusion."

The WLB head "respectfully" requested employers and unions "not to write, wire or telegraph Washington with specific inquiries for a few weeks, and not to do so then until they have tapped all authoritative sources of information."

For the benefit of any employers who may try to stall off negotiations with unions, the Board reminded the public that the Executive Order clearly sets forth the "policy of the Federal Government . . . to encourage free collective bargaining between employers and employes is reaffirmed and continued."

U. S. Plants to Give Time for Voting

Washington, Oct. 10—(FP)—Workers in plants controlled by the armed forces will be given time to vote on election day, Robert Patterson and James Forrestal, undersecretaries of war and navy, announced this week.

Red Cross, Labor Agree On Plans For War Fund Drive

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—An agreement pledging CIO and AFL support to the Red Cross 1943 War Fund campaign next spring has been signed by the relief agency and representatives of the two labor organizations.

The CIO War Relief Committee and the AFL United Nations Relief Committee will suspend collection of funds for other agencies during the months of March and April to concentrate on meeting labor's share of aid to the Red Cross. Signing the agreement for CIO were Irving Abramson and Monroe Sweetland, War Relief Committee chairman and director, respectively.

"Speaking for the millions of CIO members, I know organized labor will do everything it possibly can to help the American Red Cross carry on its essential services to our armed forces, as well as on the civilian front," Abramson declared.

"The signing of these agreements by the AFL and the CIO is one more proof of the common determination of both organizations to work together for victory."

Guy Emerson, vice-chairman of the Red Cross War Fund, said the Red Cross "is tremendously gratified at this additional mark of close cooperation of organized labor in the war effort."

The agreement provides that labor contributions will be made directly to the Red Cross chapter in each community.

CIO Heads Aid Soviet Amity

New York, Oct. 10—CIO Pres. Philip Murray has joined the sponsors committee of the Congress of American-Soviet Friendship, to be held Nov. 7-9, it was announced here.

The Congress will bring a number of trade union speakers and delegates to the meeting in New York, which will deal with trade union relations between unions in the USSR and the USA, it was said.

Other CIO leaders who have joined the committee include Joseph Curran, president of the NMU and a vice-president of the CIO; Sherman H. Dalrymple, head of the Rubber Workers and also a CIO vice-president; Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and a CIO vice-president; John Green, president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; O. A. Knight, president of the Oil Workers, and R. J. Thomas, head of the UAW-CIO and a CIO vice-president.

Still working together!

Bill is still giving more than he promised—and so is Dad!

FIRING line and production line—the old Studebaker father-and-son combination is still clicking!

It seems only yesterday that Bill and his father were working side by side.

Today Bill has a more pressing job—the most urgent job any man could have—he is fighting for Uncle Sam!

But how could Bill fight, if he didn't have anything to fight with? And that's where Dad comes in—along with thousands of others in the Studebaker plant, Dad is doing his share to make sure that America's fighting forces are the best-equipped in the world!

The same skill—the same Studebaker plus—which have gone into every Studebaker motor car and motor truck—are today going into every implement of victory that's being produced by Studebaker.

The Studebaker watchword—always give more than you promise—means more today than ever. Studebaker is justifiably proud of its important assignments in the arming of our Nation and its Allies.

Murray Urges House Pass Poll Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10—With a House vote scheduled this Monday (Oct. 12) and Senate action set for Oct. 19, the fight to get rid of the morale-busting poll tax approached a showdown here this week.

As the showdown neared, CIO took action (1) to ensure passage of the Geyer bill in the House and (2) to get the Pepper bill out of the Senate Judiciary Committee and on to the Senate floor for debate and favorable vote.

Writing from national CIO headquarters here, CIO President Philip Murray urged all Congressmen to be on the House floor and to vote for the Geyer bill when it came up. This letter was followed up by CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan, in a circular to all CIO legislative officials throughout the country urging them to insist on a favorable report from the Senate committee.

WAR MEASURE

Repeal of the polltax which keeps millions of Southern white and Negro citizens from playing a full part in the war is a "vital war measure" that must be passed, Murray wrote to the Congressmen.

"In peace time that arrangement (the poll tax) has long been recognized as a deep blot on the pages of our national history," Murray wrote. "In war time the guarantee of full democratic rights to every citizen is a vital war measure essential for the strengthening of our national morale and to assure an impregnable defense against enemy propaganda.

"This is an issue in which every member of Congress must take a profound personal interest. I cannot urge too strongly that you make sure to be present on the floor of Congress to cast your vote in favor of the Geyer anti-polltax bill."

IN THE SENATE

Meantime, labor and progressive forces were rapidly working to overcome a setback in the Senate, incurred last week when the sub-committee of the Senate Judiciary voted that the Pepper bill was "unconstitutional."

This was done by a three-to-one vote, Senators O'Mahoney of Wyoming, Austin of Vermont and Connally of Texas (a polltax state) voting to keep the bill on ice and one, the veteran Senator Norris of Nebraska, voting to bring it on the floor. Sen. Murdock, of Utah, also a sub-committee member, did not vote.

Action now centers on the full Judiciary Committee, which is expected to meet next week, October 19. Cowan's letter to CIO legislative people urges a flood of wires to the Judiciary Committee and to all Senators demanding quick action on the report and a favorable vote on the bill.

a tax program which threatens to sabotage and impede our war production by taking bread and milk from the tables of our war workers, and clothing from their backs."

The Senate and earlier the House wrecking of the tax program is also a repudiation of the President's seven-point victory economy program, Murray added, declaring that a sound tax bill on original Treasury lines would have shown the nation that the FDR program "is being accepted and carried out by every branch of our government and every segment of our population."

anti-war candidates to Congress continues, it means that "there is a heavy and dangerous tide running against organized labor, against all the progressive forces and against the war effort," he wrote.

Cowan urged an intensive campaign in union meetings, in the labor press, in mass meetings, parades and "every other available means of communication with the membership" to get the workers registered and down to the polls to vote.

NEIGHBORHOOD ACTION

He also urged action on a neighborhood basis through CIO Councils, joint committees, and the like. United action with AFL, Railroad Brotherhood and other groups of citizens should be pushed. He urged all unions to write to CIO headquarters for records of Congressmen, so that the labor vote would be "an informed vote."

"There has been an enormous lethargy among progressive people throughout America this year with respect to political action," Cowan concluded. "This often happens in a non-Presidential year, and in addition the war has distracted our attention.

"It is high time that we shook off our mood of false security and looked the dangerous facts squarely in the face."

Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Voting records of the Congressmen of all big industrial States are now available through the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO. They were prepared by Mrs. Caroline De Caux, a Newspaper Guild auxiliary member with years of experience in following Congressional action.

The records show how Congressmen voted on twenty labor, farm and foreign policy issues over the past four years. They include the vote on September 23 on the inflationary farm price amendment opposed by President Roosevelt, and tell whether or not the Congressman signed discharge petition No. 1 to bring the Geyer Anti-Poll Tax Bill to a vote in the House.

Requests for this information have already come from many auxiliaries in various parts of the country. The women realize that in helping to carry out the CIO program of electing win-the-war Congressmen this year they can do a real job for their unions and their country.

AUXILIARY ELECTION WORK

A special issue of the Los Angeles CIO Auxiliary Council bulletin emphasizes the importance of voting this November and gives all-out support to Governor Olson in his campaign for re-election as Governor. Auxiliary members are invited to a pot-luck luncheon devoted to a discussion of the candidates and are urged to volunteer their services to help in the CIO council's drive for the win-the-war candidates.

The Minnesota CIO Auxiliary Council sent a leaflet to every local auxiliary explaining the importance of the campaign to elect Benson, and listing the appeasers who are running for office. The United Electrical and Radio Auxiliary in Hopkins, Minn., has been busy helping the union put out election campaign material. They report an enthusiastic response from the women.

The Auto Auxiliary in Muskegon, Mich., helped the union on a campaign of personal contact with every union member to ensure that he had voted in the primary. They are continuing their activity to ensure that every labor voter is registered and votes right in November.

The first bulletin of the New York Auxiliary of the National Maritime Union urges every member to offer her services for election campaign work. "We must elect Congressmen who will give wholehearted support to the President's Victory War Program," the paper says. "We must defeat the appeaser, the isolationist Congressman. Their re-election would be a victory for Hitler."

Golden to Discuss Manpower Issues

Washington, Oct. 10—The manpower problem, discussed last week in radio forums by CIO Vice-Presidents R. J. Thomas and Joseph Curran, will be on the air again next week when Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the President of the United Steelworkers, goes on the American Forum of the Air in a debate with representatives of government and industry.

Golden speaks Sunday, Oct. 18, over the Mutual Broadcasting System, from 8:00 to 8:45 pm, EWT.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The American Newspaper Guild has chartered a new local union at Zanesville, Ohio, and has secured recognition from the management.

Joseph Kehoe, director of organization, American Communications Association, CIO, reports winning an important NLRB election among the Eastern Division, N. Y. C., Western Union employes, with the following results: ACA, 519; AFL, 213.

CIO Regional Director Charles Gillman of Georgia reports winning an election at the Murray Gin Company, manufacturers of shell casings, with a vote of 314 for United Steelworkers of America to 53 for no union. W. H. Crawford, director, District 35, USA-CIO, was in charge of this election.

CIO Field Representative Thomas Cummings reports that the United Steelworkers of America won the election at the Stanley Works in Bridgeport, Connecticut, with a vote of 667 for CIO to 52 for no union.

Regional Director Hartung of Oregon reports completion of a contract with the Rheems Steel Company, securing among many other fine things, a union shop. USA Representative G. J. Conway of California cooperated with him. Brother Hartung also reports winning an election in behalf of the International Woodworkers of America at Sweet Home, Oregon.

The United Steelworkers came through with two splendid election victories this week, one at the Pullman Standard Co. of Hammond, Ind., where the vote was USA-CIO, 2222; independent, 661; no union, 178; and the other at the Lukens Steel Co., where USA-CIO won 3220 votes, no union, 247.

Shoe Workers Meet

The United Shoe Workers of America opened up their convention on Monday of this week in Worcester, Massachusetts. President McGrath and Secretary-Treasurer Mitchell reported a growth in tax-paying membership in the last year of over 100 per cent.

Much of this splendid growth is accounted for by the drive in the International and Brown Shoe Companies, under the direction of Brother Walter H. Harris, CIO Representative. The International Union also added additional membership to its rolls.

For the first time a large delegation came from these two major companies, namely, International and Brown Shoe Companies. I had the privilege of attending and addressing the convention. The delegates are determined to press the drives to a victorious conclusion.

The International Woodworkers of America are in convention, at this writing. The organization has become more stabilized and a greater degree of unity prevails. The delegates will give consideration to the intensifying of organizing activities in their industry.

Robert J. Davidson, CIO Regional Director, Cincinnati, Ohio, reports winning the ILSCO Copper Tube and Products Company election with a vote of 72 for CIO to 5.

Regional Director Fremming of Kansas City, Missouri, advises that final negotiations have been completed in behalf of the employes of the Kelly Flour Milling Company at Hutchinson, Kansas, resulting in an increase in wages ranging from 3 cents to 9 cents.

Regional Director Pugh of Virginia advises that negotiations at the Old Dominion Box Company have been completed. Participating in these negotiations were Brother Lloyd Vaughan, CIO Field Representative, and Brother Robert Turner, International Representative of the UPNTWA.

Three More Victories

Three more election results show that the workers of the country are flocking to the banner of the CIO in ever greater numbers, realizing that through industrial unions they can best help themselves and aid their nation's war efforts.

At New York, the American Communications Assn. won bargaining rights for 1,000 employes of the Western Union Co.'s eastern division, beating an AFL union by a 2½-1 majority.

Way out in the agricultural valleys of the West Coast, the Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers won one of the most important contests of the year by getting bargaining rights at the Salinas Lettuce Sheds. The vote: CIO, 1,130; no union, 589. This is a tremendous victory in what was once a bitterly anti-union area, and all the UCAPAWA leaders and members are to be congratulated.

And in Dayton, Ohio, the United Auto Workers rang up their 98th election victory at General Motors. At the Aero-Products plant, the vote was 1,303 for the UAW-CIO, only 308 against. We're waiting for that 100th win at GM!

Hourly Schedule Boosts Efficiency In Soviet Plants

KUIBYSHEV, Oct. 10 (ALN)—One reason why Soviet production of war materials has increased sharply in the last few months is that many important mills and factories are now operating on an hourly schedule.

Plants which won the Challenge Order of the Red Banner in the June and July competitions went on the hourly schedule at the beginning of August.

The results, in terms of increased production, were so marked that now the main concern of unions in the munitions industry is to see that more and more plants shift to an hour-to-hour basis.

In factories already working on the hourly schedule, the superintendent of each shop and department reports by phone every hour to a central routing clerk, giving figures on his department's progress toward meeting the daily production plan, reporting any factors which interfere with normal production, and giving a complete list, modified from hour to hour, of materials, tools and parts needed from other departments.

In this way, in intricate modern factories where production of all departments must be nicely balanced, no department waits for other departments to catch up and no bottlenecks are allowed to develop.

TRANSFER WORKERS

The routing clerk system was first developed by a union production committee in a Urals factory, which had difficulty synchronizing production after being evacuated from the west. Workers in one department were frequently idle for several hours while workers in another department were working furiously.

Now, when reports to the routing clerk indicate that one part of the plant is about to run out of work, workers are transferred for a few hours from that department elsewhere in the plant. When everything is running they are transferred back.

The complex problems of building a thoroughly flexible labor force, which in practice means that every worker must be able to perform several different types of work, are now being dealt with by the unions.

The change over of all industry to an hourly schedule, coupled with the introduction of routing clerks in all plants, will undoubtedly result in spectacular new advances in Soviet labor productivity.

Manager David Monas of the board and ACW Vice-President Leo Krzycki (shown at either side of the inscription) made speeches as the tank was turned over to the fighting forces.

FDR Again Lauds Workers; AFL Hears Intl. Unity Plea

TORONTO, Oct. 10—The support of American labor for the country's war effort was praised this week by President Roosevelt and high government officials. At the same time delegates to the AFL convention heard a renewed plea for international unity.

The Chief Executive, in a wire to the AFL convention, said that during his recent cross-country tour he found workers "doing all that was laid out for them and more."

Similar words of praise were contained in an address by Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson.

The convention heard some sharp words on the question of international unity in a speech from Jack Tanner, head of the British machinists union and a fraternal delegate from the British Trades Union Congress.

CRITICIZES 'DEAL'

During the recent TUC convention in England, Tanner was outspoken in his criticism of the deal worked out by the AFL and TUC leaderships for an Anglo-American labor committee which would give the CIO and the railroad brotherhoods an inferior "Class B" participation and completely exclude Soviet trade unions.

The deal has since been repudiated by the CIO, the brotherhoods and the Russian unionists.

Head of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, one of Britain's largest and wealthiest labor organizations, Tanner made an eloquent plea for a democratic international committee to embrace all the unions of the United Nations.

ASKS INTL. UNITY

"I fervently hope and would strongly urge that the greatest efforts be made to join together the workers of Britain, Russia, the United States—and I mean all the workers of the United States, the AFL, the CIO and the Railroad Brotherhoods — the workers of Latin America, Canada and the United Nations, in firm solidarity and practical unity," Tanner declared. His speech aroused little enthusiasm from the AFL top leadership.

Tanner also entered into a spirited defense of the Soviet trade unions, despite their difference in charter from our own, and paid high tribute to the heroism of Russian workers.

He observed that it is "a matter of supreme urgency that we take the offensive as soon as possible . . . Given a second front as a visible target at which our workers can aim, miracles will be performed in the factories."

Chinese Thank CIO Furriers for Hospital Gift

Chungking, Oct. 10—(ALN)—The International Peace Hospital at Wutaishan, high in the mountains of northeast Shansi province, has just acknowledged a new gift from American labor: $5,000 (U. S.) from the International Fur and Leather Workers (CIO).

The money, transmitted through the China Aid Council in New York and the China Defense League in Chungking, will be used to erect a new wing for this famous hospital, which was founded by Dr. Norman Bethune, heroic pioneer of U. S. and Canadian medical aid to China.

Besides this initial donation, the Fur and Leather Workers will appropriate $2,000 annually to keep the new wing in operation.

FIERCE ATTACKS

The people's armies engaged in mobile warfare in North China have during the past year borne the brunt of some of the fiercest assaults since the beginning of the war.

Before these attacks were beaten off, the Chief of Staff of the Eighth Route Army and many high-ranking commanders were killed. Headquarters were subjected to raids, and generals took up rifles. Workers left their factories and joined the soldiers.

Everyone, whatever his normal activity, became a combatant. Many newspapermen and several artists and playwrights with the army died in action. But the attacks were repulsed, with losses to the enemy of 80,000 men.

Through all the cruel difficulties of warfare in the rear of the enemy's main lines, the guerrilla fighters have been noted for the courageous efforts they have made to give their wounded the best possible care.

Now they have more wounded than ever before. The Fur and Leather Workers' contribution will provide 200 additional beds and will save the lives of thousands of men.

Probe Asked On Barriers To USSR Aid

Washington, Oct. 10—A resolution calling for a House investigation of obstacles impairing U. S. aid to its fighting allies, was filed this week by liberal Rep. John Coffee of Washington.

Coffee's action followed an expose of I. F. Stone in PM that governmental stooges of big corporations have delayed shipment to the Soviet Union of vitally important supplies and processes for manufacturing aviation gas, explosives, synthetic elastic and rubber tires.

The Coffee resolution would authorize the House Committee on Patents to explore the "extent to which reluctance to share patents may be hurting aid to our allies and our own war efforts." The resolution pointed out that there had been no denial of delays by men who "frankly expressed more fear of post-war commercial competition than of hurting our chance of victory by withholding important war supplies to our allies."

New CIO Relief Pamphlet

Washington, Oct. 10—"Give—the Union Way," is the title of a new leaflet just issued by the CIO War Relief Committee, 1407 L St. N.W., Washington.

The leaflet shows just how your relief dollars are spent to help the war effort and to aid the victims of Axis aggression. It contains statements by President Murray, Secretary Carey and Chairman Abramson of the CIO War Relief Committee.

Murray Sends Praise to Swedish Labor

Washington, Oct. 10—Greetings and praise were sent to the Swedish Federation of Trade Unions by CIO President Philip Murray this week, in a message congratulating the Federation on reaching a mark of 1,400,000 members.

"We are informed that membership in your Trade Union Federation has increased to more than 1,400,000, and that today one quarter of the people of Sweden are members of organized labor," Murray said.

"Organized labor in every democraticination is the firm guardian of freedom and the indestructible backbone of democracy's struggle against fascists enslavement. In our country, as in all freedom-loving nations now fighting Axis aggression, organized labor is the heart and hands of this people's war.

"In the name of millions of men and women workers who make up the CIO, I greet the Swedish Federation of Trade Unions and convey to you our firm determination to carry on the struggle against aggression until freedom is assured for all the workers and the common people of the world."

Auto Union Hits GM, Wasting Steel On Fenders for Jaloppies

PONTIAC, Mich., Oct. 10—Proof that "business as usual" dies hard at the General Motors Co., was forwarded today to the War Production Board.

President James F. Lucas of Local 653, United Automobile Workers, wrote a letter of bitter protest to WPB Chief Donald Nelson charging that GM bosses are taking men off war work at the Pontiac plant here to make fenders for 1936-37-38 model cars.

Each front fender weighs 42 pounds, the UAW local estimated, and each rear fender 16 pounds. The 7,000 pairs will gobble some 200 tons of steel, while grille frames will consume another 50 tons.

Disclosure of GM's interest in fenders for jaloppies came as civic and industrial leaders throughout the state were calling for scrap steel collections to keep the steel industry functioning.

CLAIM OK FROM WPB

"For the past few weeks we have had several departments working short time because of a shortage of steel," Lucas wrote to Nelson. "Imagine our surprise when the management of Pontiac Motors informed us that they had secured permission of the WPB to manufacture fenders and some other parts of 1936, '37 and '38 cars . . .

"The patriotism of the workers is immediately questioned when they shut a plant down, even for as just a cause as a city's food supply, yet General Motors can use critical steel for civilian use and with the permission of the government agencies. Surely, there is something wrong here.

WORKERS MAD

"The workers in the plant know these things and we are even now having trouble keeping them at work on this fender job.

"You can hardly blame them for this, as they have sons and brothers in the Army and Navy, and feel that they are really letting them down by using this steel, which should be going into the making of guns."

Sharply critical of this waste of materials, the local issued a leaflet depicting a Yankee soldier armed with a "1936 Pontiac fender" warding off an attack by a Japanese war lord. The cartoon bore the caption: "How to win a war—slap a Jap with a fender."

Force War Firms To Co-operate, Union Heads Ask

Detroit, Oct. 10—Leaders of two CIO unions joined this week in a request that the federal government make mandatory joint labor management production committees in all factories holding U. S. war contracts.

The plea was sent to Pres. Roosevelt and WPB Chief Donald Nelson by Sec.-Treas. George Addes of the United Automobile Workers and Pres. Lewis Allan Berne of the Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians.

"Labor management committees are at the very core of production," they said. "They are the means for labor's expression and participation in the war on the production front."

98th GM Plant Votes for CIO

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 10—CIO election victories neared the century-mark in plants of the General Motors Co. when employes of the Aero-Products plant voted 1,303-308 for the United Automobile Workers.

The NLRB victory was the 98th at GM for the union, and the 24th straight victory for the UAW-CIO in southern Ohio district during the past 18 months, according to Regional Director Paul E. Miley.

U. S. to Get Union Facts On Mobile's Low Morale

MOBILE, Ala., Oct. 10—Heartily welcomed by CIO shipyard workers, a federal investigating committee arrives in Mobile this week to probe work, price and living conditions that have been branded among the worst in the nation.

Headed by Daniel Ring of the Maritime Commission and Commander Kelly of the Navy, the committee will look into the conditions that have caused, among other things, a drop in the production standing of the Alabama Dry Dock & Shpibuilding Co. from fourth to eighth in the country.

Also in Mobile will be President John Green of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, to present the union's case to the government agents.

Mobile's crisis received national attention a few weeks ago when thousands of workers boycotted the ferry line running to the shipyard. Formerly operated by the company, it was taken over by the city government, which instituted a 5 cents fare. Union officials estimate that the city, which has shown little interest in Mobile's social and economic conditions, was making $1,000-a-day profits from the line.

Refusal to pay this work-toll climaxed the union's protests against high prices, disgraceful living conditions and low morale throughout the city. Local 18 has long been seeking such a probe as the government is now undertaking.

"Unless a far-reaching 'war-worker morale' program, which will take into consideration housing, labor relations in industry and the cost of living, is instituted here by the government immediately, Uncle Sam may as well forget about Mobile as a vital war production area," the News Digest, CIO paper, warned.

Alcoa Stalls Grievances, WLB Is Told

Denver, Colo., Oct. 10—Pres. Reid Robinson of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, replying to a wire from Chairman William H. Davis of the War Labor Board, told him that a work stoppage at the Cleveland plant of the Aluminum Co. of America had been ended before the wire was received.

Officers of the Alcoa local union in Cleveland have had to ask the workers to stay on the job seven different times, Robinson told Davis, because of failure to settle grievances of 18 months' standing and discriminatory wage increases.

Robinson requested that the WLB set up an arbitration board to assure the workers in this plant that their grievances would be handled promptly in the future.

In recent negotiations ordered by the WLB, the company and Local 755 agreed on wage adjustments, subject to WLB approval, which will eliminate another source of past friction at this plant, union officials asid.

CIO Pickets Balky Boss

Indianapolis, Oct. 10—Worn down by the refusal of the Acme-Evans Milling Co. to negotiate with their union, which has 98% of the workers, Local 84 of the CIO Cannery & Agricultural Workers threw picket lines around the plant this week.

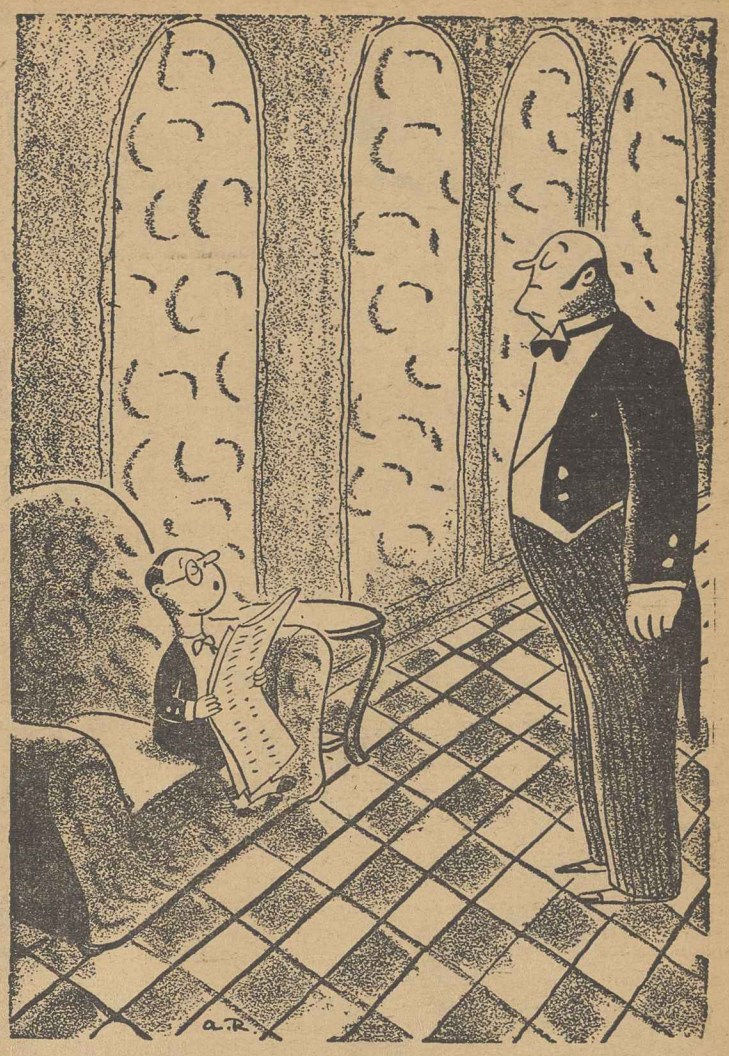
Region Office Moves

New York, Oct. 10—The regional office of the United Federal Workers has moved to new headquarters at 25 W. 23rd Street here.

"Our rapidly expanding union of Uncle Sam's employes" required the larger offices, President James P. Kennedy explained.

"Okay, fellahs, but you'll have to show your ration card."

The Upper Crust



"I'm giving notice, sir. I've just completed my night course in welding."

Conn. Labor To Choose Candidates

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 10—A convention called by Labor's Non-Partisan League of Connecticut is scheduled to open here tomorrow at Bushnell Memorial Hall.

Questions to come before the delegates include endorsement of win-the-war candidates; mobilization of support for the League's legislative program; and discussion of measures to end discrimination against minority groups, especially Negroes.

Fur Flies As 'Independent' Unions Meet

By HARVEY O'CONNOR

Chicago, Oct. 10 (FP)—Born amid a furore of denials of company unionism, shouts that "we're left of the CIO and AFL" and complaints that "we're not that left—that sounds like communism," the Confederated (Independent) Unions of America came to life here on Oct. 3-4.

The convention did little more than set up a framework and pick a name. When a delegate wanted to know how they could be both a confederation and independent, it was decided to use the word in parentheses only temporarily.

What the confederation intends to do with its life was not clear from the two-day convention. While the more articulate forces at the meeting plumped for a program of "smacking" employers and denounced "pious resolutions" on the war as "outright lying," others, more mild in both voice and manner, wanted to "just go along."

DIVERSE GROUPS

Represented among the 135 observers at the meeting were such diverse groups as the Brotherhood of Welders, Cutters & Helpers, the First Natl. Bank Employes of Milwaukee and the Independent Assn. of Golden Guernsey Employes.

None of the groups except the Mechanics Educational Society of America, headed by Matthew Smith, who called and keynoted the meeting, affiliated. Some of the others will consider affiliation later, and the confederation will actually start when two groups pay per capita.

1941, Mob Violence; 1942, Pact

HELENA, Ark., Oct. 10—Scene of vigilante-inspired anti-union violence just a year ago, this town was quiet as a lamb today when the CIO Cannery & Agricultural Workers signed a contract with the Helena Compress Co.

The pact provides for five cent and 7½-cent wage increases, maintenance of membership and other gains.

In September, 1941, CIO organizers coming from Memphis to address an outdoor rally were driven out of town by a mob and ushered over the Arkansas border. Nothing was ever done by law enforcement officers to curb the violence.

But the workers kept contact with union offices in Memphis despite intimidation.

John Lawson Re-Elected

Barre, Vt., Oct. 10—John C. Lawson has been re-elected through a referendum vote to another term as secretary-treasurer of the United Stone & Allied Products Workers, CIO, it was announced today. Lawson's term will expire Sept. 1, 1944.

At the same time the union announced negotiations with the Coggins Granite & Marble Industries, Inc., Elberton, Ga., had ended with nickel-an-hour wage increases retroactive to July 1. Earlier the workers had gained a four-cent raise at the same firm.

Get Wage Hike

Barre, Vt., Oct. 10—Pay increases of 20c and 25c an hour have been received by employes of the Baker-Wood Co., Marion, Ohio, during their one-year affiliation with the United Stone & Allied Products Workers, John Lawson, international secretary-treasurer, said here this week, in announcing renewal of the contract with the company for another year.

A further increase of 2c an hour was included in the agreement which contains the standard union provisions.

WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

WRITE YOUR SENATORS: PASS POLL TAX BILL!

Case History:

Ford Workers Lift Output Over 60%

DETROIT, Oct. 17—Here's a news item that ought to please workers and soldiers—

Production at Dept. 81 of the foundry in Ford's River Rouge plant has been increased 60 per cent, thanks to the effort of a joint labor-management output committee.

Some time ago management officials spoke to the union about disappointment over the department's production rate.

The joint committee swung into action fast. They found five reasons for the low output:

1. Absenteeism—men were taking days off, breaking up working teams.

2. Lack of proper maintenance of equipment — furnaces, not kept in proper repair, were frequently breaking down.

3. Failure of supervisors to instruct the men in foundry techniques — extremely important because of large numbers of new workers.

4. Failure of supervisors to instruct men in the proper care of their intricate tools.

5. Actions of some old-fashioned foremen who thought that yelling and screaming could take the place of cooperation.

CUT ABSENTEE-ISM

The labor members of the committee handled the absentee problem themselves. A two-week campaign of education about the damage to production cut absenteeism down to a minimum. On the other problems, management and union representatives tackled them jointly, got equally good results.

"We believe the success of this enterprise has been due to the honest dealing on both sides, and the willingness of the men to cooperate," commented President Otis Eaton of the union's foundry unit.

13,000 Scrap Committees Now in Drive

Washington, Oct. 17—Some 13,000 local salvage committees are now at work throughout the U.S., the War Production Board announced here this week.

CIO unions throughout the country have been cooperating with these salvage committees, and many union members are active leaders in the committee work.

Any CIO union or member who knows of a scrap supply, no matter how small it may appear to him, should get in touch immediately with his local salvage committee. The committee will see that the scrap moves to the mills as rapidly as possible.

FDR Pins Honor Badge On Heroic CIO Seaman

Washington, Oct. 17—The first award of the Maritime Distinguished Service Medal was given by President Roosevelt to a member of the Natl. Maritime Union this week in a ceremony at the White House.

The recipient was Edward F. Cheney, a 25-year-old seaman from Yeadon, Pa. Cheney was quartermaster on a torpedoed tanker who rescued a number of his shipmates from a sea of flaming oil.

Twice Cheney left a life-raft he had launched to pull exhausted mates aboard. When the raft began to drift back to the burning oil, Cheney acted as a human rowlock to get it out of danger, and for 10 hours kept up the morale of the survivors until rescue.

Following this, Cheney was torpedoed twice again, getting a broken rib the third sinking. His comment on getting news of the award was that he was sorry to miss shipping out again immediately.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—The fate of the bill to wipe out poll-tax voting requirements in eight Southern States rested this weekend with the Senate, and the Senate Judiciary Committee in particular.

The Pepper Bill, companion measure to the Geyer Bill passed in the House by a 252-84 vote this week, is due for final consideration by the Judiciary Committee on Monday, Oct. 19.

Unions were asked last week to wire their demands for prompt and favorable action to the committee, and if daily newspaper reports indicate no action on Monday, the barrage of wires should be continued until the bill is reported out to the Senate for debate and final consideration.

Meanwhile CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan urged all CIO affiliates to write now to the two senators from their home state demanding a vote of "yes" when, and if, the bill is reported out of committee. Some reactionaries in the upper house have been threatening a fillibuster to prevent action on the bill.

The vote in the house found most congressmen responding to the pleas of the folks back home for extension of voting democracy to the eight states where the poll-tax levy bars millions of low-income citizens from exercising their right and duty at the ballot box.

Union Proud Of Member's Gallantry

The sergeant was recently awarded the Order of the Purple Heart for heroic action. He risked his own life to put out flames threatening to explode an Australian munitions dump full of 2,000-pound bombs. He and a buddy, though injured, extinguished the fire and saved the life of hundreds.

A refugee of the Hitler terror in Germany, Schellenberg came to this country five years ago. At the time of his army induction he was a shop steward of Local 1225, CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

News Guild Wins Longest Walkout

Aliquippa, Pa., Oct. 17 —(FP)— The CIO American Newspaper Guild won the second longest strike in its history when a new publisher took over the shutdown Aliquippa Gazette and signed a Guild shop contract providing $5 to $10 weekly raises.

Only longer strike in Guild history was the 15-month walkout against the Chicago Hearst papers in 1939.

The new publisher, Peter J. Flannery, will resume publication Oct. 26. Until that time the strikers will continue to print the Aliquippa News, which they have put out twice a week in the hall of the CIO United Steelworkers. Steelworkers picketed with newspapermen during the strike.

The settlement was a defeat for the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Assn., which gave fat contributions to former Publisher E. J. Tilton for the specific purpose of fighting the strike.

Demand Probe Of Lynch Outrage

New York, Oct. 17 — A demand for a Justice Dept. probe of the lynching of two young Negro boys last week in Mississippi was wired to Attorney-General Francis Biddle by the city CIO Council here. A similar demand for investigation and punishment of the lynchers was made on Gov. Johnson of Mississippi.

Probe Kaiser's Phoney Pact, NLRB Is Asked

CAMDEN, N. J., Oct. 17—Henry Kaiser's shipyard production may be widely publicized, but his labor policies are badly in need of modernization.

That was the complaint voiced today by Sec. - Treas. Philip Van Gelder of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in a blistering letter that demanded government action against Kaiser's "collusive closed shop agreement" with the AFL.

Writing to Chairman Harry Millis of the National Labor Relations Board, the CIO union official accused the Board of delaying issuance of a complaint against the West Coast Shipbuilder—a delay which he described as a "grievous error."

It would be "futile" to hope that conferences between CIO and AFL can settle the issue at stake—"whether or not employes at a new plant have the right to select their own bargaining agency" — Van Gelder declared.

"In the case of the Kaiser shipyards in Portland, Oreg., where now approximately 70,000 men and women are employed, the bargaining agency was selected by 66 men in May, 1941, and even these 66 men had already been coerced into joining the AFL by reason of the fact that from the day the first man was hired at the Oregon yard in the winter of 1941, not a single employe would get through the gates without an AFL clearance," the CIO official charged.

WAGNER ACT FLOUTED

"The long and sordid history of racket unionism in the Kaiser shipyards is a disgrace to the industry and to the nation," he added, "and it is high time that the Kaiser interests and the AFL Metal Trades Department were brought to book for their flagrant and high-handed violations of the Wagner Act extending over the past 18 months and more."

LOW MORALE

Van Gelder asserted that the closed-shop pact with the AFL, which enforces high dues and initiation fees, has affected the morale and production of ships in the Kaiser yards, despite a constant flow of favorable publicity.

"As you doubtless know," he said, "the man hours per ship in the Kaiser yards are considerably higher than in other yards doing similar work.

"The flagrant discrimination against Negroes in the Kaiser yards is a disgusting exhibition of how the prejudices of the small scale AFL business agent, who has acquired tremendous power, can despoil thousands of men of their rights as American citizens.

"It is not too much to say that there is no honest unionism, no democratic organization of the men, no real labor-management production drive in the Kaiser yards today. On the contrary, there is an indeterminate milking of the men by petty racketeers who cloak themselves with the mantle of respectable labor leaders."

Van Gelder concluded his letter with a demand that the NLRB issue a complaint in the Oregon Shipyards case and conduct a hearing at the earliest possible moment so that the "real facts of this whole sordid mess can be brought to light."

Navy O.K.'s Union Dock Proposal

San Francisco, Oct. 17—A plan for supplying key longshoremen for work with the fighting forces overseas as Dock Commandos proposed by the CIO Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union is slated to be into effect at once by the U. S. Navy, the CIO Council announced here. The plan had previously been adopted by the U. S. Army.

Longshoremen may enlist as skilled men for service in the Navy's Construction and Rigger Battalions. Recommendations of the ILWU will be used as the basis of assignment and for commissions to the men. A naval officer will be assigned to work with the unions in selecting the men recommended by the union.

Improvements Won In Furniture Pact

Granville, N. Y., Oct. 17 — Wage increases averaging 10 per cent have been won for employes of the Telescope Folding Furniture Co. in negotiations conducted by Local 36 of the CIO United Furniture Workers.

In addition, according to Rec. Sec. Sue Gilbert, vacation allowances have been extended, seniority broadened, provision made for advancement of older employes and a cost of living clause inserted in the contract.

Intl. Rep. Frank Rogers, Shop Chairman Pete Decker and Atty. A. Berkowitz led the negotiations.

HONORED: Emil Komovues, CIO electrical union member, shown with his improved "go-no-go" gauge for measuring precision instruments that won him honorable mention from the WPB. Members of the labor-management output committee at the Intl. Projector Co. in New York, where he's employed, estimated the device will cut inspection time by 50 per cent and increase production accordingly.

Shoe Union Assails Lewis Split From CIO

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 17—Within 24 hours after John L. Lewis had led the United Mine Workers out of the CIO, the third national convention of the United Shoe Workers of America had branded him as an "appeaser and obstructionist," and had condemned his failure to mobilize "hundreds of thousands of loyal and patriotic miners behind our country's war effort."

Nearly every speaker in a passionate debate lasting half the day condemned Lewis for his policies, domestic and foreign. The vote on the resolution was unanimous.

TO AMEND CONSTITUTION

With the big drive in the plants of the International and Brown Shoe Companies already "over the hump," the delegates sought in the concluding days of the convention to modernize the union's structure.

A proposal to have the national officers elected by the biennial convention, instead of by referendum as at present, set off the main debate of the convention. A number of delegates pleaded that their membership was not ready for the change and the proposed amendment was eventually tabled.

ADOPT TAX PROGRAM

Strong disapproval of the misnamed "Victory Tax" was voiced in a resolution which the convention adopted unanimously. Preferred instead was an increased tax on estates, gifts, and corporation incomes, and the plugging of loopholes in the income tax law.

Other resolutions urged increase by women in the union's affairs; called for the abolition of the poll tax; paid tribute to the leadership of Philip Murray and Allan Haywood; favored a firm alliance of the labor movements of the United Nations, in which American labor would be represented by AFL, CIO, and railroad brotherhoods, and opposed discrimination against Negroes.

The next convention will be held in the Midwest or South in October, 1944.

CIO Broadcast Airs Price, Tax Issues

New York, Oct. 17— CIO's first "Labor for Victory" on the new time—Sundays at 1:15 p.m. EWT—took rationing and taxes and price control and other necessities for total war as its theme for the October 10th show.

The show was built around the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, which has been in the lead in pushing for the economic steps needed for total mobilization against the Axis.

It was presented in dramatic form, with a number of union members discussing their problems in a war economy with a narrator. Script was written by Lyle Dowling, executive assistant in the UERMW, and Peter Lyon.

Labor for Victory comes on the air every other Sunday, on the National Broadcasting Company's Red Network, at 1:15 p.m. EWT. The new time, changed for the UE show, gives much better listener coverage throughout the country than the old time, which was at 10:15 p.m. Saturdays.

The next Labor for Victory program, on Oct. 25, will be presented jointly by the CIO and the AFL, in cooperation with the Wage-Hour Division. It will celebrate the anniversary of the Wage-Hour law, with speeches by Metcalfe Walling and CIO and AFL leaders.

Don't forget to listen in to Labor for Victory. It's labor's own radio program, Sundays at 1:15 p.m.

Cannery Union Up 150%

CHICAGO, Oct. 17 — Full weight of the fourth convention of United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America, CIO, will be placed behind the drive for "Food for Victory," to organize the unorganized, and to solve the farm labor shortage, according to predictions of UCAPAWA leaders.

UCAPAWA represents some 100,000 workers in tobacco plants, canneries and other food industries, as well as thousands of field workers.

Reporting on progress of the union since the last convention in December, 1940, Pres. Donald Henderson said that "the growth of our union is a major contribution to the war effort.

"Establishment of union conditions in the generally low-paid food industries means stabilizing the labor supply of those who fill the nation's market basket. We have bent every effort in the Food for Victory Drive.

"This convention will hammer out plans to help further in solving the serious food problems which face our country in its battle to win the people's war."

GROWTH OVER 150 PER CENT

Since the last convention, industrial membership under UCAPAWA contracts has increased over 150 per cent, from 19,670 in December, 1940, to 51,634 in October, 1942. Today, UCAPAWA has 265 contracts covering 337 plants. Biggest gains have come in the tobacco, grain processing and cottonseed oil and compress divisions.

The grain processing division has been strengthened by the addition of the four major plants of Quaker Oats.

Winning of contracts in both Campbell Soup plants and in the large Libby McNeil and Libby plant in Blue Island, Ill., have been the outstanding gains in the cannery field.

Standard Oil Refinery Goes CIO in Vote

Ingleside, Tex., Oct. 17 — Another big link in Standard's company union barricade collapsed under a CIO assault here this week in an NLRB election at the Humble Oil Refinery here.

The CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union polled 212 votes while the company union known as the Humble Refinery Employes Assn. got a mere 69. Only three workers voted for neither union.

The election campaign and preliminary organizing among the Humble Oil employes were conducted by the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign of which Edwin S. Smith is national director.

Win Kentucky Poll

Vanceburg, Ky., Oct. 17 — The United Shoe Workers of America won its first NLRB election in this state when employes of L. V. Marks & Sons voted 135-86 for the CIO affiliate.

Win Strike, Better Pay At Dept. Store

Brooklyn, Oct. 17—Management of the Brooklyn Lane Bryant Dept. Store decided, after a tough experience, that it would be difficult to carry on the store's 20th anniversary sale with the staff out on the picket line.

Veering from its months of stalling—which had precipitated the walkout by members of the CIO United Retail, Wholesale and Dept. Store Employes—the management agreed to a union demand for $2.50 weekly wage increases. It also consented to arbitrate other demands for longer vacations, sick leave and the 40-hour, five-day week.

LABOR BACKS DRIVE: Representatives of labor and the Red Cross pledge full cooperation with the Red Cross War Fund campaign, scheduled for March and April, 1943. Shown signing the agreement are Irving Abramson, CIO War Relief Committee head; Guy Emerson of the Red Cross, and Matthew Woll of the AFL.

Time for OWI To Stop Snubs To Unions

Washington, Oct. 17—If news releases are any criterion, the Office of War Information and the WPB Information Division don't believe unions deserve any of the credit for the production ideas and suggestions brought forth by labor-management output committees.

Releasing a list of prize-winners whose ideas have been particularly valuable, the WPB and the Office of War Information listed all the companies in which the men were employed—but failed to mention the unions at all.

The criticism is not directed at the WPB's weekly press service for labor papers, but at the general information policy which keeps unions "played down" in news releases.

Without the names of the unions, the release loses much of its value for union newspapers, as well as for the commercial press. The first list of prize winners included members of the CIO auto, steel, electrical and rubber workers, as well as many workers from AFL plants.

A similar refusal by the government information experts to recognize the union's role in the war effort occurred last week when the OWI's 600-word release on the Presidential decoration of Edward Cheney, merchant seaman hero, omitted completely the name of his union—the Natl. Maritime Union.

CIO Leader Says: Councils Create 'New Democracy'

Washington, Oct. 17—The "new pattern of democracy" taking form in joint labor-management production committees and other forms of worker participation in private industry should be extended to government, Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the President of the United Steelworkers, told the local chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management in a conference this week.

"If these new patterns of relationship between people in private industry and civilian life are to be encouraged by our government, why should they not be encouraged to develop in the various agencies, bureaus and other sub-divisions of our government with its hundreds of thousands of employes?" Golden asked.

"Is it not just as fair to assume that there exist among employes of our government just as many useful ideas and just as much constructive ability as yet without opportunity as exists among employes in private industry?

"We can best learn to cooperate," he added, "by being permitted to participate. Thus we can develop a new methodology for democracy and blaze new trails leading to a better, a freer, more secure, peaceful and happier world for all."

Correction

In a review of the pamphlet, "The People vs. The Chicago Tribune," appearing in the Sept. 28 issue, The CIO NEWS gave an incorrect address for the Chicago office of the Union for Democratic Action, from which the pamphlet may be obtained.

The UDA's Chicago office is located at 166 W. Jackson Blvd., and the pamphlet sells for 15c. It's well worth the money.

Senate Fight Against Poll Tax Looms After Victory in House

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—The fight to pass the poll tax bill, which won acceptance in the House Oct. 13, moved against heavy obstacles in the Senate this week.

Scarcely taking time out to celebrate the 252-84 vote, labor and progressive groups mobilized their forces to force the bill through the Senate and give the franchise to millions of low-income voters in the eight southern poll-tax states.

Moving quickly to prepare for the showdown fight in the Senate, Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, called for an intensified campaign to blast the bill through the Senate Judiciary Committee and on to the floor for debate and decision.

TIME IS PRECIOUS

Stressing that time is of the essence, the CIO official urged telegrams and phone calls—it's too late for letters—to members of the Senate Judiciary Committee and to every member of the Senate.

"The House action is a tribute to the effective and energetic work of hundreds of thousands of people and organizations devoted to national progress and national unity for the war effort," Cowan declared. "The vote is a demonstration of what can be accomplished when our American people are aroused to an evil and are organized to make their voices heard. . . .

"All your excellent efforts on the poll tax issue this year will have been wasted, however, if the Senate fails to act before the end of the session. Southern Senators are already threatening a filibuster. The Senate Judiciary Committee has withheld action for over a year on the Pepper Anti-Poll Tax Bill now pending in the Senate.

"These maneuvers can be utterly routed if the nation simply rises up and lets the Senate know that it will not permit petty parliamentary ruses to impede national action at a time like this."

POLL-TAXERS' FIGHT

The debate and vote in the House were clear indication that the progressives' long fight to rid the eight states of the poll tax barrier in federal elections had been heard on Capitol Hill. Labor and civic organizations, together with the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax, demanded and obtained—over a two-year period—218 Congressmen's signatures on a petition to bring the Geyer Bill on to the floor.

With the reactionary Judiciary and Rules Committee by-passed by the successful petition campaign, the poll tax leaders—Congressmen Smith, Cox and Hobbs—waged an intensive battle to sidetrack the bill on technicalities. But they were over-ruled by Speaker Raeburn and outvoted by the House.

The next day the debate ran for four hours, with a dozen poll taxers pulling all the oratorical tricks in the bag. They moaned that the Constitution was being flouted, found "communist plots" under every seat in the House, attacked the CIO and the Negro people, and threatened splits inside the Democratic party.

FOR DEMOCRACY

The poll taxers' arguments were met by Representative Eliot of Massachusetts, McKeough of Illinois, Celler and Marcanonio of New York and others.

Eliot charged that the issue is whether the poor people have the right to vote.

"I have an abiding faith in government by the people, rich and poor alike," the young Bay Stater declared. "It is far from perfect, but it is better than tyranny. The cure for many of the ills of democracy will be found in more democracy."

The voting found the Southern poll taxers voting almost solidly against the measure. But Patrick of Alabama, Kefauver of Tennessee, Thomas of Texas and a few others voted for the democracy bill. On the other hand, a few Congressmen from Northern states—including several already defeated for re-election — cast their ballot for voting restrictions.

Red Cross Calls Labor Conference

Washington, Oct. 7—Invitations to a nation-wide conference of labor leaders to discuss labor's part in the war work of the American Red Cross were issued last week to presidents of all CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood unions by Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis.

The meeting will be held at the Washington Hotel here on October 30.

Stressing the desire of the Red Cross for the "fullest and most effective participation of organized labor in its services," Chairman Davis asked that each union representative be prepared to report the extent of Red Cross activity already undertaken and offer suggestions as to how this participation can be organized and increased.

The meeting will hear a brief explanation of the various services of the Red Cross, and will discuss several specific projects designed to fit the unions' war activities programs.

The conference will meet in the Rose Room on the roof floor of the hotel. Luncheon will be served the delegates in the sun parlor on the same floor.

Gracious! Unions Make Society Page!

Chicago, Oct. 17—The two-fisted leaders of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in this area are surprised and puzzled—they have made the society pages of the Chicago newspapers.

For the UE, along with wives of union members, announced a "sulfa tea" to be given Sunday, Oct 18—and the idea caught on.

The "sulfa tea" is a means of raising money to buy and ship sulfanilimide immediately to aid the wounded of the Red Army.

"The idea of giving a 'sulfa tea' has caught on," writes Sarah Brown Boyden, society editor of The Chicago Sun.

"Parties are springing up from Lake Forest to Gary. The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers' union is giving one. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brewster are giving one. Mrs. Arthur Byfield is giving one at her home in Highland Park, complete with samovar and blinis. Mrs. Wilmarth Ickes and Mrs. Fred Wale are joining forces to ask a crowd to one of their homes in Winnetka."

"All the same, we're not extending our jurisdiction to cover the Social Register," comments Ernie DeMaio, US leader in the Chicago area.

Washington, Oct. 17—A wide loophole that permits job discrimination by employers with anti-Negro and other prejudices was protested by CIO President Philip Murray this week.

The loophole was found in a regulation issued by the U. S. Employment Service, which instructs USES officials: "To make all referrals without regard to race, color, creed or national origin except when an employer's order includes these specifications which the employer is not willing to eliminate." The regulation was signed by Paul V. McNutt, as chairman of the War Manpower Commission and head of USES. Murray's letter was sent to him.

"In the light of the present-day concern over alleged manpower shortages of various types, I am at a loss to understand how a responsible agency under your jurisdiction can refuse to draw upon any source of available manpower simply because an employer 'is not willing to eliminate' discrimination based on 'race, color, creed or national origin,'" Murray wrote.

WAR FAILURE

This clause not only encourages discrimination, Murray added, but also "makes a federal agency a party to a very direct failure to utilize the nation's fullest resources in the war effort."

He asked Commissioner McNutt to answer the question of whether the War Manpower Commission proposed to amend the regulation to close the loophole and let the USES go ahead on job referrals regardless of racial or other prejudice.

STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Chemical Industries

• To keep the production of essential products going at high speed without interruption, stainless steel is being used increasingly by the chemical industries.

Stainless steel has excellent corrosion and heat resistance, high strength, and a hard, smooth, easily cleaned surface. Hence equipment made from this long-lasting metal helps speed up and maintain production because it reduces cleaning time . . . permits operation at higher temperatures and pressures . . . increases the yield of high-purity product. In addition, stainless steel minimizes costly and time-consuming shutdowns for maintenance, repair, and replacement.

An example of one important property of stainless steel is its great resistance to attack by nitric acid and other powerful oxidizing agents, which makes it useful in the manufacture and handling of these corrosive products.

The Poll Tax Must Go

The passage of the Geyer anti-poll tax bill by the House by a more than three-to-one majority is a great victory for American democracy.

It shows what can be accomplished by a clear demonstration to Congress of the wishes of the great majority of the plain people. For, thanks to the campaigns conducted by the CIO and many other progressive organizations, the Congressmen were flooded with requests that they act at once to abolish the vicious poll-tax, as one of the worst stumbling-blocks to all-out democratic war effort.

It was not an easy victory, however, despite the fact that sentiment for abolition of the poll-tax is so overwhelming that few legislators, outside of those from poll-tax states, dare to take an open stand for the continued disfranchisement of ten million American citizens.

The tactics of the poll-taxers were to use every parliamentary maneuver to prevent this issue from coming to the floor of the House for a vote. They succeeded in thus blocking a vote for a year and a half; and it took long and hard campaigning to force the bill out of committee by the petition method.

This victory for democracy in the House is an encouraging indication that this people's war is increasing the alertness and determination of millions of ordinary folks throughout the country to make our democracy really function for victory.

But House passage of the anti-poll tax bill is only half the battle. The struggle now shifts to the Senate, where the anti-democratic poll tax elements have used and will continue to use the same tactics as their cronies in the House.

Senate action on the Pepper anti-poll tax bill has long been blocked by burying the bill in committee, and recently a small sub-committee of the Senate judiciary committee rendered an adverse report on the bill. This report was based on phony grounds of unconstitutionality, which any good constitutional lawyer can rip to pieces in no time.

The full judiciary committee is to consider the Pepper bill this week, and immediate action is urgent from all true friends of democracy to obtain a favorable report from this committee and a speedy Senate vote to adopt the bill.

In the Senate, as in the House, there are few members who will dare to defy the wishes of their constituents by continuing the denial of voting rights to the millions of disfranchised Americans in the poll-tax states—if the issue can be kept clear.

So the tactics of the reactionary minority will be to obscure the issue by spurious constitutional arguments, to block action by parliamentary trickery and to threaten a filibuster as a last resort.

The CIO asks the following action TODAY:

1. Wire every member of the Senate Judiciary Committee demanding an immediate and favorable report on the Pepper anti-poll tax bill. (A list of the members of the committee will be found above.)

2. Wire or contact personally all members of the Senate to press for prompt Senatorial action to pass the bill to abolish the poll tax.

Root Out the Poll Tax

Here are the members of the Senate Judiciary Committee. Wire to them today—at Senate Office Building, Washington, D. C.—urging a speedy and favorable report on the Pepper anti-poll tax bill:

Frederick Van Nuys, Indiana
Pat McCarran, Nevada
Carl A. Hatch, New Mexico
Tom Connally, Texas
Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Wyoming
James H. Hughes, Delaware
Albert B. Chandler, Kentucky
William H. Smathers, New Jersey
Harley M. Kilgore, West Virginia
Abe Murdock, Utah
Ernest W. McFarland, Arizona
Wall Doxey, Mississippi
George W. Norris, Nebraska
Warren R. Austin, Vermont
John A. Danaher, Connecticut
Alexander Wiley, Wisconsin
William Langer, North Dakota
Harold H. Burton, Ohio.

And don't forget to communicate with your own Senators, too, even if they are not on this committee, to get the Pepper bill adopted without delay.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WHEN Johnny marches off to war, every song and every decent sentiment demand that his girl and the folks back home remain true to him.

But there are a lot of politicians sneaking around the old apple tree today to make passes at Johnny's girl friend, if she has a vote. And if the folks don't watch out, the homes fires will burn down Johnny's political home before he comes marching home again.

The absence of millions of voters in the armed forces, and of millions of workers employed on war jobs far from home, may lead to a big switch in the coming elections, according to political forecasts.

Many anti-labor candidates, lukewarm in their war attitudes, are counting on slipping into office due to the absence of so many real win-the-war and labor voters.

It will be one of the dirtiest tricks in history, if this happens due to the election apathy of the home folks. For all the smug calculations of the reactionaries take it for granted that millions who could easily vote will stay away from the polls, believing there are no real war issues at stake.

★ ★ ★

The issue is whether America is to have a real Victory Congress devoted to an all-out war effort in loyal support of our Commander-in-Chief, or a Block-the-War Congress of sit-on-the-lid tories, politicians-as-usual and scarcely concealed appeasers and defeatists.

★ ★ ★

The present Congress has been bad enough. It has sabotaged and obstructed the President's seven-point program and other vital domestic war measures. It has produced the worst soak-the-poor and spare-the-rich tax legislation on record.

But there is danger—unless labor turns the present tide—that Congress may be even worse after the elections, due to anticipated Republican gains and the loss of some of the best win-the-war progressives.

The progressive bloc in the House already has lost Rep. Raymond McKeough of Illinois now running for Senator, and the following Massachusetts progressives:

Rep. Arthur Healy, appointed to a judgeship; Rep. Thomas Eliot, gerrymandered out of re-nomination; and Rep. Joseph Casey, who is running for the Senate.

While party labels are not labor's first concern there is reason for alarm over predictions that the Republicans will gain 21 House seats, due to the absence of more Democratic than Republican voters.

For the voting records of Congress for years show an almost solid Republican vote from industrial states against labor, with very few notable exceptions.

Finally, many win-the-war pro-Roosevelt Congressmen were elected by narrow margins in 1940. The anticipated reduction in this year's vote may lead to their defeat—unless labor is active as never before to bring progressive voters to the polls.

★ ★ ★

Labor need have no inferiority complex about the coming elections, however. The unions are at the peak of their strength, and labor and working farmers represent a decisive majority in every important state.

Furthermore, labor's stand for national unity, loyal support of our Commander-in-Chief and an all-out victory effort reflects the sentiments of nearly all Americans in all walks of life—if the election issues are made clear to them.

While many progressives were elected by narrow margins, the same is also true of many of the worst reactionaries in Congress.

Labor therefore has the unquestioned power to tip the scales in countless constituencies in favor of real win-the-war candidates—if it gets out its full vote.

In the big industrial states where labor is most powerful, there is also plenty it can and must do—not only to re-elect progressives, but also to defeat those Congressmen who have voted consistently against labor and the working farmers.

The voting records show the following number of Congressmen from such states have voted consistently against legislation of benefit to labor and small farmers: Half the Congressmen from Indiana and Ohio; 11 or 12 out 17 Michigan Congressmen; 9 out of 15 Massachusetts Congressmen.

Of Illinois' 27 Congressmen, 13 have anti-labor and 16 anti-small farmer records. Out of 20 California Congressmen, 12 have voted consistently against labor and 7 against low-income farmers. In Pennsylvania there are 13 and in New York 14 Congressmen with consistent anti-labor voting records.

CIO President's Call:

VOTE FOR VICTORY!

By PHILIP MURRAY, President
Congress of Industrial Organizations

The most important elections in American history take place on November 3.

The results of these elections will determine the kind of Congress that will run the legislative branch of our government in our country's toughest war—the war for survival.

Every American citizen has a Number 1 job to do for his country on election day—to go to the polls and vote. It is a job just as important as making — and even firing—bullets at the Axis.

If we do this job thoroughly, we will fire one of the biggest bullets in the arsenal of democracy—the bullet forged long ago in the fires of our first war of liberation.

Germans and Japanese and Italians and their conquered subjects do not vote. That is the difference between us and the enemy. We vote because we are a free people. We must vote this election day to keep ourselves a free people.

The kind of Congress we have for the next two years will determine to a great extent the kind of war we fight. If we have a Congress that backs our Commander-in-Chief in all the offensive war measures that are necessary for victory, the war will be over that much quicker and fewer Americans will die. If we have the kind of Congress that holds back, that refuses to pass laws to uphold the fighting fronts and to strengthen the home front, victory will be that much further away and that much more costly in lives and treasure.

Congress & the War

There are 435 Congressional candidates up for election this year, plus 32 Senators, and numbers of State and local officials.

Most of these candidates or incumbents want to win the war as earnestly as we do. Many of them back our Commander-in-Chief to bring an early victory and to end economic inequalities that hamper our all-out war.

These representatives of the people should receive our vote and be returned to office.

* * *

There are a number of candidates who, by their actions in Congress and outside it, do not show up as supporters of the victory drive. These individuals have a sorry record of disruption and delay on war measures. They have sabotaged the President's seven-point victory program. They have sponsored and fought for viciously repressive laws aimed at labor.

Frequently they have been found associated with outright defeatist and appeaser elements.

These misrepresentatives of the people must be retired from public life by our votes against them and for their opponents.

The Task for All

To aid our country and ourselves in this time of crisis, we must:

1 Go to the polls and vote on election day. See that our wives and shopmates and our neighbors vote. Rally our fellow-workers to their duty at the polls through our unions, our auxiliaries, our civic and fraternal groups, through every means of communication we possess.

2 Vote for candidates recorded in full support of our Commander-in-Chief and our country's total war. Look to the record of each candidate before voting. You will find this record through your local, State and national CIO organization.

3 Vote early, and return to our war production jobs as quickly as possible. We will work better with the knowledge of our duty done as free workers and as Americans.

On Tuesday, November 3, the polls will be open for the most crucial election in American history.

Our duty and our own interest are plain—VOTE FOR VICTORY!

Unions Press Campaign To Elect 'Win-War' Congress

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—Spurred on by a rousing appeal from Pres. Murray, labor forces throughout the nation today moved into the home-stretch of the most crucial election campaign in recent years.

At stake in the Nov. 3 elections is the make-up of a Congress which will serve during the most critical period of the war and may write the peace.

Whether or not speedy victory will come from all-out national effort and whether the peace will follow the precepts of President Roosevelt and Vice-President Wallace for a world-wide democratic order dedicated to the century of the common man—these are the issues that may well be decided when the voters mark their ballot on the first Tuesday in November.

Competent observers warn that the situation is deadly serious. Defeatists and disrupters are stronger than at any time since Pearl Harbor. Large sections of the commercial press, more concerned with keeping democracy in chains at home than in cutting the ties of fascism abroad, are sniping at the Commander-in-Chief and his policies.

Against this trend, unions throughout the nation have been mobilizing their members in the face of new problems created by the war. Thousands of workers are in the armed forces and find it difficult if not impossible to cast their votes for victory. Other thousands have left their homes to work in booming war plants, and are faced with the complicated problem of registering in new communities or going through the equally complicated process of securing absentee ballots.

For these reasons, it's a prime necessity that every worker who has the opportunity to vote should cast his ballot Nov. 3 for win-the-war candidates who support President Roosevelt and who recognize labor's great part in freedom's battle.

Unfortunately reports are not at hand on all labor-endorsed candidates at this time. But union members can learn easily and quickly from their union locals which candidates have won labor's endorsement in their states and districts. In this space The CIO NEWS surveys some of the particularly crucial elections—but keep in mind that lots of good candidates aren't listed here, nor are plenty of others who ought to get a one-way ticket back to private life.

MASSACHUSETTS

Bay State CIO unions are putting their full support behind Representative Joseph Casey, who's running for Senate against Henry Cabot Lodge. Casey has an outstanding labor record and has been consistent in his support of FDR. His defeat would be a serious blow to the win-the-war cause. Similarly, the state CIO backs Gov. Saltonstall (R) for re-election on the basis of his civil liberties record and his efficient handling of war problems.

Marked for defeat if CIO ballots can help is Representative Joseph Martin (R), who as House GOP leader has consistently hampered the President.

CONNECTICUT

Stronger than ever before, Connecticut CIO and AFL unions have joined forces to keep Governor Robert Hurley (D) in the state capitol. Hurley's understanding of labor's needs and his record of support to the war, have won widespread support from Nutmeg State workers. Also on labor's "must elect" list are Odell Shepard for lieutenant-governor and L. J. Maciora for Congressman-at-large. Representative Leroy Downs (D), a Roosevelt supporter, is labor's choice over Claire Boothe Luce, wife of the publisher of Time and a stream-lined, 1942 - model front for reaction.

NEW YORK

Empire State politics are muddled, but labor has kept its eye on the "win-war" ball. CIO state and city councils are supporting Dean Alfange, American Labor Party candidate for governor against John Bennett (D) and Tom Dewey (R).

Lt.-Governor Charles Poletti (D & ALP) has the workers' endorsement for another term. A quartet of defeatists— Representative Hamilton Fish (R), the Hitler stooge in the 26th District; William Pheiffer (R) in the 16th; William B. Barry (D) in the 2nd; and Joseph O'Brien (R) in the 38th are all special targets for retirement from Congress.

NEW JERSEY

Jersey voters have an open-and-shut choice in the Senatorial race between Senator William Smathers (D), with a good record, and Albert Hawkes (R), former U. S. Chamber of Commerce head and a leading reactionary. 'Nuff said.

Workers all over the nation will be watching the contest in the 8th Congressional District where Irving Abramson (D), state CIO head and chairman of the National CIO War Relief Committee, challenges Representative Gordon Canfield (R). A highly capable labor leader and a gifted speaker, Abramson would provide the nation's unionists with a formal spokesman on the floor of the House. Abramson is getting support from both CIO and AFL unions in his highly-industrialized district.

Mary Norton (D), chairman of the House Labor Committee, has outspoken labor support in the 13th District on the basis of her career of service.

PENNSYLVANIA

Pretty well fed up with the reactionary policies of Governor Arthur James, Keystone State workers are supporting F. Clair Ross (D) and the entire Democratic ticket. Two of the worst foes of labor were eliminated from Congress in the primaries when Guy T. Moser and Charles Faddis were snowed under. One of the best progressives in the House, Representative Elmer Holland, who has run a one-man campaign against the defeatist McCormick-Patterson press, isn't running for re-election. In the 29th District, all union groups are getting behand James F. Lavery (D), a shop steward for the CIO electrical workers at the General Electric Co.

OHIO

John McSweeney (D) has labor's okeh for governor. CIO is running an active campaign as well for re-election of Stephen M. Young (D), Congressman-at-large. In the primaries, Ohio voters removed a leading oppositionist, Martin Sweeney, from Congress, and the CIO looks to other victories Nov. 3.

MICHIGAN

Senator Prentiss Brown (D), whose one-man fight in the Senate for passage of the President's price control bill won him national respect, has vigorous support from the United Automobile Workers, dominant union in this key state. Governer Van Waggoner (D) has the CIO call for re-election. Dorothy Roosevelt, a relative of the First Lady, gets the labor endorsement in the 17th District against Representative Dondero, whose bad isolationist record before Pearl Harbor hasn't improved since. Another major battle occurs in the 1st District, with former Representative George Sadowski (D) making a comeback attempt with vigorous union assistance. In the primaries Sadowski eliminated Representative Tenerowicz, who attacked the unions and supported the Dies Committee.

ILLINOIS

It's the people against the outrageously reactionary Chicago Tribune in the Illinois elections. CIO and AFL are all-out for Representative Raymond McKeough (D), outstanding champion of labor and the common people in the House, in his campaign for the Senate against Curley Brooks (R), a Charlie McCarthy for the Trib who carries Publisher McCormick's "hate-Roosevelt" ideals on to the Senate floor. Defeat of McKeough would be calamitous. State CIO, which meets this weekend, has already endorsed McKeough, along with Benjamin Adamowski (D) for Congressman-at-large, and Representative A. J. Sabath (D), who as chairman of the House Rules Committee has frequently been the lone progressive voice on that powerful group.

WISCONSIN

Wisconsin workers and progressives have a full-sized job ahead to remove from office a gang of loud-mouthed reactionaries. Governor Julius (Just) Heil (R) has given the state its worst administration in years while making some of the silliest statements ever to come from a responsible government official. Representatives Thill, Johns and Keefe (R) have, through their consistently anti-labor, anti-FDR records, earned the right to give up their seats in the House.

MINNESOTA

Elmer Benson (Farmer-Labor) gave Minnesota one of its best administrations when he was governor; now he's seeking the Senate seat of Joseph Ball (R), who's lent his name to all sorts of vicious anti-labor bills.

MONTANA

Senator James Murray (D), one of the most capable and progressive members of the Upper House, runs against Wellington Rankin (R) who has the support of Senator Burton K. Wheeler.

Wheeler lost his labor and progressive support when he became a leading America Firster and a pal of the Anaconda Mine bosses whom he had once fought. Murray's re-election will be a major victory for workers, small businessmen and all who want vigorous prosecution of the war.

WYOMING

Senator Schwartz (D) runs for re-election with the support of workers who appreciate his consistent pro-New Deal, pro-war policies and voting record.

CALIFORNIA

One of the nation's liveliest campaigns finds workers and progressives lined up behind the re-election fight of Governor Culbert D. Olson (D). His opponent is reactionary Earl Warren (R), notorious for his anti-labor policies while attorney-general.

Warren's election might bring Herbert Hoover into the Senate; they're close pals and political associates. Many think aging Senator Johnson will resign in the next few years; Hoover might well get Warren's interim appointment. "Breadline" Hoover in the Senate would be a nightmare.

State CIO is pushing Lieutenant Governor Ellis Patterson (D) for re-election, and State Senator Robert Kenney (D)—he's head of the liberal National Lawyers Guild—for attorney-general. Representative John Tolan (D), whose House Committee investigating migration of defense workers, has done an excellent job, gets strong CIO endorsement. So, too, does Will Rogers, Jr., sone of the late humorist, who's waging a mighty fight to remove Representative Leland Ford (R)—one of Congress' very worst members—from his Southern California seat. Ford's defeat would replace a wild foe of unionism with a young progressive.

OREGON

Oregon's CIO endorsed Earl Snell (R) for governor, after expressing disapproval of the policies of Lew Wallace (D). In a tongue-twisting contest, the union group chose Earl A. Nott (D) over incumbent James Mott (R), endorsed T. R. Mahoney (D) over Homer Angell (R) in the 3rd district and together with the AFL is backing Edward Kelly (D) in the state's newly-created 4th district.

Final Plea:

Murray Asks Congress Remove Payroll Tax

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—Making a "final plea" to Congress for a win-the-war tax bill, CIO President Philip Murray this week wrote to the joint House-Senate Tax Conference Commitee urging elimination of the so-called "victory tax," restoration of dependents' exemptions, and tightening up on war profits taxation.

The bill, as voted by the Senate last week and sent to the House for conference before final passage, makes a complete mockery of all the Treasury and CIO proposals for a bill to raise needed war revenue and preserve adequate health and living standards for workers and other low-income groups.

The "victory tax," which takes a straight five per cent out of all incomes above $12 a week, is written into the bill. The war profits tax is reduced from an inadequate 45 per cent to an even more inadequate 40 per cent. The allowance for dependents is cut from $400 to $300—and so on.

These are new dodges to lay the tax burden on the poor thought up by the Senate. The earlier House bill, which left all the loopholes that allow the wealthy to escape taxation, is part of the Senate version. Higher taxes are placed on low incomes, while taxes on the big money are left off lightly.

MORE THAN DOLLARS

This is not a dollars and cents war, Murray pointed out in his final appeal. "In wartime there can be no question of mere money. The problem is tanks, guns and ships; the problem is delivery of those tanks, guns and ships. The problem is food and clothing for the workers who produce those tanks, guns and ships.

"These men are not concerned with mere money. The simple fact is that when you tax their wages below the danger line, you tax their health, their strength, their war production."

Murray's letter, while pleading for last minute action "to save what little is within the power of your conference committee to save" from the wreckage, was sharp in criticism of the sabotage job the two Houses have done.

'BREAD AND MILK'

"You have reached into the homes of $15 and $20 a week workers to take bread and milk from their tables," he wrote, "while you have ruthlessly cast into the wastebasket Treasury proposals for corporate taxation and for plugging loopholes.

"You have heeded pleas for the protection of money and you have ignored pleas for the protection of our national health and strength.

"This is an all-out war, a war of the people. As a matter of military necessity we must see to it that the physical energies of all our people, our soldiers in uniform and our soldiers in overalls, are preserved at levels which will enable them to act most effectively on the battlefield and in the factory to win this war."

SALES TAX, AGAIN

Meantime, the funeral of the win-the-war program was scarcely breaking up before Congress Tories began talking about the sales tax as the only method of raising the revenue needed because of the failure to pass an adequate bill months ago.

Now the same people responsible for this deficit are openly proposing to add still another burden on the war workers—the burden of a sales tax on everything they eat and wear and use to keep alive.

Outmoded Buying Habits Of U. S. Injure War Effort, CIO Leader Warns

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—Outmoded procurement policies of the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission "jeopardize the full mobilization of all our national resources to produce for total war," Russ Nixon, representing the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers told a Congressional committee here this week.

The testimony, together with some strong remarks from Mayor LaGuardia of New York, was given to the Senate Small Business Committee, chaired by Senator James E. Murray of Montana. The committee is studying the problem of thousands of small plants that are wholly or almost wholly overlooked when war contracts are passed around.

These outmoded policies, which favor big business at the cost of maximum output, are responsible for leaving enormous productive resources idle while a favored few of the big outfits are loaded beyond capacity, Nixon pointed out.

FED UP ON STATISTICS

New York, with hundreds of thousands of idle workers and unused plants, is fed up with statistics and wants action to put its productive capacity to work for victory, LaGuardia declared. "I do say we can make needed things," he said. "And I want to say to the procurement agencies that we can't win a war on statistics. We're pretty well exhausted supplying those."

Nixon's testimony, which bluntly called the War Production Board a "misnomer" for its failure to put small plants to work, was in line with repeated urging by CIO Pres. Philip Murray early in the war production program that contracts should be distributed more widely.

This results in overloading areas where manpower, as well as housing, transit and other facilities, is short, while surplus manpower areas are left unused, Nixon pointed out.

"The American people have a right to know that their will is being flouted in this respect," Nixon said.

"It is apparent that the subtle influences of big business, business-as-usual, and procurement-as-usual within the war agencies are still successfully retarding war production through the monopolization of war work by 'preferred participants'."

He urged that the WPB be required to follow the lines laid down in the Murray-Patman bill, in which Congress ordered it to make a complete survey of business with a view to "the potential productive capacity of plants operated by small business concerns."

A clear line of authority should be set out "so that there can be no excuses or evasions for failure to handle this problem as directed by Congress . . . to fully utilize the productive facilities of small business as well as large business in totally adapting our economy to total war against the Fascist Axis," he concluded.

ALL SMILES is dimpled Jean Heller, member of the CIO Office & Professional Workers in New York, who sold $5,000 worth of War Bonds in one week during office hours.

Co-Operation, Not Labor Draft, Seen As Key Manpower Need

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17—Some much-needed light was thrown on manpower problems this week in Washington, in radio forum discussions, in testimony before Congressional committees and in President Roosevelt's national radio speech.

Speaking on the American Forum of the Air Sunday, Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers, called for full labor representation in agencies dealing with the problem, pointing out that "when we are permitted to participate we learn how to co-operate, to work freely together."

TWO OBJECTIVES

Two main objectives of our manpower policy must be 1) to select and train best men for the armed forces and 2) to man our war plants and farms with sufficient labor to produce all the goods we and our allies need for victory, Roosevelt said.

"In order to do this," he added, "we shall be compelled to stop workers from moving from one job to another as a matter of personal preference; to stop employers from stealing labor from each other; to use older men, and handicapped people, and more women, and even grown boys and girls, wherever possible and reasonable, to replace men of military age and fitness; to train new personnel for essential war work and to stop the wastage of labor in all non-essential activities."

ARMY SIZE

An important contribution to the whole manpower question was made when the President called for lowering the draft age to 18. A bill for this is now before Congress, with Army leaders appearing to testify for quick passage. Size of the U. S. Army, one of the most important factors in calculating manpower needs, was indicated at 7,500,000 by the end of 1943. Present size is four and a quarter million.

No compulsion is needed to get the required manpower for all-out war, Golden said in his radio appearance on the American Forum of the Air.

"I am so thoroughly convinced of the sincere desires of our people to do their utmost to win the war, that I believe they will readily assent to every request and suggestion made by our government which is designed to enhance our war efforts," he said.

ESTIMATES NEEDED

"Reasonably precise" estimates of manpower needs in the 12 regions into which the War Manpower Commission is divided are a first need, Golden said, plus voluntary registration of all adults between the ages of 16 and 65. This should be done by enlisting the active aid of farm, civic, labor, church, business, school and other organizations, he said, pointing to the scrap drive and other drives in which the whole public has taken part as examples of what can be done.

Following the developments of the week on the manpower issue, there was a notable falling off in manpower speculation — inspired by wishful thinking — about the imminent possibility of compulsory manpower legislation.

CIO Member on Rail Labor Council

Washington, Oct. 17 — Labor-management committees from the railroad and trucking industries have been named to work in close cooperation with the Office of Defense Transportation, it was revealed this week.

Samuel J. Hogan, head of the CIO Natl. Marine Engineers Beneficial Assn., has been named to the railway labor group, along with presidents of four railway brotherhoods.

Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

"Henderson urges housewives to check food prices" reads a newspaper headline of October 11, 1942. The story quotes Henderson as pointing out that prices on poultry, dairy products and other foods brought under control after passage of the new anti-inflation bill early this month, cannot be higher than the highest prices charged between September 28 and October 2. Housewives are told, therefore, to check prices paid during that period against present prices to determine whether they are being cheated.

CIO auxiliary women think that's a fine suggestion, Mr. Henderson. We've been urging the Office of Price Administration since May of this year to use housewives to assist in enforcement of price control regulations. We want to point out, though, that only if this checking is done in an organized manner under the auspices of the OPA, so that every store in every community is checked regularly by a group of housewives working together, will the checking bring real results.

We can't help wondering, also, whether this message to the housewife, coming just the day after OPA permitted price increases in 11 important categories of foodstuffs, isn't partly to make us forget that hardly any March food price ceilings are left.

ADDS UP BIG

These latest increases will only be a cent or two on most items, Henderson says. It doesn't sound like much put that way but add it up for the country and it means $70,000,000 added on to our food bill for the year. To the average family it means less of some item in the market basket to meet those one-cent and two-cent increases in in other items.

Price-fixing is one point of the President's seven-point war economic program. Those seven points are all closely related. They must all be carried out if the program is to do it's job of keeping our domestic economy in balance for Victory. Increases in food prices are bound to throw it out of balance because they interfere with worker's getting the foods they need to work at top efficiency—and that hinders the war effort.

WALLACE RECEIVES DELEGATION

Six women from the New York Maritime Union Auxiliary came to Washington Oct. 12 to present a giant postcard calling for the immediate opening of a second front to Vice-President Henry A. Wallace. The postcard, addressed to President Franklin D. Roosevelt and signed by over 1000 people, said:

"Our husbands keep 'em sailing. Open up the Second Front now in order to save the lives of American men in the future."

The Vice-President thanked them for bringing the postcard, said that the President's stand on the second front was well known, and assured them that there was the closest possible cooperation between the high commands of the British, Russian and American armies.

The women in the delegation were Mrs. Elsa Whalen, whose husband, Paddy Whalen, one of the founders of the National Maritime Union, recently lost his life when his ship was torpedoed in the Caribbean; Mrs. Sylvia McCarthy, president of the New York Maritime Union Auxiliary; Mrs. Alice Neville, treasurer of the auxiliary; Mrs. Madeline Phillips, recording secretary; Miss Virginia Turpin, who lost her uncle in a torpedoing, and Mrs. Caroline Kasbohn.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

The United Steelworkers of America came through with another great victory. This again demonstrates that the workers of this nation want CIO. This latest victory was the country-wide election held in all the Crucible Steel plants, resulting in a vote of 15,535 for USA-CIO, 703 for no union. Other USA election victories are as follows: Earl Crowder, USA representative reports a victory for CIO at the Lynchburg Foundry, Lynchburg, Va., with a vote of 281 to 225. Regional Director E. B. Pugh participated. Assistant Director of New Jersey Ewald Sandner, reports winning the Scully Steel Company election with a vote of 97 for USA to two for no union.

Walter H. Harris, director of the Shoe Workers Organizing Campaign reports that the USWA-CIO has been certified sole collective bargaining agency in the Sole Leather Plant of the Brown Shoe Company, St. Louis, Mo., employing approximately 600 employes. Negotiations will begin immediately for a contract.

Edward McCrone, CIO sub-regional director in Connecticut, advises that the Textile Workers Union won the NLRB election at the Bowdrell & Alexander Company, Danielson, Conn., with a vote of 659 for CIO to 527 for no union. Brother McCrone also reports that the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers won the election at the Plume and Atwood Manufacturing Company at Thomaston, Conn., with a vote of 224 for CIO to 66 for no union.

Progress in South

Morris Muster, president, United Furniture Workers of America, reports this organization is making progress in the furniture centers in the South and reports a recent victory at the Brooklyn Cooperage Company, Sumter, S. C., with a vote of 141 for CIO to 30. UFWA Representative Charles Cobrun, Jr., was in charge of this campaign.

Assistant Director Ewald Sandner of New Jersey, reports the following recent victories:

American Transformer Co., Newark, N. J. UERMWA, 220; AFL, 120.

Federal Employees, UCC. SCMWA, 45; AFL, 14

Swiss American Gear Co., Hoboken, N. J.: UAW-CIO certified and a contract signed, including 10 cents per hour increase, vacations, seniority rights.

I. Lewis Cigar Co. UPNTWA, 299; AFL, 128.

Organizing Plans

A conference of CIO regional directors and representatives of affiliated international unions of the Southern states was held in Chattanooga, Tenn., on Monday of this week, presided over by myself and attended by Secretary James B. Carey. This conference brought out that progress has been made in these areas by way of organizing workers into the CIO and that further activity is required. Representatives at this conference gave much attention to the question of economic equality for the Negro workers. They were unanimous in their position on this important problem.

The growing industry of shipbuilding was given particular attention both on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts.

The conference adjourned with the determination to intensify organizing campaigns; bring about a greater degree of cooperation between respective organizations and the CIO regional offices and with the express desire to confer with the heads of our affiliated unions at the time the CIO convention meets in Boston.

Secretary Carey addressed the gathering. Miss Lucy Randolph Mason, CIO Public Relations representative; E. T. O'Connell, editor, News Digest; Mrs. Betty Townsend, National CIO War Relief Committee, and Malcom Ross, Office of War Information, also addressed the conference.

Those attending the conference were Southern representatives of the following Internationals: United Automobile Workers, United Steelworkers, United Rubber Workers, Textile Workers, Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Cannery Workers, Hosiery Workers, Oil Workers and Marine & Shipbuilding Workers. Also present at the conference were the following CIO regional directors: Noel R. Beddow (Alabama), F. C. Pieper (Louisiana), Paul R. Christopher, (Tennessee), E. L. Sandefur (Carolinas), E. B. Pugh (Virginia) and C. H. Gilman (Georgia).

The conference adjourned with every everyone feeling the meeting had been a very successful one and all are determined to intensify their organizing activities.

Federal Union Parley Opens Oct. 26

Washington—What the federal worker is doing, and can do, to win the war will be the center of discussion at the Second Constitutional Convention of the United Federal Workers of America at the Rittenhouse Hotel in Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 26, 27 and 28.

The UFWA approaches this all-important war convention with a new high in membership of 26,000, approximately 10,000 above the figure reported at the last convention, held in Washington in the fall of 1940. This record of growth was reported by Administrator Allan Haywood, CIO director of organization, and Eecretary-Treasurer Eleanor Nelson. The Union recently chartered its 222nd Local, the UFWA officials added.

THREE MAIN POINTS

The three-point discussion of how federal workers can best contribute to a speedy victory over the Axis will see a thorough airing of these questions:

1. Planning of work in Government agencies, with an emphasis on the establishment of more Labor-Management Production Committees such as those which have done such splendid home front service in private industry.

2. Obtaining of overtime pay and pay increases to adjust federal salaries to the rise in the cost of living to the extent that this has been accomplished in private industry by Union action. (This will make for more efficient "production" behind the war.)

3. Eliminating discrimination against Negroes in Government agencies as still another win-the-war step.

High ranking officials in both Government and the Labor Movement have been invited to speak to the Federal Workers. Among those who have accepted is Rep. Robert Ramspeck (D.) of Georgia, long a fighter for benefits for federal employes.

Praise French Workers' 'No' To Nazi Jobs

Washington, Oct. 17 — American workers are proud of their fellow-workers in France who have resisted threats and blandishments to go to work for Hitler, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said in a shortwave message to France this week.

Murray's message was sent on learning that less than 10 per cent of skilled French workers had gone to Germany, despite all that Laval and his Nazi masters can do.

French workers know "full well that by organizing a stubborn resistance to all threats, they render these threats inapplicable, since Hitler cannot obtain satisfactory work without at least a measure of collaboration," Murray said.

"Here in America, we know that when the time has come for Frenchmen to strike back at their oppressors, Hitler will be paid for every act of terror and for every cowardly murder which he and his men have committed. We know that Frenchmen will rise to fight at our side for their own liberty."

Luxury for Scabs

New Orleans, La., Oct. 17—Union workers of the M. Trelles Tobacco Co. who have been locked out for seven weeks by the management of this tobacco sweatshop, were incensed when they saw scabs being driven to work in the shiny black limousines of the Trelles family. So they voted sarcastically at a meeting of Local 91, United Tobacco Workers, to demand free transportation to work with Trelles chauffeurs when the dispute is won.

Intl. Labor Unity Essential Now, Tanner Tells AFL

TORONTO, Oct. 17 (ALN)—A strong plea for unity between the organized labor movements of the United Nations was made to the 62d AFL annual convention by Jack Tanner, fraternal delegate from the British Trades Union Congress and president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, which has 650,000 members. Then, in an eloquent appeal, Tanner put forcibly before the American unionists British labor's reasons for wanting a second front.

AXIS WANTS SPLIT

"I believe that an essential step toward overcoming the Axis war machine is the attainment of unity," said Tanner. "Let us remember that the principal aim of Goebbels and his gang is to split the Allies, and particularly the working people of our countries.

"Unity between the allied labor movements can result in immediate stimulation of the production of war materials. This has already been abundantly shown by the operations of the committee set up in September, 1941, by the trade union movements of Great Britain and our ally, the Soviet Union."

After recounting the history and accomplishments of the Anglo-Soviet committee, Tanner said: "We are proud to be associated with that brave people through our trade union organization, and if we are told that the character and spirit of their trade unions is different from that of the British trade unions, I can only reply that the character and spirit of the Soviet trade unionists in the fight against Hitlerism is also somewhat different from what our own has been to date.

(In its final day, the AFL nevertheless turned down protests from the CIO and the Railway Brotherhoods by refusing to change its "deal" with the British Trades Union Congress, through which the two labor groups and the Russian unions are denied equal representation on the committee).

UNIONS IN USSR

"To say that the trade unions of the USSR are nothing but appendages to the State machinery is to leave out of account the nature of the State and whose interests its activities foster and serve.

"In our two countries, we cannot pretend that it is the workers' interests which will triumph in any issue unless we put up a strong and organized fight. But there is no evidence to support the idea that, in the Soviet Union, such a fight is necessary.

"At the present time in England we are conducting a considerable fight to increase production, which is below its potential maximum because monopoly interests are still influenced by the traditions of restrictions and scarcity for profit.

"It has become one of the war-time functions of the trade unions to keep a vigilant eye on the maneuvers of firms and monopolies which are attempting to build up their post-war position at the expense of war output.

WAR'S 'ACID TEST'

"Now it is perfectly certain that this type of struggle has had no place in the Soviet war effort. There has been no time and effort wasted in having to reconcile the conflicts between private and national interests; there have been no practices which hinder output, and, as was demonstrated by the moving of great industries to new areas behind the Urals, as also by the heroic scorched earth policy, nothing has stood in the way of the Soviet war effort.

The acid test of war has proved, as nothing else could have done, that industrial production for the benefit of the people as a whole means a very real difference throughout the whole organization of industry. There may be people who do not care for the difference, but I fail to see why that difference cannot be accepted."

Pointing out that allied labor is one of the strongest weapons against fascism, Tanner said: "I believe that no one but Hitler profits by the sectional differences and divisions which keep us apart from our fellow trade union anti-fascists.

"I would strongly urge that the greatest efforts be made to join together the workers of Britain, Russia, the United States—and I mean all the workers of the United States, in the AFL, CIO and Railway Brotherhoods—the workers of Latin America, Canada and others of the United Nations in firm solidarity and practical unity.

"International unity will permit workers in each country to play a greater role in the councils of war, in the organization of the war industries, in making the peace."

On the question of a second front, Tanner said: "The whole question of production is linked to the issue of a second front. Rumors that the allied military equipment is inferior to the enemy's are profoundly discouraging to the workers in the factories. Give us a second front, as a visible target at which our workers can aim, and miracles will be performed."

Chinese Plants Impress Willkie

Chungking, Oct. 10 — (ALN) — Wendell Willkie, after several days touring Chungking factories, said today that he was greatly impressed with the efficiency of Chinese industry and the enterprise of Chinese workers.

"These factories, though not on a Western scale, are efficiently and effectively run," Willkie said. "I've seen hundreds of cotton mills all over the world, and the one I saw today was a thoroughly modern plant. But," he added, "many of China's social problems remain unsolved."

Willkie's presence gave U. S. correspondents an opportunity to inspect Chinese factories, which is seldom permitted. Newspapermen accompanied him on a visit to plants outside of Chungking, including a textile mill which three years ago evacuated its machinery, manufactured in Lowell, Mass., and weighing hundreds of tons, from Shanghai.

U.S. Seizes Plant Run Hitler-Style By Nazi Stooge

By JAMES PECK

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y.—Oct. 17—(FP)—The union-busting plant of Machine Builders Inc., operated in concentration-camp style by Gerhard F. Kullack, German Nazi sympathizer, has been seized by the Alien Property Custodian's Office.

The plant was so busy fighting the United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, that it fell way behind in production, having a backlog of $2,700,000.

A Nazi reign of terror existed constantly in the plant as a result of the large number of labor spies and stool pigeons planted there. In May the company fired 3 active unionists and signed a closed shop agreement with the Independent Union of Machinery Builders Inc.

Lawyer for the company union was Frank Welsh, who is also attorney for Joe McWilliams, notorious Christian Fronter who has been repeatedly arrested for his anti-Semitic street speeches.

NLRB ORDER

The NLRB ordered reinstatement of the 3 unionists and dissolution of the company union. The firm answered by firing 2 more active UERMW members in September. When a 16-man committee called on the company further to request reinstatement of the 2 men, he fired all 16.

A few weeks later the custodian's office took over the plant and the fired unionists were reinstated. But the Nazi atmosphere lingered on to such an extent that the UERMW sought postponement of an NLRB election Oct. 13.

The election was held, but results remained undetermined because of the challenged votes. An immediate protest to the NLRB was made by the UERMW, which charged widespread intimidation by foremen on the eve of the poll. A guard who claimed to be a "secret agent" forced workers to remove their CIO buttons.

Bauxite Gains Celebrated By Union Men

Bauxite, Ark., Oct. 17—Workers who produce bauxite ore to keep the naton's aluminum plants running celebrated their first anniversary under a CIO contract here last Saturday with an all-day blowout, a continuous banquet of squirrel mulligan, and talks by President N. A. Zonarich of the Aluminum Workers of America and other visitors.

They also celebrated a 5-cent general wage increase that was written into the contract renewal the previous day by representatives of Local 23, AWA, over the opposition of the Republic Mining & Mfg. Co.

QUICK CAMPAIGN

Coming into this company-owned town in the fall of 1941, the AWA signed up a majority of the miners at the first meeting, won an NLRB election hands down in September, and signed a contract Oct. 6.

During the year three other locals have been set up at smaller plants in the Arkansas bauxite region. All three plants are now under contract, the last, Dixie Bauxite Co., under a union shop granted Friday after a card check-off. More than 1,500 miners belong to the four locals.

Union members are waiting for further expansion when three new aluminum-processing plants in this vicinity, set up to meet the nation's war needs, begin operation.

"It's our job to see that the men join the union when they go to work," they say. "We'll keep aluminum CIO from the ground up."

Murray Hails Resistance Of Russians

New York, Oct. 17—Warm greetings from CIO Pres. Philip Murray featured a farewell party given here to Lt. Liudmilla Pavlichenko, Red Army sniper with a score of 319 dead Nazis to her credit. The party was given by Russian War Relief, Inc.

"Labor in America is deeply conscious of the debt that we and all the other United Nations owe to the Russian people for their magnificent resistance," Murray said.

"We are determined that they shall be given every possible assistance in their struggle, which is also the common struggle of all the freedom-loving peoples of the world."

OPA Is Told: Let's Have Action Now!

New York, Oct. 17—Fed up with the weak-kneed enforcement policies of Leon Henderson and the OPA, the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers this week issued a memorandum calling attention to stalling by the big government agency.

"There will be no rent control until Jan. 1 or later," the union charged, "and even then, Price Administrator Henderson may repeat the 'run-around' of the past ten days."

The UE also asserted that the cost of living is not being halted from its upward journey: "Prices are not being kept down; instead of keeping them down, Price Administrator Henderson is actually helping the big packers, processors and wholesalers to get prices up still further."

CIO Gifts Bring Piano to Negro USO Center

New York, Oct. 17. — Negro soldiers at Camp Dix now can kill their spare time by knocking tunes out of a Steinway grand piano in the Rifle Range Road USO Club.

The piano, a gift of the CIO Office & Professional Workers, was arranged for through the CIO War Relief Committee. And the result is that the USO club is becoming a real recreation center—rather than a deserted outpost.

A group of trade union members recently toured USO centers in New Jersey and found that the Rifle Range club had few visitors and almost no facilities because of its unusual location — on a tiny private settlement completely surrounded by the huge Army camp.

UNION MOVED FAST

Last Sunday a busload of men and women from the union, together with a group of entertainers went out for the presentation of the Steinway. The piano was there, and so were some 500 soldiers, all Negroes, who patronize the club. The soldier talent gave the Broadway stars some tough competition when they got their turn at the keyboard.

WLB Thumbs Down Pay Boost at Ford

Washington, Oct. 17 — The National War Labor Board this week turned down the demand of the United Automobile Workers for a $1 a day increase for the 115,000 employes of the Ford Motor Co.

No reason was given for the refusal, but it is assumed that when the formal opinion setting forth the Board's decision is issued, it will be based on the formula set forth in the Board's decision on the Little Steel case.

Brass Hats Give 'E' At CIO Brass Plant

WATERBURY, Conn., Oct. 17—Reid Robinson, CIO vice-president and president of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and Donald Nelson, War Production Board head, joined top-ranking military leaders today in paying tribute to the war production record of more than 6,000 workers of the Chase Brass & Copper Company in this city.

The rally witnessed the presentation of four separate Army-Navy "E" flag awards and launched a new and more vigorous drive for continued production.

ADM. HART PRESENT

Admiral C. E. Hart, member of the Navy's policy-making general board, presented the flags to the three plants and the company office staff. Representatives of the MM& SW received the pennants with management officials. At each of the three plants, a union leader was selected to share the honors with management.

Following Donald Nelson's speech, Robinson spoke for the millions of CIO members at work in war production plants as well as for the members of his own union, which represents the Chase workers. He pledged the continued unlimited support of organized labor in the production battle against the Axis.

COMPANY PRAISE

Recognition of the union's leadership in the drive for increased output, and of the manner in which it has earned the measure of participation accorded it in today's ceremonies, came in a statement from Rodney Chase, director of public and industrial relations for the Chase company.

Chase praised the cooperation of the union in the formation of joint labor-management production committees and in contract negotiations, declaring that "we have found the international organizers and members cooperative and patriotic in spirit . . . and, in receiving our 'E' award flags, the union will take its proper place as representative of labor."

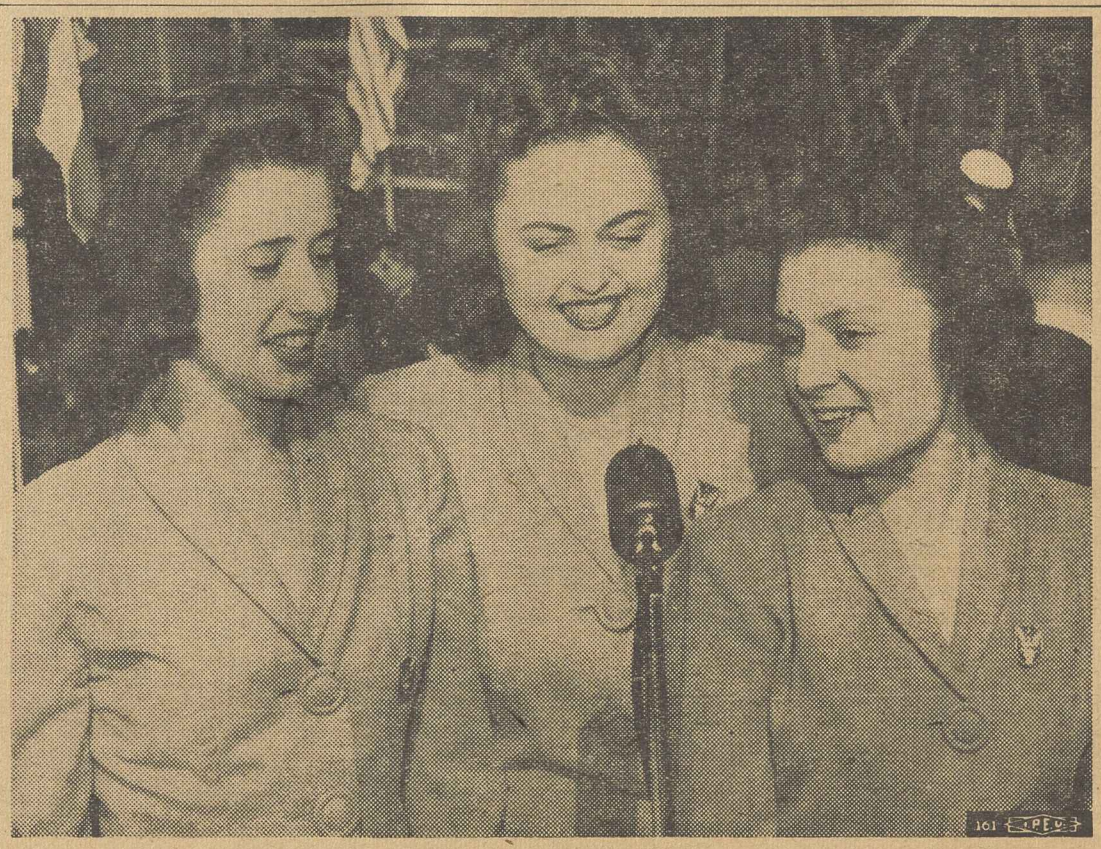
The company official also said that management will "look forward to the continued harmonious relations which we feel our association in this rally will symbolize."

Tractor Workers Greet Heroes Of Stalingrad

Chicago, Oct. 17 — The tractor workers of Chicago this week extended a helping hand to the heroic defenders of Stalingrad, tractor center of the Soviet Union.

Members of the United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers devoted a day to fund-raising for Russian War Relief, and backed it up with Red Cross blood donations, scrap collections, a production drive and memorial services to the Stalingrad tractor workers who are fighting to the death against Hitler's hordes.

Union officials said they had been informed that UFEMWA greetings to the Russian tractor workers had been given wide publicity in Soviet newspapers.



THREE GOOD REASONS why the Maritime "M" star award at the Bethlehem Fairfield shipyard at Baltimore was so popular last week were the pretty singers above (no, we don't remember the tune) who entertained more than 15,000 workers during a double launching. Ask Action on Manpower To Avert Output Crisis

CIO 'Outlook' Raps Plans For Draft; House Group Offers Democratic Plan

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—Joint labor-management activity, based on democratic principles, must be extended to meet the tremendous manpower problems created by the war, the CIO Economic Outlook declared today.

The CIO monthly publication sharply criticised proposals for a national service act, now being voiced in some government and business circles, until all other possibilities have been tested.

"Forced labor is inefficient and unwilling labor, and makes for low production," the Outlook warned the draft-labor bloc.

Meanwhile the House Committee on Defense Migration filed a report of tremendous significance calling for creation of a top economic defense command, with equal voice for labor, agriculture and industry.

Now being closely studied by labor and government officials, the report places the blame for much of the last two years' bungling on failure to work out a unified plan for production, manpower, military draft and price control.

Close Pal of Hitler Agents Runs Open-Shop Shipyard

PERTH AMBOY, N. J. Oct. 24 (FP)—Torkild Rieber, a proven good friend of Hitler's agents, is operating his new New Jersey Shipbuilding Co. on the same open shop basis under which he ran the Texas Oil Co. until publicity forced him to leave it.

A campaign to organize the plant is being conducted by the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, CIO.

The shipyard, formerly an asphalt plant, has been operating about six weeks building tankers for the Navy, and has openly pirated workers from their yards. When the Barber Asphalt Co. operated the plant, it was under AFL contract. When Rieber took over, it became open shop.

When Rieber headed the Texas Co., he was a close friend of Dr. Gerhard Westrick, commercial counselor for the German embassy and a special representative of Hitler. Under Rieber's leadership, the company obtained a monopoly of oil exports to Franco Spain by supplying Franco with oil on credit for the duration of the Spanish war.

Houston CIO Brings in The Scrap---Fast

Houston, Tex., Oct. 24—CIO oil and steel workers from Houston's busy refineries and mills are pacing the steel scrap campaign in this city.

Newspaper columns have been filled with the exploits of the union members who, after a day of hard work at the job, devoted additional hours to bringing in salvaged metal for the country's steel industry.

Every day some of the county's 4,000 steel workers report to union headquarters, man trucks to collect material or form blow-torch squads to cut down particularly heavy steel objects.

"SAFE-CRACKERS"

CIO steel workers turned "safe-crackers" on one call, and while the boss of a local music store looked on with pleasure, the men used torches to smash an old, unused 5½-foot safe in the basement.

"There's nothing we can't bust down, cut up and haul off," according to Hollis Frazer, CIO steel union representative. Oil workers are cleaning up scrap around the refineries, as well as in their own homes.

At the Hughes Tool Co., he said, members of Local 1742, USA-CIO, brought in 200 tons, and workers at other plants have done equally well.

U. S. Seizes Foe Of CIO Union As Enemy Alien

Long Island City, N. Y., Oct. 24 (FP).—Gerhard F. Kullack, German Nazi who ran has company, Machine Builders, Inc., like a concentration camp, has been seized as an enemy alien.

This was revealed by local FBI Chief P. E. Foxworth when he announced that a German who served as co-owner and officer of a million-dollar corporation was among the enemy aliens rounded up during the week of Oct. 11-18.

Foxworth refused to reveal the German's name, but from details given, the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, which has been trying to organize the plant, said that it was unmistakably Kullack.

More Women on Job

San Francisco, Oct. 24.—The total number of women employed as factory wage earners in California increased to 129,000 in August, a jump of 27,300 over July and 52,500 over June.

SEAMEN LIKE 'EM: The fur vests, we mean. And these three Hollywood glamor girls agree that the vests—a war project of the CIO Fur & Leather Workers—are pretty swell. Church Body Asks Labor Voice at WPB

Washington, Oct. 24.—Blasting at business-as-usual and profiteering, the Methodist Federation for Social Service this week called for immediate application of effective and democratic regulation of the nation's wartime economy.

Representing 3,200 Methodist ministers and laymen, the Federation charged that "private monopoly control" of many government policy agencies has seriously hampered the entire war effort.

It pointed to lack of "official representation of organized labor" on the governing board of WPB; pointed to the small number (600) of effective joint labor-management committees; sharply rising corporate profits; and the gouge-the-poor tax bill passed by Congress.

HIT MONOPOLIES

Action must be taken now, the Federation said, to counteract the threats of "monopoly capitalism and the vested interests in the United States." To do this it advocated stabilization of living costs, rationing of "all scarce commodities," removal by taxes of all profits over 6% on investments, abolition of racial discrimination, and a voice for labor in government agencies.

At the same time the Methodist group urged expansion of a number of Anglo-American war boards to include representatives of all the United Nations. Such a United Nations Council, studying problems of food, production and shipping, would also be equipped to make real plans for post-war relief and reconstruction, the Federation pointed out.

Woodworkers Parley Moves To Push Output

SPOKANE, Wash., Oct. 24—Pledging to achieve maximum production in the lumber industry and to support to the utmost the President's program for winning the war, nearly 200 delegates to the annual convention of the International Woodworkers of America which met here October 5-9, laid down a program and policies focused on the union's part in the war effort.

Support to President Philip Murray of the national CIO was voted unanimously and IWA delegates to the national CIO convention which opens in Boston, Nov. 9, were instructed to stand solidly for the re-election of Pres. Murray.

HIT OFFICIAL

After listening to speeches charging that Frederick H. Brundage, Western Log and Lumber Administrator under the War Production Board, had snubbed labor's aid in production plans and had failed to enforce the 48-hour work week in the lumber industry, the delegates voted to demand his removal.

The resolution asked that "he be replaced by an impartial administrator whose primary aim will be to win the war as quickly as possible."

At the opening session on Monday, Pres. Worth Lowery, Adolph Germer, IWA-CIO organizational director, and the International officers read their reports to the convention.

Cecil Johnson, president of the Inland Empire District Council, in an opening speech warned that unless the convention formulated a real program, production in the lumber industry would decrease instead of increase.

Following a long debate on the question of a Second Front, during which some differences of opinion were expressed, the convention passed an amended resolution calling for the opening of "a land front in Europe while the Red Army still has the ability to strike hard from the East, when deemed advisable by our military experts" and offering "full support to President Roosevelt in whatever course he may pursue regarding the opening of the Second Front."

ASSAIL RACKETEERS

Charges that AFL racketeers have collected millions of dollars in work permit fees and exorbitant dues and initiation fees were made by Al Hartung, CIO regional director for Oregon, in a speech flaying "back-door" collusive agreements made between some AFL officials and men holding defense contracts.

The convention passed resolutions calling for a seven-point production program; union hiring; support for the union's official organ, The International Woodworker; deferment of lumber workers in the draft; international labor unity and a score of others dealing with workers in the timber industry.

Cannery Union Confab Hits Poll Tax Evil

Chicago, Oct. 24—Repeal of the poll tax was one of the major demands of the fourth convention of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America meeting here this week.

"The overwhelming vote of the House," the resolution said "indicates clearly the will of the American people concerning this disgraceful un-American practice in certain states of the nation. We cannot most effectively talk and work to mobilize the United Nations for freedom abroad unless we practice it here at home."

The report of President Donald Henderson, showing substantial gains in membership, in contracts, and extension of the union to new fields, was read and approved by the delegates.

Reid Robinson, speaking to the convention early in the week, called for an immediate second front in Europe as the best protection for labor and for freedom everywhere. "We know that if Russia falls, Britain would be an easier prey, and if that happens it wouldn't be long before the Axis would invade our own shores."

Take in Women

London, Oct. 24.—The Amalgamated Engineering Union here voted 117,233 to 90,550 in favor of admitting women to membership. Only about a third of the membership voted on the question.

Washington Scene . . .

By VIRGINIA GARDNER
Federated Press

Washington—(FP)—I made my social debut in Washington last night. I went to the Troika night club with a senator and his party. He was a Republican from a western farm state and was with a man who said he represented small business, but I imagine just about in the way the Troika represented Stalingrad.

Everything went off all right until the senator leaned earnestly across the table and said: "You have a job to do, little girl. You and others should do all you can to sell labor on a 70-hour week, not 40."

"But war workers are working far more than 40 hours," I began.

"Yes, and charging time and a half," he grumbled. "Oh, it don't matter. The contractor just gets that much more from the government. The taxpayer pays it."

"And who's paying the taxes this year?" I asked sourly.

"Yeah, who?" the senator said, laughing uproariously and slapping his business friend on the knee. "Labor doesn't like that Victory tax a-tall. No, sir, labor doesn't like to pay for helping itself."

As we left, the self-styled small business man, stepping on the gas in his Dusenberg, said, "And these labor-management committees — what does labor know about management?"

As usual, it didn't occur to me until later that I should have answered: "What does management know about labor?"

California CIO Backs Olson; Asks FDR Move To End Bridges Exile Case

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Oct. 24.—Meeting in this movie capital just prior to the homestretch of the state's bitterly-fought election campaign, the California State CIO Council last week took action to help win the war on the legislative, political and production fronts.

Gov. Culbert Olson, who, as a candidate for re-election, heads the state's progressive political ticket, brought cheers to the 500 delegates, representing 200,000 CIO members, when he addressed the parley. He charged that his opponents want "to get rid of me because I protect the rights of organized labor, because I fight for social advancement, because I fight to preserve our hard-won social gains."

WIRE FROM MURRAY

Earlier the delegates received a wire from CIO Pres. Murray calling for election of Gov. Olson and other CIO-endorsed win-the-war candidates.

"The entire nation is concerned with the type of representative whom you send to Congress, and with the type of state leadership that will direct the affairs of your great state in this crucial period," Murray said.

One of the principal acts of the convention was to protest the deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, longshoremen union head and CIO director in the state. The resolution urged FDR to intervene in the case and praised Bridges' aid to the war effort.

CITE CONTRIBUTIONS

The convention report said that Bridges, as the elected leader of several thousand workers helped establish the highly-successful maritime labor board and the Army's longshore brigades, both of which have won high approval from government officials.

"The hour has come to right the wrongs against Bridges," the report said. "This is the time for the President to step into the case and throw it out of the courts, because it should never have been there in the first place."

Another high-point of the three-day meeting was the appearance of Lt. Liudmila Pavlichenko, Red Army sharp-shooter, who, speaking slowly in English, directed an appeal for the opening of a second front to aid her country.

"American help must come in time, and in ever-increasing amounts," she said. The convention later called for a long offensive, declaring "the time has come to strike at Hitler."

SUPREME COUNCIL

In a series of other resolutions the state CIO urged creation of a "supreme economic command" to unify government control over output, price regulation and manpower; gave considerable attention to the increasing number of women workers entering war industries; lashed the Senate gouge-the-poor tax bill as a blow at the war effort; called for further unity talks between CIO and AFL and for labor unity on an international scale; and called for increasing activity to get out the vote in the Nov. 3 elections.

Pres. Philip Connelly and Sec.-Treas. Mervyn Rathbone were re-elected to office, and the council opened a drive to increase the number of affiliated unions, as well as to give active assistance to union organizing drives among aircraft, oil, utilities and agricultural workers.

Unemployment went down to 1,700,000 persons in September, according to U. S. Census Bureau. That's the lowest point of joblessness since 1929.

Illinois CIO Flays Defeatists

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—Placing its full support behind the war effort, the Illinois State Industrial Union Council convention this week took action to weed out disrupters and defeatists who endanger the nation's victory drive.

Some 448 delegates, representing a CIO membership of 300,000, were present at the parleys. Included were four locals of the United Mine Workers who defied warnings from Lewis-appointed officials to boycott the meeting.

A major concern of the convention was the election of pro-Roosevelt candidates in the Nov. 3 election. The delegates gave warm endorsement to Raymond S. McKeough, seeking the senatorial seat of the Chicago Tribune's own isolationist stooge, Sen. "Curley" Brooks. They also voiced support for Benjamin Adamowski, candidate for representative-at-large.

ASK PROBE OF "TRIB"

Fed up with the divisionist hash which Col. Robert McCormick's Chicago Tribune turns out each morning to spoil the appetites of Illinois citizens, the convention passed a resolution calling for an FBI investigation of the ultra-reactionary paper.

In other resolutions the state CIO called for opening of a second front against Hitler, urged international trade union unity, and took note of John L. Lewis' bitter attack on the CIO.

Speakers at the party included Mayor Kelly of Chicago, McKeough and Adamowski, and William McFetteridge, chairman of the scrap drive in Chicago. Greetings were sent to the delegates by WPB Chief Donald Nelson, Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt, CIO Organization Director Allan S. Haywood and Councils Director John Brophy.

Pres. Samuel Levin, 1st Vice-Pres. Robert Travis and Sec.-Treas. Francis J. DeLaurie were all re-elected. Albert Glenn of the CIO office here was chosen second vice-president.

Lahey Resumes News Column

For the past four months Lahey has been special assistant on labor matters to Asst. Sec. of Navy Ralph Bard, and during that period labor observers have noticed many instances of marked improvement in the Navy's attitude towards organized workers.

Lahey's news writing has been marked by an attitude of friendship for labor that is found in almost no other syndicated newspaper column.

Wood Local Wins 3rd Poll From AFL

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 24.—For the third time, the CIO International Woodworkers of America defeated an AFL union in a Labor Board election held among the employes of the Chicago Mills, Helena, Ark., John Hawkins, IWA international representative announced here this week. The vote was 529 for the CIO to 242 for the AFL.

Hawkins said that the IWA also defeated the AFL 29 to 1 in an election at the DeSota Paint & Varnish Co. in Memphis.

Two Auto Polls Swept By CIO

Cleveland, Oct. 24.—The CIO United Automobile Workers has rolled up two more election victories in Ohio, it was revealed today by Paul E. Miley, union regional director.

At the Columbia Machinery & Engineering Co. the UAW-CIO whipped a company union by 123-22 margin in an NLRB vote, while at the Hyland Machine poll in Dayton the UAW-CIO won 59-10.

CIO Leaders Demand Ousting of Adm. Land After 'Shooting' Bluster

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—A bloodthirsty wish to shoot union organizers at sunrise, let out by U. S. Maritime Commission Chief Admiral Emory S. Land in a speech to the Investment Bankers Association this week, drew prompt replies from CIO union leaders—all of them demanding his removal as a menace to the war effort.

Land was quoted as saying that union organizers were among "the principal obstructions in the shipbuilding program and the war effort generally," and adding: "As far as the organizers are concerned, for the duration, in my opinion, they ought to be shot at sunrise."

THREE SEND LETTERS

The three CIO leaders who protested were Pres. Murray, Marine and Shipbuilding Workers head John Green and Joseph Curran, head of the Natl. Maritime Union. All three united in asking Pres. Roosevelt to fire Land immediately.

"It is my judgment that this statement of Admiral Land constitutes one of the most dangerous blows at the unity of the people and at the war effort," Murray wrote to the President. "The statement made by Admiral Land appears to be the expression of a perfectly irresponsible individual."

"It is impossible for the workers to continue any confidence in those administrative agencies of which this man is the head. I believe that it is imperative that Admiral Land be removed from his present office."

HIT "GOEBBELS LINE"

"In the interest of honest thinking, I suggest that we count off and see who stands where in this important debate," John Green declared. "On the outcome of the debate depends the strength and force of our war effort, the achievement of unity in this single-minded goal and the survival of our democratic institutions. Admiral Land's continuance in office implies an official endorsement of his honestly stated hatred."

Land's speech would be applauded by Goebbels and "his defeatist, appeaser, fascist followers in America," Curran said in New York. "His speech proves that he is more fit to be chairman of the Maritime Commission in Germany than in democratic America."

Saul Mills, speaking for the N.Y. Cio Council, added that "Land's continuous attack on labor and repetitious bungling of his high office make him a liability instead of an aid in the fullest prosecution of the war."

Land's crack about shootings was seen by labor people here as part of a renewed trend to attacks on labor. Previous anti-labor statements by other Admirals indicate an itch in certain circles to re-open the phony 40-hour week question, plus a general hitching up of reactionary pants in Congress and in the newspapers.

Keep Writing 'Em:

Senate Group Stalls On Poll Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, Oc. 24—A week's stall on the Senate version of the poll-tax bill was maneuvered this week when th Judiciary sub-Committe voted to put hearings over until Monday, Oct. 26. But there was no let-up in the flood of de-mands for passage from labor and progressive forces throughout the country.

In fact, the Senators have been complaining (privately, of course) about the number of letters, wires and phone calls they've been getting, following passage of the House bill two weeks ago by an overwhelming majority.

The sub-committee vote of eight to four for another week's delay was taken despite a fervent plea from liberal Senator Norris of Nebraska for a favorable report on the House-passed Geyer bill. Such a move would have speeded final action by avoiding the need for a conference committee of House and Senate to iron our minor differences between the Geyer bill and the Pepper bill.

WHITNEY URGES ACTION

A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, issued a statement calling on each Senator "to assume personal responsibility for seeing to it that this legislation shall pass the Senate now, this session, and not wait and run the risk of this vital democratic legislation languishing and dying at the close of the present session of Congress."

The stalling maneuver was designed by its polltax backers in the Committee to give a few more days for popular heat on the bill to die down. The heat, however, is not dying down, as the complaints of some of the Senators about the deluge of mail and wires shows.

'Worst Tax Bill' Gets Congress O.K.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—President Roosevelt this week signed the 1942 tax bill, generally described as the most regressive in U. S. tax history. He had to sign it, since it was all that Congress had to show for many months of finagling.

The bill went to the President for signature after the joint conference committee had agreed—as everybody expected they would—to pass it with the worst features of both House and Senate measures intact.

These features included:

1. The so-called "Victory Tax," which lays a straight 5 per cent levy on everything you earn above $12 a week. This was repeatedly attacked by the CIO and by Treasury officials as a sales tax under a phony name, since it taxes everybody at the same percentage level regardless of income—i.e., the $12 a week worker and the $50,000 coupon clipper both pay 5 per cent.

2. Lowering the corporate profits tax, first in the House from the 55 per cent asked by the Treasury to 45 per cent, then in the Senate to 40 per cent. The conferees agreed on the 40 per cent figure.

3. Lowering the income tax exemptions so that low bracket people pay more, while upper bracket people are let off lightly. Thus, the dependents' allowance was reduced from $400 to $350, the married couple's exemption from $1,500 to $1,200.

4. Leaving in all the loopholes that allow the wealthy and the big corporations to escape their fair share of the tax burden.

SHORT OF NEED

The tax bill as finally passed is also short several billions of the amount required for victory this year. This has led to the promise of a supplementary bill within the next few weeks. Already the reactionary forces that pushed through the present bill are talking of a general sales tax as the only thing left to raise revenue with.

The CIO put on an extended drive for a real win-the-war tax bill in 1942. More will have to be done to repair some of the damage inflicted in the current bill, and to defeat the threat of an all-out sales tax in the new measure.

Orson Welles To Direct CIO Show Nov. 1

Washington, Oct. 24—The next three shows in CIO's radio series, Labor for Victory (NBC Red network, Sundays at 1:15 p.m., EWT), deal with angles of the war economy that effect every worker. One of them, the Nov. 1 show, will have Orson Welles as producer, writer and director.

This Sunday, Oct. 25, CIO joins with AFL and the U. S. Labor Dept. in celebrating the fourth year of the Wage-Hour Act. It will be an all-speaking program, with short talks from CIO Secretary James B. Carey, AFL President Wm. Green, Undersecretary of War Robt. Patternson and L. Metcalf Walling, administrator of the act.

CIO's next program, Sunday, Nov. 1, will be the work of Orson Welles, famous actor-writer-producer, who will produce a show centered on the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and the solidarity of CIO war workers with their brothers in Latin-America.

CONVENTION PROGRAM

Following the Welles production, Labor for Victory will move to Boston for the Nov. 15 program, which will have the fifth CIO national convention for its material.

CIO's Labor for Victory comes every other Sunday at 1:15 p.m., EWT, on the Natl. Broadcasting Co.'s Red network. October, November and December dates are: Oct. 25, Nov. 1, 15 and 29; Dec. 13 and 27. Tune in for labor's own story of labor's victory drive to rid the world of fascism.

Use Back Wages For War Bonds

In addition to being 100% behind the payroll deduction plan at the American Steel & Wire Co. here, the workers took much of their recent retroactive wage increase and bought bonds to help bomb the Axis, according to Local Sec. W. J. Sasso.

Altogether they invested $21,675 of the back pay in war bonds.

Murray Hails Patriotism Of Foreign-Born

New York, Oct. 24.—CIO Pres. Philip Murray greeted the ceremonies being arranged by the American Committee for Protection of Foreign Born to commemorate the 56th anniversary of the dedication of the Statue of Liberty on October 28, Abner Green, committee secretary, announced today.

"During the present world struggle of the freedom-loving peoples," President Murray says in his statement to the committee, "we in America should be particularly mindful of our obligations and responsibilities to the people who have come to our shores from all quarters of the globe and have contributed their loyal efforts to the building of our country and the preservation of its institutions.

NO DISCRIMINATION

The CIO is founded on the truly American principles of organizing all workers regardless of race, creed, color or nationality and securing them equal rights and opportunities. We strenuously oppose all forms of discrimination against the foreign born, whose labor is just as much needed to win this war as is the labor of native-born Americans."

Oregon CIO Parley

Portland, Ore., Oct. 24.—Ralph Peoples, secretary of the Oregon CIO Council announced this week that the Council's executive board had decided to hold the annual convention in Eugene, Ore., Jan. 8-10.

Match Books Urge Jobs for Negroes

New York, Oct. 24.—Several hundred thousand books of paper matches advertising the need for further employment of Negro workers in war industry are being sold by the National Urban League, long a leader in the fight to better Negro workers' place in society.

The books of matches contain on the front cover the name of the League. On the back is printed a reminder that "defense and democracy depend on you" and a plea to "train . . . hire . . . work with" Negroes.

The matches, which cost $1 for 50 packs, may be obtained from the National Urban League, 1133 Broadway, New York City. Gifts of $5 will bring the sender 50 match books and make possible the distribution of 200 free packs.

Ford Local 100% on Bonds

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 24.—Ford Local 903 of the CIO Auto Workers is 100% behind the U. S. War Bond drive.

Working as a solid unit behind the plant's labor-management committee, the entire personnel made possible a 10% payroll deduction for bonds. According to Local Pres. J. D. Phillips, the union has asked the Treasury for a 10% war bond flag.

A Lead From Congress

It is comforting to find signs of statesmanship in a Congress which has produced such an atrocious tax bill and has been responsible for so many obstructions to vital domestic war measures like the President's seven-point program.

Labor refuses to join with those shady and near-fascist elements that are always seeking to ridicule and undermine Congress. Its own criticisms are constructive and designed to make Congress the vital democratic force it should be.

So we rejoice to know that, while a Dies committee has been doing so much to bring Congress into contempt, there is another House committee that has been working quietly and effectively to redeem the reputation of Congress and to give the democratic leadership we should expect from it.

We refer to the Tolan committee, originally formed to investigate defense migration. This committee, without ballyhoo, has conducted long and exhaustive hearings and investigations. It has produced a number of reports which go to the roots of many major war problems and recommend serious and practical measures for their solution.

The latest report of the Tolan committee deals with "Changes Needed for Effective Mobilization of Manpower." But, because of the committee's realistic and thorough approach, it has inevitably reached the conclusion that the manpower problem cannot be separated from other war problems.

It has produced a comprehensive and statesmanlike document on America's total war mobilization, which is most far-reaching in its implications.

The committee makes caustic criticisms of administrative bunglings and inadequacies, many of which parallel the criticisms repeatedly made by the CIO. But it goes beyond personal and detailed criticism to delve into the root causes of bottlenecks, shortages and the like.

The committee reaches the same general conclusion as did CIO President Murray, when he evolved his industry council plan, namely that the fundamental need is for a centralized, coordinated planning and administrative set-up for the "economic mobilization of America."

The committee's ideas also parallel those of the CIO in its emphasis on the need for labor participation in the top planning councils, and on cooperative action rather than compulsion to solve such problems as the manpower crisis.

Specifically, the Tolan committee calls for the establishment of an Office of War Mobilization, to plan, coordinate and direct our whole war economy, including production, manpower mobilization and economic stabilization.

One should express no snap judgment on the many specific and far-reaching suggestions of this report. It deserves the most thoughtful and thorough study by labor, business, farmers and government.

But what can be said without hesitation is that this report is a sincere and brilliant effort to grapple with America's total war problems, and to give the kind of national leadership we have the right to demand from Congress.

Don't Forget the Poll Tax

Action on the Geyer Anti-Poll Tax Bill has been postponed by the Senate Judiciary Committee at the time of writing.

Thanks to overwhelming popular pressure, the House passed a bill to abolish the poll tax. For the same reason, there are comparatively few expressions of opposition in the Senate, and prospects of passage of the Geyer bill are excellent, if it can be brought to a vote soon.

The chief danger is stalling and sidetracking.

Labor unionists, and all others who are really concerned about our democracy, must continue to keep after their Senators, demanding speedy action to wipe out the poll tax.

This is an urgent war measure that must not be delayed. And now particularly, just before elections, the members of Congress should be interested to know how the voters are thinking.

Don't leave them in doubt.

Look at the Record

There is no doubt as to the stand of the Congressmen running for re-election on Nov. 3. Their voting record tells the story.

Find out how they stood on the soak-the-poor and spare-the-rich features of the worst tax bill in history, on the poll tax, on the President's seven-point program, and on labor and progressive win-the-war legislation generally.

Your CIO union will give you the facts on them and on other candidates.

Vote only for CIO-endorsed candidates who will go all-out for victory behind our Commander-in-Chief.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

NO, JUNIOR, a rear admiral is not an admiral who attacks his own side in the rear. Emory S. (Shoot-em-at-Sunrise) Land just happens to act that way.

Anyhow, Land is a "Rear Admiral (retired)." Don't confuse him with the real admirals whose "pet hates" are Jap battleships and German subs, not union organizers.

No, no, Junior, he isn't called Land because he doesn't go to sea. No, "retired" doesn't mean he's a tire-chiseler. And it doesn't mean he's been retired from his present job—though he should be. Now, no more questions—papa's tired.

★ ★ ★

The retired rear admiral and should-be-retired head of the U. S. Maritime Commission talked off-the-cuff and through his brass hat at a cosy luncheon of investment bankers. He said "organizers . . . ought to be shot at sunrise."

Afterwards, with the applause and the coffee still warming his cockles, he made clear to reporters he meant "union organizers," according to the United Press.

Came the cold dawn (and still no firing squad). With stormy waves of protest swamping his decks, the retired but unretreating rear admiral stood by the guns he'd leveled at his fleet.

He bade his mimeograph crew shoot his whole broadside to the press. And his only concession to discretion was to point out that in the speech itself he didn't say what kind of organizers.

★ ★ ★

But the blunt-spoken Land was not without delicacy. Lest his banker listeners take offense, he listed organizers as his No. 1 "pet hate" and profiteers only No. 2.

He decreed a sudden and violent death for the labor boys. But the profiteers he let off with a warning, if they could keep out of jail and not trip themselves up.

"As to profiteers," said the tactful Land, as the bankers began to fidget anxiously, "we will get them if the jail doesn't get them or if they don't get themselves."

★ ★ ★

Land might even have been diplomatic enough to delay sentence on the organizers, had he made his speech a couple of days later before 200 union delegates at the big Navy doings in Washington.

For the U. S. Navy Dept. summoned all these organizers, not to shoot them, but to offer them the glad-hand of "closer cooperation" and to compliment them on labor's splendid production achievements.

After all, there's a time and place for everything!

★ ★ ★

The job of the U. S. Maritime Commission, which Land heads, is to get our ships built and to keep them sailing.

But neither the land-locked Land nor all his swivel chair sailors can do this job alone—not even with the help of all the profiteers who richly sizzle on the griddle of their own consciences while waiting till Land lands 'em.

It takes quite a few shipyard workers, laboring day and night, to build the ships. And it takes sea-going sailors to keep 'em sailing.

We may as well break the news to you, Shoot-the-boys Land, that these workers are organized. They're organized in unions like the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers and the National Maritime Union.

They're organized to maintain and build their morale. They're organized to produce to the limit. They're organized to risk their lives.

And they're organized to keep their eyes on people like you, if you talk like a fascist, if you lie down on the job, if you don't remove bottlenecks, and if you block our all-out effort for victory.

As to shooting these organizers of production for victory, the union seamen know what it is to be shot at. And hundreds of their organizers have already been shot and drowned—by Nazi torpedoes, not by a bull-shooting ex-admiral.

Jack Tanner, a British labor delegate to the recent AFL convention, discovered Moore-Brabazon was privately gloating about Soviet Russia having some of its stuffing knocked out by Nazi Germany.

Moore-Brabazon's treacherous attitude toward a fighting ally became a national and international scandal, after Tanner exposed it, and he was finally removed from the cabinet.

It's labor's job to expose and remove from public office anyone who levels his guns at our people and our allies, instead of at the enemy. And that certainly goes for the coming elections too.

'General Staff' for Economic Planning Seen as Vital Win-the-War Measure

Tolan Committee Assails Call for 'Labor-Draft' Law

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—Bluntly warning that "the war can be lost in Washington," the House Committee on Defense Migration this week called for immediate overhauling of the government's economic machinery to coordinate handling of production, manpower, and price problems.

Laying heavy emphasis on the absence of a unified "general staff" as a deterrent to efficient conduct of the war, the Congressional committee urged Congress to create an Office of War Mobilization as the top structure in a revamped economic war apparatus.

At the same time the committee charged the War Manpower Commission with failure to have taken adequate steps to mobilize workers for industry, and declared in effect that Commissioner Paul McNutt's demand for a "labor draft" is a cover-up for the agency's inefficiency.

In criticizing government failures in the manpower realm, the committee sternly warned that the problem would become constantly more grave unless coordination is achieved among the government war, production, price, selective service, and manpower agencies.

HIT LABOR DRAFT

The Tolan committee was sharply critical of demands for immediate passage of a "labor draft," now being sought by Manpower Commissioner McNutt and others in high government circles.

"If such an act imposes universal service upon all the civilians of the United States before these (manpower) agencies are so reorganized to carry out manpower mobilization that they will inspire confidence in the American people, the effect upon our entire war effort is bound to be bad," the report warned Congress.

PARALLELS CIO PLEA

Many of the recommendations of the committee paralleled those of the CIO and its affiliated unions—particularly in recognizing the need for labor participation in the top planning councils of the nation and in demanding cooperative action rather than compulsion in meeting the manpower crisis.

Pointing out that the report urges Congressional, rather than administrative action, the committee proposed speedly establishment of the Office of War Mobilization. Subordinate to this top agency would be three others: the Office of War Supply, the Office of War Manpower and the Office of Economic Stabilization.

Attached to the new "OWM" would be a Board for War Mobilization, consisting "of representatives of industry, agriculture and labor. . . . This Board will advise and be consulted on all major policy, and exercise its efforts to achieve the maximum cooperation of the American people in economic mobilization."

Many of the committee's recommendations were based on the lessons contained in testimony by a number of government executives, among them Donald Nelson, Paul McNutt, Wendull Lund of the WPB Labor Division, Selective Service Director General Hershey, and spokesmen for the armed services.

PEOPLE ARE READY

"This committee believes that the people of this country want clear and simple directions which they are prepared to follow voluntarily," the report said.

"The American public is confused. Much of its confusion is traceable to the conflicting orders and demands emanating from Washington agencies.

"The people do not believe that these agencies and bureaus have developed clear-cut plans to organize the people for the war effort."

Much of the report was devoted to the problem of effective use of manpower for the war effort—already a serious problem and destined to become even more grave within the next few months.

Sharply critical of present efforts to handle the manpower issues, the committee found that failure has been due to the lack of unified planning among the government's military, production, and manpower experts.

PLAN IS NEEDED

"The cornerstone of successful manpower mobilization is a plan for gearing together the demands of the war-production program for labor with the available labor supplies," the committee asserted.

"Of equal importance to manpower mobilization is the establishment of a final authority for relating the rate at which the armed forces shall be increased, to the demands for manpower in war production."

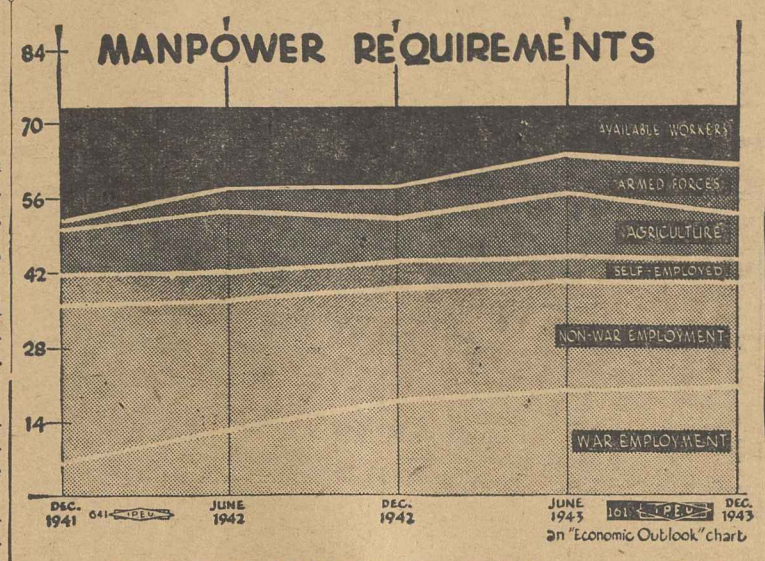
Illustrating the planlessness and confusion in government's approach to the vital manpower problem, the committee recalled that General Hershey of the Selective Service has admitted "that he hardly knows from one month to the next what the projected size of the Army is to be, and has no significant control over enlistment in any branch of any armed service."

URGE DEFERMENTS

The committee recommended a system of deferments from the draft for workers in various industries in order to preserve manpower in vital war industries. It called for compilation of figures and facts on the various industries with the full assistance of employers and labor unions.

One of the present difficulties that makes planning well-nigh impossible, the report said, is the absence of "central authority above existing agencies . . . (to) determine the numbers of the armed forces, allocate manpower between competing demands of the armed services and the war economy, relate production to military strategy, and make similar basic decisions."

Until the manpower reporting machinery is improved and methods of estimating in advance the need for workers are made possible, "no intelligent conclusions can be reached on balancing the demands of the armed forces for a mass army with their demands for workers in arms productions," it added.



an "Economic Outlook" chart

THE SITUATION: This CIO Economic Outlook Chart gives a clear picture of how the nation's manpower is being used and how it will be used in coming months. Note the big increase in war employment and the close to 16 million "available" workers who can be used for direct war tasks.

'Democratic Action' On Manpower Issue Held Imperative

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—The manpower situation requires "immediate and intelligent consideration" to avoid a drastic cut in war production, the CIO Economic Outlook points out in its current issue released this week.

And that action is not necessarily compulsory legislation.

"There must be an extension of the democratic process of labor-management cooperation if we are to solve our current manpower problems," the Outlook said.

"Forced labor is inefficient and unwilling labor and makes for low production. If we are to get the most out of the workers of this country, we must do it through voluntary means and not through compulsion."

OFFERS IDEAS

The Outlook called for specific remedies that must be applied at once, including extension of the joint labor-management committee that now meets with Man Power Commission to all 12 WMC regions; an overhaul of present contract habits that clog congested industrial areas with orders while uncongested areas lack contracts; a system of supplying full information on needs and workers available; and, above all, an overall plan for war production to eliminate guesswork and waste.

CONGRESS TALK

Meanwhile talk of compulsory legislation increased in Washington, with a heavier than usual week's crop of rumors and counter-rumors. An early-week report said that WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt would have a bill ready within two weeks.

This was contradicted within two days by a newspaper announcement that the bill was not being prepared, and probably would be held up some time.

Two factors in the manpower picture showed up during the week with considerable clarity—the sharp challenge to planning ability in the Tolan Committee's report — and the pervading muddle that the whole situation has been permitted to drift into.

This need for a rational, comprehensive plan for the whole war production effort was emphasized in the CIO's Outlook, which declared in summing up:

"An overall approach to the manpower problem requires a solution to complexing issues ,such as wage policy, transportation, housing accommodations, draft policy and possible release of skilled men now in the armed forces. These problems cannot be solved by compulsion.

"A planned attack on these problems must be made through the voluntary extension of the democratic process developed by the Labor Policy Committee of the War Manpower Commission.

"If this procedure is quickly adopted and widely extended throughout the country a wise and intelligent solution to the manpower problem can be achieved."

Washington, Oct. 24—More than 10,000 CIO copper, lead and zinc workers will get $1 a day increase and union security, following a decision of the War Labor Board secured by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers union.

The WLB action came after long hearings on the question, in which Reid Robinson, MMSW president, and numerous war production officials placed the case for a raise before the board. Principal reason for granting the raise, according to the WLB, was the critical shortage of manpower in the industry due in large measure to lower than average wages.

At the same time, the board set up a five-man Non-Ferrous Metal Panel "to recommend to the Board specific plans and policies for the stabilization of labor relations throughout the industry, to the end that a maximum production of non-ferrous metals for the duration of the war may be promoted."

PANEL RECOMMENDATIONS

Previously, a three-man panel of the WLB had urged a straight 12.5 cents an hour increase. Union security in the board order follows the Little Steel formula of maintenance of membership plus an irrevocable check-off. The four employer members of the WLB voted solidly against the raise and the security clause.

Call Parley

Washington, Oct. 24.—A nationwide conference of labor leaders has been called by the American Red Cross to discuss labor's part in the war work. The meeting will be held Oct. 30 at the Washington Hotel here.

Your cooperation in demanding the Union Label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has demonstrated once more the effectivness of organized labor's purchasing power. There are still a few open-shoppers left in the men's and boys' clothing industry who deny their workers the basic right of organization. Each demand for the Amalgamated Union Label is one more blow against all anti-labor employers. Always ask for the Amalgamated Union Label on all men's and boys' wearing apparel that you buy.

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS OF AMERICA

Vital Election Drive Moves To Home-Stretch

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—With the 1943 election campaign moving down into the home stretch, union groups throughout the country this week redoubled activities to "get out the vote" for win-the-war candi-dates who will support President Roosevelt and recognize labor's big role in a democratic society.

Last week CIO President Murray reminded the nation that "the results of these elections will determine the kind of Congress that will run the legislative branch of our government in our country's toughest war—the war for survival."

Throughout the nation union leaders were warning the citizenry that a light vote plays into the hands of ultra-reactionaries who are desperately eager to win control of the House of Representatives away from the New Deal leadership of President Roosevelt.

WORKERS' DUTY

Everyone who possibly can should fulfill his duties at the election booth in order to forestall the plans of old-guard reactionaries, union workers were reminded.

Donald Nelson, WPB chief, has pointed out that the right to vote is one of the things we're fighting for, and has given the green light to war workers—even those in the most vital plants—to take time out to cast their ballots.

Connecticut Labor Unions Name Candidates

Hartford, Oct. 24.—Labor has unified its forces in this state to fight for the election of pro-labor, win-the-war candidates.

The Connecticut Labor's Non-Partisan League, which severed its ties from John L. Lewis' national organization, heard Gov. Robert Hurley call on workers to "help our leaders fulfill their declaration to open a second front."

The 400 delegates, representing thousands of CIO and AFL unionists throughout the state, endorsed for re-election Gov. Hurley, Lt.-Gov. Odell Shepard, and Reps. Maciora, Koppleman, Fitzgerald, Shanley and Downs. They also backed Mayor William Patten of Torrington (D.), who is seeking the Congressional seat of Rep. Joseph Talbot (R.) in the 5th district.

Others who received endorsement were Nicholas Tomasetti, LNPL state chairman; Harold Conroy, CIO electrical union leader at the Colt Arms plant; Michael Zvonkovic of the United Steelworkers, and Oliver Arsenalt, head of the CIO electrical union local 203—all running for state assembly. William Scott, head of the Hartford AFL council, has been endorsed for state senate.

Ask Jersey Labor Back Smathers

Newark, Oct. 24.—A vigorous plea for aggressive labor support of the re-election campaign of Sen. William Smathers (D) was sounded today by Irving Abramson, New Jersey CIO head and himself a Democratic nominee for Congress.

In a letter to all affiliates of the state CIO council, Abramson urged immediate steps to "implement" earlier endorsement and "to transform it into active support."

Senator Smathers has earned the whole-hearted support of labor by his record of adherence to the policies of Pres. Roosevelt and the New Deal," Abramson declared.

Warn CIO Voters Against Lethargy

New York, Oct. 24.—A warning that there has been "altogether too much lethargy among progressive people" on the current election campaign was sounded today by Sec.-Treas. Harold Garno of the New York State CIO.

"The American people stand to lose everything they are fighting for abroad if they neglect political responsibility to themselves in this crisis," he said.

"Labor, above all, must not fail in electing such Congressmen whose records prove them to be true defenders of the liberties for which we fight."

Flash! OPA Hits Rent-Climbing

Washington, Oct. 24.—Don't let your landlord chuck you out of your house on the ground that he's selling it, because the OPA has cracked down on this particular chiselling trick.

Effective Oct. 20, OPA head Leon Henderson announced that two major conditions would have to be met before a tenant can be evicted by reason of sale of the house:

1. The purchaser must pay one-third of the total price down. This should discourage phony sales and the trick of forcing tenants to start buying the house as a means of gouging an increased rent out of them.

2. The tenant cannot be evicted until three months after the Rent Director in the area has issued a certificate authorizing the sale and the eviction.

ASKS PROBE: Veteran liberal, Sen. George Norris of Nebraska, has asked a U. S. probe of radio networks after CBS and NBC barred a nationwide program about consumer cooperatives. Norris, one of the Senate's stalwarts, is running for re-election with wide progressive support.

Navy Calls Shipyards Confab

Washington, Oct. 22.—The first national conference of U. S. Navy Yard workers, called by Secretary Frank Knox and top officials of the Navy, opened here today with more than 200 workers' delegates expected to attend.

The conference was called, the Navy said, in accordance with its labor policy of "closer cooperation, more understanding of each other's problems, and more friendliness in our relationships."

It was further described by Asst. Navy Secretary Ralph Bard as a "sincere attempt to bring together in a harmonious unit all men and women of the Navy family for the sole purpose of winning this war and achieving victory for our country and our common cause."

RANK AND FILE

The delegates are rank and file yard workers, the Navy said in announcing the conference, and are elected by their fellow-workers. Both AFL, CIO and non-union delegates attended.

Speakers included Secretary Knox, Admiral King, Labor Secretary Perkins, and other leading government officials. Pres. Murray was at the speakers' table at the main function.

Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

"The women of America have one of the greatest weapons in the world to beat Hitler quickly and to bring about a real peace—their right to vote," Bella Dodd, Legislative Secretary of the Teachers Union, told the Sixth Conference of the Ladies Auxiliaries of the CIO Transport Workers Union in New York, in a wonderful speech. She urged the women to use this weapon on election day and to see to it that every member of the auxiliary and every woman they knew through church and fraternal groups used it to rout the appeasers.

As an example of the urgent need to get out and vote, Miss Dodd cited the case of N. Y. State Senator Frederick R. Coudert. This man publicly admits that he represents the Bank of France, a semi-public institution of Vichy, France.

In May, 1942, the Schneider-Creusot Company of France, engaged in manufacture of planes, tanks and guns for Hitler, sued an American company in the New York courts for not fulfilling a contract. Frederick Coudert was the lawyer for Schneider-Creusot who tried to collect money from an American firm to be turned over to an enemy of our nation.

And this man is actually running for re-election to a public office in our United States!

SPEECH BY QUILL

Michael Quill, in a fighting speech following Miss Dodd at the auxiliary meeting, also urged the women to concentrate on defeating Coudert and other anti-war candidates.

The response was an immediate plan of action by the auxiliary. It was agreed that regular meetings of the borough branches of the auxiliary scheduled for the following night would adjourn as soon as the women had all assembled and that they would all go in a body to the headquarters of the committee to defeat Coudert and report for duty.

Coudert is a symbol. He's a symbol of the appeaser, anti-war and downright pro-fascist men who are running for public office in all too many communities. And it's up to us to do what the transport women are doing in New York—suspend our other business to November 3 and mobilize every auxiliary woman in the United States to elect win-the-war candidates. That's the biggest thing we can do for victory today.

CALIFORNIA AUXILIARIES

Election of Governor Olson and other California win-the-war candidates was decided to be the immediate order of business of the California Auxiliaries at their recent State Convention. The newly elected officers, President Tillie Olson and Secretary Grace Mathias, were instructed by unanimous agreement of the 36 delegates to urge each California Auxiliary to mobilize its entire membership for election work.

FDR's Order Seen No Bar To Bargaining

Washington, Oct. 24—Pres. Roosevelt's stabilization order, setting up an economic board headed by Justice James F. Byrnes is not "intended as a wage freeze" and will not curtail collective bargaining, Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, wrote this week in a circular letter to all CIO affiliates.

The letter, which analyzes the executive order and its effect on wages, points out that the War Labor Board has already announced a policy of correcting inequalities in wages similar to the policy it followed before. This is backed by the clause in the order forbidding wage increases over Sept. 15 levels unless "necessary to correct maladjustments or inequities, to eliminate substandards of living, or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war."

FILE WITH WLB

The WLB, the letter pointed out, has issued certain general orders covering wage increases. These cover filing of notice of voluntary increases which have not gone through prior to Oct. 3 (date of the President's order), and approval by the WLB, except where they cover eight or fewer workers or are given in carrying out a regular wage agreement previously established or in the case of individual increases based on merit, reclassification, etc.

The WLB has also ruled that wage increases made under the order "should not result in any substantial increase on the level of costs and shall not furnish basis either to increase price ceilings or the commodity or service involved or to resist otherwise justifiable deductions in such price ceilings."

SALARIES

Economic Director Byrnes has authorized the WLB to handle cases of salaries of less than $3,000 and between $3,000 and $5,000 that are subject to union agreements. Salaries in these brackets not covered by agreement will be turned over to the Treasury Dept. in matters involving adjustments.

Use Your Ballot As a Bullet For Democracy

Here's what CIO Pres. Murray has to say about the elections:

"The results of these elections will determine the kind of Congress that will run the legislative branch of our government in our country's toughest war—the war for survival. If we have a Congress that backs our Commander-in-Chief in all the offensive war measures that are necessary for victory, the war will be over that much quicker and fewer Americans will die. If we have the kind of Congress that holds back, that refuses to pass laws to uphold the fighting fronts to strengthen the home front, victory will be that much further away and that much more costly in lives and treasure."

VOTE FOR VICTORY!

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

Director of Organization, CIO

Regional Director R. J. Davidson of Cincinnati reports four election victories during this past week, as follows:

L. V. Marks & Son Co., Vanceburg, Ky., United Shoe Workers, 135; no union, 84. Highland Machine Co., Dayton, Ohio, UAW-CIO, 70; no union, 10. Columbia Machinery & Engineering Co., Hamilton, Ohio, UAW-CIO, 125; company union, 22. American Machinery Co., Cincinnati, Ohio, UERMWA, 808; neither, 428.

Edwin S. Smith, director, Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, reports an election victory at Standard Oil's Humble Oil Refinery at Ingleside, Texas, as follows: Oil Workers, CIO, 212 to 69 for Humble Refinery Employes Association.

E. L. Sandefur, CIO Regional Director for the Carolinas, reports election victories in his territory as follows:

Corbitt Co., Henderson, N. C., UAW-CIO, 190; no union, 30. Perly A. Thomas Car Works, High Point, N. C. UAW-CIO, 118; no union, 56. Representative Harden of the UAW-CIO was instrumental in these fine victories.

Regional Director Sandefur also reports that Representative Coburn of the United Furniture Workers was successful in winning the election at the Brooklyn Cooperage, Sumter, S. C., with a vote of 141 for CIO to 30 for no union.

Many Election Victories

The UOPWA won elections in the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company in four Massachusetts areas; namely, Haverhill, Springfield, Fall River and Lowell, by a vote of 110 to 41. The agents automatically come under the terms of the UOPWA contract with Hancock which now covers 2,500 agents in 17 cities throughout five states.

Adolph Germer, Director of Organization, IWA-CIO, reports winning an election at the Chicago Mill and Lumber Company, Helena, Ark., with a vote of 529 for IWA-CIO to 242 for AFL.

Paul R. Christopher, CIO Regional Director in Tennessee, reports winning an election held at the Plymouth Laundry, Chattanooga, with a vote of 96 for CIO to 12 for no union.

James P. Sweeney, CIO representative in Trenton, N. J., advises after a series of conferences with representatives of workers all of whom are members of CIO's State, County and Municipal Workers, that all employes at Donnelly Municipal Colony will be placed on an eight-hour day. Both Brother Sweeney and Brother Edward O'Neill, president of Local 400, SCMWA, were active in the negotiations, and both state "this is one bright spot in the insitutional picture at present. Other improvements have been promised and are being worked out."

Through the fine efforts of Brother James P. Griffin, president, Mahoning County IUC in Youngstown, Ohio, and Sub-Regional Director Harry R. Doll, a contract has been negotiated between the Black Products Company and members of CIO's LIU 1234, and many fine gains were secured.

With the help of O. S. Baxter, USA Sub-Regional Director in Chattanooga, CIO Field Representative B. T. Judd reports the winning of the election at the Modern Way Laundry with a vote of 58 for CIO to no votes for no union.

Regional Director Federoff reports a victory at Wheeling, W. Va., at the plant of the G. E. Stifel Company. This is a textile plant. CIO received 264 votes to 6. Last week a proposed settlement was worked out by NLRB representative in the Di Nobili Cigar strike.

Open Letter to Adm. Land

An open letter to Admiral Land from the organizing department of the CIO: "Your statement 'all organizers should be shot at sunrise' is an unwarranted and cowardly one. You, as head of the Maritime Commission, are aware that organized labor has been and is now producing ships at a rate that was thought impossible, that the Longshoremen & Warehousemens Union have suggested and effectuated improved methods of loading and unloading ships and have been acclaimed by responsible authorities and the ships have been dispatched faster than ever.

"You are also aware that the union seamen are sailing the seven seas transporting weapons of war to the United Nations throughout the world, giving their lives, ready and willing to make any sacrifice so that the forces of democracy will overcome the forces of dictatorship and ruthlessness at the earliest date possible. You are further aware there are many thousands of members of organized labor in our armed forces. Labor is out for all-out production of war materials for every war effort including buying of bonds, giving of blood, collecting of scrap and supporting our Commander-in-Chief President Roosevelt to the end that liberty shall prevail and the forces of aggression be destroyed.

"Apparently what you are not aware of is that labor cherishes its liberties and democratic institutions and intends that they shall be preserved. It is most unfortunate that yau have used your high office in a manner that tends to destroy confidence which is so necessary amongst all the people of our nation in this hour of peril."

Argentine Seamen Ask Strong Anti-Nazi Stand

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 24 (ALN)—The third convention of the Federacion Obrera Maritima (F. O. M.), meeting here last week, demanded that the government abandon its policy of "neutrality," which is creating unrest throughout the country, and give active support to the cause of the United Nations.

Of particular significance to organized labor's fight against President Castillo was the federation's action in paving the way for unity with other organized maritime workers, notably the Union Obrera Maritima (U. O. M.), most of whose 6,000 members are employed by the Argentine shipping firm, Mianovich & Cia.

The federation, the largest affiliate of the Union Syndical Argentina, national labor body ranking second in importance to the Confederacion Generale del Trabajo, proposed a joint congress to draw up a plan for a single maritime labor organization.

UNITY VS. AXIS

The session devoted to discussion of maritime labor unity wound up with a demonstration of the delegates' anti-Nazi sentiments.

Of the numerous delegates who spoke on unity, J. J. Montero pointed out the necessity of following North American and British workers into the war against the Axis "if we are to wage a successful defense of our own rights."

Another delegate, R. Hermida, declared that unity of maritime workers would be the first step toward bringing together all Argentine workers and Argentine citizens who are opposed to Nazism.

M. Ramirez, delegate from the seamen's section, said: "United we can force our government to establish freedom of the press and freedom of opinion; united we can defend our rights and launch a fight to the death against Fascism."

UNITY STATEMENT

The unity resolution, adopted unanimously, said: "The Federation of Maritime Workers declares itself opposed to Nazism and in favor of the Solari bill to build up the national merchant marine and improve seamen's wages.

"Both these goals can be achieved only through the organized activity of all maritime workers, and this committee therefore proposes that the executive committee of our federation prepare to hold an extraordinary congress, with equal representation from both the F. O. M. and U. O. M., to discuss a constitution for a new single organization of maritime workers."

South African Labor Adopts Program For War Activity

CAPETOWN (ALN)—A decisive step toward a total war footing for South Africa—still a long way off—was the recent adoption of a 30-Point Program for Victory by the South African Labor Party. Keynoted by the demand that South Africa be developed as a major industrial base for the armies of the Middle East, the program declares:

"This includes the mobilization of the entire country, rapid and intensive training of unskilled European and non-European workers, the transfer of workers to war industry; organization of woman-power and elimination of non-essential production.

"The increased industrial personnel required can be found by the application of wartime schemes for the rapid training of new workers of all races, the re-training of transferred workers and the organization of part-time employment of women."

It is especially significant that the Labor Party, which has always represented the minority of relatively highly-paid, skilled European workers, should now propose an industrial program in terms of South Africa's entire population.

Though it does not specifically advocate arming non-Europeans, a proposal which is gaining more and more support in labor circles, it insists that mobilizing the country's full resources involve "creating a much larger and more powerful fighting force, adequately equipped, clothed, armed, armoured and motorized, according to the standards prescribed for us by the quality of the enemy forces which have to be defeated."

ASK RATIONING

One object of the Labor Party's proposal "to extend the variety of our production" is to guarantee a sufficient supply of previously imported commodities which are now limited by the shortage of shipping space. Other proposals for avoiding inflation include rationing of food, an inclusive system of price control and farm subsidies along the lines of the parity payments to U. S. farmers.

Considerable emphasis is put on the necessity for transferring "the resources of the gold mining industry to the production of armaments," in order to boost production of copper, iron and steel.

Such suggestions are resisted stubbornly by the mining industry, whose spokesmen in the government argue that to curtail gold output would wipe out 30 per cent of South Africa's yearly income, ignoring the fact that more useful industrial enterprises would create new sources of income.

Russian Army Officer Praises American Tanks

KUIBYSHEV, Oct. 24 (ALN)—Among the pessimists who blame the lack of a second front on deficiencies in American and British equipment, Lieut. Ivan Chernik, commander of an American tank which has just been through its first action on the Volga front, is not included.

While Chernik's tank, a well-designed, up-to-the-minute model, was being built by American workers, Chernik was studying its blueprints at a Red Army academy, and he was so familiar with the drawings that he was able to take the tank into battle within a week after it arrived in the USSR.

Before the war Chernik worked in a machine-building plant in the Urals, where he was an active member of the union's factory committee. He is a seasoned veteran of the defense of Moscow.

ROUT NAZIS

The first encounter between the American tank and the Germans was highly successful, Chernik reported to a correspondent of Red Star, the Red Army paper. "In a little village occupied by the Hitlerites there was a disturbing silence," he said. "Scouts reported that there were no Germans in the village, but my commanding officer, afraid of an ambush, ordered me to carry out a reconnaissance in force.

"We started firing as soon as we entered the village, and the racket we caused was too much for the Germans, who are usually too nervous to be any good in ambushes. Tommy-gunners in one of the attics let loose a volley at us, and the Germans moved a gun out from behind one of the houses into the middle of the street.

"My gunner, firing point blank, took care of this gun, and I maneuvered to get at another gun emplacement in the midst of several houses. When that gun was silenced, sweat was pouring off our faces; the air in the tank had become heated from the repeated blows of bullets against its armor.

"Before we withdrew, we had accounted for a hundred or so of the Hitlerites, two Fascist dugouts and two guns. I had the tank put into reverse so we could keep the enemy under gunfire as we retreated.

"Later I counted the dents in the tank's armor where it had been struck by shells of various calibres. There were 45. The success of the reconnaissance was a tribute to the merit of the machine and the skill and efficiency of American workers."

Head for Harvard

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 24.—Two CIO members are among the 14 unionists chosen to study for nine months under union fellowships at Harvard University. The two are Charles Conner, American Federation of Hosiery Workers, Des Moines, Ia., and Frederick M. Kelley, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, West Lynn, Mass.

Union Heads Ask U. S. Split With Spain

New York, Oct. 24—A number of CIO leaders have joined with more than 400 Americans prominent in the fields of writing, music, theater, professions and religion to urge Pres. Roosevelt take steps towards immediate breaking of diplomatic relations with General Franco's pro-Axis Spain.

Sponsored by the Council for Pan-American democracy, the petition states that "we are at war with fascism, and Franco Spain is fascist.

"Franco is our enemy," it continues. "We ask you to treat him as an enemy, to sever all diplomatic and trade relations between the United States and fascist Spain."

MANY SIGNERS

Among the signers were CIO Vice-Pres. Frank Rosenblum and Joseph Curran, of the clothing and maritime unions; Harold Straub, director of the CIO utility workers; Armando Valdes of the cigar workers; Walter J. Burke of the Wisconsin CIO; Pres. Morris Muster of the furniture workers; Pres. Michael Quill of the transport workers, and others.

Signers from the professional or artistic world included Deems Taylor, composer; Prof. Schuman of Williams; Prof. C. E. Warne of Amherst; William F. Remington, bishop of eastern Oregon; Judge E. Totten of Minneapolis, and Dr. Thomas Hepburn, father of the movie star.

Announce Labor Relief Projects

Workers Get Benefits Of Donations

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24.—United American Labor, CIO and AFL, has reached across the oceans to give direct aid and comfort to the fighters and civilians of the United Nations.

Three special labor projects in Britain, China and Russia have been included in the national budget recommended by Community Chests and Councils, Inc., to local War Chests throughout the country. The approval of labor's gifts to the allies grows out of the co-operative agreement signed by the CIO, AFL and the War Chests for the 1942 drive.

In Glassglow and two other cities American labor will build and maintain homes for merchant seamen when they are on shore in Great Britain after long and dangerous voyages. This project was recommended by the British War Relief Society and the maritime unions of Britain and America.

Funds contributed by CIO members will also be used to construct and maintain a home for Indian seamen at Avonmouth, near Bristol, England.

HOMES FOR KIDS

Over 900 orphaned or shell-shocked children will be taken care of in 10 nursing homes established and maintained by the Labor Projects funds. The Child Welfare Associations of Great Britain suggested the plan to American labor. The British War Relief Society will administer them.

Rest homes for war workers suffering from the strain of long hours of continuous work are to be built and operated. Unions of the workers will share in the administration. Over 360 workers will be accommodated at one time.

AID TO CHINA

The most dramatic of the labor plans is that of smuggling skilled workers from Occupied China to Free China where their talents can be employed in behalf of China's fighting forces.

The transfer of 1,000 mechanics from Japanese-controlled factories will greatly increase the potential of Chinese production. The actual operation of the plan will be carried out by the Chinese Association of Labor which is experienced in "underground railway" activities. The Chinese Industrial Cooperatives and United China Relief will assist in supervision.

The Chinese labor project will provide for the construction and maintenance of 100 mobile food distribution units capable of reaching distant workers. The Chinese Association of Labor under the general supervision of the Co-ordinating Committee of United China Relief in Chungking will administer labor's contribution.

Facilities for Chinese base hospitals, equipment and surgical supplies, will also be furnished under the labor project.

RUSSIAN SUPPLIES

The Russian project will provide equipment and supplies urgently needed at schools and nurseries for homeless children and at rehabilitation hospitals for wounded soldiers.

Vitamins, school supplies, orthopedic equipment, diathermy apparatus, shoes, evaporated milk, blankets, 25,000 sheets and pillow cases and 175,000 towels will be part of the shipment to Russia.

Stone Union Wins 5c Raise

Barre, Vt., Oct. 24.—Wage increases for workers at the New Jersey Pulverizing Co. and the Carlyle Tile Co., Ironton, Ohio, were announced here this week at headquarters of the United Stone & Allied Products Workers. Under the terms of a renewed contract, the union's Bayville Branch won a 5c hourly raise, seniority, paid vacations and a union shop.

At the Carlyle Tile, the union's Branch 52 won a 3c hourly increase for time workers ,and 5c for those on piece work.

Pamphlet Describes Poles' Struggle Against Nazis

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A 58-page booklet, "Poland Fights On," dealing with the magnificent resistance of the Polish and Jewish underground movement against the Nazis, has recently been published by the Amalgamated Relief Committee for Labor in Nazi-Occupied Poland.

"Poland Fights On" describes the Nazi program of mass enslavement and extermination of the Polish and Jewish population of Poland—its ruthless deportation of workers to Germany, seizure and exploitation of Polish industry and food supplies, destruction of cultural and religious institutions, torture of opposition leaders and mass slaughter of Jews.

NAZIS' MASTER PLAN

The Nazi program of cultural bondage and economic deprivation for the conquered Poles, the booklet contends, is the first step in the "realization of a master design for complete Nazi domination of all the peoples of Europe."

The booklet cites numerous examples of sabotage, passive resistance and guerrilla activities undertaken by the underground movement and describes fully the scope and aims of the extensive Polish underground press.

The Amalgamated Relief Committee for Labor in Nazi-Occupied Poland, publishers of the booklet, is a voluntary organization of members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, set up in 1938 to aid the Polish labor movement and later extended for fund raising work for the anti-Nazi movement of Poland. Headquarters are at 15 Union Square, New York City.

Labor School Conference In Michigan

Highland Park, Ill., Oct. 24.—The third annual Workers' Education Conference to be held under the auspices of Labor Education Service, is scheduled to open here today for a two-day meeting. Representatives will attend from unions and other groups engaged in workers education all over the Middle West.

Among the CIO speakers scheduled to take part in the discussion are Leonard Levy, regional director, United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes; Herbert Payne, vice-president, Textile Workers Union, and John L. Yancey, secretary-treasurer, United Transport Service Employes.

6,000 Gain Pay Hikes In WLB Orders

Washington, Oct. 24 — Decisions granting pay increases to more than 6,000 workers were handed down by the National War Labor Board this week in cases involving two important CIO unions.

Some 5,000 production and maintenance employes of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., Birmingham, Ala., represented by the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, and 1,100 employes of 20 tanners in Fulton County, New York, represented by the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers Union, were both granted a 5½ cents an hour pay raise by the board.

WIN SECURITY

In the case of the Alabama company, the board also granted the union's request for a standard maintnance-of-membership clause and check-off, and made the pay increase retroactive to March 27, 1942. The concern is engaged in the mining of coal, iron ore and limestone, quarrying of dolomite and in the production, processing sale and distribution of pig iron, steel and related products.

The pay increase for the Fulton county leather workers, which amounts to a 7 per cent raise, was made retroactive to March 21, 1942. The board also directed that a voluntary maintenance of membership clause be included in contracts signed with the CIO Fur & Leather Workers.

In another order issued this week, the board directed the Pacific Gas & Electric Co., San Francisco, to recognize and bargain with the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee as the certified union for about 1,350 of the company's employes at the East Bay division.

Capital Fur Shop Signs With CIO

Washington, Oct. 24—A five-year fight for recognition and a contract at the Zirkin & Sons fur store—one of the capital city's largest—ended in victory this week for Local 72, International Fur & Leather Workers.

Offer 'Wagner Act' For Farm Workers

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24—Five bills designed to extend the New Deal's labor policies to employes of "factory farms" were submitted this week to the Senate by Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin and Senator Elbert Thomas of Utah.

Filing of the bills coincided with publication of the fourth section of the agricultural report of the Senate Civil Liberties Committee—of which the two Senators are members. The report, based on lengthy investigations and hearings in California, found that big land owners who employ scores or hundreds of workers, have worked together to fight union organization and have seldom hesitated to flout civil liberties in their battle.

FARM 'WAGNER ACT'

Most important of the five bills was an "Agricultural Labor Relations Act" which Senator LaFollette described as "keystone arch of any enlightened national policy" in the field of farm labor. "It would simply extend the benefits of the National Labor Relations Act to include those individuals employed as farm laborers in industrialized agriculture," he explained.

The companion measures would provide old age insurance and a special form of unemployment compensation to farm laborers; set up "agricultural wage boards" to determine fair pay standards for workers in industrialized agriculture; provide for minimum wages and maximum hours in the same way that the Wage-Hour Act operates for industrial workers, and regulate operation of private employment agencies, labor contractors and other forms of private recruiting which supply labor to the big farm owners.

Senator LaFollette stressed the committee's intention to regulate the big agricultural employer rather than the small independent farm owner employing only two or three farm hands.

NEED ASSISTANCE

The Wisconsin Progressive also called upon the Senate to act in behalf of the 8,000,000 agricultural workers who own, rent, or share-crop small farms. Large numbers are under-employed, working on inefficient or submarginal farms," he said and "they suffer from the rural poverty that is a veritable blight in whole States and regions."

Liberal assistance from the Farm Security Administration, LaFollette asserted, "can permit the small agricultural producer to be converted to levels of war production."

The Civil Liberties Committee report bitterly attacked the ultra-reactionary policies of the big "factory farm owners" who have exploited their workers for years.

"Deprived of the protection of labor legislation, employe organization, or even dependable employment, these agricultural wage workers have suffered for years under a serious national discrimination," the report said.

"It is no coincidence that when manpower came into demand because of our all-out war effort the agricultural wage laborer—particularly the migratory, part-time worker—who depended on industrialized or commercialized agriculture, sought to escape from his bondage of poverty and misery to the armed services and the urban factory.

"As a result, there is no reliable agricultural labor supply. This lack of a dependable labor force for agriculture threatens the "Food For Victory" program. In the long years of war ahead, it may become a fatal defect in our national armor."

Cowan Hits Move For Child Labor

Washington, Oct. 24.—An attempt to legalize child labor under 14 in the sugar beet fields was protested to Congress this week by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative. Cowan's protest was made in a letter to the Senate Finance Committee, now considering the measure.

"It is extremely shocking that any group should feel it necessary to resort to a measure of this type under present conditions," Cowan wrote.

WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

VOTE FOR VICTORY!

Use Your Ballot To Hit Hitler Nov. 3

NEXT Tuesday, November 3, every worker and his wife have a job to do for their country, for themselves, and for victory over the Fascist Axis.

This job is plain—to get out and vote FOR candidates who back our Commander-in-Chief and AGAINST those who would rather fight him and fight labor than fight Hitler.

THE ISSUES ARE CLEAR

Here is what you are voting FOR when you cast your ballot for candidates who back President Roosevelt and the war effort:

1. FOR win-the-war leadership on the fighting fronts and on the home fronts.

2. FOR the seven-point victory program to check inflation and step up total mobilization for total war.

3. FOR all-out labor participation in the war through labor unions operating under just laws designed to promote collective bargaining and thus increase war production.

When you use your ballot to retire the disrupters and the defeatists from Congress you vote:

1. AGAINST the minority that has tried to wreck the seven-point victory program.

2. AGAINST the minority that wrote the "worst tax bill in history" to soak the poor and spare the rich.

3. AGAINST the minority that has tried to block poll-tax repeal and keep 13 million American citizens in exile from democracy.

4. AGAINST the minority that leads the attack on labor unions, on wages and living conditions and on war production for the offensive and victory.

WHAT YOU MUST DO

President Murray has called next Tuesday's elections "the most important in American history." He has called on every worker to go to the polls and vote and to "rally our fellow-workers to their duty at the polls through our unions, our auxiliaries, our civic and fraternal groups, through every means of communication we possess."

Our votes are a great weapon for victory and freedom. We must use this weapon for our cause and against our enemies—by voting representatives into public life who are on record for our Commander-in-Chief and for VICTORY.

Go to your union and your council now. Find out the record of every candidate in the field—the record is there for all to inspect. Pick out the candidate who stands on the record committed to victory through all-out offensive war and total mobilization on the home front.

Vote for that candidate and against the disrupters and the defeatists and you strike a real blow for your country, for yourself and for the cause of freedom everywhere.

Urge Plan To Handle Manpower

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (FP)—Suggestions for increased production were given by educational directors of AFL and CIO unions at the annual fall conference of the New York Women's Trade Union League.

"Many government agencies are now dabbling in manpower, but I think it is time we had a sensible coordinated organization to carry out a good manpower program," said Victor G. Reuther, assistant coordinator of war policy for the United Auto Workers, CIO.

"Selective service should also be brought under a manpower agency so that the present planless induction of workers will not continue to disrupt war production, particularly in shipyards and aviation plants."

Educational Director Mark Starr of the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL, said: "Nothing would be more conducive to all-out effort in production than a greater recognition of the trade unions by more representative and direct participation in the War Production Board.

"The great danger of industrial conscription is that its application will not be made by bodies having adequate labor representation."

Jail for Pay Law Chiselers

Los Angeles, Oct. 30 (FP)—Municipal Judge Ida Adams insisted on 30-day jail terms for owners of the Majestic Garment Co., convicted for violating the state minimum wage law for women.

When the sweatshop operators pleaded for a fine instead, Judge Adams said: "Any money raised by the defendants would best be used to raise the pay of their employes."

U. S. Slaps Anti-Negro Bias In Oil Outfit's Propaganda

BAYTOWN, Tex., Oct. 30—The Federal Government cracked down sharply today on efforts by an "Employes Federation" at Standard Oil's big Humble refinery here to stir up prejudice against Negro workers.

The U. S. action came in the form of a strongly-worded telegram from Lawrence Cramer, executive secretary of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices to the "federation," following protests by Edwin S. Smith of the CIO Oil Workers Organizing Campaign and John Brophy, CIO member of the federal committee.

Referring to a viciously-worded attack on the CIO and Negro workers distributed by the "federation," Cramer said:

"In its general tone and specifically in certain paragraphs, this leaflet is an incitement to violence against Negro workers. Its issuance in a refinery producing essential war materials is an act of gross irresponsibility, creating disunity among workers and retarding the war effort.

"The committee requests in the interests of patriotism and of the national war effort that your organization promptly retract this appeal to race prejudice."

At Houston headquarters of the CIO oil drive, Director Smith hailed the committee's action, adding that "the Humble Co. is apparently acting in harmony with the 'federation' in its anti-Negro drive.

"A number of instances have been brought to my attention of supervisory employes intimidating Negroes because of their CIO affiliation. These incidents are being investigated, looking toward possible federal action against the company."

The CIO is organizing both white and Negro workers at the refinery, a fact which the "federation's" leaflet sought to distort into a "secret" campaign, and it made a low appeal to racial prejudice to stop the unionization drive.

Charging that the CIO has come to Texas "brandishing a torch of racial hatred," the leaflet called on "thousands of Texas country boys . . . to check them here and now."

Iowa Slaps Tory Farm Spokesman

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 30 (FP)—If there's a reddish tinge on the face of President Edward A. O'Neal of the American Farm Bureau Federation, possibly it's because of the stinging retorts to his demand that workers take wage cuts to prevent inflation.

Condemnation was expressed in the midwest for an entire week. Former Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel (D), one-time livestock auctioneer who said he was a charter member of the farm bureau, branded the attack on labor as "unfair."

Both the AFL and CIO were represented in the public indignation. Ben Henry, Iowa-Nebraska CIO regional director, and Pres. A. A. Couch of the Iowa Federation of Labor issued a joint statement denouncing O'Neal's attitude and proclaiming labor's friendship for "the real farmers."

Atty. John Connolly, Jr., who has represented both labor factions, added his bit to the denunciations as a speaker at the legislative conference of the AFL Oct. 17-18 in Des Moines.

Ship Crews Get Radio Sets

Washington, Oct. 30—Acting on a request of the CIO American Communications Assn., the War Shipping Administration has ordered 2,800 "low radiation" radio receiving sets to be placed on American merchant vessels so that seamen may keep up with the news of the world during their long voyages.

Regular receiving sets are forbidden in sub-infested waters since they give off a signal that can be picked up by enemy craft for a hundred miles around. The special sets ordered by the WSA eliminate this signal.

'Food-For-Victory' Program Drafted By Cannery Union

By CONNIE ANDERSON

CHICAGO, Oct. 30—From start to finish the fourth annual convention of the CIO United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America was a win-the-war convention.

Meeting in Chicago last week, delegates from the South, the West, the East and Mid-West, Negro and white, Spanish-speaking, Filipinos, and a large number of women, hammered out policies designed to continue the growth of their union and to increase its effectiveness in pressing for policies which will assure victory for the people both in the war and in the peace.

With the eyes of the country on the growing crisis in food production, the convention threshed out a thorough-going "Farm Labor for Victory" program which called for a war manpower mobilization in agriculture "based on a complete set of controls on production which will produce the quantities of food and fiber we need and will clamp down on unessential production now frittering away manpower resources . . ."

HIT JOB FREEZING

Pointing out that stabilization of the labor force, not job freezing, is the answer to farm labor needs, the program included the following points:

1. Wages and basic rights for farm workers on a par with industrial workers. Delegates praised the La Follette and Thomas farm bills introduced into the Senate on Oct. 19 and urged that where "farmers cannot afford to pay decent wages, government subsidies to the farmer are necessary."

2. More efficient use of farm labor, steady employment, staggering of plantings and pooled use of farm machinery.

3. Finding new sources of farm labor in areas of surplus, such as the South; also planned interchange between industry and agriculture, and community mobilization on a basis which will not break down wage standards.

In his keynote speech, Pres. Donald Henderson voiced the views of the delegates later expressed in a series of resolutions when he described the strategic importance of extending the four freedoms to the colonial peoples of the world and of opening a second front immediately.

Exposing the Munichmen and labor-baiters who oppose such policies of a people's war, Henderson reminded the delegates that "day by day and week by week you are winning that kind of a war by all the little things you do in building your union and in sending wires and letters to the various Washington officials."

Greetings were cabled by the convention to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, Joseph Stalin and to the people of Stalingrad. Expressing "heartfelt admiration for the unforgettable defense of Stalingrad," the convention said that the "workers of America know defense of Stalingrad is also defense of all the United Nations against fascism," and promised to "work untiringly for immediate opening of a second front in Europe in 1942."

In addition to support for a second front now, resolutions for international labor unity, against the appeaser role of John L. Lewis, for the liberation of the Indian and other colonial peoples, for stopping discrimination against Negro, Spanish-speaking and other minority peoples were among those which put the convention squarely behind the winning of the people's war.

REPORT SUBSTANTIAL GAINS

On the organizing front, gains in areas and industries were reported which added up to an increase since the last convention in December, 1940, of 161 per cent in industrial workers under contract, bringing the total to 51,634.

One of the outstanding areas is Memphis, Tenn., where from virtually nothing, the union grew in 20 months to a membership of 3,000 with 18 plants under contract. Dramatizing this growth was the greeting carried in the UCAPAWA News convention issue from Mayor Walter Chandler of Memphis, Boss Crump's city. It was only a few years ago that Crump told the CIO American Newspaper Guild that their convention would not be welcome in Memphis.

MANY WOMEN

Another significant convention-in-wartime note was the large number of women delegates, who comprised one-third of the entire convention.

Active in debate, with two elected to the Executive Board, the bulk of these women delegates stood out as full-fledged leaders. Many have taken leading places in their locals and as organizers because men leaders have left for the war.

Pres. Donald Henderson and Sec.-Treas. Harold J. Lane were reelected, with Conrad Espe voted in to the newly created full-time post of executive vice-president. Espe at the time of his election was business agent of the Alaska Canned Salmon local in Seattle, one of the cornerstones of UCAPAWA.

Oil Drive Chalks Up 3 More Wins

Houston, Tex., Oct. 29 — Three Labor Board election victories were chalked up last week for the CIO Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, it was announced here by Edwin S. Smith, national director.

At Wellsville, N. Y., the OWOC won 296 to 85 for no union and placed the Sinclair Refinery there under the terms of the national contract between the Oil Workers International Union and the Sinclair company. It was the last remaining unorganized Sinclair refinery in the nation.

Down at Carteret, N. J., the CIO swamped the opposition in the General American Tank Storage Terminals by a vote of 60 to 21, while just a few days earlier that week the Oil Drive of the CIO sunk a Rockefeller company union in the Humble Oil plant at Ingleside, Tex., by a vote of 212 to 69.

Capt. Mulzac, Crew Feted By L.A. CIO

By JACK ORR

Los Angeles, Oct. 30—The "great job" the CIO and the National Maritime Union have done in the fight against discrimination was hailed by Capt. Hugh N. Mulzac, first Negro to command a Liberty ship, at a dinner given in honor of Mulzac and officers and crew of the Booker T. Washington here this week .

Mulzac will command the recently-launched Washington, named for the American Negro, as a result of a concerted NMU campaign.

Speakers at the dinner declared that the occasion being celebrated "made bad news for Hitler." Fifteen Negroes are members of the crew, and every member of the crew is a member of the NMU.

M. Hedley Stone, NMU national treasurer, who flew to Los Angeles from New York for the dinner, drew prolonged applause when he called upon those who aided the fight against discrimination "to double, triple and quadruple your efforts in behalf of another campaign, the opening of the second front.

"We ask you to devote all your energies to the demand for the opening of a second land front in Europe," Stone declared.

In another ceremony at the dinner members of the CIO Fur Workers Union presented fur vests to the entire crew as part of the national campaign of the fur industry to give a vest to every member of the merchant marine.

OVATION FOR CAPTAIN

Mulzac, who weighs only 150 pounds, received a tremendous ovation when he was introduced at the dinner. He said he had been a captain of a ship in the first World War, but that when the war was over, he was one of the first captains to be relieved of his command.

He said he was unable to get an appointment between the time of the first World War and this one, but that he shipped as a cook or a steward during these years.

It wasn't until the National Maritime Union enunciated and fought for the principles of no discrimination that he was appointed.

Federal Workers Rally to 'Win-War' Plans at Parley

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Oct. 27—Plans for organizing the 2,500,000 civilian employes of the United States Government around a complete win-the-war program and in the interest of the speediest victory over the Axis were worked out here this week at the second constitutional convention of the United Federal Workers of America.

The convention called for centralized control of personnel policy and practice in the interests of greater war efficiency, for joint labor-management committees in all departments, agencies and other government establishments, including navy yards and arsenals, and for wages and working conditions for federal employes, many of whom now are among the underpaid workers in the country, equal to those won for workers in private industry by those workers' unions.

MESSAGE TO FDR

The win-the-war spirit of the convention was clearly reflected in the thorough discussion of the overwhelmingly adopted resolution calling for a second front.

This took the form of a message to President Franklin D. Roosevelt, backing the commander-in-chief's stand for a second front in 1942 and citing the dangers in delay of such action. Similarly, the convention backed the Administration's proposal for the draft of 18- and 19-year-old youths—without the restrictions imposed by the Senate.

A third strong resolution blasted Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the U.S. Maritime Commission, for his notorious "shoot the organizers at sunrise" statement and backed CIO President Philip Murray's demand that Land be removed from office as a menace to the war effort. Going further, the 150 UFWA delegates, representing 26,000 members, unanimously demanded that Land be barred from holding further federal office.

Land's Hitler-like talk came in for a scorching denunciation from Allan S. Haywood, administrator of the UFWA and director of organization for the Congress of Industrial Organizations, in an impassioned plea for all-out support for the nation's victory effort which won Haywood a standing ovation.

Haywood, speaking out among the first on a new and important CIO war demand, said that the CIO was asking for centralized control of war activities in Washington to avoid waste and overlapping, that it demanded full labor participation in all agencies and departments concerned with the conduct of the war and that it demanded, again, appointment of labor-management advisory committees for such agencies.

BIG ROLE

Telling of the CIO's concern for the UFWA, Haywood pointed out that the federal workers had "a big role to play in civilization's darkest hour." The war, he said, could be lost because of inefficiency and bungling and low morale in Washington. The federal workers, he said, could do for the government branches what such CIO innovations as the Reuther plan and the Murray plan had done for private industry in keying it to maximum war production.

President Roosevelt, greeting the convention in a letter to Miss Nelson, told the UFWA in part: "I can think of no better means of celebrating this occasion than the re-dedication of this organization to the serivce of the people and Government of the United States. In war, far more than in peace, a democratic government must have the loyal devotion of its civil servants.

"Employe organizations can be most helpful in fostering such loyalty and in bringing about conditions of employment in the Federal Government which are conducive to the maintenance of the highest civilian employe morale."

A highlight of the second day of the convention was the speech of Ensign James Youngdale, on duty at the Navy Department, a former officer of the Department of Agriculture Local of the UFWA. Youngdale called on labor to add to its war accomplishments by letting the President know how solidly it stood behind his program of offensive action to smash the Axis and by electing a win-the-war Congress.

Fishermen's Union Meets December 1

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 31—The fourth convention of the International Fishermen & Allied Workers will convene here Dec. 1 at Evergreen Hall in the Arcade Building, officers of the union announced this week.

The official call, signed by President J. F. Jurich, Vice-President Martin Hegeberg and Secretary-Treasurer Fred Scheel, declares that the union "must continue to safeguard with care the interests of its membership as well as the natural resources which mean so much to us.

"This we believe to be essential to the building of a strong and democratic trade union movement and to carry out to the utmost, morally and physically, our aid to win the war."

Union Condemns Shutdown At N. Y. War Plant

New York, Oct. 30—More than 3,000 men and women in a vital Brooklyn war plant yesterday wired President Roosevelt asking that he force the company to call off a threatened two-day shut-down for inventory.

The plant is that of E. W. Bliss, engaged in making articles of war for the United States Army and for unnamed Lend-Lease countries. The workers are members of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, CIO, Local 475.

According to the wire, workers in the plant were forced to forego their vacations this past summer because of the pressure of production needs.

The company, according to Albert Stonkus, business representative, posted a notice yesterday informing the workers that only 50% of the force would be called in during the two days because of the inventory.

Committee OK's Anti-Poll Tax Bill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—The poll-tax repeal bill, already passed by the House, cleared a semi-final hurdle in the Senate Judiciary Committee this week and moved closer to final passage—provided labor and progressives keep plugging as they have done for many months.

The hurdle was cleared when the bill was reported out of the Judiciary Committee by a big majority of 13 to 5, ending 19 months of Senate stalling and reversing a previous sub-committee vote that had the bill "unconstitutional." The bill now awaits full Senate action and final vote to become law.

NORRIS HITS TAX

"The pretended poll tax qualification for voting has no place in any modern system of government," Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska said when the committee vote was taken.

"It is in effect taxing a federal function. The most sacred and highest of all federal functions is the right to vote."

The thing to watch for now is the possibility of parliamentary delays and even a filibuster by poll-taxers in the Senate. The most effective way to prevent this is to see that the Senators keep hearing from their constituents—the people who want the poll tax repealed as a bottleneck in total mobilization of all our citizens for total war.

Race Bias Probers Win Green Light

Washington, Oct. 30—A battle by liberal, labor and Negro forces to keep the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee working in effective fashion to expose and clean up discrimination in industry, ended in victory this week.

The War Manpower Commission, to which the committee was assigned some weeks ago, made public an agreement under which the committee will continue to function as an independent "entity" within the WMC. It will have the right to hire its own officials, conduct hearings where and how it sees fit, and makes necessary recommendations.

Following a conference between the FEPC and Fowler Harper, Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt and Dr. Malcolm S. MacLean, committee chairman, it was agreed that the committee will be the "operating agency within the War Manpower Commission to deal with all questions relating to discrimination based on race, creed, color, national origin or alienage."

The committee has already conducted a number of hearings, and its orders have helped break down some discrimination practices in industry. CIO Pres. Murray is a member of the committee, with John Brophy, councils director, serving as his active alternate.

New Era . . .

Newcastle, Ind., Oct. 30—Chalk up a home-run for the side of unity behind the war effort—

The United Rubber Workers, CIO, preparing at short notice for an NLRB election at the Schacht Rubber Co. here, was stuck without a mimeograph machine. There were lots of leaflets to prepare and distribute.

So H. C. Anthony, URW field representative called up the local Chamber of Commerce and asked permission to use their mimeograph machine. You could have knocked him over with a stencil when the chamber officials said o.k.

The leaflet, illustrated with a lively drawing, urged workers to vote "yes" for the CIO affiliate and pointed out the differences between union conditions and the open shop.

P.S.—The United Rubber Workers got 243 votes to 12 for no union.

CIO Board to Meet Nov. 5 at Boston

BOSTON, Oct. 30—With the Executive Board scheduled to meet here Thursday, Nov. 5, CIO's annual convention activities start off with a bang next week.

The convention itself, CIO's fifth, will be called to order on Monday, Nov. 9. Delegates will start arriving in the Bean City next week, however, for conferences and committee meetings, and members of the headquarters staff will move en masse to Boston during the week.

The parley will bring together several hundred delegates from all over the United States and Canada. Asst. Sec. of the Navy Ralph Bard and Under-Sec. of War Robert Patterson will be among the speakers.

The delegates will find the Massachusetts capital not only a center of historical interest but a busy war center. In the area are scores of war factories, shipyards and Navy yards.

Convention headquarters will be located at the Hotel Statler, located near the Boston Common at Arlington and Stuart streets.

Celebrate 4th Anniversary Of Pay-Hour Act

Washington, Oct. 31—In celebration of the fourth anniversary of the Wage-Hour Act, last Sunday's broadcast on the "Labor for Victory" weekly program was under the joint sponsorship of the CIO and the AFL.

L. Metcalfe Walling, administrator of the act, in his introductory remarks said that more than a million low paid workers had received a total of $33,000,000 in back wages alone during the four years the act had been in force.

James B. Carey, national CIO secretary, told the radio audience that although the wage-hour provisions of the act were a step in the right direction, there were still seven and a half million American, or 20 per cent of our workers, who still earn less than 40c an hour.

CITES LOW RATES

In the war industries, where wages are supposed to be so high, 34 per cent or more than one-third of the workers were earning less than $1,000 a year shortly before Pearl Harbor, Carey said.

President William Green of the AFL in his speech on the program praised the administration of the act and said that it had freed 17,000,000 underpaid and underprivileged American workers from economic peonage.

Under-Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson and Under-Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal also made brief speeches.

Wire Union Editor Joins U. S. Army

New York—(FP)—Editor Charles Silberman of The ACA News, official newspaper of the American Communications Assn., CIO, has entered the officers' training corps of the U. S. Army.

Murray, FDR Send Greetings To Russians

Washington, Oct. 29—Philip Murray, President and Mrs. Roosevelt, and 18 other prominent Americans joined in signing a scroll of greetings and tribute to the people of the Soviet Union this week. The scroll was presented by Russian War Relief to Maxim Litvinov, USSR ambassador, in a ceremony in New York.

The text of the scroll reads: "We who sign this scroll count it a high privilege to aid in this small way those who offer their lives that the world may be free of fascist terror. Your courageous resistance has given us time to produce and arm, so that at the appointed time we may join you in the triumphant offensive. We, the American people, are proud to be your allies."

The scroll is now being circulated among trade unions and other organized groups in a campaign for millions of signatures.

Labor speakers for a Congression on Soviet-American Friendship meeting scheduled for Nov. 8 in New York will include R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW and a vice-president of the CIO and Wm. Green, AFL head. CIO Pres. Philip Murray was invited but was unable to attend due to pressure of work before the CIO convention in Boston Nov. 9.

Ask FDR Act In Title Case

New York, Oct. 30—Petitions bearing 5,000 signatures were sent President Roosevelt this week urging White House action to speed War Labor Board proceedings on a case involving 2,000 employes of four big New York title companies.

Local 96 of the Office & Professional Workers told FDR that the union has been waiting over six months for the WLB to act on its demands for wages and other sections of a proposed contract with the four companies. Hundreds of the affected white-collar workers make less than $16 a week, while some get as little as $11.40.

Murray Cites Need for Plan on Manpower

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30—The need for overall planning and a unified approach to the manpower problem—heart of the whole war production job—was stressed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in testimony prepared for the Senate Education and Labor Committee this week.

Murray criticized the talk of compulsory manpower legislation while voluntary methods remain unused, describing it as "sheer nonsense" to talk of passing new laws compelling workers to mobilize for war production work while the problem of materials, of housing, transportation, etc., is unsolved.

INTELLIGENT APPROACH

Pointing out that the CIO has consistently called for planning on a national scale and citing the Industry Council plan as an example of CIO foresight, he declared:

"Now, as in the past, the CIO calls for a voluntary and intelligent approach to our war production organization. Such an approach would recognize our war economy as an integrated whole which must be organized as such."

"We must recognize that our need is the organization and distribution of our industrial resources and our human resources in the most efficient manner. Manpower, materials, factories, shipyards throughout the nation—these are all one unified problem of organization."

CAPITOL TALK

Meanwhile the talk of immediate legislation died down among government circles, with a newspaper statement from Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt that a bill he had previously announced as ready for presentation to Congress would be delayed indefinitely.

Leaders of both CIO and AFL were reported as continuing their opposition to compulsory legislation, with a meeting of Presidents Murray and Green scheduled at the White House as THE CIO NEWS went to press. The meeting, one of the regular meetings of the joint CIO-AFL Labor Victory Board, was understood to be for the purpose of taking up the manpower situation in some detail.

Murray's testimony praised the national approach to the manpower problem undertaken by the Tolan Committee, whose sixth report presented last week called for national planning and for creation of a single war mobilization agency to deal with all questions of war production and war economy.

'Freedom' Speech

The broadcast last July by Secretary of State Hull on "The War and Human Freedom" has been issued in pamphlet form by the Office of War Information.

Byrnes Sets $25,000 Top Pay Ceiling

Washington, Oct. 29—Acting with the approval of President Roosevelt, Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes this week issued an order limiting salaries to $25,000 a year for individuals after taxes are paid and holding salaries above $5,000 a year at present levels. Reductions to the $5,000 level are not permitted.

Salaries can be increased, however, in cases of individual merit, promotion to higher jobs, increases based on length of service plans, and the like. Income from other sources is not under the new order, Byrnes pointing out that this would have to be regulated by Congress through taxation.

FDR, TOO

Setting an example, President Roosevelt the same day wrote to Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau asking that his $75,000 a year salary be cut to conform to the order.

By statute, the salary of the President is fixed and therefore was technically exempt.

Hitler's Prediction

His was one of the earliest predictions. In fact, he made it years ago.

In Mein Kampf, Hitler wrote: "A democracy is easy to defeat, because its people are not interested enough in it to vote."

Be sure to vote Tuesday. Be sure that your family and friends vote. And vote only for those candidates who can really be counted upon to ram that prediction down Hitler's lying throat.

Pre-Election Warning

Remember how press, politicians, radio commentators joined with shady pro-Nazi elements in ranting and lying about the "40-hour" week?

Labor, the administration and progressive members of Congress finally squelched this disruptive, labor-baiting drive against our war unity.

They rammed home to the public the fact that there is no 40-hour limit to working hours; and that the object of the campaign was to slash the wages of war workers toiling long hours, by abolishing overtime rates.

Freshen up your memories of this anti-labor drive before you go to vote on Tuesday. Think back about how your Congressmen behaved when the big-money boys put on the heat.

For all the signs point to a renewal of this drive against your wages and against our national unity. And if enough of the labor-baiting, anti-New Deal, obstructionist and appeaser elements that supported the last drive are elected to Congress, there may be no stopping it this time.

Senator Reynolds has introduced a bill for a 57-hour week without overtime pay. Representative Ramspeck has a 56-hour bill in the House, opening the way for employer demands to cut wages by abolishing overtime rates.

These bills are pre-election feelers. So too are the editorials all over the country re-opening the issue of overtime pay.

They are also a warning. If you fail to vote Tuesday for aggressive pro-labor, pro-administration, win-the-war candidates endorsed by the CIO, you will be giving a green light to the anti-labor crowd to cut your wages.

You will also be giving the green light for a general drive against all labor's rights and standards, which can only create bitterness and disunity most harmful to our war effort.

There are many splendid candidates running for election or re-election—real win-the-war candidates who will go right down the line with our Commander-in-Chief for victory, who will uphold labor's rights and promote war unity and morale.

Find out from your union who these candidates are. Check up on the records of all candidates, so you won't be fooled by the kind who make fine speeches before elections but afterwards stab labor in the back and obstruct essential war measures.

And then vote yourself, and get out the vote, for victory!

Manpower

America's tremendous resources of manpower and womanpower have not been fully tapped, and still less properly organized.

There are shortages here and surpluses there. There are government agencies tugging one way, and other agencies tugging in the opposite direction. There are countless eager workers who are denied employment where they are needed most, for reasons of race, color, nationality, sex or what-have-you.

To ask for forced-labor and job-freezing legislation, under such circumstances, is a confession of administrative failure.

In urging postponement of national service legislation, the Tolan committee declares that the first thing to do is to create "adequate machinery for manpower mobilization." And it notes that "such adequate machinery does not now exist."

That is also the position of the CIO. Let's get some central planning and control of our manpower and economic resources—let's get organized—instead of adding the evils of forced labor to the present administrative confusion.

Dirty Work: Westbrook Pegler, the daily mud-slinger, evidently finds it hard to keep clean. He has had no fewer than four bathtubs, three showers, laundry tubs and five sinks and basins installed in his newly built mansion, according to news reports.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE most significant social event of this year's Washington season didn't make the society pages.

There were big-shots present galore. You could hardly turn around without bumping into an admiral or a cabinet minister or a big-name labor leader; and rear admirals, captains, commanders were a dime a dozen.

For those too easily dazzled by gold braid, there was eye-relief in the enlisted Navy men among the banquet guests, and in the hundreds of Navy Yard workers present.

But those who gravitated to the enlisted men, because they felt most at home with ordinary folks, had a surprise in store. After the eating, they found they had been making up to the most distinguished guests of all.

For the toastmaster began reciting brief and unvarnished tales of heroism on the high seas. And it was these ordinary folks, enlisted men most of them, who rose modestly one after another when their brave deeds were told and their names were called.

This was the biggest moment of the Navy's two-day labor conference. It hammered home unforgettably the moral of the whole affair—that ours is a people's Navy fighting a people's war—that our buddies from the work-bench, our own and our neighbors' boys, are out there pitting their lives and their courage against all the forces of hell and Hirohito, and counting on American labor not to let them down.

The U. S. Navy Department is to be congratulated on the sincere efforts it is now making to promote greater friendliness and closer cooperation with organized labor; and labor has demonstrated that it is eager to met it more than half way in all such efforts.

There never has been any question of the close kinship which all American workers feel with their own kith and kin who man the Navy's fighting ships. They thrill with pride in their Navy's achievements and they'll go the limit to back it up.

It is untrue to suggest there has ever been any friction between labor and "the Navy." Criticism of the anti-labor policies of certain bureaucrats is not criticism of our fighting Navy. It's as much in the Navy's interests to crack down on them as it is to discipline an officer who rides rough-shod over the rights and interests of the men under his command.

It might seem unnecessary to belabor this point, except for some remarks addressed by Navy Secretary Knox to the labor press.

"As a matter of occupational catharsis," the Secretary's speech went, "the labor press has to be mad or haughty about someone. It's too bad, but it's true, that the armed forces of the United States, and particularly the Navy, have been the favorite goats for the labor press."

Now, the Secretary didn't stick too close to his prepared speech when he spoke, and he smiled when he made his cracks about the labor press. So we won't get too mad or haughty at him.

But nevertheless, the gist of his remarks was that the labor press makes a practice of pushing "the Navy" around, when short of pet peeves to write about.

So for the record, and with equal good humor, we have got to inform the Secretary that this just isn't so.

★ ★ ★

If a retired rear admiral blurts out at a bankers' banquet that union organizers ought to be shot at sunrise, the labor press is going to beat him to the draw and editorially shoot him full of holes. In so doing, it's defending the Navy's good name, not pushing it around.

If Navy Department press agents credit only employers and not unions in their releases about "E" awards, the labor press will want to know the reason why.

And if any bureaucrat or boss, in or out of the Navy Department, violates the Navy's declared labor policy by promoting friction instead of cooperation with labor unions, the labor press will do its duty to the Navy by calling him to book.

But no papers in the country devote more time and effort and space to praise and support for our armed forces, on land, at sea and in the air, than do the labor papers.

And no press is more happy than the labor press to give credit to the War and Navy Departments for every one of the many steps they are now taking to promote the unbreakable unity between labor and the armed forces which is labor's first and most insistent demand.

U. S. Church Heads Urge Care for Kids

NEW YORK, Oct. 30 (FP—The children of American war workers are the chief victims of a wholesale failure by the Federal Government and local communities to meet the problems of housing, health services, child labor, education, juvenile delinquency and working mothers which have been created by the war effort.

This story is told in the weekly Information Service of the research and education department of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, which has made a survey of 500 critical defense areas.

"Thousands of families of war workers," the Information Service says, "live in tarpaper shacks, in garages (converted and unconverted), in trailer camps, in cheap bungalows run up by speculators and sold on 'easy terms, less than rent.' Sewage empties into open untiled ditches.

"It is almost unnecessary to point out the grave problems, social and physical, which are raised when children must live in such communities."

MORE YOUNGSTERS WORK

The council found that twice as many boys and girls between 14 and 18 years of age went to work in 1941 as in 1940, and according to the U. S. Children's Bureau, the numbers are mounting even more rapidly in 1942. "Not only," it emphasizes, "is legal child labor increasing, but illegal as well."

With the great increases in population, the council points out, many defense communities have found it extraordinarily difficult to provide school accommodations. It cites the case of Wichita, Kans., which exceeds 35% more teachers than it did a year ago, and a Michigan community where schools are run in three shifts.

"There are," the council says, "even new communities where schools have not yet been provided. It is reported that in a number of isolated places the USO worker provides some recreation for children. Literally, nothing else is available to them."

CRIME INCREASING

While there is no over-all data available on juvenile delinquency, the council said 22 of 30 juvenile courts reporting to the Children's Bureau found increases ranging from 2% to 110%. Serious crimes by boys and girls declined in 1940 but rose again in 1941 and 1942.

While some progress has been made in providing day nurseries for the younger children of working mothers, the council found them grossly inadequate. But worse, it found that little or nothing had been done for children of school age.

LOCKED IN CARS

"Stories," the council reports, "are told of women who leave their children locked in parked autos. Cruel as this sounds, 'it is the ones who really care' who do that 'so they will be sure to know where their children are.'

Many children, even very small ones, are running the streets. Young children are left in charge of smaller ones. Some children are locked out of the house all day, others have the door key tied around their necks.

Ask Labor Press Voice on WPB

Washington, Oct. 29—Formation of a "Newspaper Advisory Committee" to work with the WPB that so far contains no representatives of the labor press was protested to Donald Nelson, WPB chairman by the CIO Publicity Dept. this week.

The committee is scheduled to work with the WPB on problems of newsprint supply, ink, metal, deliveries, etc. As announced by the WPB, it included representatives of the Hearst Scripps-Howard, Gannett and Patterson papers, but none from the labor press.

The CIO letter to Nelson sent by Publicity Director Len De Caux, urged such representation on the committee. A copy was also sent to all CIO editors and publicity directors.

HOUSE THAT VENOM BUILT: Here's the 15-room mansion that Westbrook Pegler, the anti-labor columnist, is building in Richfield, Conn. As you might expect, he's using scab labor—and wasting vital war materials in spite of a WPB ruling that "all construction which is not essential to the war effort be deferred for the duration."

Pegler Uses War Materials, Scab Labor For New Mansion

By Federated Press

RIDGEFIELD, Conn., Oct. 30—Westbrook Pegler, the union-hating newspaper columnist, is using material vitally needed in the war effort—and scab labor—to build himself a 15-room mansion which labor is already calling "Scab Manor."

How Pegler, who received a lot of publicity by donating his auto bumpers to the salvage drive, was able to get metal lathing, copper sheathing, conduits and pipe is a mystery that local WPB officials refused to clear up.

'IF HE TOLD TRUTH'

E. J. Huss, head of the priorities division of the WPB in Fairfield county, said he was not free to discuss the details. Raymond L. French, WPB chief in Bridgeport, said: "As far as I know, Mr. Pegler complied with regulations—if he told us the truth."

Pegler's building of a mansion for himself, his wife and a dog at a time when war workers in this area are forced to live in shacks did not make him any more pleasing to union workers.

WON'T TALK

An exponent of unrestricted reporting, the columnist flatly refused to talk with a reporter who tried to question him.

Pegler's non-union contractor, Robert J. Martin, was equally uninterested in seeing that the public got the story. Large "No Trespassing" signs decorate trees surrounding the mansion and a photographer for The Bridgeport Sunday Herald was chased by the contractor's men but not before he got some interesting pictures.

LOTS OF METAL

An examination of the premises revealed new copper flashing around each chimney, yards of copper pipe, a bright new boiler, hundreds of feet of lead pipe, 4 bathtubs, 3 showers, laundry tubs, 5 sinks and basins, 7 water closets, 100,000 square feet of lumber, 220-foot artesian well, and a new furnace with automatic stoker.

All this in face of a WPB ruling issued last April that "all construction which is not essential, directly or indirectly, to the war effort . . . be deferred for the duration of the emergency."

BLONDE'S BONDS: Evelyn Olsen smiles at her work—because she has the job of distributing bonds to members of the CIO shipyard union at the Federal Drydock & Shipbuilding Co., Kearny, N. J. Workers, putting 10 per cent of their pay each week into bonds, have already run purchases up to $3,000,000.

Talmadge Gang Forms New Vigilante Outfit

ATLANTA, Oct. 30 (FP)—The "white supremacy" gang of defeated Governor Eugene Talmadge has blossomed forth in a new secret organization called Vigilantes, Inc. The organization has just been granted a state charter.

The charter gives the organization "power to confer an initiation or decree ritualism, fraternal and secret obligations, words, grips, signs, and ceremonies under which there shall be united only a membership of white male persons."

Its purposes as filed with the secretary of state are "patriotic, secret, social and benevolent."

One of the three organizers listed is State Highway Patrol Commissioner John Goodwin, who is Talmadge's personal bodyguard.

During the recent gubernatorial election, Goodwin ordered his state patrolmen to search all cars containing Negroes after 9 p.m. and to "use your blackjacks on them whenever you can." The other two organizers are John J. Cummings and Fred Derrick.

'STREAMLINED KLAN'

Commenting on the new organization, Secretary Frank McCallister of the Southern Workers' Defense League said:

"This is evidently a streamlined version of the Ku Klux Klan, organized to make good Gene Talmadge's promise during his campaign to see that 'white supremacy' is maintained. Since he was defeated in the elections, it appears that extra legal methods may be used.

"Vigilantes Inc., coming as it does on the heels of the League for White Supremacy, organized recently in Alabama, portends serious times for democracy in the south, unless these budding totalitarian movements are repulsed by a vigorous, aroused public opinion."

CIO Workers Hail South's Biggest Ship

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 31—Built by CIO labor, the largest vessel ever launched in a southern shipyard slid down the ways into Mobile river at an impressive ceremony attended by officials and members of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers and other CIO unions.

The S. S. Arickaree, with an estimated capacity of 138,000 barrels, is not only the largest ship ever built in the Gulf area, but is also the first to be launched here by the "end" instead of the "side" method since World War days.

It is the second vessel within five days to be launched at the Alabama Drydock & Shipbuilding Co., which is under contract with the CIO

'One of Each'

"What size bond would you like?" the clerk queried. "What sizes do they come in?" the machinist asked.

The clerk went down the list: "$25, $50, $100—and, if you're interested, $500 and $1,000."

The unionist thought a moment and bowled the salesman over with: "I tell you, Bud—just let me have one of each."

Women Told: 'Get Out Vote'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29—The main job of every CIO Auxiliary member between now and election day is to get the voters to the polls with the facts on win-the-war candidates and the defeatists and disruptors who oppose them, the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries says in a special letter to affiliates this week.

Four steps are outlined in the letter:

1) house-to-house visits on neighbors and on homes of fellow-workers and their wives;

2) neighborhood and special women's meetings, block parties, home meetings, etc., to discuss the importance of the elections;

3) all canvassers to be armed with the facts on the candidate's record, platform, etc.

"The most important election in our nation's history depends on your vote, the vote of your neighbors, your friends, your union brothers and sisters," the letter adds.

Charge Shipyard Sought Spies

Wilmington, N. C., Oct. 31—Testimony given by W. R. Dosher Jr., son of the Wilmington postmaster made a sensation at an NLRB hearing here when he said that the personnel director of the North Carolina Shipbuilding Co. had asked him to act as a labor spy.

He also stated that a member of the company's board of directors had urged him to do "all he could to keep the union out of the shipyard.

Dosher's testimony was given on the third day of the hearing against the North Carolina yard, the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock and their company unions on charges filed by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Union Shop Pact

New York, Oct. 30—A union shop contract, providing for cost-of-living wage adjustments and semi-annual increases for technicians, has been signed by the CIO American Communications Assn. and Radio Station WHN.

Navy, Workers Swap Views at First Parley

NAVY SALUTES LABOR: Scene at the banquet held by the Navy to mark increasingly cordial relations with unions in naval shore establishments throughout the country. Several score workers attended the two-day meeting in Washington. Shown seated above are William Bullitt, Rear Adm. C. W. Fisher Asst. Sec. of Navy for Air Artemus Gates, CIO Pres. Murray, Sec. of Navy Knox, Rear Adm. C. W. Woodward, Adm. Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the fleet; John P. Frey of the AFL, and Asst. Sec. of the Navy Ralph S. Bard.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30—The Navy held a coming-out party last weekend for its new program of closely, friendly cooperation with the hundreds of thousands of workers in its shore establishments. And while there was some of the embarrassment you might find among a group of 16-year-olds attending their first dance, it was a tremendous success and an augur of growing mutual confidence.

More than 200 delegates—including women and Negroes—attended the parley, which was aimed at showing both high Naval officers and men in the plants how to improve production to win the war.

UNIONS REPRESENTED

In attendance were top-ranking officers of he Navy, heads of government departments, and spokesmen for organized labor. Among the delegates were spokesmen for the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians; the United Federal Workers, all CIO; from AFL unions; and from unorganized Naval establishments.

At a banquet preceding the two-day session, Sec. of Navy Frank Knox sounded the keynote for the conference when he pointed out that "the Navy family must be welded together as never before in order to meet the terrific war menace, the extent of which our people must now realize, and prepare with all our strength, courage and sacrifice if we are to win out."

Knox brought to the delegates greetings from Pres. Roosevelt, who he said "expressed his hearty approval of this conference . . . because, first, you the representatives of our Navy's huge industrial family, will learn at first hand and take back to your fellow workers something of our problems, our needs and our hopes; and, second, because the interchange of visits by naval officers to the shore establishments and your visit here must result in a common and beneficial understanding of the Navy's great responsibility in this dreadful war."

GROWING UNDERSTANDING

Throughout their speeches the Navy's top officials revealed a growing understanding of the need for close and democratic cooperation with the men in the shops—an attitude that represents a considerable change from past years when distrust and suspicion, both based on lack of adequate information, were common.

Rear Adm. Blandy, chief of the Bureau of Ordnance, expressed this when he said "it is inconceivable that a meeting such as this could be held in any Axis country."

Adm. Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the U. S. Fleet, reminded the officials and the workers that "we are, each and all of us, integral parts of the Navy, working in a common end, to preserve for ourselves and our families the privileges of democracy which our forebears worked so hard to establish and maintain.

"The aviator diving on his attack, the submarine men on patrol and the marine fighting in the jungle and all the others, everywhere, are depending on you just as much as you are depending on them," he said.

"Call it a team. Call it mutual interests. Call it anything you like. There has never been a time in the history of this country when labor and management have been as vital to the welfare of the country as they are today."

MURRAY PLEDGES AID

CIO Pres. Murray and John P. Frey of the AFL both spoke of the improvement in Navy labor relations under a program of cooperation worked out by Asst. Sec. Ralph Bard, whose office helped arrange the meeting.

"This is a unique experience, for a labor leader to participate in the councils of the men and women of the Navy," Murray said, "—working out their own problems and building up their own harmonious labor relations. As my good friend Ralph Bard said, building it upon a basis that is sound, and we all hope will be permanent."

Declaring that such meetings lead to friendship and better working arrangements, Murray said:

"We all want to do this because we all love this American Navy, and want to build up a greater country, a greater people, a better nation."

PREPARE FOR CONFAB: Leaders of the National CIO Women's Auxiliaries check credentials for the forthcoming convention in Boston, to be held at the time of the CIO parley the second week in November. Funds for War Relief Pour in From Unions

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30—"The members of the ILWU Warehousemen's Local 1-6, CIO, believe in democracy and we're willing to pay for it," said Donald F. Maguire, president of the San Francisco Warehousemen's Local, as he handed a check for $12,743.80 to Don Healey, Northern California director for the CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief.

"This is only the first of the checks that will be coming from our local every month for the duration of the war," continued the Warehouse president. "Our entire membership in Northern California is contributing every month with their dues payments.

"We've established labor-management committees to get out more production, we've already got over a thousand members in the armed forces fighting for democracy, and now we're also giving to the War Chest through the CIO War Relief Committee, to help take care of those who are doing the fighting and the dying, both in our own armed services, and among the people and the armies of our allies."

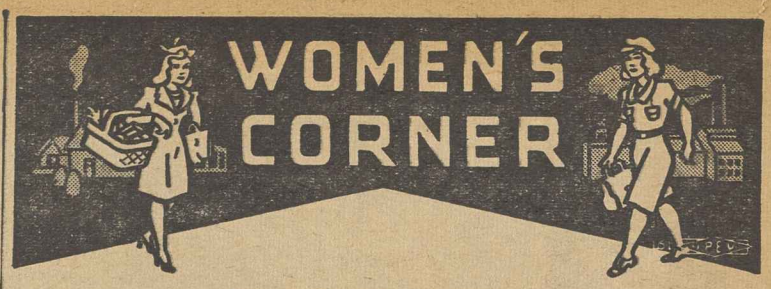
Other big contributions were tallied by the CIO War Relief Committee this month. Local 1 of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers mailed a check for $14,000.

From Local 100 of the Transport Workers Union of America came $1,000. The total contributions of the UAW-CIO Locals amounted to $4,358.74 for the month so far. United Steelworkers gave $4,607.32 of which $4,061.32 was a direct contribution by the international union.

Even in a period of personal crisis the members of Local 1020 of the United Steelworkers remembered those less fortunate. The Davey Steel Company, in which the union was organized recently, went out of business.

The local voted to send the final cash assets of the union, $100.00, to the CIO War Relief Committee.

News has been received in the national headquarters of the completion of the Community - War Fund Campaign of Sangamon County, Springfield, Ill. This year with CIO cooperation the contributions from CIO members was increased 400 per cent, an example of what CIO participation can mean.



By ELEANOR FOWLER
Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries

At least fifty delegates from all over the country, from every auxiliary international, from 20 state and city councils, and from many local auxiliaries are coming to Boston for the Second Annual Conference of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

Tillie Olson, newly-elected president of the California CIO Auxiliary Council is coming. All three of the national officers of the new National Council of Farm Equipment Workers' Auxiliaries are coming—with assistance from their national union. Our brand new Duluth City Council and Illinois State Council are sending delegates. The delegate of the first CIO Auxiliary in Maine, the auxiliary to the Textile Joint Board in Biddeford-Saco, organized this September, will be there. This week steel wives in Bethlehem and shipyard wives in Baltimore are organizing new auxiliaries and expect to send delegates.

PRES. MURRAY TO SPEAK

It's going to be a wonderful conference. President Murray will speak. The need for women in industry and the importance of an adequate child care program to make employment of new millions of women possible will be one of the main subjects discussed by the delegates.

Miss Margaret Hickey, chairman of the Women's Advisory Committee of the War Manpower Commission, who gives final approval to all WPA and Lanham act child-care projects, will speak and participate in planning the auxiliary program on this subject.

The need for enforcement of price control and extension of rationing to ensure every worker the food, clothing and housing he needs to be an efficient war worker will be another central issue of the conference. Miss Edith Christianson of the Office of Price Administration will speak and lead the discussion.

LUNCHEON NOV. 10

A luncheon in honor of Mrs. Murray at the Boston Statler on Tuesday, November 10, will be the social feature of the Conference. The luncheon program includes a speech by Mrs. Dorothy Bellanca of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, one of the two labor members of the Women's Advisory Committee of the War Manpower Commission, and a skit, "Father Wins the Peace," put on by the Women's Division of the War Savings Staff of the Treasury.

A number of the delegates will come to Boston straight from the sessions of the Congress of American Soviet Friendship in New York, where they will participate in the panel discussions on Women in the War, and Child Care in Wartime. They will come with information on how the problems of women war workers are met by our ally, the Soviet Union, where more than 50% of production workers are women.

They will have information on the network of child care centers established in the Soviet Union to care for children of working mothers, on the public restaurants where families of war workers eat, on the organization of 'teen-age girls which takes the burden of house cleaning off the shoulders of the employed Russian mother.

The Congress of American Soviet Friendship meets at the Hotel New Yorker November 7 and 8. It is sponsored by a distinguished list of Americans, including Secretary of State Cordell Hull and CIO President Philip Murray, to express the admiration of the Americans for the magnificent fight of the Russian people on the occasion of the 25th anniversary of the founding of their republic.

We women have every reason to honor our Soviet allies on their national anniversary. The wonderful courage of the Soviet women has been an inspiration to us.

Director of Organization

Ernest B. Pugh, CIO Regional Director in Virginia, reports the winning of the labor board election at the Virginia Rubbertex Division, Salta Corporation, Bedford, Virginia, with a vote of 83 for the United Rubber Workers, CIO, as against 3. URW Organizer Robert L. Hill and CIO Representative Lloyd P. Vaughan were instrumental in this victory.

Frank Bonacci, CIO Regional Director in Denver, reports another United Rubber Workers victory in the election at the Gates Rubber Company in Denver, Colorado, with a vote of 718 for CIO as against 549.

Vice-President L. S. Buckmaster of the United Rubber Workers reports still another victory for the United Rubber Workers at the Schacht Rubber (Firestone), New Castle, Indiana, with a vote of 238 for CIO as against 12.

Three Oil Victories

The Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, under the direction of Edwin S. Smith, reports two election victories, as follows: General American Tank Storage Terminals, Carteret, N. J., with a vote of 60 for CIO as against 21 for No Union; Wellsville, N. Y., Refinery of the Sinclair Company, with a vote of 296 for CIO, as against 85 for No Union.

Regional Director Paul R. Christopher in Tennessee, advises of the victory in behalf of the CIO at the Ross-Meehan Foundries, Chattanooga, Tennessee, with a vote of 398 for USA-CIO, as against 187. USA Sub-Regional Director Baxter and USA Representative Dunn and CIO Representative Judd organized these workers and handled the election.

Regional Director H. C. Fremming of Kansas City, Missouri, reports two election victories, as follows: Terminal Warehouse in St. Joseph, Missouri, PWOC received 89 votes, "Neither" received 49; Morrell and Son Packing plant in Topeka, Kansas; PWOC, 641; AFL 37; Neither 454.

By a vote of 74 for CIO as against 23, the classified advertising salesmen of the Rueben H. Donnelly Corp., New York, selected the UOPWA as collective bargaining agent. The UOPWA also report the election victory among the Prudential agents in the State of New Jersey, with a vote of 786 for CIO as against 617. This is the third state-wide election this union has won in Prudential.

Representative George Bucher in Philadelphia, reports a victory at the Harbison and Walker Refractories Company plant at Chester, Pa., by a vote of 194 to 12 in favor of the CIO.

Federal Workers Convention

The United Federal Workers of America opened their convention in Philadelphia this week. I had the pleasure of addressing the delegation—all employes of Uncle Sam. The union reported good progress and is now self-sustaining. The vast army of Government workers need organization. There is no other way by which they can get proper adjustment of wage and grievance problems as well as protection against any bureaucratic unfairness.

Acting Regional Director in Louisville, Kentucky, Brother Joseph D. Cannon, nets a couple of election victories; namely, Improved Furniture Company by a vote of 14 for CIO as against 4 for No Union; Westinghouse Electric, Inspection and Tool Department, UERMWA-CIO, 49; AFL, 10.

Morris Wright, Assistant Editor, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, advises of the following election results: At Bridgeport, Connecticut, Bridgeport Rolling Mills: MMSW-CIO, 99; No Union, 20. At Thomaston, Conecticut, Plume & Atwood Co: MMSW-CIO, 224; No Union, 66. In Miami, Arizona at a mine of Inspiration Consolidated Copper Co., the MMSW broke up the pattern of craft workers choosing little splinter craft unions.

In the big unit the vote was MMSW-CIO, 459; AFL, 15;No Union, 73. In three out of eight crafts the vote was indecisive and run-offs will be held. The results were as follows: MMSW-CIO, 43; AFL, None; No Union, 43. Machinists: MMSW-CIO, 610; AFL, 20; No Union, 20. This union also won a card check at Valley Dolomite Company and was certified as bargaining agency .

Max Breslaw, of the State, County & Municipal Workers of America, CIO, reports a victory in Pennsylvania at the State Liquor Stores. The Governor had refused to meet with the union, resulting in a one-day stoppage and a lockout by the Governor for nine days. After the workers had voted to return to work, settlement was announced granting a 15 per cent wage increase affecting 45,500 state employes. All employes earning less than $3456 a year are eligible for this increase. This raises the minimum for state workers to $1176 a year. This is effective October 16, 1942.

English Output Groups Bring 500% Improvement

LONDON, Oct. 30 (ALN)—Latest evidence of the effectiveness of labor-management production committees in increasing output of war materials comes this week from an important London arms factory, where output has increased 500 per cent since a joint committee was set up six months ago.

"The plain truth is that without the joint production committee, and without the help of the shop stewards, we never could have achieved this increase," the general manager of the plant said yesterday.

"Eighteen months ago there wasn't a plant in the country which could tackle the production of the type of guns we're making. When our factory started producing, we had little mechanical power and no heating.

"The men worked through the night with improvised bucket stoves, wearing their overcoats. Cooperation between management and the men has solved our worst difficulties, and now we're well on the way to a 600% increase."

COMMON AIM

Pointing out that when the committee was first set up there was mutual distrust between workers and management, the general manager said that this had soon disappeared when both sides realized that they had a common aim: to beat the Axis in the shortest possible time.

Bottlenecks are now tackled by workers who go into the plant on their day off. A hundred and sixty volunteered last Saturday for a special clearance job.

A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, has sent a message to the joint committee, praising it for its work in increasing production. A spokesman for the workers' side of the committee declared: "We'll continue to smash all production targets so that we can smash Hitler with a Second Front."

Labor on OCD Board

A Labor Advisory Board has been appointed to the Massachusetts State Defense Council to help develop programs to encourage fair representation of labor on local civilian defense councils. The board will also direct the civilian defense work of the thousands of union men and women in the state.

British Workers Hail Tanner's Talk To AFL Parley

London, Oct. 30 (ALN)—Published reports of the speech delivered by Jack Tanner, president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, before the AFL convention in Toronto last week have evoked much favorable comment in Britain, particularly among trade unionists.

In emphasizing the need for allied labor unity, Tanner has reflected the policy of the annual convention of the Trades Union Congress which last month unanimously passed a resolution declaring:

"It is hoped that the General Council will continue, in the support of international solidarity, to develop wartime relations between the trade unions in all the United Nations."

FORECAST TREND

Discussion of the resolution was limited, since it was introduced at a late hour and the Blackpool theater in which the convention was held had to be cleared each evening by six o'clock. Such discussion as there was, however, forecast the trend of Tanner's Toronto speech.

Criticizing the assertion that there are no free trade unions in Russia, G. Hammond, Miners' Federation delegate, declared: "It is true that trade unions in a socialist economy cannot be the same as those in a capitalist economy, but nevertheless the Russian unions are voluntary associations, representing 28 million members. In the past these workers have played a powerful part in building up the socialist order; now they are fighting hard against Fascism."

POTENT WEAPON

Hammond pointed out that international labor unity can be a potent weapon in the United Nations war effort. "The Anglo-Soviet trade union committee, formed in October, 1941, was a major factor in getting the 20-year Anglo-Soviet treaty signed a few months later," he said.

Tanner's plea for recognition of all U. S. labor groups was foreshadowed at Blackpool by Steve Lawther of the National Union of Public Employes, who strongly criticized the General Council for not approaching the CIO and Brotherhoods as well as the AFL.

29 Boatmen Of Volga Get Honor Medals

Kuibyshev, Oct. 30 (ALN)—Today 29 Volga rivermen were decorated with orders and medals by the Military Council of the Front for "gallant services in the defense of Stalingrad."

Captains, mates, engineers, sailors and fire-fighters of the Volga flotilla, who have distinguished themselves under enemy fire, are among those honored. Most are members of the Union River Transport Workers.

CARRY 10,000 MEN

The Order of the Red Star was given to Captain Shvarev, who in the course of one night carried across the river on his small boat more than 10,000 men and hundreds of guns. His vessel made trip after trip under constant enemy shelling by mortars and heavy guns.

Pyotr Vorobyov, captain of the fire-boat Gasitel, also received the Order of the Red Star for putting out fires in piers on the Volga waterfront, preventing them from spreading to grain barges under intense enemy bombing, which killed several members of the Gasitel's small crew. Two sailors in the crew also received medals.

125 GET MEDALS

Earlier 125 river workers had received medals from the Commissariat of River Transportation.

Today's decorations show the appreciation of the Red Army for the heroism of the Volga rivermen and women.

Role of Russian Labor Unions Long Debated by IFTU

LONDON, Oct. 30 (ALN)—The recent action of the Toronto convention of the American Federation of Labor, which voted that increased international trade union cooperation must come about not through any "special arrangement or separate accord," but "through the agency designed for the federation of trade unions the world over," has centered attention here on the International Federation of Trade Unions.

Matthew Woll, a vice president of the AFL, stated that the IFTU was the agency referred to in the resolution, reports from Toronto indicate.

The 12 votes cast by the AFL at the Zurich Congress of the IFTU in 1939 were decisive in defeating a British and Norwegian proposal to invite the Soviet trade unions to affiliate. The vote was 46 in favor to 37 against, with representatives of the illegal German, Austrian and Spanish labor movements, who had expressed an intention of voting with the minority, excluded from the balloting.

After the invasion of the Lowlands, the IFTU moved its offices from Amsterdam to London, where it now maintains close relations with trade union centers attached to European governments-in-exile.

In addition to the Soviet trade unions, important labor groups not affiliated with the IFTU include the CIO and railway brotherhoods in the U. S. and all but a handful of national bodies in Latin America and the British Commonwealth.

A. M. Wall, British printing union official, advocating an international labor council, wrote in a recent issue of his union journal, "The IFTU, which is largely European in its outlook and policy, does not fill the bill."

STRONG IN 1921

The IFTU, a powerful organization of 22,000,000 workers in 1921, reached its low point in 1933, after the suppression of the German and Italian trade unions, when its membership was only 8,000,000.

By 1936, when the Norwegian Trade Union Federation proposed an invitation to Russian unions, the IFTU had expanded to include unions in Canada, India, Palestine, Dutch East Indies, Argentina and Mexico. The executive committee, however, still consisted of an Englishman, a Frenchman, a Dane, a Belgian and a Dutchman.

IFTU congresses took place only every three years, but the general council met twice a year and the executive committee met every other month. At the Oslo council meeting in May, 1938, negotiations with Russian unions were broken off by a vote of 14-7.

Continued negotiations, advocated by Jouhaux, Amaro del Rosal of Spain and Vicente Lombardo Toledano of Mexico, were opposed by Citrine and Matthew Woll, who said, "How can we fight dictatorship if we go arm in arm with Stalin?"

Political developments in the next year, indicated by the fact that the IFTU congress was held in Zurich instead of Prague, induced the British trade unions to change their position. At the Zurich Congress, British, Norwegian, French and Mexican delegates spoke in favor of accepting the Soviet unity proposals.

NEW DEVELOPMENTS

Robert J. Watt of America repeated that the AFL would withdraw if the proposal carried. It was defeated under the IFTU's system of voting in national blocs, but union centers with an affiliated membership of 9,300,000 voted for it compared with 6,200,000 against. Among its leading opponents was Finland.

Since Matthew Woll is reported to have cited the refusal of the IFTU to admit Soviet trade unions as a reason for the current position of the AFL executive committee, it is not considered likely here that the IFTU can soon be expanded to serve as the vehicle for inclusive international labor cooperation.

Food Demand Up

While record crops are expected to push this year's agricultural production over the record of 1937, the demand has increased more than the supply, and civilian conservation will be necessary to meet national needs.

Coast Aircraft Unions Ask U. S. for Pay Boost

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 30—The lowest paid group of war workers in America—the West Coast's quarter of a million aircrafters—will soon be drawing wages comparable with other industries, it was predicted here this week after a one-week fact finding hearing on stabilization of the aviation industry's substandard wage scale.

After compiling data presented by unions and management in the industry, Paul R. Porter, chairman of the hearing, submitted the record to the War Labor Board, under whose direction the meeting was held, in Washington, where a decision was expected within 30 to 60 days.

INCREASES NEEDED

The six-day session was featured by presentation of figures by CIO, AFL and independent union representatives that higher wages are necessary in the aviation industry to prevent aircrafters' migration to jobs in other industries and as a contribution toward boosting of production.

Holding that stabilization of wages is necessary "in the interests of developing the highest productive morale and assuring the maximum production of planes," Richard T. Frankensteen, national director of aircraft for the United Automobile Workers, CIO, presented the UAW arguments for stabilization.

"If the industry is to do its full part in winning the war," Frankensteen said, "it must be guaranteed a skilled, stable and adequate force of aircraft workers.

"This cannot be done unless present wage inequalities are smoothed out, and industry-labor policies established on a firm basis of fairness."

SHOWS HIGH TURNOVER

Frankensteen, reading a 14-page statement into the record, showed that men are quitting the industry at the rate of 5 per cent a month, in addition to those leaving for military service.

"This demonstrates that the sharp inequalities between wage rates of west coast aircraft plants and other war production plants or industries in the region seriously threaten the vital war production output of these plants."

As the sessions drew to a close late in the week, employers' representatives received a jolt when Boeing Aircraft Co. men from Seattle broke with the united front of management.

E. R. Perry, assistant to W. R. Boeing, company president, said the Seattle aircraft plant favored the 95 cent hourly wage as proposed by union representatives to replace the present 75 cents an hour rate, and said it "represents the lowest practical wage increase that will alleviate Boeing's manpower problem."

WIDE VARIATIONS

Frankensteen in his testimony before the hearing declared that another evil of the industry—a hangover from the time the aircraft makers were making planes for the carriage trade—was the existence of 114 different classifications throughout the plants.

Under these classifications, 20 workers doing the same amount of work on the same machine may be receiving as many as 20 different wage rates.

Frankensteen said these wage rates "give rise to a flood of grievances from individual workers . . . Its effect is to break down the application of collective bargaining procedures by encouraging the worker to believe that the good will of his foremen rather than any process of collective bargaining will best secure economic justice for him."

Donnelly Vote Won by CIO

New York, Oct. 30—A chip was knocked off the long-time anti-unionism of the Reuben H. Donnelley printing outfit this week, when classified advertising salesmen chose the CIO by a 3-1 margin.

The vote was 74 to 23 for the Book & Magazine Guild, a local of the United Office & Professional Workers.

Big Coast Power Utility Must Bargain

Oakland, Calif., Oct. 30—Pacific Gas & Electric Co., one of the foxiest utility monopolies in America, has been run to earth at last by the CIO. The long chase ended when the War Labor Board ordered the company to immediately enter into negotiations with the unions in its East Bay Division.

The order stipulates that if the "parties fail to negotiate a contract within 45 days" the case shall be referred back to the WLB.

This time limit is a blunt recognition of the PG&E's years of evasion of collective bargaining, its policy of delay through legalistic red tape and its carefully worded hint that it will dodge a WLB order if it can.

The WLB order and its investigator's report completely smashed the company's hope that it could continue the endless delays and evasions of the past five years. In 1937 the CIO lost a system-wide election among PG&E employes throughout California.

Army Transport Dispute Gets Settlement

New York, Oct. 29—A serious beef involving summary firing of active members of the Natl. Maritime Union from Army Transport Service ships has been settled by NMU officials meeting here with the ATS.

According to the NMU, the ATS had pulled a number of active union men off the S.S. Mariposa without explanation or an opportunity to the men to appeal, and also effectively blacklisting them from other ships.

Earlier, the union paper, the Pilot, charged that Nazi sympathizers on ATS ships were untouched, that seamen seeking to buy War Bonds were harassed, and that shipowner officials generally took an anti-war attitude.

Now any suspect on the ships will be turned over to the District Coast Guard. Suspect is defined as anyone having "fascist tendencies or connections."

Pay Lift Won For Skilled Auto Workers

Washington, Oct. 31—Wages of skilled machine repair men, machinists, millwrights and electricians of the General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., and Chrysler Corp. were boosted 6 cents an hour in an order issued this week by the National War Labor Board. This increase, the board stated ,is over and above any general increases already awarded.

A general 4 cents hourly increase was granted to 200,000 workers in 95 GM plants on Sept. 26, and to 90,000 employes of Chrysler Corp. on Oct. 3. On Oct. 17 the board denied any pay increase to the 115,000 workers of the Ford Motor Co.

In its order this week, the Board denied the request of the United Automobile Workers and the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers for a general increase for all the maintenance, powerhouse and construction workers of the three companies and a blanket minimum of $1.50 an hour for all the skilled employes in these categories.

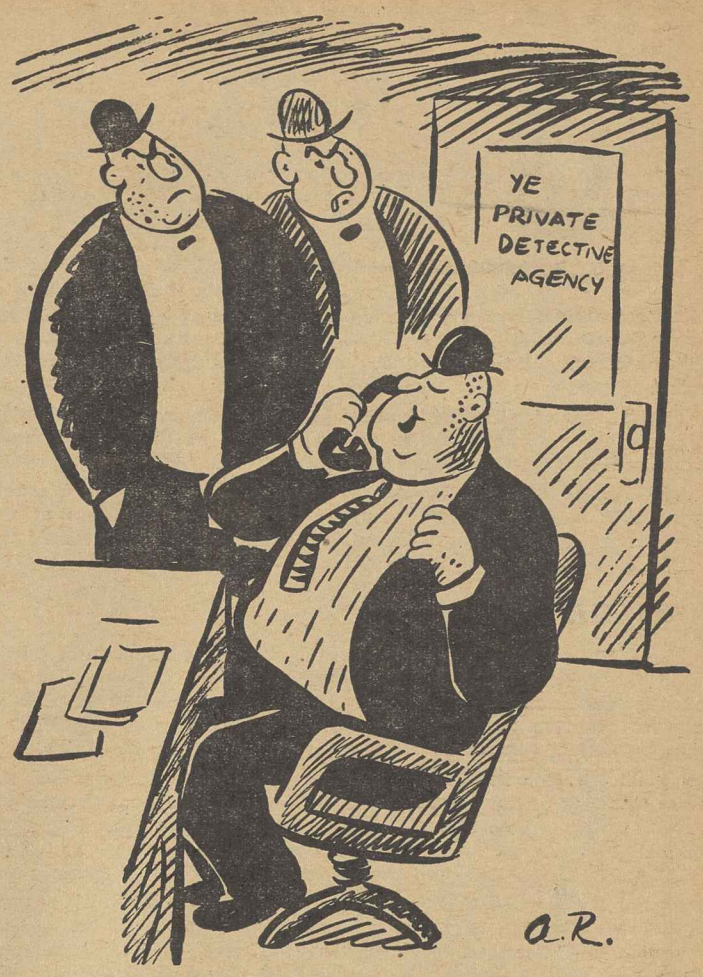
In taking this action the Board approved the unanimous recommendations of a special three-man panel representing labor, employers and public, which was appointed to make proposals to the Board on the issue of wages for the 31,000 maintenance employes of the three companies.

Rap Dismissal Of Adventists

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 31—A case of religious discrimination at the Shell Development Co., where four chemists and engineers, Seventh Day Adventists, who refused to work on their Sabbath, Saturday, was settled by the Local Chapter of the Federation of Architects, Engineers & Technicians.

The company agreed to work out a 48-hour week schedule for the men that will not require them to work on Saturdays.

The Upper Crust



"Hello, boss, X-139 reporting. Just caught one of them union guys trying to start a production committee."

Murray Aids Transit Union In N. Y. Fight For Living Wage

NEW YORK, Oct. 30—Backed by President Philip Murray and a number of CIO affiliates, the Transport Workers Union this week continued its campaign to force the Board of Transportation to meet with the union for solution of wage and job grievances on the city-owned subway lines.

Charging that the Board has shown "little understanding and less sympathy for the plight of its employes," Douglas MacMahon, head of the TWUA New York local, charged that real wages of transit employes have slipped down below a living-wage level.

Meanwhile the union staged a series of mass meetings to acquaint the membership and the public with the full facts of the situation. TWUA President Michael Quill and other union leaders spoke. The members authorized "necessary and proper" action to attain their demands.

MURRAY IN CONFABS

Last week President Murray conferred with Mayor LaGuardia and Transit Board Chairman Delaney on the union demands, which have been before the board for two months.

Citing the fact that the TWUA requests are in "complete accord" with the War Labor Board's Little Steel formula, Murray declared:

"I regard the requests of the Transport Workers Union as reasonable in every respect and they have my full support. The transit lines owned and operated by the city of New York are a commercial enterprise, and it behooves the city, as an employer in such an enterprise, to discharge the obligations which the War Labor Board requires all employers to perform.

"My visit with the mayor and Mr. Delaney was designed to facilitate the negotiations which have proceeded for several months between the TWU and the Board of Transportation. The negotiations will be continued in the expectation that they will culminate in the near future in a satisfactory disposition of the union's demands.

"I shall continue to hold myself in readiness to lend whatever assistance I can toward the speedy accomplishment of this end."

Later MacMahon appealed directly to Mayor LaGuardia to intervene.

"The Board of Transportation has not only failed its employes," he said, "It has failed the nation, too. Immediately after the attack on Pearl Harbor, the TWU submitted to the board a comprehensive plan for joint labor-management conservation of critical materials, increased employe efficiency and full utilization of the facilities of the Board for the war effort.

"In the ten months that have since elapsed, the board has done absolutely nothing with the plan and 'business as usual' continues to prevail."

CIO Wins Pay Hike at Kaiser Laboratory

Oakland, Cal., Oct. 31—A salary increase for the scientific staff at the Los Altos magnesium plant of Kaiser's Permanento Metals Corp., was announced here this week by Marcel Scherer, international vice-president of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians. The raises range from $30 to $60 a month.

Scherer said that the union pointed out at recent hearings conducted by the National Labor Relations Board on charges filed by the FAECT that the low rates of pay for scientists at Permanento was jeopardizing the production of magnesium.

"The company agreed to our proposal that increases be granted providing our union guaranteed that we would not consider the increases an unfair labor practice," Scherer stated.

"Our union gave Kaiser such a guarantee as we were mainly interested in preventing a breakdown in the scientific staff as a result of the men's refusal to continue to work at sub-standard rates."

'Win The War' Keynote Of 5th CIO Convention

Pres. Murray's Report Reviews CIO Aid To War, Asks All-Out Mobilization, Second Front

BOSTON, Nov. 9—Delegates to the 5th CIO Convention today heard a lengthy report from Pres. Philip Murray warning that "the fate of our nation is at stake," renewing labor's demands for all-out mobilization in this people's war, and pledging all possible assistance to hasten the opening of a second front against Nazi Germany.

PRESIDENT PHILIP MURRAY

The CIO leader's document reviewing CIO activities during the first war year renewed labor's pledge of "complete and absolute support to our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt." (Story Page 3.)

To support the President and the national war effort, the CIO has sought complete unity of labor, both at home and among the United Nations, Murray said. (Stories Page 6.)

The Executive Board, meeting in pre-convention session here, Nov. 5, announced chartering of a new affiliate—the United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, which had broken away from the United Mine Workers (Story on Page 3).

It heard speeches of friendship from Jack Tanner and Bryn Roberts, two leading British unionists (Story on Page 9), and criticized collusive contracts between the AFL and the Kaiser Shipyards on the West Coast (Story on Page 3).

The nation's workers appreciate CIO's role in helping the country work for victory, Murray noted, citing increased membership in affiliated unions (Story Page 5) and more industrial union councils (Story Page 2).

On the legislative front, Murray declared, CIO has successfully beaten back a mass of anti-labor bills and helped the President by supporting win-the-war measures. (Story Page 7.) It has worked for more effective activities and a greater voice for labor on a number of federal agencies. (Stories on Pages 2, 3, 7, 8 and 11.)

CIO has fought for democratic tax legislation against the vested corporation interests (Story Page 2); sought more adequate housing and security programs, and taken an active part to protect aliens and members of minority groups (Stories on Pages 2 and 11).

It was on this record of achievement that the delegates plunged into the problems confronting labor and the nation at the convention today. Full reports of the discussion and resolutions will be contained in the next issue of The CIO NEWS.

OCD Set-up Bars Labor From Posts

BOSTON, Nov. 7—Despite warm cooperation from the national headquarters of the Office of Civilian Defense, "labor has not been markedly successful in achieving representation on defense councils," President Murray reported today.

Reason for this partial failure to give labor an adequate voice on the defense bodies, he asserted, is partly at least the "decentralized structure" of OCD which permits final decisions to be made in the state and local agencies.

ROLE RECOGNIZED

The need for labor representation to be a functioning part of the defense councils set-up was recognized at a White House conference early this year in which OCD agreed "that labor's role in the war is of vital importance to maximum production, adequate protection and effective volunteer participation."

Leading the CIO representatives at that meeting was John Brophy, who is CIO's member on the OCD Labor Advisory Committee.

The committee's suggestions on increased labor participation were accepted by OCD Director Landis in June when he recommended establishment of joint labor-management set-up for plant air-raid precaution committees. Landis also approved registration of union members for OCD work through union locals.

JEFFREY LAUDED

Murray's report noted "excellent work" done by the OCD labor section, headed by Newman Jeffrey, but said its activities had been hampered by lack of power and personnel.

To increase the effectiveness of OCD's labor work, the advisory committee has recommended creation of a distinct Labor Division, responsible to Director Landis, with enlarged powers. The committee also recommended appointment of labor representatives in all the OCD regional offices.

Urge FDR End Bridges Exile Case

Boston, Nov. 7—President Roosevelt should "issue an order dismissing all charges" against Harry Bridges and give him full opportunity to acquire U. S. citizenship, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said in his annual report to the CIO convention released here.

Murray's plea to the President follows a section in his report reviewing the seven year persecution against Bridges and sharply contrasting the attitude shown by the Biddle deportation order with the win-the-war work done by the Intl. Longshoremens and Warehousemens Union under Bridges' leadership.

"Bridges, and the organization he represents, have made and are making a contribution of major importance to our nation's victory drive," Murray said. "This contribution has received public recognition from high-ranking Army, Navy and other government officials. It is well known to all members of organized labor and to the public.

APPEASEMENT MOVE

"These and other contributions to our victory call for the immediate dropping of all charges against Harry Bridges and his acceptance as a fully qualified citizen of the U. S.," he added.

"The order to deport him, after years of service as a worker and leader of organized labor, can only be seen as an attempt to appease anti-democratic forces at the cost of the all-out war effort."

Referring again to the need for Presidential action to free Bridges of all charges and pave the way for citizenship, Murray said: "This decisive measure would be greeted with enthusiasm and even greater effort for victory by workers throughout our country and in the United Nations."

Councils' Power Grew During Year

Boston, Nov. 7—City, county and state industrial union councils affiliated with the CIO have increased in number and improved their effectiveness as community agencies, Pres. Murray's annual report indicated today.

Figures compiled by the Dept. of Industrial Union Councils, headed by John Brophy, reveal an increase of 25 city and regional CIO centers, bringing the total to 227, the report showed. State councils number 33.

While few state legislatures have been in session this year, the political and legislative work of the councils has nevertheless been maintained, with widespread activity in the Congressional and state elections uniform throughout the country.

Brophy

To help correlate the work of the Councils, the Department has worked out an extensive card index system showing the Congressional districts in which the councils are located, and a system of reports which enable national headquarters to be informed of correspondence between the councils and the Congressmen on matters of interest to labor.

In June the Department issued a handbook, "War Production," designed to guide state and city councils in pushing conversion of factories to war work and helping strengthen the place of the councils in the industrial life of the city. Special editions were printed for a number of the larger councils.

The need for spurring interest in community war needs is constantly increasing, Murray said.

"It is essential that the major problems which organized labor confronts, and its major duties in respect to community endeavor, be brought constantly to the attention of our central bodies through the medium of materials of this kind," the CIO President said.

CIO Proposes Jobless Fund For Veterans

Boston, Nov. 7—Problems arising out of the conversion of our peacetime economic organization to wartime have re-emphasized the need for improvements in the social security system along the lines advocated in the President's report to the convention.

In addition to the general improvements in the federal social security system previously expressed in the CIO program, including a single federal system of old-age and unemployment insurance, the report to this year's convention calls attention to the need for unemployment benefits for men in the armed forces.

MANY LACK BENFITS

Under the unemployment benefit procedure now in effect in most states, no provisions are made for the vast number of service men who have not been able to accumulate sufficient benefits to be of any value upon their return.

Roosevelt Program On Taxes Flouted

BOSTON, Nov. 7—The economic victory program set forth by President Roosevelt is at the heart of the war and must be put into effect despite all opposition and outright sabotage, President Murray says in the section of his fifth annual report devoted to the CIO Department of Research and Education.

This seven-point program had two major objectives, both of which were supported by the CIO, the report says. These were: 1) "the absolute need of stabilizing the cost of living for all the people as the best guarantee of winning the fight on our economic front," and 2) "simultaneous attack on the issues of price control and democratic rationing of all scarce goods, taxation and stabilization."

Walsh

Of these, only wage stabilization has been put in effect, the report points out, while the program on taxes, price control and rationing have either been sabotaged or bungled.

"The control of the cost of living and democratic rationing have not been accomplished," the report says. "The OPA has not really tackled the problem of rationing. This requires an overall rationing immediately of all foods and other necessities. The OPA must forget its present policy of puttering around with individual commodities."

Turning to the problems of post-war economics, the report warns sharply against the repetition of the economic collapse that came after the war of 1914-18. This must be done by quick reconversion from war to peacetime industry, by adequate incomes to tide over the conversion period, and by assuring an adequate flow of goods to all the people. Already a committee to study post-war economic questions has been formed by the government, with Clinton S. Golden, John Brophy and J. Raymond Walsh as CIO members.

The report also noted the work of the department during the year, citing the publication of the Economic Outlook and similar studies and the aid given to CIO affiliates in economic problems.

The department, which used to be known as the Economic Dept., has changed its name to Research and Education. The new director replacing Ralph Hetzel, now in the Army, is J. Raymond Walsh.

FEPC Anti-Bias Program Wins CIO Approval

Boston, Nov. 7—CIO's traditional battle to eliminate discrimination against racial or national minority groups in American industry has been materially assisted by the work of the Fair Employment Practices Committee, Pres. Murray—a member of the government agency—reported to the 5th CIO convention.

"I am proud to be able to report that there has been no occasion for this committee to call CIO organizations before it on charges of discrimination," he said.

BROPHY ACTS

The committee, on which John Brophy, CIO councils director, sits as an alternate to Pres. Murray, had almost 4,800 cases filed with it between January and August of this year. The agency operates under directives contained in Executive Order 8802 of Pres. Roosevelt.

In the last fortnight the committee won a major battle when it gained complete freedom of action within the War Manpower Commission—to which it was recently shifted—"to deal with all questions relating to discrimination based on race, creed, color, national origin or alienage."

"In general the methods followed by the committee have been successful, though obviously the field to be covered is enormous, and much more extensive efforts must ultimately be made," Murray said.

By and large employers have cooperated with the committee, Murray found, and Pres. Roosevelt has been of assistance in cases where sterner measures are necessary to force opening of jobs for members of minority groups.

EFFECT CHANGES

As a result of the committee's activities, "a number of non-CIO labor organizations which previously refused to admit Negroes to membership, whether on the basis of constitutional limitations or otherwise, have changed their requirements and have now found ways and means of admitting Negroes to membership," he declared.

War Relief Donations Near Million

Boston, Nov. 7—Nearly one million dollars has been raised by the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, set up at the 1941 convention "to direct and coordinate campaigns to raise funds throughout the country to alleviate the misery of the workers and peoples of those countries fighting Fascism and Nazism," according to the President's annual report to the 1942 convention.

As of Oct. 15, the Committee had raised $993,391.96 in funds collected and pledged, at a cost of about $60,400, a percentage of 6.1 per cent. In addition near $112,000 was contributed and pledged directly to various relief agencies by CIO groups.

The Committee is headed by Irving Abramson, president of the New Jersey Council.

Labor, Red Cross Hold Conference

Washington, Nov. 7—Discussion of labor participation in the American Red Cross brought together in Washington last week representatives of CIO, AFL and Brotherhood international unions at an all-day conference called by the national officials of the Red Cross.

Keynoted by James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations, who spoke on the war-time program of the Red Cross in relation to labor's effort in the battle of production, the conference saw a brief review of Red Cross services to the Armed forces, merchant marine and war victims.

Increased labor representation on chapter boards of directors was reported by Guy Emerson, vice chairman of Red Cross War Fund and presiding officer at the meeting.

Form CIO Group To Aid Minorities

Boston, Nov. 7—Formation of a CIO Committee for the Elimination of Racial Discrimination was reported to the 5th convention by Pres. Murray.

Members of the committee are: Sec. James B. Carey; Pres. Willard Townsend, of the United Transport Service Employes; Boyd Wilson of the United Steelworkers; and James J. Leary, secretary-treasurer of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

"This committee has a detailed program . . . designed to carry on the fight against racial discrimination, and discrimination against Negroes in particular, on both an immediate and a long-time basis."

Vast War Contributions Of CIO Told By Murray

Report Urges Second Front, All-Out Effort

BOSTON, Nov. 7—Victory in our country's war for national existence requires total mobilization of all our resources and a land offensive against Nazi Germany, President Philip Murray asserted in the opening section of his report to the fifth CIO convention meeting here this week.

"We are engaged in a total war which requires the total mobilization of all our people and all our resources," he declared. "In order to win this war we must bring every ounce of strength we possess into immediate offensive action against the aggressors. There can be no other course; either we crush our enemies quickly or we are crushed as a nation and reduced to slavery as a people."

URGES PLANNING

Labor must take leadership in the struggle to put the nation's full strength into the war, to see that all war problems are dealt with in a planned, rational manner, and to see that the "people's earnest desire for the supreme offensive—the second front," is carried out.

"We must hasten the day of victory if civilization is to be saved from complete extermination," Murray said. "Labor must assume leadership to accomplish this end.

"The immediate task before us is to translate the war effort of the people into immediate and striking offensive action. This calls for swift and complete conversion of the nation to total mobilization."

The need for planning on a national scale is stressed throughout the opening section of the report. In this, Murray cited the consistent demand of the CIO for an over-

Coke Council Given Charter By CIO Board

BOSTON — A sharp protest aginst bureaucratic delays in the War Labor Board and against collusive contracts between the AFL and the Kaiser shipyards on the West Coast came out of the pre-convention meeting of the CIO Executive Board held here today.

The board also took action to grant a charter in the CIO to the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, formed of unions that broke away from the domination of John L. Lewis empire bounded by District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America.

PRECEDED CONVENTION

The meeting of the board beginning Thursday was in advance of the opening of the fifth constitutional convention of the CIO at the Hotel Statler on Monday, Nov. 9.

"The executive board by unanimous vote decided to protest the collusive agreements that have been made between the Metal Trades department of the AFL and certain shipyards on the West Coast, particularly the Kaiser yards," Pres. Murray said.

HIT COLLUSION

This collusion, Murray revealed, has gone to the extent that the AFL Metal Trades Unions are now trying to prevent elections in West Coast yards that would decide which union the workers there wanted to represent them. The executive board's action was forwarded to the National Labor Relations Board in a formal resolution passed by unanimous vote.

Earlier in the meeting, the board heard speeches from Jack Tanner, president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union and Bryn Roberts, head of the National Union of Public Employes, both of Britain. Both visitors who came to the CIO meeting as unofficial fraternal delegates, stressed the need for United Nations trade union unity as a vital step toward winning the war.

At a dinner tendered to them by the executive board, Tanner and

Manpower Crisis Seen Result of Failure To Plan

BOSTON, Nov. 7—The manpower situation—heart of the entire war production drive—is a critical problem precisely because of the failure to plan on a national scale for total war mobilization, President Murray said in a major section of his report to the fifth CIO convention dealing with the question.

This failure is at the root of the difficulties our war industries are having in getting sufficient manpower to the proper places at the proper time, the report points out. It is also reflected in the rash of plans now jumping into print for compulsory manpower legislation, and in the recent flood of contradictory statements from a dozen different agencies on the manpower crisis.

"It is extremely unfortunate that the nature of these bills and discussion which has been fostered by the groups supporting them have been permitted to them have been permitted to divert our attention from the real issues posed by our manpower situation," Murray writes.

CENTRAL UNIT

Calling for an end to this confusion that delays all-out mobilization of all our resources and thus holds up war production for the offensive and victory, Murray urges a unified approach to the problem together with all other related war issues.

"The CIO proposes," he writes, "that we meet our production problem along with all of our war production snages, our material shortages, by immediate decisive action to bring our wartime organization under a single unified command.

NEED UNIFIED CONTROL

"We propose that labor, management and the government join in bringing the functions of procurement, of industrial and manpower mobilization and organization under a single joint control."

Such a unified control would see that contracts are allocated with the manpower situation as a basic consideration, rather than the present planless method that sends huge war orders to areas of manpower shortage, of housing shortage, transport shortage and the like.

"We have reached the stage where we must recognize that the nation must be organized as a gigantic production and military unit," the report concludes. "Our manpower problems today and in the future result only from failure to organize the entire productive unit.

"Neither compulsion nor voluntarism without organization and planning will solve any of these problems. If we have manpower chaos today, a job-freeze merely freezes chaos."

'Freedom Is Paramount' ---Murray

Boston, Nov. 7—"The fate of our nation and all its beloved freedoms are paramount to everything," President Philip Murray proclaimed in the introduction to his report to the 5th annual convention of the CIO, meeting in this historic city this week.

"With this in mind our path is clear," the introduction says. "The CIO is forging a record unsurpassed in this war effort. This has been possible because of the unity that comes with organization; and the stronger we build the CIO the more we can contribute.

"This is the spirit in which I sincerely hope this convention moves. Because the CIO has grown in economic and political importance our responsibilities to our membership and to the citizenry are greater.

AID UNITED NATIONS

"We must ever keep in mind that the CIO is an integral part of this nation and that we must lend our support—all our support—to the United Nations. Because of freedoms there are unions and because of unions these freedoms will be preserved."

In the conclusion to the report, Murray expresses his thanks to all the members employed on the staff of the CIO, both national and locally, and declares:

"The ever-increasing strength of the international affiliates, reflecting as it does the basic objective of the CIO to organize the unorganized is a particular source of pleasure to the president of this organization. The leaders of these various affiliates have my sincere gratitude. I sincerely hope that the coming year will find their organizations growing stronger each day."

Demand OPA Move Fast On Price Control

Boston, Nov. 7—The Office of Price Administration has fallen down on the job of keeping prices on a level keel, and its rationing program is only piecemeal, President Murray declared in his convention report.

Murray cited the work of the OPA Labor Policy Committee, made up of CIO, AFL and Brotherhood representatives, which was established after many major OPA policies had already been set and which consequently has "been under considerable difficulty in attempting to have OPA policy reflect the attitude and viewpoint of labor.

"Many controversies and conflicts in viewpoints have arisen that on occasion have threatened continued functioning of the committee."

Presidents of three CIO unions were appointed to the committee to represent the CIO, President Murray reported to the convention. They are Emil Rieve, Textile Workers Union; Joseph Curran, National Maritime Union; and Sherman S. Dalrymple, United Rubber Workers. Alternates are Robert Oliver for Rieve, Hoyt S. Haddock for Curran, and Herbert Dawson for Dalrymple.

The committee has been critical of a number of OPA policies, declares the report. It found that OPA "has attempted to influence wage policy; that price control has not effectively prevented unwarranted increases in consumer goods comprising the major portion of the wage earner's living costs, and that the rationing system "does not utilize the possibilities of overall rationing as an effective method of inflation control."

Wartime Convention

The Congress of Industrial Organizations opened its fifth constitutional and its first wartime convention in Boston at the peak of its fighting strength.

Every one of its unions has substantially increased its membership, and some have more than doubled their membership during the past year.

The organizational section of President Murray's report is crowded with figures about elections won, new contracts secured, new locals organized and hundreds of thousands of new members enrolled.

Labor Board elections, in which the workers vote their union choice by secret ballot, are the surest test of organizational progress. And this test shows that the CIO has made greater gains in the past year than ever before and is far ahead of all competitors.

Labor Board reports for the second quarter of this year indicate that a larger number of votes were cast in plant elections than in any previous equivalent period. In this quarter CIO unions won the largest percentage of elections in CIO history, being victorious in 47.3 percent, as against 32.3 percent won by AFL unions and 9.6 percent won by independent unions.

The CIO is booming as never before, because it has proved that it can meet the wartime needs of American industrial workers, and because its policies exactly express their sentiments and aspirations.

The wartime needs of American working people call for unions that will protect their economic interests not only through collective bargaining but also through intelligent and patriotic national policies on price control, rationing, taxation and all the other necessary wartime economic controls.

Where, in the past, collective bargaining might directly concern only the workers and employers in a particular industry or plant, now nearly every issue raised is tied in with national governmental policy and must, in the last analysis, be determined by the war interests of the whole American people.

And this is precisely where the progressive win-the-war policies of the CIO have stood the sternest tests.

The CIO has subordinated all other considerations to winning the war. It has done so because this is the desire of the millions of workers for whom it speaks; because the interests of labor and our whole country are one and identical in this crisis; and because labor's freedom and its very life depend upon victory over the Axis.

With this one goal in mind, the CIO has assumed national leadership in its economic and legislative policies and in its dealings with the government and its agencies. It has demanded and worked for a wartime economy that will insure maximum productive efficiency and civilian morale.

And in so doing it has represented the truest economic interests of the workers as well as their determination to make victory the first consideration.

But basic as are the economic interests of America's war workers, the movement which truly represents them must give leadership which goes far beyond even such important considerations.

The CIO has won the confidence of American working people because it is the most aggressive force in the country working for an all-out victory effort in every field.

The CIO was the first to demand the speedy conversion of industry to war purposes. It was the first to call for national planning for increased war production, for the closest labor-management-government cooperation, and for production committees in every plant.

The CIO works for national and international labor unity, so that the organized workers of all the United Nations may achieve the maximum joint effort for victory.

On every national wartime issue, the CIO has come forward with constructive proposals to insure the greatest and speediest success for our war effort.

At the present time, as President Murray's convention report indicates, the CIO is taking the lead for total mobilization of all our economic and manpower resources under centralized direction and control for an immediate offensive against the Hitler Axis.

In every phase of our war effort the CIO has furnished the kind of leadership which American workers expect from a fighting labor movement. That is why it has made such outstanding organizational progress in the past year, and that is why it will continue to grow.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

ANYONE who thinks the country can get along without unions during this war ought to read President Philip Murray's report to the CIO convention.

It gives a well-rounded picture of the tremendous scope of the labor movement's activities for winning the war.

It reveals that the CIO has converted itself completely from peacetime to war purposes.

From start to finish, it is the record of a militant labor movement directing its militancy against the Hitler Axis and those who block the road to victory.

The struggles of the CIO to defend and promote the workers' interests have not been lessened on this account. Rather they have increased in scope and intensity.

For now the CIO must struggle not only for the workers' bread-and-butter interests, so they may be the healthiest and heartiest soldiers of production, but it must also struggle for their life-and-death interests in a world war against fascist slavery and destruction.

If an auto can run without an engine, if a man can stand up and fight without a backbone, if freedom can survive without free institutions, then a people's war can be fought without unions.

The CIO President's report is keynoted by a call for total mobilization of all our people and all our resources for an immediate offensive against the Axis.

Such total mobilization calls for national planning, coordination and centralized direction of production, manpower utilization, economic stabilization and all other phases of our wartime economy and our war effort, Murray points out.

It also calls for the full and direct participation and representation of labor in the planning and administration of national war activities.

Murray's report is full of constructive criticism and of detailed and practical suggestions for bringing about the total mobilization we must have for victory.

★ ★ ★

The CIO leader is unsparing in his denunciation of "the Lavals, the Petains and the Quislings of the United Nations," the appeasers and agents of Hitler who try to check a second front offensive by counsels of hesitation, weakness and defeatism.

He voices emphatically the American people's desire for a second front, so victory may be secured through a combined United Nations offensive while Hitler is so deeply engaged in Russia.

Murray speaks the mind of every CIO member when he pledges labor's complete support to our Commander-in-Chief in every effort necessary to enable the United Nations "to grasp the offensive and smash forward to the immediate military destruction of the fascist Axis."

★ ★ ★

When he advocates American labor unity, the touchstone of his approach is how best to achieve the maximum united labor effort for victory.

International labor unity between the unions of all the United Nations is urged with the same purpose in mind.

And through all the detailed discussions of manpower, economic stabilization, war production, the War Labor Board, social security, housing, OPA, civilian defense, labor legislation and scores of other subjects, the same thread runs—what can labor do, what can the country do, to mobilize all its efforts for the speediest possible victory.

★ ★ ★

The CIO's peacetime convention reports have been devoted chiefly to recording organizational progress, achievements in wage increases and improved conditions, and the legislative and political efforts of labor to improve its economic and social status and to expand our democracy.

All of these subjects are included in this first wartime convention report of CIO. But all of them are related to the main purpose of winning the war, and the character of many of such activities is necessarily changed by wartime conditions.

All wage issues, for instance, now find their way to the War Labor Board, and the unions must wrestle with numerous government agencies in defending their members' economic interests. Price control, rationing, taxation and many kinds of legislation also determine matters of food, clothing and housing; and labor has to be constantly vigilant and active in all these fields.

No one can read through Murray's report without realizing that the war has made union organization and activity more necessary than ever before, not only for the workers themselves but for the success of our whole war effort.

Sweeping New Gains Won By CIO In '42

BOSTON, Nov. 7—Expanded activities, a substantial increase in membership of all CIO unions and staggering problems of readjustment made necessary by the changeover from peace to wartime production marked the work of the Organization Department during the past year, stated the President's report to the convention.

Headed by Allan S. Haywood, director of organization, the department has a staff of 24 regional directors, 3 sub-regional directors and 84 field representatives working directly under the national office, in addition to 61 others paid by the CIO and assigned to various affiliated unions.

Declaring that "the CIO has demonstrated its ability to assume leadership in the prosecution of the war effort," the report called for a great unified organizing campaign among the millions of workers still unorganized so that "industrial democracy will stride ahead with political democracy as the great irresistible force of a free people fighting to make a free world."

International and national unions and organizing committees now affiliated with the CIO number 39, states the report. There are 260 industrial union councils, 33 of which are state councils, and 307 local industrial unions affiliated directly with the CIO, 142 of them issued during the past year.

MORE CONTRACTS

Sweeping gains in membership, elections won and innumerable new contracts signed by affiliated national and international unions in 1941 were reported.

In May, 1942, the United Steelworkers of America was born out of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee and continued its spectacular progress.

Since October, 1941, it has won 77 National Labor Relations Board elections and won sole bargaining rights for some 170,500 additional workers, bringing their total membership beyond 500,000.

232 WINS FOR UAW

The United Automobile Workers scored 232 victories in NLRB elections, carrying a total of more than 75,000 votes and giving the union bargaining rights for more than 600,000 workers.

The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers increased its membership by 170,000 and now has about 435,000 workers under contract. The Textile Workers' Union won 74 elections involving 62,000 workers during the year and now has 1,250 signed contracts covering more than 400,000 workers.

RUBBER, OIL

The United Rubber Workers, although faced with tremendous war problems reached its peak in dues paying members and won 19 out of 23 NLRB elections. The Oil Workers' International Union, engaged in an intensive drive on the Standard Oil Co., increased its membership by 50 per cent, and now represents some 40,000 workers.

New contracts covering 11,500 members including the employes of Sears-Roebuck and Kresge are among the gains made by the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes.

SHIPBUILDERS GROW

The Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers doubled in membership and won 16 NLRB elections by a total of 26,265 votes. The Amalgamated Clothing Workers consolidated gains made in previous years and made considerable progress in the improvement of wage and working conditions, including a general 10c hourly increase.

The United Furniture Workers, although confronted with curtailed production due to material shortages, signed up many new members, won 21 elections and negotiated —— new contracts. Membership of the International Woodworkers of America also increased while it wrestled with stabilization and manpower problems arising out of the war.

METAL MINERS UP 60%

The Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers grew by 60 per cent making marked gains in the Tri-State section of Arkansas - Missouri - Oklahoma, long the bulwark of anti-unionism in the industry. The United Shoe Workers won 21 out of 22 elections involving 13,069 and succeeded in obtaining many improvements in its contracts.

Of the National Maritime Union the report declares that it "is serving our nation and the United Nations gloriously, with its membership delivering vital war materials to all parts of the world," and that several thousand of its members "have given their lives so that liberty will be maintained and the forces of destruction and despotism crushed."

The Farm Equipment Workers which took on the status of a national union at a convention held in September doubled its membership and won 15 NLRB elections during the year.

The State, County & Municipal Workers, the Packinghouse Workers' Organizing Committee, the United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers, the American Newspaper Guild, the Utility Workers' Organizing Committee and the other CIO unions all made substantial progress during the war and continued to increase in membership.

NEW CHEMICAL UNION

"During the summer of 1942, a number of local unions of gas, coke and chemical workers decided that they wanted to have a union of their own and to be directly affiliated with the CIO," states the report.

"The ensuing action resulted in the formation of the United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers. This union has held a convention and elected officers. At the present time its membership is composed principally of former members of District 50, United Mine Workers of America, at one time affiliated with the CIO.

"This new union is seeking a charter of affiliation from the CIO. Its plans include the organizing of thousands of workers in the great chemical industry of America who sorely need the benefits of industrial unionism."

ACTIVITY IN SOUTH

In the concluding section on the Organization Department, the report points out that "the South still remains one of our main problems" and tells of plans formed at a conference held in Chattanooga, Tenn., to intensify organizing activities in major southern industries.

The report also comments on the progress made by the steel and automobile unions in Canada during the year, and mentions the address made by President Murray at the Canadian Congress of Labor convention in September.

Moves Toward U.S., Intl. Labor Unity Sought By CIO To Aid War Drive

Murray Reviews Talks with AFL; Flays Lewis' Dis-Unity Acts

BOSTON, Nov. 7—"The CIO has been in the lead in consistently proposing and carrying through practical, earnest steps toward the unity of American labor," President Murray reported to the fifth convention.

His thorough-going review of proposals and actions in the direction of labor unity to help carry on the "people's war" also featured an attack on the "sinister motives" of United Mine Workers leaders who seek "disruption and disunity within the ranks of labor."

"The approach of the CIO to the question of labor unity is identical with our approach to all questions—the touchstone being its effect on our nation's war of survival," Murray said.

UNITY NEEDED

"With our country and the entire democratic world under the most savage attack in our history, national unity of all our people for victory is the primary need of the hour.

"No consideration of individual or group interest can be permitted to divide our nation's war strength; no step toward complete working unity left untaken."

It was at an Executive Board meeting in New York early this year that CIO formulated its position and endorsed proposals for the establishment of a six-man CIO-AFL Combined Labor Victory Board to meet with Pres. Roosevelt on matters of importance to the nation's workers.

"This action, we are convinced, has made a substantial contribution to upholding our Commander-in-Chief in his war leadership and promoting new steps towards total mobilization and total war," Murray said.

CIO'S PROPOSALS

Later, in June, he recalled, the CIO put forward further proposals for binding more closely together the interests of all American workers. Those proposals consisted of suggestions for:

1. Continuing and expanding the work of the 6-man joint committee.

2. Establishing of a joint committee to dispose of jurisdictional proposals.

3. Protecting the gains made by the CIO's industrial unions.

A committee consisting of Pres. Murray, Pres. R. J. Thomas of the Auto Workers, and Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers was named to meet with the AFL for further discussion of unity proposals. Its first meeting, Murray said, "is anticipated . . . at an early date following the CIO convention."

BLASTS LEWIS SABOTAGE

In his discussion of labor unity, Pres. Murray lashed out sharply at the leadership of the United Mine Workers of America, whose connection with CIO was formally severed at the UMWA's recent convention.

One of the reasons for that disaffiliation, Murray said, was the claim of John L. Lewis that the CIO had rejected his sudden unity proposal of last January, which was given to the press before it was shown to Pres. Murray.

"The sinister motives underlying that proposal has now been completely exposed. The actions and policies of that individual have now been made clear to the entire nation.

"They have been and continue to be directed toward one end—disruption and disunity within the ranks of labor and within the ranks of the people of the nation.

"Under the demagogic plea of unity, the President of the United Mine Workers of America has actually pursued a steady course of disunity through the puppet state of District 50.

"This puppet state has at all all times followed an ordered policy of raiding, harassment and sabotage of affiliates of the CIO, forcing them to divert time and attention from the essential task of organizing the workers of the nation for victory."

"The most recent step taken by the President of the United Mine Workers in withdrawing that organization from the CIO is part of that persistent policy of disruption," the CIO president added.

Ford Pact Runs 'For Duration'

Detroit, Nov. 7.—A new contract to stay in force "for the duration of the national emergency" was signed this week between the United Automobile Workers and the Ford Motor Co.

Murray, and Julius Emspak, of the Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

CIO-AFL Group Works For All-Out Mobilization

BOSTON, Nov. 7—CIO's work on the Combined Labor Victory Committee, which meets regularly with President Roosevelt, has been concentrated on pushing for total mobilization of our resources for total war, President Murray writes in a section of his report to the 5th CIO convention meeting here.

Already this work on the Victory Committee has resulted in three concrete gains, Murray says:

1. A very wholesome cooperative relationship between organized labor and the President."

2. It has "encouraged and developed a more widespread representation of labor in all government agencies and departments," which has directly aided total mobilization of national resources;

3. A greater unity on broad war issues between the AFL and the CIO, "which in turn has acted as a united force of all the people behind our Commander-in-Chief."

Murray's report traces the origin of the Combined Victory Committee, which was set up on the President's invitation in January of this year, and includes three representatives each from the CIO and the AFL. CIO members are President Murray, R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO and a vice-president of the CIO, and Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. Murray urges in the report that representatives of the Railroad Brotherhoods be added.

Discussion at committee meetings in the White House has dealt with such matters as wage stabilization, taxes, price control and rationing, war production and manpower, with the emphasis on the need for planning on a national scale to bring the full weight of our resources into the war against the Axis.

VOICE FOR LABOR

"Labor has not sought representation on the various government agencies and federal departments charged with the responsibility of the war program merely in order to protect any selfish or narow interest," Murray concludes.

"The formation and the work of the Combined Labor Victory Committee has been a great step forward toward the accomplishment of this objective."

U. S. Plants Bar Discrimination

Boston, Nov. 7—Discrimination in employment on the basis of race, creed, color or sex is prohibited under the labor policy covering some 100 munition plants owned by the government and privately operated.

Collective bargaining procedure for the protection of unions is also outlined in the policy which was worked out in consultation between representatives of the CIO, the AFL and the War and Navy, says Pres. Murray's report to the convention.

United Nations Labor Accord Held Big Need

BOSTON, Nov. 7—Labor cooperation between the trade unions of all the United Nations, a must for victory over the Axis, receives detailed attention in Pres. Murray's report to the fifth CIO convention meeting here.

The report stresses the fact that such international labor unity must include all the labor movements of the United Nations on an equal basis, and describes the vote of the CIO Executive Board at its September meeting, instructing CIO officers to "take steps toward securing closer cooperation and unity of action between the organized workers of America, including the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods, and the trade unions of all the United Nations, including the Latin-American nations."

REVIEWS TUC MOVES

This resolution, the report points out, was based on the actions of the CIO at the 1941 convention calling for close connections with free trade union movements throughout the world "to ensure the closest possible cooperation of the organized workers of all countries in the present struggle against Hitlerism."

In reviewing the history of attempts at international union cooperation, the report describes the moves of Sir Walter Citrine, secretary of the British Trades Union Congress, and the TUC Executive Council in failing to extend a direct official invitation to the CIO and the Brotherhoods to participate in the projected Anglo - American Trade Union Committee.

Instead, the report points out, the TUC stuck to its position that all such matters involving the CIO and the Brotherhoods were "within the province of the AFL," thus making the two organizations dependent on the AFL's will for participation.

This, the report says, was met with "strong disapproval," and a similar rejection of the trade unions of other United Nations was also protested by them.

MANY BENEFITS

Commenting on the benefits that would result from real international union cooperation, the report says: "To achieve these ends, it was necessary to include the labor movement of every country . . ."

CIO Legislative Work Helped Defeat Bills To Straitjacket Labor

BOSTON, Nov. 7—Establishment of the Legislative Department as a separate division in the national office in May, 1942, has made possible a more effective organization of CIO legislative work and laid the foundation for building a valuable legislative service, delegates to the convention were told in the president's report.

The department is under the direction of Nathan E. Cowan, who was appointed by the executive board to act as CIO legislative representative.

MAINTAIN CONTACTS

Contacts with members of Congress, especially with important members of various committees, as a means of checking on bills in which the CIO is concerned, and the building of a filing system giving the record of individual congressmen are among the jobs the department is doing.

An analysis of all bills introduced members of various committees, as a means of checking on bills in which the CIO is concerned, and the building of a filing system giving the record of individual congressmen are among the jobs the department is doing.

Cowan

in Congress and the action required is also being prepared. All the services are focused on the value of their use to CIO unions.

In asking for the cooperation of all CIO affiliates, the report says that the major task of the department is "better organization for the dissemination of information to all members of the CIO and for the marshalling of the views of these members in the form and manner which may best be brought to the attention of the members of Congress."

Since its formation, the department has tried to give information and guidance to CIO unions in connection with the recent elections.

"Despite the overwhelming importance of supporting win-the-war candidates, it was evident that labor in many areas had not succeeded in marshalling its fullest strength," the report points out. "In many areas our unions awakened too late; in others the scope and vigor of labor action was not proportionate to the true strength and importance of the work."

After listing some of the most important legislative developments of the past year, including anti-labor legislation, taxes, price and wage legislation, the poll tax, the Dies Committee and legislation for the protection of servicemen, the section on the Legislative Department concludes:

IMPROVE CONGRESS

"Congress is one of the most important instruments of our public life. It must be made to function as a true democratic institution reflecting the desires and aspirations of the American people. Unfortunately, Congress has not been made fully aware of the views of the people regarding the burning questions of the day.

"As a result those forces seeking to undermine and impede the war effort, both within and outside of Congress, have frustrated the attempts of the win-the-war forces within Congress to furnish the proper support to the President in carrying out the Nation's war program.

RAP POLL-TAXERS

Scoring the poll tax congressmen and others with even more sinister motives, the report declares that "the relationship between the people and Congress must not be restricted to election day.

"The people must continue to be interested in Congress and in its activities so that it remains an institution imbedded in the democratic traditions of the Nation.

Bright Spots Found After Nov. 3 Storm

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7—There were a few bright spots in the national election resul last week, though the figures generally gave promise of an even more conservative Cor gress than that which has frequently sniped at Pres. Roosevelt and attacked labor during the past two years.

Almost final returns showed the Democrats in nominal control of the House, despite loss of 42 seats to the Republicans. But union observers noted that the losing Democrats were in many cases men who had often opposed organized workers and the President.

The newspapers have also done some wishful thinking on the election results, judging from the fulsome editorials of the past two days. There was little indication that the people were abandoning the principles of the New Deal; for in this election the smallest number of voters in years exercised their franchise. The reactionaries capitalized on that fact.

THREE REASONS

Three explanations are offered for the lightness of the vote:

1. Over four million young men—of whom an admittedly high proportion are New Deal supporters—are in the armed forces. Few cast their ballots.

2. Hundreds of thousands of industrial workers have moved to defense jobs outside their community or outside their native state. Difficulties in registering or voting by mail undoubtedly cut down their voting strength.

3. Unions in many localities were slow to go all-out in the election campaign, to mobilize their members behind "win-war" candidates, and to conduct the necessary "house-to-house" leg work that gets out the voters.

SOME SUCCESSES

In some states—but not all—intensive union campaigns helped stem the reactionaries' winning streak. California labor, for instance, elected nine out of 11 Congressional candidates; in Wisconsin the CIO helped replace ultra-reactionary Gov. Julius Heil with Orville Loomis, Progresive; in New York, a number of candidates with Democratic-American Labor Party endorsement were returned to office; and in Maryland a united labor campaign succeeded in re-electing Gov. O'Conor and Rep. D'Alesandro (D.), and in electing to Congress Daniel Ellison, an extremely liberal, pro-labor Republican.

In California Lt. William Rogers, son of the late humorist, capitalized on enthusiastic labor support to defeat Leland Ford, one of the House's worst reactionaries. Jerry Voorhis kept his seat, defeating a race-baiting tory; while Rep. John Tolan, head of the House Migration Committee, and numerous other Sunshine State liberals won re-election.

Defeat of Gov. Culbert Olson by Earl Warren (R), a pal of Hoover, was a serious setback, but California workers turned out strong for Lt. Gov. Patterson, whose election was still in doubt at time of writing. And they elected Robert Kenny, head of the Natl. Lawyers Guild, as attorney-general.

NORTHWEST RESULTS

Washington's excellent House delegation lost three of its old members, but Reps. Coffee, Jackson and Magnuson, both strong progressives, were returned. In Montana, Sen. James Murray, firmly endorsed by labor, seemed ahead in his race, while two union-backed candidates for the House—Mike Mansfield and Rep. O'Conor—were successful.

Wisconsin CIO's active campaign paid dividends both with the defeat of Heil and the removal of four defeatists in the House. Elected were Sauthoff, Wasielewski, McMurray and Dilweg.

A highlight of the New York election was the defeat of Rep. Pfeifer in the 16th district by Joseph Fay, whose record was excellent when he served two years ago.

NORRIS LOSS SERIOUS

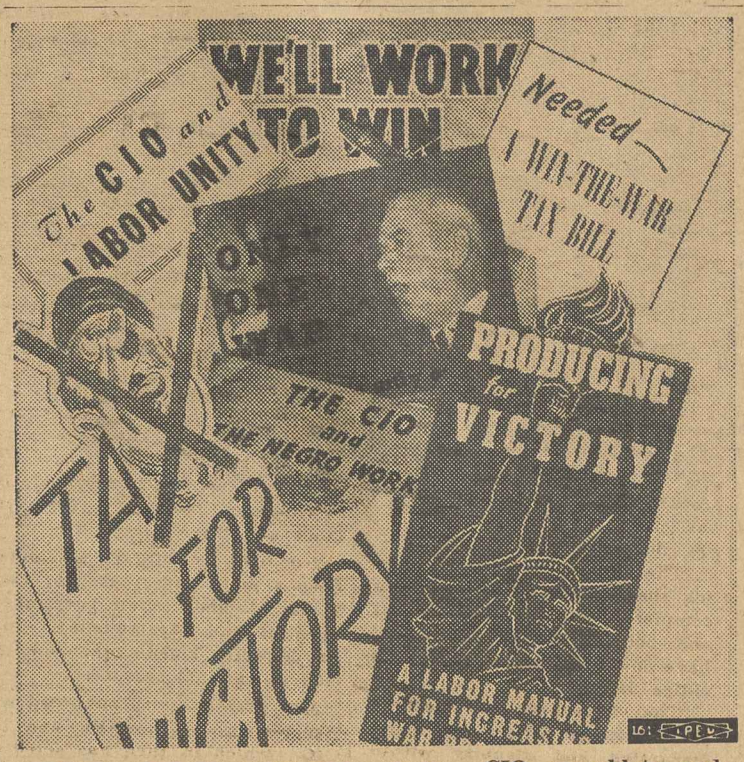
But generally the picture was gloomy. Perhaps the worse setback in the Senate was the defeat of George W. Norris of Nebraska, father of the TVA and veteran of a hundred battles for the people during his 40 years of service. His loss will be keenly felt by the common people, who recognized in him a loyal and devoted servant who never was fooled by the propaganda of reactionaries and corporate interests.

Prentice Brown of Michigan, Schwartz of Wyoming, and Smathers of New Jersey were others who were lost to the progressive cause in the Senate. And in the House a number of stalwart progressives—McKeough of Illinois, Casey of Michigan, Hook of Michigan, Koppleman and Dwons of Connecticut, and others—either were defeated or made unsuccessful races for the Senate.

400,000 ALP VOTE

Encouraging to New York State liberals was the 400,000 vote piled up by the American Labor Party for Dean Alfange in his three-cornered race for governor with John Bennett and Republican Thomas Dewey.

Labor support was divided between Alfange and the unsuccessful Democrat—but all agreed that Jim Farley's defiant refusal to let Sen. James Mead get the Democraic nomination threw the important New York post into conservative Republican hands. Mead, a tested liberal, would have appealed to all sections of labor.



TELL CIO MESSAGE: CIO pamphlets and leaflets were issued in nearly a million copies during the past year. Their message was based on CIO's contributions to helping win the war, seeking labor unity and fighting bad tax legislation. A few of them are shown above.

Roberts were presented with cigarette lighters and cases as tokens of the solidarity that CIO feels toward fellow workers in Britain. Speeches of Tanner and Roberts indicated clearly that workers in Britain want international unity of the workers of all the United Nations as a guarantee of victory in the World War against Nazi aggression.

PROTEST DELAYS

The CIO board protest against excessive delays in War Labor Board settlement of cases was directed at the administrative end of the WLB's work. These delays, Pres. Murray pointed out, were holding up settlement of grievances and were delaying the execution of many voluntary wage agreements.

Presidents of several CIO unions took the floor at the board meeting to recite a story of the WLB delays and that interferred with the war production drive of their organizations. Literally thousands of cases are now being held up due to WLB's inefficient methods of administration, it was revealed.

"It is the considered judgment of the CIO executive board that intelligent, constructive procedures should be immediately instituted by the War Labor Board to provide for speedy action on all these cases," Murray said at the end of the meeting.

"In the absence of such action it is feared that many collective bargaining agreements will collapse."

Murray also said that the CIO would ask the WLB to issue a directive calling for arbitration clauses in all contracts.

According to Vice President Wallace, the cost of manufacturing synthetic tires is so great that their production won't be continued after the war. For the duration, Wallace said recently, such tires will be manufactured "at any cost."

WPB's Output Failures Scored; CIO Renews Plea For Voice On Key Production Groups

BOSTON, Nov. 6—The WPB has "fallen behind in its job" of getting production for victory—and the reason can be found in the dollar-a-year men who act as informal ambassadors of good will for big business in the government agency.

That was the charge leveled by Pres. Murray in his report to the fifth CIO convention on the top U. S. production agency's year of work.

Another major shortcoming at WPB, the CIO spokesman reported, was the failure to give labor an equal or authoritative voice in the planning and execution of the government's war production program.

SAME AS PREDECESSORS

Largely as a result of this "big business as usual" atmosphere and the exclusion of labor representatives, WPB's work has been marked with the same failure, Murray said, as its short-lived predecessors—the NDAC, the OPM and the SPAB.

"First and foremost of the reasons for failure is that none of the agencies had an over-all conception of the production necessities of total war," the report declared.

"There has been a complete lack of understanding of what needs to be done if our production is to outstrip that of the Axis powers."

Murray's report quoted at length from a report of Sen. Truman's committee, which held extensive hearings during the year on the activities of many WPB agencies and sub-agencies.

$-A-YEAR STOOGES

"The dollar-a-year and w.o.c. (without compensation) men subconsciously reflect the opinions and conclusions which they formerly reached as managers of large interests with respect to government competition, with respect to taxation and amortization, with respect to the financing of new plant expansion, and with respect to the margin of profit which should be allowed on war contracts," the committee declared in a report cited by Pres. Murray.

Murray offered a sharp contrast between the "short-sightedness of business and dollar-a-year men" and the contributions of labor—"most particularly the CIO."

CIO'S OUTPUT PLANS

He recalled a half dozen union production plans that have been offered to the government as means of pushing the nation's output curve sharply upward. Among them were the Auto Workers conversion plan; the steel union's trio of plans for pooling of industrial resources, handling of scrap metal collections, and removal of bottlenecks in industry; the Oil Workers' 8-point suggestions for building greater petroleum output; the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers' extensive suggestions for increasing supplies of copper and other vital raw materials; and finally Pres. Murray's own Industry Council Plan, which was offered to the government late in 1940.

"Of all these other plans," Murray said, "only one—that of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union—was accepted, and that only in part. There has been stubborn resistance against the use of labor's ability to desire to be of help.

"UNWANTED PARTNER"

"The basic trouble in the war production program is that organized labor has been, and is being, treated as an unwanted partner. The past failures and the present inadequacies of the war production program can be largely attributed to this.

The CIO president quoted again from the Truman committee to butress his argument that labor's voice on the WPB has been kept down to a quiet whisper by the men who run the production agency.

The committee had praised the work of WPB labor advisory committees on the basis that they "have been constantly in the foreground in fighting for an adequate conversion program," and had noted that the success of labor-management production committees in American industry had spotlighted a "distinct and profitable contribution in joint activity to increase production.

Murray concluded: "If the top flight WPB officials favor labor-management cooperation out in the plants and work shops of the nation, then this same leadership should certainly provide this very necessary labor representation in the administrative agencies of the War Production Board."

'Keep Policies Flexible,' CIO Advises WLB

BOSTON, Nov. 7—The War Labor Board has assumed a position of "transcendent significance" in the nation's wartime economy, and organized labor must continue to see that flexibility is maintained in the handling of wages and working conditions, President Murray reported to the CIO convention.

"Efforts to substitute rigid war freezing formulas, or to deprive employes of the benefits of their collective bargaining gains or of the legislative gains of past years would affect adversely the morale and working efficiency of the war workers," he declared.

LABOR'S TASK

"In the interest of the war effort, organized labor must continue to insist on the maintenance of flexibility and adjustment through an agency such as the War Labor Board, in which labor is assured of constant adherence to the single objective—victory in the war—by virtue of the active participation of labor in the agency's administration."

Murray underlined the importance of the task of CIO members on the board and of CIO unions throughout the nation to "secure and maintain working conditions most effectively adjusted to bring about the maximum efficiency of our war production machinery."

The president's report recalled the emergency circumstances under which the Board's foundation was created—at a White House conference shortly after Pearl Harbor.

Murray noted that on many specific issues the CIO "has not been in agreement" with the Board's decisions, but, he added, "the CIO has felt from the start that the war effort requires the services of an agency such as the Board to make determinations in these fields."

SOME DISAGREEMENT

These disagreements, the report asserted, have been based on:

1. Wages—" . . . representatives of the CIO have felt that the Board has not recognized the extent to which the needs of war production require upward readjustment of wage levels to assure maximum productive efficiency of war workers through adequate food, clothing and medical budgets."

2. Union Security—"the CIO has urged unsuccessfully upon the Board a fuller appreciation of the value of the union shop as a guarantee of increased unity among workers, and as a guarantee of more effective war production through elimination of conflict and uncertainty."

NEW CONDITIONS

President Roosevelt's recent executive order giving the WLB general supervision over every wage agreement in the country has brought about a situation where "the wage of every working man is subject to virtually complete government control."

Under such conditions, Murray declared, organized labor has the responsibility to work unceasingly to keep war workers' living standards at the highest possible level so that production will not decrease because of lowered health or living conditions.

The board's record on cases involving union security has been spotty, the report indicated. Murray hailed maintenance-of-membership clauses in WLB orders as a "welcome recognition . . . of the special needs of the war emergency."

On the other hand, "its refusal in any case to grant a union shop . . . offers a serious threat to established collective bargaining relationships in many important industries."

The CIO leader reported satisfaction with the board's intervention in a case involving municipal workers in Newark, N. J., and called for a more definite policy of ordering reinstatement of fired union workers pending formal action by the Natl. Labor Relations Board in such a situation.

Murray Asks All-Out Move To Win War

all plan to end piecemeal nibbling at the tremendous problems raised by total war.

"To this end the CIO has advanced a program of national planning designed to achieve all-out production in the shortest possible time.

"In the Industry Council plan and in the various detailed plans offered by our affiliated unions, the CIO has presented the nation with a blueprint for victory production. Several of these plans have been accepted and put into practice either wholly or in part; much remains to be accomplished."

ORGANIZING FOR VICTORY

The same need to mobilize the whole strength of our country has prompted the CIO in continuing and expanding its union organizing drive as the backbone and directing force of the CIO's entire war drive, he added, declaring:

"In seeking protection for its members, the CIO has been moved by the same desire to hasten victory that motivates all our war effort. It is obvious that production workers cannot produce at top efficiency if they lack the means to ensure sufficient food, clothing and shelter for health and decency standards or if hours or conditions of work are allowed to remain at substandard levels."

Discussing the lack of planning on a national scale, President Murray pointed to the fact that despite advances in war production, "confusion still obtains because of the conflicting agencies, the lack of planning, and the absence of complete administrative control over all phases of our production program."

Among these he cited conflict between civilian agencies such as the WPB and the Army and Navy on the allocation of contracts and distribution of materials, the fact that many industries are still controlled by "fears of what may happen to their plants and their profits," and above all the failure to organize and solve the manpower crisis.

MANPOWER CONFUSION

"Business-as-usual" and "politics-as-usual" have greatly hampered economic stabilization as well, he charged. This has been most evident in the fact that rationing, price control, taxation and similar issues are left unsolved or are handled in a piecemeal and grudging fashion that delays and even sabotages a full solution.

To meet this situation, Murray called for "a centralized administrative control of all resources and economic policies of the nation," similar to the proposed "Office of War Mobilization" projected in a report of the Tolan Committee in Congress. This body, Murray says in describing the "splendid report" of the Tolan group, would head up all questions of "war supply, war manpower and economic stabilization."

As a further necessary step toward total mobilization for total war, Murray reaffirmed CIO demands for full labor representation on all war agencies, declaring:

"This is a people's war. To win it, we need the energy and skill of all our people in the nation's service.

"Labor in America knows the problems and stakes that are involved. Labor knows production. It knows organization. It knows the steps that are necessary to victory.

"To ignore labor in planning and in administering the policies of the war program is to leave untapped a vast national resource—the people."

FOR THE OFFENSIVE

Mobilization for total war is a great part of the story of victory, but it is not the whole, Murray indicated in closing the introductory section of his report.

"As a united people," Murray writes, "we of course impose the greatest confidence in our Commander-in-Chief and the leaders of the other United Nations. We cannot permit disruption or disunity to divide the United Nations. We cannot permit disruption or disunity to creep in among the people within our own nation."

For this reason, the CIO exposes and fights "the sinister forces within our own country that seek to divide and to hamper our war effort either by outright sabotage or by some subtle campaign of destructive innuendo and maneuvering.

"There are appeasers and agents of Hitler who seek to challenge the decisions of our leaders to put into effect the people's earnest desire for the supreme offensive—the second front—which must carry the United Nations to victory.

"The reasons are couched in terms of hesitation, weakness and defeatism. The motivating force of these appeasers is one of defeat for the United Nations . . . They are the ones who caused the hesitation and treason among the leaders in France which brought that nation to its present tragic status."

SMASH AXIS NOW

Paying tribute to the heroism of the Soviet army and people, whose deeds at Sevastopol and Stalingrad have shown that "there are no bounds which cannot be surpassed when the people know for what they are fighting," and to the courage and tenacity of the British and the Chinese, Murray concludes the first part of his report by saying:

"The United Nations are determined that the mainspring of the Axis forces must and will be smashed and destroyed through the combined military offensive of the Russians, the English and the Americans.

"We call upon our Commander-in-Chief to make any demand and any request of labor, and we pledge ourselves to give everything we can in fighting men, in production, in money and in patriotism to enable the United Nations to grasp the offensive and smash forward to an immediate military destruction of the fascist Axis."

War Brings New Legal Problems

Boston, Nov. 7—The nation's first year at war has brought new problems to labor and increased the work of the CIO Legal Dept., headed by Lee Pressman, Pres. Murray said in his report to the convention.

Creation of the War Labor Board and the setting of precedents in an almost entirely new field have required considerable attention by the department, and the increased importance of legislative work has required close cooperation between the legal and legislative divisions, Murray said.

Pressman

"As labor moves toward securing its full responsibility in and toward making its full contribution to the task of winning this war, the legal problems with which labor will have to concern itself may become as broad as the war effort itself," he declared.

(Other sections of the report on Legal Dept. activities are covered in stories on the War Labor Board, the NRLB, the Supreme Court and employment of aliens elsewhere in this issue.)

Pres. Murray's Discussion Of Second Front Issue

Following are excerpts from Pres. Murray's report in which the CIO leader discusses the problem of a land offensive against Nazi Germany:

The actual initiation of offensive action by the United Nations against the Axis forces presents a dual problem—military and political. As a united people we of course impose the greatest confidence in our Commander-in-Chief and the leaders of the other United Nations.

We cannot permit disruption or disunity to divide the United Nations. We cannot permit disruption or disunity to creep in among the people within our own nation.

The CIO is aware that there are sinister forces in the country that seek to divide and to hamper our war effort either by outright sabotage or by some subtle campaign of destructive innuendo and maneuvering. The CIO has vigorously fought against these elements, wherever they may be. We have not hesitated to oppose and fight such activities and tendencies wherever they are found.

QUISLINGS ARE ACTIVE

There are appeasers and agents of Hitler who seek to challenge the decisions of our leaders to put into effect the people's earnest desire for the supreme offensive—the second front—which must carry the United Nations to victory. The reasons offered are couched in terms of hesitation, weakness and defeatism. The motivating force of these appeasers is one of defeat for the United Nations. They are the Lavals, the Petains and Quislings of the United Nations. They are the ones who caused the hesitation and treason among the leaders in France which brought that nation to its present tragic status.

It has been Hitler's course of conduct to divide and conquer. His hordes have over-run one nation at a time while other nations who were on his list awaited the attack instead of joining in united action to smash the Axis agressors. This problem involves the political aspect of our war for survival.

There is an absolute necessity to divert enemy forces from Russia by an offensive against Germany, in order to assure victory for the United Nations. The obvious reason for this is that the overwhelming numbers of the German military forces are concentrated against Russia where they are being bled to death through tremendous losses of men and material. The United Nations are determined that the mainspring of the Axis forces must and will be smashed and destroyed through the combined military offensive of the Russians, the English and the Americans.

We call upon our Commander-in-Chief to make any demand and any request of labor and we pledge ourselves to give everything we can in fighting men, in production, in money and in patriotism to enable the United Nations to grasp the offensive and smash forward to an immediate military destruction of the fascist Axis.

Labor has pledged—and renews its pledge of—its complete and absolute support to our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Mexican Labor In Unity Move

Mexico City, Nov. 7 (ALN)—The National Council of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM), meeting here this week, voted to recommend that the CTM convention in February issue an invitation to "all labor organizations of the country to form a single labor federation, controlled by majority vote of its rank-and-file."

At the same time, it has become more feasible since the formation last June, on the initiative of the CTM, of the National Labor Council, composed of representatives of every Mexican labor group, who meet almost daily in the capital to settle labor and production questions.

The United Steelworkers of America have chalked up more victories, as follows: Ewald Iron, Louisville, Ky., with a vote of 183 for CIO to 31 for no union; Trenton plant of the American Steel and Wire Co., 546 for CIO to 40; Allegheny Ludlum, New York, with a vote of 748 for CIO to 290 for the independent union; Ambridge American Bridge, with a vote of 2600 for CIO to 238.

The American Newspaper Guild has chartered a new local at Elizabeth, N. J. Of the 67 eligible in all departments of the Elizabeth Daily Journal, they have 40 members. Steps to secure recognition and open collective bargaining are under way. The Guild is also asking for recognition preliminary to collective bargaining at the Chicago Sun and the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

A closed shop contract involving 35 office employes was signed between the Screen Office & Professional Employes Guild, UOPWA-CIO, and the DeLuxe Laboratories, largest film processing and developing laboratory in the east. In addition to the closed shop clause, the contract calls for an average salary increase of 15 per cent, seniority rights, etc. William Piehl, organizer, negotiated the contract.

Walter H. Harris, director of the Shoe Workers Organizing Campaign, advises that the contracts at Vincennes, Ind., Brown Shoe Co., and St. Clair, Mo., International Shoe, were ratified. Participants in this fine accomplishment are to be highly commended.

Regional Director A. J. Federoff of Pittsburgh reports the following election victories: Clearfield, Pa., No. 1, CIO, 195 to 0; Clearfield, Pa., No. 3, CIO 742 to 3; Barrett Local, Pa., CIO 121 to 8; Retort, Pa., CIO 81 to 0; Wallaceton, Pa., CIO 64 to 1; Lower Woodland, Pa., CIO 60 to 1.

UTILITY WORKERS MEET

The Utility Workers Organizing Committee met in first constitutional conference in the City of Pittsburgh on October 31 and November 1, 1942. The union this past year shows a splendid growth. They are now engaged in two major drives, i. e., Utility Power Company, Boston, Mass., and the Detroit Edison Co., Detroit, Mich. A constitution was adopted and an executive board of seven members was selected by the conference to direct the affairs of the organization.

Harold J. Straub was appointed to serve as chairman of the organization, as well as organizational director. Delegates were enthusiastic in their support of President Murray and the CIO and declared for all-out support to our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, and the nation in its war efforts.

This week delegates from all over the United States and Canada will be in attendance at the CIO national convention in Boston, where an enthusiastic, harmonious convention is expected, and policies will be laid down to intensify organizing activities in support of the all-out war effort and all matters that deal with this question and labor's role.

Radio, Papers, Leaflets:

CIO's Victory Message Carried To Millions

BOSTON, Nov. 7—CIO's publicity and public relations work has been keyed to the war and towards placing before the American public the tremendous contribution of the nation's five million CIO union members and their families.

That was the gist of Pres. Murray's report to the CIO convention on the CIO Publicity Dept., directed by Len De Caux.

Highlighted in the report were:

1. Radio broadcasting — both through speeches of CIO union leaders and through the regular fortnightly Labor For Victory program sponsored by CIO on NBC's coast-to-coast network.

2. The CIO NEWS, which has made "some marked changes in its editorial concentration and news coverage during the past year."

3. Pamphlets and leaflets, all devoted to helping win the war, which were printed in about 1,000,000 copies during the 12-month period.

The war victory theme, Murray noted, has been predominant in "every CIO publication, every news release, every radio program and every other kind of publicity and public relations activity.

EDITORS' CONFERENCE

While campaigning through its own publications against the Tory propaganda wave that threatened all American labor last spring, the Publicity Dept. called a conference upon instructions from the Executive Board, of 60 CIO editors and publicity directors.

The conference, which heard speeches by numerous government information executives, drew up resolutions calling upon the labor press to meet hostile propaganda with an offensive of its own; urged cooperation with all patriotic groups to stimulate labor enthusiasm for the war effort; and called upon the nation's daily press to "convert itself into a war industry which will be dedicated to the defeat of the Axis."

CIO's ability to reach large masses of people was considerably improved, the report indicated, when together with the AFL it worked out plans for the Saturday night NBC programs. Aired for the first time last April, the program is now broadcast Sunday afternoons at 1:15 p. m. EWT to a large list of stations throughout the country.

Designed to inform the public of labor's war efforts in the most entertaining and dramatic manner possible, speeches have been kept to a minimum on the CIO programs, and the best available professional radio talent is employed for playlets and music to attract the attention of listeners.

Response to these programs indicates their wide popularity with a huge national audience, Murray commented, made up of farmers, housewives, business and professional people and others in all walks of life.

The CIO president's report noted that radio speeches have been booked for special programs where the organization's voice on matters of legislative interest or on the broader issues of the war have been brought to millions of homes.

LAUDS THE CIO NEWS

"The national weekly paper of the CIO, The CIO NEWS, has continued to be one of the most effective publicity media of the movement," Murray added, and it has continued to be an effective campaigner for the CIO organizational legislative programs, as an interpreter of CIO policies, and as chief supplier of news about CIO to union members and the public.

During the year The CIO NEWS has added coverage of news of foreign labor movements, gathered by Allied Labor News, and devoted greater relative space to governmental war activities affecting American workers.

"The importance of all union councils and locals giving their full support to The CIO NEWS cannot be too strongly urged," Murray's report said. "The CIO NEWS does not duplicate or compete with other CIO publications. And the service it can render to the CIO and all its unions is in direct proportion to the extent of its circulation throughout the membership of the CIO."

CIO pamphlets, circulated in quantities of close to a million, have supplemented the Publicity Department's radio and newspaper media. They have included policy statements on national unity, the victory drive, production, taxes, Negro workers and other legislative and economic matters.

Tanner Calls U. S. Output Victory Key

By C. W. FOWLER

Boston, Nov. 5 — American production plus an offensive against Nazi Germany are the decisive factors that will win the war in the quickest possible time, Jack Tanner, president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union of Britain said today.

Tanner, who attended the CIO Executive Board meeting here on a personal basis, before the convention, told of his trip to such American war production centers as Detroit and his observations on America's war effort.

U. S. OUTPUT VITAL

"American war production will be a decisive factor in winning the war," he said. "I say will be advisedly, because American production is not yet up to the maximum it can and will reach.

"American workers are not yet working at the speed of British war workers. This is no reflection on American workers, who know the issues in this war as well as any others. It simply stems from the fact that British workers are nearer to the war, have had a better chance to realize just what this war means to them."

Asked about the work of the "Shop Stewards Council" in Britain, which does the same job on production that our labor-management committee does here, Tanner replied to the effect that they were the backbone of speeding the war production drive in England.

The council is not an official body, he explained, and is not recognized formally by the Trades Union Congress, but its work is widely effective throughout the basic munitions industries in Britain.

BRITISH WOULD APPROVE

"Direct affiliation of the CIO to the Anglo-Soviet trade union committee, if it were to be proposed, would meet with the hearty approval of the British workers," he said. "Our people feel that it is absolutely necessary to have the CIO fully represented in every international unity move that is made.

"The CIO is a major section of the American labor movement. As such it must be represented in any projected move toward world labor cooperation."

Potofsky Speaks At U. S.-Soviet Conference

New York, Nov. 7—Jacob Potofsky, vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will be a featured speaker at panel on "production for war needs and the role of trade unions" scheduled for tomorrow's session of the Congress of American Soviet Friendship here.

Potofsky will appear with Harvey W. Brown, president of the AFL Intl. Association of Machinists, and others. Chief speaker at the main meeting will be Sen. Claude Pepper of Florida. CIO Pres. Philip Murray endorsed the Congress last week.

Auxiliaries Head Hails Year's Gain

By FAYE STEPHENSON

CWA National President

"Our country is now engaged in a struggle, the outcome of which will decide whether, as a national and as individuals—we live or we die. Every American must therefore be made fully aware of his grave responsibilities and his duty to fight for Victory. That is the task of labor—the men and women on the production line and their families at home."

We in the CIO Auxiliaries recognize the truth of this statement of President Roosevelt. We have been trying to do our part on the home front this year at the same time that we have been preparing our members to take their places on the production lines.

During this past year the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries has mobilized the women to support the CIO program for extended rationing and effective enforcement of price control regulations. In the recent election campaigns it stimulated auxiliaries in many parts of the country to campaign among women to register and vote for CIO endorsed win-the-war candidates.

On legislative measures vital to the winning of the war, CIO testimony has been supported by testimony from the CWA-CIO and pressure on Congressmen and Senators from thousands of auxiliary members. In the civilian defense and war activities of our communities, auxiliary members have given unstinting service which has won them representation on community committees of all kinds.

The soldier welfare work of our unions has benefited from the devotion of the auxiliaries who have maintained contact with our union men in service and their families at home.

GROWING ROLE

The nation's increasing need for women in war industry increases the importance of our auxiliaries as schools for unionism where wives, sisters, mothers, and daughters of union men are equipped for active union membership.

It is serving, too, to stimulate programs for providing child care and other community facilities which will enable women needed in industry to take jobs without sacrificing the welfare of their families. As the proportion of women in the ranks of labor increases, the importance of the CIO auxiliaries increases too.

They have the twofold responsibility of preparing women who enter industry for participation in the ranks of organized labor and for rallying those who remain in the home behind the CIO program for Victory.

CIO Women Back FDR on Registration

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Some sort of national registration of women for work in our nation's all-out production program seems to be in the cards. Both President Roosevelt and Manpower Chief McNutt have spoken of it as an early possibility. The policy statement on recruitment and training of women, issued recently by the War Manpower Commission on the advice of the Women's Advisory Committee, emphasizes that the present number of gainfully employed workers, both men and women, is inadequate to fill even the immediate requirements of the war production program.

The CIO Auxiliaries have long been in favor of registration of women. We see it as a necessary part of the war effort. But we do want to point out that simply registering women won't make it possible for them to go to work in the necessary numbers.

RESPONSIBILITY AT HOME

Why don't women take jobs? Principally because they have home responsibilities that make it very difficult for them to go to work. Many of them have children—and there isn't a community in the country now where adequate facilities exist for the care of children of working mothers. That's just as true of school-age children as it is of youngsters under six.

It means that unless greatly extended facilities are provided quickly, with government funds available with a minimum of red tape, milions of women can't take jobs, without constant worry over their children's welfare.

Even if you limit appeals to women with no children under 14, as the manpower policy statement recommends, you haven't solved the problem.

All over the country there's a serious increase in juvenile delinquency.

We need a nation-wide recreation program to meet the needs of adolescents left without supervision because mother has gone to work.

We need thoughful planning in each community to involve these young people in the civilian defense program so that they will feel that they too have a job in winning the war.

Just because a woman has no children, it isn't fair to think of her as unemployed. She has the meals and household tasks and unless facilities are available to take some of those burdens off her shoulders, she isn't going to add eight hours in a plant to her responsibilities.

BROADCAST SET

These questions will be the subject of a broadcast held in connection with the Second National CIO Auxiliary Conference in Boston from 3:15 to 3:30 p.m. Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 10, over the Mutual Broadcasting System. Women all over the country will be able to hear Faye Stephenson, National President of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, discuss the need for women in industry with Margaret Hickey, Chairman of the Women's Advisory Committee of the War Manpower Commission, and Sec.-Treas. Eleanor Nelson of the United Federal Workers.

Auxiliary Meets To Examine War Role

BOSTON, Nov. 7—Mobilization of women to help win the war will form the basis for the 4-day conference of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries scheduled to be held in the Statler Hotel next week simultaneously with the national CIO convention.

With officers' reports showing a year of wartime growth in work and membership, delegates from all sections of the nation will plan CWA's second year with an eye to registration of women for war work, promoting adequate community facilities to allow their effective induction in factories and protection of all sectors of the home front.

Keynoted by the conference call, the meeting of wives, sisters, mothers and daughters of CIO unionists will lay plans "to help our men win the war and to keep our democracy safe and strong for their return." Main topics of discussion will include "Women in Industry," "War Activities," and "Consumers Programs." CIO President Philip Murray tops the list of speakers, with Mildred Osbourn, Negro union member from Chicago, who is now in the WAACS, the most recent confirmation for the speakers' list.

Others who will address the conference include: Margaret Hickey, chairman of the Women's Advisory Committee of the War Manpower Commission; Florence Kerr, assistant to Brig. Philip B. Fleming of War Manpower Commission; Dorothy Bellanca, ACWA and member of Women's Advisory Committee of War Manpower Commission; Mary Pond, Labor Adviser of the American Red Cross; Don Sullivan, regional director for the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, and Edith Christianson of the Office of Price Administration.

NEW COUNCILS

Eight new state auxiliary councils and organizing committees have been formed since the first CWA conference last fall, the officers' reports show, with the figure for affiliated international auxiliary now 12.

Mrs. Philip Murray will be guest of honor at a luncheon Tuesday at the hotel. "Father Wins the Peace," a Treasury Department skit, will be presented by the War Savings Staff.

Administrative officers of CWA will precede delegates into the convention city to work with the Boston Conference Committee, headed by Mrs. Annette Sullivan and Mrs. Ann Prosten. Mrs. Faye Shephenson, president of CWA, will chair the sessions. Mrs. Julia Katz, CWA director, and Mrs. Eleanor Fowler, CWA secretary-treasurer, both of Washington, will meet with Mrs. Stephenson and the executive board on Sunday afternoon for final check-up on conference arrangements.

FDR Aide Turns Heat On U.S. 'Cliveden Set'

MOLINE, ILL., Nov. 7—A special assistant to President Roosevelt this week launched a scorching attack on "America's Cliveden set of appeasers" before a united labor meeting here.

It was felt that the speaker, Eugene B. Casey, presumably had FDR's O.K. before delivering the address, which was one of the sharpest yet made by a government speaker against disrupters and defeatists.

The meetig at which Casey spoke was sponsored by CIO, AFL and Railway Brotherhood locals.

'CARP AND CRITICIZE'

"For a pitifully short period after Pearl Harbor, these people (the appeasers) joined in the great call for national unity. Now, once again, they are beginning to carp and criticize, to hound and harass. I wonder if they realize that they are playing Hitler's game by trying to undermine our confidence in our own government . . .", Casey said.

"Christ had his Judas; Caesar his Brutus; Charles the First his Cromwell; George Washington his Benedict Arnold; Norway its Quisling; France her Laval; England her Cliveden Set; the Philippines its Aguinaldo; and the United States—well, for the present, let's just call them the American Cliveden group.

AMERICAN QUISLINGS

"Yes, we are not without our American brand of Quislings, Lavals and Aguinaldos. Their parade ground is the over-stuffed drawing room; their battleground, the ultra-provided dining room and their military weapons, vicious, scurrilous, treasonable distortions of fact and unmitigated prevarications that serve only the purposes of the Axis powers."

At the same time Casey voiced eloquent praise of labor's wartime role.

"The labor movement is strong in America because it was built on a sound structure of service—a good economy—and humanitarianism," the Presidential assistant added.

LABOR CAN BE PROUD

"American labor has every reason to be proud of its vital part in the war effort. Labor as a whole has risen above its family quarrels and gone all-out to bring production to almost unheard-of peaks, higher by far than the original estimates.

"The number of man hours lost by strikes has been wonderfully small as compared to the number of war workers. This is because labor knows only too well that it is fighting the battle of production in order to preserve the right to strike for its children's children."

8-Point Plan On Housing Hits Failures

Boston, Nov. 7—A set of recommendations for a Public Housing Program was drawn up last January by the CIO Committee on Housing.

This committee, which consists of presidents of international unions headed by President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers delegated its powers to a sub-committee, subject to the direction of Chairman Thomas of the full committee, President Murray stated in his report to the convention.

OFFER SUGGESTIONS

In its program the Housing Committee recommended:

1. Support for the Mutual Home Ownership Plan.

2. Support for the U. S. Housing Authority and municipal housing authorities in general with certain reservations and strongly advocates program of permanent housing during the war.

3. Sound techniques of prefabrication.

4. Endorsement of competitive bidding methods of awarding contracts.

NEED FOR MERGER

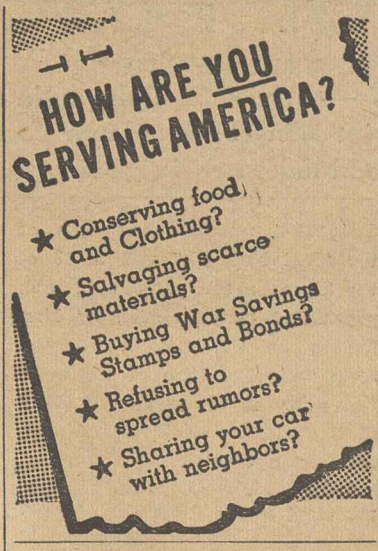
5. Merging of existing federal housing agencies into one.

6. Exploring the possibilities of financing at two per cent or less.

7. Construction of integrated communities as against haphazard individual shelter, and the development of cooperative union projects.

8. Integration of industrial planning techniques with the housing program in a long-range program of decentralization of both industrial plants and residential sections.

The report recalls that after the views of the CIO on the need for a complete re-organization of existing housing agencies and the establishment of one unified agency were presented to President Roosevelt by Chairman Thomas in February, one body, the National Housing Agency, was set up to replace the long list of housing agencies.



Loyal Aliens Deserve Help, Says Murray

Boston, Nov. 7.—Steps taken to protect workers loyal to American institutions but unfortunately born in a country now at war with the United Nations are outlined in the President's report to the convention. The report also discusses the problem of false charges of disloyalty being leveled against American-born union members.

"The CIO has fought throughout this year against any efforts to deprive our industrial plants of the benefits of the labor power of the large and thoroughly loyal alien portion of our population and against any efforts to warp or thwart our fight against fascism or against fascist agents by misdirecting our anti-espionage and anti-sabotage efforts against union men," stated the report.

CONFERENCES HELD

"A number of conferences have been held with representatives of government agencies in an effort to assure the adoption of directives and procedures which would serve the purpose of preventing espionage and sabotage, and not the purpose of arousing anti-alien hysteria, depriving loyal aliens of jobs and attacking loyal American citizens," it said.

"At least a partial solution could be arrived at if the War and Navy departments were to relax their insistence upon a separate approval for the same alien each time he is placed on a new job."

To meet the problem faced by those aliens who are denied the necessary permit for employment on a job, the report recommends that such aliens be informed of the charges against them or the nature of the doubts as to their loyalty, which are kept secret under present procedure.

NLRB's Activities Swing To Polls; CIO Raps Board's Winking at Phoney Pacts

BOSTON, Nov. 7—Accelerated by the war situation, a shift in the emphasis of CIO cases before the National Labor Relations Board has become clearly noticeable during the past year, President Murray declared in his annual report.

The trend, he said, is away from discrimination and unfair practice cases and is moving steadily in the direction of using the NLRB for determining representation units and establishing bargaining agents through elections.

The Board's statistics show that in the second quarter of 1942—the last period for which complete figures are available—"a larger number of votes were cast in Board elections than in any equivalent period in its history."

CIO WINS MOST POLLS

Proof that the CIO continues to be a favorite of American workers was seen in the election results. During the second quarter, CIO unions "won the largest percentage of elections in CIO history," Murray recounted.

CIO won 47.3 per cent of the polls; AFL 32.3 per cent, and independents 9.6 per cent.

Unfortunately, the NLRB has continued to yield to the pressure of employer groups and "the top leadership of the AFL" in its determination of policy, Murray said. Collusive contracts with the AFL, particularly in the shipyard industry, have been frequent and CIO unions have "experienced extreme difficulty" in inducing the NLRB to act.

Nevertheless the NLRB continues to be "of substantial importance," the CIO leader's report declared, "but it would be unfortunate if pressure and power politics, rather than the objective facts of collective bargaining situations" were to set the guiding principles in determining bargaining units, he added.

The NLRB has a legal duty, President Murray concluded, to protect the right of workers to the independent choice of their union.

"This is a right which must not be permitted to be defeated by collusive arrangements under which employers impose by contract a labor organization with which they have made a deal without regard to the desires of the employes. The CIO must continue to fight to protect the right of American workers to belong to unions of their own choice. . . ."

Insurance Men Go CIO in Jersey

Newark, N. J., Nov. 7—In its third successful statewide election in the insurance field, the CIO Office & Professional Workers last week swung to victory as bargaining agent of over 1,400 agents of the Prudential Life Insurance Co. in New Jersey.

The UOPWA garnered 786 votes to 617 against. As a result the union now represents more than 6,000 Prudential agents in Jersey, New York and Michigan.

Petitions for elections among agents of the company in Massachusetts and Washington have already been filed,

CIO Broadcast Urges Unity With Americas

Los Angeles, Nov. 7—Accent on unity of Latin-American and U. S. workers and on the desire of both for a second front against the Nazis in Europe marked this week's CIO Labor for Victory radio show, narrated by Orson Welles plus a wind-up commentary by Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers.

Taking the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and its close relations with Latin-American workers as a theme, Welles told of the work the CTAL (Confederation of Latin-American Workers) is doing to mobilize our sister Republics for total war against the Axis.

"Here at home, we who would win this war quickly must applaud any efforts which further the unity of the Americas," Welles said, "for out of labor unity in the Americas will come national unity among the Americas; and out of a strong hemispheric unity will come the groundwork for a still stronger unity of all the United Nations, to win the war and win the peace."

CIO Again Denies Lewis' Phoney Debt Claim

Boston, Nov. 7—Pres. Murray reiterated in his annual report that advances made to the CIO by the United Mine Workers during the period in which John L. Lewis headed the organization "did not constitute a debt of the CIO."

Murray recalled that the CIO Executive Board at its June meeting had heard a "comprehensive report" on the alleged debt. The Board expressed the opinion at that time that UMWA members "did not and do not consider the advances which they made to enable other and less fortunate workers to achieve economic freedom through union organization to be a debt to be repaid in dollars and cents."

Call for Joint Co-Operation To Speed Shipping to Allies

BOSTON, Nov. 7—Full use of existing shipping for war supplies, as urged by the CIO Maritime Committee, requires complete cooperation by government and industry with the CIO maritime unions, and full recognition of the role they play in speeding shipments, President Murray said in the maritime section of his report to the CIO convention here.

"If such full cooperation were forthcoming, both on a national scale and throughout all United Nations' shipping," Murray said, "we would have all the shipping required to bring in raw materials and to transport men and supplies to all fronts where we elect to attack the Axis.

"In brief, this full utilization of present shipping would remove all barriers to our taking the offensive against the enemy."

HEROIC WORK

Murray's report praised the heroic work of seamen of the Natl. Maritime Union in "sailing ships despite murderous attacks from Axis submarines and planes," which has been publicly recognized by Pres. Roosevelt and other national war leaders.

Despite this heroism, the report points out, the CIO maritime unons have had to fight off attacks on their members by "short-sighted government officials, acting in collaboration with anti-democratic groups among the shipowners, to blacklist active union men for alleged 'subversive' activities."

These attacks have been halted by CIO and maritime union work in the government agencies, but not before valuable shipping time was lost.

VALUABLE AID

The report also cited the valuable work of the CIO Fishermen and Longshoremen and Warehousemen, who have made major contributions toward the needed full utilization of existing shipping for the offensive and victory.

It concludes by saying that union members "are prepared for all tasks that are required in taking and sustaining the offensive against the enemy."

Ministers, Unions Ask FCC Bar Radio License To Pal of Fascists

By JOSEPH WALSH

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7 — Ministers of the anthracite community of Wilkes-Barre have joined with a joint Win-The-War labor committee, composed of CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood delegates, in getting the Federal Communications Commission to check on the fitness of Atty. Robert J. Doran, American Legion and Red Cross executive of Wilkes-Barre, to take over Radio Station WBAX.

In the voluminous record of testimony taken before FCC Examiner Harrison Slaughter for five days last week appeared and reappeared the names of Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, Robert Edmonson and Eugene Sanctuary, with all of whom Doran had contact within the last five years, the union committee charged. The trio are among 28 now under induictment for conspiracy to interfere with the morale of the armed forces.

ACTIVE ON MANY FRONTS

Wilkes-Barre's Ministerial Association charged that Doran displayed book-burning tendencies; interfered with a public library's choice of books made available for reading, including books on labor relations; used his Legion position as chairman of the Americanization committee to prevent public meetings, and attacked prominent Protestant pastors as "Communist-dominated" because they had advocated participation in peace movements in 1937.

A case history of how a vigilante-minded Citizens' Committee functions to oppose labor unions was presented on the last day of the FCC hearing.

FCC Counsel Marcus Cohn presented in evidence minutes of Doran's Wyoming Valley Citizens' Committee which operated in 1938 and 1939 during strikes of the American Newspaper Guild, CIO; Retail Clerks' Union, AFL, and the Teamsters' Union and Bakers' Union, AFL.

KLAN AGENT HELPS

Doran identified a list of 30 allegedly subversive Wilkes-Barre citizens as having been handed to him by one of the Citizens' Committee investigators, Paul M. Winters, identified as a former Ku Klux Klan organizer in Philadelphia.

Counsel Cohn termed grouping of names by Winters and Doran as a "blacklist against employment of workers who are liberal and union-minded."

Doran's denial that he used Mrs. Dilling's "Red Network" as a basis for his speeches or activities as a Legion official was contradicted by his admission from the stand that handwriting on a list of Osterhout Librarian Eaton's recommended books on labor relations was his own.

Counsel Cohn had him refer to designated numbers on pages of the "Red Network" and in 15 of the 20 cases, the authors on such pages had been branded by Mrs. Dilling as Communists. Among them were Dr. John R. Commons University of Wisconsin; Dr. Paul H. Douglas, University of Chicago, and Upton Sinclair.

Rabbi Louis Levitski, Newark, president of the Rabbinical Assembly of the United States, formerly in Wilkes-Barre; Rev. Dr. Martyn D. Keeler, pastor of Wiikes-Barre's oldest Presbyterian church; Mayor Charles N. Loveland of Wilkes-Barre and Joseph M. Walsh, Newspaper Guild vice-president and chairman of the joint labor win-the-war committee, all took the stand to contradict Doran's denials that he had been a baiter of labor, liberals and minority groups.

DEFENDED BY LEWIS STOOGE

Only labor group to stand up for the local bigot was District 50, the catch-all unit of the United Mine Workers. Ora Gasaway, district official, wailed that the probe of the fascists' pal was "persecution," described the investigation as "un-American" and concluded that the FCC's inquiry was "a direct threat to the democracy we are fighting to preserve."

CIO Shellacks Lewis Unit In D. C. Poll

Washington, Nov. 7—District 50, John L. Lewis' catch-all unit, took an awful shellacking this week in an NLRB election among employes of seven Washington paving firms.

The men, who had been members of the United Construction Workers until that organization was disbanded, sought to reaffiliate with the CIO, but agents of District 50, United Mine Workers, argued that they were members of the Lewis outfit.

The answer was provided in the NLRB election, which found District 50 receiving exactly 19 of the 499 votes cast. The CIO received 223, the AFL 185 and no union 61. With the CIO 17 votes short of a majority, the NLRB will have to order a run-off election.

Charges 'Hush' On Telegraph Breakdown

Washington, Nov. 7—A serious breakdown in the telegraph system, causing long delays in vital war messages to such leaders as Gen. MacArthur while racing news zips over the wires is being concealed in a suppressed report made to the Federal Communications Commission, according to Joseph Selly, president of the American Communications Assn., CIO.

Selly's charge was made in a letter to FCC Chairman James L. Fly, in which Selly said: "Ugly rumors are circulated to the effect that the company lobby in Washington is exercising its influence to prevent the report from reaching the public.

"We urge that the FCC and the Board of War Communications reassure the public by the immediate publication of the findings of the report and by the adoption of a program to remedy the situation."

Selly pointed out that CIO Pres. Philip Murray had told of the delay in messages to MacArthur and to vital war plants while racing news was cleared at business-as-usual speed as far back as August.

He urged adoption of the ACA's five point program to gear the telegraph industry to war needs. This program was presented at the time that Pres. Murray made the original charges of "business-as-usual" in August.

Charge Bias In Pay Waiver Exemptions

Boston, Nov. 7—CIO's Executive Board recommended last spring that affiliated unions give up premium pay for Saturday and Sunday work performed in the middle of a 40-hour work week in the hope of spurring war production and forcing round-the-clock activity in war factories, Pres. Murray noted.

Unfortunately, he added, the sacrifice was not uniformly adopted by affiliates of "rival organizations," and in some instances they sought to "undermine the leadership" of the CIO by refusing to waive the premium pay provisions.

Senate Labor Group Backs CIO Proposal For Manpower Parley

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7—President Murray's call for a national conference on manpower, to bring labor, industry and government together to work out an overall solution of the manpower and war production problem, got a quick response from the Senate Labor Committee before which it was made in Murray's testimony late last week.

The response came in the form of a letter from Committee Chairman Sen. Elbert Thomas of Utah, who wrote to President Roosevelt presenting Murray's proposal.

MURRAY'S SUGGESTION

Murray's proposal said in part: "I propose, therefore, that this committee request the President of the U. S. to convoke within the next few days a conference of selected capable leaders, to be attended by representatives of Congress, the government, management, labor and agriculture.

"I suggest that the President be requested to convoke this conference committee of the nation to formulate plans for the establishment of the necessary machinery for the integration of our procurement, production and manpower agencies and resources under a unified directing and planning body."

Murray reminded the Committee of the conference headed by Sen. Thomas that worked out means for voluntary settlement of possible labor disputes immediately after Pearl Harbor, which resulted in the creation of the War Labor Board and the 100 per cent record of no cuts in war production due to disputes.

URGES PLANNING

Strong emphasis was put on national planning in Murray's testimony, which cited the work of the Tolan Committee as an example of the correct approach to the problem of war production, of which manpower is a basic part. Concluding his testimony, he said:

"Our nation has come far since it first turned its attention to the problem of production for war.

Additional testimony was presented during the week by Van A. Bittner, assistant to the President of the United Steelworkers, Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and a vice-president of the CIO, John Green, president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, Dan Driessen, representing the American Communications Assn., James Wishart, research director of the United Automobile Workers of America, and Russ Nixon, Washington representative of the UERMW.

All these witnesses stressed the lack of national overall planning as the major source for the manpower crisis, pointing out how planning had been lacking in their particular industries. All of them criticized the idea of attempting a solution to the problem simply by "passing a law" without getting at the root of the trouble.

CIO WITNESSES APPEAR

Speaking for the USA-CIO, Bittner pointed to the fact that steel output in many branches is not up to full capacity, and declared:

"On the basis of our experiences, therefore, the members of the USA-CIO join the plea of President Murray that our manpower difficulties be recognized as difficulties of overall production planning and organization.

"We urge that for purposes of unified production planning a central agency is required to integrate our entire economic structure, our procurement agencies, our war production machinery, our manpower agencies, into a single machine for winning this war."

John Green's testimony pointed up his demand for a national planning agency by citing the fact that more production was being secured from maipower in England in shipbuilding yards than in this country.

Union Heads Greet USSR On 25th Anniversary

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—Greetings to the Soviet Union from officials of the CIO and Railroad Brotherhoods and from cultural, religious, political and other government leaders mark the anniversary issue of "Soviet Russia Today" devoted to the 25th anniversary of the founding of the USSR.

S. H. Dalrymple, president of the United Rubber Workers and a vice-president of the CIO, wrote to the magazine: "Peoples of the peace-loving nations must discard old prejudices and suspicions if we are to win the war against the Axis and the dark reactionary forces it has organized."

Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and also CIO vice-president, declared: "It is my hope that the peoples of the United Nations will move closer in understanding and action, especially that the labor unions of this country and our allies will form an alliance looking toward that 'bond of kinship uniting working people of all nations' envisioned by Abraham Lincoln."

Praising "Russia's gallant fight against invasion," A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said: "Even to the most weak and faltering, the battle of Stalingrad has demonstrated to the world that this is a people's war, and that the people shall win."

Other messages were received from such leaders as Albert Einstein, Jesse Jones, Mayor Kelly of Chicago, Donald Nelson, Dean Robbins of the General Theological Seminary of N. Y., and Bishop Hobson of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

CONVENTION SCENE: This was the stage of the fifth CIO convention in Boston as Asst. Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard called for ever-increasing production to back up the boys in uniform. Seated on the platform are national CIO leaders and members of the committee that acted as Bard's escort Delegates also heard Sen. Pepper and Under Sec. of War Patterson.

Strong Stand on Discrimination Voted At Parley

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—The uncompromising position of the CIO on the important problem of discrimination against Negroes and other workers on the basis of race, religion or country of origin was brought out strongly in a lively discussion on the floor and in a resolution passed at the CIO convention.

Willard S. Townsend and John L. Yancey of the United Transport Service Employes of America in speeches from the floor both called for firm and immediate action to stop the discrimination against Negro workers in many war production plants.

Yancey agreed that it is necessary for the CIO to reiterate its definite policies against discrimination but urged that "we ought to get away from platitudes and take out of the framework of words this reiteration of our policies and put it into real and practical action."

He asked that the resolution against discrimination submitted by the Resolutions Committee be recommitted for strengthening by the addition of facts submitted and accepted by the CIO executive board.

Pres. Philip Murray explained that the resolution before the convention implemented that adopted by the executive board and "will in no way preclude the possibility of the officers of the organization or the members of the board from exercising their judgment from time to time between conventions in progressively moving forward in the field of racial discrimination."

Later Pres. Murray called attention to the fact that the CIO is the only labor organization "anywhere in this country that is giving intelligent consideration to the problem of racial discrimination."

DESCRIBES FEPC WORK

John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils and a member of the Fair Employment Practice Committee set up by President Roosevelt, told of the work of this committee, and said that "at least a substantial beginning" had been made. He reported that Paul McNutt of the Manpower Commission had assured the committee that there would be an adequate field staff to handle complaints made to the committee.

Ferdinand Smith, delegate from the National Maritime Union, told the convention that more than 300 Negroes were among the 2,000 members of the NMU who had lost their lives since Pearl Harbor in ship bombings.

"These people died that America might remain democratic," he said. "Does that mean that we are to have two standards of democracy in these United States? I say no, and I say America can call herself great only when she recognizes the rights of all minorities in our midst and particularly that very important minority of the 13,000,000 Negroes who are entitled to all the rights and privileges of this nation."

Urging that some agency be set up which "will do more than give lip service" to opposing discrimination, Townsend of the United Service Employes pointed out the "Negro represents manpower in this country that is very necessary to the winning of the war."

BURNING QUESTION

"You have been a free people for hundreds of years," he said. "You have not suffered from the shackles of chattel slavery and so you do not understand the picture, but I warn you that unless those of you who make up the CIO don't do more than give lip service to this burning question, then something will happen that will cause all of us to regret."

William Sentner of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, said in a speech following Delegate Yancey's that "the CIO and its affiliated organizations have done more in the United States to smash Jim Crowism and discrimination against the Negro people than any other single organization since the Civil War."

Also speaking against re-committing the resolution submitted by the Resolutions Committee, Abe Feinglass of the Intl. Fur & Leather Workers said: "This resolution does not have to be committed back to the committee for more words. It has to be re-committed to each and every delegate to take it into his memory and make certain that when you go back you do something about seeing to it that these discriminations are eliminated."

Phil Connelly of the California Council, speaking for the resolution, told the delegates that more than 1,000 Negroes are now employed on the production lines at the Douglas Aircraft plant in Los Angeles and that 15,000 Negroes had been organized recently during a union drive in the state.

After a brief speech in favor of the resolution made by Moses Lee of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, the convention voted to adopt the resolution reported by the Resolutions Committee, which reiterated the firm opposition of the CIO "to any form of racial or religious discrimination" and renewed the pledge "to carry on the fight for protection in law and in fact, of the rights of every racial and religious group to participate fully in our social, political and industrial life."

Pres. Roosevelt's Letter To CIO Convention

My Dear Mr. Murray:

Let me thank you sincerely for your invitation to speak at the Congress of Industrial Organizations in its annual convention, and let me assure you of my very deep regret that the responsibilities and duties which I have at this time of emergency are such that I cannot accept and be with you. Will you convey to your membership this regret and express my interest in all that you will do at your convention?

My recent visit to industrial areas throughout the country has given me new insight into what Labor is doing to fulfill its part in winning the war. The picture is most encouraging. The extraordinary skill and speed of the American workman, the intelligence and capacity for cooperation with management, with each other and with the Government, shown by the wage earners of America is bound to be astonishing and satisfactory, even to one who like myself always expected that every working man and every labor union would do full duty in the production program.

Through you I should like to thank all the members or the organizations affiliated with the Congress of Industrial Organizations for what they personally are doing and to invite their further cooperation and effort in the days ahead.

We have built a vital and tremendous industrial production structure and program. It is working. Now we have to show the endurance, the tenacity and the persistence necessary to continue this program and extend it, even if faced with fatigue and dsicouragement.

I count on the members of your Organization to help in carrying out all the programs that are necessary for our national effort, and particularly those programs that have to do with preventing inflation, with sharing our customary good living with others, in order that the world may be safe for liberty and human betterment.

In particular, I expect your members to help in carrying out the spirit of the Executive Order that deals with wage stabilization, with rationing, with price controls, and with other economic measures for the domestic security, as well as the pursuit of the war. I am sure that this cooperation will be forthcoming generously.

With many thanks for your invitation, I am

Sincerely yours,

(s) FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

Pres. Murray's Reply

Dear Mr. President:

On behalf of the delegates assembled at the Fifth Constitutional Convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations in the City of Boston, permit me to thank you for your message to the convention and for your words of inspiration to the membership of the CIO.

We in the CIO are meeting with a full understanding of the historic importance of the hour in which we assemble and of the task which confronts us as workers in American agriculture and industry. Our members have from the start given willingly and in full understanding of the objectives for which the people of America fight in this war.

With the armies of our country now on the offensive, the members of the CIO will respond to the inspiration of the movements of our armed forces. We pledge ourselves with renewed determination and vigor to the fullest support and effectuation of every step necessary for the organization of our home front, for the mobilization of our economic organization, for that speedy victory to which this nation, under your leadership, is now marching with double vigor and determination.

Sincerely yours,

(signed) PHILIP MURRAY,

President.

Output Councils in All War Plants, Is CIO Goal

BOSTON, Nov. 14—Setting as its goal the formation of labor-management production committees in every war plant in the country, the CIO convention in session here called upon the War Production Board and responsible government officials to gvie effective support to this proposal for achieving an ever increasing production of war materials.

"Labor unions should insist upon the incorporation in collective bargaining agreements of provisions calling for such committees," declared a resolution passed at the convention. "The government procurement agencies should likewise incorporate in contracts with employers provisions calling for the establishment of such production committees."

No efforts must be spared, the convention asserted, in organizing concrete programs for increased production "and all steps must be taken by labor, management and the government to actually make these committees work and function."

ASK NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Urging all CIO unions to take the initiative in organizing production committees within their industries, the resolution suggested the calling of national production conferences "for the purpose of exchanging and drawing upon the experience within the separate industries of individual labor-management committees.

"It is essential that the CIO and each of its affiliates should obtain the maximum amount of information regarding the operation of the labor-management committees in order to bring to bear in their relations with the War Production Board an informed and organized background of information and understanding of the nation's production needs and an implacable insistence that those needs can and will be met.

"The CIO and its affiliated unions should utilize every measure possible to intensify the effort of our members to increase production through the issuance of special union production awards and the publicizing of special honor rolls.

"We must recognize and hail the heroes on the production front as well as those in our armed forces."

Ask Aid for Women War Workers

Boston, Nov. 14—Millions of women will have to be employed in the war production areas if maximum production is to be realized, delegates declared in a resolution passed at the CIO convention here.

"The available supply of women workers will depend in large measure upon whether facilities will be created for the care of children to permit such women workers to accept jobs in industry," the resolution stated.

ASK CHILD CENTERS

The convention went on record for the immediate establishment in all communities of Child Welfare Commissions consisting of representatives of labor, health, welfare and educational groups to "draw up plans for the establishment of adequate child care facilities in all communities."

Allocation of the $100,000,000 available under the Lanham Act or other Federal appropriations for child centers was urged, supplemented where necessary by funds made available by the state legislatures.

Equal pay for equal work performed by women and the formation of training courses to fit women for jobs in all needed skills was also advocated.

"We further call upon our unions to recognize the presence of millions of women workers in industry and to devote special study to the problems of such workers," the resolution declared, "and to make full use of the qualities of initiative and leadership that they can bring to the CIO."

Back Women's Auxiliaries

Boston, Nov. 14 — The CIO this week commended the work of the Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries during the past year, pledged its continued support and asked all unions to help the women's groups as a part of total national mobilization for victory.

The resolution said the CWA has "proved a valuable adjunct to the CIO in legislative work, in the consumer field, in war relief and soldier welfare activity."

Boston, Nov. 14—Presentation of a picture of Joseph Murray, son of the CIO leader, to Pres. Murray was an opening-day feature of the convention. Young Murray is serving at a Texas army post.

The picture was a gift of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, and it was handed to the CIO head by Mrs. Faye Stephenson, CIO auxiliaries head, and Mrs. Eve Taylor, president of the electrical union auxiliary.

Mrs. Taylor has two sons in the armed forces.

Convention Calls for Total Mobilization of U.S. Resources

CIO Demands Central Top On Manpower

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—Speaking with knowledge and bitter experience gained in the nation's war plants and in government during the past two years, the CIO convention this week demanded an overhauling of top government production agencies, a centralized plan for the civilian war effort, and an opportunity for labor to make its influence felt in the council rooms where the major decisions are reached.

The resolution, probably the most important of the entire convention, was passed unanimously after leaders of several unions had placed in the record a sordid story of confusion, dishonesty and corporate selfishness by the dollar-a-year men who dominate the War Production Board.

LIST DEMANDS

Included in the resolution were these principal demands:

1. National mobilization of all the material and manpower resources of the nation.

2. Use of production facilities for the best interests of the war effort, with intelligent scheduling of war and consumer goods.

3. A wage and rationing program aimed at providing workers with all the necessities of food, shelter and clothing to give them highest possible efficiency in the factories.

4. Equal representation for labor in this total war; elimination of labor advisory committees and the placement of labor representatives "in all the administrative agencies which make and execute our war policies—and at every level."

The resolution called on other sections of the nation, including businessmen and farmers, to join with labor in supporting the President and seeking full utilization of

Murray, Carey Re-Elected; 3 New Offices

Boston, Nov. 14 — Greeted by a mighty ovation from the assembled delegates, Philip Murray this week was re-elected to his third term as president of the CIO.

Hailed for his leadership of the organization during the difficult war year, Murray reported CIO membership at an all-time high and CIO influence in government and industry moving steadily upward.

James B. Carey was re-elected for the fifth time as secretary, with his title and responsibilities extended by a constitutional change to that of secretary-treasurer.

Nine vice-presidents were elected, six of them for additional terms and three for the first time under another amendment in the constitution which brought the number of executive officers up from eight to eleven.

Elected as vice-presidents were: Joseph Curran, Natl. Maritime Union; S. H. Dalrymple, United Rubber Workers; Emil Rieve, Textile Workers Union; Reid Robinson, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union; Frank Rosenblum, Amalga-

Convention Pays Tribute to Dead

Boston, Nov. 14—The CIO's 5th convention observed Armistice Day with a tribute to the dead of the last war and the fighters of the current battle a gainst fascism.

At 11 a.m. on Nov 11, Pres. Murray called for the delegates to stand in silence for a minute, to commemorate the last armistice.

A few minutes earlier they had passed a memoriam hailing the men who sacrificed their lives fighting Hitlerism, and pledged 100% support on the home front to the men carrying on the struggle.

CIO Reviews Nov. 3 Vote, Urges Action

Boston, Nov. 14 — The CIO charged this week that where campaign lines were sharply drawn, supporters of the President's win-war policies were elected, but that "beclouded issues" in many districts brought them defeat.

Acknowledging severe setbacks to the progressive cause in many election results, the CIO convention asserted that foes of the President "rode to victory on a wave of dissatisfaction with the products of their handiwork."

In the new Congress, the resolution said, "labor faces with redoubled earnestness and intentness of purpose the absolute necessity for a maximum of unity in the mobilization of all our resources at home and abroad for a speedy victory."

BIG JOB AHEAD

The CIO and other branches of the labor movement face a job of keeping issues before the people, of mobilizing now for progressive victories in the next elections, and of working always for unity behind Pres. Roosevelt.

Van A. Bittner, United Steelworkers leader and chairman of the convention resolutions committee, told the delegates that many progressive candidates had paid insufficient attention to the voice and needs of organized workers, and thereby contributed to their own defeat.

Ben Probe, secretary of the Michigan CIO, called for increased leadership of the workers in the political realm. Pres. Lewis Merrill of the office workers, saw a definite trend towards the Republican party, born partly out of confusion about aims and issues in the war.

Three speakers—Joseph Cannon of the Distillery Workers, Sam Altman of the retail workers and Adams of the longshoremen took the convention floor to argue strongly for united and vigorous action by labor to organize workers politically for victory as they were organized into unions.

CIO Cheers U. S. Attack In Africa

Boston, Nov. 14—By unanimous rising—and cheering—vote the CIO convention today hailed the offensive war in Africa and renewed pledges to "give everything to enable the United Nations to smash forward into Europe until our drive ends in the heart of Nazi Germany and the military destruction of the fascist Axis has been achieved."

The resolution's first clause declared that "the interests of our nation and the cause of victory can best be served throuugh an immediate and striking offensive action against the Axis," adding: "We rejoice that our armed forces in Africa are now beginning to take the war to Hitler."

ONLY A START

It quoted General Montgomery's statement that the African drive is "only the beginning of our task," which must be completed, it said, by the "combined and overwhelming concentration of the armed might of the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union."

The resolution also took a vigorous swipe at "appeasers and agents of Hitler who seek to thwart the offensive spirit of our people," calling them the "counterparts of the Lavals, Petains and Quislings," and saying that the CIO would continue to expose and fight them "in this country and elsewhere."

A special tribute was given to

Voices Full Support of Pres. Roosevelt

(See Detailed Stories on Other Pages)

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—CIO yesterday ended its 5th annual convention—a five-day session devoted to helping win the war and to furthering labor's assistance to the national war effort.

In its first wartime national meeting, the CIO examined every question from the standpoint of the country's struggle with the Axis.

MAJOR ACTIONS

Principal actions of the parley:

1. Voted its full support to Pres. Roosevelt, the Commander-in-Chief, and lashed out at any and all appeasers who stand in the way of the drive for victory.

2. Called for total mobilization of the nation's economy to get the highest possible efficiency and production to help the armed services carry the war against fascism to a speedy conclusion.

3. Urged labor unity on a national and international scale, with the AFL at home and with the British, Russian and other labor organizations in the United Nations.

MORE ORGANIZATION

4. Promised further organization of workers into unions so that they may be in a better position to produce for victory.

5. Heard addresses by Sen. Claude Pepper; Asst. Sec. of Navy Bard; Under Sec. of War Patterson; Bryn Roberts of the British Trades Union Congress; and by A. R. Mosher of the Canadian Congress of Labor.

6. Re-elected Pres. Murray for a third time; elected James B. Carey to the new post of secretary-treasurer; and expanded the number of vice-presidents to nine, an increase of three.

Parley Praises Murray Leadership of CIO

BOSTON, Nov. 14—A reaffirmation of CIO's backing for President Murray marked the report of the Committee on Officers Reports, convention group that studies and makes recommendations on the report of the President of his work for the past year.

"In addition, we wish to convey our thanks and to reaffirm our wholehearted support of President Murray," the report said. "With him, we join in backing our Commander-in-Chief in all measures that may be needed to strike at our enemies in a hard, offensive war against the heart of the Axis.

"This is the way to victory. Victory means our freedom and our right to live as human beings. Defeat means slavery and death. With our heroic Allies, we can have no other course."

BACK TOTAL WAR

The report commended Murray for advocating all-out mobilization of all our resources for the offensive and total war that will bring total victory. Quoting extensively from Murray's report, the Committee said: "It is time and more than time that all of our resources were fully mobilized and thrown completely into the fight. This has been consistently urged by the CIO since the world crisis overtook our country.

"This is the key to victory in our war of survival—the offensive against the heart of the Axis, striking now with the full force of our country and of the United Nations. This is the way we shall save our country, our unions and our very lives. With our heroic allies—the armies and people of the Soviet Union, Britain, China and all the United Nations—we shall free mankind from fascist slavery."

INTERNATIONAL UNITY

The officers' report committee also commended Murray's stand on the questions of international labor unity and of CIO-AFL unity. "In a war involving the fate of workers all over the world, it is idle to think of trade union unity as a national question alone," the committee said.

"The heroic workers of Britain, of the Soviet Union, our union brothers in Latin America and in all the United Nations are as close to us as our fellow workers in this country."

REVIEWS YEAR

The report, which in effect summarizes and reviews the year as reported in the President's report, praised the work of the national CIO, called on affiliates to support THE CIO NEWS, and in general discussed the events and policies of the past year.

The committee was headed by R. J. Thomas, with Reid Robinson as secretary. In Robinson's absence during the first two days of the convention, Joseph Curran took his place as acting secretary.

Pres. Philip Murray, who commented at length on the resolution, pointed out that the Tolan Committee of the House, after holding months of hearings, had reached conclusions similar to those of the CIO several months ago. The Congressional committee, he said, recommends a top administrative body with labor, industry and government representation, just as the CIO had done three years before in its Murray Council Plan.

The CIO leader lashed out at the set-up of the War Production Board.

"I tell you, frankly and candidly, if there is one agency in the United States that needs wholesome, constructive, intelligent reorganization, it is the WPB," Murray said.

Lashing out at many top WPB executives whose attitude is one of "pushing labor away," Murray added:

"I have told Mr. Nelson, not once but repeatedly, that the sooner he begins to recognize the need of inviting into the war program the wholesome, cooperative energies of the labor movement, the better it was going to be for him, and the better for the country."

BROKEN PROMISES

The CIO leader charged that Nelson has failed to act on his promise to appoint two labor representatives, from CIO and AFL, to act as WPB executives, while spokesmen of the big corporations continue to ride roughshod in the production agency.

In seeking labor posts, Murray continued, unions are not acting selfishly out of job interests, but are seeking to serve their country.

A number of other delegates spoke at length on the same subject, and described with bitterness their experiences at the hands of the dollar-a-year men. The speakers included Vice-Pres. Walter Reuther of the auto workers; Pres. Sidney Hillman, of the clothing workers, former co-chairman of the OPM; Pres. Nicholas Zonarich of the Aluminum Workers; Sec. Julius Emspak of the electrical union; Pres. Joseph Curran of the seamen; Van A. Bittner and Harold Ruttenberg of the steel workers; and Pres. Harry Bridges of the west coast longshoremen.

Reuther, member of the labor advisory committees of WPB and the Manpower Commission, said the jurisdictional disputes among unions are as nothing compared with the fighting and conflicts among the government agencies, and among the various groups of dollar-a-year men.

CORPORATE STOOGES

None of these corporate stooges, he charged, have any realization of the needs of total war, and many are more interested in watching Russia exhaust itself fighting Germany alone than in helping the U. S. join with all the United Nations for speedy victory.

The New Dealers see the picture of global war, he said, but at the WPB "you will find for every New Dealer there are 200 rock-ribbed reactionary Republicans. They are making the policy in Washington."

These corporation men, he said, "were opposed to the transformation of our peace economy into a total war economy," and they still haven't moved very far away from business-as-usual ideas.

Reuther said that union proposals for standardization of tank motors made by Ford, GM and Chrysler had been fought by the companies, and received a similar turndown in government—largely because the final authority was a vice-president of General Motors.

Bittner commented that labor's spirit is needed to win this war, and that that spirit must be brought into fullest use. Urging quick action by Pres. Roosevelt to place into effect the recommendations of the CIO and the Tolan Committee, the steel union official added:

"I think every local union of every national organization of the CIO should send immediately telegrams to members of Congress and the President, demanding that this be done in order that the war may be won. Let us show to our country, by our example, by our own intelligence, that these are the things we must have, and let us get them. That is the job of labor now as far as this administration of our war resources is concerned."

CITES RECORD

Ruttenberg, USA-CIO research director, recalled efforts of the steel workers union to get early action on scrap collection and to force merger of the half-dozen scrap collection agencies in the government. But nothing has been done, and the WPB officials have had to call upon the people to "pull their feet out of the bucket."

He added illustration to his charge that corporation stooges are helping to foster monopoly, asserting that the WPB approved construction of an expensive amor plant in Gary, Ind., although the smaller businessmen of the industry had got together in highly successful fashion to meet the government's need.

HILLMAN AGREES

Hillman expressed agreement with the seriousness with which CIO regards the industrial mobilization program, though he declared "I am compelled to say to you that we could have done more in 1940 than we have done, that it was possible to do more in 1941 than we have done, that not enough is being done in the year 1942 for total mobilization."

Now back as president of the clothing workers, Hillman praised the continued efforts of CIO and AFL leaders to seeking solution of manpower problems.

Zonarich said that the Aluminum Workers of America have met continually "a denial to proposals . . . for more aluminum production." While seamen are drowned trying to bring in bauxite from southern countries, aluminum employers "are refusing to mine rich bauxite deposits for aluminum" while "conserving that for post-war periods and mining this so-called low grade ore."

NEW APPROACH

Emspak described the resolution "as basically a new economic approach . . . which takes into consideration not only the interests of the members of the CIO, but of all the people."

"Our job, as I see it, is to take this resolution, develop it, bring it to the people."

Representation for labor, he added, would lead eventually to creation of a unified "war cabinet" in which there will be "room for . . . representatives of industry, agriculture and labor for the successful and united prosecution of the war."

TELL OF BUNGLING

Curran and Bridges both told of bungling in the martime set-up. The NMU noted that there have been 105 fires on ships in New York harbor since war began; that poor loading has compelled ships to turn back after setting sail for United Nations ports; that poor scheduling causes waste and delay in getting goods to our armed forces, while other seamen are hauling empty bottles to the U. S. and carrying champagne from this country.

He laid the responsibility at the door of the "20 government agencies dealing with the maritime industry . . . to date the only answer we have had is an increase in the number of agencies."

Bridges painted a picture of equally confused handling of the ship loading program.

"In the port of New York and in all eastern ports where there is not even a vestige of planning, the situation can hardly be described," he declared. "Ships are delayed for days on end because of lack of planning."

Whatever improvements have been made, he said, are due to partial adoption of the longshoremen's plan, based on the Murray Council plan.

Appeaser Papers Hit As Axis Agents; Laud Labor Press

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—CIO charged this week that "agents of disunity and defeat" in the ranks of the newspaper publishers and radio broadcasters of the nation are obscuring the issues of the war and hampering the government's effort to mobilize the people behind its crusade for democracy.

Passed unanimously, the resolution adopted at the convention expressed the sharp hostility of many of the delegates to newspaper publishers who fight labor and the President with more gusto than they go after the Axis.

TRIBUNE NAMED

The resolution particularly condemned "the disruptive and appeaser line pursued by certain sections of the press and radio, most notoriously in the McCormick Chicago Tribune, Patterson New York Daily News and Washington Times-Herald, and Hearst newspapers."

The CIO pledged the aid of its affiliated unions in getting the government's war message across to the people, so that they may get a more clear picture of the "nature and aims of this war" as outlined by Pres. Roosevelt, Vice-Pres. Wallace and leaders of the United Nations.

WARNING SOUNDED

Buttressing the resolution was a report from the Committee on Press and Publicity, which asserted that defeatist newspapers "must be hed strictly accountable for their utterances."

The committee was headed by Publicity Director Len De Caux, and its secretary was Vin Sweeney, steelworkers publicity director.

Its report urged labor union members to distinguish between working newspapermen, many of whom are members of the CIO Newspaper Guild, and the wealthy publishers who determine policy and content of stories and editorials.

PRAISES LABOR PAPER

It called for close cooperation between unions and working newsmen, and urged full labor support for "the free and liberal press which does exist."

The report hailed the work of the labor union press during the past 12 months in giving generous space and treatment to war news and the work of those government agencies which deal with labor.

While there is still room for improvement, the committee said, it was "pleased to report that the CIO press has met its new responsibilities with great vigor and enthusiasm. Our CIO papers are characterized by all-out support of the war effort; every issue that arises is tied in with the all-important issue of winning the war.

"As a result, the CIO press has contributed greatly to better morale among the soldiers of production, to win-the-war leadership in the community, to the growth of CIO unions and to the development of an unshakable determination among our workers to win this war, cost what it may."

NBC LAUDED

The committee commended the National Broadcasting Co. for its cooperation with labor in making possible the Labor For Victory Programs heard each Sunday at 1:15 EWT, under the alternate sponsorship of the CIO and AFL.

The entire labor press may be threatened, the committee warned, if control of newsprint under wartime regulations is left in the hands of the present WPB industry committee, which is dominated by members of the reactionary American Newspaper Publishers Assn.

Renewing a plea for labor participation on that committee, the report warned that the "labor press, which regularly reaches millions of soldiers of production, must not be the victim of unfair and inequitable allocation of newsprint under restrictions now being put into effect."

How RCA Victor's "Beat the Promise" Campaign Helps War Production

Labor and management members of the War Production Drive Committee of the RCA Victor plant in Camden, N. J., meeting to plan new ways of "Beating the Promise." (Left to right): Joseph Von Hartleben; Michael Lynch; Arnold Weber; C. B. Myers, Recording Secretary; Edward J. Kelly, Chairman; Joseph G. Mitton, Vice Chairman; George Hessmann; Mae Little; Samuel Myers; James Wasson, and Samuel Basmajian.

Take a good look. Because this little group is symbolic of a larger group of over 130,000,000 who are going to lick the stuffing out of you.

They're known as the RCA Victor "War Production Drive Committee to Beat the Promise." They represent the many thousands of determined workers of RCA Victor engaged in a common cause . . . to speed production on vital war orders.

What about results?

Well, RCA Victor, prior to the start of our Nation's Defense Program, was a substantial producer of radio communications equipment for the armed forces. But 1940 production was four times greater than in 1939. In 1941 it was four times greater than for the previous year—sixteen times ahead of 1939. And for the first six months of 1942 was 49 times greater than the average monthly output for 1939!

Now take another good look, Adolf, and while you are looking, note a few of the "Beat the Promise" posters below—just one phase of a complete production campaign which has been adopted in whole or in part by 154 other war-producing companies. It's this kind of activity and spirit that will bring about your final defeat!

RCA Victor invites inquiries from all labor-management committees in war plants, concerning these posters or any part of its "Beat the Promise" Campaign. Address RCA Victor, Department BTP-10, Camden, N. J.

These five full-color posters are typical of the many that have proved effective weapons in RCA Victor's "Beat the Promise" Campaign. The one at extreme right is a life-size cut-out of Hitler, and is being used to promote the newest phase of the campaign under the slogan, "The Second Front Depends on the Home Front." All these posters were inspired by employees of RCA Victor.

Organizing Plans Set; New War Workers Get Unions' Attention

BOSTON, Nov. 14—Renewing its determination to continue and expand the organization of the unorganized in the war industries, the CIO took action at the convention here to mobilize all resources for the offensive war against the Axis.

"We must direct special attention to the new problems and new opportunities arising from the influx of millions of workers into these industries who have not previously been employed therein," stated the rseolution on organizing passed unanimously by the delegates.

The influx of thousands of new members into the CIO during the past year was noted in the report of the Committee on Officers' Reports which put the stamp of approval on the work of the Organization Department, headed by Allan S. Haywood.

"We refer specifically to the women workers now coming into the war production plants, to the number of Negro workers now being employed at CIO demand for the first time in other than unskilled jobs, to the number of former white-collar professional workers who are now working on direct production jobs, and to the farm workers finding factory work for the first time."

NEW PROBLEMS

Attention was also directed in the resolution to the new problems facing labor today under the war situation. "We must prepare ourselves to represent most effectively the interests of labor before such governmental agencies as the National War Labor Board and the Office of Price Administration," the resolution declared.

"We must assure labor that only through union organization will it receive the full protection so essential in achieving total war mobilization."

Welcoming the new fellow workers into the CIO unions, the convention voted to "undertake the task of bringing the full realization of the importance of industrial organization to them, and to the cause of our common victory. In doing this we will bring to them the benefits of collective bargaining and to our nation the added strength, discipline and leadership necessary for an early victory and a just peace."

That the CIO has the program, the experience and the energy needed in the great tasks still before it is shown, the resolution stated, by the fact that "no labor organization in the history of the world has brought so many workers under the banner of unionism and genuine collective bargaining as has the CIO in the mass production and basic industries."

CIO's RESPONSIBILITY

Asserting that the CIO has a responsibility to the entire nation to intensify and broaden its organizing activities among the workers in the war industries, the resolution declared that "only through union organization can labor demonstrate its leadership in war production and in mobilizing all resources for total war.

"Through union organization labor can maintain the working standards which will assure a health level necessary for peak production efficiency.

"Through union organization, labor can release the qualities of leadership and initiative inherent in the workers and place them at the service of the nation.

"Through labor organization labor can furnish its unified support to the war program which cements a unity of all the people behind our Commander-in-Chief and against the enemies of our nation."

MANY NEW MEMBERS

"Special mention should be made," the Committee reported, "of the successful drives in the basic war industries, which are seen in the impressive list of elections won, new members added, new contracts signed and old agreements renewed in such basic war industires as steel, autos and aircraft, non-ferrous metals, electrical and machine, rubber, fur, maritime, shoe, clothing, communications and in the service and food industries."

Referring to the action taken by the Executive Board in chartering the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, the Officers' Report said that this was "in line with the general aim of bringing organization to the new masses of workers for the furthering of the war and for the greater protection of the home front on which the fighting fronts depend.

"This, in fact, is the key to CIO's successful drive to bring new hundreds of thousands of workers into the industrial unions. Victory on the fighting fronts, which will be won by fighting the offensive war that President Murray calls for, is tied in with our success in organizing the home front."

Lash Lewis Disruption As Hindrance to War

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—The CIO expressed "its fraternal good will for the members of the United Mine Workers" this week, but condemned in no uncertain terms John L. Lewis' "studied policies of disruption, raiding and disunity."

These policies, the convention resolution declared, which are carried out by "the puppet state of District 50, can only serve to undermine the war effort and destroy the trade union movement." Lewis' actions, it added "strengthen the defeatist and reactionary forces in our country who seek to prevent full national unity behind our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt."

Prior to passing the resolution, the convention heard an amazing story of intrigue and treachery by Lewis and his agents from four life-long members of the United Mine Workers now serving the CIO: Pres. Murray, Van A. Bittner of the Steelworkers, Allan S. Haywood, director of organization, and Frank Bender, Baltimore regional director.

Murray bluntly charged that District 50 representatives sought to harass during his long illness in the summer of 1941, and that a high District 50 official told a meeting that "you have got to keep after this fellow Murray until you kill him; he has got to be gotten out of the way."

"Such was the compassion, the sympathy of this brave man to a sick friend," the CIO commented sarcastically.

"Mr. Lewis is an established national prevaricator, universally recognized and very definitely placed in that category by the organized workers of the United States of America and by the citizens of our country," Murray said.

GREETINGS TO FAGAN

"I am not losing any sleep about John running away from me or running away from the CIO," he declared, adding, however, that "I should like the members of my union, the UMWA, to know that I have a distinct affection for them and would welcome them back to CIO ranks."

The convention later passed a resolution of greeting to Pat Fagan, head of UMWA District 50 and a staunch CIO supporter. Fagan is now ill, Murray said, "broken in spirit due to a system of organized suppression and oppression" by Lewis' agents.

Bittner, Haywood and Bender recounted much the same story—of Lewis' overwhelming hate for the President, of his determined efforts to raid CIO unions and try to break up the organization.

Cubans Greet CIO

Boston, Nov. 14—Greetings to the CIO from the working people of Cuba were received at the fifth CIO convention this week.

The Confederation of Labor of Cuba, headed by Lazaro Pena, sent a cable to Pres. Murray which said:

"As you gather today in your annual convention, we greet the magnificent effort of the American workers to crush Hitlerism and conquer victoriously."

CIO Lauded By Methodists

Boston, Nov. 14—Praising the "CIO's extraordinary service . . . in bringing economic justice to the workers of the nation," the Methodist Church of the Boston Area sent warm greetings to the 5th CIO convention here.

Signed by G. Bromley Oxnam, the message declared:

"It is to be hoped that when at last this war is won, men of all faiths may unite with great organizations such as your own to the end that the liberty we have preserved and the equality we intend to achieve may enable us to move to fraternity."

mated Clothing Workers; R. J. Thomas, United Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers; Albert J. Fitzgerald, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization; John Green, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Expansion of the number of vice-presidencies to 11 gave direct representation on the executive officers' group to two of the nation's most important war unions — the shipbuilders, and the electrical and machine workers — as well as integrating more closely the work of CIO's several score organizers with CIO's interim policy agency.

TWO PROPOSALS

The increase of three vice-presidents recommended by the Constitution Committee—headed by Vice-Pres. Frank Rosenblum — was based on two proposals. One, from the UERMW, asked for an increase of two in the number of vice-presidents. Another, from the American Newspaper Guild, proposed 10 vice-presidents, who, with the president and secretary-treasurer, would form the Executive Board, in place of the present board, which contains a representative from each affiliated union.

The other constitution change expanded section 5 of Article V with this sentence: "Each vice-president shall carry out such special assignments as may be necessary in the judgment of the president to advance the work of the organization." The committee suggested that the vice-presidents arrange their work with their own unions to be available for these special assignments.

In creating for the first time the office of secretary-treasurer, the convention said:

"He shall provide for a semi-annual audit of the books and financial records of the organization which shall be reported to the executive board. He shall be bonded for the security of the organization's funds and for the faithful performance of his duties in an amount to be determined by the Executive Board."

Ask End Of Poll Tax

Boston, Nov. 14—Abolition of the poll tax, which bars millions of low-income persons in eight southern states from their right to vote, is "not merely a political but a military necessity," the CIO convention charged this week.

Pointing out that workers' protests helped blast the Geyer bill through the House, the convention warned "that any stalling or filibustering" in the Senate at this time "would be direct sabotage of a war need."

"We can no longer afford to tolerate the denial of that right to hundreds of thousands of American citizens, Negro and white, in the eight poll tax states," the resolution said.

It called on all CIO unions and members "to spare no effort to carry the fight through to a final and immediate victory for democracy."

CIO Shows Unity With Allied Workers

BOSTON, Nov. 14—Three striking demonstrations of the unity of workers of all the United Nations for the offensive and victory over Hitler slavery marked the opening days of the fifth CIO convention here.

These were: 1. A telegram of greetings and a pledge of solidarity for "speedy victory over the enemy" to the convention from Nikolai Shvernik, secretary of the All Union Central Council of Trade Unions of the USSR.

2. A fighting speech from Bryn Roberts, visiting British unionist who called for direct affiliation of American labor to the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee.

3. A wire from CIO President Philip Murray to the Argentine protesting the arrest of 14 Argentine union leaders.

In addition, the convention unanimously approved the section of the President's report dealing with international trade union unity, declaring that "trade union unity for common struggle must include the workers of all the United Nations, barring none and relegating none to a secondary place."

IN FIRST RANK

The question of world trade union unity occupied a front rank place in the convention, in speeches, resolutions and in discussion among the delegates. It was seen in the enthusiasm that greeted the wire from the Soviet trade union leader, in the rising ovation at the end of Roberts' speech, and in the close attention the delegates paid to Murray's remarks on the question.

Roberts got his biggest hand for his statement urging direct affiliation with the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee, in which he said: "Never again should we allow our relationship with Russia or any other country to be determined in the future as it has in the past.

"The establishment of the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee constitutes an invaluable contribution to this end. We hope that the organized workers of other allied countries will also associate themselves with this important committee.

"It would be regrettable if our inhibitions were to prevent this from being achieved. Russia, with its 170,000,000 inhabitants, covering one sixth of the world's surface, will inevitably have a great influence upon the postwar world. Her millions of heroic dead and the indescribable sufferings of her people command this.

"With the principle of our movement guiding us, it is not too much to expect that such a committee, now limited to the Russians and ourselves, will, without undue delay, embrace the organized workers of all the other democratic countries. That is our fervent hope. We feel that it will be nothing short of a tragedy if it does not quickly materialize."

WIRE TO ARGENTINA

The wire to the President of the Argentine said that the CIO "has learned with indignation of the arrest of 14 outstanding Argentine trade union leaders.

Their so-called crime consists in joining with the majority of the people of the Argentine in demanding that their country "take its place with the other nations of the Americas in the anti-fascist struggle."

Shvernik's greeting, first to be received by an American national labor organization from the Soviet Union, was received with prolonged applause from the delegates, who had heard every speaker from President Murray down praise the heroism of the Soviet army and people at Stalingrad and throughout the 16 months of resistance to the full force of the Nazis.

The wire greeted the convention and American workers and declared that Americans "will be able to engage the enemy on European soil and together with the Soviet, will deal a blow to the fascist beast in his very den." It expressed the hope that "these questions on the path to victory will be given appropriate consideration in what work of your convention and that its decisions will reflect the workers' desire for closer cooperation, for the sake of preserving liberty, democracy and for the sake of hastening the defeat of Hitlerite tyranny."

CIO Relief Gifts Zoom

RELIEF DISPLAY: One of the most effective displays in the Statler lobby at Boston was this one of the CIO Natl. War Relief Committee. Posted alongside the exhibit, which described work of the committee, were bulletin telegrams of progress in community chest drives throughout the nation.

More Than $3,200,000 Contributed

Boston, Nov. 14—Total contributions handled by the National CIO Committee for American & Allied War Relief have climbed to nearly $3,200,000, Committee Chairman Irving Abramson reported to the CIO convention.

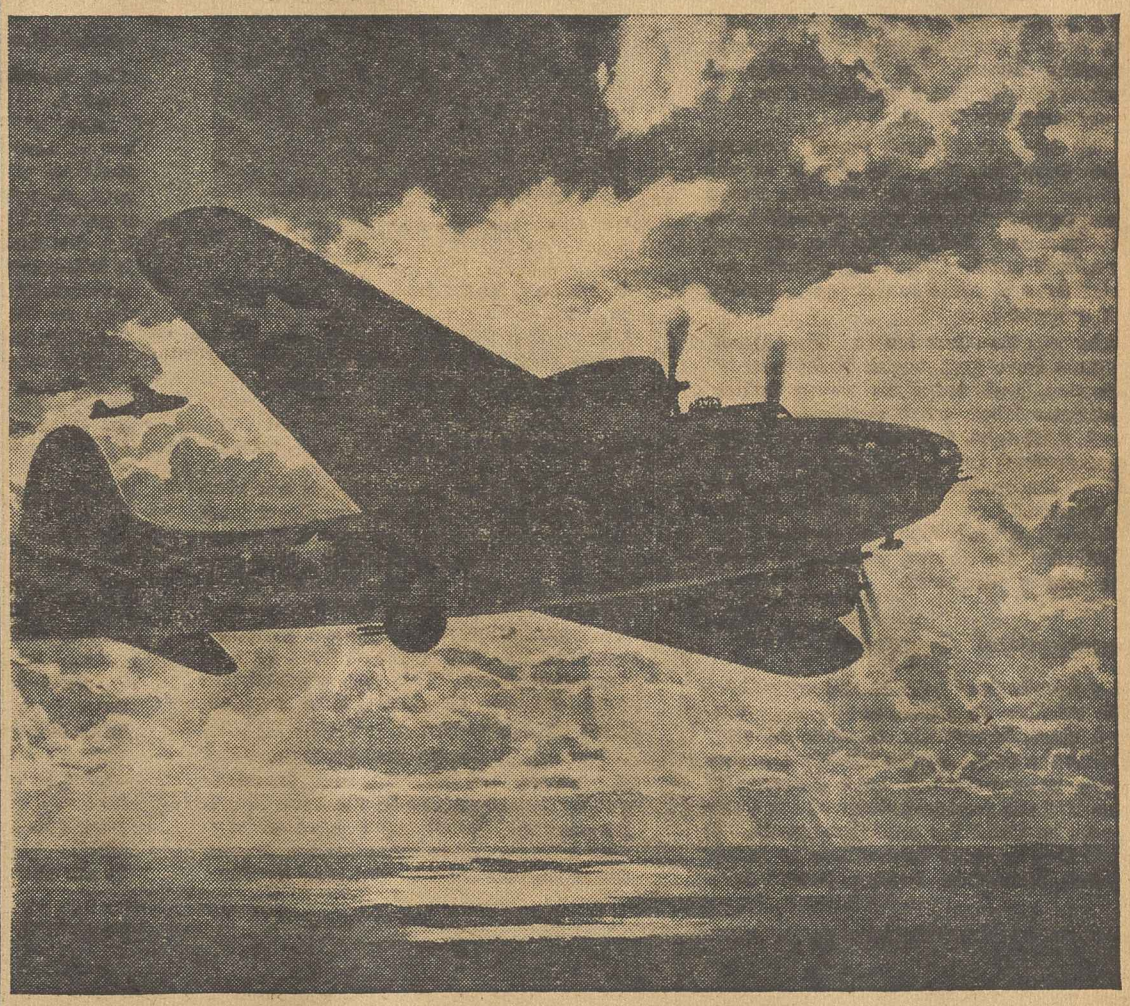
"The reports are now coming in from all over the country, because we are in a Community War Chest Drive," he said, "and the hopes of the committee have been raised beyond anything they had looked for."

AID RELATIONS

Thanking Pres. Murray and the CIO for its assistance and cooperation, Abramson said the committee is helping to improve affiliated unions' relationships "with everybody we deal with."

As a result of cooperation between CIO and AFL with the Community War Chest drives, "we have been assured of $2,000,000 . . . for labor projects alone," he pointed out.

"That will be administered by the CIO and AFL jointly, and I think this is the first time in history since CIO's birth that AFL and CIO have joined in a common coordinated action so that we can both be recognized as one unit."



STAINLESS STEEL...
in the Petroleum Industry

• The extremely corrosive agents encountered in the petroleum industry attack metals so rapidly that the life of ordinary steels is frequently very short.

Stainless steel is resistant to corrosion and oxidation, and has high strength and hardness even at elevated temperatures. Because of this combination of properties, the use of stainless steel in oil refinery equipment keeps costly and time-consuming shutdowns for repair and replacement at a minimum, and makes for fast, uninterrupted, economical operation.

In these ways, stainless steel helps to keep the production of essential petroleum products going at high speed without interruption . . . more important now than ever before.

Pres. Murray

Cites CIO's Big Job In War on Fascism

● I am quite sure that this convention will meet its responsibilities. Every man and woman in this convention representing a CIO affiliate has one firm determined conviction, and that is, come what may, this war must be won, and in winning the war the forces of tyranny and aggression which plague the world today must necessarily be driven from the face of the very earth.

It is you, you from the mine and the mill and the factory and the workshop, you occupying the production front that must do this job. Your task in America is just about as important in the workshop, in the factory and the mill as is the task of a soldier in the Army down in Guadalcanal, in Northern Africa, in Egypt, in Russia or in England, or wherever our soldiers may be performing today.

Your job is to win this war by producing all of the materials essential to the winning of the war, because in winning this war we win for ourselves the kind of freedom the workers of the United States of America believe they are entitled to.

Hails War Victories

I salute and hail with delight the great defense made by our Allies on the eastern front, particularly in Stalingrad. There that great army has undergone the rigors of its blood bath to save America and to save the democracies that Americans believe in. I hail with particular delight the great heroism of our soldiers in the Solomon Islands, the conduct of our people in defending Bataan, and the invasion of Northern Africa just a couple of days ago by our American troops.

I do hope that these recent victories which have attended the efforts of our combined armies will not soften the tempo of our activities in conducting an offensive war. The fact that victory has attended our efforts within recent days should not be sufficient to cause Americans to believe that the war is over.

The war has just begun. The Allied Nations have just begun their mighty offensive, and today as never before American labor must demonstrate its most forthright determination to yield from factory, mine, mill and workshop all of the materials essential to keep those armed forces on the offensive until Hitlerism and the Japs and all that they stand for are driven completely from the face of this earth.

Continued Support

My friends, your policies and my policies with relation to supporting our government must necessarily continue as they have in the past. As the President of this mighty organization, I have consistently supported the foreign policies of our Commander in Chief for over three years. It is my firm purpose to continue to follow militant leadership leading toward ultimate and speedy victory for the things our boys are fighting for.

There are no qualifications attached to that statement; there never have been and, insofar as I am personally concerned, there are not going to be. I am determined to support our Commander in Chief and I am going to support him. I know that this great organization that I am privileged to represent supports that statement one hundred per cent.

On these pages The CIO NEWS presents excerpts from speeches by Pres. Philip Murray; by Bryn Roberts, head of the Natl. Union of Public Employes of Great Britain; and by Sen. Claude E. Pepper of Florida. Stories of other addresses appear on Page 12.

PHILIP MURRAY

Voice for Labor

There are other phases of this war situation to which I shall briefly direct your attention before officially opening the convention. I suppose that during this convention you will by the adoption of an official resolution chart the course that this organization should pursue with reference to the part which it must play in winning this war. There are other phases of this situation to which I think I should direct your attention.

Personally, frankly and candidly, I do not believe that labor has been accorded proper representation in the councils of government. Whatever I have to say now with regard to this situation, I now direct my remarks to the War Production Board over in the city of Washington.

Labor within the War Production Board has consistently fought for proper representation within the councils of that organization and positions of administrative responsibility, positions in the policy-making divisions of that giant organization. It is important that labor be accorded the opportunity to participate with management in the preparation of programs designed to increase the efficiency of the individual worker, designed to improve the efficiency of the machine, and designed to improve the efficiency of the plant or of the industry itself.

Calls for Action

I think that our government and the War Production Board particularly should call upon the genius, the vitality and the understanding of labor, ask them to participate with them in the solution of our national production problems.

Labor doesn't want jobs; it doesn't want people appointed to measly jobs with salaries attached to them, where they are merely members of common ordinary, so-called advisory boards. We do not want those jobs. We want to be placed in positions of trust and responsibility where we can render a service to our nation.

Bryn Roberts

Intl. Labor Unity Held Imperative

● I arrived in the United States of America a few weeks ago for the purpose of conveying the greetings of the British Trades Union Congress, by whom I was appointed, to the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor whose 64th Annual Convention concluded on the 15th of last month.

The British Trades Union Congress, as you know, has had very intimate association with the Federation for a period of nearly half a century, and needless to say, I felt privileged and honored to be entrusted with such a responsible and yet so pleasant duty.

This mission, which is now concluded, will, I earnestly hope, further strengthen the ties between the workers of our respective countries.

As I learned that the convention of the CIO would assemble before I returned to the "Old Country", as so many of you affectionately call it, I felt that I should, particularly in view of the warm invitation extended to me by President Murray, avail myself of the opportunity of attending your convention and addressing a few words to you. My colleague Jack Tanner would also be here but for the fact that important negotiations involving over 600,000 of his members have compelled him to return to England.

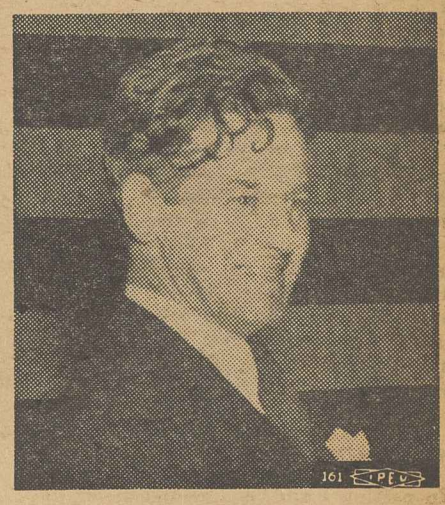
I am informed, however, that I am the first British trade union officer to address you convention. If this privilege is mine I can only hope that it will produce nothing other than beneficial results to the cause of organized labor in both our countries, and that it will incite us to still greater efforts in the struggle against Nazi and Fascist domination which now seriously threatens us.

This is the great and urgent task we now face. We shall succeed if all other considerations are subordinated to this single purpose.

Unity Against Axis

If we should fail in this greatest of all human struggles, the entire edifice of trade union movement will be submerged, irrespective of what form of organization (whether it be craft or industrial) any particular section of the movement may favor. Our murdered colleagues in the countries occupied by the Nazi and Fascist gangsters are silent witnesses of this terrible fact.

In Britain, however, we realize that on the basis of "business as usual" we shall never defeat the enemy but that it will enable him to defeat us. We have, therefore, ended our peace-time economy and despite the efforts of the Luftwaffe to upset and destroy our economic and social life we have been able to mobilize the nations resources for total war.



BRYN ROBERTS

The fact that our cities, towns and industrial centers are within an hour's flying time of the enemy's air bases have, of course, created problems, which happily you have not yet experienced.

The constant air bombing to which we have been subjected has compelled us to evacuate over one million women and children from the danger zones; it has also compelled us to mobilize over a million full time Civil Defense personnel; it has also necessitated the placing of enormous numbers of anti-aircraft batteries with the personnel to man them, round our cities, towns, villages, docks and factories.

Within a country mobilized for total war, luxuries are out of place and they have completely disappeared from our lives. At a time when every unit of labor nd every industrial plant is required to roduce some product or other essential o the war effort, the production of luxury rticles is regarded as an act of sabotage nd is contrary to the will of the British eople.

Relations With U.S.S.R.

It would, I suggest, be regrettable if ur inhibitions were to prevent this from eing achieved. Russia, with its 190,000,000 nhabitants, covering one-sixth of the orld's surface, will inevitably have a reat influence upon the post-war world. Her millions of heroic dead and the indeeribable sufferings of her people comand this.

British labor recognizes the differences here are in the social systems of the two ountries, but it does not want to repeat he mistakes which are now history. It eeks to make permanent the friendship hat has been forged between us in the re of war.

British Labor is proud to be associated with the gallant Russian people and, without them imposing Communism on us or us imposing capitalism on them, we can through the machinery of the Anglo-Russian Joint Committee, do much to establish real cooperation between the two nations, which is so essential to the successful prosecution of the war and in the period of reconstruction that will follow it.

With the principles of our movement uiding us, it is not too much, I suggest, o expect that such a committee, now mited to the Russians and ourselves will, ithout undue delay, embrace the workrs of all the other democratic countries. hat is our fervent hope. We feel that it ill be nothing short of a tragedy if it oes not quickly materialize.

Unity In U. S.

In passing I am very glad to note that resident Murray expressed in his report, n the section dealing with international nity, very similar sentiments to those I ave expressed here this afternoon. But o come to my last point, it is with conderable nervousness that I venture to efer to the trade union movement in the United States. Perhaps a wiser man would ass to another subject.

I have also noted, with considerable atisfaction, the mutual respect existing etween the President of the A. F. of L. nd the President of the CIO, as well as heir declarations about the desirability f achieving the maximum degree of unity n this hour of crisis and in order to andle effectively the inevitable problems hat will arise in the post war period.

With two minds with so single a hought it causes me to hope with some easure of confidence that unity, which is o essential to the workers' interests will oon materialize and be completely stablished.

With a tocsin so imperatively sounding it should not be difficult for broad, simple principles of common action to be agreed upon and quickly implemented, so that the truly colossal forces of American labor can be completely harnessed for the great tasks that lie ahead of it.

Urges War Planning, Flays Defeatists

● Was it surprising that a man of such devilish genius as Hitler could play upon the poverty of that people and make of them devils in a Christian World? Beyond the seas rich democracies said it was no business of theirs if there was economic chaos in Europe. So we embraced two great policies—the first was that what happened geographically elsewhere in the earth did not affect us, and so a Japanese butcher could mutilate and mangle the unoffending bodies of the resisting Chinese in Manchuria and a bestial braggart could carve up the carcasses of the savages of Ethiopia, and those who professed Christianity, Americanism and decency in our own land said that it was no concern of ours.

And in Europe itself, in Germany, Hitler could destroy the race and call that part of it the Jews that he persecuted; and those over here safe from those immediate attacks said that what he does in the butchery of the Jew is no danger to us who reside safely here.

Blindness

Then when the final assault upon the nation began and one after another failed and fell before the savagery of the tyrannical attack, statesmen stood and said: "That is no concern of ours."

Finally, danger came closer and closer to our own shores and yet speaking in this very city in the summer of 1941, I was debating with a senator on the matter of America's foreign policy. He had the temerity to speak for thirty minutes about a great menace to America, and the only name he ever uttered was the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt, the people's constitutionally chosen President. You wouldn't have known there was a Hitler on this earth, that there was a slant-eyed monster ready to strike and that there was one who yapped at the heels of the dictators pleading for a place in their great array.

* * *

Great and grand as has been the effort and the achievements of our incomparable President, that prophet of a new civilization, that champion of eventual victory, the government of the United States neither before nor after the beginning of the war realized the character of total war.

Of course, there has been an evolutionary process in progress. We started with an agency that had little power and only a little part of the whole authority. We gradually converted its character into one that had great strength and great authority, but even today that plan is only a partial answer to the whole problem.

Unless there is put at the top under the people's President a capable authority to martial the whole might of civilian economy to challenge it by guidance and leadership to the great accomplishment by voluntary method, we will not be true to those men who await in every part of the earth today and tomorrow and in the next year for the weapons with which to crush our evil enemies.

Lack of Planning

We have been seeing . . . a division in the government authority, a duplication in effort and inadequacy in planning, ofttimes—and I regret to say—incompetency in administration which has been responsible ofttimes for shortages of raw materials, ofttimes for one part of a given implement coming out ahead of another, ofttimes for a prime contractor to have the opportunity to exploit a sub-contractor and over-serve an old customer.

I veritably believe that had it not been for the courageous and patriotic way in which your distinguished President and the other leaders of the statesmen in labor in America came to the Congress and to the country to register their protests that there would have been actually conceived and launched a program which would have put compulsion in the place of adequacy in the

Now, thanks to President Murray and to your support and to the others who have been responsible with him, thanks to the candor and the courage and the excellence of the report that has just been issued by the Management and Labor Committee of the War Manpower Commission, and thanks to the sentiment of democracy in the people of America, I believe that it is assured that we can work out a way whereby the workmen may be put to the needed job in a factory and on a farm and still the essential freedom of American labor be retained and enjoyed.

It is out of that realization of the necessity for an over-all planning and coordination of the war plan, as performed by the civilian economy, that Congressman Tolan in the House, and Senator Kilgore and I in the Senate have offered the bills with which you are familiar. Those bills contemplate that the President of the United States shall have in the administration of the civilian and military authority the same division that is vested in him in the National Constitution, when he is made the President of the United States, a civilian economy and institution; and as Commander-in-Chief of the American Army and Navy, the military forces of the nation.

Committed To Victory

Today we have admitted ourselves to a real second front. America has at least indicated to the enemy that we have a will to fight which has been so lacking in our policy.

Let us now indicate to friend and foe that America is committed to this war until victory shall at last come to us, whatever the price we have to pay to gain it. And let us be prepared to hurl into the dark pit he deserves every villainous and unpatriotic person who is willing even to whisper the name of appeasement.

I suggest that the CIO could apply to America the principle that the President and Secretary of State have given notice they would apply to the enemy when the victory shall at last be won.

That is that where in America there are those who by one pretense or another shall try to sabotage either for personal, political or other selfish interests of any kind the war effort of this nation they shall, so help us God, be remembered in the days hereafter.

There are certain senators whom I have never seen fail to support any amendment that looks like it would hamstring the President's power or the effective conduct of the war, and they are awaiting to be the leaders of the "back to normal movement," when they think they will have a chance to lead a disillusioned and disheartened and saddened and suffering America back to the chaos and disruption that followed the days of the World War No. 1.

Need United Effort

This effective plan of mobilization which I have described carries with it the recognition of the necessity that not only our own effort but the effort of all the United Nations shall be effectively put together.

Yet, how many of you knew that there are not even consultations between the Russian general staff and that of either the British or American governments? I have that from a responsible source.

If we are to have a post war peace, a cooperative post war world, the time to lay the foundation for it is now, and if we cannot while we fight for our very lives and lands establish enough confidence among the United Nations so that there will be the most intimate and trustful cooperation among us, God help us in the decisive days after the peace.

I know that you are interested in that peace and that post war world. I know you want to gain it; you want to save the victory of the war. You don't want to see another soldier come back to read disillusionment and betrayal in a calloused people's eyes.

Therefore let's don't make the mistake we made before of thinking that when we win the victory that all of a sudden a just and fair and competent peace will spring into being overnight like the goddess that was suddenly born on an ocean wave, mature. That didn't happen the last time; it will not happen this time.

CIO'S 'WIN-THE-WAR' CONVENTION: Here is the scene in the ballroom of the Hotel Statler in Boston as delegates to the CIO's 5th annual convention met to work out the program and policies devoted to winning the war against the Axis.

CIO Votes Support To Bridges

BOSTON, Nov. 14 — Wholehearted support of the CIO behind the deportation case pending against Harry Bridges, president of the Intl. Longshoremen & Warehousemen's Union, was urged by a series of speakers at the convention during discussion of a resolution later passed unanimously by the delegates.

Recalling that the CIO has consistently defended the right of Harry Bridges to be free of the seven years' persecution he has undergone, the resolution called upon President Roosevelt "to recognize the fact that the deportation of Harry Bridges would be a blow to morale, to national unity and to war production.

ASK DISMISSAL OF CHARGES

"We further urge that he take action to set aside the deportation order signed by Attorney General Francis Biddle, dismiss all charges against Harry Bridges and afford him full opportunity to become a citizen of the United States."

President Philip Murray, speaking on the resolution told of the able support Bridges has given to the government in the prosecution of the war.

"He has submitted plans to federal agencies and to employers of labor designed to promote good sound substantial constructive collective bargaining relationships between West Coast shipping employers and labor organizations out on the West Coast which have expedited our shipping facilities, in the delivery of goods essential to the winning of the war," Murray declared.

NO EVIDENCE

Reviewing his talks with numerous government officials on the Bridges case, Murray said:

"I have never had a Government official with whom I have been privileged to talk, adduce a single, solitary little bit of evidence which would in any way prove that Bridges was associated with groups whose purposes and objectives ran to the overthrow of the Government of the United States of America."

TELL COMMITTEE'S WORK

Earlier in the discussion David MacDonald of the United Steel Workers and secretary of the Bridges Defense Committee, explained the actions and policy of the committee, which was set up in the spring of 1942 at a meeting of the Executive Board. In addition to MacDonald, the six CIO vice presidents compose the committee, under the chairmanship of S. H. Dalrymple.

Reporting that the committee had raised $30,000 to date, MacDonald asked for further contributions from the CIO unions to help meet the heavy legal expenses of the case.

TRIBUTE TO SEAMEN: A tribute to the heroic men whose ships plow the seven seas with materials for the United Nations featured the opening day of the convention. Here Pres. Joseph Curran and three members of the Natl. Maritime Union receive a plaque from Pres. Murray, who spoke in behalf of the entire CIO in voicing admiration for U. S. seamen's courage.

Servicemen, Seamen Honored As Heroes of Freedom's War

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—Tribute was paid at the CIO convention to the gallant seamen of the CIO who are risking their lives to carry supplies to the war zones, and to CIO members in the armed forces who have given their lives for their country.

In one of the most dramatic episodes at the convention, President Philip Murray presented to three rank and file members a silver plaque mounted on mahogany inscribed to "the thousands of members of the National Maritime Union who, pledged to 'keep 'em sailing,' gave their lives to preserve our freedom."

RECEIVE TRIBUTE

Standing beside NMU Pres. Joseph Curran and the three seamen — Tolbert Drew, Dixie Burton and Elmer Wesala — Pres. Murray paid tribute in the name of the CIO to "the boys who man America's merchant marine.

"Those are the boys who carry the guns and the planes and the tanks and the shells and the munitions to the armed forces of the United States and to the armed forces of our allies," he said.

"It is to these boys that our nation intrusts the care of maintaining America's supply lines, and the record will show, since the beginning of the present war, that the conduct of the members of this mighty organization, the National Maritime Union, is such that we can all take pride in it.

HEROES OF SEA

"They are the heroes of the sea. They are the boys who give of their lives, of their blood and of their limbs to help America and its Allies win this war, and in the delivery of those goods to the armies of the Allies, thousands of their members have forfeited their lives."

Later the convention passed resolutions in memory both of the CIO members who have lost their lives in the merchant marine and in the armed forces of the United States.

"Thousands of Americans have already made the supreme sacrifice for their country," declared the resolution honoring the CIO heroes in the armed forces. "We salute these heroes.

OFFER PLEDGE

"We now give our pledge that as soldiers of the home front we shall continue to provide an avalanche of materials of war to our armed forces so that they, with the armed forces of our United Nations, may successfully terminate this war as quickly as possible.

"We also give our pledge that come what may, we shall maintain at home the same offensive spirit as our soldiers, airmen and sailors and smash any attempt of the appeasers and defeatists who may seek to frustrate the heroic efforts of our armed forces in battle."

In the resolution passed later in memory of the CIO members in the merchant marine who have died in the service of our nation, it was stated:

"In the 11 months since Japan's treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor many hundreds of seamen, members of the National Maritime Union, the American Communications Association, the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association and the Marine Cooks & Stewards, have given their lives while sailing the high seas for the delivery of men and materials for the defense of their country."

Russian Union Head Calls For Intl. Solidarity

Boston, Nov. 14.—Following is the text of the wire of greetings sent to the CIO convention by Nicolai Shvernik, secretary of the All-Union Council of Trade Unions of the Soviet Union:

"You are forging arms for struggle against fascism, and with the same courage with which Americans are fighting together with British in African deserts they will be able to engage the enemy on European soil and together with the Soviet will deal a blow to fascist beast in his very den.

"We believe that our American friends will be able to fully mobilize and utilize the wealthy resources of their country.

"In these days of trial, solidarity of the workers of all democratic nations, particularly the workers of the Soviet Union, the United States and England is more needed than ever and more than ever the need is felt of united action by the workers' organizations so that all forces be mobilized to secure speedy victory over the enemy and to solve successfully the problems of postwar world order.

"The All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions hopes that these questions on paths to victory will be given appropriate consideration in the work of your convention and that its decisions will reflect the workers' desire for closer cooperation, for the sake of preserving liberty and democracy and for the sake of hastening the defeat of Hitlerite tyranny."

Reply to Shvernik

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—Following is the cabled reply sent by Pres. Murray, in behalf of CIO, to Nicolai Shvernik:

"American workers represented at the 5th Constitutional Convention of the CIO join with you and pledge to continue and increase production of arms and materials for the world-wide drive of the United Nations to crush our Fascist enemies.

"Millions of organized workers of the United Nations are completely and unequivocally united in these objectives.

"The CIO will continue to take every possible step to bring about the full and direct collaboration of

Parley Favors Ties With Allied Labor

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—A long step toward world labor unity for victory and a just peace was taken when the CIO convention unanimously urged direct collaboration of American unions with labor groups of all the United Nations and Latin America.

The convention also cabled Nikcolai Shvernik, secretary of the Soviet Union Council of Trade Unions, declaring that the CIO joins "with you and pledges to continue and increase production of arms for the world-wide drive of the United Nations to crush our fascist enemies."

CAN AID WAR

Both the resolution and the cable to Shvernik urged direct collaboration, the resolution declaring:

"The full and direct collaboration of the trade union movements of the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union and the other United Nations can help secure maximum production to win the war, strengthen the war policies of the United Nations for the complete victory over fascism, and assure a just and democratic peace for all the people."

Criticizing the AFL proposal to keep the CIO, the railroad brotherhoods, the unions of the USSR and Latin America out of any direct participation in world labor unity, the resolution praised President Murray for rejecting it and urged:

"That the CIO continue to take all necessary steps to establish international labor cooperation with direct participation by the British and Soviet unions, the AFL, the CIO and railway labor, and the unions of the other United Nations, including our Latin American allies."

Pending this, the resolution called on the CIO "to arrange immediately for an exchange of information with such trade union bodies of the United Nations with respect to production and all other activities which would strengthen our common war effort through the exchange of committees, delegations and such other channels as may be feasible."

Discussing the resolution, Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and a vice-president of the CIO; Irving Potash, Fur Workers, and Jack Lawrenson, vice-president of the Natl. Maritime Union, stressed the practical advantages that would come to the victory drive and pointed out concrete actions already taken.

"It's been proven international cooperation brings results," Robinson said. "Metal workers in the United States recently aided metal workers in Argentina and Bolivia, thus strengthening the fight against fascism."

Lawrenson pointed out that the international drive of fascism to enslave the world must be met with international unity of all the workers of the democratic nations, and said that such world labor unity would have defeated fascism in its first round of the world reactionary drive in Spain.

All three speakers urged immediate direct affiliation of American labor with British and USSR and Latin American unions, calling for direct affiliation by the CIO to the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee.

the trade union movements of the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union and the other United Nations for maximum production to win the war, strengthen the war policies of our national leaders for complete victory over Fascism, and assure a just and democratic peace guaranteeing to all people throughout the world freedom of speech, freedom of religion, freedom from want and freedom from fear."

DELEGATE: Sidney Hillman was back at the CIO convention after a two-year absence during which he was serving the government. Hillman, who discussed government war planning, is again acting as head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Morgenthau Hails CIO Aid On War Bonds

Boston, Nov. 14 — "Sincere gratitude" for CIO's cooperation with the government war bond drive was expressed in a telegram from Secretary of the Treasurer Henry J. Morgenthau to President Murray.

Labor's "unfailing support" of the bond campaign has been a highlight of the war finance effort, through which 20 million wage earners are now checking off $300,000,000 a month from their pay, Morgenthau said. He voiced special praise for the joint industry-union campaign conducted with the assistance of the United Rubber Workers and asked for a "continuation of CIO's splendid help" in the months ahead.

3-Point Plan:

Unity Conferees Will Preserve CIO Gains, Murray Tells Parley

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—The CIO today called for unity in the American labor movement on the basis of a three-point set of principles:

1. Maintenance and extension of gains made by CIO unions for their members.

2. Solution of jurisdictional disputes within the framework of a unified labor organization.

3. Protection at all costs of existing working unity dedicated to helping the country's war effort.

The resolution was passed unanimously after the delegates had heard detailed examination of the issues involved by Pres. Murray, Pres. Hillman of the clothing workers, and Vice-Pres. Walter Reuther of the auto union.

Murray, in a masterful presentation of the case, declared:

"I am going into the conference in good faith, so help me God, but I shall not go in a mad desire to effectuate a peace tearing the rock from under this labor movement, the rock on which it was built.

"FORGET OLD HABITS"

"I warn the American Federation of Labor that if it is its purpose to hew to its age-old habits, then no success can attend a peace conference. They must meet new conditions and recognize there is another labor movement in the United States."

Murray said that the conception held in some AFL circles that the CIO is a minor "rebel" movement which must be taken home to be spanked will have to be dropped, and that CIO must be given recognition in the forthcoming peace talks as a responsible organization which speaks for a large proportion of workers in the war industries.

He recalled that only recently the AFL had communicated to the British trade union leadership a threat to walk out of its alliance with that organization if the CIO were given a seat at the table.

"The attitude was that the CIO unions would have to come back to the AFL on the AFL's own terms," Murray said. "If that is the kind of peace the AFL is thinking about, then it would be better that there never be any peace conferences, at least under conditions like these."

HILLMAN OFFERS SUPPORT

Hillman promised the support of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers to the coming unity talks, denied rumors that the CIO does not want unity and stressed the need for unity in labor as one important phase of national unity behind the war effort.

He lauded the work of the Joint Labor Victory Committee of AFL and CIO which has been meeting with Pres. Roosevelt, but said the time had arrived for a greater degree of unity than the committee represents.

Reuther called for the "throwing out of the vested interests in labor unions" if they stood in the way of unity, and urged support of the UAW's suggestion for talks among CIO and AFL unions in each industry to iron out difficulties.

(The discussion on labor unity, one of the last points on the convention agenda, occurred too late for full reporting in this issue of The CIO NEWS. It will be covered in greater detail in the next issue.)

Speakers Honor CIO Help to War

WARM WELCOME: Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson received a smiling welcome from CIO Pres. Murray when he reached the stage to deliver his address to the union parley. Patterson praised products of U. S. war workers.

Closer U. S., British Labor Ties Urged

Boston, Nov. 14.—Events of the war will bring "a greater knowledge of each other's achievements, problems and aspirations," among the American and British labor movements, Archibald M. Gordon, newly-appointed Labor Attache of the British Embassy, told CIO convention delegates.

GORDON

Gordon's appointment to the Embassy labor post, the first of its kind, is "not without significance," he said, adding that he will be able to study American labor developments and meet frequently with leaders of the union movement.

He described in some detail the various steps taken by the English government and unions to adjust the national economy to the war, and told of the various new agencies established to handle manpower, economic and welfare problems.

PEOPLE'S WAR

In Great Britain, Gordon reported, this is regarded as a people's war, but the question coming to many people's minds is "what shall we make of the victory?

". . . Let us rise to it and let us resolve that no devilish propaganda and evil and spurious machinations shall send our two countries on separate ways again . . ."

Mosher Brings Canadian Greetings

Boston, Nov. 14.—Greetings to CIO's fifth convention from the workers of Canada were conveyed to the delegates by Pres. A. R. Mosher of the Canadian Congress of Labor.

The Dominion's labor movement, long based on industrial unionism, "has regarded the growth and progress of the CIO with great admiration," he told the meeting.

MOSHER

Mosher said that locals of CIO Unions in Canada, which are affiliated to the Congress of Labor, have been "one of the most important factors" in the success of that organization.

He recalled that Canadian labor has never succeeded in getting a Wagner-Act type of law written into the books, so that organization has been hampered. But Pres. Murray's visit to Ottawa at the time of the Congress convention "was helpful" in bringing the workers' message to government officials, he declared.

"Another important result of Pres. Murray's visit to Canada," Mosher added, "was the removal of a cloud of misunderstanding with regard to the CIO, much of it deliberately created by opponents of labor, including certain newspapers which for many years have carried on a campaign of vilification against the CIO and the labor movement as a whole."

Governor, Boston Mayor Hail CIO's War Role

BOSTON, Nov. 14—The fifth CIO convention got off to a flying start with words of praise from Governor Leverett Saltonstall, CIO-endorsed Republican, and Mayor Maurice Tobin, of Boston.

The governor was introduced to the convention by President Joseph A. Salerno of the Massachusetts CIO. Saltonstall's speech reflected the whole-hearted interest in the war effort that won him CIO support in the recent elections.

Recalling the Bay State's long progressive record on legislation affecting labor, Saltonstall promised that every effort would be made to preserve these gains without injuring the war drive. Praising Massachusetts' industrial workers, he pointed to the fact that 10% of the Army-Navy E awards so far handed out have gone to Massachusetts companies and workers.

TOBIN

"You are concerned primarily today with how we can better the war effort," the Governor said, "and that should be our principal concern. But what concerns us also and must concern a great organization such as yours is what is going to come when this war is over.

WORK FOR FUTURE

"We have got to see to it that these millions of boys who are now fighting for us, who are sacrificing if necessary their lives in our behalf, come back to jobs, come back to opportunity to own a home, and raise and educate their families.

Mayor Tobin described the CIO convention as "the most important convention to Boston during this first year of the war."

Patterson:

CIO-Built Armaments Hurt Axis

Boston, Nov. 14.—CIO-built war instruments are performing at top efficiency on the world's battlefronts, to the consternation of the enemy, Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson reported this week to a wildly-cheering CIO convention.

Delivering a progress report on the war to date and the outlook for the next year, Patterson devoted much of his address to showing a highly favorable comparison "between the products of free American labor and those of slave labor under the Nazi 'New Order.'"

In Libya, he revealed, "90 of our light tanks—the kind that CIO men build—went through a whole month on the battlefront with only 12 minor mechanical failures. Before that, five to ten days of continuous operation of a tank without an overhaul was considered a remarkable record."

BETTER THAN NAZIS

Patterson said that documents found on a captured German officer showed that by contrast the Nazis were having their hands full with a constant succession of mechanical breakdowns.

"When the history of the United Nations' victory is written," he added, "the true historian will devote many pages to the battles that were won on the American production front. And the theme of those pages will be great skill, great zeal and great loyalty."

American labor has shown from the start a great consciousness of the challenge offered by the war, and in future months they will make sacrifices "unhesitatingly in the great common effort to free the world from tyranny, slavery and oppression," he predicted.

"The year 1943 will be a tough year. It is likely to be a year of heavy casualties. It takes loss of life and loss of blood to attack, to press the war home to the enemy, to win momentous battles."

Patterson lauded the fighting forces of all the United Nations, but warned that the "flow of munitions to the Russians, to the British, and to the Chinese must continue to increase, come hell or high water. . . . The year 1943 is the year we must conquer the submarine menace and cut down the losses of supplies destined for the Russians and the Chinese. And we must retake the Burman and reopen the Burma Road."

Safeguards Asked For Civil Rights

Boston, Nov. 14—The basic rights of free men in a free nation must be safeguarded if the morale of the American people is to be maintained in the war being fought to preserve and extend democracy, the CIO declared in a resolution on Civil Liberties passed unanimously at the convention.

"Any action which impairs that knowledge and expectation in any part of our people, impairs the security and morale of part of our war workers and fighters, impairs our war efforts," the resolution stated.

HIT LYNCHINGS

Referring to the brutal lynching of three Negroes in Mississippi and to the case of three men and one woman in Oklahoma sentenced to ten years in the State Penitentiary for the possession of books which may be found on the shelves of any large library in the country, the resolution said that such actions as these "are welcomed by our nation's enemies."

Renewing its pledge to carry on the fight for the preservation of civil rights, the resolution "calls upon the Department of Justice and State governments to prosecute to the fullest extent those responsible for lynchings."

Bard:

Unions Must Push All Output Ideas

Boston, Nov. 14.—A warning that the new type of anti-unionism, represented by "goose steps, silly salutes and intriguing bunk," must be fought with new and "different techniques," was sounded at the CIO convention by Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph A. Bard.

Bard, who has pioneered in helping to establish better and closer relations between the Navy and the forces of organized labor, reminded the delegates that "native anti-unionism at its blackest never conceived of enslavement and exploitation on the scale" of the Nazis.

"This war of destruction must be fought on the battle fronts of the world, not in the frightened spirit of defending our luxuries and our economic grasp over other men, but in a determined and offensive mood to stamp out the very virus that permitted us to let the power of nazism and fascism grow in the first place. . . .

PRAISES RUSSIA

"We have seen the people of our ally, Russia, grasp the full import of this war, and we can learn from them. . . . They have been giving us the boon of time with which to assemble our arms and our offensive spirit for a great drive that must one day raise the temples of the Nazi warlords, brick by brick.

"In our comfortable security, we in America should read the dispatches from the Russian battle fronts with humility and perhaps a little shame, and remember that we cannot pay our debt to the Russians until we have relieved them in their present ordeal."

To help the United States move towards victory, Bard called for every worker, every local, every production council to exert initiative to raise the total output of our armaments.

"CARRY THE BALL"

Asserting that labor "can carry the ball" and furnish national leadership by doing so, Bard suggested that unions, "by your own initiative, perhaps by breaking down production quotas, by adopting incentive systems as they are now doing even in Russia, by pushing the development of labor-management production committees, increase your output to the extent that it would equal the output of an additional several million men in our industry. That's one of the best ways I know to solve part of the manpower problem. One of your CIO unions suggests that production could be increased 20 to 30 per cent."

Greater production will come, he predicted, when labor "wants and decides" to forge ahead on the output front despite all obstacles.

the Soviet Union, the resolution declaring: "On the military front the brunt of the military power of Nazi Germany has been borne by the peoples and the armies of the Soviet Union.

"The losses which that nation has sustained both in manpower and resources, the sacrifices which the people have made, the heroism and bravery which they have demonstrated in the battles of Sevastopol and Stalingrad cannot be measured in words."

Similar tribute was paid to our other allies of the United Nations, and to the heroic people of the lands Hitler has conquered or invaded, who continue to resist Nazi tyranny.

Turning to the Army of our own country, the resolution said: "The military forces of the U. S. at Bataan and Corregidor have demonstrated a valor of which we, as Americans, can well be proud," and instructed President Murray to send a telegram of congratulations to President Roosevelt and to General Eisenhower "on the magnificent demonstration of the striking power of the American forces."

BRIEF DEBATE

There was brief debate on the resolution, with only two speakers —Van A. Bittner of the USA-CIO and Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers It was obvious that the delegates, delighted with the beginning of our offensive in Africa, wanted to let the resolution stand as the expression of their feelings.

Bittner called on the CIO to translate the offensive spirit of the resolution into offensive action on the home front for production and for total mobilization for total war, pledging that we would not let our boys down.

HONOR MRS. MURRAY: Mrs. Philip Murray, right, wife of the CIO head, receives a service flag at a Women's Auxiliary luncheon from Mrs. Ruth Allen, education director of the Marion County, W. Va., CIO Council. The flag was made by members of a United Mine Workers' Auxiliary. President and Mrs. Murray's son, Joe, is serving in the Army.

4-Day Parley Re-Elects CWA Officers

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—CWA top officers, who had been praised by CIO President Murray and other union leaders for excellent work, went back into office this week by unanimous election with a full win-the-war program outlined for the coming year.

Mrs. Faye Stephenson of Cleveland, president of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries; Mrs. Eleanor Fowler of Washington, D. C., secretary-treasurer of CWA, and Mrs. Julia Katz of Washington, CWA director, were all re-elected.

BOARD MEMBERS

Members of the executive board, which is based on representation from affiliated international auxiliaries, will be: Faye Collins, president of the Women's Auxiliary of the American Newspaper Guild; Esther Harmon, secretary of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the UERMWA; Dorothy Keene, president of the United Automobile Workers' Auxiliary; Clarette Orton, president of the International Woodworkers Auxiliary; Martha S. Callaway, national director of the auxiliary to the United Transport Service Employes; Billie Vincent, president of the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists' Auxilliary; Miriam Murphy, president of the Transport Workers' Auxiliary; Alice Neville of the Women's Auxiliary of the National Maritime Union; and Harriet Duffin, representing the auxiliary to the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers of America.

Auxiliaries not nominating vice-presidents at the conference will name representatives and submit them to the executive board.

Eighty-one auxiliary organizations will hear reports from auxiliary delegates for the second annual CWA meeting. Of these, 62 were local auxiliaries, 9 international, 4 state councils, 5 city councils and one district council.

Wives of mine workers in Carolina, W. Va., sent only one delegate to the second CWA conference, but the gift they sent with her meant much to the CWA and to Mrs. Philip Murray, wife of CIO President Murray and guest of honor at a luncheon Tuesday in the Statler.

A service flag with one star for her son Joseph Murray, now in the U. S. Army, was presented to Mrs. Murray by Ruth Allen, delegate from the West Virginia State Council of CIO Auxiliaries. Handmade, the flag represented the work of Mine Workers' Auxiliary members who sent with it "deepest affection and appreciation."

A county sheriff did his part toward increasing the representation at the CWA conference. When Mrs. Mary Orlich of the auxiliary to the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers of America, started out to collect money for her trip to Boston, the sheriff donated $25. The second $25 she collected by driving 40 miles through a snowstorm to follow up on a promised donation.

Tillie Olsen of San Francisco, newly-elected president of the California State CIO Auxiliary Council, was faced with the child-care problem when she was named delegate to the CWA conference. Mrs. Olsen, representing also the auxiliary to the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, found the answer. The Olsen daughters, aged four and ten, came as far as Omaha, Neb., where they will stay with their grandmother until picked up on the return trip.

Textile Union Wins

Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 14.—The Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, won an NLRB election here this week held among workers of the Kendall Co., Inc. The vote was 191 for the TWU to 110 for no union, reported Roy Lawrence TWU regional director.

'Help Women Aid War'—Auxiliary

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—An all-over program to facilitate the integration of women into the war effort was the outcome of the four-day conference in Boston of delegates from affiliates to the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries.

Recommending as the first necessary step the registration of women for war work, conference delegates endorsed projects for training of women in industry, war activities, consumers' problems and extension of organization of the auxiliaries. Passage of a resolution favoring centralized war economy was the keynote of the convention, with all actions taken in relation to their contribution towards helping win the war.

Child care as an important factor in supplying womanpower for the nation's factories; price control and rationing as a weapon in defending the living standards of the family to insure the working ability of the wage-earners; war activities for local auxiliaries were among the problems discussed by representatives of more than 80 auxiliary organizations.

MANY SUGGESTIONS

Chief emphasis in the program for child care will be on obtaining a national program under the War Manpower Commission, with trained and paid workers in charge of centers.

Provisions should be made, CWA delegates agreed, for both pre-school and school-age children. Housekeeping aides, low-cost government-owned restaurants, protection of women in factories and elimination of discrimination in employment are urged as aids in solving the problems of womanpower.

Pending the working out of a national program, auxiliaries will be urged to work for immediate establishment of child care centers with whatever funds and aid are available. A "Save the Children Week" will be observed by auxiliaries in all communities with local programs planned to bring pressure for action.

Nationwide rationing of all essential consumer goods and effective price ceilings with maintenance of quality form the basis of the consumer program adopted by CWA. In addition, recommendations include wage adjustments and stamp plan where necessary to protect production efficiency, and subsidies by the government where necessary to maintain prices on essential goods within the reach of all workers.

A demand that the poll tax be abolished in the Southern states, and that the Fair Employment Practices Committee use its full authority to utilize the skills of women and minority groups without discrimination were numbered among official actions of the conference.

HAIL U. S. OFFENSIVE

Greeting with "great joy and renewed courage the offensive unleashed in Northern Africa." delegates wrote Pres. Roosevelt that, "we, together with the peoples of occupied Europe, are solidly behind you in the development of this offensive into a second front in Europe."

Recognition by Vice-Pres. Wallace of the necessity for equal treatment of the sexes, as expressed in his speech at the Congress for Soviet-American Friendship meeting in New York last week, brought enthusiastic response from the women planning to take their rightful place on the production line."

MANY SPEAKERS

With numerous spokesmen for government agencies in attendance, the conference went on record favoring full union and auxiliary representation on local and national government agencies as a means of insuring full cooperation and participation of union groups.

Speakers at the conference included CIO Pres. Philip Murray, Reid Robinson, James B. Carey and R. J. Thomas, of the CIO's committee on auxiliaries; Margaret Hickey, chairman of the Woman's Advisory Committee on War Manpower Commission; Florence Kerr, assistant to the Federal Works Administrator; Edith Christensen, of the Office of Price Administration; Lt. Mildred Osby, of the WAAC's and others.

CIO Leaders Praise Auxiliaries' Work

BOSTON, Nov. 14.—"A wholesome respect" for the work of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries was expressed to delegates to the Boston conference by CIO President Philip Murray in a brief address.

"The future of the CIO movement will substantially depend," President Murray told auxiliary leaders, "on the support that the organization is given by women in industry and on the part played by the leaders who have guided the course of your organization. The splendid work which you have done reflects great credit on your organization and the type of people associated with and conducting your organizational affairs."

Pointing to the many problems which have developed in the war situation, President Murray said, "Because of the proximity of the auxiliaries to these problems, you perhaps have a greater understanding of them than any other group in America.

SAME PROBLEMS

"You have the same fundamental problems as those which face the CIO convention: the manpower problems, rationing, price-fixing, etc.

"In the midst of war, many of us who are in the labor movement cannot give too much time to the problems which grow out of the war itself," President Murray said in urging the development of larger and stronger auxiliaries. "We are relying on our zeal and understanding to help us build a greater labor organization."

Definite possibility of a national registration day in the very near future was indicated in Mr. Murray's remarks. He told of the insistence of union leaders that the registration bear no marks of compulsion, conscription or regimentation.

"Women are doing a better job than men in many places in industry, particularly in precision work in the aircraft and electrical factories," Murray said.

Citing the establishment of equal pay for women, Murray told of how the CIO had made this a principle two years ago. No contracts of the CIO are written today without such provision, he said.

"I have had a great personal satisfaction in working with your auxiliaries," he said. "All locals should encourage and lend wholesome support to the auxiliaries everywhere we have a local CIO union."

OTHER SPEAKERS

Effectiveness of women in factory work was earlier testified to by R. J. Thomas, one of the three members of the CIO's committee on auxiliaries. Reid Robinson, president of the IUMMSWA, and James B. Carey, secretary of the CIO, spoke to the conference as other members of the committee.

Giving full praise to the work of Eleanor Fowler, CWA secretary-treasurer and Julia Katz, CWA director, for legislative work as well as organizational work, Robinson urged that the auxiliaries set themselves a goal of "making all the women of this country know what we're fighting for. There is no place in a union or in a democracy for racial prejudices."

Women Join Convention War Fete

Boston, Nov. 14 — Flags of all the United Nations were carried to the platform of the CIO convention by women members of the CIO and the CIO Women's Auxiliaries in a colorful demonstration on Thursday dedicated to "an indictment of Hitler's new order."

Leo Krzycki of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and president of the All-Slav Congress presided at the demonstration, at which a group of delegates representing the various countries now held in slavery by Hitler told of the horrors the workers of those countries are now enduring.

An appeal to the workers of Europe read at the conclusion of the program, declared that the CIO greeted "every man and woman in the uniform of the armies of the United Nations and in the overalls of the mechanic and factory workers."

"Hundreds of thousands of CIO members have left mill, mine and factory in this hour of peril to democracy to don the uniforms of the United States Army and Navy," the message said.

"They are fighting in the Solomon Islands and in Egypt, they are flying over the industrial centers of Nazi-controlled Europe in planes built by our labor. They are stationed in England and in Australia ready for the great Allied offensive.

"They are sailing the high seas delivering the goods to our fighting allies in every quarter of the globe. We are standing behind them producing the greatest arsenal in the history of mankind."

H. V. K.—Please Note!

San Francisco, Nov.14 — Something to read while tuning out H. V. Kaltenborn: There were only six strikes involving 112 persons in California during October and none affected 750,000 busy war workers.

CIO WOMEN IN PARLEY: Representatives of CIO Women's Auxiliaries from as far away as San Francisco were present in Boston this week for the annual Auxiliaries convention. They had a full program of activities, discussion and talks by government and union leaders.

Text of Major Resolutions

Manpower

(1) It is clear that there exists today no coordinated planned program on the basis of which American workers can know precisely what is expected of them. We cannot afford to think of a manpower agency as a sort of fire department and emergency squad. We cannot afford to have other agencies proceed on a planless uncoordinated fashion and then rush the manpowef agency's squad car to the area of the industry of manpower crisis. Intelligent consideration of manpower mobilization does not involve the issue of compulsory or voluntary operation but rather the formulation of a national mobilization plan. The CIO is prepared to offer and to participate in the effectuation of such a plan.

(2) The distribution of manpower, the division between military, industrial and farm needs, the determination of the needed skills and areas and industries of need are all factors of our overall military and industrial picture. Production must be integrated with and considered in light of manpower distribution, housing facilities, training facilities along with raw material distribution and other related factors. The CIO therefore proposes that we meet our manpower problem along with all of our war production snags, our material shortage by immediate decisive action to bring our wartime organization under a single unified command. We propose that labor, management and the government join in bringing the functions of procurement of industrial and manpower mobilization and organization under a single joint control.

NECESSARY STEPS

(3) Immediate manpower problems have arisen because of the absence of such total war mobilization. Pending the formulation and effectuation of true total war mobilization, the following measures must be taken to alleviate the present difficulties.

a) Employers must be directed and compelled to utilize in full the service of Negro workers, aliens and women workers available in large numbers. Every restriction on the utilization of this manpower must be broken down and immediately eliminated. The CIO has not tolerated any such restrictions in its own ranks and now insists that the government see to it that the employers utilize this available manpower for the total war mobilization.

b) The administration of the Selective Service must be improved so that there may be an informed and expert centralized administration of the problems of industrial and farm organization in correlation with the needs of the armed forces.

EXPAND HIRING SERVICE

c) The United States Employment Service should be expanded and its service utilized for all hiring in war plants with full labor-management participation in all instances and with the aid of union hiring facilities, to assure the maximum utilization of our available manpower in the most efficient and coordinated manner.

d) There should be an immediate universal registration of all women within an appropriate age range in order to secure the fullest possible information regarding our total available labor and skills.

e) An effective system of nation-wide plant inspection must be instituted to ensure the fullest use of manpower in every plant and the harnessing of the highest skills of every worker through programs of job simplification training and upgrading.

FROZEN CHAOS

(4) The CIO views with complete suspician the motives of those who have rushed into print and into the halls of Congress with the direct and drastic plans to draft labor and nothing more. If we have manpower chaos today due to a lack of planned and centralized total war mobilization a job freeze merely freeze chaos and outrageous discriminatory practices. For these reasons the CIO expresses its absolute opposition to any such legislation or the drafting of any such legislation with so-called safeguards.

(5) The CIO condemns those who have utilized our nation's manpower problems as a cloak for attempting once again to attack long established legal standards for payment for work beyond forty hours a week. Such attacks seek merely wage cuts and have no relationship whatsoever to the number of hours actually worked or the increase of production. Such attacks impede our war effort by creating division and confusion, by impairing workers morale, by placing private profit above the needs of war production.

(6) Our manpower problems today and in the future result only from failure to organize the entire productive resources of the nation. Neither compulsion or voluntarism without organization and planning will solve any of these problems. We urge the adoption of a national mobilization plan which, with full participation of all elements in our population will bring about the integration of our war machinery.

The Second Front

WHEREAS, the interests of our nation and the cause of Victory can best be served through an immediate and striking offensive action against the Axis enemies. We rejoice that our armed forces in Africa are now beginning to take the war to Hitler.

On the military front the brunt of the military power of Nazi Germany has been borne by the peoples and the armies of the Soviet Union. The losses which that nation has sustained both in manpower and resources during the past year, the sacrifices which the people have made, the heroism and bravery which they have demonstrated in the battles of Sevastopol and Stalingrad cannot be measured by any words.

SHOW VALOR

The military forces of the United States at Bataan and Guadalcanal have demonstrated a valor of which we as Americans can well be proud. The Chinese people during their long years of struggle against the Japanese have also carried a torch for liberty and freedom. The British have suffered the wholesale bombing and slaughter by the Nazi beasts who sought unsuccessfully to bring those people to their knees.

The common people of the lands conquered by the Nazis, such as in France, Czechoslovakia, Greece, Yugoslavia, Holland and Belgium, in spite of all the torture and repression that have been exercised refuse to be enslaved. We hail their heroic efforts and urge them to continue their revolt against the Nazi overlords so that together with the United Nations we will, as united free people, smash and destroy the fascist beasts.

The appeasers and agents of Hitler seek to thwart the offensive spirit of our people couching their reasons in terms of hesitation, weakness and defeatism. The CIO is aware of such sinister forces in this country and elsewhere, knowing them as forces which seek to divide and to hamper our war effort by outright sabotage and by subtle campaigns of destructive innuendo and defeatism. The motivating force of these appeasers is one of defeat for the United Nations. They are the counterparts of the Lavals, Petains and Quislings of the United Nations.

DIVIDE AND CONQUER

It has been Hitler's course of conduct to divide and conquer. His hordes have overrun one nation at a time while other nations who were on his list awaited the attack instead of joining in united action to smash the Axis aggressors.

The common people under the leadership of organized labor now more than ever must place all of their strength and fighting spirit in support of the decision of the leaders of the United Natoins to carry the fight to our enemies until their complete military destruction and to expose the appeasers and disrupters. Therefore be it

RESOLVED, that (1) We hail with great pride the offensive of our American forces in Africa which in combination with the attack of the 8th British Army is delivering a mortal blow to the fascist forces of Rommel. This successful two front attack on the Axis Armies in Africa in the words of General Montgomery's Order of the Day " . . . is only the beginning of our task," and must lead to a speedy two front attack and complete destruction of the main Nazi forces on the European continent by the combined and overwhelming concentration of the armed might of the U. S., Great Britain and the Soviet Union. The President of the CIO shall immediately send a telegram of congratulations to our Commander in Chief and to General Eisenhower upon the magnificent demonstration of the striking power of the American forces.

(2) We call upon our Commander-in-Chief to make any demand and any request of labor and we pledge ourselves to give everything we can in fighting men, in production, in money and in patriotism to enable the United Nations to smash forward into Europe until our drive ends in the heart of Germany and the military destruction of the fascist Axis has been achieved.

(3) Labor has pledged—and renews its pledge of—its complete and absolute support to our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Tribute to Soldiers

Thousands of Americans have already made the supreme sacrifice for their country. These men who have died all over the world on land, on sea and in the air, have demonstrated a courage and a heroism which is the heritage of all Americans.

We salute these heroes. We now give our pledge that as soldiers of the home front we shall continue to provide an avalanche of materials of war to our armed forces so that they, with the armed forces of our United Nations may successfully terminate this war as quickly as possible. We also give our pledge that come what may we shall maintain at home the same offensive spirit as our soldiers, airmen and sailors and smash any attempt of the appeasers and defeatists who may seek to frustrate the heroic efforts of our armed forces in battle.

War Mobilization

WHEREAS, (1) Victory in the war against the enemies of our American democracy requires the fullest use of all of our national war production resources—our raw materials, our farmlands, our industrial facilities, and our human resources.

(2) In the mobilization of all of these factors for war production tremendous gains have been made—gains in the achievement of which the CIO has played an outstanding role.

(3) However, serious obstacles to the fullest achievement of the goal of total mobilization of our national resources for war have arisen in a number of respects.

a) The raw materials production has not been at its peak and the available raw materials have not been allocated on an efficiently planned basis such as to assure their most effective use.

SLOW CONVERSION

b) Industrial facilities have not been geared with each other and with our entire national production organization in such a manner as to assure the fullest and quickest conversion of facilities to war production and the fullest use of existing facilities large and small and a minimum of waste effort in the construction of new faciliites for war production.

c) Our man and womanpower has not been fully organized, mobilized, guided, trained and utilized to assure the maximum contribution from every person and group to our war production and to the armed forces.

(4) These circumstances place a heavy responsibility on labor in general and the CIO in particular; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, (1) National mobilization demands a nation-wide planning and utilization of all the material and manpower resources of the nation. Such a national mobilization requires a centralized administrative control of all of the resources and economic policies of the nation. The confusion and conflict now raging in the absence of a national planning and centralized administrative control of our war program must be ended immediately. A single administrative body should be established incorporating the activities of war supply, war manpower and of economic stabilization. The recommendations to this effect, contained in the recent Report of the Tolan Investigating Committee and the Tolan-Pepper bills must be put into effect with the utmost speed which can be done through executive action.

100% UTILIZATION

(2) Under such total war mobilization, all of the production facilities will be utilized on the basis of what is best for the nation. Centralized planning and control can determine the apportionment of facilities and materials between the military forces and our civilian needs. There can be no hindrance of such mobilization because of any profit or price problem or because of any fears of post-war difficulties.

(3) Under such total war mobilization, labor must concentrate on obtaining a wage program which will assure the most efficient workers for production consistent with the supply of consumer goods that can be made available under a war-time economy. Food, clothing, and shelter must be rationed on a universal basis and their prices controlled so as to protect first those who actually produce for war. Wages must be adjusted so as to guarantee to the workers that they will obtain the goods and services to meet their essential needs.

At the same time manpower resources must be utilized in full under the program of national and centralized planning and direction. This means that all of the manpower of the nation will be available to meet the needs of the armed forces, war production and agriculture.

(4) Total mobilization cannot operate or be organized except through the direct and fullest participation of labor—not through any advisory committee but with labor given the highest responsibility in the formulation and execution of all the policies and activities. This full and equal representation of labor has not been achieved. Many of our war agencies still cling to the risky notion that total war can be planned and carried out without the total participation of all our people. This condition must be corrected at once. The CIO therefore demands the participation of labor in all the administrative agencies which make and execute our war policies—and at every level.

(5) To the achievement of these objectives and in the interest of total war mobilization behind our Commander-in-Chief, the CIO, on behalf of its affiliates and members, pledges its complete and active support. Labor calls upon all other sections of our nation, businessmen and farmers, to give their combined and unified support behind an active and intensive campaign to obtain the immediate adoption and effectuation of this over-all program.

CIO Supports N. Y. Workers

Boston, Nov. 14—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York was called upon this week to direct his subordinates to cease obstructing municipal employes in their legitimate rights to organize for collective bargaining.

Pointing out that a million New Yorkers are union members, the CIO convention asserted that the city government, as Gotham's biggest employer, should grant organizing rights to its thousands of workers.

"It is unthinkable that the will of an electorate in which labor is such a determining factor can be so interpreted as to countenance an administrative policy which forbids New York City employes these elementary rights," the resolution declared.

Editors Meet U. S. Aides

Boston, Nov. 14—Editors of a score of CIO papers met with numerous government representatives this week to search for better methods of telling the story of the war and of unionism to the nation's millions of war workers.

The role of the labor press in wartime, plans for an eastern labor editors' conference, and the action of the WPB in giving no representation to labor, church or other types of non-daily papers on its newsprint industry committee, were discussed by the editors.

Ask Continuation Of WPA Funds

Boston, Nov. 14 — Pointing out that many workers still find it difficult to get jobs in private industry, CIO this week asked for an increase in WPA wage payments to meet rising living costs. It also demanded that WPA be maintained to help workers now and "because of its vast importance in the post war world."

Adopted by CIO Delegates

Unity With AFL

WHEREAS, unity of program and action on the part of the entire labor movement is indispensable for an all-out war effort to defeat Hitlerism.

An unprecedented degree of working unity has already been achieved by the AFL and CIO, particularly through the Combined Labor Victory Committee. Joint AFL-CIO committees have been already established in many Federal agencies and in many cities and states, particularly in connection with the recent elections.

Committes have been appointed by the AFL and CIO to initiate discussions on the possibility of establishing labor unity; therefore be it

BROADEN COMMITTEE

RESOLVED, that the Congress of Industrial Organizations, in convention assembled, commends the members of the Combined Labor Victory Committee and suggests that this Committee be broadened to include the Railway labor committees in all cities and states dedicated to the promotion of the war effort; and

We express our support and confidence in the committees representing the CIO and AFL to bring forward a fair and equitable program for the establishment of a unified labor movement dedicated to the winning of the war and the promotion of the basic and democratic interests of the working men and women of America. To achieve this goal, the following principles must be recognized:

PROTECT GAINS

1) Unity requires the maintenance and extension of the gains that the CIO has won for the workers through industrial organization in the basic war production industries. Sacrifice of these gains would aid the enemy, since victory depends on the strength of organized labor. All members in all unions shall be protected and any steps taken must receive the democratic approval of the membership involved. Unity should assure that all forms and practices of racial discrimination within unions be abolished.

2) Unity need not wait on the solution of jurisdictional disputes between the various affiliates of the American labor movement. These are matters that can be resolved within a unified national labor movement.

3) Nothing shall be permitted to weaken or destroy the present working unity that we have achieved on all measures necessary to wage an offensive war against our enemies by mobilizing all our resources for all-out prosecution of the war.

Intl. Labor Unity

WHEREAS, the maximum effort required of all nations in the war for freedom against fascism can be achieved only by the fullest cooperation of all the free peoples of the world.

Because of the primary role of labor in the war, a vital measure for achieving this cooperation is the complete and unequivocal unity of the millions of organized workers of the United Nations.

The full and direct collaboration of the trade union movements of the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, and the other United Nations can help secure maximum production to win the war, strengthen the war policies of the United Nations for the complete victory over fascism, and assure a just and democratic peace for all people.

The AFL proposal for British labor to act as liaison between the American labor movement and the Soviet labor movement and for the AFL to act as liaison between the British labor and the CIO and Railway labor unions falls far short of labor's responsibilities in this crucial period and must be rejected; therefore, be it

RESOLVED, that this convention commends and reaffirms the position taken by President Philip Murray and the CIO Executive Board that the liaison arrangement proposed by the AFL is inadequate and unacceptable.

That the CIO continue to take all necessary steps to establish international labor cooperation with direct participation by the British and Soviet unions, the AFL, the CIO and Railway Labor, and the unions of the other United Nations, including our Latin-American allies; and

Pending the accomplishment of this objective, the CIO should arrange immediately for an exchange of information with such trade union bodies of the United Nations with respect to production and all other activities which would strengthen our common war effort through the exchange of committees, delegations and such other channels as may be feasible.

Discrimination

WHEREAS, Discrimination against workers because of race, religion or country of origin is an evil characteristic of our fascist enemies. We of the democracies are fighting fascism at home and abroad by welding all races, all religions and all peoples into a united body of warriors for democracy.

Any discriminatory practices within our own ranks, against Negroes or other groups, directly aids the enemy by creating division, dissension and confusion. Such discrimination practiced in employment policies hampers production by depriving the nation of the use of available skills and manpower.

THEREFORE, Be it Resolved that the CIO now reiterates its firm opposition to any form of racial discrimination and renews its pledge, as a war-time duty, to carry on the fight for protection in law and in fact of the rights of every racial and religious group to participate fully in our social, political and industrial life.

Tribute to Pres. Murray

Victory for the United Nations in this struggle of the people against the reactionary fascist forces throughout the world requires courageous and intelligent leadership from organizations of labor and the people to establish and put into action policies which will fully mobilize the entire nation behind a total war effort.

Philip Murray has given statesmanlike leadership to American labor, has guided the Congress of Industrial Organizations in organizing labor for Victory, has rallied the membership of the CIO for production for Victory, and through his sound policies and wise counsel has influenced not only organized labor but millions of unorganized workers and other sections of the American people.

The CIO therefore now voices its appreciation to Philip Murray for his wholehearted support of the Commander-in-Chief, for the contributions which he has made to mobilize labor and the people of America behind the war effort, for the leadership he has given in gearing the CIO to work for Victory on the military, economic, and production fronts, and for the wise guidance he has given on all problems before the American people.

Organizing

(1) That the CIO renews its determination to continue and expand the organization of the unorganized in the war industries—such as aviation, steel, electrical manufacturing, munitions ,shipyards, oil, chemical and rubber—in strong industrial unions that will mobilize the nation's total effort for full war production. The CIO will initiate national and regional conferences for the purpose of correlating the full strength and forces of the several CIO unions in order to accomplish this extremely important task.

(2) We must direct special attention to the new problems and new opportunities arising from the influx of millions of workers into these industries who have not previously been employed therein. We refer specifically to the women workers now coming into the war production plants, to the numbers of Negro workers now being employed at CIO demand for the first time in other unskilled jobs, to the numbers of former white collar professional workers who are now working on direct production jobs, and to the farm workers finding factory work for the first time.

MEET NEW PROBLEMS

We must also direct special attention to the new problems which face labor today because of the war situation. We must prepare ourselves to represent most effectively the interests of labor before such governmental agencies as the National War Labor Board and the Office of Price Administration. We must assure labor that only through union organization will it receive the full protection so essential in achieving total war mobilization.

(3) We welcome these new fellow workers into our industrial unions and shall undertake the task of bringing the full realization of the importance of industrial organization to them, and to the cause of our common victory. In doing this we will bring to them the benefits of collective bargaining and to our nation the added strength, discipline and leadership necessary for an early victory and a just peace.

War Information

WHEREAS (1) The full understanding of the issues involved in the war against the Axis arms the people with greater strength and determination and helps them to work and to fight with greater fortitude than is otherwise possible, as has been shown by those nations that have met the Axis armies in full conflict.

(2) The nature and aims of this war have been described by President Franklin D. Roosevelt, by Vice President Henry A. Wallace and by other leaders of our country and of the United Nations. Their public statements have furnished the basis for spreading the knowledge of the kind of war we are fighting and the nature of our enemy to our people and to all nations.

DEFEATIST PROPAGANDA

(3) At the same time, the agents of disunity and defeat in our country are carrying on a studied campaign through certain sections of the press and the radio to obscure the issues involved in the war and to spread suspicion and distrust among the people of the United Nations. This has been done both through a policy of ignoring the basic issues at stake and a more brazen policy of misrepresentation of our own war aims and those of our allies.

(4) This disruptive, defeatist campaign on war issues is tied in with a constant drive by the same forces, to slander organized labor and to prepare the ground for attacks on labor standards and on labor's part in war production.

HIT McCORMICK PRESS

Therefore, be it resolved that the CIO goes on record condemning the disruptive and appeaser line pursued by certain sections of the press and the radio, most notcriously in the McCormick Chicago Tribune, Patterson New York Daily News and Washington Times-Herald, and Hearst newspapers.

We call upon the government information agencies responsible for the direct job of building morale and national unity to undertake a vigorous educational drive to spread understanding of the nature of the war and of our enemies, based on the fundamental aims outlined by President Roosevelt and other United Nations leaders.

We further undertake through our own unions and all other means of communication we have to aid government agencies in carrying out this necessary task, to the end that all people may understand the full nature of our war against fascist aggression and through that understanding fight with greater strength and determination than before.

Economic Problems

(1) Labor does not seek any special privileges or the protection of selfish interests in the formation of a just program of national economic stabilization. We merely seek the adoption of policies which will assure the maximum utilization of all our manpower and all our resources in a manner that will guarantee an early victory in this war. Labor does not think in terms of sacrifices because it takes for granted that whatever is necessary to win the war must be done. We assume that all Americans accept with pride the opportunity to make any contribution necessary to defeat the Axis enemies.

(2) The cost of living for the people must be stabilized. Whatever has to be done to accomplish this end should be done. The Price Administrator must adjust and maintain the prices of goods or commodities at a level low enough to stabilize the cost of living and to bring and keep the necessities of lifewithin the reach of all our people.

(3) An immediate program should be invoked to assure an overall rationing of foods and other necessities. Those who work for a living must be guaranteed that they will receive sufficient food and other necessities that will give them the strength to accomplish our national objective of absolute maximum production.

TAX PROGRAM

(4) Congress should proceed to adopt a Win-the-War tax program and Administration leaders in Congress and in the Cabinet must assume their full responsibility in the fight for such a program.

This program must embrace first the protection of a minimum standard for low income groups to permit them to buy the goods they need to maintain their health and thereby assure maximum production, and second, the full taxation of all other income to enable the government to finance the war. Married couples should be compelled to submit joint returns. Tax-exempt securities must be taxed. Normal and surtaxes on corporate incomes must be increased. Gift and estate taxes must be increased.

Special privileges now afforded to mining and oil companies for depletion allowances must be eliminated.

STABILIZE WAGES

(5) Wages should continue to be stabilized but not frozen. The wage program should be measured in terms of what will best assure the most efficient workers for production. Wages must be adjusted so as to guarantee to the workers sufficient money to purchase the basic needs of a secure and healthful living. Wage adjustments must continue to be made to eliminate substandard conditions and all outstanding inequalities and discriminatory practices. Wage freezing must be condemned as a blow against the fullest persecution of our war effort.

(6) The CIO calls upon the National Economic Stabilization Board to initiate policies which will immediately carry into effect this economic stabilization as an integral part of the total war mobilization program.

Atlantic Charter & India

WHEREAS, the Atlantic Charter outlines the aspirations of free people for national independence and the right to live unmolested by aggression or oppression by other powers.

President Roosevelt and other United Nations leaders have stated that the Atlantic Charter contains the basic liberties for which all the United Nations and all free people are fighting, and it has been accepted wholeheartedly by the anti-Axis nations and peoples as a common war aim. President Roosevelt has further made it clear that the principles of the Charter apply to all countries and all people, barring none and relegating none to an inferior subject place.

POTENTIAL MAJOR ALLY

The 350 million people of India constitute one of our greatest sources of strength in the war against world-wide Axis imperialism, and can become a major ally whose will for freedom is the equal of our own or of any of the United Nations.

The resources of India, both in population and in materials, are not now mobilized against the Axis. The conflict now raging in India can only help the Axis enemy.

The millions of people of the colonial countries throughout the word are anxiously awaiting the solution of this problem. We know that only through the unity of action between us and these peoples can we destroy the Axis forces. These colonial peoples must be aroused and united as part of the United Nations. The Atlantic Charter must be made a living reality for them if we are to expect their fighting support and coooperation; now, therefore, be it

AID INDIAN PEOPLE

RESOLVED, that the CIO supports the aspirations of the Indian people for the national independence needed to mobilize their energies and resources for a full part in the war against Axis aggression.

The CIO urges the President of the United States to exert his influence to secure the liberation of the Indian Congress leaders now imprisoned and the immediate resumption of negotiations between the British government and the representatives of the Indian people looking toward the establishment of a national government in India that will mobilize the people and resources of that country for total war and total victory over the Axis.

4 U. S. Agencies Ask Industry To Hire More Negroes To Help Win War

Washington, Nov. 14—Four major war agencies—the War Manpower Commission, the War Production Board, the Navy and the Army—today urged American war contractors to hire more Negro workers as a means of increasing war production.

The strongly-worded pamphlet, which is being mailed to more than 30,000 war production contractors, reviews America's production goals and lists and debunks four basic objections which some employers have raised to the employment of Negroes:

(1) Negroes Just Can't Do the Work.—"The Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Company employs more than 6,000 Negroes as machine operators, outside machinists, stage builders, riggers, bolters, drillers, regulators, chippers, caulkers, blacksmiths, and skilled, semi-skilled and unskilled workers in a dozen other categories."

(2) Negroes and Whites Just Won't Work Together.—"The best answer to this one is a simple truth: Negroes and Whites do work together. They are working together in plants like Ford, Kelsey Hayes, Murray Corporation."

(3) The Unions Won't Let Us Hire Negroes.—"Less than two dozen of the more than 200 major unions in this country have constitutional bans against Negro workers."

(4) We're Only Interested in Production.—"The employment of Negroes is a production factor . . . Unless American industry uses qualified Negro workers, and trains thousands of additional Negroes, just as we train white men and women, we cannot have full production."

WLB Ruling Extended To City Case

Washington, Nov. 14—The authority of the War Labor Board was extended to cover municipal employes this week in a ruling affecting a strike situation in Newark, N. J. A majority of a mediation panel recommended that the Board take jurisdiction in a dispute between the Dept. of Public Works and the State, County and Municipal Workers Union, which led to a six-day strike last month. The panel stated:

"The activities of the municipal employes may be, and in this case are, just as intimately connected with the war effort as those of other employes. Unrest and dissatisfaction arising out of terms and conditions of employment among municipal employes can hamper the successful prosecution of the war. The prosecution of a foreign war, being within the exclusive province of the federal government, it is unthinkable that the National War Labor Board would endanger the war effort by failing to concern itself with the problems of municipal employes to the same extent that it concerns itself with the problems of those employed by private individuals or corporations."

Food Cost Up Yet Pay Cut Is Urged!

Washington, Nov. 14—The U. S. Dept. of Labor this week reported that the cost of food for an average worker's family rose 2.4 per cent from September 15 to October 13, yet a Special Senate Committee Investigating the National Defense Program recommended in effect that wages of non-war industry workers be cut.

The recommendation urged suspension of the 40-hour week in non-war industries and lengthening of the week to 48 hours "whenever practicable." Suspension in non-war industries would be "with the proviso that employers be permitted to pay overtime to the extent paid in 1942."

While thousands of workers protected by union contracts would be able to resist successfully any attempt to abolish payment of overtime for the first eight hours after 40, other thousands unprotected by union agreements would suffer wage cuts, in the face of advancing prices.

Belittling the agitation for the abolition of the 40-hour week as instigated by a desire for more profit instead of for more production, President Roosevelt this week pointed out that important war industries already are working 48 hours and that the over-all average is from 46 to 47 hours. The President reminded the press that the Wage-Hour Law does not limit hours but does regulate wages.

The Senate Committee, in other recommendations, urged that a single head be made responsible for military and war production manpower demands; that in the absence of a basic manpower policy, compulsion be avoided; that racial and sexual discrimination be abolished in hiring; and that nursery schools be established to care for children of working mothers.

Michigan Pay 4c An Hour!

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 14—Michigan employers have paid child workers as low as four cents an hour, the State Dept. of Labor & Industry reported this week, and adult employes have been forced to work as many as 100 hours a week without overtime.

Inspections also revealed an employer paying a watchman $4 a day for a 77-hour week. The U. S. Wage-Hour Administration found that among 626 plants inspected between July 1, 1941 and Jan. 1, 1942 only 17 per cent either completely or substantially complied with the federal law.

Last Western Rubber Plant Organized

Denver, Col., Nov. 14 — The last open shop citadel in the rubber industry in the West has fallen to the United Rubber Workers Union. The organization this week announced that employes of the Gates Rubber Co. voted 718 to 549 for the URW in a Labor Board election.

Russ-U. S. Accord Seen Vital to Democratic Peace

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—Paying high tribute to the Soviet Union and praising the Red Army for exterminating "at least 20 times as many Germans" as have the rest of the United Nations Allies, Vice-President Henry A. Wallace this week told a Madison Square Garden rally of the Congress of American Soviet Friendship that "in order that the United Nations may effectively serve the world it is vital that the United States and Russia be in accord as to the fundamentals of an enduring peace based on the aspirations of the common man."

"Russia and the United States," the Vice-President said, "have had a profound effect on each other. Both are striving for the education, the productivity and the enduring happiness of the common man.

"The new democracy, the democracy of the common man, includes not only the Bill of Rights, but also economic democracy, ethnic democracy, educational democracy and democracy in the treatment of the sexes.

"Somewhere," Wallace told a capacity audience, "there is a practical balance between economic and political democracy. Russia and the United States have been working toward this practical middle ground.

"Russia has probably gone further than any other nation in the world in practicing ethnic democracy," Wallace declared.

He said that "we can learn much, for unfortunately the Anglo-Saxons have had an attitude toward other races which has made them exceedingly unpopular in many parts of the world. We have not sunk to the lunatic level of the Nazi myth of racial superiority, but we have sinned enough to cost us already the blood of tens of thousands of precious lives."

CIO union leaders participating in the meeting included Pres. R. J. Thomas of the UAW-CIO and Sec.-Treas. Jacob Potofsky of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

1,600 Output Groups Hike Production

Washington, Nov. 14 — Labor-management production committees in 1,600 American factories, mines, collieries, railroads, mills and war plants have boosted production to beat the Axis as much as 35 per cent, the War Production Board announced this week.

"The WPB has received more than 200 unsolicited reports of production increases," the agency stated. "These reports noted increases as high as 35 per cent and higher. In addition, there have been hundreds of other reports on successful salvage drives; on the elimination of waste; on the speeding up of operations; on the elimination of the combination of operations; on the substitution of more readily available materials; on improvement of production and on the reduction of absenteeism."

Ford Back Pay Totals $2,600,500

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 14—An arbitrator's award of $924,000 in back pay to 1,197 Ford Motor Co. employes this week brought to $2,600,500 the total of back pay won in charged for union activities before Labor Board cases by men distween 1937 and 1941, the United Auto Workers Union said today.

Nickel Monopoly's Open Shop Cracking

SUDBURY, Ontario, Nov. 21 (ALN)—With the CIO International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers holding a series of mass workers' meetings here this week, the open-shop sway of the International Nickel Corporation over its thousands of employes, who produce almost the entire nickel supply of the United Nations, has at long last been cracked.

The demonstrations, climaxing many months of "underground" organizing by the union, were the first ever to be held in this INCO-dominated town.

A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor, was principal speaker at the meetings, originally scheduled for the Capitol Theater. At the last moment permission to use the theater was revoked.

In response to a call by the union, workers jammed the recently opened union hall and the street outside.

FDR Orders Monty-Ward Accept Union Security

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—The Natl. War Labor Board was backed up today by Pres. Roosevelt, who ordered the Montgomery-Ward Co. to accept a decision calling for maintenance of union membership and checkoff of union dues.

The WLB order, involving the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, affected 6,800 workers in the firm's warehouse, mail order house and retail store in Chicago.

Presidential action became necessary when the company—one of the biggest retail outlets in the nation—took paid advertisements in the press to wail about regimentation. It said only orders from FDR would be acceptable—and those, obviously, without much grace.

The White House acted quickly to back up the board's authority.

BLASTS McNEAR

In another action against a die-hard employer, the WLB notified George P. McNear of the Toledo, Peoria & Western R. R. that the property will not be returned to private owners at least for the duration of the war. The road passed into government hands last March following McNear's refusal to accept a board order.

In a series of other actions, the board:

1. Announced it will grant wage increases only in exceptional cases—and definitely not to solve manpower problems except on request of other U S. agencies, nor to eliminate all substandard living incomes.

2. Extended its jurisdiction to all labor disputes in non-war industries in which wage adjustments are involved.

3. Named Cyrus Ching, vice-president of U S. Rubber, to full membership as an employer representative on the board, succeeding E. J. McMillan, resigned

4. Revealed it had closed 352 cases, involving 2,181,000 workers, between Jan 12 and October 31.

5. Extended until Dec. 1—in order to prevent hardship "resulting from innocent action in the period of transition"—the deadline for seeking approval of wage increases gained in collective bargaining prior to Nov. 7.

6. Denied a request by 4,000 CIO glove workers for wage increases from 41 upstate New York manufacturers.

Insurance Men Win Mass. Poll

Boston, Nov. 21—The CIO Office and Professional Workers today won its fourth state-wide poll among agents of the Prudential Life Insurance Co., sweeping to a 377-175 victory in Massachusetts.

Earlier victories had been gained in New York, Michigan and New Jersey. The UOPWA now represents 7,000 of Prudential's 18,000 agents.

Steel Local Pushes Scrap Campaign

Gary, Ind., Nov. 21—Members of Local 2143 USA-CIO, at the Standard Steel Spring Company, recently inaugurated a double-barreled scrap metal salvage program which a WPB representative hailed as unique and recommended to other industries interested in utmost cooperation in the nation's war program.

The Gary war plant's program, with unanimous concurrence of the members of Local 2143, aims to help not only the scrap drive but also the various war aid agencies affiliated with the United War and Community Chest.

On Saturday, Nov. 7, representatives of the company and of the union turned over to the Gary war chest a check for $165 representing proceeds from sale of 24,000 pounds of dormant scrap, most of it lying in plant yards.

The company donated the scrap, the union employes donated hours of their time to gather it on a Saturday when otherwise they would have enjoyed rest from their important war jobs.

Hail CIO Ties With Working Farmers

Organizing Seen Task To Aid War

BOSTON, Nov. 21—The importance of linking organizing drives with drives to speed the war production program, and the new problems presented under the war program were stressed by a number of delegates at the CIO convention.

Instances of the progress made during the past year in the face of all the difficulties were enumerated by Allan S. Haywood, director of organization and newly-elected vice-president, who said that "the CIO hasn't done so badly in the last year in organizing workers. It can do better in the coming year, and should do so."

Speaking on the resolution calling for an expansion of the CIO's organizing efforts, Phil Van Gelder of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers said that "unless we can bring within our organization the thousands of workers in the war industries, we will not be able to do the kind of a production job or reach the peak of production efficiency that is necessary to win this war."

'ACTION, NOT TALK'

Richard Frankensteen of the United Automobile Workers in discussing the problems unions must face in view of the thousands of new workers being brought into industry, warned against talking "in platitudes about all the things we ought to do and the millions we are going to organize."

He called attention particularly to the need of organizing the women workers now working in aviation and other industries in large numbers.

W. H. Crawford of the Atlanta CIO Council called for a stronger organizing drive in the South, and Henry Wenning of the State, County and Municipal Workers told of opposition encountered by his union from anti-labor state and local officials.

ALL SHOULD PITCH IN

Joe Curran, president of the National Maritime Union said that more than "beautiful speeches" were needed to really carry through the organizing job and urged the delegates and organizers to "pitch into the drives we have under way in the field."

Attention was called to the need of forceful drives in the retail and wholesale industry by Jack Altman of the United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes which he said is "playing an important part in our war effort."

Van A. Bittner drew on his years of experience in the union movement to lay down some fundamental organizing principles.

"The unions that have been really successful," he said, "are the unions that have gone out and done this job of organizing, not spending too much time laying plans and finding out what somebody else is going to do to help them."

Eleanor Nelson of the United Federal Workers, speaking of the obstacles that women face in going into unions, urged that they be educated as to what the union means and "brought into progressive leadership in this country during the war period."

DESCRIBES OIL DRIVE

Describing the drive of the Oil Workers International Union to organize the petroleum industry, Pres. O. A. Knight said "it is one of the remaining mass-production industries in this nation that is unorganized and is still dominated by company unions."

Martin Wagner, president of the United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, asked for the strong support of the CIO for this newly-affiliated CIO national union, both in its struggles against the raids of District 50, United Mine Workers, and in its drives to organize the unorganized in the industry.

In concluding the discussion on the organizing resolution, CIO President Philip Murray urged the CIO to redouble its efforts "and when the convention is over, go out and work harder, more more hours, put more effort and more energy into it . . ."

A Few Tips for Your Rich Uncle— How To Live on 25 Grand

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 21—The nation's "upper crust" top-income families today were offered some advice (at no cost) on how to live on $25,000 a year.

The advice came from Mrs. Ben Hutt, a Nebraska farmer's wife, and from Fred D'Avila, editor of the Baltimore edition of The CIO NEWS—winners of the top two awards in a Natl. Farmers Union essay contest.

Though both prize winners live on considerably less, they had some good suggestions for those poor souls who must scale down their standard of living to $500-a-week levels after taxation.

'DON'T GRASP PROBLEM

"Most of the essays submitted showed clearly the inability of most Americans to imagine the details of spending a net income of $25,000 a year," the NFU commented.

"As previously noted, most contestants were unable to figure out how to spend that much money, let alone reducing a larger expenditure to that limit. . . . The Natl. Farmers Union hopes that the winning essay will impress upon them the sacrifices which the great majority of Americans expect them to make."

Mrs. Hutt, whose essay got first prize, offered a number of suggestions for savings and concluded:

"My brother was a gunner on a bomber at Clark Field on Bataan. I wonder if he thinks it's necessary to have $25,000 a year?"

D'AVILA OFFERS BUDGET

D'Avila's essay presented a complete budget for the 25-grand-a-year folk. Here's his advice, in full:

We're really awfully sorry for the poor, poor millionnaires who may have to learn to live on $25,000 a year—and what's more, may have to learn to like it. In the interests of preventing starvation among these people (We'll simply have to live in rags, my deah), we herewith offer a sensible budget which should keep them in coffee and cakes and provide for an occasional flop some place else except a park bench.

Herewith, the figures, assuming that the $25,000 is net income after Uncle Sam has collected the taxes:

Rent — air-conditioned apartment at $200 a month	$2,400.
Food—$1 for breakfast, $2 for lunch, $3 for dinner for family of four	$8,760.
Clothing — includes one mink coat for wife every year (at $1,000)	$5,000.
Medical and dental care, insurance, etc.	$2,000.
Recreation—movies, plays, drinks, vacation in Maine or Florida	$2,000.
Incidentals — upkeep of cars, razor blades, tooth paste, etc.	$2,000.

The grand total is $22,160 a year (add it up yourself!) and that ain't hay! Out of the $25,000 this poor man's budget allows $2,840 a year to stack away in government bonds or the nearest savings bank.

Personally, we feel we could learn to live on this. How about you?

Carey Cites Benefits Won by All

Oklahoma City, Okla., Nov. 21—Sounding an urgent plea for more and better cooperation between working farmers and the forces of organized labor, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey told the Natl. Farmers Union convention that joint activity between the two groups has already beaten back tory onslaughts on New Deal legislation.

Carey paid high tribute to the NFU and to its leader, Pres. James Patton, who, he said, "stands as far above those reactionary farm leaders as Pike's Peak is higher than the bottom of Grand Canyon.

"When labor and working farmers oppose, hate and fight—democracy falls apart and dictatorship takes over, enslaving both," Carey warned.

"In the past year, you and your president have raised and kept flying a standard to which all working farmers could rally. This has been of vital importance because of the sabotage of national unity that has been carried on by the leaders of other farm organizations.

HITS MISLEADERS

"These misleaders, working in close alliance with reactionaries in industry, business and banking, have opposed the Commander-in-Chief in the conduct of the war at nearly every step."

Efforts to skin the Farm Security Administration, to "rip out" labor and social legislation, to "wreck" FDR's anti-inflation program, and to put the entire war effort "on a fascist basis" have been blocked by the coalition of liberal, farm and labor groups, the CIO official recalled.

"This has not been accidental," Carey asserted. "It has been possible because (1) more than 12,000,000 wage earners are organized into strong independent unions willing and able to defend their hard-won rights; (2) because labor had the support of the Farmers Union and other liberal and progressive organizations and groups; and (3) because in the White House there is a man who does not now believe it necessary to throw away the freedoms we now have in order to get the four freedoms after the war."

'Workers Know Score On War' Morgenthau Tells Labor Press

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21 — The man who helped FDR drive the money-changers out of the temple of government this week threw some sincere bouquets to organized workers of the nation.

Seated behind a cluttered desk in a sunny corner at the sprawling Treasury Department building, Secretary Henry J. Morgenthau held the first Washington press conference in years to which only representatives of labor papers were invited. It was a novel experience both for the Treasury boss, who lost his initial nervousness as the meeting progressed; and for the labor press editors, who found the Secretary ready and willing to give frank and intelligent replies to their queries.

The Secretary's recognition of labor's place in this war effort made a curious contrast to the portraits of early 19th century Treasury Secretaries which adorn his office. Most of them looked like the sort who would toss widows and orphans into the street first thing in the morning before getting down to the day's real work.

LABOR 'MOST HELPFUL'

"The Treasury normally looks to the financial community for backing, but I have always said that the most consistent and most helpful backing I get comes from organized labor," Morgenthau, a veteran New Dealer, told the labor editors. He mentioned union support for the Administration's tax and war bond campaigns.

Then he warmed up to the subject.

"I have always felt very strongly, right from the beginning, that the working men and women understand more what this World War was about than anybody else, and they did not have to be propagandized to let them know what we were fighting against," he went on.

"In my recent trip to England I found that the working people there also know what it is all about, and they too have a deep-seated hatred against Hitler and what he stands for."

The Secretary's comments ranged from replies to questions about specific angles of the war bond campaign to broad discussions of all phases of this people's war. His answers, many of them necessarily off-the-record, would have brought down the house in any American union meeting.

One reporter wanted to know how many war bonds are being cashed in after 60 days—a subject which has been widely whispered throughout the country.

"These reports," Morgenthau declared, "are false. They are propaganda. Any redemptions have been trivial. I checked it again for September, the last income tax payment month, and they had not gone up at all."

He quoted statistics to show the high percentage of war bonds bought by organized workers — some 23,000,000 are socking away 8 per cent of their wages each pay day—and predicted success in six forthcoming joint labor-industry campaigns now being arranged.

As for taxes—the Treasury, he said, will continue to seek to tax those best able to pay, to tap reservoirs of wealth now getting away with less than their share, to place all taxation on the most equitable basis possible.

And without mincing any words, Morgenthau indicated that President Roosevelt and the Administration are going to need full support from labor to get such a tax bill through the reactionaries on Capitol Hill.

Local Gives Bonds To 1,000 Members

Brooklyn, N. Y., Nov. 21—In a move to promote still greater purchases of war bonds by its membership, Local 3 of the CIO Fur & Leather Workers Union will present $20,000 worth of bonds to its 1,000 members. Workers in Local 3 have already reached the half-million dollar mark in their purchases. Every single member is purchasing war bonds on the 10 per cent payroll deduction plan.

French Seamen Get CIO Appeal To Scuttle Adolf

New York, Nov. 21—Frederick N. Myers, vice-president of the National Maritime Union, in a government-sponsored, short-wave broadcast to France and North Africa this week appealed to French seamen "to sail at once for Gibraltar or the Allied occupied ports of Western Algeria, or else scuttle your ships in a harbor or outer harbor, rather than run the risk of seeing it seized by the enemy."

Citing the bonds that joined the French and American maritime unions in their struggles against native reaction in 1936 and 1939, Myers told the French seamen: "today, as yesterday, the watchword is fraternization against tyranny, against Fascism, to defeat the enemy."

Pledge Support To Yanks in Action

Pittsburgh, Nov. 21—A telegram pledging full support of 45,000 production soldiers in the electrical, radio and machine industries in Western Pennsylvania, "to assure the success of our country and our Allies in the offensive which we have begun, and in extending this offensive," has been forwarded to President Roosevelt.

Sent by Pres. Michael Fitzpatrick and Sec.-Treas. Harold K. Briney of District Council 6, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, CIO, the pledge expressed by the officers of District 6, UERMWA, has been sent to every local affiliated with the council for ratification by the members.

'U. S. Stands Aghast At Filibuster'--Murray

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—Sharp opposition to the week's filibuster in the Senate against the poll tax repeal bill was expressed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a letter sent this week to all Senators, and in a statement from the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax.

Murray's letter declared that "the nation stands aghast and enraged at the tactics of the small bloc in the Senate which is seeking to frustrate majority rule in this nation," and added that failure to defeat the filibuster will be "a failure to support the heroic forward movement of our armed forces in Africa and other parts of the world today."

Pointing out that the people of the nation have shown their will to end the poll tax and bring millions of disfranchised citizens into full participation in the war, the National Committee demanded that all Senators return to Washington and take action against the filibuster.

HIT SABOTAGE TACTICS

Sabotage tactics on the bill led Senate Majority Leader Barkley to order the "arrest" of Senators deliberately staying away from the debate in order to prevent attainment of a quorum. This action has been countered by the alliance of poll taxers from the South with reactionary Republicans from the North to delay consideration of the bill by every parliamentary trick in the bag.

These tricks have included an insistence on reading the minutes of the previous day, consuming hours in correcting commas, threats to tack anti-labor amendments to the bill, refusal to let the bill be brought up for consideration, and plain, old-fashioned filibustering.

The bill passed the House some time ago, after strong labor and progressive demands forced it out of the poll tax-dominated Rules Committee.

Practising--- And Preaching

Washington, Nov. 21—A handful of reactionaries was making mockery of the democratic tradition this week, holding up the work of the U. S. Senate, filibustering, stalling, ranting and attacking democracy—all in the hope of forestalling a vote on the Geyer-Pepper Bill.

Among them are Senators who at various times have accused the nation's workers of loafing, of stalling, of being undemocratic, of being unmindful of the national interest, of staging sit-down strikes, of disturbing national wartime unity.

It's o.k. to do all these things, apparently, only in the U. S. Senate.

NLRB Orders Hearing At Kaiser Yards

Washington, Nov. 21—The Natl. Labor Relations Board, after weeks of delay, has ordered hearings on CIO charges of unfair labor practices at the Kaiser Shipyards in the Pacific Northwest.

The NLRB's complaint named the Kaiser Co., Inc., at Vancouver, Wash., and Swan Island, Portland, Ore., and the Kaiser-owned Oregon Shipbuilding Corp. at Portland, Ore. Original complaints were filed by the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, which accused the company of rendering aid and assistance to 16 AFL unions in recruiting and maintaining membership.

Basis of the complaint was that the companies and the AFL unions got together on closed shop contracts long before there were any appreciable number of workers on the payroll.

BACK DOOR PACTS

The Kaiser Co. had 191 workers at Vancouver and none at Swan Island when it signed with the AFL in April, 1942, while Oregon Shipbuilding had "aproximately 66" when its contract was okehed. The trio of firms now employ several score thousand workers, all bound by the back door pacts.

NLRB Chairman H. A. Millis, in a statement accompanying announcement of the hearings, noted that "these contracts are alleged to have resulted in the discriminatory discharge of at least 700 known employes."

Boston 'Post' Compliments CIO Parley

Boston, Nov. 21—The CIO ought to be congratulated for the business-like way it conducted the recent 5th annual convention, the Boston Sunday Post commented editorially the day after the parley closed.

Here's the text of the Post editorial:

The Congress of Industrial Organizations is to be congratulated upon the conduct of the national convention just closed in Boston.

It set a standard for all conventions in its businesslike despatch of convention matters, in the harmonious convention sessions and in the policy enunciated for the coming year.

Labor leaders can all recall old time labor conventions, with the incessant wrangles and inept procedure. Every observer of the Boston convention, outside of the ranks of labor, marveled at the results achieved by the CIO and at the clear-cut statement of the organization's policy in national affairs.

Business leaders may not agree with the CIO and its policies, but they would have to admit that the organization makes many employers' organizations look rather ponderous when conventions are compared.

Pugh Elected

Richmond, Va., Nov. 21—Ernest B. Pugh, CIO regional director, has been elected president of the Virginia Industrial Union Council, to succeed I. G. Stone of the United Mine Workers, who resigned.

Unity Talks Open Soon; Steel Union Raps Attack On Murray by AFL Writer

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—Conferences between CIO and AFL spokesmen aimed at gaining unity in the American labor movement, are tentatively scheduled for the first week in December.

CIO Pres. Murray and Harry Bates, head of the AFL's labor peace group, have been in contact during the week seeking to set a definite date for the opening of the confabs. Other members of the CIO committee are R. J. Thomas, auto union head, and Julius Emspak, secretary-treasurer of the electrical, radio and machine workers.

Registration of women for war work will come soon, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said after a visit to the White House with the Labor Victory Board today. It is likely within a matter of two or three weeks, and will cover the entire country.

More than 40 million women are probably available for war work, Murray added, and the first step in

A Victory Convention

The CIO convention in Boston registered a big advance in American labor's political maturity.

In its infant stages, union organization concerns itself only with the immediate interests of a limited group of workers in a particular plant or section.

As unionism grows in strength, it comes to think in terms of whole industries whose workers all have common problems. And when a labor movement reaches maturity, it not only thinks in terms of the national interests of all labor but also of the whole society of which it is a part.

Then it is that labor begins to assume the kind of national leadership that was so much in evidence at the Boston CIO convention. Consider some of the major resolutions that received most attention at this convention:

Total War Mobilization

Nearly a day's discussion was devoted to problems of production, manpower, economic stabilization, etc.

The CIO unanimously adopted a resolution calling for the total mobilization of all material and manpower resources, under a centralized administrative control.

It endorsed the Tolan committee's recommendations for a single administrative body to coordinate the present administrations of war supply, war manpower and economic stabilization. And it emphasized that total mobilization must include the full and direct participation of labor in the formulation and execution of all policies and activities.

Second Front

The CIO expressed its vigorous contempt for all appeasers who try to thwart the offensive spirit of the American people with counsels of hesitation, weakness and defeatism, and urged the most aggressive possible prosecution of the war to final and complete victory.

The delegates hailed with pride the news of America's great offensive in Africa and declared it "must lead to a speedy two-front attack . . . on the main Nazi forces on the European continent" by the U. S., Great Britain and the Soviet Union.

Labor Unity

The closest unity of effort between AFL, CIO and the Railroad Brotherhoods to win the war was urged by the convention. It called for a unified labor movement, without sacrifice of the gains won through industrial organization and without any kind of racial discrimination. Jurisdictional differences should not hold up unity, the CIO said, but might best be settled within a unified movement.

The CIO also called for international labor unity between the trade union movements of all the United Nations, and the convention throughout was marked by many expressions of labor's growing international solidarity.

The win-the-war policies of CIO Pres. Philip Murray were hailed again and again by the delegates, and the convention pledged its complete support to our Commander-in-Chief, Pres. Roosevelt.

The above resolutions, and all other actions of the CIO convention, evidenced the thoughtfulness and determination of a labor movement which not only fights for the workers' immediate economic interests but also gives a lead to the whole country, and to the world, for the speedy success of the war effort of all the freedom-loving peoples.

Anti-Democratic Revolt

If Hitler had landed agents from a submarine, to disrupt and destroy American democracy from within, they could not have done a hundredth part of the damage that is being done today by a wilful minority of poll-tax Senators who are holding up Congress by the most shameful filibuster.

To make our democracy effective for winning this war, the House by a three-to-one vote has passed an anti-poll tax bill to grant the right to vote to 10 million disfranchised American citizens.

There is little doubt the Senate would also pass this legislation, if allowed to vote on it, since it is demanded by the overwhelming majority of the American people.

The poll-tax bloc therefore is engaged in a Hitleristic attempt to prevent democracy from functioning, by its filibuster to prevent a Senate vote. It is seeking to impose minority rule on America.

Contact your Senators at once, by wire, letter or personal call. Impress on them the importance of being on the job to quell this anti-democratic revolt; and not to rest until majority rule prevails and the anti-poll tax bill is enacted.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

HE was one of those dignified elderly men who move inconspicuously about the bigger hotels, without any discernible function. He looked at me with mild condescension when I tried to strike up a conversation by saying:

"You must have seen some interesting things in your years around hotels like this."

"Well . . ." and he paused, as if to size up my level of interest . . . "there was one little blonde some years ago I'll never forget. Frail as a wisp, she was, but . . ."

We were interrupted, as half a dozen men went hurrying by.

"There go some of those young fellows that've been meeting here the past week. Always in a hurry, as if the whole war depended on them. And maybe it does. Who knows?"

"But about that little blonde?" I said.

He ignored me. "Funny thing about that crowd. Most people come to conventions to forget the war and have a good time. But not them. They talked about the war all the time—about the offensive in Africa leading to a second front in Europe—about mobilizing the whole country—about what the government should be doing to get more tanks and airplanes made—and all that sort of stuff."

"Well, most of them come from war industries," I said. "They're . . ."

"Whoever they are," he went on, "I don't listen in on what the guests are saying. Don't get me wrong on that. But with that bunch, you just couldn't help hearing. They acted like they wanted to tell the world, anyhow. And maybe the world'd be better off if it did listen to serious-minded, practical fellows like them, instead of to pot-bellied old sugar-daddies like . . ."

"Does that bring us back to the blonde?" I said.

"Oh, her," he replied. "No, it was some young fellows that were trying to make up to her. She looked so soft that one of them—a good-looking smart-alecky playboy kind—thought he could just walk away with her."

He stopped short. "Understand, mister, it's none of my business what the guests do. But you can't help noticing the kind of people who get together at hotels. Why just last week there was a southern fellow—no mistaking his accent—sitting right over there eating with a Negro chap.

"I thought something was going to happen. But nothing did. They looked a little self-conscious at first, but then they got their heads together on convention business and the war, and got along famously.

"Come to think of it, there were quite a few Negroes here last week. That's something new. I understand the outfit meeting here just insisted there mustn't be any discrimination against any of its delegates. There were all kinds, but they were the most harmonious crowd I've seen. Only guy they really seemed to have it in for was Hitler."

"But I still don't know what happened to that little blonde and her playboy friend," I complained.

"Oh, them! He was trying to cut in on her steady, I could see. Not that it was any of my business. But one evening they were sitting right over in that corner there—the three of them. The playboy fellow must have said something she didn't like. But she just kept on smiling—as soft and pretty and sweet as you like—and reached into her handbag . . ."

I thought he was pausing for dramatic effect. But he pointed to some new-comers. "See them?" he said. "They're Britishers, been meeting with this crowd here. I've seen so many conventions, I don't keep much track of them anymore. But this bunch seemed to have one big idea.

"They looked to me like working people. And their big idea seemed to be unity to win this war. They were pretty united themselves, as I've said. But they were hell-bent to get together with all the other working people, Britishers as well as Americans, and all the United Nations, for that matter. I've always said that if the working people would only get together and organize . . ."

"Oh, her," he said. "I couldn't see exactly what she pulled out. But the light caught on something steely, and from a distance I'll swear it looked like a little dagger. Anyhow she just kept on smiling, while that playboy looked as scared and foolish as anyone I've ever seen. He just got up after a minute and walked right out. And I never saw him again. . . . But what did you say that outfit was, meeting here last week?"

"That was the national convention of the CIO," I replied.

The CIO & Labor Unity

Highlights of the Convention Discussion

Philip Murray

Some Questions On Vital Subject

IN THE past two years I have attempted with your sanction to develop a friendly relationship between the membership of the American Federation of Labor and the membership of our many CIO organizations. I have also endeavored through whatever influences I may possess to develop a more friendly relationship between the leadership of the American Federation of Labor and the leadership of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

It isn't for me to recount here the difficulties confronting both the American Federation of Labor and the CIO in the perfection of the type of unity calculated to build a better and a stronger labor movement in the United States of America. Conferees representing the CIO, particularly in peace negotiations, must necessarily always think in terms of what kind of peace we are going to negotiate, and if peace is negotiated what kind of an effect it will have upon the morale of the workers in the United States of America. Will it strengthen the trade union movement? Will it increase membership? Will it give cause for national joy and will the burst of enthusiasm trailing in the wake of such a peace result in larger membership in each of the international unions affected by such a peace?

What mechanisms will be provided in the peace arrangements to protect the integrity, the standing of the individual and the organization with which he is affiliated?

What Is AFL Position?

Will the AFL recant from some of its positions which it has taken with respect to industrial unionism? Or will it still insist that while they recognize industrial unionism they do believe that in many of the basic industries there should be collective bargaining between the representatives of the craft international unions affiliated with the AFL and the leaders of the industrial unions associated with the CIO to determine the actual lines of demarcation, the lines of jurisdiction beyond which no organization might go?

A discussion of those problems is technical in nature, not readily understandable in the public mind because the public manifests no particular interest in them; but they are important, tremendously so, in the minds of the workers affected by those decisions.

Has this so-called split between the AFL and CIO retarded the war effort? Has it helped the war effort? How do the workers of the United States feel about that?

Has the government of this country of ours received greater support through the spirit of the militancy manifested by the membership of CIO in the war effort than the government would have received had these organizations been affiliated with the American Federation of Labor?

Will peace, which may swallow up the CIO, help the morale of the membership of the CIO organizations to the point where it will result in them giving greater and greater effort and production to the national war effort?

Labor Unity and War

Underlying the problem of that national labor unity, therefore, is this great big question as to what—No. 1, what kind of a contribution will labor unity make to the well-being of the wage earners of America and to the war effort itself. Someone here the other day said that the CIO organizations, all of them, had done more than any other agency in the United States of America to expedite the delivery of supplies to our soldiers and to our armed forces and to our allied nations. Will a labor unity result in greater expedition, quicker delivery? Will labor unity settle the jurisdictional problems that are harassing the international unions now affiliated with the AFL.

When we discuss the problem of national labor unity is it assumed that the AFL will accept the very definite war program of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, or the CIO will accept the American Federation of Labor's war program? When you discuss unity you can dwell in the realms of glittering generalities and idle platitudes for weeks, nay months, but eventually when you reach the unity conference table you are required there to face the actual realities involved in negotiations. There you meet the fellow across the conference table.

Will Confer in Good Faith

I am going into conference in good faith, so help me God, in good faith. But I shall not, in a mad desire to effectuate peace, tear the rock from under the labor movement upon which it was built. These are matters that will necessarily require our attention. It is all very well for many of our people throughout the United States to talk about peace, but Worth Lowery out in the Northwest tells me that Bill Hutcheson is a very difficult man to talk peace with. The Electrical Workers International Union apprehend some difficulties in the perfection of agreements with the National Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. I still have the same concern about the jurisdictional boundaries of the Steel Workers.

There must needs be a meeting of minds, and that meeting of minds can only be brought about by men who are willing to meet in the spirit of absolute fairness, dealing with each other upon a basis of complete equality, recognizing the others' rights, and upon the basis of intelligent, constructive discussion proceeding toward the perfection of an orderly, intelligent agreement designed to help all of labor in America, and America particularly.

I warn the AFL that if it is its purpose to hew to its age-old habits, then no success can attend a peace conference. They must needs meet these newer conditions and recognize now, if they have never recognized it before, that there is another labor movement in the United States of America.

Do you get what I mean? Unity conferences must not transcend in importance the desperate needs of our country to win this war. If unity is going to expedite the winning of the war, if unity is going to build a bigger and better labor movement, then he who would stand in the way of unity would be nothing but an ordinary fool.

Sidney Hillman

Differences Can Be Adjusted

ALL OF US believe, of course, that a divided labor movement gives the opportunity for our enemies to take advantage. Let's discuss it in the spirit of being frank with one another. Along with President Murray, Van Bittner and others I have spent over thirty years in trying to help build the labor movement, and the record of the organization I have been privileged to represent is an open record.

Differences? Yes, we can adjust them in debate. I believe those who are indulging right now in the whispering campaign, the rumor mongers who are saying that CIO is not really interested in unity are doing a great disservice to America and to labor. As I have known CIO, whatever mistakes we have made we were always honest in what we were saying that we were going to do.

Labor Helps War Effort

We are paying a big price for the lack of appreciation of what was before us. Of course with you we are happy that in this war there is the Congress of Industrial Organizations. Our war effort would not have gone as far as it has gone now if those big companies had not had the organizations in there, if they were in control of labor as well as they are in their procurement policies and many others.

What does a divided labor movement do to our effort? Delegates, I am conscious of the progress made and I know that President Murray is more responsible than any other man for bringing labor together, not merely through the Victory Committee but all the way through. So that we haven't got the situation that existed a couple of years ago.

We have, fortunately, a place where Mr. Murray and Mr. Green go together, to the White House. You know that wasn't done before. I remember the time when the President of the American Federation of Labor cancelled a speaking engagement because I was also one of the invited speakers.

A great deal has been done, but let's be honest with ourselves, it is not enough, it is "ersatz," substitution. They are not getting the real combination on the war effort because we have two committees going in instead of one committee.

This convention, in my judgment, will go down historically as one where a group of men and women have met and for themselves and the millions they represent have made the greatest contribution in speeding up our war effort to now. And still I say we are not getting all the unity of the labor movement.

CIO in Earnest

I want to nail the lie given utterance by those who are spreading rumors that CIO is not in earnest about unity. It is not true. I want to bring to you and to the committee the urgency of the time. I hope I do not need to speak to you about the organization I represent, and as long as they permit me to be their chief executive we will always be in the struggle.

We will be where we always were, where we were when steel was organized under the American Federation of Labor and we were out and they were breaking strikes for us, and still we gave a contribution of $100,000 at that time. We will always be where we must be, because that is our place.

Phil and I will always work together, I am sure. We have a tremendous task. No sacrifice is big enough. A few jurisdictional squabbles—what do they amount to? The country is fortunate to have built this great labor movement through our efforts. The world is fortunate in this hour that America has given international leadership to Franklin Delano Roosevelt in this critical time in the history of the world.

Let's go ahead and make it a one hundred per cent effort. As far as I am concerned, as far as the Amalgamated Clothing Workers are concerned, we will be in one position or another doing our share.

Unify Agency On Shipping, CIO Asks U. S.

Washington, Nov. 21—Following out the general policy of centralization of war mobilization, the CIO convention last week in Boston unanimously urged a central planning unit for shipping, to clear up the present duplication and confusion in U. S. shipping agencies.

The resolution demanded that the central shipping body be given "full control over all merchant shipping, including cargo handling, maintenance and repair."

WASTE OF SPACE

This in turn involves pooling of all "equipment, docks and terminals, maintenance and repair facilities," personnel, longshore work, etc. It also included a demand for full labor representation in policy and administration.

The resolution was preceded by sensational revelations from Joseph Currant and Harry Bridges on the waste and inefficiency now prevailing, which has resulted in serious delays in shipment of war supplies to the fighting fronts.

Bridges told of seeing two ships on the San Francisco waterfront, one unloading a cargo of wines from Australia, while another was loading a cargo of California wines destined for Australia. This was done at a time when longshoremen were desperately needed to load arms ships for the Pacific area, he Worst instances of delay and inefficient use of manpower and shipping are on the east coast, Curran and Bridges declared.

Publisher's Smear Attack Scotched By News Guild

NEW YORK, Nov. 21—The CIO American Newspaper Guild today branded as "false" the statements of a former Aliquippa, Pa., publisher that the newspaperman's union owns and operates the Aliquippa News-Gazette.

The denial, by ANG Executive Vice-President Sam Eubank, scotched a story that first appeared in Editor & Publisher, a trade journal. The story was based on statements by R. F McDonald, former publisher of the paper, who was on the receiving end of a long Guild strike after he refused to bargain with the CIO-affiliated union.

McDonald, who received a steady subsidy from the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Association during the strike, wailed an old lament about the death of freedom of the press in Aliquippa. His complaint was based both on the alleged ownership of the paper by the Guild and on an assertion that "we have sold the paper to the Guild."

EUBANKS REPLIES

Eubanks commented: "Both of these statements are false. The Guild is not in the publishing business. It does not own the Aliquippa Publishing Co."

He said the Guild, acting on authority of its executive board, lent money to the company, which bought the Gazette from its former union-hating publisher.

"The loan of itself was not enough to finance the company," Eubanks explained, nor does it give the Guild "any voice in editorial policy or management, nor is the Guild seeking any such interest."

The loan was evidence of the Guild's sincere desire to help reestablish a newspaper in Aliquippa, Eubanks added. "The Guild had no desire to deprive the community of its only paper The former publisher made that decision when he refused to recognize the demands of his employes for a Guild contract providing decent wages and working conditions."

By ELEANOR FOWLER
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The need for an all-inclusive national war mobilization plan was the central theme that emerged from the CIO Auxiliary Conference discussions of women in industry, child care, price control and rationing and nutrition.

The delegates favored a national registration of women because it seemed to them necessary for the government to have all possible information about labor power in order to plan war production schedules. And they thought that such a national registration would also furnish nation-wide figures on child care needs so that the government could plan to meet those needs in advance.

When government spokesmen expressed the fear that many women might be disappointed if a national registration were held while no war work was available in any communities, delegates pointed out that one of the things necessary for an efficient national plan is to know where there is surplus labor power so that war work can be brought to those communities.

ENGLISH EXPERIENCE

The women were unanimous in seeing child care as a war manpower problem and the responsibility of the federal government. They pointed to the experience of England, where a serious slowdown in war production resulted from lack of planning for care of children of working mothers. Delegates from war industry areas reported idle machines and women unable to give efficient service in industry because of child care problems.

They demanded that the government draw up a national plan to make funds available under simple procedures for care of children, so that needed women workers could give their best efforts to war production and children could grow up strong and healthy in spite of the absence of mothers from homes.

FOOD, CLOTHES, SHELTER

The delegates saw the problem of price control and rationing basically as the problem of assuring to each worker's family the food, clothing and shelter necessary to enable each person to make his maximum contribution to the war effort. They thought that all commodities should be rationed so as to avoid any unnecessary consumer production, and at the same time assure everyone his needed share of things produced.

They were in favor of having the government pay subsidies to industry and farmers, if necessary, in order to insure uniform price ceilings low enough to enable everybody to buy the necessities of life.

In the discussion on nutrition delegates pointed out that in England the government assumes quite a bit of responsibility for assuring adequate nutrition to the civilian population.

CIO Auxiliaries Statement On Child Care

The following resolution was passed unanimously at the Second Annual Conference of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO in Boston.

WHEREAS: The War Production Board estimates that during the coming year the prosecution of the war will require the employment of five million women in industry, many of whom are mothers who must find care for their children during the hours they are at work. The future welfare of our children and the stability of our families as well as our war production program requires an adequate national child care program. The experience of our ally, England, proves that child care centers must be established before large numbers of women are called upon to work in industry. The Lanham Act makes federal funds for setting up such centers available but its provisions require a procedure which makes it difficult for local communities to secure these funds.

VOICE FOR WOMEN

RESOLVED THAT: 1. The Manpower Commission should assume responsibility for establishing and supervising an adequate National Child Care Program.

2. Women unionists should be represented in policy making and administration of such a program.

3. All CIO Auxiliaries should work for the achievement of such a program but at the same time, strive to establish representative Child Welfare Committees in their communities who shall work for the immediate establishment of child care centers with whatever funds and local facilities are available.

4. Child care centers should be set up to meet the needs of women working on all shifts by providing 24 hour care wherever necessary.

5. Such centers should be properly licensed and under direction of properly trained and paid staffs and provide care for children between the ages of two and five.

6 Before and after school care be provided in the schools for school age children with special programs of recreation and war activities for adolescents.

7. Care for sick children of working mothers should be provided in the home by women trained in home nursing in order to cut down the alarming extent of absenteeism resulting from working mothers staying home with sick children.

8. Copies of this resolution be sent to the National CIO, Mr. Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission and Mr. Brune, Secretary of the Office of Defense, Health and Welfare.

Unity Talks Open Soon

getting them into war jobs is to find out where they are, what they can do and what is needed to put them to work for war production.

Among these problems are the question of care for children, housing, transportation, health protection, and the like.

Murray's views on unity were expressed a week ago at the CIO convention, when he assured delegates he will enter the conversations in complete good faith. But he warned that unless the AFL abandons previous hide-bound attitudes it might lead to a breakdown in the negotiations.

The unity cause was done no good this week when Philip Pearl, AFL publicity director, attacked CIO membership figure statements. Writing in a signed column in the AFL Weekly News Service, Pearl smeared Murray and sharply criticized his talk on unity at the CIO convention.

STEEL UNION'S REPLY

Pearl was answered by the executive board of the United Steelworkers—headed by Murray—which was meeting at the time.

"It is unfortunate that this thick-witted, wholly irresponsible and very ignorant individual should be permitted to issue statements of this character at a time when bona fide representatives of labor are endeavoring to work out satisfactory arrangements for both the AFL and the CIO," the steel union said.

The USA-CIO board praised Murray as an "outstanding American" lending his whole-hearted support to our country and its Commander-in-Chief," adding that "no political organization or party can swerve his judgment."

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS OF AMERICA

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President

Director of Organization

The fifth constitutional convention of the CIO will go down in history as the most remarkable, constructive convention ever held in the history of organized labor.

The deliberations of the delegates made a very favorable impression throughout the nation. The convention was addressed by Gov. Leverett Saltonstall, Mayor Maurice Tobin, Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson, Assistant Secretary of Navy Ralph A. Bard, A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor; Bryn Roberts, head of the National Union of Public Employees of Great Britain, and by Archibald M. Gordon, newly-appointed labor attache of the British embassy.

Pres. Murray stated labor's position clearly when he said labor doesn't want measly jobs with salaries attached to them on so-called advisory boards, but labor wants to be placed in a position of trust and responsibility where we can render service to our nation. United States Sen. Claude Pepper advocated the creation of a top authority to marshall the whole might of civilian economy and full participation of labor in planning and directing the war effort in the field of civilian economy. He paid a tribute to Pres. Murray for appearing before Congress and preventing the launching of a program which would have put compulsion in the place of adequacy in the planning and solution of America's manpower problem.

Record Work Accomplished

A record amount of work was performed by the delegates in record time. Delegates were thrilled by the announcement of a second front in Northern Africa and dedicated themselves to an all-out effort to win the war and declared for intensifying organizing activities as the best way to win the war and bring about labor's fullest participation and win the peace.

Unity prevailed throughout the convention. Pres. Murray was enthusiastically and unanimously reelected president, as was James B. Carey to the position of secretary-treasurer and the following six vice-presidents were reelected: Joseph Curray, S. H. Dalrymple, Emil Rieve, Reid Robinson, Frank Rosenblum and R. J. Thomas. Three additional vice-presidents were elected: John Green, Albert Fitzgerald and Allan S. Haywood.

The local arrangements committee comprised of Regional Director Carmichael, president of the Massachusetts State IUC Brother Salerno, the Boston City Industrial Union Council and associates are to be complimented for their untiring efforts and fine work on arrangements.

Delegates left for their homes determined to carry out the declarations of this magnificent convention and with a feeling of gratitude for the fine reception given to them by the people of all walks of life in the historical city of Boston.

Elections Won

Regional Director Powers Hapgood records a victory for the IUMMSWA, CIO, at Bridgeport Brass in Indianapolis, with a vote of 844 for CIO, 100 for AFL and 25 for no union.

From Kansas City, Regional Director Fremming reports a victory of the UAW-CIO at the Oldsmobile plant by a vote of more than 900 to approximately 400 for the AFL.

Henry Burkhammer, USA director in the Minnesota area, reports a repeater victory in the Mesabi Range at the Oliver Iron Mining Co., with a vote of 997 for USA to 74 for no union. This makes the string of consecutive USA-CIO victories 17.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO regional director in Chicago, reports a CIO victory in Chicago, with a vote of 200 for the Warehouse & Distribution Workers, ILWU-CIO, to 96.

Harry Rowe, UAW-CIO Canadian publicity director, reports a string of election victories in Ontario, as follows: Chatham Chrysler plant, 533 for UAW-CIO to 40; Tilbury Canadian Top & Body, 391 for UAW-CIO to 128; Windsor Gotfredson Truck, 652 for UAW-CIO to 194; Border Cities Industries, 588 for UAW-CIO to 206; Canadian Industries, 253 for UAW-CIO to 162; Defense Industries, 18 for UAW-CIO to 9.

Frank Hardesty, regional director in Texas, reports three victories there, as follows: Sheffield Steel Corp., Houston, where the USA-CIO lost eight votes from 918 workers; Tennessee Coal and Iron, where USA-CIO took 44 votes out of 50 and Consolidated Chemical, where the newly chartered United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers took 100 votes to District 50's 40, despite the fact that District 50 had a contract.

African Offensive Spurs British Arms Workers

LONDON, Nov. 21 (ALN)—News of the invasion of North Africa reached British factories at the end of a week in which more materials of war were produced than in any week since Dunkirk.

Production drives organized by the National Council of Shop Stewards, part of a "birthday tribute" to Russian workers on the Soviet Union's 25th anniversary, were stimulated at the start of the week by the great victory of the Eighth Army in Egypt.

The effect a week later of the North African invasion was illustrated by the statement of Thomas Willis, union secretary at a mine which turned out 400 tons of coal above its highest weekly total: "From now on we are going to regard this record as our absolute minimum."

Reports of the 25th anniversary drive are coming in from all parts of Britain. In a Merseyside shipyard jobs which formerly took a week were finished in a day. In an arms factory in Middlesex production last week went up 210%.

Mrs. Phyllis Healey, part-time worker, broke all factory records by turning out 3,800 instead of 1,400 machine-gun parts. The factory as a whole went up from 80,000 to 100,000. In the London area absenteeism hit a new record low of 5%.

The national production champion of the week was Bill Cobb, a driller on crank cases in the Napier airplane engine factory who turned out 10 cases in six days, an increase of 600% over normal. Cobb becomes Britain's first "six hundred percenter," a term borrowed from Soviet trade unionists.

WOMEN WIN

Competitions between departments and shifts were arranged by the Joint Production Committee of a northwest Royal Ordnance factory, where "target boards" were decorated with flags showing day-to-day progress of each department. The winning department, which stepped up its ordinary output by 350%, is staffed entirely by women. The chief steward said: "This is a dress rehearsal for the real thing. We're getting tooled up for a real production burst."

(The 42 government-owned Royal Ordnance factories were the first plants in Britain to set up Joint Production Committees and through strong shop steward's movements they have led in adoption of inter-department competitions and shock brigades. According to a recent report, the R.O.F.s now employ 300,000 workers, 60% of them women. Labor productivity in the R.O.F.s has increased 40% this year).

The close connection of industrial production with political and military events has been apparent since the "Tanks for Russia" week after the visit of the Soviet trade union delegation to England last winter.

Ask Stiffer U. S. Attitude On Finland, Spain

Washington, Nov. 21—Among the resolutions of the CIO convention dramatically highlighted by the offensive in North Africa was one dealing with Hitler's puppet states, Vichy France, Franco Spain and Mannerheim Finland.

The resolution, describing these Axis stooges as "completely the puppets and military allies of the fascist Axis," pointed out that Vichy has entered "into open warfare with the U. S.," that Franco Spain has been warned by Pres. Roosevelt "to maintain strict and absolute neutrality" and that the Finnish representatives here have sent supplies and have acted as "an apparatus for espionage within our borders."

CIO Radio Show Adopts Intl. Flavor

Washington, Nov. 21—An international flavor ran through the Nov. 15 CIO Labor for Victory radio show, broadcast from Boston the day after the CIO convention closed. It was apparent not only in the subjects discussed but also in the accents of some of the six speakers.

The Welsh and the British were represented by Bryn Roberts, head of the British Natl. Union of Public Employes and a visitor to the convention from the British Trade Union Congress.

The Poles were represented by Leo Krzycki, Polish born vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and head of the American-Slav Congress; the Scotch by CIO Vice-Pres. John Green, Clydeside-born president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers; the Negroes by James Cannady, vice-president of the Transport Service Employes; with Van A. Bittner, assistant to the President of the USA-CIO, and Len De Caux, as narrators.

TELL OF CONVENTION

Each speaker discussed a different angle of the convention. Bittner, who was chairman of the convention resolutions committee, spoke on total war mobilization; Roberts on international labor unity; Green on labor unity to win the war; Cannady on the CIO's record against discrimination; Krzycki on Hitler's oppressions in Europe.

Labor for Victory is heard each Sunday on the Red Network of the Natl. Broadcasting Co. at 1:15 p.m. EWT. Next programs come Nov. 29, Dec. 6 and 20. Listen in for CIO's own story of what labor is doing to crush the Axis now.

Urge U. S. Help Bring India To Allied Cause

Washington, Nov. 21—The strategic need of mobilizing the people of India on the side of the United Nations by giving them self-government was stressed both in a resolution and in brief debate at the CIO convention in Boston last week.

Speaking on the resolution, which called for application of the Atlantic Charter to India and to all colonial peoples, Jack Lawrenson, vice-president of the Natl. Maritime Union, declared:

"Some people wonder how the Japanese got to India so quickly. I will take a minute on that one to show you the danger to India.

"In Europe Hitler had to manufacture his own fifth column, but in India and in all the other colonial countries the Japanese fifth column was manufactured by the exploitation of slavery.

GREATEST SERVICE

"We think there cannot be a greater service done by the British trade unions and the American trade unions than to take this resolution down below to the rank and file where it counts, mobilize support and turn on the steam from the main engines."

Lawrenson also urged the end of all imperialist policies that were keeping the Indians and other colonial peoples from all-out mobilization for war against the Berlin-Rome-Tokio Axis.

Latin-American Labor Seeks Ties With Anglo-Soviet Group

SANTIAGO DE CHILE, Nov. 21 (ALN)—The Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL) will seek to affiliate directly with the Anglo-Soviet trade union committee, Vincente Lombardo Toledano, CTAL president, told Allied Labor News here today.

"There exists deep enthusiasm in Latin America for workers' unity, both with workers on this continent and with other United Nations workers," he said. "In every country I have visited, workers and their leaders have requested me to initiate a move for adhesion between the CTAL and the Anglo-Soviet committee to strengthen the fight against the Axis."

LEAD FIGHT

Toledano, who is touring the Americas to promote hemispheric unity, said: "Through Allied Labor News I am pleased to report to United Nations that organized labor in every Latin American country, particularly here in Chile, is leading the fight against the Nazi-fascist Axis."

In Peru last week, after conference between Toledano and heads of Peruvian unions, the various labor groups dropped their long-standing differences in the interests of united action against fascism and formed the Confederation of Peruvian Workers. Toledano's efforts had previously brought about similar labor unity in Ecuador.

The new Peruvian and Ecuador Confederations are affiliated to the CTAL, bringing the number of CTAL affiliates to 13, with a membership of well over 4,000,000. In addition to the important labor federations of Mexico, Cuba, Chile and Argentina, the CTAL now represents labor in Bolivia, Columbia, Costa Rica, Ecuador, Panama, Puerto Rico, Peru, Uruguay and Venezuela. Toledano will leave for Bolivia November 8. He has been denied a visa to Argentina by the Castillo government.

A submarine needs 250,000 pounds of lead for storage batteries and 200,000 pounds for batteries, altogether, as much as goes into the storage batteries of 8,200 automobiles.

Art Goes Labor At Met Museum!

New York, Nov. 21—A series of forums on labor and art in the United Nations is being held under the joint sponsorship of the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Greater New York CIO Council. The series started Nov. 9 and concludes Nov. 30.

On Monday, Nov. 23, Anthony Jenkinson of the Allied Labor News and Roberta M. Fansler, assistant dean of education, Metropolitan Museum of Art will speak on labor and art in Great Britain.

The forums which are open free to the public are held from 8 to 10 p.m., at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Fifth Ave. and 82nd St.

RWR Collects Four Million in Year

New York—Russian War Relief, Inc., youngest of the major war relief agencies, announced that in its first year of operations, the value of its shipments to the Soviet Union and of goods purchased has reached $4,467,703.91.

End Food Chiselling, CIO 'Outlook' Asks

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—Chiselling in allocation of meats and other foods must be stopped if price control is to be effective and consumers are to get their fair share of goods, the Economic Outlook says in its current issue released this week.

This chiselling takes the form of packers allotting supplies to favored wholesalers who in turn allot them to retailers with higher prices, thus gouging the customer who needs the supplies or denying them to the customer that can't pay higher prices.

U. S MUST ACT

"These malpractices must be corrected if price control is to be made effective and if the American consumers are to get their fair share of available commodities at the lowest possible prices," the Outlook says.

"Distribution cannot be left to voluntary allocation by packers and distributors.

"The government must control and allocate the stocks of packers and distributors equitably and democratically to all wholesalers and retailers throughout the country.

"Until the government is ready and willing to do this we can expect the malpractices described above to continue."

URGE IMMEDIATE RATIONING

The Outlook also calls for immediate rationing of all consumers goods to avert serious shortages, especially those hitting the low income groups. "Each day that rationing of meat is delayed, the problem becomes more serious," it says. "Each day that rationing of meat is delayed, it becomes more difficult for the low income people to get their fair and equitable share of meats.

"And it must be remembered that it is this group—not the people with income large enough to allow them to go to the higher-priced stores where the meat is sold—who are making the instruments of war.

"The workers of this country must be able to buy meats if their health and their efficiency on the war production jobs are to be maintained."

CIO Seeks To Aid OCD

Washington, Nov. 21—State and city legislative bodies throughout the nation were urged last week by the CIO convention to pass statutes making possible the fullest cooperation with national civilian defense agencies.

Emergency powers to give governors and other officials power to meet any domestic defense situation were recommended by the CIO, which at the same time asked for appropriation of "sufficient funds to pay salaries and other expenses necessary for the carrying out of an effective program of civilian defense."

RUN BY MINORITY

Joseph Levy, office union delegate, speaking on the resolution, complained that "almost every" civilian defense council is composed of "the blue bloods of the town, the bankers, the lawyers and other people who make up a small minority of the population" while the labor union members do the day-to-day work.

He urged fulled labor participation on the councils, and expansion of their work from mere air raid warden duties to a full community program.

In another resolution the delegates called for government benefits for persons injured or killed while performing civilian defense work, and called on CIO to seek Congressional legislation as speedily as possible.

A bill incorporating many of the features sought by the CIO has been introduced in the Senate by Sen. Claude E. Pepper of Florida. The bill, S. 2620, would compensate individuals injured on civilian defense duty and would be retroactive to the beginning of the war.

Coal Miners Back CIO, Hit Lewis Disruption

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—CIO convention action condemning the disruptive activities of John L. Lewis but offering a helping hand to the membership of the United Mine Workers, has won a wide response in the nation's coalfields, judging from correspondence received by CIO President Murray.

A member of Murray's own local at Cokeburg, Pa., reported that "almost every one here, to my knowledge, is all out for you and Pat Fagan," head of UMWA District 5 and a staunch CIO supporter. The letter revealed that only "eight or nine" members were present at a local meeting in which Lewis stooges passed a resolution criticizing the CIO leader.

'DISGUSTED WITH LEWIS'

At Nesquehoning, a UMWA member wrote Murray that "the average miners in this Valley are disgusted with the actions and deeds of Mr. Lewis . . I believe that in the near future, or when the contract expires early next year, the tide will turn in favor of the miners' joining the CIO."

A Pennsylvania priest wrote to President Murray that "it was only when you were elected president that the demand (for payment of alleged debt to the UMW) came. Why did he not demand it while he was in the position of president?"

HIT SECRET LOAN

In Illinois, meanwhile, UMWA members were taken by surprise when the St. Louis Post Dispatch revealed that union leaders had secretly lent $300,000 to a group of coal operators and discussion was directed towards possible election of a rank-and-file investigating committee.

"Had this reported proposal or any similar proposal" for lending money to the employer come before the district board, "I would have opposed it," said Jack Glasgow, a District 12 board member.

Raiders Stopped At Steel Plant

Hammond, Ind., Nov. 21—The United Steelworkers of America, CIO, swept to victory at the Pullman Standard Mfg. Co. here after brushing aside efforts by an "independent union" and by John L. Lewis' District 50 to interfere with the election.

The vote was 2,222 for the USA-CIO to 661 for the "independent" and 160 for neither.

District 50, placed on the NLRB ballot over the protest of the steel union, was removed when it was unable to round up 16 challengers and ballot box watchers the day before the election.

WLB to Hear N. Y. Transit Union Case

Washington, Nov. 21—Demands of the Transport Workers Union for an adequate wage increase and a union contract with the city of New York will go to a public hearing Dec. 9, the War Labor Board announced here today. The union is asking for a 15 percent raise covering some 32,000 workers in the city's subway systems.

Following the Board's announcement, which came after a visit from TWU President Michael Quill, local president Douglas MacMahon, Allan S. Haywood, Lee Pressman and TWU Counsel Harry Sacher, the mayor of New York declared that the Board had no right to take up cases affecting local government.

LaGuardia's speech, in which he defied the authority of the Board, was made to an audience of mayors and other petty officials in New Jersey. It was immediately attacked by the union, which pointed out that LaGuardia had obviously timed it to coincide the Board's order for a public hearing.

War 'Chest' Drive Lifts CIO Donations Over 5-Million Mark

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21—All the news was good during the CIO Convention. There was continued success on the African front—and the home front went over the top, too. The CIO War Relief Committee reported $5,004,036 in contributions and pledges by CIO members to the war chests of the nation.

Reports from war chest cities where the CIO's program of one hour's pay a month is in effect are incomplete to date. But they show tremendous increases in CIO giving under union auspices this year.

Telegrams deluged the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief at convention headquarters announcing successful completion of chest campaigns. And all gave major credit for exceeding quotas to the cooperation of CIO members through the CIO War Relief Committee.

HALF OF TOTAL

In Baltimore, Md., CIO members have contributed $700,000, which is 50 per cent of the city's total. In Cleveland, CIO gifts jumped to $299,710, compared with $156,430 last year.

Milwaukee CIO-ers gave $320,093, compared with $78,515 contributed last year. Lockport, N. Y., recorded CIO unions as donating 47 per cent of the community goal.

The Indianapolis War Chest Director wrote President Philip Murray:

"This letter would not be complete without expressing our gratitude for the magnificent way in which the membership of your local unions responded to the campaign appeal. It is our hope that through the years the relationship between ourselves and your organization can progress to mutual advantage of both groups."

The Executive Director of the Chester, Pa., War Chest wrote the CIO War Relief Committee:

"Our campaign has been successful, we are 20 per cent over our goal and $85,000 over the amount raised last year with the returns still coming in. Without your help and the help of the other members of the CIO we could not have achieved this success and we are deeply grateful to you."

Construction Drive Pushed In Chicago

Chicago, Nov. 21 — With ten thousand or more unorganized construction and building maintenance workers in the Chicago area, Construction and Maintenance Local Industrial Union 1228 is putting forth every effort to bring them into the fold of organized labor.

In Chicago, some of the AFL building trades have closed their books to the Negroes, who in self-defense have organized an association which in itself is creating and maintaining the segregation of these Negroes to work only on the South Side or wherever there may be a Negro settlement in the city.

"We feel that if and when the organized labor movement is able to have organic unity, its purpose will not have been accomplished unless the barriers of discrimination, prohibitive initiation fees, and the permit system is completely abolished," a Local 1228 leader said.

Keep Women's Pay Up to Men's Scale, U. S. Official Warns

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—The employment of millions of women workers in war production must not be permitted to cut basic work standards, Elizabeth Christman of the Labor Department 's Women's Bureau declared last week.

Miss Christman, who spoke before a conference of Illinois and Wisconsin Women's Trade Union Leagues, emphasized that "the war emergency must not be used as an excuse for destroying sound labor policies."

"It is our business to see to it," she added, "that we maintain basic work standards which experience has shown are necessary for the health and efficiency of all our workers, the standards which result in maximum production. Nor can we merely hold fast; we must go forward.

EQUAL PAY

"Equality of opportunity must have meaning for women in the shop—their payrates must be based on their jobs without artificial discrimination based on sex.

"Our democratic way of life must reach into the everyday experience of millions of men and women through organization of the workers into strong unions, through collective bargaining and the other democratic methods of self-government in the shop.

"In all of this, women must carry their full share of the load—do more than pay dues—serve on grievance committees, negotiate wage contracts, work on labor-management committees wherever they are set-up."

MORE WOMEN WORKERS

Increased employment of female workers and their transfer from non-essential to war jobs will mark the next few months, Miss Christian declared.

"The enormous contribution of womanpower to the production line has yet to be fully realized in terms of jobs," she pointed out.

"At least 2 million women are on war jobs and there will probably be four million by December," she said. "Around 14 million woare working today—about 3 million more than at the beginning of the defense program 2½ years ago. As of today, less than one-fifth of the employed women are on war jobs, and about 800,000 women are still unemployed and seeking work.

Memo to Tories

Washington, Nov. 28—Time lost by strikes in U. S. industry during October fell almost out of sight during October, the Natl. War Labor Board revealed today.

The time consumed by strikes amounted to only five one-hundredths of one per cent of the total man days worked during the month. The figure was the lowest since January.

Ask French Cast Off Nazi Yoke

La Paz., Bolivia, Nov. 28 (ALN)—An appeal to "shake off the Nazi yoke" was radioed by shortwave this week to the workers of France and North Africa by Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), who is well known to French workers through his attendance at pre-war European labor conferences as Mexican delegate.

"This is France's hour," Toledano declared. "Supported by all democratic peoples, you must begin to fight now for the reconquest of France. Long live Free France!"

At the same time Toledano sent a circular telegram to the thirteen national groups affiliated to the CTAL, urging them "to cheer and support the Anglo-American invasion of North Africa as the beginning of a new phase in the fight to the death against Nazi-fascism."

As part of the fight against the Axis, Toledano said, "Latin American workers must hasten national unity in every country and continental unity against the native fascists."

Toledano's visit to Bolivia has been bitterly opposed by two native fascist groups: the Bolivian Falange, headed by Senor B. Puente, and the Movement of National Revolution, leaders of which are Professor Victor Paz Estenssoro and Carlos Montenegro, a lawyer.

320 Locals Send Delegates to Ohio CIO 'Victory' Meet

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 26—A total of 320 local units in Ohio of 32 national CIO organizations are expected to send delegates to the fifth annual convention of the Ohio CIO Council, which opened Friday after Thanksgiving Day, at the Neil House here, according to Ted F. Silvey, secretary-treasurer of the state CIO.

In addition, there are 22 city and county CIO Councils affiliated with the state body. A full attendance will permit a total of 1,544 votes to be cast in the convention, based on per capita payments and fees for thirteen months ending July 31.

The meeting will be in session three days—Nov. 27, 28 and 29. The Executive Board will hold its regular quarterly meeting two days in advance of the convention's opening.

KROLL TO PRESIDE

Jack Kroll, manager of the Cincinnati Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, is president of the CIO state central body, replacing John Owens of the United Mine Workers, who resigned last summer to go out of the CIO with John L. Lewis.

Delegates will attend the convention from 46 of Ohio's 88 counties. 34 counties have no CIO organizations at all. The eight other counties have locals newly organized which are not yet affiliated with the state Council and hence not eligible for delegates.

Secretary Silvey expressed the opinion that while the number of possible delegates is larger, the attendance at this year's convention will be about the same as the 800 at Youngstown last year.

"War-time responsibilities to be away from the job as little as possible, and restrictions on travel, will keep our convention at about the same size as last year," he said. "We will miss the Mine Workers' delegates, who boosted our attendance considerably from many small communities in eastern and southeastern Ohio."

CIO LEADERS SPEAK

Officials of the CIO who will speak at the Ohio convention will include James B. Carey, national CIO secretary-treasurer; Allan S. Haywood, national CIO vice-president and director of organization; John Brophy, national CIO director of Industrial Union Councils. President Philip Murray expressed his regrets that other obligations prohibited him from accepting Kroll's invitation.

Pamphlet Cites Bridges' Aid to War Effort

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—Harry Bridges should be free of the seven-year persecution against him and his role as a leader in speeding war shipments recognized by citizenship, the Citizens Bridges Victory Committee says in a new pamphlet entitled: "Citizenship for Harry Bridges—Production Soldier."

The pamphlet, written by Leo Huberman, has a foreword by CIO Pres. Philip Murray that calls on President Roosevelt to "act to remove all barriers to full citizenship for Harry Bridges," and describes his leadership in "the rapid efficient shipment of supplies to the fighting fronts of the United Nations."

QUOTES OFFICERS

The pamphlet quotes from several high Army and Navy officers who have praised the Intl. Longshoremens and Warehousemens Union for the way in which they have organized speedy loading and unloading of ships on the west coast waterfront.

One of these officers, Colonel Aird, in charge of the port of San Pedro, wrote to the union:

"We appreciate the splendid and hearty cooperation of all members of your organization in making possible the prompt dispatch of these vessels. The part played by your men in this great war game is important and I feel sure you must feel a thrill in knowing that the airplanes you loaded have already been used against the enemy with success."

URGE END OF CASE

Urging the dropping of all charges against Bridges and granting full citizenship, the pamphlet concludes: "Now, while unity and order are essential to victory, the American people don't want to be forced to use their resources in time, money and energy to continue a fight that should have been settled long ago."

Ask LaGuardia OK Bargaining In City Govt.

New York, Nov. 28—An appeal to Mayor LaGuardia to enforce collective bargaining among city workers was sent to him this week by Joseph Curran, president, and Saul Mills, secretary of the city CIO council.

Pointing out that a bill for this purpose had been endorsed by the Council of the city of New York, the letter said: "It is our opinion that an executive order can accomplish the aims of the bill, and the establishment of such a policy would mark a new and better era in the relationships between city employes and their administrators.

"Such action on your part has ample precedent, as both the Federal government and many state governments, including our own, have long since established these rights through executive order."

Members of the Transport Workers Union and the State, County and Municipal Workers are currently trying to establish full collective bargaining rights with the city agencies that employ them.

Win Contract

New York—Local 65, Wholesale & Warehouse Workers, has won a contract at the Empire Findings Co., with questions of wages and union security being left to the War Labor Board for determination.

Labor-Employer Groups Aid Plant Protection

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—From unions throughout the country reports are coming into the Labor Division of the Office of Civilian Defense in Washington on the excellent results achieved by Joint Labor-Management Air Raid Protection Committees in planning and carrying out training and programs to protect lives and property from the dangers of air raids.

Not only have plans been perfected that will save many lives and much property in our vital industries, but the morale of the workers has lifted considerably due to participation in the programs.

From Detroit comes word from Local 380, United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers (CIO) that in August their local passed a resolution offering 100% cooperation with management on a plan to safeguard all employes.

Within three days, C. J. Reese, President of Continental Motors, offered 100% cooperation with the union—and added that he wanted the plant to be the best protected in the country. The union contract provided that adequate plant protection equipment be provided by the management.

Work progressed rapidly, and the union reported an improvement in morale and confidence which helps the members in their work. In the words of Harry Flanagan, Recording Secretary, "We are prepared for any emergency—we are not afraid."

COMMITTEE FORMED

First step in the protection plans was the forming of a committee, representing labor and management equally. Second was the training, in two weeks time, of more than 500 wardens. Maintenance men were organized into emergency crews. All Plant Protection men (82 in number) were given the OCD warden course. The air raid protection organization numbers more than 1,000 men.

A central control room was established, 12 sirens were installed, 50 first aid boxes located strategically, 5 proof sheds erected with telephones connected to the central control room. Pails and shovels, sand bins and 30 five-gallon spray tanks were placed in readiness.

In New Jersey, Local 36 of the United Rubber Workers (CIO) cooperated with management in their plant and set up a Defense Committee in the factory. The company then sent the committee to Rutgers University for training to study incendiary bomb fighting, demolition, use of gas masks, how to fight gas attacks, etc.

TRAINED WARDENS

On return to the plant the Defense Committee set up sub-committees in the different departments and appointed and trained air raid wardens and evacuation wardens. Fire squads were formed, first aid courses given and first aid posts established. Regular drills were held so that the entire staff of the plant became familiar with the procedure.

In Los Angeles, Local 100 of the Rubber Workers has cooperated in the establishment of a Joint Labor-Management Air Raid Protection Committee, headed by Union President Albert T. Lunceford for labor and Personnel Director James A. Moore for the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. An extensive and well-equipped air raid precaution system has been established.

Canadian Workers, Bosses Sponsor Victory Show

GLACE BAY, Nova Scotia, Nov. 28—An enthusiastic audience of 1,300 steelworkers, miners, mine superintendents, wives and families cheered the Maritime provinces' premiere of Canada's Victory Revue, "Pull Together Canada", jointly sponsored by Local 1064, United Steelworkers of America, District 26, United Mine Workers of America, and the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation as part of Canada's all-out drive for increased war production.

With CIO President Philip Murray as guest of honor, the unusual revue was a feature of the recent convention of the Canadian Congress of Labor in Ottawa. The program, presented by a volunteer cast of workers, industrialists and housewives, is the Canadian equivalent of "You Can Defend America," seen and sponsored by President Murray and by officers, members and Joint Labor-Management Committees of CIO unions throughout the United States.

UNITED NATIONS PROGRAM

Significance of the event to the United Nations' war program was emphasized by cables of support and congratulation from leaders of British labor and from steelworkers, miners, coal owners, aircraft workers, shipowners, shipyard workers and labor members of parliament.

President A. R. Mosher and Secretary Pat Conroy of the Canadian Congress of Labor wired: "We have seen this revue several times. We cannot commend it too highly and we know that every labor man will respond to its appeal to fundamentals for teamwork in industry, which is Canada's essential for victory."

FORD WORKERS CABLE

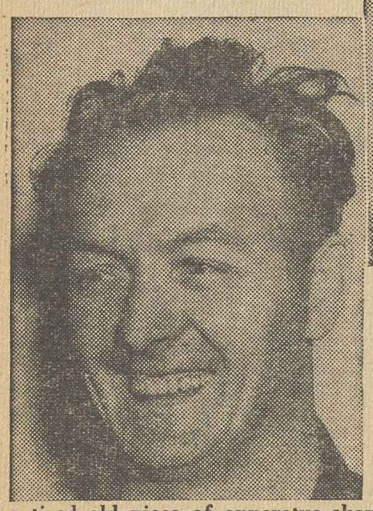
Other messages came from Ford workers at Dagenham, London, from steel workers and management in Sheffield, Ebbwvale and Durham and shipyard workers at Wales.

The revue's stirring songs, the the famed Barry Docks, South fighting spirit of the cast, and the lifelike scenes from home, factory and government made the program a stick of TNT, shattering complacency and lethargy. It enlisted workers, employers and the public to work together and sacrifice equally for victory.

WORKERS ARE IDEA MEN, BOSSES DISCOVER

On the right is Charles H. Baggett, (UAW-CIO, Pontiac, Mich.) worker, whose new-type ground socket saved 160 work-hours in 2 months. Below is Les Nichols, of the same company, who didn't think the old-style two operations were required for his job. He combined them into one and in the last 2 months he's given 308 more hours to America's war workers.

When Earl Jones, below, came to work for the Yellow Truck Co., they set him at riveting and told him to go ahead and keep 'er rolling along the old grooves. But Earl substituted a new type of stitching method for the accepted riveting. In the past 2 months, his machine has done 300 extra hours of work because of the brainpower that he gave to his share in war production.



Brawn, energy, willingness—America's workingmen long ago demonstrated they had all of that. And there was something else they had. That was the know-how. They could take an old knock-kneed machine and stand it up on its legs and make it dance a jig. They could turn a wobbly chunk of wheels and gears into a snappy bomb-producer. They could make a tired old piece of apparatus change its tune from a pre-war waltz into a staccato, crackling American war song of 1942. And today through 1,500 labor-management committees they're streamlining production methods all over the country. Here are three idea men in United States war plants. These workers tackled the job of speeding production, threw out the old methods and put in the new. Together they've cut the time required for their jobs by 768 hours in the past 2 months—and that meant 768 new anti-Hitler hours for the war of production. These are only three out of hundreds in one plant who have slashed time and boosted production right down the assembly line.

Wolchok Asks FDR Intervene To Save Spanish Loyalist

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—President Franklin D. Roosevelt was urged to day to intercede on behalf of Francisco Largo Caballero, former Premier of Republican Spain, who has just been arrested in Nazi-conquered France.

In a wire sent today to the President of the United States, Samuel Wolchok, president of the more than 110,000 members of the CIO United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes of America, stated the following:

"In the name of more than 110,000 Americans, members of the CIO United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes of America, I urge you to do everything in your power to prevent the death of Francisco Largo Caballero.

"As you undoubtedly know, Francisco Largo Caballero, Republican Premier of Spain, has just been imprisoned in Nazi-overrun France and that at last General Franco, who has long wanted to lay hands on the symbol of a free Spain, has accomplished his dastardly purpose. The delivery of Mr. Caballero to General Franco, of which we have just been informed, is a major loss and defeat for the United Nations."

Pants Lost in Action, Gen. Clark Offered New Pair By CIO Union

They'll carry the union label. And they'll be free.

A gift from the New York Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the pants will replace a pair lost by the General when he led a secret advance mission to North Africa that paved the way for the successful invasion by American and English forces.

LT. GEN. CLARK

The general's pants were lost when his small boat capsized one night off the African coast while he was making his get-away after conferring with anti-Vichy French officers in Algeria.

Louis Hollander manager of the Amalgamated joint board, wired Mrs. Clark in Washington to compliment the general as a brave soldier who "lost his trousers honorably. He is a living example of the fact that a great hero need not lose his dignity thereby.

"Members of our union, the most skilled pants-makers in the world will be honored to make and present to your great husband as many pairs of trousers as he may need in bringing war to the enemy and aiding in the emancipation of all victims of the hated oppressor. Please advise us of the necessary measurements and we shall be honored to oblige. Accept congratulation from your husband's grateful fellow citizens."

Mrs. Clark replied to the ACW that "among the uncountable messages of congratulations re my husband's recent adventures, I rate yours as above price.

"I shall cherish it not only for the expression of sincere appreciation for an unprecedented exploit, but for the subtle sympathy for the wife who must 'balance the budget.' Alas, I had just sent the check to pay for those lost pants.

"Your most generous offer to replace them is deeply appreciated. I shall attempt to forward this message to my husband."

Tories Push Fight On $25,000 Top Salary Ceiling

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—A first class showdown is brewing in Congress over the $25,000 net salary limit, with a reported move in the House Ways and Means Committee to upset an Administration ruling holding net salaries after taxes to the $25,000 ceiling.

The move came with a threat from the committee to tack an amendment outlawing the ceiling on to the war powers bill, now being prepared for Congress debate. The threat was turned back temporarily when the committee chairman ruled that it was not germane to the bill under discussion.

The $25,000 limit,. which leaves the income clear of all taxes, was imposed by Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes in a recent ruling. One of the major points in the President's seven-point anti-inflation program of last April, it was ignored by the House and Senate in writing the tax bill.

LOGAN BILL UP

At the same time, the House Judiciary Committee reported out the old Walter-Logan bill again. This bill, once vetoed by the President, was designed to subject all rulings of government agencies to court review. It was strongly opposed by the CIO and by the President on the ground that it would subject the work of these agencies to endless litigation, thus hamstringing their effectiveness.

The bill, vetoed in 1940, was denounced then as an anti-New Deal and anti-labor measure. Its potential harm now would be greatly magnified by the sabotage such a measure would work in the greatly increased number of Federal war agencies.

Members of the Judiciary Committee said that the bill would be brought up in the new Congress in January, where anti-war and reactionary elements were greatly increased due to the light vote in the November elections. Labor people here see the move as another example of what can be expected when the new Congress comes in.

Charge Race Bias

New York—The Utility Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, has complained to New York state government officials that the New York Central and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroads are discriminating against Negroes. The union says that while Negroes are employed as waiters and cooks, they are banned from jobs as stewards.

Stone Union Gets New Locals

Barre, Vt., Nov. 28—Two new branches of the United Stone and Allied Products Workers of America have been chartered within the last few days.

Employes of the Southern Aggregates Corporation at Woodleaf, North Carolina, and of the Strontium Products Co., at Chauncey, O., are now members of Branches 61 and 62.

Labor Forces Plan New Poll Tax Drive in '43, As Senate Buries Bill

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—By a vote of 41 to 37, taken on a motion to close debate and bring the bill up for a vote—the Senate this week buried the poll tax repeal bill for this session of Congress.

The repeal bill, passed by overwhelming vote in the House and supported by the entire American people as a No. 1 war measure, was killed by an alliance of determined polltaxers from the South and their reactionary friends from the North.

The polltaxers led the way in the filibuster and the parliamentary trickery that defeated the bill; their allies followed up either by voting against cloture or by staying away from the Senate when the vote was due. Cloture requires a two-thirds majority.

At no time were the merits of the bill debated. The sole question was on cloture, which, if passed would have ended the filibuster and paved the way for a straight majority vote. Such a vote would have passed the bill.

A number of Senators who announced that they supported the "principle" of the bill, including some who campaigned on the issue, took refuge in a pretended concern for democracy on the cloture question. Their "consciences," they said, would not permit them to crack down on a filibuster.

Others were equally tender about the Constitution, claiming that the Pepper bill to give votes to millions was an affront to the founding fathers, and that the poll tax could only be repealed by a constitutional amendment.

TO START AGAIN

Meantime, labor people and others who had fought for almost a year to get the Geyer bill through the House by petition announced that they would begin the process again with the new Congress coming in in January.

This will generate the same win-the-war pressure from labor and all progressive organizations that took the Geyer bill out of the poll tax gang in the Rules Committee and passed it by a more than two to one vote earlier this year, they said.

This campaign, conducted by the CIO, the AFL, the Brotherhoods and the National Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax and by hundreds of church, civic and other groups, centered on the need for repeal as a war measure to involve some 10 million disfranchised citizens in all-out war participation. It was one of the most extensive and most widely publicized campaigns in legislative history.

SEN. PEPPER ACTS

As a preliminary step Senator Claude Pepper of Florida, the sponsor of the Senate bill, moved immediately after cloture was defeated to change the Senate rules that allow this kind of Bourbon knifing to go on. He was applauded from the gallery, as was Senator Barkley when he defended the principle of the bill in his closing speech.

Senator Pepper put a finger on the minority blocking of the na-

Steel Union Leader Gets WPB Post

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—The WPB this week moved a step in the direction of meeting CIO demands for labor representation with announcement that Harold Ruttenberg, research director of the United Steelworkers of America, had been appointed as assistant to H. G. Batcheller, head of the WPB's Steel Division.

Ruttenberg was authorized to accept the appointment by the executive board of the USA-CIO, which met in Washington last week. He had been nominated for the post by President Philip Murray.

At the same time WPB announced that Matthew Burns, former head of he AFL Paperworkers Union, had been named special assistant to the director of WPB's pulp and paper division.

CITES DUTIES

In making known the appointment of Ruttenberg to the steel post, the WPB said it would be his responsibility "to keep the Division Director informed as to labor's advice on matters within the jurisdiction of the division. He will likewise be responsible for working out any problems arising in the field . . .

"In addition, Mr. Ruttenberg will serve as a member of the Productive Directive Committee of the Steel Division. This committee directs the product distribution and output of all steel producers, and Mr. Ruttenberg will aid in assuring the best possible use of all the manpower of the industry in the interest of the war effort."

WPB UNDER FIRE

Failure to give labor spokesmen positions other than as members of advisory committees brought a sharp criticism of WPB during the recent CIO convention in Boston. At that time, Murray recalled that Donald Nelson, WPB chief, had long ago promised to consider the appointment of union representatives as vice-chairman of the war agency, and had invited nominations from both CIO and AFL. But no action was forthcoming, Murray said.

Poll Tax and India

More than two thousand years ago, the people of Athens, Greece, enjoyed a very advanced form of political democracy. They were mostly republicans and democrats. They had regular elections to choose their government. And their parliamentary institutions set a model which has been followed by most democracies down to this date.

But there were some flaws in this democracy. Slaves, who did most of the work, were denied the right to vote—just as are 10 million Americans today in our poll-tax states.

Then, too, the Athenians kept their democracy pretty much to themselves. It didn't apply to subject peoples in their empire—to which there are also parallels today.

But there were Hitlers in those days too, with dreams of world conquest. When these Hitlers set their armies in motion, the Athenians were pained to find their own slaves wouldn't fight very hard for a democracy they didn't enjoy. And the subject peoples of their empire didn't care much whether they were denied freedom by good democrats or by an undemocratic dictator.

Greece was eventually over-run by the barbarian hordes, and the democracy to which it gave birth was destroyed for hundreds of years to come.

Yet there are some people today who can't see what the poll-tax issue and independence for India have to do with winning this people's war. They are willing, as were the Athenians, to sidetrack such issues until after the war.

The CIO is not so blind. It holds that the war "has made the abolition of the poll tax not merely a political but a military necessity;" that our democratic armor against the Axis must be made uniformly firm; and that every segment of our population must be "admitted to full participation in our government, our elections, our war effort."

The recent CIO convention also unanimously resolved that the Atlantic Charter must be made a "living reality" for colonial peoples, so they may be "aroused and united as part of the United Nations." It gave its full support to "the aspirations of the Indian people for the national independence needed to mobilize their energies and resources for a full part in the war against Axis aggression."

To win this people's war for freedom, the full and enthusiastic participation of all freedom-loving people must be secured. That's not windy idealism, but plain common sense.

Political Alertness

The Republican leadership in the Senate refused to support the move for a cloture rule to end the poll-taxers' filibuster and to make possible the passage of anti-poll tax legislation.

This alliance between reactionary Republicans and the Democratic poll-tax bloc has led many political observers to see in it the formation of a continuing bloc in Congress which will be used against progressive labor and win-the-war legislation.

If the reactionary forces are thus coalescing, it becomes all the more urgent that unity be achieved between all the progressive and win-the-war elements that are really supporting the leadership of our Commander-in-Chief.

This requires greatly increased political alertness and activity on the part of labor, as the CIO convention pointed out, "for the purpose of focusing nationwide attention upon the significance of the activities of our elected officials, for keeping the people of America alert to the needs of our national war effort, and for voicing the insistence of the American people on unity, regardless of political affiliations, behind our Commander-in-Chief in the aggressive prosecution of the war to a speedy and successful conclusion."

Rich Against Poor

Two parallel moves have recently been started in Congress by much the same elements—one to raise the salaries of the highly paid, and the other to cut the wages of the low paid.

The same people who are demanding legislation to abolish the $25,000 limit on salaries are also calling for repeal of the wage-hour law, to cut the wages of industrial workers by ending overtime rates.

All the old lying arguments about the 40-hour week are being trotted out again, despite their exposure in the last campaign of this character. The average work week in all industry is now much more than 40 hours, in war industries it is 46 and 47 hours, and the present law places no limitation on working hours.

To cut the wages of war workers at this time could only have a demoralizing effect on our war effort. And to couple this demand with a demand for higher pay and higher profits for the rich is nothing short of treason to our national war unity.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE LYNCHING of the anti-poll tax bill in the United States Senate was as scandalous as any episode in Adolf Hitler's rise to power.

It was an arrogant flouting of democracy. It was aided by the collusion of selfish and short-sighted reactionaries. And it succeeded because the majority adopted a policy of appeasement, as Chamberlain did at Munich.

The U. S. censors have tried to hide from the rest of the world the fact that in America's boasted democracy 10 million citizens are denied the right to vote through the poll tax.

They have carefully censored outgoing stories about how a minority filibuster killed legislation passed by the House by a three-to-one majority, favored by a majority of the Senate, and demanded by the overwhelming majority of the American people.

But no ostrich-like censorship policies can undo the harm done in America by this demonstration of domestic fascism. Nor can they prevent the enemy from using the deadly propaganda weapon fashioned for them by the poll-tax Bourbons and their appeasers.

Sure, there is something comical about a filibuster. It's as peculiarly American as flagpole-sitting, walking marathons—or lynchings.

The filibuster idea occurs naturally to most children, when they try to talk their way out of going to bed. But we have yet to hear of any parents who make a deal to call off bed altogether, if only the kid will stop talking.

The U. S. Senate is the only legislative body in the world that allows its procedures to be disrupted by endurance contests in which grown men talk gibberish, read catalogues, raise absurd points of order, and just keep on talking, talking until they drop from exhaustion or have their way.

But this particular filibuster to preserve the poll tax was about as funny as Hitler's mustache. That little toothbrush affair looks comical. But when it bobs up and down as he opens his mouth, there comes out a foul breath that has withered the world.

Some of this same breath came from the clownish poll-tax filibusters as they talked and talked. Contempt for democracy and majority rule, Negro-baiting, labor-baiting, super-duper race theories—and much else they could have expressed as well by just reading Mein Kampf to the Senate.

The poll-tax revolt might never have occurred, if the anti-poll tax majority in the Senate had all been sincere, and as well-organized and determined as the poll tax handful.

Even after the filibuster was well under way, it could have been democratically and effectively suppressed by a two-thirds vote for a cloture rule to limit debate. But this cloture rule was actually defeated by a vote of 41 to 37.

It included many Senators who had declared themselves against the poll tax, but who must have had their fingers crossed.

It included 10 Republicans as well as 31 Democrats, although the Republican party has no direct stake in retaining the poll tax and has usually been ready to embarrass the Southern Democrats by favoring moves to abolish it.

It included isolationists like Wheeler, Nye and Shipstead, who in the past have attempted to maintain reputations as liberals on domestic issues.

★ ★ ★

In other words, the lines drawn on the poll-tax issue were not party lines. Actually more Democrats than Republicans voted for cloture.

The reactionary Republicans of the Hoover stripe either were lukewarm opponents of the poll tax willing to let the poll-tax Democrats have their way, or they actually voted against cloture.

On this, as on other war and labor issues, the best fighters on the progressive side are the Senators who are all-out to win the war behind our Commander-in-Chief.

Lined up on the other side are the anti-New Deal Southern Democrats, many of whom owe their election to poll-tax disfranchisement of most of the citizens of their states; tory Republicans; and isolationist and appeaser elements in both parties, whose hatred of Roosevelt's war leadership drives them into the camp of reaction on domestic as well as foreign policies.

One battle to end the poll tax has been lost. But labor and all other win-the-war elements will renew the offensive in the next Congress until this obstacle to victory is removed once and for all.

WLB Sets Up Regional Offices

Joint Advisory Groups Named For All Areas

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—The War Labor Board this week set up 10 regional offices and issued a series of directives designed to speed the handling of cases coming before it.

In announcing the regional offices, the WLB also listed 29 industries in which regional directors will have the power to make final decisions on wage increases based on demands in line with the "Little Steel formula." That yardstick, first announced in the Little Steel case, allows a 15% increase over the January 1, 1941, hourly wage rate.

The Board has indicated recently, however, that the 15% increase will be granted only in cases where it helps to correct maladjustments. In some instances, companies which have paid higher scales than others in the same industry and in the same area, have been ordered to grant no further increases.

SET PROCEDURE

In industries other than the 29 cited by the Board, the regional directors will analyze union demands and then forward the case to Washington headquarters for final decision by the WLB. If the Regional Director decides that increases would "unstabilize wages," the case must be referred to the 12-man regional board in his area.

These boards are comprised of four public members, four from industry and four from labor.

The WLB estimated that about eight million workers—one quarter of the nation's non-agricultural labor force—are included in the 29 industries in which the regional director has the final say-so on wages.

VARYING INCREASES

Pointing out that "very considerable but varying increases in wage rates were made" in the 17-month period between Jan. 1, 1941 and May, 1942, the Board declared:

"The irregularity of wage increases caused many maladjustments. . . . To correct these maladjustments, the Board will consider requests for general increases in straight time rates up to 15% above the level prevailing on Jan. 1, 1941. This policy sets a terminal point for general wage increases. It is not applicable to individual workers, or to employes in particular job classifications.

"It will be applied only to groups composed of all the employes in a bargaining unit, in a plant, a company, or an industry, depending upon the circumstances of each case."

Following is the list of WLB regional offices, together with the regional director and the CIO members of the regional advisory committees:

Board OK's Equal Pay For Women

Washington, Nov. 28—The War Labor Board today gave an official o.k. to the principle that women entering jobs in war industries should get paid the same rates as the men they displace.

The WLB, in general order No. 16, authorized employers "to make wage or salary adjustments to equalize the wages of women with those of men for comparable quality and quantity of work, without prior board approval."

Increases to women to equalize their pay must be reported to the WLB, however, but they cannot be used as the basis for increases in price ceilings.

OTHER ORDERS

In two other orders, the board:

1. Gave Sec. of War Stimson the power to adjust the wages and salaries of the nearly one million civilian employes of the War Dept.

2. Blanketed employes of the District of Columbia under an earlier order which permits city and county governments to grant pay increases, in certain cases, without prior approval by the WLB.

Move to Cut War Plant Accidents

Washington, Nov. 28—In an all-out effort to reduce the heavy accident lost-time toll on the production front, the Department of Labor and the Army Services of Supply this week reached an agreement. The SOS will utilize the services of the Labor Department's National Committee for the Conservation of Manpower in War Industries.

Last year, the industrial accident toll brought a production loss of 251,000,000 man-days which was equal to the full-time employment of 800,000 workers.

The Labor Department's committee is a voluntary group of over 500 of the nation's foremost safety experts, in addition to a small staff of full-time specialists.

Give Holiday Pay Savings to Gov't., Corporations Told

NEW YORK, Nov. 21—The 435,000 war production workers represented by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America (CIO) were advised this week by the union to see that the money which would normally be paid as overtime for work on Thanksgiving Day, but which will not be so paid under the terms of President Roosevelt's Executive order on overtime, is paid entirely to the United States Treasury.

The recommendation was sent to the union's locals in more than 820 plants in the electrical and machine manufacturing industry, by the union's national officers, Albert J. Fitzgerald, general president; Julius Emspak, general secretary-treasurer; and James J. Matles, director of organization.

TO THE TREASURY

President Roosevelt's order directs that work on such holidays as Thanksgiving Day be paid time and one-half, in place of the double time for holidays provided in the union's collective bargaining contracts. Thanksgiving Day is the first holiday specified in the order to occur since the issuance of the order on September 9, 1942.

"It is and has been the policy of this union," the three officers stated, "that not one single penny saved by the companies as a result of this executive order shall find its way into the already ample, if not exorbitant, profits of these corporations.

"We are resolved that every penny thus saved shall go to the Government itself, to help our Government pay those companies for the war material which our members are making."

WILL ASK RE-NEGOTIATION

The union officers stated that, in the event a company declines to turn over to the Treasury Department the difference between previous overtime payments and the payments specified in the executive order, the union will then "insist on strict enforcement of that provision of the executive order which requires that all government company contracts be renegotiated to reduce the price by an amount which will reflect the reduction of overtime rates."

The officers said that renegotiation of contracts as provided in the executive order has so far been "negligible".

"This provision of the order has been substantially ignored," they said, "so that, unless the companies agree to turn over the Thanksgiving Day savings to the government, these firms will pocket millions of dollars to which they are not entitled."

Earlier this year, on March 24, 1942, the union had made the same offer to companies with which it has contracts, offering to waive certain overtime agreements providing the sums thus saved were paid to the United States Treasury. It was said today at national headquarters that the union's offer at that time had been "ignored virtually unanimously" by the employers.

Steel Union Leader Gets WPB Post

in the steel division may be a turn in the tide towards more adequate labor representation.

Ruttenberg was named research director of the steel union when the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee was formed in 1936.

He has been a frequent contributor to magazines on labor and production problems in the steel industry, and collaborated with Clinton Golden, assistant to President Murray, in a book entitled "The Dynamics of Industrial Democracy." The book was widely praised by reviewers when it appeared last April.

Soldier's Tip To Union Proves Hit

Washington, Nov. 28.—A good union man in the Army still finds time to be active if the example of Leonard Grumet, member of Local 261, State, County and Municipal Workers of America, now stationed at Gardner Field, Calif., is typical.

With scarcely any time at his disposal Brother Grumet hunted up the CIO union nearest to camp. He discovered a local of the CIO Oil Workers International at Taft, Calif. The next step was to visit a meeting and speak as a union brother to the members.

He wrote the CIO War Relief Committee and told them what he said. It was a good union speech.

OFFERS ADVICE

Brother Grumet told the Oil Workers that the finest gesture a CIO union can make is to keep in touch with its members in the forces. But he added that a real service would also be performed by bringing to the attention of non-union men in the Army the fact that the CIO is interested in the welfare of all the people.

Brother Grumet suggested that the Taft local of the Oil Workers donate the recording of The Ballad for Americans to the Commandant at Gardner Field to be played over the public address system.

The idea was speedily adopted. The local sent with the records a letter to the men in uniform expressing the spirit of unity existing between the men who flew the planes and the workers who pump the oil that keeps 'em flying.

Now when the rich voice of Paul Robeson pours out over the loudspeakers,

"Our country's strong our country's young,

And its greatest songs are still unsung . . . " the young pilots in training think of CIO.

Guild Members In Army Now

Washington, Nov. 28—Two leading members of the Washington Newspaper Guild have entered the Armed Forces.

Belmont Faries, long-time secretary of the Guild, was drafted in mid-November. Barney Taylor, former Washington Guild president and more recently an international representative for the American Newspaper Guild, entered the services about the same time.

'Women At Work' on CIO Show

Washington, Nov. 28—This week's Labor for Victory, CIO's national radio program heard alternate Sundays at 1:15 p.m. EWT over the NBC Red Network, is on women in war work, and will feature the role women are playing in war production and in keeping up morale on the home front.

Three CIO women leaders will appear on the program, which will be a discussion of the work of CIO unions and auxiliaries in rallying women workers behind the victory drive. They are Elizabeth Nord of the Textile Workers Union, Ruth Young of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, and Eleanor Fowler, secretary-treasurer of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO.

Labor for Victory goes on the air every Sunday, and is shared by CIO and the AFL. Next CIO shows are this Sunday, Nov. 29, Dec. 13 and 27, Jan. 10 and 24, 1943. Tune in for labor's own victory show—1:15 p.m., NBC Red Network, every Sunday.

LITTLE LUTHER
Looks Into the Poll Tax

"Daddy," Little Luther wanted to know, "is a filibuster anything like a belly buster?"

"No, my boy," replied Mr. Dilworth, looking up from his copy of Mark Sullivan's column, "it is a method by which stalwart defenders of American freedom protect democratic institutions such as states' rights."

"Gosh, Willie told me it was a plot by southern Democratic senators to keep the right to vote away from Negroes and poor white people in the south."

"Nonsense. Some of our best Republicans are against the anti-poll tax bill. Mr. Sullivan, for example, and Mr. Herbert Hoover are disregarding partisan politics to oppose this nefarious measure. And the bill itself was introduced by a Florida senator—although I hear he once worked in an Indiana steel mill."

"Why shouldn't the poor people in the south have the right to vote like you do?"

"No reason on earth, my boy, but this federal law is an invasion of states' rights. We fought a civil war over that question Luther."

"And I thought we won it."

"Don't bring up bitter memories. We must have unity at this time. The federal government has no right telling people in a state how they should vote but if those peope want to vote repeal of the poll tax, it's all right."

"But if the poll tax keeps people in a southern state from voting, how can they vote to repeal it?"

"Luther, you talk too much."

"Aw, pop, put that on a postcard to Sen. Connally."

Plan New Drive For Poll Tax Bill

tion's will by the Senate when he declared: ". . . a technique has developed whereby a small number of Senators may not only prevent the enactment of legislation, whatever may be its virtues in the opinion of our colleagues or the country, but even may deny to the Senate of the U. S. the power to consider legislation. Therefore, the question becomes of vital significance to the country and to the world.

POST-WAR DANGER

"If a small group, a handful, of U. S. Senators, have the parliamentary power to thwart the victory we will gain by the aims of our countrymen, that is the power to lose the war.

"It becomes pertinent, therefore, to observe whether we shall win the war for democracy and lose it in the Senate of the U. S., as we did a generation ago."

Barkley described the poll tax as a relic of feudalism, saying: "It is a survival of Bourbonism, by whatever authority or wherever it may be imposed . . . This is a denial of equality. It is a denial of consent to the powers of government. It is equal to the disfranchisement of those who depend upon government to guarantee to them the right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. It is a repudiation of the Jeffersonian ideal."

Against this and the appeal of Senator Pepper for the bill as a critical war measure, Sens. Connally, Bilbo and Doxey, three poll-taxers (one of them, Doxey, a lame duck) relied on a mixture of bloody shirt waving, scurrilous attacks on the Negro people, and plain, everyday red-baiting.

While the newspapers were filled with the North African offensive, with victory in the Pacific, with the Axis on the run before Stalingrad, Connally waved his arms and orated about "states rights" and the constitution which were in danger from what he called "the mob."

Openly showing his contempt for democracy and the people of the U. S., he declared: "The people of the U. S. do not now sufficiently understand the question we are discussing. They confuse Federal and state action.

"They merely discuss and consider these matters in the abstract. They do not get down to the grass roots of these basic considerations . . . We hold town meetings, which are influenced by the passions and prejudices of the mob."

To counter this anti-victory outburst, and to carry on the year's fight until the poll tax is repealed, the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Poll Tax announced immediately after the vote that a national conference would be convened within the next few weeks to make plans for the drive in the new Congress, which meets Jan. 4.

By ELEANOR FOWLER

CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The Anti-Poll Tax Bill is dead for this session. Yesterday we heard 41 United States Senators vote against invoking the "cloture" rule which would have made it possible to bring the bill to a vote in the Senate. Does that mean the fight to repeal the poll tax is over? NO INDEED! After the Senate vote was announced the almost 200 lobbyists who had tramped the corridors all morning to see their Senators and packed the galleries for the vote met and planned an all-out campaign beginning Jan. 4—when the new Congress convenes.

We've learned a lot in this fight—a lot which we can put to good use in the next session of Congress. The bill came up in the Senate too late in the session this year. That won't happen next time. A National Conference will meet in January, 1943, here in Washington to plan the new drive and we know that the CIO Auxiliaries will be well represented there.

A GOOD JOB

We did a good job on the Poll Tax. Senators listened to the Washington auxiliary lobby because they knew we spoke for their constituents.

They had had letters and telegrams and resolutions pouring into their offices. As we waited to see Senator Maloney of Connecticut, his secretary opened a telegram from the Auxiliary of Chase Local 100 of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union from Waterbury.

The Senator told us his phone had rung every minute of the weekend he'd spent in Connecticut with union people asking him to vote for cloture. And he voted for it.

TELEGRAM CAMPAIGN

The New York NMU Auxiliary sent a sample telegram to every auxiliary member and asked her to get it right off to her Senators. The auxiliary also wrote Barkley and McNary: "Our husbands and relations are facing fascist torpedoes at sea so that democracy can live. We certainly cannot stand idly by and watch them be torpedoed at home by a bunch of Nazi-minded Senators who owe their seats in Congress only to the fact that three quarters of the people in their states have no voice in their election."

The Women's Auxiliary of the American Newspaper Guild telegraphed the president of each local auxiliary last week urging immediate pressure on Senators to vote for cloture. And the telegrams brought action.

CIO auxiliaries have an important part to play in the CIO legislative campaigns. Each auxiliary should be ready to respond immediately to appeals for pressure on Congress. The first few months of the new Congress will be a critical time for labor.

Caroline De Caux, our legislative expert, told the delegates in Boston that we can expect powerful reactionary drives come January. Drives to abolish the basic 40-hour week. Drives for a sales tax.

Now is the time to set up the machinery in our auxiliaries to meet those drives. Now is the time to strengthen our legislative committees, to train our members in letter-writing, to get set for the most important legislative job the CIO has ever called on us to do.

Lumber Output Bungle Brings Protest From Union

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—Bungling by the business-as-usual crowd and WPB corporation stooges may cause a complete shutdown of the nation's vital lumber industry this winter, unless something is done about it—and quick.

That is the warning being sent to government leaders here by the CIO Intl. Woodworkers of America. Union leaders are bitter against the lack of foresight being shown by F. H. Brundage, WPB's west coast lumber "czar."

A major complaint of the IWA is that no preparations have been made to keep roads open in order to permit continuous operations during the winter months, when heavy snows blanket the Pacific northwest timber areas.

As a result, the union says, small logging outfits, producing about 25 per cent of the log supply, are forced to stop work early in the winter.

Other charges of the IWA:

1. Refusal of employers to negotiate since a War Manpower Commission "freezing order" went into effect, and failure to institute many sections of a War Labor Board award for wage adjustments and improved working conditions.

2. A "brush-off" by Brundage of recommendations made by an advisory committee on which labor has representation.

3. Unequal wages, poor food and lodging, refusal to defer key workers, and failure to work a 48-hour week in the logging camps during the long summer days.

Labor Voice Growing On Red Cross Boards

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—Increasing representation of labor on American Red Cross chapter boards and committees in all parts of the country is indicated in reports coming to Red Cross national headquarters here. Among the larger cities having such representation, according to Labor Section records, are the following:

In St. Louis, the AFL representative on the chapter board of directors is John I. Rollings, secretary of the Central Trades and Labor Council. Luther W. Slinkard, secretary of the Industrial Union Council, represents the CIO.

Richard Frankensteen, vice-president of the CIO United Automobile Workers of America and C. M. Hedgecock, business agent for the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, AFL, serve on the Detroit board.

State Senator John Shelly, who also is president of the ALF Labor Council, and George Wilson, president of the CIO Industrial Union Council, represent labor on the San Francisco Chapter board of directors.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President

Director of Organization

The Montgomery-Ward Company after defying the National War Labor Board's decision for union security has changed its mind on direct orders from President Roosevelt. This is a fine victory for the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, CIO.

The United Office & Professional Workers, CIO, were victorious when the National War Labor Board took jurisdiction in the case involving several title trust companies.

The International Woodworkers of America, whose organizing drive is under the direction of Adolph Germer, reports the following election victories: Anaconda Copper & Mining Company, Bonner, Mont.; IWA-CIO, 86 votes to 57 for the AFL. The run-off election at the Fall Creek Lumber Company, Eugene, Ore., IWA-CIO, 14 to 13 for the AFL. Ewauna Woods, Klamath Falls, Ore., IWA-CIO, 27 to 20 for no union. Kesterson Lumber Company, Klamath Falls, Ore., IWA-CIO, 143 to 27 for the AFL.

Regional Director George Craig of Philadelphia reports that the International Union of Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, CIO, won the election at the Enterprise Galvanizing Company in Philadelphia by a vote of 113 to 10 for the AFL. Brother Craig also reports that an election will be held very shortly at the Cleveland Container Company for UPNTWA Local 35 by the NLRB. We wish you a successful outcome!

Three-to-One Victory

Frank Bender, CIO regional director in Baltimore, reports the victorious outcome of the election at the Charles I. Brandt Company, with a vote of 214 for UERMWA-CIO, as against 70 for the AFL.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO regional director in Chicago, advises that one of the most vicious anti-labor companies, the Chicago Screw Company of Chicago, after a year of attempted organization, finally went CIO in an election as follows: UAW-CIO 1,502 to 1,229 for no union.

CIO Regional Director Ben Henry of Des Moines, Iowa, reports winning the election in the John Rath Packing Plant, Waterloo, Iowa, with the following results: PWOC-CIO, 2,191 to 785 for no union. This election victory is particularly significant in view of the fact that the Packinghouse Workers started to organize this plant in 1937 and were confronted with a company union in this plant. However, just before the election was held, the Circuit Court of Appeals ordered the Rath Company to disassociate themselves from the company union.

James Ritchie, CIO regional director in St. Paul, Minn., reports the results of two elections held recently in his area as follows: Montgomery-Ward plant, midway in St. Paul, CIO, 655 to 104 for no union. Sears-Roebuck, Minneapolis, Minn., CIO 567 to 283 for the AFL.

Robert J. Davidson, CIO regional director in Cincinnati, reports that the election held at the Vulcan Copper Products Company, Cincinnati, was a victory for the USA-CIO, who received 177 votes to 86 for the company union. He also reports that the National Labor Relations Board certified the CIO through card check at the Koppers Company Wood Preserving Division, Columbia Park, Ohio, involving approximately 55 employes.

UAW Wins Election

Harvey C. Fremming, CIO regional director in Kansas City, reports that the election held at the North American Aviation Plant, involving several thousand workers, resulted in an overwhelming victory for the UAW-CIO, who received 75.26 per cent of the votes to 11.33 per cent for AFL and 13.41 per cent for neither. Director of the UAW's Aviation Division, Brother Richard T. Frankensteen, and all participating in this fine accomplishment are to be highly commended.

Ewald Sandner, CIO regional director for New Jersey, reports winning the election at the Campbell Corporation, Kenilworth, N. J., with a vote of 217 for UERMWA-CIO to 11 for no union.

Regional Director A. J. Federoff of Pittsburgh reports two election victories in his area, as follows: Broad Ford Plant, Connellsville, Pa. (Distillery), CIO, 128 to 41 for the AFL. Large Plant, Large, Pa., CIO 79 to 2 for the AFL.

Robert Edwards, CIO field representative in West Virginia, reports that the Ultramarine case pending before the NWLB in Huntington, W. Va., has been settled and the union has received union maintenance clause, including new employes' check-off.

In the fourth state-wide election in the insurance field, the Massachusetts agents of the Prudential Insurance Company voted 377 to 175 in favor of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO. This two-to-one vote for the UOPWA continued an unbroken series of union victories in Prudential.

The International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers report several fine election victories, as follows: Calumet & Hecla Consolidated Copper Corporation, Calumet, Mich., MMSW, 943 as against 547 for independent union and 120 for no union. This completes 100 per cent CIO organization of the Michigan copper range.

Canadian Labor Raps Lack of Manpower Plans

OTTAWA, Nov. 28 (ALN)—Elliott M. Little, who has resigned as Director of National Selective Service in protest against the "obstructionist attitude" of Minister of Labor Humphrey Mitchell, has been strongly backed by all sections of Canadian labor.

Pointing out that Mitchell and other members of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's cabinet have repeatedly stymied Little's efforts to adopt an over-all manpower plan and set up labor-management production committees in all the country's war plants, A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Congress of Labor (CIO), said:

"Resignation of Elliott Little deeply disturbs our Congress. The minister of labor could much more easily be spared."

"We have long resented Mitchell's dictatorial and uncompromising attiude," said Percy Bengough, acting-president of the Trades and Labor Congress (AFL). "Labor from coast to coast doesn't like him. We regret Little's going as much as we regret Mitchell's staying."

Little's resignation has brought into the open the whole Canadian manpower crisis.

Allocation of manpower has been the task of the Office of Selective Service, operating under the Ministry of Labor.

In a letter to Labor Minister Mitchell yesterday, announcing his resignation, Little said: "In his fourth year of the war we find ourselves with no clear directive from the government on manpower policy, and with inadequate organization to achieve a total and balanced manpower effort. The present situation is one of ambiguous and divided authority, which has led progressively from confusion to friction and obstruction. The result has been virtual paralysis in the organization."

Reports Observations:

Tanner, Back in Britain, Strongly Praises CIO

BY GARRY ALLIGHAN

Special Cable to Allied Labor News

LONDON, Nov. 28 (ALN)—High praise for the efforts of the CIO to achieve real international labor unity, and a warning of the intentions of John L. Lewis, were expressed by Jack Tanner, president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, after his return to this country from a six-weeks' visit to the United States and Canada.

"The leaders and rank-and-file of the CIO are convinced that international labor unity is essential to the all-out prosecution of the war and the winning of a people's peace," Tanner told this correspondent. "Unity is much closer today because of the CIO's action at its convention. British and Russian workers will welcome the entry of the CIO into the Anglo-Soviet trade union committee."

The rank-and-file of the AFL is likewise anxious for unity, Tanner said, but "the AFL leaders are still antagonistic towards the Soviet trade unions, since they do not regard them as free agents." This attitude, Tanner pointed out, is holding up unity not only between American and Russian workers, but also between American and British workers.

LEWIS ROLE

Regarding the role of John L. Lewis, Tanner said: "Lewis told me that he intends to organize the millions of American workers still unorganized. He said he had been approached by a number of small unions outside the AFL and CIO, with a view to creating a separate national labor organization, which of course would provide a base for his anti-Roosevelt policies.

"The leaders of the AFL and CIO are alive to the danger, but only united action can prevent it. The AFL and CIO, working together, would be powerful enough to deal with any move Lewis might make."

The success of the allied offensive in North Africa, Tanner told this correspondent, would certainly have the same stimulating effect on production in America as it is having in Britain.

"During my tour of American industrial centers," he said, "I found that the offensive spirit of the workers was rapidly rising, but the delay in opening a second front was retarding production. This will now be changed, but it is up to us to see that the African offensive is carried through into a second front in Europe which will smash Hitler completely."

HITS AFL POSITION

In a signed article in the latest issue of Reynolds News, labor's Sunday newspaper, Tanner directs further criticism at the AFL for opposing all-inclusive labor unity.

"The AFL convention had many splendid positive aspects," he writes, describing his impressions as fraternal delegate from the British TUC, "but it failed to take a positive stand on the important issue of international labor unity. For political reasons, this issue is of decisive importance to the American people.

"Direct affiliation of American labor organizations, CIO and Railroad Brotherhoods as well as AFL, with United Nations trade unions will help to smash through the cordon of isolationist-appeasers, both within and outside labor's ranks, who at present are retarding President Roosevelt's efforts to achieve a total American war effort.

"In reiterating its decision to have no direct contact with the Soviet trade unions, the AFL got the approval of these Munich elements in America's national life."

UNIONS INCREASE OUTPUT

Stressing the importance of trade unions in America's war effort, Tanner writes, "The workers are toiling hardest and most efficiently in organized plants, particularly in those organized by such unions as the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers (CIO), the United Automobile Workers (CIO), the International Association of Machinists (AFL), and the United Steelworkers (CIO).

"The unions in these plants bring home to the workers with striking force the meaning of the war. They have initiated labor-management committees which have had a beneficial effect in increasing output."

Tanner praises the principle of equal pay for equal work, which unions have succeeded in securing for women in American industry, but says: "There is still a reluctance on the part of many American employers to hire Negroes.

"In view of the rapidly developing crisis of manpower in the United States, this discrimination against Negroes will have to be removed to obtain an all-out war effort."

Protests Free Argentine Union Heads

Buenos Aires, Nov. 28 (ALN)—After protests from labor groups in all parts of the hemisphere, including the Federation of the Workers of Chile and the Congress of Industrial Organizations in the U. S., fourteen leading union officials who were arrested two weeks ago for their opposition to President Castillo's pro-Axis policies were released this week.

It is believed here that these releases indicate a general strengthening of the pro-democratic forces as a result of the American offensive in North Africa and consequent isolation of Dakar.

URGE AXIS BREAK

After last week's split in the executive committee of the Confederacion General de Trabajadores (CGT), at its first meeting in 30 months, the anti-Castillo majority has continued to meet, having chosen J. Argana, president and Lazare Criada, acting secretary.

In contrast to the former officers, who consistently refrained from taking a position on foreign affairs, the new executive committee this week urged Castillo to "break relations with Germany, Italy, Japan and all other countries which contribute to the continued existence of totalitarian forms of government."

CIO Greetings Cheer Soviet Workers

(By Wireless to The CIO NEWS)

KUIBYSHEV, USSR, Nov. 28—Great enthusiasm has been aroused among war production workers in the Soviet Union at the news of CIO's telegram to Nikolai Shvernik, head of the Soviet Trade Union Council, and at CIO proposals for unity of all United Nations trade unions for war against the Axis.

Speaking at a meeting of aircraft workers near here, an old worker named Kuznetsov declared: "I'm an old union man and was active in the unions in 1907 when they were illegal. I know Shvernik personally and once worked with him at the iron works in Petersburg, and I was therefore very pleased when I read how warmly Shvernik's greeting was received at the CIO convention.

"I was equally pleased by the convention resolution on international trade union cooperation. We are coming through some of the hardest days known to history, and surely it is true that the more organized forces take up the struggle against fascism the sooner Hitler's end must come.

"Collaboration between the trade unions of the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and the Latin-American countries is the true path to victory."

URGE EDUCATION

A woman worker, a unionist named Pirogova, severely criticized the union's "Cultural Commission" for failure to educate members on what unions and workers of the other United Nations were like and what they are doing for victory.

"The Cultural Commission's fast asleep," she said. "Our newspapers tell us that the workers of the allied countries are interested in our work and our lives. Well, we'd like to know more about them.

"Why doesn't our factory committee organize lectures about trade union activities in Britain and the U. S? And our library, you may notice, contains very little literature about them."

Still another woman worker, Tikhonova declared: "With the workers of other liberty-loving countries, we're straining all efforts to increase output. Germany and her vassals haven't the slightest chance to carry out Hitler's plans. We know what real solidarity can achieve.

"Soviet trade unions in the past have rendered substantial aid to workers of other countries. Now we hear the call for unity from across the seas. We will reply by boosting our own production still further."

The meeting ended with a resolution to send greeting to the CIO and to Shvernik, praising the move for international unity and promising to exceed former production quotas.

Murray, Green Address British Relief Function

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—Labor was the first group to realize that Hitler was a threat to civilization, and the first to undertake the struggle against Nazism, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said at a British War Relief dinner here.

The dinner also heard talks by Pres. William Green of the AFL, by Sir Arthur Salter, head of the British Shipping Mission; by Winthrop Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, who presided, and by Matthew Woll of the AFL. Woll read a speech from Ernest Bevin, British Minister of Labor.

"Hitler's first assault was not upon the democratic peoples of Spain, or Austria, or Czechoslovakia or Poland; it was his violent attack against the German trade-union movement, launched the very day he came to power in 1933," Murray said.

"And with that first assault, American labor was at war with Hitlerism. The CIO, since its very inception, has been a virtual charter against fascism—and that has been true of all organized labor in America."

GREETINGS FROM ENGLAND

"Britain has mobilized herself almost to the last man and woman," Bevin said in greeting the banquet from London. "The enemy is still powerful and we know the task that lies ahead. We have lived close to the tyranny."

CIO Sweeps Major NLRB Polls

Workers 'Organizing For Victory'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—The CIO this week won a series of major Natl. Labor Relations Board elections throughout the country. The polls gave additional evidence that workers realize the need for organization in wartime, and appreciate CIO's steady campaigning for a speedy victory over the Axis and a peace in which the workers will be organized to guarantee preservation of democracy at home and abroad.

Aviation Plant Goes CIO 3-1

Kansas City, Mo.—Taking three out of every four votes cast, the United Automobile Workers swept to victory in an NLRB poll at the huge North American Aviation Co. plant here.

Because the plant was constructed after the defense program got started, the NLRB did not give actual figures on the vote. In percentages, the CIO got 75% of the votes, while the AFL Machinists received 11%, and 13% voted for no union.

The CIO already has the company's Los Angeles plant under contract.

99th GM Plant

Kansas City, Mo.—The 99th General Motors plant went CIO last week.

Workers at the Oldsmobile plant chose the United Automobile Workers by a 2-1 margin over the AFL.

Win Three-To-One In Missouri

St. Louis—The United Automobile Workers gained an outstanding victory at the McQuay Norris Division of the St. Louis Ordnance plant in the first of what promises to be a string of CIO wins among small arms plants.

The vote:

UAW-CIO	1,418
AFL	676
Neither	63

Packing Plant Goes CIO 2½-1

Waterloo, Ia.—The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee walked away to an easy win at the Rath Packing Co. here.

PWOC garnered 2,191 votes to 785 for no union.

Paramount Office Poll Won

New York—The Screen Office & Professional Guild, CIO, "mopped up" another movie company this week, winning a 2-1 verdict in the home offices of Paramount Pictures, Inc.

The Guild, a local of the United Office & Professional Employes, received 233 votes to 110 against. In elections some time ago the union won bargaining rights at headquarters of a number of other movie outfits.

Seek Vote At Glenn Martin

Baltimore—Petition for an election at the Glenn Martin Aircraft plant near here has been filed by the CIO United Automobile Workers.

The plant, one of the largest plane factories in the country, has been the scene of an intensive organizing campaign for the past several months.

Know Your Enemy:

How Fascists Ruin the Schools

Washington, Nov. 28—Here's more on the nature of the enemy we fight, released by the Office of War Information here:

"The whole function of all education is to create a Nazi."—Bernhard Rust, Reich Minister of Science, Education and Culture for the People.

Here's the country-by-country creation of Nazis:

The Nazis have taken over every branch of education in occupied Belgium. A special commission was appointed by the Reich to remove from the German textbooks all references to the shameful events of Germany's history. In some schools the use of textbooks has been discontinued altogether. Many teachers have been imprisoned and deported to the Reich for "anti-German activity."

MASSACRE STUDENTS

Early on the morning of Nov. 17, 1939, Nazi Stormtroopers, and units of the German regular army converged on all known student quarters in Prague, Czechoslovakia. By midnight, 156 students and teachers had been slain, 1,200 sent in busses to German concentration camps.

The Nazi excuse: some of the students had been "disorderly" at the funeral of Jan Opletal, a 24-year old student of medicine, who was fatally wounded when shot by a German officer on a Prague street on the anniversary of Czech Liberation Day. In Brno and other towns, Czech higher learning institutions received more or less identical treatment and in all cases libraries were looted and scientific instruments carried off to Germany.

Down the line it goes in France, Poland, Yugoslavia, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Norway and every other Axis-occupied country, where schools are shut as tightly as the exit gate of a concentration camp.

Professors have been interned. Instruction in German and Italian languages and "culture" has been made compulsory for those Reich-minded students handpicked for entrance into the few remaining schools.

JAPS, TOO

With the thoroughness of their brother totalitarian invaders, the Japanese set to work at once to mold the democratic educational system of the Philippines. They burned the books of the University Library at Manila and destroyed all texts they considered inimical to their own "new order." All schools had been closed because of the invasion hazards. The Japanese opened only the elementary schools, prohibited the study of English, and made study of Japanese imperative.

In occupied China, local bureaus of education have been set up with Japanese "advisers" in control. The teaching of the Japanese language is compulsory in all schools. Arrest and torture of students, including those in mission schools, have been widespread.

The Tsinghau University in Peiping, according to recent arrivals in Chungking, is used by the Japanese mainly as a hospital for wounded soldiers. The eastern half of the biological laboratory is a stable, while the classroom attached to it is a bar.

Lewis Raid Efforts Flop In Two Tries

Washington, Nov. 28 — John L. Lewis's efforts to raid the American labor movement have twice more been turned down by the workers involved.

In two separate Natl. Labor Relations Board elections, District 50—the catch-all unit of the United Mine Workers—suffered heavy defeat at the hands of CIO unions.

At Wheeling, W. Va., the Textile Workers Union received 264 votes to a mere six for District 50 at the J. L. Stifel & Sons Co.

At Fort Smith, Ark., the Lewis outfit received a shellacking at the hands of the United Furniture Workers, with the NLRB tally showing a 180-130 count for the CIO union.

The election was conducted at the Ward Furniture Co., where David Fowler, mine union official, has been engaged in a long compaign of raiding, anti-Semitism and red baiting.

Blanket D. C. Firms

Washington (FP)—Radio broadcasting companies and stations, telephone and telegraph companies and the Washington, D. C., bus and trolley system are "defense industries" within the meaning of Executive Order 8802, the Fair Employment Practices Committee has ruled. The decision empowers the committee to bar race discrimination in a number of firms here.

The Upper Crust

"Gentlemen, this is the last meeting of the board. We can't waste our time for only $25,000 a year."

Freedom To Learn:

U. S. Funds For Schools Sought By CIO As Aid to Democracy

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28—Democracy cannot be effective until every child in America has an equal right to full education, the CIO said today in urging support of S. 1313, a bill for federal aid to schools.

The statement was made in a letter to all Senators from Nathan Cowan, CIO legislation representative, which said in part:

"The educational opportunity for children in our public schools varies from state to state. Each child in the public schools of America should be given an equal opportunity to learn and become a part of American democratic life.

"As long as each individual state provides education according to its own ability, the children in these various states will have different and varied opportunities. We cannot hope to have democracy in this country if certain states are financially unable to provide adequate education for the children residing in those states.

"One reason why educational opportunities vary widely from state to state is because of the financial inability of the various states to permit the hiring of qualified teachers.

"Teachers are leaving the American public schools to enter into other professions because their contribution to our war effort is not recognized. The states' inability to provide them with an adequate return for their effort discourages the teachers from appreciating the contribution they can make to democracy."

THEY'LL BE WARM: Canadian sailors won't freeze as they man ice-coated ships carrying men, supplies and munitions to the world's battlefronts. They're wearing fur-lined wind-breakers made through the voluntary labor of members of the CIO Intl. Fur and Leather Workers.

CIO Mans Blood Donor Center In OPA Building

Washington, Nov. 28—To do their part in providing the local Red Cross Blood Donor Center with a steady stream of volunteers, members of the Women's Auxiliary, United Federal Workers of America (CIO) man a blood donor registration desk in the Census building, occupied by the Office of Price Administration.

Three regular appointments each week are scheduled for OPA donors at the center, and since late June the auxiliary registrars have booked 36 volunteers weekly.

The program of recruiting blood donors is sponsored by the labor-management OPA War Activities Committee, composed of three members representing Local 202, United Federal Workers of America, and three members representing the administration.

A YEAR AT WAR finds the United States moving towards a final showdown with the Axis barbarians. In the twelve months since Pearl Harbor (top photo) American labor has helped send production sky high, sent thousands of its sons into the Army, backed with its power to win-the-war policies of President Roosevelt, made every needed sacrifice—in order that democracy and security can prevail in this world.

Unions 'Show Stuff' in War Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7—Unions of the CIO, already moving to help the country's defense program before Pearl Harbor, have made outstanding contributions to the war in the first year after the infamous attack on our Pacific island base.

A day after the attack, Pres. Philip Murray addressed the nation's workers on a nationwide radio hook-up, and throughout the talk he hammered home the "urgent message of the necessity for immediately enlisting the full cooperation of all elements in the production of the weapons of war and other materials needed for the success of our national effort."

And in his New Year's message to the country Murray reiterated that theme.

"The CIO in 1942," he said, "expects to continue to take the lead in all constructive efforts for the welfare of labor and the nation, for all-out production and for speedy and complete victory."

In the months that followed CIO-affiliated organizations have followed up Murray's advice and suggestions to ring up record-breaking achievements in increasing output, buying bonds, assisting civilian defense, aiding the Red Cross, observing to a markedly successful degree their no-strike pledge, and giving or pledging over three million dollars to the CIO War Relief Fund.

PRODUCTION GROUPS

It was partly due to the clamor of CIO unions that Donald Nelson inaugurated his program of joint labor-management production councils, and through establishment of these cooperative groups has not infrequently been retarded by short-visioned management representatives, their presence in over 1,300 war factories has been a boon to the production program.

While the joint committees handled localized problems in the plants, a number of CIO affiliates brought forth over-all suggestions for their industries. From these unions came plans and ideas for meeting the complex war issues in such industries as steel, copper, aluminum, maritime, shipbuilding, oil, communications and transport.

With their eyes on the need for out-producing the Axis, CIO unionists have almost wiped out strikes in American war industries. From a peacetime level, strikes dropped to almost nothing last December and January, and since have hovered at less than one-tenth of one per cent of man hours worked. That record has never been equalled in any democratic industrialized society.

While working harder and longer to help beat the Axis, these CIO soldiers of production have dug deep into their pockets, despite accelerating taxes, to help the government in other ways to achieve victory in the people's war.

BUYING WAR BONDS

Purchases of War Bonds have soared. Last December the United Automobile Workers pledged themselves to a ninety-million dollar bond buying program to "build a battleship" to replace the Arizona, sunk at Pearl Harbor. Other unions adopted similar projects, and quotas have been set and broken in dozens of instances.

As the year progressed, the methods of bond buying began to change, with sporadic campaigns yielding to regular deductions from payroll checks.

The Red Cross was another beneficiary of labor's patriotism during 1942. Hundreds of unions have worked out definite programs for blood donations, with every able-bodied member helping to contribute to the plasma bank.

Meanwhile CIO members weren't forgetting the workers of our allied nations. Starting from scratch at the 1941 CIO convention, the Committee for American and Allied War Relief instituted a program for donations of "an hour's pay each month."

In myriad ways, the CIO's five million members have demonstrated that they remember Pearl Harbor; that they are determined to support President Roosevelt, our commander-in-chief, as he leads this nation in the all-out campaign to smash the fascist Axis.

Ohio CIO Calls For Total War To Beat Axis

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 5—Demonstrating the determination of CIO members throughout Ohio to give full support to the nation's war effort and to a progressive peace, delegates to the fifth annual convention of the Ohio CIO Council, held here November 27-29, objected vigorously to existing impediments in the production program and pledged full support to the national CIO program to improve the prosecution of the war through labor participation.

Jack Kroll, Cincinnati Amalgamated Clothing Workers, in his opening address as president of the state council declared, "We do not merely want jobs but we want to accomplish the work to advance victory which labor can do in responsible positions."

KROLL RE-ELECTED

Jack Kroll was re-elected president at the Sunday morning session by a vote of 766 to 378 for Paul E. Miley, Cleveland regional director of the United Automobile Workers. Eleven vice-presidents were elected, and Ted F. Silvey was unanimously re-elected secretary-treasurer, a position he has held since the beginning of the Ohio CIO Council in early 1938.

The convention opposed any form of racial or religious discrimination against workers and asked for a broader policy of employment of women in war work.

Dealing with the problem of women in war industries, the convention asserted itself strongly against employers' drives to eliminate standards of the female labor law. The resolution promised a willingness to consider relaxation of the law when it is demonstrated that there is no longer a refusal to employ available, competent women because they are Negro or because of other prejudicial reasons.

Delegates urged an adequate program for day care of the children of mothers employed in war industries. The convention acclaimed Pres. Murray's telegram of greeting and enthusiastically passed a resolution expressing appreciation of the attitude and leadership of the national CIO president.

Resolutions passed by the convention urged support of the Red Cross blood donor service, asked establishment of more credit unions, recommended payment of compensation for death or injury of civilian defense workers, called for extended effective work of labor-management production committees in all war plants and asked that regional offices of the National War Labor Board be given power to make decisions in line with the policy of the board itself so as not to slow down workers' claims. A feature of the convention was the address by Ernesto Galarza, chief of the division of labor and social information of the Pan-American Union.

Galarza told of his conversations with union workers in Central and South American countries and called for an "independent economy of the Americas rather than an economy of the United States alone in the post-war period."

LEADERS SPEAK

Allan Haywood, CIO vice-president and organization director, delivered an incisive speech, reviewing current CIO policy and declaring we have two big jobs to do: "Knock hell out of the Axis and organize workers to win the peace after we win the war."

James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer, brought Pres. Murray's greetings to the convention and asked for an increase in labor effort during the war period. He brought the convention to its feet applauding with the affirmation that "fascism is the same the world over and must be resisted everywhere and all the time."

Another speaker was Monroe Sweetland, director of the CIO War Relief program, who complimented the delegates for their work in recent community chest and war relief drives.

Maryland CIO Parley Opens In Baltimore

Baltimore, Dec. 5 — Opening on the first anniversary of Pearl Harbor, the sixth convention of the Maryland-D. C. CIO Council will bring a delegation to this city representing well over 100,000 CIO members.

"The second year of war can become the decisive year in the history of our nation," the convention call said. We can make a significant contribution toward helping to decide whether civilization will continue or whether it will be destroyed. Only a complete, decisive annihilation of fascism will guarantee the continuance of our nation as a free democratic republic."

Featured speakers at the convention include Gov. O'Conor, supported and re-elected by the CIO in November's election, Congressman-Elect Daniel Ellison, also backed by labor, and Rep. Thomas D'Alesandro, who has a consistently good labor record. The convention will be opened by George Meyers, president of the Council.

Ask Citizen Status for Bridges

San Francisco, Dec. 5—A nationwide campaign for full citizenship for Harry Bridges is beginning this week, the Harry Bridges Victory Committee announced from national headquarters here. The decision to start the drive was taken "in consultation with the national CIO and is designed to implement the resolution" passed at the Boston convention.

This resolution, the Committee points out, urged President Roosevelt to set aside the deportation order, "dismiss all charges against Harry Bridges and afford him full opportunity to become a citizen of the United States."

Headquarters of the committee, which works with the national CIO Bridges Committee, is at 150 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco.

Woman Steel Leader Gets Murray Gavel

GETS GAVEL: Mrs. Betty Karr gets a gavel to use as president of Local 2817, United Steelworkers of America, from W. H. Crawford, union district director. Davel was sent to Mrs. Karr by CIO President Murray.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 5—One of the United Steelworkers' first women local presidents this week was presented with the husky mahogany gavel that Philip Murray used to keep the CIO's fifth convention in order.

Recipient of the gift was Mrs. Betty Hill Karr, a former singer who moved into industry and became the sparkplug in USA-CIO Local 2817 at the Murray Co.

The gavel was presented to Mrs. Karr by W. H. Crawford, union district director, who had received it from Pres. Murray in Boston.

In accepting the gift, Mrs. Karr expressed thanks in behalf of the local, all of whose members had contributed to a big increase in shell production since the union set up its victory production committee.

She attributed the higher efficiency to the cooperation of the company with the union, and to friendly rivalry among workers on the three shifts. R. E. Starnes, USA-CIO field representative, told the workers he had been informed that output had jumped 60% after the winning of an NLRB election and establishment of a union contract.

CIO Man's Safety Invention Wins Plaudits in Britain

TORONTO, Ont., Dec. 5—A process for stopping the flow of gas from mains struck by bombs which was discovered by George Hill, member of the CIO United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers here, is now being widely used in Great Britain wherever air raids occur and is known and accepted by the gas associations of England, Canada and the United States.

Hill, who inspects and services high-pressure district governors of the Consumers Gas Co. in Toronto, did his experimenting in a cellar laboratory in his home where he worked out a process that successfully seals bomb-shattered and broken gas mains.

FOUR MATERIALS

He found that a combination of four common materials—gelatine, water, molasses and carbolic acid in certain proportions—produced a blockage sealing breaks in gas mains which required only hot water to remove when it was necessary to clear the main for the normal flow of gas.

After he had perfected his process, Hill sent it to the War Office in London and shortly received an acknowledgment conveying thanks in the name of the British people.

Later he refused to take advantage of his discovery on which he was told he could make a fortune, saying that he offered it as his contribution to freedom and democracy and to the birth of a better world when the people's peace follows the people's victory.

OHIO CIO MEETS: Officials of Ohio CIO unions in a huddle as the state council opened its annual convention in Columbus. Seated: Sec.-Treas. Ted Silvey and Pres. Jack Kroll. Standing: William Lavelle, head of the Columbus CIO and Kenneth Cole, executive secretary of the Toledo CIO.

Metal Miners Re-Elect Robinson

Denver, Colo., Dec. 5—Pres. Reid Robinson, Vice-Pres. Ora Wilson, and Sec.-Treas. James J. Leary of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers were re-elected in the union's referendum vote, an official count showed today.

Robinson defeated John Driscoll of Waterbury, Conn., and James Byrne of Butte, Mont. Wilson ran ahead of John Morris of Anaconda, Mont., while Leary was unopposed.

The voting brought four changes in the union's executive board. Thomas Murray of Anaconda, Mont., defeated William Mason in District 1, while in District 4 Marvin Edwards, Deepwater, Mo., lost his seat to Gobel F. Cravens. In District 5, Van D. Jones lost his re-election bid to Homer Wilson of Strawberry Plains, Tenn., and in District 7 Chase Powers, Richmond, Calif., defeated Claud Lovelett.

Re-elected were Board Members Angelo Sardi, Ralph Rassmussen, Angelo Verdu and Robert Carlin.

Lists Labor Books

Boston, Dec. 5 — A list of books on labor which should be in every union and public library has been prepared by Abraham Kalish of the Boston Public Library. The list, available upon request, contains volumes on trade union background, collective bargaining, war production, special industries and post-war reconstruction.

Furriers Cite Year's Aid to War

Lakewood, N. J., Dec. 5—A record of solid support to war activities in the 12 months since Pearl Harbor was reported today at the CIO Intl. Fur & Leather Workers executive board meeting.

Highlights of the union's activities:

1. Establishment of 12 fur vest projects, with a goal of producing 50,000 winter garments for seamen of the United Nations.
2. Purchase of $6,000,000 in war bonds by members and locals of the union.
3. Contribution of $350,000 to various war relief campaigns.
4. Participation by more than 5,000 workers in the Red Cross blood donor projects.

In addition, more than 6,000 IFLWU members are now serving in the country's armed forces.

HAIL VEST PROGRAM

Pres. Ben Gold, and Irving Potash of the union's win-the-war committee, hailed the fur-vest program as an indication of employer-employe cooperation. It is supervised by a national committee, the War Emergency Board of the Fur Industry. Workers donate their services and manufacturers contribute materials to the 12 centers where the weather-resisting fur vests are being turned out.

Praising the support of fur and leather workers for the Red Cross campaign, Potash revealed that in Middletown, N. Y., IFLWU members donated 90% of the blood collected in the entire community, while members of Local 30 obtained the cooperation of management in several tanneries in getting mobile blood banks set up in the plants to enable workers to make their contributions.

Army Uniform Awards Go to Union Cities

New York, Dec. 5 — The CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers today announced at least partial success in its campaign for award of army uniform contracts to established clothing centers on a geographical basis.

Factories in New York, Rochester, Philadelphia, Chicago and other cities have received contracts for making 250,000 officers' uniforms, it was revealed by Pres. Sidney Hillman and Vice-Pres. Hyman Blumberg, head of the union's war-work committee.

Contracts for 2,024,700 service coats and 2,436,300 service overcoats, as well as 100,000 Navy trousers and 12,500 sheepline coats, have also been awarded on the same basis, they said.

Hillman, in announcing the union program for geographical allocation of buying contracts, has held that the award of a fair share of Army and Navy apparel ought to go to the established sections of the clothing industry, to shops equipped to make the garments smoothly and efficiently, and to cities and towns having great reservoirs of skilled workmen.

With much civilian clothing production out as a result of the draft, the union is seeking maximum use of existing machinery to insure efficient output to meet the services' clothing needs and to resolve unemployment in the established clothing centers.

Win Election At Thom McAnn

New York, Dec. 5—Contract negotiations with the Thom McAnn shoe stores in New York City were scheduled for an early date following a CIO victory among the three hundred employes.

Locals 287 and 1268 of the United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes garnered 179 votes, to 145 for no union. The election was held Nov. 12, but announcement of the result was held up pending the receipt of ballots from 42 former employes now serving in the Army.

CIO-AFL Parley in Agreement To Settle Inter-Union Disputes

Negotiators Act To Help War Effort

Washington, Dec. 5 — Unity negotiations between the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor bore early fruit this week in the first signed agreement between the two big labor bodies since the original split occurred.

The agreement, signed by all six members of the CIO-AFL peace committee, provides for arbitration of jurisdictional disputes between the two organizations. It is subject to the approval of the Executive Board of the CIO and the Executive Council of the AFL.

"We agree to the establishment of a joint AFL-CIO committee to hear and decide any disputed jurisdictional differences that may arise between the two above-named organizations," the agreement declares.

TO PICK ARBITERS

Under the formula adopted at the meeting Dec. 1-2 at the Hotel Willard here, the joint committee will select a "disinterested arbiter" to render a decision on the specific dispute. If the committee is unable to agree on such an umpire within five days after a case is presented to it, the President of the United States will be asked to name the arbiter.

"We recommend that this understanding shall remain in force until labor unity is effected," the agreement stated.

CIO BOARD TO MEET

Members of the joint committee on inter-union disputes will be named by the CIO and AFL executive boards at an early date. The CIO board will probably meet some time later this month, while the AFL Executive Council is scheduled to convene early in January.

Meeting in the historic conferences this week were three spokesmen from CIO and from AFL. The CIO delegation consisted of Pres. Philip Murray; Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers; and Sec.-Treas. Julius Emspak of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers. The AFL spokesmen were Harry Bates of the bricklayers, William Hutcheson of the carpenters; and Daniel J. Tobin of the teamsters.

Announcement of the agreement came after three meetings of the conferees, and was discussed at a press conference attended by several score newspapermen.

HAILED BY MURRAY

Murray hailed the understanding as a "step toward organic unity"—complete merger—which may be discussed at the next meeting of the six-man group some time later in December.

The CIO leader saw in the agreement a "broad declaration of principles, designed to bring both organizations closer together." Bates of the AFL also indicated the pact was "a step forward . . . a step toward amalgamation."

"The joint committee has perfected the first agreement between the two organizations since the split in November, 1936," Murray added.

Spokesmen indicated that the new jurisdictional disputes council would be available to hear appeals from international unions, and that its function would call for the use of "elasticity" and "good judgment" in the handling of specific disputes rather than for the establishment of rigid spheres of jurisdiction for the various unions. The council will not be available for appeals by local unions, which will be asked to refer jurisdictional questions to the national office of their organization for possible appeal to the joint CIO-AFL body.

Text of CIO-AFL Unity Agreement

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—Following is the text of the joint statement issued by CIO and AFL unity conferees in Washington on Dec. 2:

"The AFL and CIO peace committee, in an effort to make its maximum contribution to our country in the war and for the furtherance and protection of the conditions of the workers, today agreed upon the following:

"We are convinced that if peace negotiations are to be successful and unity achieved, cooperation among our respective members and organizations must be encouraged and promoted. It is our belief that it would be extremely difficult to make satisfactory progress toward unity through these negotiations if in the meantime there is an absence of practical cooperation between the two organizations.

"We agree to the establishment of a joint AFL-CIO committee to hear and decide any disputed jurisdictional differences that may arise between the two above named organizations. If the joint committee fails to agree upon a complaint lodged with the committee it shall select a disinterested arbiter to render a decision on the dispute in question. The arbiter's decision shall be final and binding on both parties. In the event an arbiter cannot be agreed upon by the committee within five days, the President of the United States shall be requested to name an arbiter. We recommend that this understanding shall remain in force until labor unity is effected. This agreement is subject to the approval of the Executive Councils of the two organizations."

Knox Lauds Labor's Role In First War Year

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—Noting the first anniversary of U. S. entry into the war, Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox this week addressed a special message to American labor in which he praised its patriotism and devotion.

"One year ago, when we were so treacherously attacked by the Japanese at Pearl Harbor, American workers were called upon to increase to the utmost the production of weapons and material for the Fleet," Knox said.

"The response of labor was magnificent, and free American labor may well be proud of the production records they established during the year in our shipyards, aircraft factories, ordnance plants, and other factories.

"The United States Navy congratulates the men and women of American industry who have done such a remarkable job for the armed services. The men in the Fleet are eternally grateful to the soldiers of production who are furnishing them with these weapons of war on time."

The Navy also announced it is sending officers and enlisted men, many of whom have been in combat service, into factories for visits, rallies and talks to the workers where Dec. 7 ceremonies are being held.

WLB Slams Stalling By Monty-Ward

Washington, Dec. 5—The Montgomery-Ward Co., apparently aiming for the 1942 title of No. 1 labor hater, is scheduled to make a return appearance before the War Labor Board this week, following its doublecross on a promise to accept Pres. Roosevelt's order for the signing of a contract.

FDR acted two weeks ago when the company took space in several hundred newspapers to notify the nation of its refusal to accept a maintenance-of-membership clause in a contract with the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes.

ACTION BY FDR

Sewell Avery, Monty-Ward top boss, agreed to accept the order if Pres. Roosevelt would personally direct it to him. FDR acted promptly, but the company started to stall.

Corporation negotiators wanted to insert in the contract that the union security clause had been inserted "under duress" and only as a wartime measure. The union naturally refused this almost open invitation for a company blitz on labor when the war is over, and called upon the War Labor Board to act.

This week Chairman Davis wired Avery to appear before the WLB once more.

Serves in Army

Chicago, Dec. 5—Ridley Bell, former international representative of the United Farm Equipment & Metal Workers, has been inducted into the army. Bell in recent months had been assigned by the union to work with the farm equipment branch of the War Production Board.

NAM Sings Hymn of Hate For New Deal

By MIRIAM KOLKIN

New York, Dec. 5. (FP)—On the eve of the first anniversary of America's war with the Axis, the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers met in New York's luxurious Waldorf-Astoria Hotel Dec. 2 for the first session of its annual congress.

Attack was also the watchword at the NAM meeting—wholesale attack on the rights of labor, attack on all progressive policies of the government.

This was in line with the anti-labor and anti-Roosevelt campaign mapped out at a secret session of the NAM resolutions committee in New York on Sept. 17, held in preparation for the convention.

While protesting their admiration for labor in general, NAM leaders struck at the very heart of the war production program—the labor-management committees.

SEEING BOGEYMEN

"Management-labor cooperation is a worthy and essential goal. It should not be translated into that dangerous substitute—joint management-labor responsibility," said NAM Pres. W. P. Witherow.

"The idea of substituting these committees for responsible management or the creation of industry-wide joint committees with national labor leaders in the saddle is unthinkable," he said.

Pet bogey of the NAM big guns was the issue of central economic planning. Speakers trotted out their most moral adjectives to condemn proposals to eliminate present chaotic conditions in production as "regimentation," "communistic," and of course, "un-American."

Pres. J. Howard Pew of Sun Oil Co., speaking at the afternoon session, called Pres. Roosevelt's plan for a $25,000 wage limitation persecution of a defenseless minority.

"Why were these men singled out for punishment?" he complained. "Could it have been to appease the Communists?"

(Slated to be NAM's next president, according to rumor, is the head of Thompson Products Co. of Cleveland—one of the nation's most reactionary industrialists.)

One Year of War

Just one year ago, the treacherous Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor threw the United States into the World war against the Axis.

Labor, and particularly the CIO, was perhaps better prepared for this war than any other substantial section of the American people.

A year ago, CIO President Philip Murray had advanced his industry council plan to organize and spur defense production, and the pre-war CIO convention had made world struggle against Hitlerism its major aim.

So the CIO was ready for battle the moment the news came from Pearl Harbor. Its unions made increased production to win the war their major aim, laying aside their right to strike for the duration. Its young men joined the armed forces by tens and hundreds of thousands. And in every phase of war activity, the CIO, its unions and members began to take the lead for all-out war effort.

The efforts and achievements of the CIO and its membership in Washington, in the armed forces, in industry, on labor-management committees, in war relief, in civilian defense, in bond purchases, in blood donations—in every activity great or small, that contributes to victory—have been related many times in these pages. Space will not permit of any adequate recapitulation now.

But what is of basic importance is the ever-growing realization, shown by such activities, that this is labor's war in a more real sense than any other war our country has been engaged in.

It is not only a war for our nation's survival, but it is also a war of all the freedom-loving peoples of the world against the most hideous forms of fascist tyranny that know no national boundaries.

So it is natural that the CIO, representing the best organized, most progressive and most forward-looking of the American working people, should assume national leadership for the most aggressive prosecution of this war to speedy and complete victory.

Every line of the resolutions adopted at the recent CIO convention in Boston breathes this spirit of war leadership.

Because it has learned the lessons of a year at war, the CIO is now calling for total war mobilization; for centralized administration of production, manpower and economic stabilization; for the closely-knit organization of our whole war economy; for unity between all sections of American labor; and for international labor unity.

On this solemn anniversary of Pearl Harbor, the CIO rededicates itself with renewed determination to one overwhelming purpose—the crushing of the fascist Axis, so that freedom, democracy and social progress may survive.

Get Ready Now

One of the first things labor will have to think about when the 1943 Congress comes in next January is a new tax bill.

The 1942 bill, passed in November, has been described as the worst in tax history. It hits the workers and other low income groups and spares the rich and the fat corporations. It is a real wage cut and consequently a real threat to war production, because it takes money from workers as far down the scale as $12 a week—money that is desperately needed for food and health.

At the same time, it leaves big incomes and profits as a breeding ground for inflation. Most glaring of all was the flat refusal of Congress to do anything about the $25,000 income limit.

And because the 1942 bill fails to raise the revenue the government needs for war financing, we will be faced with a new bill almost as soon as Congress meets next month. What happens to that bill—whether it is a win-the-war measure or another soak-the-poor device—depends on labor.

The reactionary and anti-victory forces are stronger in this Congress than before. The first thing they will probably try for will be a general sales tax—some of the poll tax statesmen who sabotaged the 1942 bill are openly boasting that the sales tax is first on the agenda.

We all know that the sales tax cuts the food and other necessities workers can buy, thus cutting their health and productive efficiency. Labor can stop this plot against war production. Labor can make the 1943 tax bill a real victory measure.

But only if labor starts now, by organizing for an all-out campaign, even before the new Congress comes in. Start telling your Congressman and your Senators, even if they're newly elected, that labor demands an all-out, win-the-war tax bill in 1943.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE CURRENT peace negotiations between CIO and AFL are quite a contrast with those of previous years.

Formerly such negotiations used to attract the same kind of press attention as a major sporting event.

Newsreel cameramen and photographers would rush to the spot the moment they began, ready to record the signing of a peace agreement.

Scores of news and magazine writers would be on the job day and night, speculating as to which side would win, and concocting endless dope stories about real or supposed encounters behind the closed doors of the conference room.

As the negotiations dragged on, day after day and week after week, anticipations of an early agreement would change into stories about the "collapse of peace efforts," "renewal of labor war" etc.

And finally over-optimism about some magic peace formula would dwindle away into exaggerated cynicism about labor unity ever being achieved.

In contrast, the present negotiations started without fanfare, with only routine newspaper attention, and with practically no press anticipation of early success.

Yet, after three quite brief and businesslike sessions, the CIO and AFL committees were able to announce the most substantial step yet achieved toward unifying the labor movement — the first signed agreement between the two labor bodies since the original split occurred.

★ ★ ★

The agreement recognizes that the essence of labor unity is close cooperation for common objectives. The most important immediate objective is the winning of this war. And disunity does most harm when inter-labor disputes tend to hamper war production.

The CIO and AFL committees have therefore agreed upon a practical plan to arbitrate jurisdictional disputes between affiliates of the two big labor bodies.

Once ratified by the executive boards of CIO and AFL, this agreement will establish a joint AFL-CIO committee, whose members are to be named by the respective boards.

International unions will appeal jurisdictional disputes to this joint committee. And if its members fail to agree, they are to select a disinterested arbiter, whose decision is to be binding upon both parties.

If the committee members cannot agree upon an arbiter within five days, the President of the United States is to be requested to name an arbiter.

★ ★ ★

This agreement is not advanced as a substitute for organic unity. On the contrary, its purpose is practical cooperation between CIO and AFL to aid the successful prosecution of the peace negotiations, which are to be continued later in December.

And both CIO and AFL representatives emphasize they consider this agreement a most substantial step toward organic unity and a unified labor movement.

The agreement is fully in line with the repeatedly affirmed position of the CIO. This is that the first consideration must be joint labor action to win the war, and the prevention of disputes or stoppages that might hamper the war effort.

The CIO has, therefore, wholeheartedly supported the Combined Labor Victory Committee, which meets with President Roosevelt, has sought to broaden its functions and has welcomed the recent addition to this committee of railroad brotherhood as well as CIO and AFL representation.

At the same time, CIO President Murray has made repeated proposals for the arbitration of jurisdictional disputes between CIO and AFL unions.

Of course, the issue of labor unity goes far beyond the limited purposes of the new agreement. It is obvious that if the war effort is aided by arbitration of CIO-AFL disputes, it would be much more advanced by complete unification of labor's forces. And the economic, legislative and political advantages of unity are obvious.

The CIO yields to no one in its eager desire and sincere efforts for such unification. The proposals it advanced at its Boston convention were designed to bring about real and effective unity as speedily as possible.

One point in this CIO position is worth stressing, namely, that differences over jurisdictional lines are best settled within a unified labor movement. To postpone unity until all jurisdictional questions are settled is to postpone unity indefinitely.

The agreement just achieved is heartening evidence of the healthy growth of the spirit of labor unity. It will greatly encourage the CIO in its efforts for the speediest and most complete unity possible.

One Year at War

'We Hate Fascism'

By ROBERT L. CRUDEN

Robert Cruden, author of this story, is publicity director of The United Rubber Workers, CIO, and associate editor of the union's official organ, The United Rubber Worker.

AMERICA, Dec. 7, 1941 . . .

America was the road between Akron and Cleveland, the languor of a gray, cool day with fall lingering in the air; families tramping through the metropolital parks, eating hamburgers, talking about how soon we'd be getting plastic autos, and incidentally, wondering how come the Russians were doing such a job on Hitler. . . .

America was us, bursting into a friend's house, with our kids hungry, and jostling past our friend, a little pale, who said, "Did you hear? The Japs have bombed Pearl Harbor?"

He repeated it.

"You're kiddin'," I said, and started off on something else.

"Listen!" He turned on the radio.

". . . the State Department is buzzing with activity. Crowds are outside the White House. Soldiers are posted at all the Government buildings. And here's another flash: Japanese planes attacked our bases . . ."

I sat down. A clock ticked slowly in the room. The kids ate on, unconcerned. But we adults looked at each other feeling already the uncertainty ahead, knowing that Munich had borne its bitter fruit — war had come to us at last.

"I never thought they'd do it," I said.

We should have known better. We should have known that the rape of China would some day mean a stab in the back of America. We should have heard the warnings in the tramping German and Italian legions when they invaded Spain. We should have seen behind the false smiles and honeyed words of Munich.

We shrugged aside the lesson of Cain, when he challenged God: "Am I my brother's keeper?"

We had forgotten that all men are brothers. . . .

But now our eyes see, our ears hear. Listen!

A Frenchman Talks

I am a Frenchman. A worker. A member of our great CGT—the General Confederation of Labor. I fought in the first World War. After the war, I strove to bring up my family as well as I could . . . but the years were long, and wages were low, and the franc fell in value, and prices went up . . . and my hope for my three boys—my hope that they would have a better life than I had—died, slowly, bitterly.

For a time things were better, when our people got a government like the New Deal, when our labor movement was united. And hope, which never entirely dies, began to bloom again, shyly at first, and then stronger, stronger. . . .

But then came betrayal. Our leaders dickered with the Nazis, while we beat our heads against the walls of their self-interest. Our trusts, inspired from Berlin, hammered at our unions. Our military leaders despised us, the workers, and mocked at our democracy.

Then war came, and shame — not the shame of outright defeat in battle, but the shame of betrayal into the hands of enemies. A nation was sold by its Judases, and we have known in our bones and flesh the suffering of Golgotha.

Now they have taken me . . . taken me to work in Hitler's factories. They have taken me from my family without warning. They do not tell me where I go, nor when I shall return. My wages? What Hitler's leaders say. My hours? What Hitler's leaders say. My freedom? Don't ask it—the word freedom brings an ache, a pain, to my heart.

You in America once had slavery. You cleansed yourselves of it. But now this ugly thing has reared itself again, and free men are now in chains—not figuratively, but literally, toiling and dying in the mines and factories of Hitler.

While you still have freedom, Fight!

And so help us God, when the day of liberation comes, We Shall Fight With You!

Long Live Freedom! Long Live France!

A German Mother

My name is Kathe—never mind my last name, it doesn't matter. All that matters is that I am—I was—a German mother.

No, not the mother of a soldier, although I meet them every day—the silent, forlorn mothers whose sons are perishing in the mud and blood of Russia.

I was—oh, how can I go on—a young mother. Mother of young Ottilie. Ten years old—a young, impish kid with her long, blonde braids and her shining blue eyes. The only child we had—Wolfgang and I. And Wolfgang is gone, too.

But Ottilie. O God above, how we planned for her, and lived for her! How we cheated on the rations so she could have enough to eat! How we went hungry ourselves so she could eat! How, under our breath, we cursed that day when Hitler came to power and made our land a prey to fever and to death!

Ottilie kept us living . . . she alone . . .

And then, one morning, she couldn't rise. She couldn't eat; her face was flushed; and tears of pain rand down her face. I ran for a doctor—but there are not doctors for the poor in Germany. The Army needs doctors; the Storm Troopers need doctors; the Nazi officials need doctors. There are no doctors for us—the workers.

I went to the Nazi headquarters.

"You want a doctor?" They laughed. "You don't need a doctor, Frau, you need a man!" They laughed again. I ran, their laughter scoffing at my pain. . . .

And then, in the dusk, I met Louis, the man from the Underground. I drew him quickly into a doorway and told him. He looked at me closely.

"Kathe, you're not lying . . . trying to trap us?"

I was hysterical. I laughed in his face. He shook me by the shoulder.

"Come out of it, Kathe. Ottilie will get a doctor—tonight!"

In darkness I waited, praying to God and cursing Hitler, crying by myself and being cheerful for my little girl, now red and feverish . . . and ready to face a concentration camp if the Nazis found a doctor from the Underground in the room.

At midnight he came—a thin, serious man with scars across his face, scars from Nazi lashes. Even as he turned my little girl over and listened to her heart and looked in her throat I felt the breath of death. . . .

He stood up, shaking his head.

"She could be saved. One man I know could save her. An expert . . ."

I grasped his coat. "Get him. I'll get the money, somehow."

His eyes were full of pity. "I can't . . . He's in Dachau . . . He's a Jew . . ."

Chinese Guerrilla

I am one of countless Chinese who are fighting the hardest fight of all—the fight against the Japanese invaders behind their lines! By day we are hard working peasants, or are hidden in the hills, but when darkness begins to fall we pick up our weapons and creep quietly, silently in among the enemy. . . .

Have you seen our weapons? Old guns for which we make our own bullets. Old-fashioned swords—with sharp blades. Home-made daggers. And simple string—good for garroting a Japanese sentry. And clubs and dynamite!

Night after night we harass the Japanese. We blow up their trains. We poison their food. We pollute their water. We slay the stragglers from their columns. We give them neither rest nor peace . . . and we shall not until every Japanese has been driven from our sacred soil.

I could tell you about the Japanese . . . about their rape of Nanking, when they took an entire city, butchered the helpless, the aged, the children and declared the city a brothel, with all women prey to the soldiers; about their binding our captives together, alive, and then using them for bayonet practice. They did the same to the British after the capture of Hongkong. . . .

But that is how fascists are; it is foolish to expect them to act differently.

We are fighting side by side with you—in one war, a war of liberation. So please pay no attention to the fascist propaganda that this is a white man's war. This is not a war to fasten white man's imperialism on Asia.

It is a people's war, to open the paths to freedom to peoples everywhere, regardless of the color of their skins or the shape of their eyes.

Poland Calling

Are you listening, America? A Polish woman calling, calling . . .

I live in Warsaw. Ten people live with me—in one room. Two are old, grandparents. Four are middle-aged, like me. Three are children . . . but by the time you read this they will have gone. Children don't live long on potato peelings.

Do you know what it is to be hungry? I mean really hungry. I mean hunger that goes on day after day, that breaks down your pride so that you crawl along the gutters watching for an old bone, that makes you cringe and whine before a Nazi in the hope that maybe he'll toss you a piece of bread.

That's the hunger I know. That's the hunger these children here know. These thin, shrivelled bodies don't know how they came here; all they know is that their father was shot and their mother raped before their eyes and then chased across the fields while drunken Nazis fired at her, betting each other as to how close they could get without killing her. The oberlieutenant ended the spree by shooting her clean through the head when she stopped, panting for want of breath . . .

You don't believe these things, America? Then you don't know the Nazis.

I was the respected mother of a good family, but I was pulled out of church by the hair and the priest was clubbed to death at the altar. And now I must get off the sidewalk when a German approaches; I get only a little rations—if I can get them at the store after the Germans have had as much as they want. Because we are permitted to shop only after the Germans have finished.

I don't think about Maria any more—my daughter. She was pretty and young. They rounded her up with others and put them in the Warsaw camp to entertain the officers . . . and after that they sent her to Russia or France or somewhere to entertain the soldiers. God save her soul!

But a day is coming, America, when they shall see that we of Poland are capable of hate—fierce, burning hate that knows no pity, that will consume this Nazi plague in a flame of vengeance!

Through the Underground I hear American soldiers are already on the way to help us. God grant it may be so! Every night I shall pray—"God bless America! God speed the day when the Yanks are coming!"

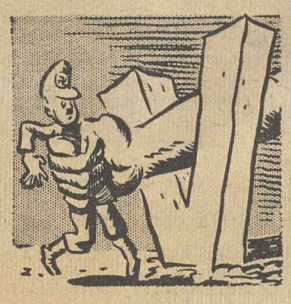
Red Army Man

Peter Stepanovitch talking, a soldier of the Red Army. A plain man, son of a peasant, but I am part of a great army of plain people, fighting for our country and for freedom. We are fighting for the right of people everywhere to make things better for themselves and their children. We are fighting because we have tasted the joys of freedom and creation, and because we know that should Hitler triumph the road to freedom would bog down in a pit of endless darkness.

I have been in the territories which we have recaptured from the Germans. I know what Hitlerism means.

I have see the bodies of children from whom German doctors have taken skin while the children were yet alive to use in grafting operations for Nazi officers.

I have seen long rows of hanging bodies —bodies of men and women pulled from the ground and left to strangle. This for an example to other men and women to bow meekly to the Nazi yoke.



I have seen the shrines of our country—our churches, our national museums, the homes of Tolstoi and Tschaikowski, pillaged and polluted by the Nazi hordes. Think how you would feel if Monticello were used for toilet purposes by a Nazi army!

I have seen the spots where children were burned alive because they wouldn't betray our guerrilla fighters.

I have spoken to the men and women with battered bodies, with eyes gouged out with nails torn out by the roots . . .

But maybe you are tired of this . . . you think maybe this is just "atrocity propaganda."

That's what the Nazis want you to think. But your men will find when they come to grips with these monsters that atrocities are part of their military scheme.

We shall not rest, we shall not sleep, until the last Nazi is driven from our soil. We shall not stay our hand until, with you, the British and the free peoples of France, and Poland and Germany itself, we shall have wiped Hitlerism and its poisons from the face of the earth.

The great offensive against Hitlerism has begun. Hand in hand with you we shall go forward to Victory. History will record that our mighty peoples will win the war and hold open the gates of progress for the people everywhere!

A Year of War

America, Dec. 7, 1942 . . .

A year of war . . .

Our dead are in the Pacific, in the gray waters of the Atlantic, on the hot sands of Africa, in the steaming jungles of Bataan . . . testimony from the grave that we cannot live unto ourselves.

We have learned, the hard way. We have had to put selfish interests aside, we have had to give up our accustomed ways of living, we have had to fight to put America's interests above personal and corporate interest—and it's been a hard, uphill job.

But we're doing it. The world's mightiest industrial machine is pouring out the world's mightiest flow of war materials—and (something to be proud of) we're not satisfied.

We are resolved, as never before, to turn out the goods, to present a solid and unbreakable front to the defeatists and appeasers who would sell our country short, to march forward to greater and greater democracy at home.

With Vice-President Wallace we say: "The people's revolution is on the march, and the devil and all his angels cannot prevail against it. They cannot prevail, for on the side of the people is the Lord."

Lewis 'Rule or Ruin' Acts Stir Miners' Ire

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—Efforts of John L. Lewis to spread his jurisdiction through raids on other labor organizations and to wipe out all vestiges of democ-racy within the United Mine Workers, were meeting this week with increased resistance.

One of the chief centers of opposition to the Lewis machine was being treated to the spectacle of Lewis agents branding as "dual unionists" supporters of Pat Fagan, candidate for re-election as president of UMW District 5, a post he has held for years.

Fagan, a strong supporter of Pres. Roosevelt's win-war policies and of the CIO, heads one of the few remaining autonomous districts within the mine union set-up.

Behind closed doors a fact-finding commission is "probing" the cases of 14 members of the Fagan-for-President Campaign Committee, seven of whom are themselves candidates for office in the district.

"The charges appear to be an attempt at coercion and intimidation. Campaigning for election is certainly not dual unionism," Fagan commented.

"The miners have the right to support and work for the election of any man for any office in the gift of the miners."

Suspension of Fagan's supporters would help pave the way for election of adherents of the Lewis machine within the District, which is one of the largest, within the United Mine Workers.

LETTER FROM MARINE

Typical of the resentment of Lewis policies was a letter given prominence in a recent issue of the Pittsburgh Press. Signed by PFC Thomas A. Ryan, an enlisted member of the U. S Marines, the letter said:

"We are fighting against dictatorship in this war for the preservation of democracy and four freedoms. We are ready to lay down our lives for that cause. Yet in the United Mine Workers there is a vicious a dictatorship as that of the Axis.

"Instead of Hitler the dictator is John L. Lewis. I know the membership of the United Mine Workers has a strong friendship for the CIO. I believe a referendum would prove they want to be with the CIO. But Dictator Lewis rules otherwise.

"Now in District 5 this same man is seeking to destroy the autonomy which we enjoyed. He has appointed a commission to try Pat Fagan. This is done in hopes of defeating Pat in the December election. He knows Pat will fight against yielding autonomy; and Lewis also knows that his hand-picked slate will do whatever he says. The price to be paid will be to yield the district to Lewis—in fact, if not in name."

DISTRICT 50 LOSING

While District 5 miners resist the Lewis machine, workers in other industries are casting an avalanche of ballots against District 50, the catch-all unity of the UMW which works under the personal guidance of Kathryn Lewis.

In recent weeks furniture workers in Arkansas, paving cutters in Washington and textile workers in Tennessee have all voted against District 50 in NLRB elections. An almost unbroken string of defeats has been rung up by the Lewis all-union outfit in its contests throughout the country.

Most recent indication of Lewis' disregard of all existing labor unions was the appearance of District 50 organizers at the Sun Shipyards, near Philadelphia. They sought to cajole former coal miners now working in the shipyard to join their outfit rather than the CIO's Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, which has been running a strong campaign at the yards.

Evidence of the unenthusiastic attitude of the UMW top leadership toward the war was found in the last issue of the Mine Workers Journal. Its joke page was devoted largely to jokes of a defeatist nature, while the lead editorial professed to see the lesson of the Nov. 3 elections as a mandate to the Republicans to become a "people's party."

Equal Pay For Women Won at Ford

Toronto, Dec. 5—More than 13,000 autoworkers, members of Canada's largest union, Local 200 UAW-CIO, this week won a struggle for the principle of equal pay for equal work which is expected to have national significance.

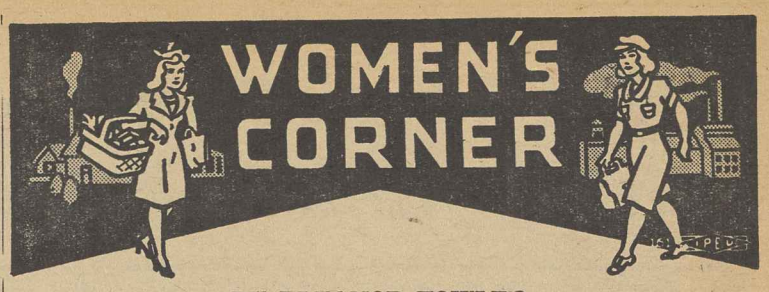
The settlement, which resulted in the Ford Motor Co. of Canada, agreeing to the principle of equal pay for women, ended a five-day strike in which everyone walked out.

While negotiations were in progress, the Ontario War Labor Board rejected the company's application to employ women at 50 cents an hour. The strike began over the employment of 37 women, some of them on jobs formerly held by men. They were paid $75 monthly, contrary to an order-in-council which provides that method of payment shall not be changed and rates shall not be reduced.

GOVT. INACTIVITY

Prolongation of the strike was caused for several days by the refusal of both the dominion and Ontario governments to accept responsibility for establishing the principle of equal pay for equal work. Union officials learned from dominion government circles that an order-in-council was being formulated to set wage rates for women on a lower basis for women and this also contributed to delaying the settlement.

By the decision, the company and union agreed to arbitrate the cases of 37 women involved. Those found to be doing men's work will be placed in other employment. Negotiations will also commence on revision of the existing agreement.



BY ELEANOR FOWLER
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

"December 7, 1942, will undoubtedly go down in history as the date on which American women obtained more opportunities and assumed more responsibilities than at any time since the founding of our country."

With this statement, Faye Stephenson, president of the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, urged all CIO women to "accept the first anniversary of the Pearl Harbor attack as a challenge to do a greater fighting job wherever you are—on the production line, in the home, in Civilian Defense or in the numerous other jobs where women must be found to carry on our country's battle to wipe fascism off the face of the earth."

Mrs. Stephenson noted that women of the CIO had already made great contributions to the war effort in facing the rising wartime emergencies. "Thousands and then tens of thousands of women who had expected to remain housewives through the rest of their lives, playing a secondary role in America, have jumped into the front line trenches of the anti-Hitler production army during this one year.

SHOW OUR METTLE

"Before the next half year, it is expected that another four million women will take their places in the factory. This is the opportunity of 1942 to work as equals with men and fight as equals on the production line. Women can find jobs—and in union shops they can get equal pay for equal work.

"Never before in the history of our nation have women been accepted as equals. But, never before have they had such enormous responsibilities.

"Obviously we must show our mettle in the battle of production. We have already shown that we can do it. We must do more.

"Obviously, we must take our places as leaders of our trade unions to replace those leaders who go into the armed forces. The time is approaching when a woman who fails to step in as an active trade union leader, when she has the ability, will be called a coward or a traitor to the country. For without unions, the United Nations cannot win the war and without women moving rapidly and boldly into leadership, unions will be crippled.

"As Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO told the Boston convention of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries: 'The future of the CIO movement will substantially depend on the support that the organization is given by women in industry and on the part played by the leaders who have guided the course of your organization.'

"The greatest field for organizing the unorganized today is the field of women workers. It is our job to prepare them for organization.

"These are our new rights, forced by manpower shortage in a war emergency. These are our new obligations in this emergency."

Fascism Due For Fall, Walsh Tells Forum

New York, Dec. 5 — "This war is a natural' for workers," and they're determined to win it, J. Raymond Walsh, CIO research and education director, told a forum here sponsored by Science and Society magazine.

"Instinctively, workers understand that they are the first and last foes of fascism, and the labor movement is the greatest organized force with which to break fascist power and guard humanity's freedom," Walsh declared. "There is here a deep sense of destiny understood."

Walsh reviewed various CIO production plans offered to the government since Pres. Murray first introduced his Industry Council Plan and related instances of sharp increases in output when employers cooperate with labor.

Other speakers included Frieda Miller of the New York State War Council; Julius Emspak of the CIO electrical workers; John Beecher of the War Manpower Commission; and Prof. Paul M. Sweezy of Harvard.

'Men Only' Jobs Facing Fate of Dinosaurs

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—The great majority of jobs and industrial processes of today can no longer be classified exclusively as men's or women's work, says a bulletin just issued by the Women's Bureau on "equal pay for women in war industries."

The pamphlet, which appeared at about the same time the War Labor Board issued a general order authorizing employers to equalize the wages of women with those of men without prior Board approval, holds that "wage rates for women should be the same as for men, including the entrance rate."

KEEP STANDARDS HIGH

"It is of the utmost importance to the men leaving industry for the armed forces, as well as to the women war workers, that wage standards should be maintained at this time when large new groups of women are carrying on war industry production," Mary Anderson, director of the Women's Bureau, declared in announcing the bulletin.

Asserting that "it is an essential part of the efficient conduct of the war to provide adequate wage standards for these workers, many of them new to industry, the pamphlet holds that "it is basically unfair to pay one worker a lower wage than another for substantially the same work."

Furthermore, it states, "men leaving to go into the armed forces must be able to feel that the women who carry on in industry are not being forced to undercut established wage standards."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President

Director of Organization

Mr. Pegler, consistent with his record of mis-stating things and his hate for labor, seeks to attack President Murray and the writer by misquoting certain things said. He proceeds to move along on a false premise, of which he is well aware. He knows the CIO members did not pull away from the AFL, but were suspended and then expelled from the AFL. The distortions made of the facts are true to his style. Keep it up, Peg, it helps us get members.

The Ohio State Industrial Union Council convened in the City of Columbus, last week. A fine spirit of solidarity prevailed throughout the sessions and a determination to support the CIO policy of all-out war effort and to organize the unorganized.

Jack Kroll, Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, was re-elected president and Ted F. Silvey was unanimously re-elected secretary treasurer, members thus expressing their confidence in their leadership. Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey, John Brophy, director, Industrial Union Councils, and the writer addressed the gathering. The officers' report showed a tremendous amount of work done in behalf of the workers of Ohio during the past year.

Many Elections Won

Edward McCrone, CIO Sub-Regional Director in Connecticut reports that the UERMWA-CIO won the NLRB election at the A. Colt Patent Firearms Company at Hartford, by a vote of 121 for CIO to 19 for no union.

W. I. Young, IWA field representative, reports winning an election at the Underwood Veneer Company, sawmill in Bessemer, Michigan, by a vote of 91 for IWA-CIO, to 18. The winning of this election will prove a springboard for organization of four more mills in this area. The United Steelworkers election victories recently in the mines of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan aided materially in this fine victory.

Through the efforts of CIO Field Representative Joseph Lovas, regional director Hugh Thompson of Buffalo, reports that the election at the Barcalo Manufacturing Company was a victory in behalf of the CIO with a vote of 126 for CIO to 83.

Regional Director H. R. Ballard of Omaha, Nebraska, reports an election victory in the Shell Projectile Division of the Omaha Steel Workers, by a vote of 173 for the USA-CIO to 99 for the AFL.

Fullerton Fulton, CIO regional director in Chicago, reports the following election results: GM Laboratories, Inc., UERMWA-CIO, 128 to 33; Armstrong-Blum Manufacturing Co., UERMWA-CIO, 137 to 81.

The United Rubber Workers of America won the election at the Servus Rubber Company in Rock Island, Illinois, with a vote of 394 for CIO to 162. They also advise they have been certified as exclusive bargaining agency at the Bolta Rubber Company, Lawrence, Massachusetts, by check of application cards against payroll by the NLRB.

CIO Regional Director Powers Hapgood reports winning an election at the Curry-Miller Veneer Company where the results were 35 for CIO to 4. He also reports the winning of the election at the Thiesing Veneer Company with a vote of 28 for CIO as against 6.

More Victories

The American Newspaper Guild report two election victories, as follows: Patriot-News, Harrisburg, Pa., the Guild won the NLRB election in the circulation department by a vote of 35 for CIO as against 0. The editorial department already is under contract; at Racing Form and Morning Telegraph, New York City, the Guild won the NLRB election by a vote of 58 to 15.

The home office employes of Paramount Pictures, maintenance workers and employes in Paramount's Famous Music Room voted 250 to 113 for the UOPWA-CIO. In addition, the UOPWA holds a closed shop contract with DeLuxe Laboratories, largest film processing laboratory in the east and is the bargaining representative for employes of National Screen Service, a trailer service.

The International Longshoremens' & Warehousemens' Union as reported by Vice President and Director of Organization R. J. Robertson, have won, during the last three months, Labor Board elections involving approximately 3,500 workers.

James P. Dean, CIO regional director, advises that CIO was victorious in the election held at the Ward Furniture Company's plant in Ft. Smith, Arkansas, where the United Furniture Workers, CIO, scored 181 votes to 131 for the AFL.

Unity Needed For Real Gains, Murray Warns

Washington, Dec. 5—Unity of the workers of all the United Nations is essential for a people's victory and a people's peace in the war against the Axis, President Murray said in a shortwave broadcast to the Australian workers this week.

"With you, and with our heroic allies of all the United Nations, the workers of America are fighting a war of survival against the Axis," he said.

"Unless we win this war, everything for which we stand—our unions, our democratic governments, our homes and our lives will be destroyed by a savage enemy. This is sober fact, as we have seen from the bitter experience of the workers in the invaded and conquered countries. There, the first victims of the hangman and the firing squad are the plain people like ourselves—the workers who make a nation."

PRIDE IN OFFENSIVE

Speaking as the nation approached the anniversary of Pearl Harbor, Murray said that American workers "read with pride of our American forces fighting on every war front; fighting alongside their allies in Africa, in the Pacific and on the approaches to your great country.

"Our men are proud to labor with these free people. They are the people of China, of the Soviet Union and of the British Commonwealth who have held Axis savagery at bay for three long years."

Colombian Workers Want War

Bogota, Colombia, Dec. 5 (ALN) The Confederation of Columbian Workers, (CTC) central organization of 95,000 Colombian workers, is increasing its pressure upon the government of President Alfonso Lopez to declare war on the Axis.

Latest CTC affiliate to make this demand is the Federacion del Transporte Maritime y Fluvial (Fedenal), 10,000-strong federation of marine and river workers' unions.

The maritime workers are particularly incensed by a remark made by War Minister Galvis, after a tour of inpsection of the Atlantic seaboard, that "there is no submarine menace in the Caribbean."

The sinking of the Colombian schooners Resolute and Roamer by a U-boat last July, and the cold-blooded machine-gunning of their crews (occasion of a special note of protest by U. S. Secretary of State Cordell Hull), have not been forgotten by the maritime workers, who believe that Colombian fifth columnists may be cooperating with U-boat commanders in the Caribbean.

Russian Unions To Train Million Workers As Skiers

KUIBYSHEV, Dec. 5—(ALN)—Soviet trade unions will train a million skiers this winter, according to a program announced this week by Nikolai Shvernik, secretary of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions.

Local unions at every industrial enterprise employing more than 3,000 workers have been instructed to establish skiing schools by Dec. 1. Sixty schools are being set up by the national unions in the larger cities.

The new program, Shvernik said, will provide preliminary military training and at the same time help maintain the labor productivity of young workers by keeping them in good physical condition through the winter.

The courses will be open to boys between 16 and 18 and young women between 22 and 24, who will be trained in conducting tactical operations on skis, handling rifles throwing hand grenades and crawling through deep snow carrying heavy equipment and without removing their skis.

The advantages of having millions of people capable of fighting on skis in below-zero weather was demonstrated by the Red army and guerrilla detachments in last winte's campaigns.

45,000 TEACHERS

Skiing instructors from union sports societies are now attending courses in Moscow, Khabarovsk, Sverdlovsk, Archangel and several other large cities. A total of 45,000 instructors will be needed for the new schools, 4,000 in Moscow alone. The unions have bought 130,000 pairs of skis, and the Lumber Workers Union will manufacture tens of thousands more by the end of December.

The union skiing program illustrates the complete transformation which has taken place in Soviet athletics since the war.

The most popular sporting events the USSR at present are those adapted to the needs of the battlefield. Perhaps the most popular is hand grenade throwing which is practiced almost as widely as parachute jumping before the war.

BIG JOB FOR UNIONS

Since last year's experience demonstrated the need for endurance and stamina at the front, Soviet trade unions have greatly expanded their sports programs.

Every local has a sports club, and there is intense rivalry between teams for the sports societies of the big unions.

More than 10,000,000 workers are members of union sports clubs, which own some 750 athletic fields, 500 gymnasiums and 200 stadiums.

Maintaining the sports clubs is one of the big items in Soviet union budgets; in 1938 the total figure spent by unions on sports was 147,000,000 rubles ($45,000,000).

Murray Flays Nazi Cruelty Toward Jews

Washington, Dec. 5 — Words of sympathy for Polish Jews and bitter condemnation of the mass-murder policie of the Nazis in conquered Poland, were voiced today by leaders of CIO and AFL, and by persons prominent in the nation's public life.

The messages appear in a special issue of "The Ghetto Speaks," published by American representatives of the General Jewish Workers Union of Poland.

CONDEMNS GHETTOS

Murray said he wrote to condemn "the inhuman ghettos which have been created by Nazi brutality and barbarism in Poland and throughout Europe."

"The elimination of hatred and envy and cruelty among the various races and groups of human beings must be one of the prime objectives of the enduring peace which our democratic nations will write after victory" the CIO leader said.

Sidney Hillman, head of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, said the "restoration of ghetto walls under the Hitler regime, and the confinement of the Jewish people to living within the ghetto walls, is in keeping with the nature of Hitlerism, the outlook, the mentality and the aspirations of those who would plunge humanity back into medieval darkness.

"The concentration camp and murders, piecemeal and wholesale, are in line with what is to be expected of this power that is out to conquer the world."

New Pamphlet On CIO Parley

Washington, Dec. 5 — CIO's new pamphlet, summarizing and describing basic policy resolutions and actions at the Boston convention, goes to press this week and will be available within a few days.

The pamphlet, under the title "CIO's Victory Program," will contain excerpts from basic policy actions and will contain the program in handy form for use by CIO affiliates and other groups.

Prices will be available next week. Send all inquiries to Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington, D. C.

'Friendly Competition' Builds Britain's Fighting Strength

LONDON, Dec. 5—(ALN)—Largely responsible for the tremendous production increase now being registered in Britain are inter-factory output competitions, spontaneously organized by rank and file workers but being taken up more widely each week by unions and shop stewards councils.

Winner of this week's "production banner" for the competition among plants in the aircraft industry is a large bomber plant in the northwest, which increased output 40% over the previous week.

The workers in this northwest factory posted all over the plant such slogans as: "It's not the hours you put in, it's what you put into the hours;" "Don't go slow—this week's for Joe;" and "They're over the top in Africa—let's go here!"

ON TARGET

Each department in the plant succeeded in smashing the production target it had set for itself. Target in the hydraulic department was 450 units; 530 were produced. The pipebending shop produced 6000 units instead of 5500.

Another shop produced 14 bulkheads, whereas its previous average had been 10. In this department one worker did a 100-hour job in 20 hours. Workers in the fittings shop set themselves a target of 20,000, as against a previous average of 18,000; output was 30,000 for the day shift alone.

The night shift, with a target of 10,000, produced 15,000 by the end of four nights. In the undercarriage shop, five women workers produced a complete set of doors every 24 hours instead of every 40. Two women in the engine controls shop finished a 176-hour job in 98 hours.

BUILD MORE PLANES

Last July, during a special production week, workers in this plant increased production 7%. In the belief that "consolidation must follow attack," they carried out their own survey to see how this increase could be maintained.

Finding that lack of cooperation between the production and inspection departments was a major bottleneck in the plant, they took the matter up in their labor-management committee, had two new inspectors hired and thus straightened out the difficulty. Last week they increased output 43% over the July record.

CIO Hits Whitewash Of Lumber Bungling

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—A sharp protest against "obvious attempts by the organized industry and the WPB lumber officials to "whitewash" the lumber muddle and a renewed demand for a hearing from labor was sent by CIO Pres. Philip Murray to Senator Harry S. Truman this week.

Murray's letter, sent following a report that hearings were being ended without a chance for representatives of the CIO Intl. Woodworkers to testify, said in part:

"As in other fields of production, organized labor which knows the industry from a practical point of view, has time and again urged the adoption of programs that would keep lumber production abreast or ahead of war needs.

"But lack of imagination and initiative on the part of the industry and of like-minded representatives in the lumber offices of the War Production Board, War Manpower, the Army and other agencies has resulted in either inaction or utterly inadequate action on labor's constructive proposals.

OBVIOUS ATTEMPTS

"I am shocked by the obvious attempts of the organized industry and the WPB lumber officers to whitewash the whole situation before your committee, with their meager estimates of needs and their optimistic predictions of 1943 production.

"In the interest of the national safety and of the United Nations' war effort, therefore, I respectfully urge that an opportunity be provided for organized labor in the timber industry to present to your committee its facts and recommendations on this crucially important problem."

Gas Rationing Gets Workers' Backing

Washington, Dec. 5—Full approval for the mileage allotment plan of rationing gas throughout the country in order to conserve essential rubber in tires was expressed by CIO President Philip Murray, who said this week:

"The workers of the U. S. will be most generally and deeply affected by the mileage rationing, which is announced by the OPA. As the bearers of the sacrifices entailed in this program, the members of the CIO wish, through me, to state their complete public endorsement of the OPA plan."

A statement on similar lines was made by William Green, president of the AFL, who pointed out that the basic nationwide rationing was absolutely necessary to conserve rubber needed for war weapons and supplies.

Meanwhile, the determined effort to block gas rationing on the part of a small but very vocal Congressional bloc simmered down to virulent attacks on Leon Henderson, head of OPA, garnished with much oratory about "bureaucracy," etc.

City Signs Union Shop CIO Pact

Ely, Minn., Dec. 5 (FP)—What is believed to be the first closed shop contract signed by a governmental organization with a union in Minnesota has been agreed to by the Ely city council and Local 386, State County & Municipal Workers (CIO) covering 70 employes.

Terms of the contract provide that "all employes, now in service and who are not members of the union, shall make application for membership in the union within 60 days after the ratification of the agreement." Fifty-seven employes already are union members.

Other provisions of the contract include seniority, job security, vacations, sick leave and wage reclassification.

Minnesota Iron Range Votes CIO

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 5 (FP)—An outstanding victory for the CIO was scored in Minnesota when workers at the Oliver Iron Mines in the Hibbing district—largest iron producing center in the world—voted overwhelmingly to join the CIO United Steelworkers of America.

For over 50 years this area, dominated by the Rockefeller and Morgan interests, has been the scene of bitter struggles by the workers to improve their notoriously poor conditions.

Attempts by the IWW to gain union recognition for the miners a quarter-century ago were defeated by company guns and goons, and there was no organization until the CIO entered the picture.

Election returns from the Hibbing district and the nearby Eveleth and Virginia districts showed impressive union majorities.

In the Hibbing district the vote was 1,463 for the union, 128 against. In the Eveleth-Virginia district, it was 997 for, 74 against.

Greet Fur Union Leader After Frame Sentence

New York, Dec. 5 — A rousing welcome from CIO and AFL unionists greeted Jack Schneider, Intl. Fur and Leather Workers leader, out on parole after 22 months in prison on a trumped-up charge of "coercion" in connection with union activity.

His release was greeted by Allan S. Haywood, vice-president and organization director of the CIO, Joseph Curran, CIO vice-president and head of the Natl. Maritime Union; Mike Quill, president of the Transport Workers, and other CIO leaders. Greetings also came from two officers of the Intl. Ladies Garment Workers, AFL.

A telegram was also received from Alexander Hoffman, an official of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers now in jail for union activities. The telegram met with enthusiastic response and with a resolution urging his immediate pardon.

House Tories Pass Price Rise Bill

Washington, Dec. 5—In a quick stab at administration efforts to hold down food prices, the House today revived and passed a bill to lift food price ceilings by including rising wage costs in the farm price parity formula.

The bill, passed unanimously while House leaders were apparently unaware of what was going on, will increase food costs up to as much as 30 percent on some basic items, and will add some four billion dollars to the workers annual food bill.

The bill was shot through the House by Rep. Pace of Georgia, a polltaxer acting for higher-ups in the inflationary drive. It has to go through the Senate next, and newspaper reports indicate that a similar sneak maneuver will be attempted there.

The measure was defeated in the Senate last October by a final vote of 82 to nothing, after House passage. The administration compromise adopted at the time allows ample flexibility on food prices, which have already taken huge jumps.

It was strenously opposed by labor, led by CIO Pres. Murray, and by bona fide organized farmers such as those represented by the Natl. Farmers Union, who pointed out that the so-called farm bloc in Congress actually represented the big profit corporation farms and middlemen interests, and not the working farmer.

Doing Their Bit

To date members have purchased $100,000 in war bonds. Some 300 members have given blood to the Red Cross. Several hundred of the 1,600 members are active in civilian defense.

"We have contributed substantially to the Red Cross, USO, British, Russian, Chinese and other war relief agencies here and abroad, and given $10 to each of our 130 soldier and sailor members," reports Al Collins, union press committee member.

Consumer Parley Demands Food Rationing—'Now'

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5—Democratic rationing of consumer goods should be rationed, and rationed soon, it was agreed last week by representatives of labor, consumer, civic and church groups attending a one-day conference here.

Called by the Cooperative League of the U. S., the meeting heard sharp criticism of the failure to institute an all-out rationing program before shortages of vital consumer goods reach a dangerous level.

"Because unavoidable shortages of consumer goods exist, it is necessary immediately to institute the rationing of those goods that are scarce or becoming scarce, in order to assure a fair share of those goods we have," a resolution passed by the organization representatives warned.

"In all cases, rationing should begin at once without a preliminary announcement. These items which are already known to be dangerously short should be rationed by Dec. 15."

CIO REPRESENTED

Attending the meeting were representatives of the CIO, AFL and railway brotherhoods; the Federal Council of Churches, the Natl. Catholic Welfare Conference and the Natl. Council of Jewish Women; CIO Auxiliaries, Natl. Education Assn., the Assn. of Business & Professional Women, the American Assn. of University Women the American Home Economics Assn., and the Cooperative League.

Leslie Woodcock, Coop League official, pointed out that rationing of scarce foodstuffs would eliminate hysteria and hoarding and assure equitable distribution.

He criticized delay in institution of coffee rationing until serious shortages had developed, adding:

"The story of coffee is an example of what may happen again, and I say the policy carried out with respect to coffee was almost inexecusable.

"It would have been disastrous if it had happened with relation to foodstuffs which were absolutely necessary. We can do without coffee, even those of us who like it."

"But if such a situation should develop with relation to foodstuffs for babies, for example, it would be criminal."

'Rationing' Demanded on Stirrup Pumps

Washington, Dec. 5 — Stirrup pumps to fight incendiary bomb destruction must be made available to all groups in the population, rather than be "cornered" by the wealthy.

That was the warning sent to all CIO state and city groups today by John Brophy, councils director, with a plea that they demand action by local defense councils to allocate the firefighting equipment on the basis of need.

"The national Office of Civilian Defense has made arrangements for the allocation of large quantities of these pumps for the civil population," Brophy said.

"Unless labor gets busy, the available supplies are apt to be bought up by the wealthier groups in each community, and used only in the better-off neighborhoods, to serious jeopardy of working-class districts."

JOB FOR COUNCILS

CIO councils were urged to demand that their local civilian defense councils buy a sufficient quantity of the pumps so that they may be distributed in workers' residential areas, and that they be shared by entire apartments or neighborhoods.

Brophy and Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, joined to ask councils and union legislative spokesmen to seek passage of state laws broadening civilian defense work and providing compensation for civilian defense workers injured in line of duty.

Steel Plant Goes CIO, 14-1

Detroit, Dec. 5—Employes of the McLouth Steel Corp. voted overwhelmingly for the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, in a recent Labor Board election, it was revealed today by District Director Thomas Shane.

Some 216 workers voted for the CIO, with only 15 voting against. Contract negotiations, covering all employes of the Livernois Mill, are due to resume immediately.

CIO Asks Election In Coast Shipyard

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 12 — The CIO this week drove to bring to thousands of workers in certain yards in the war-vital shipyard industry here the chance to choose their own collective bargaining agent in National Labor Relations Board elections.

The CIO union—the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers—which last week filed charges of an unfair labor practice against the Western Pipe & Steel yard, asked that workers in the yard be given the right to vote in an election. No election has ever been held at the yard.

Walter S. Pollard, who recently resigned as shipyard labor consultant on the War Production Board, arrived on the coast to become west coast director for the union and immediately announced that the IUM&SW would continue to fight for the rights of workers to vote—and would take the matter to the courts if necessary.

CIO charges that management at Western Pipe entered into a backdoor closed shop agreement with the AFL Metal Trades Council before the AFL had even one member in the yard.

KAISER HEARINGS OPEN

Recently, NLRB in a decision in Washington issued an unfair labor practice complaint against Henry J. Kaiser and three northwest yards. On the basis of this decision, the local union brought the charges before the board here.

A formal hearing on the Kaiser case will be held in Portland Dec. 14 and Pollard announced he would leave here to go to the northwest city to help argue the case, which will probably set a national precedent on backdoor agreements.

Pollard is acting under instructions from John Green, international president of the union, and he came here from the Camden, N. J. headquarters of the union.

"We are going to insist that the rank and file workers in these yards be given the chance to choose their bargaining agent," Pollard said. "For too long now have employers used the AFL to keep workers from choosing their own union. We intend to fight for an election and we will carry the case into the courts if necessary."

Although the Labor Board has not yet acted in the Western Pipe case, it is expected a similar complaint as was issued against Kaiser will be handed down by the board here.

Auto Workers Buy Lots of Bonds

Detroit, Dec. 12—The 900,000 workers in the 1,400 plants covered by the UAW-CIO contracts have purchased approximately $145,000,000 worth of war bonds, R. J. Thomas, president of the union declared today.

Thomas said that workers in the UAW-CIO plants are today, however, purchasing war bonds at a rate of $180,000,000 a year. Of the 900,000 workers employed in these plants, fully 655,000 are members of the UAW-CIO.

Soldiers Talk To 'Ma' Via CIO Records

New York, Dec. 12 — (FP) — Familiar voices of soldiers are now reaching into the homes of relatives and friends via transcribed messages, thanks to a gift from the United Office & Professional Workers (CIO).

The union presented 15 USO clubs throughout the country with Speak-O-Phone recorders purchased from a $1,000 fund donated by the white collar workers.

Mississippi Goes Union

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 12—First CIO contracts ever to be signed in the state of Mississippi have been won by the Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, CIO, following organization of a local at two cottonseed oil mills in Greenville, Miss.

The contracts cover Refugee Cottton Oil Mill, and International Vegetable Oil Mill, a subsidiary of the same company.

The local was formed early in October when the workers got in touch with Otis Nation, UCAPAWA vice-president over the long distance telephone. The spokesman for the oil mill workers told Nation that they had heard about the CIO on the radio and had wanted a CIO union of their own for a long time.

Steel Bond Drive Nears 100% Goal

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 12 — A campaign to push war bond purchases among the nation's steel workers up to 10% of each week's wages was moving at a fast clip this week under the joint auspices of the CIO United Steelworkers of America and the 700 major companies in the industry.

Preliminary reports gathered by union and Treasury Dept. officials here showed that close to 100 companies have already reached the goal of 100% participation in the 10% bond check-off plan.

From Washington, Rep. John H. Tolan, (D., Calif.) wired that Congress is watching the drive with considerable interest. "If this is successful, it will head off forced saving," he said. "I wish you every success."

"Rep. Tolan can rest assured that this drive will be successful," declared David J. McDonald, USA-CIO secretary-treasurer who has taken an active part in the campaign.

To spur sales, Sec. of Treasury Henry J. Morgenthau sent a "personal" note to each member of the steel union, together with a statement from Pres. Philip Murray. To each company and each union local, Morgenthau sent telegrams urging full cooperation in the drive.

A movie short, featuring talks by McDonald and Alan Clark, Treasury Dept. official, were shown in movie houses throughout scores of steel-producing cities. Clark estimated that successful conclusion of the Steel Industry Bond Week would bring the government $22,500,000 in additional bond purchases each month.

Chicago Plant Votes CIO 2-1

Chicago—Magnus Metal Workers cast an overwhelming vote for CIO in the National Labor Relations Board election held today. By vote of 175 to 69 the workers chose the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers against AFL.

Ask Closer OPA, Consumer Ties

New York, Dec. 12—OPA needs more help from the consumer and the consumer needs more cooperation from OPA if the nation's wartime price stabilization program is going to work; these are the number one findings of a group of women who are today participating in a price-checking experiment sponsored by the New York locals of the United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO.

Proposals for a widespread campaign of consumer education through radio, subway advertising, etc., and for OPA training programs to teach housewives and shoppers how to be price wardens are being made by the UOPWA Consumers Class to OPA and to the National CIO Committee on Price Control and Rationing.

Warns of Axis Threat To U.S. Wire Service

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12—International implications of the proposed wire service merger bill lead to strong Axis influence and possible control over American radio and cables, the American Communications Association, CIO, revealed this week.

Under the merger as proposed before Congress, the Intl. Telephone and Telegraph Co. will be the dominating factor in communications between this country and the rest of the world, the ACA indicated, despite the fact that IT&T has had close Axis connections for some time in the past.

These connections come through IT&T subsidiaries, which control communications in such countries as Germany, Italy, Hungary and in occupied Europe, and which have a third interest in the Nippon Electric Co. of Japan. In addition, the IT&T entered into a licensing and patent control agreement with the Japanese firm in 1938.

This possibility remains a sharp danger to the nation's victory drive because despite the fact that the IT&T angle was ruled out by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in earlier hearings on the merger bill. The House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee put it back for House passage of the bill.

NAVY WARNINGS

It remains a danger despite strong protests from the Navy, which warned of Axis influence on our foreign communications when the bill was before the Senate group. Testifying at the time, a representative of the Secretary of the Navy declared:

"It is of first importance that these facilities be comprehensive, secure, entirely under American control; and that they shall have attained the highest technical utility which ingenuity can achieve within the limitations of the art.

"Therefore, it is of vital interest to the Navy that neither by legislative nor the encouragement of corporate activities shall anything be done which may disturb worldwide communications in the international field.

"The consolidation or merger of international telecommunications systems might expose these facilities to such possibility, and elaborate precautions would be necessary to guard against this possibility."

VISIT TO HITLER

The head of the IT&T, Sosthenes Behn, was one of the first, if not the first, American corporation executive to visit Adolf Hitler in Berchtesgaden, according to a New York Times story of August, 1933.

The IT&T was also to get protection for its controlled properties and the revenue from them in Axis controlled countries, according to a Times story of Jan. 1941, which said:

"This marks the first time that a large United States corporation has been able to obtain payment in United States funds for its properties in Nazi-controlled countries since the war started."

Women Get Longshore Jobs on Coast

San Francisco, Dec. 12. — Twelve women, first of a larger contingent, have gone to work on the waterfront as longshore workers, taking jobs at San Pedro. The women workers were dispatched to the docks by the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union, headed by Harry Bridges.

The 12 women were divided into two gangs of six each, and work beside the men. The union has secured equal pay for them, and originally proposed their employment to the Pacific Coast Maritime Industry Board, which has equal representation from the union and from the waterfront employers.

Monty-Ward Finds Tough Customer In Labor Board

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 — Montgomery-Ward is finding President Roosevelt and the War Labor Board a couple of tough customers.

The big mail order house, which has poured catalogues and goods into millions of American homes, discovered to its chagrin that it couldn't sell the WLB a second-hand version of Girdlerism, 1937 style. Today it looked as though either "Monky-Ward" would have to accept the law of the land, even as you or I, or that management of the company would pass into the hands of Uncle Sam.

The company's stalling tactics in its contract negotiations with the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes, brought forth unprecedented criticism from employer, public and labor members of the WLB. With considerable heat the Board officials condemned the company for publicly going back on its promise to accept union security when ordered by FDR.

OFFICIALS ANGERED

Wayne L. Morse, public member of the Board, attacked the company's policies in one of the most blistering statements ever issued by a government official. He said:

"I simply wish to say that I don't like welching or welchers, and I consider the present position of Montgomery Ward a pure case of welching on an agreement with the President of the United States."

Harry Darby, head of American Cyanamid & Chemical Co., director of the NAM and an employer member of the WLB, was almost equally critical of the mail order company.

"The reason that I voted for the imposition of a maintenance of membership clause in this case was that I believed that simple justice required that I do so. If I had it to do over again, I would do the same thing.

"I want to say this, that in my humble opinion, Montgomery-Ward has done the greatest disservice to industry and the private enterprise system of any concern in the United States, and I feel that just as strongly as I can."

Joining the condemnation was Emil Rieve, CIO vice-president and labor member of the WLB. He said that when the company describes the closed shop as the same as maintenance of a union membership, "they are lying, and they know it."

ORDERED SECURITY

Maintenance of membership was ordered by the WLB by unanimous vote as a result of its continuous resistance to the union over a course of months. When the President backed up the Board by similarly asking the company to incorporate the union security clause, Montgomery-Ward agreed.

But it tried to insert a joker clause in the contract asserting that union security had been forced down its throat by the Board, that the order had been accepted under duress at the order of the President and that the security clause was to go out the window immediately at the end of the war.

When union negotiators could not budge the management from its position, URWDSEA Pres. Samuel Wolchok asked the Board for action. In a second appearance before the WLB the company rejected all compromise proposals — and took paid advertising space in the nation's newspapers for the second time in a month to attack labor and the government's labor relations policy.

Hapsburg's Otto, People's War Fit Like Oil and Water, Austrian Exiles Protest

NEW YORK, Dec. 12 — Efforts of Prince Otto of Hapsburg to "mend his fences"—with the help of Sec. of War Stimson—looking toward possible restoration to the throne of a new Austria-Hungarian empire met with sharp criticism today from the Austrian Labor Committee here .

The committee, composed of Austrian labor leaders and officials of the old democratic regime in that country, is alarmed by the recent action of Sec. of War Stimson which set Otto as the head of an Austrian battalion in the U. S. Army. The reactionary Hapsburg monarchy was thrown from power during the democratic revolutions in Central Europe at the end of the last war, and Austrian labor spokesmen see no reason why it should be re-installed at the end of this one.

BIG UNION MOVEMENT

Austrian trade unions had 600,000 members out of 6½ million population before they were wiped out by fascism in 1934.

"The Austrian workers did not become Nazis; they strongly resisted Nazism," a Labor Committee official said. "But the Austrian workers do not resist Hitlerism and they do not take the most terrible risks in order to exchange Hitler for Hapsburg."

In the last fortnight a group of spokesmen of the democratic exiles from Austria, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Italy, Poland, Rumania and Yugoslavia reiterated the unpopularity of the Hapsburg ruling family.

RESENT PLUG FOR OTTO

"All nations that were under the Hapsburg domination reject categorically the restoration of the Hapsburg throne," the statement said. "They protest against tendencies to give Otto Hapsburg or his agents influence upon the special Austrian unit in the United States army, establishment of which has been announced."

Signing the statement were Friedrich Adler, former member of the Austrian Parlament; Desider Benau, secretary of the executive of the Czechoslovakian trades unions; Stefan Arski, chairman, Polish Labor Group, and Charles A. Davila, former Rumanian minister to the United States.

Soviet Unions Ask CIO Gifts Of Clothing

Washington, Dec. 12 — The All-Union Council of Trade Unions in the Soviet Union has asked the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief to consider the following items as their special concern in their Russian project: men's suits, men's overcoats, ladies coats, men's and ladies' shoes, woolen socks and stockings, gloves, and warm underwear.

The CIO War Relief Committee is now discussing with Russian War Relief and the AFL United Nations Relief Committee ways and means of sending these needed supplies immediately to the Russian people.

FROM WAR CHESTS

Funds for this project will come from the War Chests of the nation with which the CIO and AFL have working agreements of cooperation. These War Chests have agreed to allot a quota of their total contributions to the two union relief organizations for projects which have been jointly selected. The national total for CIO-AFL special labor projects is two million dollars.

The Labor projects which have been planned in Britain, China and Russia are approved by the official relief agency of each nation and will be administered as far as practical by the trade union movements of the countries.

Already established by CIO war relief funds solely is an Indian seamen's home in Britain. It was suggested because of the need for a place for recreation and rest for members of the Indian Merchant Marine.

NLRB Names N. American Aviation

Los Angeles, Dec. 12—The National Labor Relations Board this week cited the North American Aviation, Inc., before a circuit court of appeals because the company had failed to comply with a board order which directed that all grievances in the plant be handled through the employes' sole collective bargaining unit, United Auto Workers Local 887.

Unless North American promptly complies with this order, CIO attorneys said, the company will face a judgment before the circuit court of appeals for contempt of court.

Less than a month after the UAW won its contract at the giant North American plant after its strike in June, 1941, the company posted a notice which said that employes could present their grievances to management without going through union stewards.

FDR Order Helps Unify Control Over Manpower

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12—Steps toward clearing up the manpower muddle were taken this week with the appointment of Paul V. McNutt as head of a combined War Manpower Commission and Selective Service. At the same time, President Roosevelt ended voluntary enlistment in the armed forces of men from 18 to 38 as a step toward systematizing and conserving needed labor power.

McNutt's instructions in taking over the new job called for appointment of a labor-management committee and close consultation with it, and for all workers to be hired through the U. S. Employment Service. Both points have long been urged by the CIO and other labor groups.

FOUR MAIN JOBS

Speaking to newspaper correspondents after his appointment, McNutt outlined four jobs that have to be done to insure the more efficient use of manpower for victory. These included proper allocation between the armed forces and industry; mobilization of all labor reserves, including women and Negroes, transfer of workers from non-essential industry and an ample labor supply for agriculture.

Combining of the Manpower Commission and Selective Service under one head put a damper on Washington speculation of Cabinet shifts, which had Interior Secretary Ickes going to the Labor Dept. McNutt to Interior and Labor Secretary Perkins to head the Federal Security Administration.

Labor observers here, however, pointed out that the new set-up still lacks the basic element for total mobilization — over-all centralized war planning as urged by CIO and by progressive groups within Congress.

Union Hails Wickard In Food Post

Washington, Dec. 12—Appointment of Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard as food administrator, and centralization of all food supply under him, was hailed as "a real step toward streamlining war mobilization" by the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers this week.

The union's statement, made in a letter by UCAPAWA President Donald Henderson, urged "effective representation of organized labor in food industries so that labor can cooperate and make its contribution in helping to solve these production problems."

Henderson pointed out that Wickard's appointment, together with the coordination of manpower and Selective Service, "make all the more imperative the immediate establishment of some central over-all planning agency such as proposed by the Pepper-Kilgore-Tolan bills."

He also called for immediate rationing of all foods, saying: "The sooner the consumable commodities going to the civilian public are distributed on the basis of need in terms of the war, rather than on the basis of supply, demand and price relationships, the better.

"We urge that you take steps to establish such nationwide rationing over all essential commodities."

Rubber Union Tells War Role In Broadcast

New York, Dec. 13—This Sunday's Labor for Victory, CIO's semi-monthly radio program broadcast over the Red network of NBC at 1:15 p.m., EWT, featured the United Rubber Workers of America in a dramatic script on the war and the Victory drive.

President Sherman H. Dalrymple of the URW was the featured speaker in the second part of the script, during which he answered an interviewer's questions on the war role of the union. The script was written by Robert Cruden, editor and publicity director of the Rubber Workers, and was played by a cast of actors with music by the NBC Symphony Orchestra.

CIO's Labor for Victory show goes on the air every other Sunday at 1:15 p.m., EWT, NBC Red network. Listen for labor's own story of what labor is doing to win the war against Axis slavery.

Push Unity Program, Murray Asks Unions

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12—Following the agreement between CIO and AFL to settle jurisdiction disputes by joint committee action, Pres. Philip Murray this week wrote to all CIO union heads urging them to publicize CIO's unity for victory program as widely as possible among their members.

This statement, after declaring that "the approach to the question of labor unity must be guided by a single touchstone — its effect on our nation's war of survival," outlined two basic steps for unity and presented an alternative procedure for immediate action by both AFL and CIO.

As step No. 1 the CIO program calls for expansion of the Combined Labor Victory Committee composed of CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood representatives that now meets with President Roosevelt on war labor questions.

"This committee should seek to create similar joint committees on a local and statewide basis throughout the nation," the program said. "Such measures as total war mobilization, economic stabilization, manpower, organizing the unorganized, labor management committees and international labor unity merit immediate attention of such joint labor action."

The program also called for early convening of a "national win-the-war conference of representatives of all labor organizations throughout the nation to establish labor's leadership in rallying the people behind our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, and our nation's victory."

SINGLE FEDERATION

On the question of direct unification, the CIO program proposed that all CIO and AFL unions "shall enter into a single united labor federation," governed by an executive board "which will afford appropriate representation to the unions which have hitherto been affiiliated with the CIO and the AFL."

Under this proposal, all jurisdictional disputes would be settled "within the unified house of labor," and pending the formal convention ratification of unity, "the presidents of the CIO and the AFL shall jointly administer the affairs of the united labor organization."

Failing acceptance of this proposal, the CIO urged two alternative steps calling for 1) a joint committee "to dispose of any jurisdictional questions that may arise," with reference of unsolved disputes to the public members of the War Labor Board and 2) continued negotiations to establish organic unity, to be conducted with "sincerity and earnestness."

"The unified labor movement which we seek must be dedicated to the winning of the war and the promotion of the basic and democratic interests of the working men and women of America," the program said.

Ask WLB Act On Disputes With Cities

Washington, Dec. 12—With newspaper editorial writers and poll tax Congressmen beating out a tom-tom accompaniment in the background, a group of municipal officials challenged this week the War Labor Board's right to hear cases involving employes of city governments.

Spokesmen for two CIO unions and an AFL affiliate argued that in a period of total war, city governments could not be isolated areas in which the government's wage stabilization policy would have no authority.

Appearing for the CIO unions were President Abram Flaxer of the State, County and Municipal Workers and President Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union, who are involved in negotiating disputes with the governing officials of Newark, N. J., and New York City, respectively.

WANTS SMEAR PROBE

As the cases were heard before the WLB, Rep. Howard Smith, Virginia polltaxer, filed a resolution in the House for a probe of the board. The lanky Virginian who looks like a pre-Civil War slave dealer, has already run one smear investigation of a government agency, the National Labor Relations Board.

The SCMWA case grew out of a strike several months ago by garbage collectors. Flaxer argued that "total war must include the 3,500,000 state, county and municipal workers throughout the country. Release the enthusiastic energies of this great mass of government workers, and you have a powerful force for victory."

He added that Newark has "grossly discriminated against" the 3,500 employes in the collection department and said the "WLB is the only agency left to us to hear our complaint."

RAP MAYOR'S ABSENCE

President Quill of the Transport Workers, together with Harry Sacher, counsel, and Ted Zittel, a union public relations man, urged the board to take jurisdiction over its long-protracted efforts to get higher wages and better working conditions for 33,000 employes of the New York subway system.

Quill scored the failure of Mayor LaGuardia of New York to appear at the hearings, and said "we think the President and the WLB should have the power to bring our mayor down here." Zittel described the empty chairs in the hearing room—which LaGuardia might have occupied—as "our witnesses . . . to the contempt we have been getting for years."

U. S. Benefits By Union Pay Waiver Action

New York, Dec. 12—CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America announced today that seven firms comprising 14 plants employing approximately 9,700 workers are the first of the union's more than 835 plants under contract to agree to the union's demand that amounts saved by the firms on Thanksgiving Day—due to President Roosevelt's recent Executive Order on overtime—be paid in full to the Treasury of the United States as contributions by union members toward the war effort.

WAIVE DOUBLE TIME

The union's contracts call for double time for Thanksgiving and other holiday work. The President's Executive Order specified time-and-one-half.

The firms which have thus far agreed to comply are:

Thomas A. Edison Industries, Inc., with 7 plants; White Sewing Machine Co., Cleveland; Continental Electric Co., Newark; Fairchild Aviation, Long Island; American Transformer Co., Newark; Tung-Sol Corporation, Newark; Industrial Manufacturing Inc., Elizabeth, N. J.

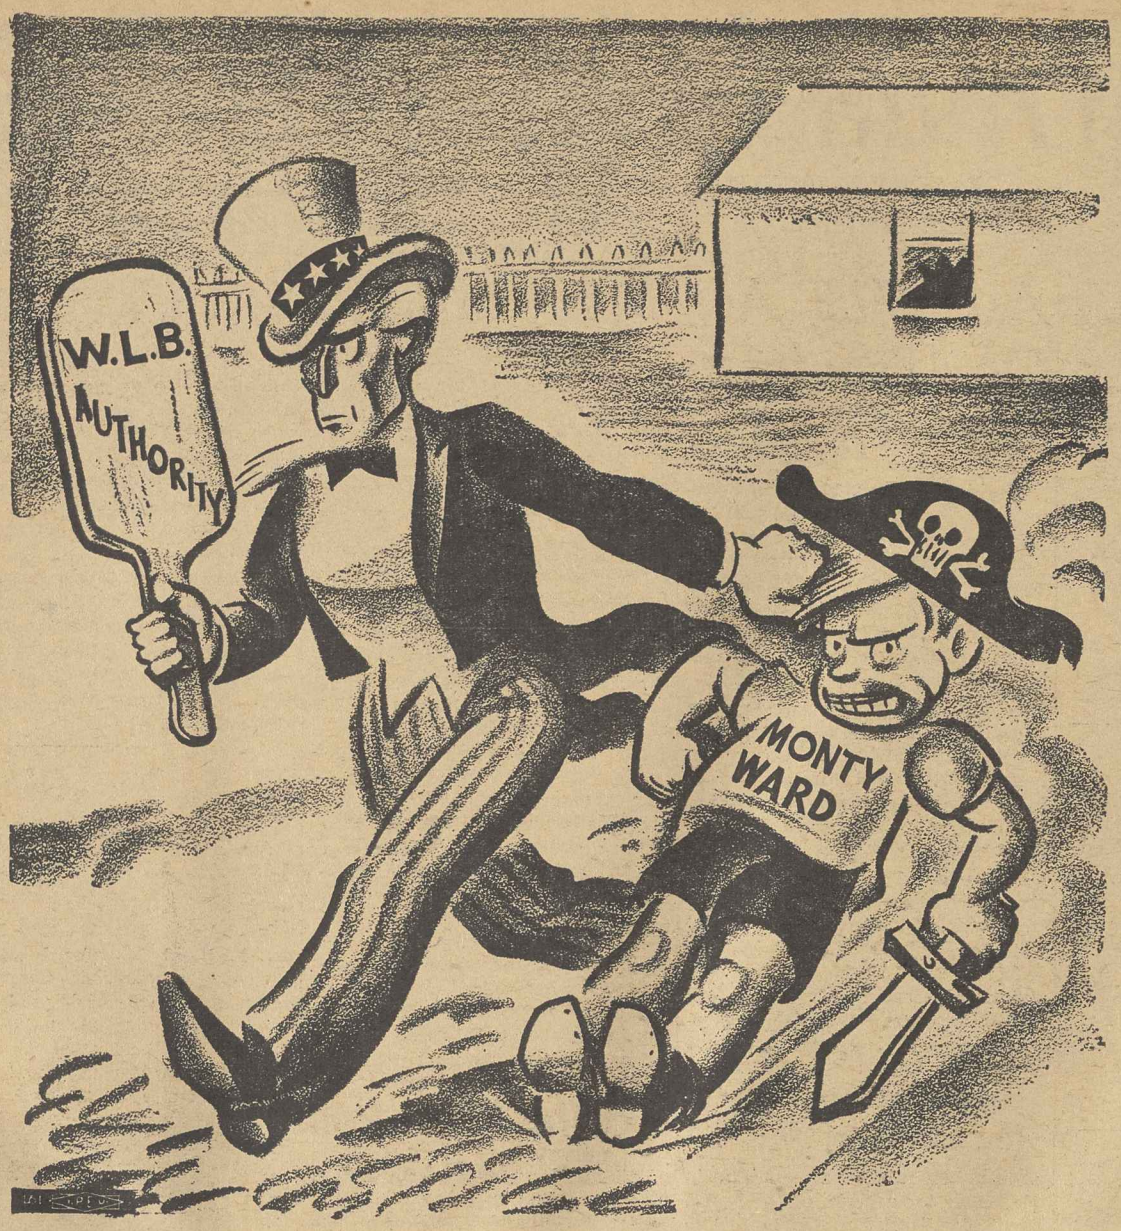
DUE FOR A PADDLING



There's Still a Need

Every sign in the conduct of the war points in one direction—the need for over-all, centralized planning on a national scale.

Even the positive steps that are taken, such as the coordination of manpower with Selective Service under one head, and the appointment of Agriculture Secretary Claude R. Wickard as food controller, serve to underline the critical need for total mobilization for total war and victory.

The CIO formally pledged five million workers to carry out the victory program that CIO leaders and affiliates have been pressing since the war began, in the resolution on War Mobilization that opened the Boston convention.

"Under such total war mobilization, all of the production facilities will be utilized on the basis of what is best for the nation," the resolution said. "Centralized planning and control can determine the apportionment of facilities and materials between the military forces and our civilian needs. There can be no hindrance of such mobilization because of any profit or price problem or because of any fears of postwar difficulties. Total mobilization cannot operate or be organized except through the direct and fullest participation of labor."

The resolution should be read and studied by every CIO member an devery individual who wants to win the war. It sets down the basic program that must be followed if all of our resources and all of our people are to be mobilized for our nation's war of survival.

The workers, whose program this is, must see that every step is taken to put it into action.

Job Well Done

WPA has gone out of existence, by Presidential order. Those projects that are useful to the war effort will be continued, while the workers dropped from other projects are expected to secure war jobs.

During its career, WPA offered employment and a small measure of economic security to millions of American workers who would otherwise have been left without support or abandoned to the mercies of local relief. Out of WPA, the nation acquired not only work for its people but enormous material benefits from the completion of the projects.

With WPA, a new low in reactionary callousness was reached in the words and actions of tory Congressmen and their friends among the newspaper publishers. The new low was WPA-baiting, expressed in a constant stream of harrying attacks on the unemployed, on the administration of WPA, on the whole idea of a great nation giving some thought and spending some money for its own people.

Sour cracks about shovel-leaners and leaf raking were peddled in the papers, on the stage and over the radio—until public disgust and union members in the acting profession ruled them out of the theater. The mentality that assailed WPA and made cruel jokes about WPA workers was precisely the same mentality that attacks labor today hampers the nation's victory drive.

Now that WPA is gone, it is labor's job in each community to see that war projects are carried to completion, as the President has directed. In addition to the more obvious war projects involving physical construction, there are numerous services that WPA has carried on that must be continued—services such as care for children of war workers, hot lunches for school kids, nursery school projects and the like. They must be continued as a direct contribution to the nation's total war mobilization.

Rumors--- Made In Berlin

THE Yanks landed on the coast of North Africa a little while ago. There were a lot of Yanks. Their guns fired. Their tanks rolled. Their equipment was top-notch. Their vessels were ship-shape. Their morale was of the best. Their cannon didn't fall apart when they sent shells towards the coast.

No, it's not news. You know all about it, if you've read the headlines. But it's important to keep in mind because when the American troops blasted their way onto our anti-Axis bridgeheads, they blasted a hole in the ranks of the rumormongers—German and native—who had been plumping all over the U. S. for the cause of fear.

The panic brigade in this country, led by Berlin agents and followed by some easily-frightened and loose-tongued American dupes, has been trying for years to cripple civilian morale by convincing a good section of the public that its sons were dying by the thousands in army camps; that Navy pilots were killed like wingless eagles because of faulty planes; that there was nothing left of the Army at all.

As with every rumor, calm analysis has exposed the lack of any truth in the "our Army and Navy are dying in camps" stories. Recently there were so many rumors floating around the nation which followed the outline of "There are hundreds of students killed daily at X naval aviation center" that the Navy Department decided to arm America's anti-rumor corps with the facts.

Phoney 'Epidemic'

Here they are from Boston's Naval Public Relations Office:

"Rumors as to the great numbers of student aviators being killed at a high rate at flight training center are but another example of statements put out by some elements seeking to create lack of confidence in the minds of American parents. The fact of the matter is that the casualty rate in service aviation is extremely low.

"Accidents are bound to occur in aviation as in practically every other branch of the military or naval service, just as they occur in civil life. But the percentage of such accidents, in proportion to the personnel involved, is surprisingly small."

Shown the "death at naval stations" rumor, a Navy aviation officer who had returned from a southern flying center reported that the same kind of gossip was heard all over the country and the rumors were "simply without semblance of reliable foundation."

Other detachments of the Berlin-and-dupes rumor corps have been shoveling their stuff at back-breaking speed in efforts to convince Americans that the Nazis and Japanese are too strong to be beaten. In fact, says this assortment of plain and fancy lies, the U. S is being attacked on all sides while the Government's trying to keep it a secret.

False and Absurd

Have you had someone sidle up to you with news supposedly hot off the boat? There are many people who, at bars and sometimes while going over the orange sale at the corner grocery, pass along such items as: "The Philippine Islands were attacked one week before Pearl Harbor and the news was kept away from the public. I heard this from a lady who had it from a relative whose son was in Bataan." And another flash being shot around says: "The Panama Canal has been attacked. It's wrecked, clogged so badly that we can't get any shipping through it."

United States military intelligence, at the request of someone wise enough to know when he's being kidded, looked into those rumors and branded them: "Not only false but absurd."

Has anyone sniffled in your neighborhood? And has some wiseacre remarked knowingly that the Germans have planted bronchitis in this country—and that we'd better stay home and worry? If you haven't been troubled with that rumor, you're lucky because it's all over the country, just as it was in the last war.

Again, just as in the last war, there isn't a germ of truth in it. Said Dr. G. Lynde Gately, health commissioner of the City of Boston, where gossip probers asked for the truth:

"The rumor's fantastic. We have no reports to indicate that there is any undue prevalence of 'acute bronchitis' at the present time.

"There is, however, an epidemic of common colds, just as there is every other year at this season, but its proportions are in no way unusual."

Looking Ahead, by Len DeCaux, will appear again in next week's issue.

CIO Members Win Output Merit Awards; Praise Joint Councils

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12—Ten "production thinkers" from the ranks of American industry and engineering research came to Washington this week to be feted and dined for their prize-winning ideas that have helped speed the nation's war production program.

They constituted the first ten persons to win national recognition for their suggestions, which originally filtered through joint labor - management production committees.

In all, some 400,000 ideas have been submitted to the 1,833 joint output councils now functioning in war industry plants.

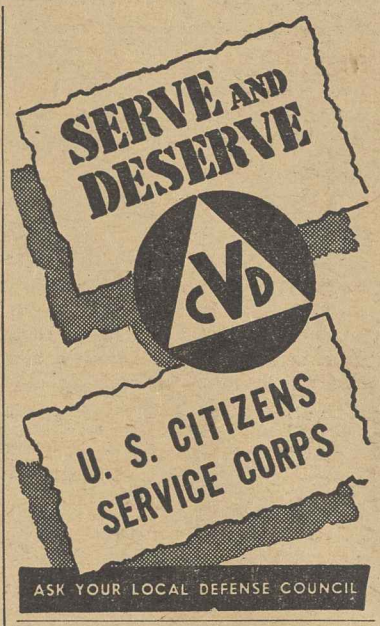
Three of the prize-winners were CIO members, and proud of it:

Daniel Walter Mallett, an active member of Local 225 of the CIO United Automobile Workers at the Borg-Warner plant in Rockford, Ill.

Stanley Crawford, a longtime member of Local 103 of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers at the RCA Manufacturing Co. plant in Camden, N.J.

George Smolarek, a 29-year-old utility operator in the Packard Aircraft Engine Co., Detroit, Mich., who has been a member of the United Automobile Workers for the past several years.

They, together with Herbert Rudolph James of the Natl. Tube Co. in McKeesport, Pa., were presented with Certificates of Individual Production Merit. Six others, most of them manufacturing engineers or research specialists, were awarded Citations of Individual Production Merit.



FETED IN WASHINGTON

Though the engineers are not eligible for CIO membership in most cases, the fact that nine of the ten prize winners came from plants under contract to the CIO was a clear indication of the benefits to war production found in cooperation between union and management.

The ten production soldiers spent a busy two days in the capital. At headquarters of the War Production Drive of the WPB, they posed endlessly for news photographers. From there they were taken to the White House for presentation of the awards by President Roosevelt. Donald Nelson, WPB chief, tendered the group a luncheon at which close to 50 leading Army, Navy, government and labor officials were present to pay their respects to the men who help out-produce the Axis.

HAILS CO-OPERATION

"The men at Packard are working 100%," this correspondent was told by George Smolarek, a good-looking young fellow who takes pride in the activities of his union, UAW, Local 190. "Every man in my department is a member of the union," he commented proudly.

He pointed to a considerable contrast between the attitude of Packard, which maintains good relations with the union, and of Dodge, where he used to work until four days before Pearl Harbor.

"Dodge was always scrapping with the union on grievances," he said. "But at Packard the company works right with the union." As a result, Smolarek added, there's better feeling and more output.

Smolarek's own idea, which won him national attention, was a method for drilling a three-step hole in one operation.

BOOMED OUTPUT 31%

Daniel Mallett, another of the CIO production heroes, made a suggestion to rough and finish turn fuse bodies. His idea sent production up 31%, saved the work of three machines for a total of 504 machine hours a month.

Six feet tall and graying at the temples, Mallett is a veteran of the UAW-CIO. He joined in 1935, and twice—in 1940 and 1941—represented his local at the union's annual convention. He was enthusiastic for the idea of labor-management councils, but thinks that management can go a lot further in building cooperation with the workers.

HELPED CUT WASTE

Stanley Crawford, a 50-year-old group leader in the incoming inspection department at RCA in Camden, went to work for the company as a packer in the shipping department back in 1928. He's been a member of Local 103 of the UERMW "almost since it started" back in the middle thirties.

He has eliminated a lot of waste. Crawford designed a caliper for determining the wall thickness and relationship between a cord interior and outside surface of castings. Use of the caliper saved 13 out of 16 castings which had been rejected — and it releases a lot of skilled man-hours for greater production.

While a total of 142 Certificates already have been awarded, the WPB said, the four workers who were brought to Washington for special recognition qualified on the basis of widespread adoption of their ideas by other war plants. WPB joint labor-management council headquarters acts as a national clearing house for spreading the suggestions among various plants.

Inflation Check Seen In New Tax Bill

Washington, Dec. 12—Insight into the probable terms of the 1943 tax measure was seen this week in reports of the U. S. Treasury program outlined by Randolph Paul, special Treasury tax adviser.

According to Paul's reported views, the Treasury plans a tax bill based on two points: revenue-raising to help finance the war, and to control inflation, with main emphasis on the second.

The 1942 bill, passed last November after months of finangling by Congressional minorities, failed to carry out either objective, since it does not raise enough money and since it followed the line of soaking the poor and sparing the big incomes and inflated profits.

To check inflation, Paul pointed out, Americans must be prevented from sending some $40,000,000,000 in surplus income—surplus in the sense that there aren't enough consumer goods to go around, and will be less as the war goes on. Unless this 40 billion dollars is withdrawn from expenditures, competitive bidding will break through all price ceilings and sky-high inflation will result.

FOUR STEPS

The Treasury is understood to be studying four approaches to the problem of keeping the 40 billion dollars out of circulation; compulsory lending, compulsory saving, expenditure rationing and expenditure taxation. These are in addition to other steps to jack up present weaknesses in the tax program as it came out of Congress in 1942.

Meanwhile, CIO policy for a real win-the-war tax measure continued to press demands for tightening up tax loopholes, for fair taxes on big incomes and excess profits, and for strict avoidance of further taxes on workers that would cut into their health and efficiency standards, thus cutting down war production.

It was also pointed out that the tax bill must be considered as part of the whole approach to the problem of economic stabilization for victory, which calls for universal, democratic rationing of all consumer goods and strict price control of all necessities.

John Green on Air Next Sunday

Washington, Dec. 12—Next Sunday's American Forum of the Air will deal with a topic of close interest to all workers—rent control—and will have John Green, president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers and CIO vice-president, as one of the main speakers.

The program is to be broadcast over Mutual network Sunday, December 20, from 8 to 8:45 p.m., EWT.

CIO 'Batting Average' Hits 73.6% in NLRB Elections

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 — CIO unions won close to three out of every four Natl. Labor Relations Board elections in which they were entered during the year ending Sept. 30, the NLRB revealed in its annual report this week.

CIO affiliates participated in 2,119 election contests, and won 1,551 of them to set a record high "batting average" of 73.6%, the NLRB figures showed. Altogether the Board conducted 3,629 polls.

A total of 492,307 workers cast their ballots in the 2,110 elections in which CIO figured.

Less than half that number — 188,280—voted for the AFL in the 1940 polls on which AFL unions were on the ballot. The AFL won only 61.8% of its contests.

The CIO's 73.6% rate of victory was a jump from 67.9% in the previous year.

IN ALL CATEGORIES

The figures revealed CIO unions forging ahead in every category.

In 575 contests between CIO and AFL affiliates, the CIO won 303 to 207 for the AFL. Both unions were rejected in 24, while independent unions also on the ballot won 11 contests.

CIO unions were opposed by independent unions in 107 elections. CIO won 121, with independents getting 79 and neither three.

CIO affiliates were unopposed by any union in 1,327 polls. CIO won 1,127, lost 191, and nine were "indeterminate."

The AFL fared less well, winning only 70 out of 145 contests with independents; and the AFL won 903 but lost 291 polls in which it was unopposed.

CIO unions won more than half the elections in 10 industries: automobiles, electrical equipment, iron and steel, leather, mining, ordnance, rubber textiles, transportation and warehousing. AFL won more than half the elections in only two industries: communication and tobacco.

Steel Union Wins TCI Polls In Landslide

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 12—CIO scored a major victory in one of the South's largest NLRB elections last week, when the United Steelworkers of America rolled up a 9-1 landslide at six big plants of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co.

The company is a subsidiary of U. S. Steel.

The poll showed these results:

USA-CIO	9,549
No union	1,178

Guiding the re-election campaign were Noel Beldow, USA-CIO southern director; R. E. Farr, district director, and Timothy Flynn, special TCI campaign director.

"The majority of TCI employes have spoken in words so eloquent that the public, the company and the small minority outside the union cannot fail to understand that they want to be represented by the United Steelworkers of America," the officials commented.

THE MAN NOBODY KNEW

By VIRGINIA GARDNER
Federated Press

The time is 1940. Scene, the Congressional club. Nibbling a cake and balancing a cup of tea with the other wives of congressmen is a pleasant-faced woman with blue eyes and a quick smile. During a lull in the teacup chatter a woman turned to her and said: "Is it your husband who is raising all this fuss over the bums who are crossing our state borders?"

Recalling it, Mrs. Alma D. Tolan smiles, but her eyes harden as she repeats her reply: "Yes, that is my husband. It is my husbnad who is fighting for those citizens.'"

"We weren't popular then," says Mrs. Tolan, wife of Rep. John H. Tolan, Democrat of California, whose latest report to Congress on our war economy has electrified Washington, and is supported by the AFL, the CIO and the railway brotherhoods.

Its recommendation for a centralized civilian agency which would have overall control over existing war agencies is the outgrowth of the thorough investigation which Tolan began in 1940 of migratory labor and which he later developed into a study of our studying defense migration.

The recommendation is incorporated in the Pepper-Kilgore-Tolan bill, supported by labor.

"In 1940 Congressmen used to ridicule Mr. Tolan. They called him 'Migrant' on the floor of Congress. Now," she mused, "it's different."

Early in 1935, at their first White House reception, the Tolans were talking to some southern representatives. Recognizing Rep. Arthur Mitchell, Republican of Illinois, Tolan went over to shake hands with him and his wife.

When he returned, one southerner told him he had made a faux pas by talking to the Negro Congressman.

Tolan replied: "If he's good enough for the White House, he's good enough for me. He only represents 300,000 citizens, you know."

Fame Begins at 60

Tolan is 63 years old. Of medium height, broad shouldered, with no sign of a waistline, Tolan has a quick step and talks in short, easy sentences. He studies his listener with large, sensitive eyes which are said to make migrant witnesses talk fluently.

Tolan has a flair for publicity. When he should be dramatic, he's casual. He is the despair of a few close friends who sincerely want to get across to the public some inkling of why and how this seemingly humdrum man from a Republican community in California began blazing new social-legislative trails.

"He has a very colorful background," one of them insisted. "He was run out of Montana because he fought the Anaconda Copper Co."

But listen to Tolan tell it, and it's nothing of the kind.

"Yes, I had a lot of cases against Anaconda," he said. "I was in law practice in Anaconda and later Missoula, Mont. The company has the largest smelting plant in the world at Anaconda, and it owns the railroad to Butte, and lumber yards and mills at Bonner, and a power plant at Thompson Falls. A lot of workers got injured and I handled damage suits. I mostly won."

"Wasn't it quite a fight, standing up against their battery of—did you say they had 35 lawyers in those parts?"

"Something like that. No. I had a partner," he said laconically. "And there were farmers on the juries."

Son Started Him

It was Jack Tolan, their oldest son, who first became interested in the migrants, in the days when California was patroling its borders to keep the "Okies" and the "Arkies" out.

Jack, who's now a specialist with the War Production Board, learned about Okies from Dr. Paul Taylor, University of California. When he got no place with his father, Jack went to his mother, and interested her in the things that underlay the great shifting of the uprooted and dispossessed all across America.

"Of course when his mother took hold, I agreed," said Tolan unaffectedly.

"In April 1939, I introduced a resolution—and that was before

REP. JOHN TOLAN

'Grapes of Wrath,'" he said a little testily, alluding to John Steinbeck's great social novel about the Okies, which is often credited with inspiring the Tolan committee.

"There were 4 million people on the road then," Tolan said, "stateless, voteless and voiceless. Many were barred from relief if they went back home. They were guilty of only one thing—having the American pioneering spirit. They refused to stay and starve in one place. Their hope wouldn't die. They'd move on, at the first hint of a job opening."

A study of the uprooted means a study of housing, of private employment agencies, of great industrial farms and working conditions. As defense work started, these studies were intensified.

"In other words," said Tolan, using one of his speech-sparing colloquialisms "to understand the Mississippi, you got to know something about its tributaries."

Thus the committee's exhaustive studies formed a running story of America's changing economy. They became a human laboratory for feeling out the soft spots, and its warning signals were studied by all serious people in and out of Congress.

"They've picked up a lot of our ideas," said Tolan confidently. "We break the ground. A year and a half ago we went to Detroit and held hearings on conversion. William Knudsen said the maximum conversion of the industry to war production would be 15 per cent. Every witness said it couldn't be done. We said it could. Today conversion's 97 per cent in the industry."

Tolan's work rests on his belief that "if you show the facts to the American people, they'll see that what's needed is done." He is confident that the public is demanding a more well ordered and directed administration of production, and that a knitting together of our to-date scattered war effort will come.

Australian Dockmen To Visit U. S.

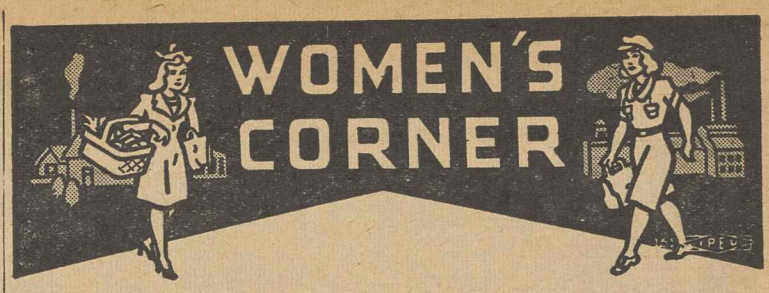
Sydney, Dec. 12 (ALN)—After receiving an invitation to visit the U. S. West Coast from Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, the Australian Waterside Workers Federation this week requested the government to arrange for an exchange of longshore delegations between Australia and the United States. It is understood that the government views the project favorably.

In his letter to the Waterside Workers Federation, published on the front page of this week's issue of the Maritime Worker, official organ of the WWF, Australian-born Harry Bridges describes loading and unloading methods, developed by his union since the start of the war, which have cut the turnaround of ships in West Coast ports to an average of four days. He invites an Australian delegation to make a first-hand survey of ILWU operations.

WATERFRONT CRITICISM

In the same issue of the Maritime Worker, Jim Healy, general secretary of the Waterside Workers Federation, answers criticisms of Australian longshoremen which have been voiced recently in the United States.

The War's Best Buy—U. S. Bonds & Stamps



By ELEANOR FOWLER
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The President's order liquidating WPA brings the need for a national program for wartime care of children of working mothers into sharp focus. Not less than six million dollars of the current WPA appropriation was earmarked for care of those children. Those funds made possible the establishment of nursery schools in war areas throughout the country. Every effort must be made to see to it that that part of the WPA program is not abandoned, but is transferred to some other agency where it can continue and expand.

Evidence that child care is a pressing war manpower problem piles up every day. Sometimes you can't help wondering how many kids have to be burned to death, locked up in a room, while their parents are at work before a real national program for wartime care of children of working mothers will get under way.

HUNTS WORK

The Civilian Defense Child Care Committee here in Washington, D. C., reports that 15 to 20 women a week notify the office that they are leaving work because they can't arrange adequate care for their children. On one day recently 20 women resigned from the War Department for the same reason. They say at the Navy Yard that you can always tell when it's 3 o'clock—the women slack off work because they are worried about their kids once school is out.

In Baltimore, where 1,500 women a week must be recruited for work to keep war production at a peak, thousands of women have indicated willingness to work if child care is provided. In Buffalo where 40 thousand women are needed by spring, the same thing is true. In Detroit, 60 new nurseries have just been approved—by WPA—and they're just a beginning. In Akron, 5,000 women would take jobs if child care needs were met.

AUXILIARIES' IDEAS

CIO auxiliaries all over the country are pushing for action on this problem. Their program, as adopted at the Second Annual Conference of CIO Auxiliaries in Boston, is twofold: First, pressure on the Federal government to recognize child care as a responsibility of the War Manpower Commission. Second, active work in their own communities to see that all interested community groups and government agencies draw up plans to meet local needs and get funds from local, state or national government agencies to put plans into operation.

The auxiliaries of the United Automobile Workers have made meeting the child care problem "their major objective for the coming months," according to Catherine Gelles, secretary-treasurer, who has just been given the responsibility of supervising the activities of the auxiliaries in promoting the establishment of Child Care Centers for the UAW War Policy Committee.

HAPPY CHRISTMAS

Children's Christmas Parties is the nation-wide auxiliary activity for December proposed by the new Executive Board of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO. "In a world at war it is more important than ever for our children to have a happy Christmas" the CWA Newsletter says, in urging every auxiliary to participate. "Children feel the strain of all the wartime changes. It's important to give them the feeling of security and confidence which the traditional observance of Christmas can give."

A toy for the scrap pile will be the admission fee to the party planned by the new New York Auxiliary of the UOPWA. Children attending the Guild Auxiliary party in Washington will bring presents for soldier-heroes of the North-African campaign. The New York Guild Auxiliary isn't charging admission, but they're planning a collection for the benefit of the CIO War Relief special children's projects in England and the Soviet Union.

'Plan Now For Rebuilding Democratic World'—Brophy

COLUMBUS. Ohio, Dec. 12—Labor's demands for total mobilization for war should be accompanied by careful planning for a democratic peace, John Brophy, CIO councils director, told the Ohio CIO Industrial Union Council convention last week.

"Organized labor, and the American people generally, have dedicated themselves without reservation to the immediate task of winning the war," Brophy said. "We are going about that job, but not in the spirit of super-patriotic hysteria, but from a realistic understanding that the grim business must be finished, and finished successfully, before certain other objectives may be essayed."

AFTER THE ARMISTICE

The CIO official noted a contrast with thinking in the days of the last war, when "we felt it was essential only to win military victory.

"Well, we found that the victory of our armed forces, the imposition of the Versailles peace, the reparations and all that, gained us very little. We have come to realize," he added, "that we failed at the end of the first World War to solve the deep-seated political and economic problems which brought the war on, and which have brought about its repetition."

The American people are becoming convinced, Brophy told the Ohio group, that the present war must be fought to a "complete victory, but that such a victory must be only the prelude to the establishment of a world-wide political and economic order" based on solid democratic foundations, on the brotherhood of man and on the "ethical teachings of religion."

Brophy quoted a recent speech by President Murray in which the CIO head warned that "Hitlerism can be defeated only by a world rededicated to the principles of economic justice and security of all nations, for all races and for all creeds."

BASIC PRINCIPLES

The rebuilding of a world society, Brophy declared, must be based on principles of "democratic reconstruction, based on social justice"; on recognition that the world's goods must be equitably distributed among all the people; and on the formation of "world federation" of the democratic peoples.

Such a federation, he said, "must undertake the world-wide economic planning and integration which we have talked of, must assure security and peace to all the peoples of the world, and must guarantee every human being the right to live under a democratic government."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President

Director of Organization

The United Steelworkers came through with colors flying and consistent with the great record they have made by winning the election at the plants of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company in the South with an overwhelming vote of more than 9,500 for the USA-CIO to some 1,100 against. This victory means much to every CIO union in the South. Those who participated are to be commended for this great achievement.

James J. Matles, director of organization, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, reports that the UE came through this week with five elections, as follows: Bliley Electric Company, Erie, Pa., UE, 447 to 114; U. S. Cartridge Company, St. Louis, Mo., UE, 440 to 77 (among the guards); Colt Firearms Company, Hartford, Conn. UE, 121 to 19 (among the guards); General Electric Company, Syracuse, N. Y., UE, 842 to 81, and Corcoran Metal Products Corporations, Washington, Indiana, UE, 405 to 28. A splendid achievement.

Smack District 50

Ewald Sandner, CIO Regional Director in New Jersey, reports election victories as follows: Bloomfield Tool & Manufacturing Co., Bloomfield, N. J., UE, 197 to 23; Celotex Corporation, Metuchen, N. J., United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, 98, District 50, 10.

Julius Crane of the United Shoe Workers of America, reports winning an election at the Wolverine Shoe Company in Chicago with a vote of 207 for CIO to 140 for no union.

Regional Director Fullerton Fulton reports an election won by the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union at the Rathborne, Hair and Ridgeway Company, Chicago, by a vote of 331 for ILWU to 92 for no union.

A significant victory for CIO was won in Washington, D. C. The question of representation had been a controversy for some time bringing about an election and results in a vote of 181 for CIO, paving workers, 104 for the AFL and 15 for District 50.

James Ritchie, regional director in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, brings in a victory for the CIO at the Kopper Coke and Chemical Plant with a vote of 188 for CIO as against 5 for no union.

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee report winning an election at the St. Joseph Stockyards Company with a vote of 59 for CIO to 29.

Shoe Workers Progress

Delegates from local unions functioning in the plants of the International, Brown and Independent Shoe companies in the Missouri area had a fine get-together on Sunday last. Director Walter Harris in charge of the Shoe Drive and now being transferred received a beautiful present for the fine services renderd the United Shoe Workers in this organizational drive. Brother Harris has now been assigned to other duties and Assistant Director of Organization Walter Smethurst has taken up to complete the job of organizing the workers in all these companies.

International Officers McGrath and Mitchell and Brothers Harris, Smethurst and the writer addressed the gathering. Delegates pledged their wholehearted support to Brother Smethurst to the end that the task be completed at the earliest date possible and left for their homes inspired by the meeting and determined to let no stone stand in the way of building up their union.

This week a banquet was given in New York City to honor Father Boland, chairman of the New York State Labor Board, who has resigned his position and is returning to his church duties. CIO as well as AFL has a high regard for Father Boland and he has served the cause devotedly and with remarkable effect. The writer had the pleasure of attending the farewell affair.

Visit By Australians

Last week the CIO was honored with a visit by three delegates from the Australian labor movement: Mr. Slater, who was speaker of the House of the state of Victoria, now assigned as Minister to Russia from that democracy; Mr. Duncan, president of the Chemical Workers Union, and Mr. Crawford.

In conference with President Murray and members of the staff they were much impressed by the work done by the CIO in its war production effort and improving the lot of the workers of this nation as well as our organizing activities. They brought greetings to the writer from Mr. Monk, who visited the United States about a year ago and was in attendance at the CIO convention held in Detroit last year.

All American Labor Unity Seen Vital Need

LA PAZ, BOLIVIA, Dec. 12 (ALN)—Because only the united efforts of labor can mobilize Latin America against the Axis, it is imperative that a continental Labor Congress, including representatives from the labor movements of the United States and Canada, be called at the earliest opportunity, Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), told Allied Labor News this week before leaving for Mexico City.

"The cause of democracy in Latin America and the whole world rests in the hands of labor," he said.

Toledano first proposed a Continental Labor Congress to William Green and Philip Murray last March in Washington. "The workers of the 20 sister nations of Latin America and their elected leaders," he said, "are the only ones who can speak of united action between the United States and the rest of the Americas without raising suspicions of 'Yanqui imperialism.'

"The CTAL is now the most powerful single force in Latin America, and because of its growing strength and influence, I sincerely believe that real continental unity is possible for the first time in history."

FOUR MONTHS TOUR

Toledano's four-month's tour of the Americas has had two outstanding results, according to reports reaching La Paz from other South American capitals. It has both strengthened organized labor and contributed immeasurably to unity between the peoples of Latin America and the United Nations.

As a result of his efforts, internal labor unity was achieved for the first time in Ecuador, Peru and Bolivia. In hundreds of speeches in bull-rings, theatres, village squares, railway stations and mining camps, he rallied the working people and other sections of the population against the Axis and its agents in Latin America.

POST-WAR AIMS

Toledano described the widespread suspicion among Latin American peoples, fostered by agents of the Axis, concerning the post-war aims of the United Nations. "This feeling must not be underrated," he said.

"The Fifth Column must certainly be suppressed in every Latin American country, but it is essential also that the United States, following the principles of the Atlantic Charter, begin now to study the basis of an over-all continental economy to raise the living standards of the common people.

"Latin Americans must be assured that the Good Neighbor policy is permanent, not merely an expedient of wartime. If this is done, the popular response in Latin America will force every government to break relations with the Axis and enter the war with the United Nations.

"It is vitally necessary also," he added, "to set free all political prisoners in the Americas. While such leaders as Luis Carlos Prestes of Brazil and Jose Arvizu Campos of Puerto Rico are in prison, Latin American workers, though participating enthusiastically in the war effort, will be overwhelmed at times with sadness and discouragement. This sentiment, I can report, is shared by all sections of Latin American workers."

Canadian Unions Ask Firing of Labor Minister

TORONTO, Dec. 12—Leaders of the two major labor organizations in Canada, the Canadian Congress of Labor (CIO) and the Trades and Labor Congress (AFL) jointly requested the resignation of Labor Minister Mitchell last week and a few days later the department took the following steps to redeem itself:

1. Issued an Order-In-Council delayed for months, granting employes in government-owned plants the right to collective bargaining.
2. Ordered nine weeks' back pay to five UAW members in a Windsor plant who were discharged in August for union activity and reinstated on October 9.
3. Arranged elections in two Toronto plants where workers are organized in the UAW and USA.

DEMAND CONTINUES

There was little likelihood that these decisions would lessen labor's demand here for the Dominion Minister's resignation since his basic policies have been at fault and there is a mounting backlog of unresolved disputes.

The letter to Prime Minister King signed by President A. R. Mosher of the CCL and Acting President Percy Bengough of the TLC, referred to the resignation of Selective Service Director Little over what he charged was "obstructionism and paralysis" by the labor department. The letter added that Little's resignation was "simply a further indication of the incapacity of the minister of labor to carry out the duties of that office in a manner acceptable to labor."

Red Army Gains Spur Russ Output

Kuibyshev, Dec. 12 (ALN)—An upsurge in the All-Union drive for greater industrial production followed reports of the new Soviet offensives, chairmen of trade union committees in Moscow factories told a delegation of Red army men this week at a reception given by the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions.

Among the delegation, composed of wounded soldiers and nurses from a front-line division, were several who worked in Moscow factories before the war, including Ryodor Mozin, a machine gunner, and Vera Zlodeyeva, a nurse who has been decorated for carrying 40 wounded officers and men from the battlefield under fire.

After visiting factories in the Moscow area, the delegation was received in the AUCCTU offices by officers of national unions and Nikolai Shvernik, Claudia Nikolayeva and S. Bregman, secretaries of the AUCCTU.

Britain Casting Off Monopoly's Yoke

London, Dec. 12 (ALN)—Britain has been at war for more than three years, yet the all-over machinery of government necessary for total economic mobilization has been developed only in the last few months.

Even before the outbreak of war in September 1939, the British Trades Union Congress was demanding a Ministry of Production, with full powers to allocate raw materials, industrial capacity and manpower.

Such a Ministry of Production was not set up until March, 1942. Before then control of production was vested in no less than seven different agencies. Chief of these were the Ministry of Supply, Ministry of Aircraft Production and the Admiralty. Final production authority over these agencies (with the exception of the Admiralty) is now in the hands of Oliver Lyttleton, Production Minister in the War Cabinet.

Main function of the Ministry of Supply, which includes the War Office's Production Department, is control of government arsenals (Royal Ordnance Factories) and "Shadow factories" (publicly-owned plants operated privately). It also allocates all raw materials and machine tools.

Within the Supply Ministry are "controls" for each basic raw material and war industry. Personnel of each of these is virtually identical with that of the corresponding trade association of monopoly.

This monopolistic, yet uncoordinated, control of Britain's war production explains, in labor's view, the astonishing fact that as late as January, 1942, the government could attribute the defeats in Malay to "a chronic lack of military materials."

And Gordon England, chairman of the Englineering Industries Association, could state on September 25, 1941, after two years of war, that the "total industrial capacity of the country is far from being employed."

COUNCIL NOT FUNCTIONING

In January, 1941, mainly due to TUC pressure, the government set up a Production Executive under the chairmanship of Minister of Labor Ernest Bevin, to function as a committee of the War Cabinet. In July 1941, a Joint Advisory Council to the Production Executive was formed, with equal representation from management and labor. In the nine months of its existence, however, this Council held only five meetings, and only two of its suggestions were carried out by the Production Executive.

Under the Production Executive, eleven area (regional) production boards were set up throughout the country, also with equal representation from labor and management.

These regional boards had no executive power, and their advice was rarely taken. The Production Executive itself lacked effectiveness because it was unable to break the monopolies' hold over the production Controls.

Last March the Ministry of Production was finally established, and in July the government adopted the report on Regional Production Boards made by a committee of 15 representatives of labor and management under the chairmanship of Sir Walter Citrine, TUC president. Britain's economic mobilization for war reached a new stage.

NAM Goes Hog-Wild at Parley

Tory Industrialists Hold Oral Lynching Bee For Labor, New Deal

NEW YORK, Dec. 12—Big-shot delegates to the annual covention of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers were back at their mahogany desks today after a one-week reactionary rampage in the swanky hallrooms of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel.

The convention decisions —which almost made Hitler look like a liberal—called for total mobilization and all-out war on labor and the New Deal.

Throughout a full week the spokesmen for America's corporate interests built up straw bogey men, knocked them down, built them up and knocked them down all over again.

FIND STRIKES, SINK SAME

They ranted and raved against strikes (the War Labor Board had just shown strikes to represent only five-one-hundredths of one per cent of man hours worked).

They laced into joint labor-management production committees for taking over the duties of corporate management—which they aren't.

They claimed that the War Labor Board was causing strife — when actually it's helping to promote better labor relations.

And they heard a series of speeches that sounded in many instances like Joe Goebbels in his younger, more enthusiastic days.

ELECT OPEN SHOPPER

They elected as their president a leading fighter against labor—Frederick Crawford of Thompson Products, Inc., Cleveland — an "industrial statesman' who only a few years ago was telling the wonders of Mussolini's fascism.

One of the most enthusiastically received of the speakers was Pres. Wilfred Sykes of Inland Steel Co.

"The last thing to be expected of anyone talking to an audience such as this would be an attack on labor," Sykes said blandly. He then proceeded to attack—much to the audience's surprise—CIO, AFL, Wagner Act and labor management committees!

As finally worked out, the NAM war program called for an iron clad policy to stamp out unionism in America.

It called on labor to stop strikes, boycotts and jurisdictional disputes, adding that labor "should stop organizing activities which restrict production. It should end the practice of making workers pay fees before being permitted to work in American war plants." And hinting broadly at labor-endorsed plans for centralized economic planning, the NAM called on government to "reject all proposals which seek to use the war as a cloak for socializing the nation."

RAPS LIBERALISM

Crawford, the new president, warned against spreading the idea that this war is a people's war. Elected to the Board of Directors to help him combat that theory were four leading tory industrialists:

J. Howard Pew of Sun Oil, chief angel for the Republican party; James H. Rand of Remington-Rand, originator of the Mohawk Valley formula of strike-breaking; Ernest T. Weir of anti-union Weirton Steel Co., and Robert Wood, ex-chairman of the America First Committee.

Disgrace

In speeches and resolutions, some leading spokesmen of American industry offered a wild program of reaction that sent chills through the spines of progressive-minded people everywhere.

The contrast between the NAM meeting and the recent CIO convention is marked. Spokesmen for labor examined every proposal from the standpoint of winning the war. Their program was based on cooperation of labor, industry and agriculture to beat the Axis as speedily as possible, to spread democracy at home and throughout the world.

The men who run the NAM are apparently more interested in maintaining narrow special privileges, in seeking an impossible return to the status quo of the pre-war years, than they are in winning the war.

It's time for men of intelligence and democratic faith in the ranks of American industrial management to speak up and disavow the NAM's blue-print for fascism.

Gotham CIO In Sports Program

New York — The Greater New York CIO today announced inauguration of an extensive physical fitness and war sports program designed to maintain and build the health of thousands of CIO men and women employed in New York's war production plants and train additional thousands who soon will join America's armed forces.

Under a plan worked out between the State War Council, the City Board of Education, and the War Sports and Physical Fitness Committee of the CIO Council, CIO members can now avail themselves of a full scale sports and gymnasium program five nights a week at two high schools.

Capital Domestic's Union Cheered by Mrs. Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12 — Inspired by the success of the newly-organized United Domestic Workers, CIO, in Baltimore, Maryland, a similar movement has been launched to bring Washington's overworked and underpaid domestic workers together to organize for better conditions.

An organizational meeting held Dec. 3 received a letter of warm encouragement from Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt. Speakers at the meeting included Sidney Katz, Md.-D. C. CIO secretary-treasurer; James Harris, of the United Cafeteria Workers, and Mrs. Jean Brown and Rosa Burrell of the Baltimore local.

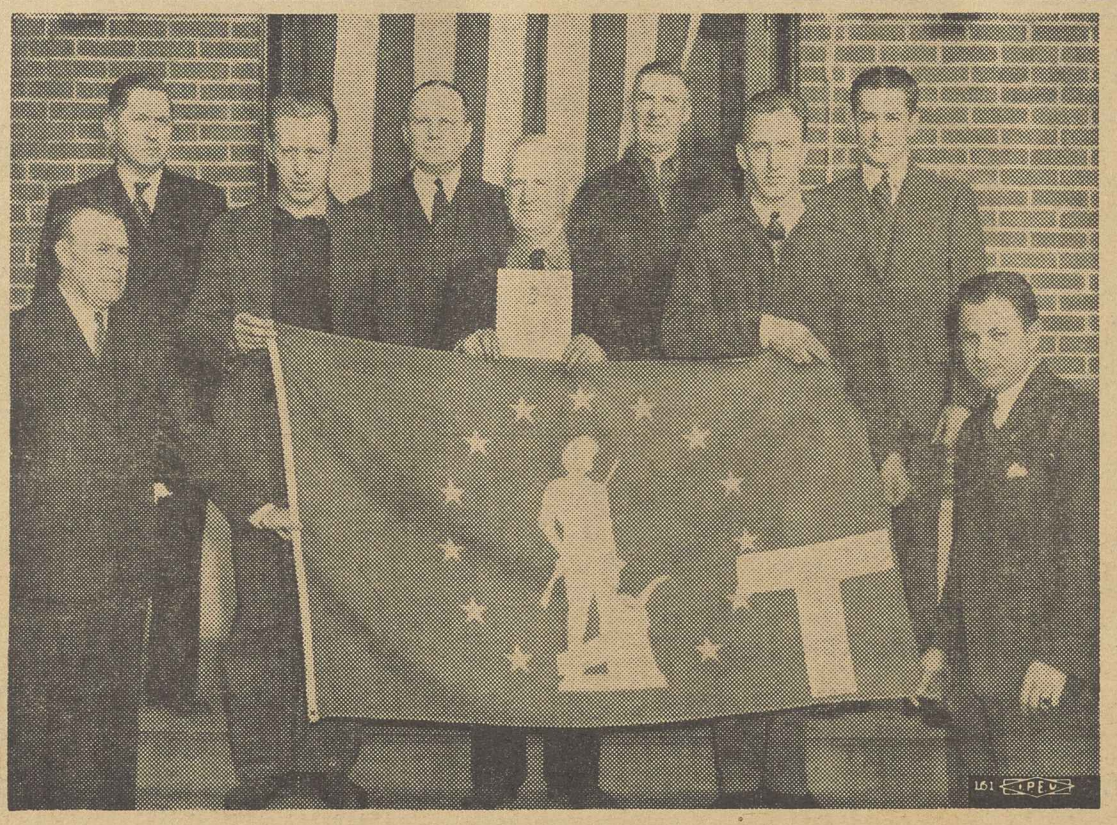
ATTENDED CIO PARLEY

Delegates from the Baltimore domestic workers union attended the recent CIO convention in Boston and helped spread the need for organizing domestic workers at the present time to the multitude of union delegates present. Already the Baltimore local has received requests for information on how to go about uniting domestic workers from East Liverpool, Ohio; Chicago; Chattanooga; Norfolk, Va., and the Southern regional CIO office in Atlanta.

Discussion at the CIO Women's Auxiliaries convention in Boston emphasized that this is the time to organize domestic workers so that their conditions of work can be improved to produce the utmost efficiency. Domestic workers must also be organized to safeguard themselves against the multitude of housekeeping aids which women war workers are turning towards.

The auxiliary convention adopted a resolution asking that all protective legislation for women be extended to apply to domestic workers as well as women industrial workers.

A strong local of both Negro and white women is expected to be set up in Washington, as considerable support has been forthcoming among CIO unions in the city.



WIN BOND FLAG: Civic officials joined with leaders of Local 1394, CIO, United Steelworkers of America, and management of the Athenia Steel Co. at Clifton, N. J., when 300 workers subscribed 10 percent of their pay for war bonds. In the front row are Clarence Finkle and Peter Barna, civic officials. Second row: Harry Carlson, John Digman and Thomas Hardvall of the union. Back row: Eric Fornelius and M. E. Murphy of the company; Philip Lawson, USA local treasurer; and R. Ramsby, company official.

Stone Union Wins Raise, Security

Barre, Vt., Dec. 12—The Blair Limestone Company of Martinsburg, West Virginia and Branch Number 53, United Stone and Alled Products Workers' Union, have signed an agreement granting a 5½c hourly raise retroactive to September 1, 1942.

Voluntary dues check off, seniority, vacations, overtime rates and mediation and arbitration of disputes are provided for.

The agreement is effective to July 1, 1943. Representative J. B. Foreman and the local committee conducted negotiations.

Maryland CIO Urges 'Planning'

BALTIMORE, Dec. 12—Resolutions calling for total war mobilization and unified central planning, urging full participation of labor in the war agencies and similar win-the-war proposals marked the 6th convention of the Maryland-D. C. CIO Council meeting here this week.

"Our country needs all-out mobilization on a nationwide scale of all material, men and power resources," George A. Meyers, re-elected Council president, said in his keynote speech.

"We need planned utilization of every bit of economic strength we possess. We need a single coordinating administrative agency handling all civilian problems, war supply, manpower and economic stabilization."

Meyer's keynote speech was backed up in speeches by Sidney R. Katz, re-elected secretary-treasurer; James Drury of the Natl. Maritime Union, Sheridan Albert of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, and others. A similar note marked speechs of Maryland's Governor Herbert O'Connor, Mayor Jackson of Baltimore, and CIO-supported Congressmen Thomas D'Alesandro and Daniel Ellison.

LABOR UNITY

A feature of the convention was a resolution urging direct co-operation between the labor movements of all the United Nations, including those of Latin-America, and a cable of greetings from the British Trades Union Congress.

The convention brought about 150 delegates to this city, with one delegation, from Local 43 of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, representing over 20,000 war workers. President Meyer's report pledged intensive drives to organize the hundreds of thousands of war workers in the Council's area, including Federal employes in Washington.

1,000 Attend Jersey Parley

Newark, N. J.—Dec. 12—Total mobilization for war was scheduled to be point number one on the agenda of the annual convention of the New Jersey CIO Industrial Union Council, which met here this weekend.

Coming just over a year after this country's entry into the war, the 1,000 delegates and visitors were expected to review accomplishments of New Jersey's several hundred thousand workers, and map recommendations for increasing the output and efficiency of production soldiers throughout the state and nation.

In his opening statement to the convention, President Irving Abramson stressed the need for total mobilization of the nation's economic resources in order to carry the war to an early victory over the Axis.

He lauded the recent Tolan Committee report, which called for creation of an Office for War Mobilization, and discussed the action of the national CIO convention in Boston, which took similar action.

Scheduled to address the two-day meeting are CIO Vice Presidents John Green and Allan S. Haywood; Secretary - Treasurer James B. Carey; John Brophy, director of industrial union councils, and numerous labor and civic officials.

Ask Rationing

New York, Dec. 12 — Universal democratic rationing and firm price control on a uniform basis, plus labor representation no all ration boards were demanded by the Greater New York CIO Council in a resolution passed at this week's meeting.

Rap WLB Turn-Down Of City Cases

NEW YORK, Dec. 19.—Sharp criticism of the War Labor Board for refusing to take jurisdiction over local government workers was expressed by Abram Flaxer, president of the State, County and Municipal Workers, CIO, in a statement issued here.

Flaxer's statement followed the board's refusal to take over a case involving SCMWA members employed by the city of Newark, N. J., who were fired by a local official for union activity. The decision also affects the Transport Workers Union, which has been negotiating for months with the New York Board of Transportation without making any progress.

It also followed a series of swaggering statements by New York's Mayor LaGuardia, who refused to attend the board hearings and who repeatedly defied the board authority even before the decision was rendered.

"CRUEL FARCE"

"In the light of this decision the jibes of the Mayor of New York in failing to appear at the board's hearing on Dec. 9 are clear," Flaxer said. "We concede the stage was set. There was ham acting.

"The very nature of the decision against the government workers points to the fact that it was arrived at before the worker representatives reached Washington. The whole show was merely a cruel farce at the expense of the government employes.

"Yesterday's decision has made the anti-unionism of Commissioner Byrne (the Newark official who fired the 15 SCMWA members) an example for the entire country. The immediate victims are the 15 Newark sanitation workers fired by this petty union-baiter.

"The ultimate victims are the three million local government workers and the public they service. This decision will not stop the government workers from continuing the fight to resolve their many grievances which no amount of winking at can dissipate.

"Greater responsibility is now placed on the public to find some machinery which will be able to give the government worker his rights as a working man. The failure to find such machinery is hindering the war effort."

Council Set For Radio Series

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Dec. 19 — The Wilkes-Barre Area Industrial Union Council is acquiring new affiliates and making marked progress, according to Pres. Joseph Walsh.

The Berwick local of the United Steelworkers has joined the CIO city group, he said, adding about 8,000 members to those already represented by the Council.

Plans are being made with a local radio station for weekly broadcasts, with talks by rank-and-file CIO unionists as a feature.

Rayon-Clad Legs Look Fine, Union Assures The Ladies

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 21—Tojo's attack on Pearl Harbor brought the nation plenty of woe—but it wasn't able to ruin U. S. morale by destroying the looks of American womanhood's legs.

The American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO affiliate, reported this week that despite the absence of silk, the country's fair sex is and will be able to keep its limbs up to Grade A, pre-war appearance.

Improved methods of making rayon, cotton and lisle hosiery — together with several million pairs of sprightly-looking limbs — are helping to keep "legs as usual," the union indicated.

"Your legs can be beautiful in rayon and lisle hosiery," the AFHW reported.

"All women know the advantages of a neat leg smartly clad, and will naturally endeavor to obtain the hosiery which sets their limbs off most attractively.

"However, the rayon products which are on the market now, do have the appearance and sheen of pure silk, and do much to compliment and flatter any leg. Proper care and attention to these rayon stockings will help to lengthen their life and preserve their beauty.

"Most of the rayon hosiery in the $1.00 to $1.35 bracket have the lustre and well-fitting qualities that marked silk hosiery in the same price range, and are comparable in wearing time and appearance.

"Cotton and lisle hosiery have always been known for their long wearing qualities, but today a determined effort is being made to bring them up to modern standards and attractiveness. Various types of mesh and finer gauges are being employed in the production of truly good-looking hosiery that appears well with any type of dress.

"Union members can do much to popularize these stockings by personally advertising their attractiveness to friends, relatives and any other people with whom they may come in contact, and by wearing them on all occasions."

Protest Kills Movie Career Of King Fink

Hollywood, Dec. 19 (FP)—In reply to a protest from Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers (CIO), 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. announced that it has given up plans to make a picture in which Alan Pinkerton, America's most notorious strikebreaker, was to have been the hero.

Thomas' letter to Pres. Spyro P. Skouras of 20th-Fox, pointed out that Pinkerton's activities were concentrated on fighting unions, furnishing labor spies, thugs and goons to employers.

"Any glorification of Alan Pinkerton," Thomas wrote, "would be an affront to 10 million men and women in labor unions."

Unions Played Big Role In War Chest Drives, Relief Group Finds

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—Reports to the CIO War Relief Committee show the tremendous role CIO unions have played in the successful War Chest campaigns completed this year.

In all War Chest cities where labor has been an active cooperator in the campaigns, the local Chests have agreed to contribute to the special labor projects jointly sponsored in Britain, China and Russia by the AFL and CIO War Relief Committees.

To date, $1,535,900.65 has been allotted to labor by the War Chests of the nation. This money will be spent under the auspices of the trade union movements abroad, supervised by the official war relief agencies of the respective countries.

BIG INCREASES

In Kansas City, Mo., CIO pledges in some plants increased twelve hundred per cent over last year. In Wilkes Barre, Pa., total CIO contributions went up 500 per cent over previous giving. St. Louis workers topped their city-wide quota by 125 per cent.

Gary, Indiana, is a case in point. The Chest goal for last year was $9,000. War appeals and local needs made it necessary to set this year's goal at $200,000. By the time the CIO War Relief Committee completed its campaign, $350,000 had been raised and of this amount the CIO alone contributed $130,851.

The War Chest campaign director in Madison, Wis., reported, "Unqualified labor support made it possible for Madison to increase its contribution 261 per cent." The totals are encouraging and they foreshadow close working relations between community and labor leaders in administering the funds raised.

The CIO has demonstrated that it can organize for giving just as effectively as it can organize for collective bargaining.

THE WINNAH: Pretty Barbara Ann Clark, who works in the AC sparkplug division of General Motors was chosen Miss Victory, the typical American woman war worker, in a recent contest. Of course she's a CIO member—belongs to the United Automobile Workers.

Fake Union Negotiates $97 Pay Cut

Baytown, Tex. Dec 19 (FP)—Replacement of male workers by women has reached the janitorial division of the big Baytown refinery of Humble Oil Co., Standard Oil subsidiary, with the company union making an agreement to pay the women $100 a month compared to the $197 paid male janitors.

The Baytown Employes Federation holding the bargaining rights here, announced it had negotiated wages for the women.

In a circular distributed by the CIO Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, it was pointed out that the Humble company is paying $157 for Negro janitors at the refinery, adding that "Humble recognizes no color line when it comes to getting work done cheaper."

Coast CIO Asks Greater Price Control

Los Angeles, Dec. 19.—The Los Angeles Civilian Defense Council this week has taken under consideration a proposal by CIO, which calls for "additional controls" in the rationing and price control program of the country.

A consumers committee is studying the CIO proposal and will discuss it with officials of the Office of Price Administration and will report.

"It is deemed necessary that an adequate price control and rationing program function for the proper prosecution of the war," the resolution, introduced by Gus Brown, CIO member of the Council, said, "and for the supply of essential food and other requirements to our armed forces and for our home front.

"The administration of such a program necessitates additional controls to eliminate inequalities and to provide for a fair distribution of available commodities," it stated.

Say It With Bonds

Detroit, Dec. 19—Saying it with war bonds and blood bank donations, 3,000 members of the American Slav Congress here re-dedicated themselves to vengeance for Pearl Harbor this week.

Cubans Hail McDonald 'Beat Hitler' Speech

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 19—Members of the CIO are committed to the complete destruction of the forces of evil in the world as represented by Germany, Italy and Japan, David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, said here.

"Nothing short of complete victory will satisfy us. We want to see fascism forever destroyed and the rights of the common man protected through democracy," he declared.

McDonald spoke here Dec. 12 at a mass meeting held in connection with the recent convention of the Confederation of Labor of Cuba. He represented the CIO at the convention.

Before a cheering crowd of 5,000 people, McDonald called on the labor movements in the Allied Nations to make certain that democracy "adopts a militant program that will teach all of the people of the oppressed nations the blessings of democracy."

MESSAGE OF FREEDOM

"We cannot win the war and then permit fascism in some other form to arise to menace us once more. The messages of freedom and democracy must be carried to all of the people of the world."

McDonald told the Cuban labor leaders of the close degree of cooperation in every phase of American life, brought about through the war crisis. He outlined the tremendous part being played by labor in keeping the wheels of industry rolling at an ever faster pace to turn out the munitions needed by the armed forces.

After explaining the smooth operation of union-management plant committees McDonald declared that Industry Councils operating along a similar line "can be made to operate just as smoothly."

PLAN ECONOMY

"We believe that industry must not only provide the weapons to win the war, but it must also plan to keep our entire economy functioning after the war is won. We believe that through the operation of our Industry Council Plan we can prevent unemployment from ever again becoming a problem in America.

"American labor is looking to the period of reconstruction after the war. We can envisage the tremendous problems which will arise when peace comes.

"Without strong labor unions, capably administered, the forces of greed will deprive working men of their just wages; and without strong labor unions the disciples of Nazism and Fascism would have a free hand in their campaigns from within to destroy our Democracy."

The CIO delegate told the Cuban Confederation of labor's no-strike pledge to America for the duration of the war.

"The CIO knows that a war has to be won," he said. "The CIO does not intend to do anything which will in the slightest degree delay the day of victory; rather, to the contrary, it will do everything possible to hasten that day of victory."

HOPES FOR UNITY

"All of the peoples of America are being drawn closer together as a result of this war. I hope that we shall become closer and closer down through the years.

"I can imagine the creation of a working relationship between the labor unions of Central and South America and the unions of North America. I believe it is necessary for us to understand one another better. Our lives and the lives of our countries are intertwined.

"American labor wants to give helpful ideas to its comrades in the south, and it wants to receive helpful ideas from them."

Toledano to Visit U.S. With Unity Proposals

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 19 (ALN)—Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), will leave for the United States during the first week in January to discuss with North American labor leaders his proposal for a Pan-American Labor Congress.

During his visit he hopes to confer with heads of the Railroad Brotherhoods and Canadian unions, as well as with William Green, Philip Murray and representatives of the U. S. Government.

"Cooperation between organized labor in the United States, Canada and Latin America is absolutely necessary for the democratic security of the western hemisphere," Toledano, who returned last week from a four-mouth tour of the Americas, told Allied Labor News.

"Now is the best possible time to develop continental labor unity."

Pointing out that on his tour it was everywhere evident that Latin American workers are looking to their brothers in North America to take the lead in organizing a continental labor front against the Axis, the CTAL president said: "That is why the CTAL is advocating the formation of a Pan-American Labor Congress against the Axis.

"On behalf of the CTAL, which now speaks for almost all of organized labor in Latin America, I shall do everything in my power to convince the heads of the North American labor movement of the need for continental unity.

"Formation of a Pan-American Labor Congress will mean that the first round in the battle for the security of our continent will have been won." Such a Congress, Toledano added, would be a step toward achieving unity between the labor movements of all the United Nations.

In the meantime, messages from North American trade unions have been pouring into CTAL headquarters here, congratulating Toledano on the success of his tour through the Americas.

Ship for Gehrig

Millions of inhabitants who have forgotten the achievements of noted persons whose names are christening new ships will have no difficulty in recalling the mighty baseball slugger, Lou Gehrig, whose name will go on a Liberty Ship to be launched about Jan. 8 at Portland, Me.

Labor Seeks Full Status In Canada

Toronto, Dec. 19—(ALN)—A demand for the establishment of a Ministry of Production at Ottawa, with adequate representation from organized labor, was made this week by a production conference called here by Canadian locals of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO.

The conference was attended by 200 delegates from 25 vital war plants employing 50,000 workers.

Stressing that Canada needs an over-all plan of production to make its proper contribution to the cause of the United Nations, C. S. Jackson, president of District 5 of the UE, charged that there is "limited war instead of total war thinking at Ottawa."

Serious difficulties were being experienced in the basic war industries, he said, because of the government's failure "to bring about complete labor-management cooperation and guarantee the right of collective bargaining."

6 Million Tires

Slightly more than half of the six million tires which have been turned in to the Government thus far under the Idle Tire Purchase Plan are usable in their present condition or can be made usable by repairs or recapping to help keep America's 27,000,000 passenger cars rolling, the Office of Price Administration reports.

Bolivian Unions Plan Unity Meet

La Paz, Bolivia, Dec. 19—(ALN)— As a result of negotiations conducted by Vincente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), all Bolivian unions agreed last week to call a National Labor Congress out of which would come a united labor body.

Under the agreement, a committee of organization has been established.

The Congress, to be held in La Paz in February, will be attended by delegates from Argentina, Chile, Peru, Mexico and the U. S.

Henceforth the CTAL will recognize only unions affiliated to the Congress, and under last week's agreement all jurisdictional differences in the way of unity will be arbitrated by Toledano.

At his last press conference before leaving Bolivia Toledano said, "We are fighting for a new world and a new America, in which the suffering, humiliated, starving people of Bolivia will have a place."

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President

Director of Organization

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee reports another victory on behalf of the CIO at the G. H. Hammond Plant with a vote of 437 for PWOC-CIO to 151.

Adolph Germer, director of Organization, IWA-CIO, reports winning an election in the Smith Woods operation near Roseburg, Oregon, with a vote of 39 for IWA-CIO, to 21 for no union.

Morris Muster, president, United Furniture Workers of America reports winning an election at the Thonet Brothers, Bentwood Chair Co., Long Island City, N. Y., with a vote of 25 for UFWA-CIO to 14 for the Carpenters and Joiners, AFL.

Packinghouse Victory

H. C. Fremming, regional director in Kansas City, Missouri, advises that they won the election in the St. Joseph Stock Yards Company, in which the PWOC received 59 votes while 29 were cast for "neither". Brother Fremming advises that everything relating to packing—large and small plants, in St. Joseph is now 100 percent in the PWOC.

Powers Hapgood, regional director in Indianapolis, advises that the American Federation of Hosiery Workers, CIO, has been selected by the employes of the defense unit at Real Silk Hosiery mills, as their representative in collective bargaining, with a vote of 650 for CIO to 63.

The Mine Mill Smelter Workers of America won two more elections this week; namely, at the Torrington Standard Plant in Connecticut, with a vote of 1118 for CIO as against 234, and at the New England Lime Company, Canaan, Connecticut, with a vote of 89 for CIO to 40.

The United Steelworkers of America fired the first shot in a campaign to organize the American Rolling Company's plants by coming through in the first election of these properties in Texas, according to CIO Regional Director Frank A. Hardesty with a vote of 605 for the USA-CIO to 8 for no union. This is a good omen for the future, done in typical Steelworkers' style. Director Hardesty reports a follow-up victory at the plant of the Hughes Steel Company, where in August, 1941, an election was lost, but a champion is never down and the USA came through with a substantial victory. For defense reasons the figures of the vote cannot be divulged.

New Jersey Convention

Over this past week-end I had the pleasure of attending the State Council Convention in New Jersey, where a record number of delegates attended. The convention through the recommendation of its officers went on record in full support of the National CIO program on all matters involving our war effort. President Abramson and Secretary Flynn were unanimously elected to head the Council for the next year.

On Tuesday of this week I addressed a production rally at the Cramp Shipyards in Philadelphia and presented awards to the employes, members of our Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, for suggestions made on increasing production and removing bottlenecks. The workers were very enthusiastic and are determined to keep the ships floating so that the supplies produced by American labor can get to the fighting forces.

Regional Director Ballard of Omaha, Nebraska, has been honored by being selected by the U. S. Government to the position of Associate Director, Labor Division of the War Production Board. William T. Haywood has been selected Principal Labor Representative and Al F. Hartung Associate Director, Labor Division of the WPB in the Minneapolis, Kansas City and West Coast areas, respectively. Brother Frank Cronin will act in the place of Brother Ballard in the Nebraska area and Brother Adolph Germer will attend to the affairs in Oregon, for the time being.

Xmas Greetings

Christmas is approaching and the Organization Department of the CIO wishes to extend its greetings to all the staff and all those associated with us. We are engaged in a global war in which free men are dying in many parts of the world for the purpose of maintaining and extending the ideals of freedom that humanity, and, particularly labor, has struggled for. Many of our members are now in the armed forces and to them we extend our greetings and Godspeed; to those engaged in the army of production, likewise.

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL!

British Workers Gain Greater Voice on Output

LONDON, Dec. 19 (ALN)—The central characteristic of Britain's new production set-up is the opportunity it gives to factory workers for the first time to exert a real influence on the development of national economic planning.

Adoption by the government last July of the Citrine Committee's recommendations has resulted in the decentralization of the production control and the organic linking of joint labor-management committees in the factories to the government's district production boards.

This development, opening up possibilities for unprecedented participation by the workers in the war effort, has in turn strengthened the control of the Ministry of Production over the nation's war industries. Backed by the workers, Oliver Lyttleton, Production Minister, now has the opportunity to smash the grip of the monopolies on the government's network of war-industry controls.

FULL POWERS

The Ministry of Production, set up in March, 1942, has full powers over allocation of raw materials, machine tools, industrial capacity and manpower. Formerly these powers were vested in the Ministry of Supply, the Admiralty, Ministry of Aircraft Production and four other agencies.

While today these ministries still attend to administrative details, final authority over them—except in the case of the Admiralty—is in the hands of Olive Lyttleton. As one of the eight members of the War Cabinet, and as a member of its policy-making Defense Committee, Lyttleton works with those who decide the nation's over-all strategy of war.

His task is to allocate production and manpower resources to meet basic strategic needs.

History of earlier government attempts to centralize production shows that it takes more than formal legislation to break the restrictive, uncoordinated control of the monopolies over the nation's war industry.

Under the Citrine plan, however, the country's 11 Regional Production Boards have been transformed from ineffective advisory bodies into government agencies with real executive power. To each Board has been added a Regional Controller directly representing the Ministry of Production.

WORKERS' QUESTIONS

Under this arrangement, workers are now bringing before the District Committees—and, through the Committees, the Regional Boards and the Ministry itself—such questions as the failure of plants fully to utilize all machines, men and materials; lack of day nurseries; inadequate transportation and incompetent managers.

In October Production Minister Lyttleton announced that, because of suggestions made by labor-management committees, certain contracts have been shifted from inefficient to efficient firms.

CIO Manpower Plan Asks Full Mobilization

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20—CIO's seven-point program for full mobilization of all manpower resources was made public today in a letter from Pres. Philip Murray to Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission and head of Selective Service.

The program calls for total mobilization under a central plan, with protection for workers involved in transfers, restrictions on movements in and out of vital war production areas and industries, and for complete utilization of all workers, including Negroes and other racial and national groups.

In presenting the CIO's all-over plan to McNutt, Murray wrote: "The program which is thus offered is designed solely to assure the fullest mobilization of our manpower resources.

"We merely seek the program which will meet the need of our nation by assuring maximum production of war materials. This can be done only through the protection and maintenance of the health and morale of American workers."

SEVEN-POINT PLAN

Basic point in the program calls for "complete corelation of the activities of those agencies which have jurisdiction over procurement, the issuance of contracts and disposition of raw materials with those of the Manpower Commission."

This would end the confusion that comes from allocation of orders and materials without checking on available manpower in industrial areas. The present lack of system produces crises in manpower, whereupon the agencies responsible "seek to utilize the Manpower Commission solely as a fire department squad to meet those continuing crises."

Calling for full use of all workers, Negroes, aliens and women, the CIO plan says:

"We must have an end to the utterance of pious hopes in regard to this policy and enter a field of action whereby employers will be compelled to accept this available manpower.

"Complete equality of opportunity for employment must be made available to all workers and under the basic principle of equal pay for equal work."

PROTECTION STANDARDS

Workers whose right to move about from one job to another has to be restricted for war needs must be thoroughly protected, the plan says, demanding that restricted plants must be investigated for compliance with safety and health standards; prevailing wages, hours and working conditions, plus collective bargaining; adequate training facilities and full use of available manpower.

In addition, restricted plants or areas should be required to pay a weekly minimum equal to the worker's average for 40 hours, plus premium pay in line with union standards and the President's Executive Order on overtime.

Permission to leave should be given when the worker can fill a higher skilled job elsewhere; exchange a parti-time job for full time; work nearer home, thus cutting down on transportation or "meet certain compelling personal reasons."

TRANSFERS

When transfers from one job to another are required, they must be made first within the locality before workers are brought in from outside; workers must get traveling expenses for themselves and family; plants must comply with conditions as outlined above and any pay deficiencies between the old job and the new must be made up. In addition, workers must be guaranteed the chance to return to their old jobs with accumulated seniority and other union rights.

LABOR'S ROLE

Labor must have a full place in the operation of Selective Service and the U. S. Employment Service, the plan says, pointing out that essential workers are inducted today without consultation of organized labor. In addition, the USES must be given sufficient funds.

Final point in the plan calls for national minimum standards of un-

CIO Workers Aid U. S. Reach Ship Goal

CAMDEN, N. J., Dec. 19—A new ship every 56½ hours.

That's the record which members of Local 1, CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, are rolling up this year in the New York Shipbuilding Co. yards here.

The record, which the union says is equalled by no other shipyard in the nation, is calculated to give Hitler and Hirohito a case of heebie-jeebies.

When the old year rings out, Local 1 members say the yard will have sent 155 complete self-propelled ships into the waters since last January 1.

EIGHT-MILLION GOAL

Production records such as this are leading government officials to predict that the country will turn out the eight million tons of new shipping set as a goal by President Roosevelt early in the year.

When he announced the figure, it looked staggeringly high—but shipyard labor and management rolled up their sleeves to do the job.

But this week U. S. Maritime Commission officials revealed that 625 vessels of 6,890,000 deadweight tons had been launched through Nov. 30. That leaves 1,110,000 tons to go—and the government agency was confident the goal would be met.

Food Cost Zooms 40% Since 1939

Washington, Dec. 19—The cost of food has risen 40% since the outbreak of war in August, 1939!

That was the startling revelation made this week by the U. S. Dept of Labor. Its report buttressed labor and consumer demands for tighter price control and rationing of necessary food products.

Food prices have jumped 16% since mid-November, 1941, and are still going up, Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins noted.

During the month ending November 17, she said, average family food costs soared upward by 1.2%.

Most of the increase, the Labor Dept. found, came in foods like fresh fruits, vegetables and fish, prices of which are outside the realm of the Office of Price Administration. Prices of these commodities zoomed up 6.6% in one month, and are now 21½% higher than in May of this year.

Prices controlled by the OPA also moved up by one-half of one percent.

Ordnance Bungles Show Need for Plan, Senate Group Told

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—The need for overall war planning is graphically shown by Ordnance Division failures in securing armor plate for the 1942 tank program, President Philip Murray said this week in testimony presented for him to the "Small Business Committee" headed by Sen. James E. Murray.

As an example, Murray cited in his testimony presented by CIO Research Director J. Raymond Walsh the case of some 31 small concerns capable of producing 50 per cent of the needed armor plate who are threatened with being frozen out by Ordnance policy. This policy has led to the projected building of a huge $38,000,000 U. S. Steel plant, while the smaller concerns are left without orders.

Protests from the United Steelworkers, CIO, have temporarily halted this wasteful construction, Murray said. He urged that it be stopped completely and that the lesser firms be fully utilized. An acute manpower situation exists at the site of the new plant, and the plant itself would use up large amounts of steel and other short materials.

PLANNING NEED

The need for overall planning was seen again in the fact that the Navy had "gobbled up" almost all the armor plate plants, forcing the War Department to hurriedly improvise new sources. "Here is illustrated the need for an overall civilian body to coordinate the war production program," Murray testified, "and avoid the costly inefficiencies resulting from competition among the several branches of the armed services."

Murray also charged that the new U. S. Steel plant would use large amounts of vital nickel in producing plate, while other firms had developed a process producing equally good armor that used no nickel and considerably less molybdenum, another scarce material.

WAR MOBILIZATION

Murray's testimony also pointed out that present Army policy was carried on without regard to manpower supply, transportation and other vital considerations. This, he said, was a further argument for civilian control and planning in war production.

"We are waging a war for the preservation of freedom and democracy. The people of our nation will give their all to win this war because they cherish freedom and democracy. But they know they can easily lose their cherished freedom and democracy if the military assumes the powers and responsibilities that properly should be vested in civilian authority," he said.

British Ship Builders Visit U. S.

Washington, Dec. 19—A delegation of British shipbuilding union representatives began a four-week tour of American yards to study our methods, the office of War Information said here this week.

They were invited by Labor Dept. officials in the U. S. and Canada and by officers of American shipbuilding unions, and will follow a similar tour made by management officials from Britain.

John Green, president of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, is among the union leaders greeting the British representatives on their trip. Special attention will be paid to our mass production methods.

Monty-Ward Folds, Takes WLB Order

Washington, Dec. 19 — Montgomery Ward, the big mail order house, this week sent a letter to President Roosevelt.

Signed by Sewell Avery, company boss, it announced that the company would accept a maintenance-of-union membership clause twice ordered by the War Labor Board and by President Roosevelt.

The company had screamed that maintenance of membership is the same as the closed shop — a chorus which much of the nation's press took up in its news and editorial columns. Monty-Ward is a heavy advertiser.

The WLB decision affected the big Chicago warehouse of the company, which has been organized by the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes of America.

New York — (FP) — The Sperry Gyroscope Company, which fired a worker for talking union during lunch hour, was ordered to reinstate him with full back pay Dec. 9 after a hearing before the NLRB.

The worker is Pres. Michael Orfinik of Local 450, United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers (CIO), which has just completed an organizing drive at Sperry's.

1943 Taxes

It won't be long now before millions of working people will be feeling the burden of taxes more personally and more directly than they ever imagined.

Beginning in January wages will be docked by five per cent to meet the misnamed "victory tax." Then on March 15 income taxes will become due for millions of low-paid workers who never paid them before; and those who paid a small income tax before will be liable for considerable sums of money. And that isn't all.

Before long Congress will be considering new legislation to raise additional billions of dollars to finance the war, and to combat inflation. This will mean new threats to small pay envelopes.

Every wage-earner will have to become as tax-conscious as he is wage and price-conscious in ordinary times. For taxes have just as direct an effect on our living standards as have wages and prices.

* * *

Greatly increased taxation is obviously necessary to win this war. And labor is the first to agree that everyone should pay his fair share.

But it isn't only a matter of getting enough money for more ships, planes, tanks, etc. A sound tax program, of huge proportions, is also necessary to prevent inflation and to create a healthy war economy for all the people.

The war has caused a tremendous cut in the production of all civilian goods. If the amount of money available to purchase these goods is not also reduced, inflation will result and the working people will be the first to suffer from it.

Taxes, however, are only one means of meeting this situation. Equally important are a universal system of rationing that will insure to low-income people their proper share of available consumers' goods; and effective price control, particularly on living necessities, so workers may not be prevented by high prices from buying what they must have to preserve their health and productive efficiency.

By the same token, taxes which fall so heavily on low-income groups as to prevent their purchasing sufficient living necessities, defeat the whole purpose of a sound tax program.

* * *

These are some of the reasons why the CIO so strenuously opposes the sales tax, the so-called "individual excess profits tax," and other similar proposals which Congressional tories are cooking up for the 1943 tax bill.

The sales tax is the most unfair tax there is. It falls most heavily on those who have least to spend and most need to buy, while it has little effect on the purchases of the prosperous.

The so-called individual excess profits tax would fall heaviest on low-paid workers whose earnings have increased since the war, and most particularly on those who were unemployed or on part-time previously.

The spendings tax proposed by the U. S. Treasury would be far fairer than the sales tax or the "victory tax." This tax would be applied to the difference between income received and income saved. It would permit of exemptions for the low-paid and deductions for living necessities, as demanded by the CIO. At the same time, it would permit of progressively higher taxation on higher incomes, as does the income tax.

Similarly with proposals for compulsory or minimum savings, the CIO insists that sufficient allowances be made for low-income groups without enough funds to buy living necessities; and it argues that higher-income people be compelled to save more proportionately than those with low incomes.

At the same time, the CIO renews its demand for the plugging of loopholes through which the rich can still avoid paying their share. This can be done by compelling joint income tax returns for married couples; by taxing tax-exempt securities; by raising normal and surtaxes on corporate income to at least 55 per cent; and by increasing gift and estate taxes and eliminating special depletion allowances for mining and oil companies.

Finally, the CIO regards the social security system as one of the best means for withdrawing money from circulation during the war, while at the same time building up a backlog of security for the workers in the post-war period.

It urges further security taxes with corresponding increases in social security benefits, including old age benefits, nationalization of unemployment compensation, and the institution of a health program.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

AT AN isolated spot in the northern wilds of Canada, there recently gathered together as curious a mixture of people as ever astonished the natives there.

There were dapper Chinese; Hindus, Moslems and Sikhs from India; stolid Netherlanders and dark-skinned Indonesians from the Indies; Filipinos, Thailanders, Koreans and Fighting Frenchmen.

Mingling with them were Australians, New Zealanders, Canadians, Englishmen and Americans, with such differing accents and manners of speech as to cast doubt on their common language.

The writer joined these delegates to the conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations with a certain sense of unreality about such a gathering so far from the scenes of war; and with still more doubts as to what all this had to do with the CIO.

But after days and nights of close study, discussion and association, all sense of unreality and remoteness was displaced by a feeling of the vital urgency of the international issues that brought together so many people from such great distances.

And the conviction grew that American labor has a very direct and immediate concern in all of these major problems of Pacific relations.

No news report can be given on the conference as such. It was entirely unofficial and informal. Such government officials as attended did so in a purely personal capacity, and with the understanding there should be no publicity.

But what we can do is to look through CIO eyes at some of the problems that necessarily arise in any consideration of Pacific relations. Here are a few:

Atlantic Charter: Not only the United States and Great Britain but the other United Nations as well have subscribed to the glowing principles of the Atlantic Charter, with its promise of freedom, self-determination and economic opportunity for all peoples.

The CIO, by convention action, has called for application of the Atlantic Charter to all colonial peoples, and particularly to India. It did so both to mobilize the free energies of these peoples against the Axis, and to remove the imperialistic roots of future wars.

The peoples of Asia and the Pacific look to the United States, and especially to American labor, to use its great influence for the speediest and widest possible application of the principles of the Atlantic Charter both during the war and in the post-war settlements. ★ ★ ★

Racial Discrimination: The CIO stand against all forms of racial discrimination in the United States has international as well as domestic implications.

Labor's demand for abolition of the poll-tax aids Pacific war unity by demonstrating American democratic sincerity at home as well as abroad.

Similarly the CIO stand against any racial discrimination in employment and union organization strikes an answering chord among our Pacific allies. For denial of union membership, as practised by some AFL unions, and other discriminations against people of Oriental and Pacific origin legally resident in the United States, inevitably cause rifts between our United Nations.

It is not hard to explain the economic reasons for restrictions against any mass immigration of low-wage labor. But it is impossible to explain or excuse racial discriminations, within the United States, between the various nationals who are admitted under such restrictions.

International labor unity: Abraham Lincoln noted that the closest bond betwen the peoples of the world is the sympathy and common interest that unite all working people.

The ties are close between United States and Canadian labor. They are less close betwen North American labor and the highly developed movements of New Zealand and Australia; and still looser with the struggling labor movement of India, with the bare beginnings of union organization in China, and with the underground struggles of suppressed labor in Japanese-dominated territories.

What greater contribution can the CIO make to war unity—and to future world peace and progress—than to cement ever closer these international labor ties, in accordance with its convention decisions?

The above points just scratch the surface of the multitudinous issues of Pacific relations in which American labor has a direct interest and an important part to play.

Labor demands full representation in the prosecution of the war and at the peace table. It must equip itself to play its full part by ever closer study of and association with the problems of international relations. And they are not remote from but most closely related to American labor's day-to-day war activities.

CIO Offers Manpower Program

employment compensation, pointing out that the present wide differences between states "cannot possibly meet the needs for a national mobilization of manpower."

Concluding the letter to McNutt, Murray said: "The CIO is very happy to have the opportunity of cooperating with your Commission through the Labor-Management Committee and will continue to make additional suggestions from time to time consistent with our mutual objective to attain the fullest utilization of our manpower resources."

Pledges Aid To Underground Foes of Axis

New York, Dec. 19—Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, at a luncheon meeting of New York CIO leaders launching a $2,000,000 trade-union drive for Allied war relief and Community Chest contributions in this city, pledged all-out financial aid to the labor underground movement in enemy-occupied countries.

Hillman declared that support of the underground movement, which he said is "the heart of civilian resistance to the enemy", would be a first charge upon the conscience and the funds of the American labor movement.

Hillman predicted joint AFL-CIO efforts in the field of war relief, community aid and support of the underground.

The Amalgamated president president stressed the necessity of supporting the labor underground in Europe and behind the Japanese lines because he regards it as the potential spearhead for Allied invasion and counter-attack.

Seamen Don't Want To Drown; It Ain't Right, Says Col. 'Bertie'

By VIRGINIA GARDNER

Washington, Dec. 21 (FP)—To the families of the almost 6,000 seamen of the merchant marine virtually all of them union men, who are dead and missing as war casualties, it may seem strange that a man can count it a bitter loss that a ship he owns is torpedoed.

But when Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, loses a ship, he slanders the ship's crew for not bringing it back.

Addressing the annual dinner of his advertising staff and guests in Chicago Dec. 10, McCormick told of the loss to the Quebec & Ontario Paper Co., Tribune-owned, when one of its ships was torpedoed off the coast of Cuba.

"I am sorry to say the crew did not behave well," said the publisher of the newspaper he calls the world's greatest, which the recent CIO convention called disruptive and appeaser.

"The merchant crews of the United States are no credit to our nation," said the discredited publisher. "They abandoned the ship."

Campbell's Gets Gravy In New (Higher) Soups

NEW YORK, Dec. 19—Price increases in Campbell's soups authorized by OPA are not warranted by the slight improvement in quality, reports Consumers Union after testing both the "old" and the "new and improved"" varieties. CU testers did find something had been added—but nowhere near enough to justify the 1 to 3 cents increase per can. Here's their story, as told in a recent issue of Bread & Butter, CU publication:

"Many housewives are disgusted with OPA for the manner in which it has pierced the retail ceiling prices of canned soups. A complicated pricing formula permits a retailer to raise the price of the 10½ ounce can of soup from 10 to 12½ cents—provided it was packed after June 10 and carries a label "new style" or "new recipe."

"The alibi for this gouge is that the consumer is getting more for his money in either quantity or quality. Manufacturers, says OPA, are required to include more dry solids and are burdened by the general rise in the cost of packaging materials and raw foodstuffs.

"Consumers Union technicians tested old and "new" recipe Campbell soups.

"In the 'new' tomato soup, there appeared to be no increase in tomato solids. The soup had been thickened, apparently by increasing the amount of flour. Raising the price one or two cents seems hardly justified.

"In the samples of the 'new' chicken noodle soup tested, the amount of chicken was increased from 0.51 ounces to 0.9 ounces per can, while the amount of noodles was about the same.

"CU technicians estimate that the extra cost of the added chicken to the company was not more than half cent—probably less—while the increase at retail runs from two to three cents a can.

"In the 'new' chicken soup, the amount of chicken was increased from 0.33 ounces to 0.47 ounces and the rice content was doubled. The flavor was decidedly richer. But again the increase of two to three cents a can seems way out of proportion to the change in the formula."

Clothing Union Adopts New Health Insurance Plan

NEW YORK, Dec. 19—More than 125,000 workers employed in the men's and boys' clothing industry throughout the country will be covered by a life insurance and health program which was being pushed toward completion today by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America under terms of a collective agreement with the Clothing Manufacturers' Association of the U.S.A.

Substantial reserves are now being built up, according to Sidney Hillman, Amalgamated president, for what will be known as the Amalgamated Insurance Fund. The program is expected to begin operations within the next few months.

The fund, Hillman said, is now negotiating with major life insurance companies for the re-insurance of all funds collected under the program being set up in the clothing industry. John G. Rolph, vice-president of the Amalgamated Bank of New York, another union institution, will be in charge of the insurance fund.

EMPLOYERS GIVE 2%

Under provisions of the union-employer agreement, the employers are contributing into the insurance fund 2 per cent of their weekly payrolls, covering all productive workers. Shipping clerks, clerks and bookkeepers, wherever they belong to the Amalgamated, also come under the insurance provisions.

According to present indications, clothing employers will contribute $200,000 per month, which will permit setting up proper reserves.

The ACW, which has been a pioneer in the field of unemployment insurance, labor banking and cooperative housing, began a "laboratory experiment" in life and health insurance for its members in Chicago in April 1940.

The group insurance scheme worked so well in Chicago that it was decided to launch the program on a nation-wide basis.

In Chicago, the union established its own company known as the Amalgamated Life and Health Insurance Co. for the purpose of writing group life, health and accident insurance covering 15,000 members affiliated with the Chicago Joint Board. The Chicago company is capitalized at $200,000 and has a paid surplus of $100,000.

Under the Chicago plan, the Amalgamated group policies grant an outright $500 to beneficiaries of Amalgamated members, upon death, up to the age of 70, and $250 over that age.

The health and accident provisions of the Chicago policies yield a $10 weekly indemnity for an aggregate not exceeding 15 weeks in any consecutive 12 months.

In the case of accident, the period of indemnity begins from the first day of such disability, and in the case of sickness, from the eighth day of such disability.

Murray's Letter on CIO Manpower Stand

Following is the letter sent to War Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in which he voices labor's position on vital problems of war manpower.

Dear Mr. McNutt:

The recent Executive Order of the President of the United States dealing with the subject matter of manpower confers very extensive and all-embracing powers upon you as the Chairman of the War Manpower Commission. Labor has a very vital interest in achieving the fullest mobilization of manpower. This goal can be attained only through a program which will assure the highest degree of efficiency and morale for the workmen who produce the munitions of war.

The recent Convention of the Congress of Industrial Organizations addressed itself to this all-embracing question. I now desire to submit to you the basic elements of our program which seeks to effectuate a total mobilization of our resources by protecting existing standards achieved through bona fide collective bargaining.

1. If there is to be a maximum mobilization of available manpower resources, there must be a complete correlation of the activities of those agencies which have jurisdiction over procurement, the issuance of contracts and disposition of raw materials with those of the Manpower Commission.

It would be futile to continue the haphazard method of having the contracting agency issue contracts so as to create crises in manpower, and then seek to utilize the Manpower Commission solely as a fire department squad to meet those continuing crises.

Contracts and available material must be correlated with the manpower requirements and supply. Total mobilization cannot be restricted to manpower but must embrace mobilization of material resources as well. The recent Executive Order imposes upon you both the responsibility and authority to achieve this goal.

Need For Action

2. All available manpower, such as Negroes, all racial groups, and women, must be utilized. We must have an end to the utterances of pious hopes in regard to this policy and enter a field of action whereby employers will be compelled to accept this available manpower. Complete equality of opportunity for employment must be made available to all workers and under the basic principle of equal pay for equal work.

3. Individual plants or areas may have to be designated as critical with restrictions to be imposed upon the right of workers to leave work. Adequate protection must therefore be afforded to the workers as follows:

(a) All the plants to be covered should be investigated and certified as complying with (1) the health and safety requirements; (2) the wages, hours and working conditions prevailing in the area or industry, as determined through bona fide collective bargaining; (3) requirements for adequate training facilities; and (4) requirements for the maximum utilization of the available manpower in the plant.

(b) Employes in the designated plants or areas should, of course, be permitted to leave their present employ for the purpose of seeking employment elsewhere if the employe is doing so to (1) obtain a higher skilled job; (2) obtain full time employment whereas he is only partially employed at present; (3) meet certain compelling personal reasons; and (4) obtain employment at a plant closer to the employe's residence, thereby eliminating unnecessary travel.

Wage Guarantee

(c) An employe in one of the designated plants or areas should be guaranteed that as long as he is ready, able and willing to do the work and reports for work, he should receive a minimum weekly wage equal to his average hourly earnings for 40 hours. Where an industry or a plant has been requested to operate on a longer work week, the employes therein employed should be guaranteed a minimum weekly wage based upon such longer work week with premium pay in accordance with outstanding collective bargaining agreements, statutes and the President's Executive Order 9240.

4. It is recognized that to meet some critical situations employes may have to be transferred to plants which have a serious shortage of available manpower. Where transfers are to be made, the following safeguards are essential.

(a) Wherever possible transfers of employes from one plant to another should be made within the locality before employes are brought from another region.

(b) Employes who are thus transferred should be paid their traveling expenses plus special allowances incurred with the moving and for family dependents.

(c) Employes should not be transferred to any plant unless such plant has been investigated and certified that it has met the requirements as designated above. In addition, the transfer should not be authorized until representatives of the Manpower Commission have investigated and certified that there are available adequate health, housing and child care facilities for such transferred employes.

(d) The employes, when transferred, should receive the rate which had prevailed for their new job prior to the transfer with an additional guarantee that they will receive earnings on their new job at least equal to those which they enjoyed on the job from which they are transferred. The rates for their new job need not be changed, but the employer should be obliged where necessary, to provide supplemental payments to make up the employe's earnings, so that he shall not suffer.

(e) All employes transferred should be guaranteed that when they are able to return to their old job, they shall be entitled to do so on the basis of their cumulative seniority and all their rights and privileges provided for under the collective bargaining agreements covering the place of their original employment, as if they had been there continuously at work.

Labor Voice On Draft

5. The Selective Service Division has been made a part of the Manpower Commission. The problem of which men should be drafted for the services as against those who should be left at work in the essential industries at an essential job becomes an exceedingly important and critical one. Labor insists that it be given an opportunity to participate within the plants in this determination.

At the present time the sole responsibility for making recommendations from the plant as to which occupations are essential is left entire to management. The Labor-Management-Production committees in the various plants could be utilized most effectively to assist in this task.

6. The U. S. Employment Service, under the enlarged powers of the War Manpower Commission, plays a most important role. This agency requires a very enlarged appropriation so as to make available for it the highest caliber of personnel. In addition, the fullest participation of labor is essential in all phases of activity of the U. S. Employment Service. Adequate machinery must be assured for appeals that may be taken by individual employes or their unions from decisions of the local offices of the U. S. Employment Service so as to assure a fair and swift adjudication of all problems that may arise.

National Standards

7. The present situation of separate state unemployment compensation statutes with diverse standards cannot possibly meet the needs for a national mobilization of manpower. For this reason, there must be established national minimum standards pertaining to unemployment compensation and which will assure a protection to the workers of their rights thereunder when they transfer from one job to another or from one state to another.

The program which is thus offered is designated solely to assure the fullest mobilization of our manpower resources. We merely seek the program which will meet the needs of our nation by assuring the maximum production of war materials. This can be done only through the protection and maintenance of the health and morale of American workers.

The CIO is very happy to have the opportunity of cooperating with your Commission through the Labor-Management Committee and will continue to make additional suggestions from time to time through such Committee, consistent with our mutual objective to obtain the fullest utilization of our manpower resources.

Lewis Secretly Invests Million of UMW Funds In Mines, Is Charge

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19—Without authorization from the membership, John L. Lewis has dumped more than $1,000,000 of United Mine Workers' money into private mining companies, according to a copyrighted news story in a recent issue of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

According to the Post-Dispatch, "beginning in 1939 and extending well into 1941, the financial reports of the UMWA show under miscellaneous expenditures, a series of loans, ranging from $50,000 down to $5,000. These are listed merely as 'New York draft for loan with security notes as collateral.'"

Thus the loans, "explained" at the UMWA convention in Cincinnati, were made as long as four years ago before the members were told even through the medium of a Lewis-dominated convention.

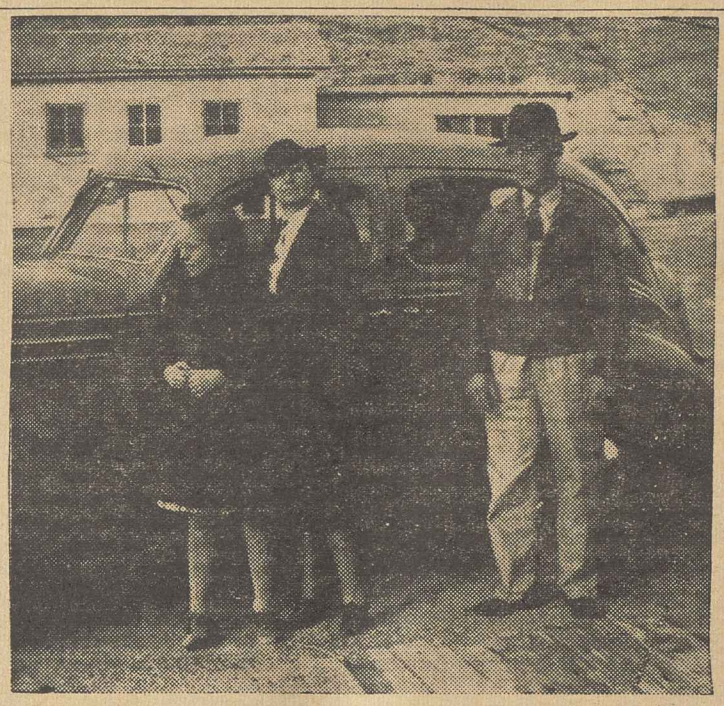
Most of the loans went to the Rocky Mountain Fuel Co., according to the St. Louis paper. "According to one tabulation, made by a former associate of Lewis, these advances totalled about $500,000 by the middle of June, 1941." In addition, big advances were made to a Lewis-created outfit known as "Lewmurken, Inc.," to a total of $179,182 by December, 1941.

MORE AND STILL MORE

According to figures compiled from UMWA reports by "Victory," official publication of the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, CIO, some $383,407.94 was laid out in "drafts for loans" between December 1, 1938, and December 1, 1940. This, "Victory" says, may have included $300,000 advanced to one Carl Elshoff, coal owner of Springfield, Ill., during a fight to oust the Progressive Miners.

Through "Lewmurken," Lewis can use UMWA funds to invest or pay out in any way he chooses.

This outfit, formed before CIO Pres. Murray was ousted from his elected position as UMWA vice-president, was set up wholly without his knowledge or consent, Murray told the Post-Dispatch, adding that he did not sign the incorporation papers and knew nothing of its financial dealings.



COULD LIVE ON $25,000

Ask Pay Hike

New York, Dec. 19—A 20 per cent increase, equal pay for women and minimum wage scales were asked by the Bank and Brokerage division of the CIO Office and Professional Workers in a WLB hearing held here this week. The hearing is the first in which the WLB has taken jurisdiction over white-collar workers, union officials said.

Women Take Their Places

San Pedro, Dec. 19—Women longshoremen—or is it longshorewomen?—will be helping load the sinews of war on the docks of this war-busy port "probably within a week," John Mitchell, president of Local 13, Int'l Longshore and Warehousemen's Union, said this week.

For the first time in the history of the west coast, gangs of women will be dispatched from the ILWU hiring hall here. The proposed plan, which was okehed by Local 13's membership at a meeting recently, will mobilize gangs of six women aided by two men.

Standard Oil, Consumers Power Sign CIO 'Security' Pacts

TEXAS CITY, Tex., Dec. 19—Standard Oil, open shop colossus of the nation's vital petroleum industry, this week signed a union security contract with the CIO covering the important Pan Am Refinery in this city.

The agreement, one of a small number that the billion-dollar Rockefeller empire has signed with the CIO Oil Workers International Union, was its first in the Southwest, and gives major benefits to more than a thousand workers, white and Negro, in the local refinery.

It was the first Standard Oil pact gained by the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, headed by former NLRB member Edwin S. Smith. Organized last summer, the plant voted CIO in a Labor Board election last summer. Negotiations, which had been stalled for several months, moved ahead quickly at hearings conducted by a War Labor Board Mediation Panel.

Gained in the contract were a maintenance of membership clause, voluntary checkoff, and considerably improved grievance, seniority and training programs.

PRAISE CONTRACT

CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Pres. O. A. Knight, of the Oil Workers International Union both voiced high praise for the agreement.

Murray said it contains "many sound features of union-management cooperation which augur well for future relationships with other Standard Oil units . . . The need for cooperation between unions and management in order to win the war is strongly exemplified in the terms of this Pan Am contract."

Knight hailed the "splendid agreement" and noted its "very special importance."

"In time of war, unions and management cooperating in solving labor relation problems, providing for the efficient operation of the plant and increasing production, has a very special importance."

OWOC Director Smith commented that "the time has come for management and the union to bury past animosities and to explore the possibilities of common understanding and cooperation.

"Given good will, time and patience, the agreement at Pan Am should become in its broad principles not merely a significant stage in more democratic labor relations in the petroleum industry but a useful example for American industry generally."

The Pan Am Refinery is controlled by Standard Oil of Indiana, which forms, with other members of the Standard Oil "family," the largest oil producing combine in the nation. It has long resisted organization by the CIO Oil Workers Intl. Union.

Saginaw, Mich., Dec. 19.—One of Michigan's most important anti-labor strongholds toppled this week when the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee gained a union shop contract with the Consumers Power Co. as the climax of a four-year organizing drive.

The pact was accepted by the company just 12 hours prior to a union deadline, which had been backed up with a stoppage threat if the management decided to keep its old anti-union policy. The company gave in.

The utility's power network covers 25,000 square miles of territory, and it employs some 2,100 workers to service its lines, which run into some of the nation's most important war-industry communities.

The workers, members of 19 UWOC locals, gained 8½ cent hourly wage increases retroactive to Nov. 1, together with widespread re-classifications and adjustments.

Previous CIO organizing drives had run up against a combine of the company, certain public officials and reactionary AFL leaders. On a previous occasion, a nicely-timed court proceeding against the CIO union — later dismissed — influenced the workers to choose the AFL in an NLRB election. But two years under the AFL electrical union were enough to swing the workers into the CIO camp.

Announcement by Leon Henderson that standardized grade labeling will be compulsory on most canned fruits and vegetables in the 1943 pack is good news for consumers. Every can will have to be labeled either A, B or C, or Fancy, Choice or Standard. This means that consumers will know the quality they are paying for regardless of brand names and will make it much more difficult for stores to evade price regulations by discontinuing one brand and substituting a brand of inferior quality at the same price.

The standards on which the grade will be based are those set by the Agricultural Marketing Administration (AMA) which grades all canned goods for the armed forces and lend-lease. Labeling may be done either by the canner or by the AMA at the request of the canner. Compulsory grading by AMA would offer more complete protection to the consumer and should be urged as the next step.

How important labeling will be in controlling the cost of living will depend on the character of the new price regulations which Mr. Henderson says are to be issued shortly. Labor wants dollars and cents price ceilings—uniform from store to store—like the ceiling established on stockings. All indications are, however, that such ceilings are not being planned on food prices.

According to Government figures the cost of food has increased 7.8 per cent since the middle of May. The cost of fresh fruits, vegetables and fresh fish—not controlled by OPA—are up 21 per cent. In other words, price control regulations have helped to keep food prices down, but they haven't done a thorough job. And they won't do a thorough job until they are revised so that consumers can understand them and can help to enforce them.

THREE THINGS TO DO

Labor hasn't done a real job on price control so far. It's our standard of living that goes down when prices go up, because wages have been stabilized. It's up to us to see to it that prices don't go up—in fact, in a number of cases we ought to see that they come down. How can we do it?

1. A nation-wide campaign of letters, telegrams, delegations . . . in other words — pressure on top OPA officials to demand uniform dollars and cents price ceilings in retail stores.

2. Immediate action in our own communities to see that labor representatives serve on every war price and rationing board, and to see to it that committees in our unions and in our neighborhoods check on posting of price ceilings and observance of ceiling prices by retail stores and report all complaints and violations to local boards.

3. Pressure on OPA executives to use volunteer price wardens, trained and authorized by OPA, to assist the seriously understaffed OPA enforcement division in every community.

The League of Women Shoppers is issuing a price ceiling record book. They cost 5 cents each. The Newspaper Guild Auxiliary is ordering one for every member. Send your order to the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, 1019 Fifteenth Street, Northwest, with your nickel. Keeping an up-to-date price record book is one way in which every auxiliary member can help enforce price control.

The Congress of CIO Women's Auxiliaries has moved its national headquarters to 1019 15th St., N. W., Washington, D. C. Former address was 1407 L St., N. W.

THE GLORY OF DEMOCRACY

THE sacrifices that are needed in order to win the war are apparent to us all.

The Treasury's appeals to buy War Bonds, the Government's pleas to conserve gas and rubber, the economies required to avoid inflation, the necessity of rationing many essential commodities—all these have become vital in the minds of our people.

Necessity has awakened us, not only to the size of the task before us, but to the fact that our future as a nation is at stake; and in characteristic fashion we-all are responding.

Our hearts speak, our purses are open wide; and regardless of creed, or color, or political convictions, our honest differences of opinion are being dissipated before the issue that confronts us.

This is the glory of democracy: that a man may think as he will, speak as he will, vote as he will, and worship God in his own way; yet in the hour of peril to the State, that which is for the greatest good of all is not only his most compelling thought but the strongest prompting of his heart.

In that hour his thought is no longer of himself but of his country; and it is as though his soul were crying out those memorable words of Plato: "Man was not born for himself alone but for his country."

CourtRescindsOuster Of Union Members From School Board

MADISON, Wis., Dec. 19—(FP)—Organized labor won a historic victory Dec. 8 when by unanimous decision the Wisconsin supreme court overruled Circuit Judge A. C. Hoppman's ouster of Edward Weston and Edward N. Rice from the Kenosha Board of Education because they are union members.

In killing the lower court decision, the supreme court ruled that elective officials may be removed only by recall in absence of a statute declaring the offices to be forfeited by reasons of misconduct in office. Although the high court based its decision only on this point of law, it also said:

"It is perfectly clear that if the respondents failed at all times to exercise their own individual judgment and discretion in performance of their duties, the remedy was political and not judicial."

Hoppman's ouster of the two unionists was based on a suit brought by Marrian J. Brister, who charged that Weston and Rice could not exercise their own judgment because they had promised to abide by the principles of the labor movement and the Kenosha Union League as well as obey the constitution.

SEE POLITICAL PLOT

"A thoroughly unscrupulous political group succeeded in temporarily destroying the application of the constitution and laws of Kenosha to smash the labor majority on the school board. But they didn't get away with it!" Kenosha Labor, AFL-CIO newspaper, said Dec. 9, in commenting on the high court decision.

The real reason for the ouster of the two school board members became apparent in July when the reorganized school board voted 4 to 2 to repeal the rules protecting teachers' tenure.

Kenosha Labor also revealed at the same time that a united front had been established in Kenosha between the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and the Natl. Education Assn. for distribution of anti-union propaganda in the schools.

Steel Union Wins Major Texas Poll

Houston, Tex., Dec. 19—Workers at the Hughes Tool Co. plant last week gave the CIO a clear-cut margin of victory in one of the southwest's most important NLRB elections.

With about three-quarters of the war plant's several thousand workers participating in the poll, the results showed the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, had garnered 52½% of the vote, with about 47% going to an old independent union.

The victory was a comeback for the CIO affiliate, which had been defeated in a previous contest at the plant. Frank Hardesty, CIO and USA-CIO regional director, hailed the election as a major victory.

"I believe that in a very short time it will be the means of establishing more unions in the greater part of the steel industry in this district," he said. "Unquestionably, the winning of this election is going to add impetus to the entire CIO movement in this part of the country."

The company is one of the largest steel firms in the southwest.

Baltimore—(FP) — Five Negroes and 1 woman were among the 13 vice presidents elected at the Maryland-District of Columbia CIO convention here. Pres. George J. Meyers and Sec.-Treas. Sidney R. Katz were reelected to their posts unanimously.

OWI Scotches Propaganda On Strikes

Washington, Dec. 21—The Office of War Information today threw a wet blanket on a lot of reactionary editorial writers and loud-mouthed Congressmen.

Strikes in American industry have reached a five-year low, the Office of War Information reported this week.

"While the number of men employed in industry has risen from a monthly average of 30,545,000 in 1937 to 36,621,000 for the first ten months of 1942, the average number of man days of idleness due to strikes has fallen in that period from 2,369,000 to 397,000," the government agency revealed.

Man-days of idleness during the first 10 months of the year amounted to only 28% of the five-year peacetime average, though monthly employment had jumped 119%.

"The percentage of time lost in war industry strikes since Pearl Harbor has never risen above one-tenth of one percent of the number of man-days worked," it added.

California CIO Asks Probe Of Bungling

Los Angeles, Dec. 19 — Demands for a Congressional investigation of the "war production muddle" in California were raised at a special meeting of the executive board of the state CIO Council here.

Citing failures in steel output, in shipbuilding (despite the much publicized Henry J. Kaiser enterprises), the board proposed a five-point program calling for passage of the Pepper-Tolan war mobilization bill; immediate conferences between CIO and WPB in the state; a stepping up of labor-management-production committees; a widespread education campaign on the nature of the war and the enemy, and the Congressional probe.

Auto Board Hits Foes Of $25,000 Limit

Los Angeles, Dec. 21—More activity in national and local politics was advocated this week by the United Automobile Workers' executive board, which met in this West Coast city for the first time.

Reflecting mounting resentment the UAW board passed a resolution saying it would consider cancelling its no-strike pledge if Congress abrogates or raises the ceiling on President Roosevelt's $25,000 salary limitation order.

Such action by Congress, the UAW leaders said, will be "construed only as Congressional enunciation that there exists no necessity for labor to continue in the sacrifice which it has voluntarily been making in aid of the war effort, and as a Congressional suggestion that such sacrifices be ab[illegible]."

MORE POLITICS

Meanwhile the UAW leaders mapped plans to station permanent representatives in Washington in order to give the union "closer touch" with the government agencies where measures affecting all U. S. workers are being planned.

"In Washington most of the agencies and bureaus which hand down decisions affecting our members are situated," a spokesman for the UAW international executive board pointed out. "And to protect our interests it is necessary that we have representatives in Washington."

Plans are to send more UAW heads into Washington to "concentrate emphasis on the political front," it was said.

In other actions taken, the board concurred in resolutions adopted at the national CIO convention held last month in Boston.

Jersey CIO Shows Need For Economic Planning

NEWARK, Dec. 21—The need for over-all economic planning to streamline the nation's war price and production machinery was voiced at the annual convention of the New Jersey CIO convention last weekend.

Some 1,000 delegates and visitors heard speeches by Council Pres. Irving Abramson and national CIO officials stress the necessity of establishing a central government authority along the lines recommended in the recent report of the Tolan Committee of the House.

Abramson cited three instances of what he described at poor planning. At the Walker-Turner Co. in Plainfield, a bonus system among the 300 workers increased production—but the company was unable to get additional raw materials. Iron ore mines at Dover, he said, are working at 80% of capacity because of large-scale drafting of the men, and the Phoenix Brass Co., Irvington, is working far below capacity because government contracts are going to open shop, low-wage plants in the South.

MANY SPEAKERS

The governor warned of need for increased political activity by labor, pointing out that the last election "proved that isolationism is not dead."

He praised Great Britain's projected social security plan, as outlined in the Beveridge report, adding:

"This war has shown us — or should have shown us—that the productive capacity of this country is so great that there is no reason why each citizen should not have an education, the right to work and the right to protection in old age."

Union Scores On Overtime For 2,000,000

Washington, Dec. 19—A hard-hitting drive by the United Federal Workers of America, which refused to quit when other Government employe representative groups gave up, was given much of the credit here for the "surprise" passage of Federal overtime legislation last week which will put $260,000,000 in the pay envelopes of 2,000,000 U. S. employes.

A delegation of UFWA leaders, headed by Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Nelson, conferred earlier in the overtime pay fight with William McReynolds, one of President Roosevelt's six executive assistants, and impressed on him the necessity of the passage of the legislation to bolster the morale of workers directly tied into the war effort.

ROOSEVELT WRITES

President Roosevelt then wrote to Congress demanding that it act or that it delegate authority to him to act if it felt it did not have time before adjournment. The UFWA delegation had suggested the later course to Mr. McReynolds in their conference.' Once the Roosevelt letter was made public, the CIO Federal Union's Locals throughout the country rallied support for the President's position in every Congressional district. Forty thousand leaflets were distributed on one day in Washington alone.

The overtime pay victory came propitiously as UFWA forces were intensifying their organizational activities around the country.

In Philadelphia, where Organizational Director Darius Kline is heading a UFWA "team," an independent Union of several hundred members—the United Federal Custodial Employees Association, Inc. —swung over to the UFWA after contacting CIO Regional Director George Craig.

FORM COUNCIL

In Chicago, delegates from 14 UFW Locals in 11 cities and 7 states formed the Midwest Regional Council and decided to put on a regional organizer. At the same time, a new citywide Chicago Local, made up principally of men and women transferred from Washington, held its first meeting with Regional Director Fullerton and other CIO executives on hand.

In Washington, an organizing team, possibly unique in Labor history in the varied backgrounds it represents, began a concentration on the Federal Security Administration. On this team are: Mrs. Anne Rossmore, former Chicago Gold Coast debutante long active in UFWA Auxiliary work, whose husband is about to enter the Army; Don Murray, former Hollywood actor and New York stage director; Dan Schwartz, a Ph. D. from the London School of Economics who resigned a Library of Congress post to head the drive, and Marie Richardson, a Negro machinist at the Navy Yard, who long has been active in United Transport Service Employes CIO Auxiliary work.

WE'LL WORK TO WIN

WORD OF WARNING: This government poster — soon to make its appearance in thousands of factories and public buildings—shows graphically what happens when talk of military secrets gets to the enemy.

'Output Soldiers' Win Camden's Praise For Help to War

CAMDEN, N. J., Dec. 24—In Camden, a busy working center that turns out all sorts of war supplies from beans to battleships, the CIO helped to run a week of citywide ceremonies to commemorate Pearl Harbor.

The "Production for Victory Week" was formally directed by the labor-management committees of some of the city's biggest industries along with a dozen labor leaders, aided by the WPB's Labor Production Division.

But the key figures of the celebrations were the workers, and the ships, cans, and military equipment they produce. In fact, the workers took over and Camden's schoolchildren, soldiers and sailors joined in.

When it was all over, Camden found that the pattern of labor and management cooperation was spreading into a group of industries where it hadn't yet been adopted. In these plants there are brand-new labor-management committees.

WAR ON DOORSTEP

This idea was the theme of the "War Plant to Battle Front Pageant" in which 22 workers, most of them members of the CIO Electrical Workers and the Shipbuilders' Union, were the central characters along with the military supplies they create.

"Our No. 1 interest now is not the fellow alongside us or our employer," James Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer declared at the big mass meeting.

"Our No. 1 fight today is to eliminate a boy by the name of Hitler and his stooges, Mussolini and Hirohito.

"Let's see that you have a calling card going out from Camden to that group that contends they are the super-race," Carey pleaded.

Gloria Stuart, motion picture actress, said that Americans "have a new set of Joneses to keep up with now—our British, Chinese and Russian Allies who have sacrificed more than we have."

DELIVER THE GOODS

Throughout the week there were rallies in every one of the town's war plants to carry out the call issued by John Green, president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, at the banquet launching the week's ceremonies.

To 300 key labor and management leaders, and sailors from torpedoed ships, Green declared: "Come hell and high water, you've got to get in there and let your people know they've got to deliver the goods.

"If they don't deliver, there still are some people in this country who will force them to deliver.

"And there's only one way to get this job done. There no longer can be business-as-usual nor unionism-as-usual until this war is won."

Murray Blasts Nazi Massacre of Jews

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—Nazi massacres of the Jews and people of all nationalities in conquered and invaded countries mark the Nazi armies and Gestapo hangmen as "the greatest curse that has ever afflicted mankind," CIO President Philip Murray said in a statement issued today.

Murray declared that labor's answer "to this mass horror now being inflicted on our brothers and sisters in Europe" is to "redouble our pledge of devotion to the cause of complete United Nations victory." He called on the people in Axis countries "to rise and cast out these monstrous beings," who will be "tried and punished with the utmost severity for their crimes."

Full text of the statement follows:

"The civilized world is filled with horror and anger at the slaughter of whole generations and whole peoples now being carried on by order of Adolf Hitler. Europe, and particularly its eastern regions, has been turned into a gigantic shambles by the Nazis, who are daily killing thousands of men, women and children to satisfy an insane bloodlust.

"The conduct of Nazi Germany's armies and Gestapo hangmen in the occupied countries and in the territories they have invaded marks them as the greatest curse that has ever afflicted mankind. No parallels in the history of brutality suffice to describe the massacre of Jews and of human beings of all nationalities where the Nazi war machine has entered.

CALCULATED PLAN

"This brutality is part of a calculated plan, part of the basic program of the Axis to enslave and destroy all peoples. In the organized mass slaughter in Axis held territories, we can see the future that is planned for our own country and our own people should Hitler win.

"In answer to this mass horror now being inflicted on our brothers and sisters in Europe, we pledge in the name of humanity to redouble our work for the utter destruction of Nazism and all its legions of death throughout the Axis.

"We renew our pledge of devotion to the cause of complete United Nations victory. We reaffirm our pledge of unity with the workers and the plain people of all nations, including the occupied nations, in the common struggle for freedom and for life itself.

RECKONING DAY APPROACHES

"We join with the leaders of all the United Nations in telling the Axis murderers that they will be tried and punished with the utmost severity for their crimes, and we appeal to the people of Germany and of all Axis countries to rise and cast out these monstrous beings for the sake of their own future.

"We make this statement in the full knowledge that it reflects the thought and feeling of millions of our fellow workers in America and of all decent people everywhere."

John Bartek, Pacific Hero, Is CIO'er

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24.— Pvt. John Bartek, who was rescued from almost certain death in the mid-Pacific along with Captain Rickenbacker, is a CIO member.

In civilian life Bartek lived and worked at Freehold, N. J., and belonged to Local 26 of the Textile Workers Union of America.

He was one of the crew of the Flying Fortress which was lost in Pacific waters last October. When the plane made an emergency landing, Rickenbacker, Col. Hans Adamson and Bartek got into one of the rafts, with other crew members using the remaining emergency apparatus.

LIVED ON ORANGES

"We were all so anxious to get away we didn't pay much attention to rations," Rickenbacker told newspapermen when he returned, fully recovered, to the nation's capital. "For food, we had four oranges which we lived on for eight days. I carved them up into eight pieces and rationed them out."

Rickenbacker recalled that for eight days and eight nights they saw nothing but the ocean swells and an occasional gull—one of which they caught and ate.

"The little boy"—as Rickenbacker referred to young Bartek—"had an issue Bible and we organized prayer meetings. Frankly and humbly we prayed for deliverance."

It wasn't until the 21st day that searching Navy planes found the party. One of them landed on the rough sea, and Col. Adamson—who was gravely ill—was placed in the cockpit. Rickenbacker and Bartek were tied to the small plane's wings and the machine taxied 40 miles to the nearest island.

Arbitration Group Names McDonald

New York, Dec. 24—David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers, CIO, has been elected to the Board of Directors of the American Arbitration Association, it was announced by Lucius R. Eastman, chairman of the Board of the Association. Commenting on the election of the prominent labor leader to the Board, Mr. Eastman stated:

"The voluntary arbitration machinery of the American Arbitration Association has become an integral part of the war production machinery of the nation.

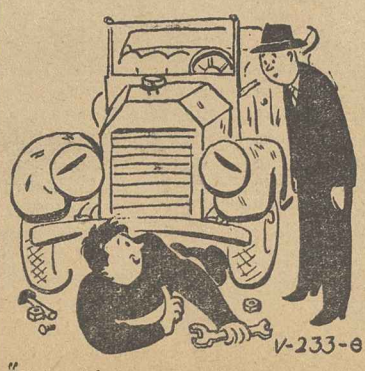
"Labor and management are referring their grievances to voluntary arbitration in order that there may be no interruption in war production."

Legislative Parley in N. Y.

New York, Dec. 24—The powerful New York State CIO Council this week called a special one-day legislative conference to map labor's program in the Empire State.

Sec.-Treas. Harold J. Garno said the meeting would be held at the Hotel DeWitt Clinton in Albany on January 16.

"The recent state elections and the war effort have brought in their wake a multitude of problems affecting labor," he noted. "Housing, health insurance, unemployment insurance, workmen's compensation—in fact every aspect of our social and labor legislation must be re-examined in the light of our war effort."



"This old hack is like a street car... there won't be another along in a minute."

15 Years Old, Kid Seaman Fights Axis

The broadcast was arranged by the CIO Natl. Maritime Union for its youngest member—15-year-old Fulton McKellican—who has been sailing in sub-infected waters for a full year.

The youngest of seven children, Fulton worked in the Scottish mines before he finally shipped out on a Norwegian vessel last Christmas Eve as a messboy. When Fulton landed in New York recently, he headed straight for NMU headquarters and joined its Pan-American Division.

Fulton told reporters that he shipped out because he wants to help smack the Axis and he wants to see the world. He's looking forward now to going wherever the NMU sends him.

Plenty of Scrap

Brooklyn, N. Y. (FP)—Scrap sufficient to make steel for construction of one battleship, one heavy cruiser, one repair ship and eight destroyers was collected by members of the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers in the Greater New York yards of Todd Shipyards Corp.

Auto Union Members Get Medical Institute

DETROIT, Dec. 24—A Medical Research Institute, aimed at protecting and improving the health of members of the CIO United Automobile Workers, will be opened on January 4, it was announced today by UAW Sec.-Treas. George Addes.

Addes, who heads the union's medical-research, health and accident department, said the new center will occupy the entire first floor of the union's former headquarters at 281 W. Grand Boulevard, in this city, and will be available to all UAW-CIO members.

Dr. James Davis professor emeritus of Wayne University has been appointed director of the institute and other doctors of national reputation have agreed to serve as consultants and on an Advisory Medical Council. A full-time medical examiner has been placed on the payroll and a number of specialists have been retained for diagnosing skin, eye and other ailments.

WINS WIDE PRAISE

"The institute will commence operations primarily as a diagnostic service available to the membership of the UAW-CIO. Local unions are asked to affiliate with the institute by making small monthly per capita tax payments. To individual members of these local unions the services will be free of charge, and the membership of those locals who have not affiliated, a nominal fee will be charged," the UAW stated.

Addes, in announcing the opening, said "that various federal departments, the Detroit commissioner of health, Dr. Bruce Douglas, and the State Department of Labor and Industry had all cooperated fully in making the establishment of the institute possible."

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Under-Secretary of War Robert Patterson, Wendell Lund of the Labor Production Division of the War Production Board and others have all expressed themselves as extremely pleased with the program and have volunteered every possible assistance.

MAJOR IMPORTANCE

Protecting the health of the production worker is of vital importance at all times and especially so today. The international union believes that in establishing this institute they will be making a big step forward in protecting the health of the membership.

From a humanitarian viewpont, the benefits of such a step are obvious and from an economic standpoint the increase in the average working life resulting from a general improvement in health will provide dividends many times in excess of the cost.

If the nation's 27 million motorists cut their 1943 driving to the figure recommended—5000 miles—they will save more than 17 million tires, according to estimates.

Office Union Picks Fair Sex For Key Posts

New York, Dec. 24—New York's big white collar union went all-women in its annual elections this week.

Local 16 of the United Office & Professional Workers filled its five major offices with fair-sex members from commercial, direct-mail and social and fraternal firms.

Esther Adler, named president of the local, said "all of us are united in our determination to do a job for victory on a win-the-war platform which the union's membership backs 100 per cent." She pointed out that three Negroes were among those elected to union posts.

During the past year the union—whose membership is 90 per cent women—has been active on a number of war activity drives.

More than $200,000 in war bonds has been purchased since March; labor-management committees are in operation; an official CDVO center has been established by the union of white collar girls; and a Steno Canteen for servicemen is extremely popular and has entertained hundreds of servicemen.

Kaiser Lab Technicians Vote CIO, 5-1

Berkeley, Calif., Dec. 26—Workers at the Permanente Magnesium Laboratory, a Henry J. Kaiser outfit, delivered a sharp answer to collusive contracts between Kaiser and the AFL when they voted five to one for CIO's Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians.

"This sweeping CIO victory signifies a repudiation of Kaiser's collusive contracts with AFL craft unions," FAECT Vice-President Marcel Scherer said.

"The withdrawal of the AFL from the Labor Relations Board ballot is a further confession of the fact that the collusive contract was never authorized by the workers at the Permanente Laboratories.

"It is also a mandate to Kaiser to stop the bombastic ballyhoo and accept the offer of the workers to help correct wasteful mismanagement and increase production. This should be done at once through the medium of joint labor-management committees."

Leather Union Wins Major Poll

New York, Dec. 24—CIO has cracked an anti-union tradition of a generation's standing in a Labor Board election at the Endicott-Johnson Tanneries in Endicott, N. Y., long known for paternalism and company domination.

The vote, 1037 to 951 for the Intl. Fur and Leather Works, brings the tannery division of the nation's second largest shoe and leather company into the CIO.

The daily cost to France of German occupation would build 2500 modern workmen's homes.

Rhode Island CIO Calls For Quick Victory

Providence, R. I., Dec. 24—Labor's big job is winning the war through pressing for total mobilization and overall planning, delegates to the 5th convention of the Rhode Island CIO Council said in the major resolutions of the meeting here.

The convention also urged greater labor participation in all war agencies, demanded full use of available manpower, including women and Negroes, and establishment of a central war mobilization office.

On the international front, the delegates urged full and direct cooperation between trade unions of the U.S., Britain, the Soviet Union and all the United Nations, asked Pres. Roosevelt to aid in securing a national government for India to bring that country's millions fully into the war, and pointed out that both were necessary pre-conditions for a just and democratic peace, as well as victory in the war.

RE-ELECT BENTI

Frank Benti, Albert G. Clifton and Ann Marsoli were re-elected president, vice-president and secretary. Speaking at the convention, R. I. Governor McGrath praised Benti, saying: "I have no fear for industrial relations in Rhode Island with men like Frank Benti leading labor."

Other featured speakers included George Baldanzi, vice-president of the Textile Workers, Hugh Brown, Marine and Shipbuilding Workers, and State Labor Director Wm. L. Connolly.

Church Paper Nails Slanders About Labor, Lauds CIO Parley

During this holiday season, it is particularly interesting to note the impressions created by the CIO's convention in Boston on a prominent religious writer—Dr. Lewis O. Hartman, head of the Associated Church Press and editor of Zion's Herald, an independent Methodist weekly.

Dr. Hartman's article will prove gratifying to all CIO members.

Also reprinted here is a message from Pres. Philip Murray which appeared in the same issue of Zion's Herald, in which the CIO leader calls for greater understanding of organized labor by the churches of the nation.

By DR. LEWIS O. HARTMAN

Editor, Zion's Herald

No "big, bad wolf" of a man is Philip Murray, the forceful president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, which met recently for its national convention at the Hotel Statler in Boston. As Mr. Murray presided at its various sessions he impressed one as a leader of keen intelligence, or broad abilities, of honesty and directness.

Owing to the influence of much sinister propaganda and many downright falsifications emanating from certain privileged groups in America, the CIO has come to symbolize for many well-meaning Christian people something exceedingly dangerous to the cause of democracy and Christianity. A picture has thus been created in our minds which is entirely false.

True Americans

Philip Murray is not a big, bad wolf, but a very attractive human being deeply interested in the welfare of labor and the future of his country. Nor is his organization a group of anarchists and Communists bent on the destruction of church and state. In closing his report to the Congress, in which he reviewed the work of the year, Mr. Murray said, "It seems to me most fitting to close this report by thanking a Divine Providence for the freedom under which labor organizations are able to meet in this great nation." That sentence, with a slight change or two, might well have been a quotation from the conclusion of a bishop's report to his church.

From Cardinal O'Connell of the Roman Catholic Church and from Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the Methodist Church came messages of greeting and welcome to the convention.

There were in the convention 328 delegates (Based evidently on first partial report of credentials committee. Later reports raised total of delegates to nearly 500.—Ed.) representing 38 national and international unions and organizing committees and one coordinating committee, 28 state industrial union councils, 46 city and county industrial union councils, and 54 local industrial unions.

The delegates represented a good cross-section of American life. They were earnest, alert, responsive. Those who gained the microphone made excellent speeches—logical, impressive and in some instances eloquent. The spirit of the convention likewise was good. Here were white men and Negroes, Roman Catholics, Protestants and Jews, labor leaders and humble toilers in steel, in textiles, in the automotive and other industries.

A number of women also were seated in the convention. Sidney Hillman, Harry Bridges and other notables were there. On the platform sat the leaders of the labor movement, by no means qualifying for the role of the wicked bosses demanded by the picture in our minds. All these men and women were brothers and sisters not in name only, but in fact, as was illustrated again and again on various occasions and in numerous situations.

Informative Talks

Space does not permit a report of the proceedings of the convention, though the speeches, the debates and the actions taken were exceedingly interesting and informing. An account of some eye-witness impressions of this fifth constitutional convention of the CIO in session in Boston may, however, serve to clear the minds of many ministers and laymen of prejudices against the organization and misconceptions of its work.

Manifestly, in the great hall of the Statler there was a living illlustration of brotherhood in action. It was each for all and all for each. There was no discrimination, no class lines, no spirit of condescension.

Does the average American realize how closely bound together are the toilers of this country? If one is hurt, all are hurt; if one succeeds, all succeeds. Collective bargaining is a symbol of this solidarity.

The members of the organization are on fire for a cause. They are not a decadent group. They have goals and they are willing to sacrifice to the limit to reach them. The laborers of America are striving for fair play, for justice, for decent living, for proper respect for human personality, for democracy, for the welfare of their native land.

This "do or die" spirit is needed everywhere in this nation. It is needed even in the churches.

"Human welfare"—these two words might well be set up as the motto of the CIO, for during the recent sessions this note was sounded almost incessantly. Some of the subjects dealt with had to do with civil liberties—the Dies Committee and the Harry Bridges deportation case, for example.

There were resolutions on agriculture and the war, on a war program for federal workers, on compensations for death or injury of civilian workers, on the recent elections, on grievances of transport workers, on the rights of New York City employes to organize, on total war mobilization, and many other kindred subjects, all touching on the rights of men and women to freedom, security, fair treatment and decent living.

Patriotic Body

The CIO convention was a patriotic body. When, on Armistice Day, Senator Claude Pepper of Florida made his stirring and highly illuminating address on the war effort, uncovering mistakes and abuses, and indicating legislative needs to remedy bad situations, he provoked loud applause again and again.

In the course of a debate Thursday on a patriotic resolution, one leader declared, "We pledge our all—our very lives—to our Commander-in-Chief, and we mean just what we say." Again and again the delegates were exhorted not to countenance strikes during the war, but to speed up production.

There was never a wavering note in the all-out patriotism of the CIO.

A Message to the Churches

By PHILIP MURRAY

If, instead of being swayed by the things many anti-union elements say about the CIO, we seek to understand the fundamental principles of this great American labor organization, I am sure that the Christian churches of this country will find much in common between the CIO and their own splendid endeavors.

The CIO was born out of the necessity of bringing to the millions and millions in industry the benefits of unionism and collective bargaining. Its philosophy runs simply to this fundamental need: to improve the status of the family life, thereby of necessity improving the status of this nation. Certainly no right-thinking person can find fault with that.

Members of the CIO comprise a cross-section of the people—all primarily concerned with the things which concern every other section of our population. We are neither all saints nor all sinners. We are just about the same as other people.

I believe the Christian churches of this nation owe it to themselves and to their mission in life to study the CIO impartially and without passion. In many sections of the country we have had splendid support in our endeavors from both Protestant and Catholic churches after they once understood what we were trying to do.

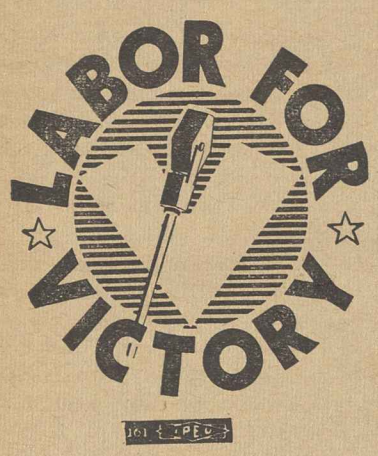
The CIO sincerely wants to be understood. Labor has no grudges against the church. Labor simply wants the church to understand what its unions are trying to achieve; how unions are absolutely necessary in this great democracy, which, pray God, will be preserved.

The church can be of inestimable value to its members, millions of whom are CIO members, if it will just try to understand this movement. This understanding will beget fraternalism.

In a spiritual way the church is bringing to its members the wisdom, the teachings, the comfort of a Divine Providence. In a material way the CIO is seeking to bring to its members—to the family—a little more of the good things of life which God in His infinite wisdom has decreed men should have.

Labor's Victory Show

CIO Broadcast Sunday Afternoons At 1:15 EWT



TUNE IN

Every other Sunday, at 1:15 p.m., EWT, on the NBC Red Network, for CIO's own victory radio program. These programs tell you first hand what CIO unions and CIO nationally are doing to push win-the-war plans and campaigns, what's cooking in Washington, and what's going on in CIO organizing drives.

Next Sunday, Dec. 27, the Textile Workers Union of America will put on a show telling of their work for victory and freedom. Later programs are January 10 and 24, February 7 and 21, 1943.

REMEMBER—Sundays at 1:15 p.m. EWT—CIO's Victory Program

TUNE IN FOR A REAL 'V' SHOW!

Textile Union's War Role Cited On CIO Broadcast

WASHINGTON, Dec. 26—With this Sunday's show, CIO's Labor for Victory—twice-monthly radio pragram—marks up the 19th consecutive program in the series devoted to labor's part in the win-the-war drive.

The show started back in April, with a program featuring CIO Pres. Philip Murray, two CIO workers from aircraft plants and two members of the U. S. Army Air Force. They told their listeners the dramatic story of the relation between the smallest part of a bomber and the bomber's job in dumping its load on Tokyo.

From that program has followed the series, dealing with the U. S. seamen of the Natl. Maritime Union, with the war work of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, the Steelworkers, the Office and Professional Workers, the Rubber Workers—a roster of basic war production unions in the CIO.

This Sunday's show, broadcast over the NBC Red network at 1:15 p.m., EWT, deals with the Textile Workers Union, CIO, and what the hundreds of thousands of members are doing for United Nations' Victory.

In addition to dealing with the basic CIO unions, the program has branched out to describe the role of women workers in the war, has dramatized the tax problem, has dealt with our unions in their relations with Latin-American workers has brought direct news from the fifth CIO convention last November; for future shows plan to deal with price control and rationing, legislation and other timely subjects.

WIDE RESPONSE

The program has won a wide response throughout the country. Hundreds of letters and questions have come in, not only from workers but from plain people who welcome the chance to hear programs more to the point than the dreary soap operas poured out in endless torrents, programs that cut through the lies and distortions of a Hans von Kaltenborn or others among the shoals of anti-labor, and anti-victory commentators.

Labor for Victory is labor's own radio program, written and offered by CIO for workers and all people who want the facts on what labor is doing to win-the-war, on what labor knows is needed for victory.

Listen in—Sundays at 1:15 p.m., EWT, NBC Red network. Next show, Dec. 27, on the Textile Workers Union. Next dates: Jan. 10 and 24, Feb. 7 and 21, 1943.

Firm's Stall On War Bond Under Fire

Charlotte, N. C., Dec. 24—A charge that a Lucky Strike subsidiary corporation isn't cooperating on letting employes' greenbacks go to war, was voiced today by the Mecklenburg Industrial Union Council, CIO.

The council sent a letter to Sec. of the Treas. Henry Morgenthau asserting that the Golden Belt Manufacturing Co., subsidiary of the American Tobacco Co., "has absolutely refused to make payroll deductions in accordance with the desires of its employes, and thus allow its employes to purchase War Bonds as millions of other workers are privileged to do."

The letter, signed by Council Pres. James H. Fullerton, pointed out that the Textile Workers Union, CIO, which is under contract with the firm, has made every possible effort to get the company's cooperation on regular payroll deductions for bonds.

"We are amazed and shocked" at the company's attitude, he wrote, particularly since American Tobacco spends considerable radio time to urge purchase of war bonds.

Message of Hope:

CIO Xmas Victory Pledge Broadcast To All World

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 — "Heartfelt hope and determination" that the coming year will bring victory to the United Nations was voiced by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in Christmas week shortwave radio broadcasts beamed to the people of the world.

American labor fights, Murray said, "for a United Nations' victory that will destroy the hideous fascist doctrine of racial and class oppression, and will guarantee to all peoples freedom, self-determination and the opportunity for economic and democratic progress."

Taking special note of Hitler's particularly barbaric mass murder of the Jews, Murray added: "Our hearts go out particularly to the Jewish people, upon whom have been visited the most diabolical persecutions."

TEXT OF ADDRESS

Text of the CIO president's address:

On this Christmas Day, the five million members of the Congress of Industrial Organizations send their warm brotherly greetings to all the freedom-loving peoples of the world, and particularly to their fellow-workers both in the United States and in the countries groaning under the yoke of Axis oppression.

This day on which the Prince of Peace was born turns our minds to His message of "peace on earth, goodwill to men," and to the human brotherhood which should bind together all races and all nationalities.

It spurs us to ever greater determination to end once and for all the bloodthirsty tyrannies of Hitler and his partners, which have turned man against man, nation against nation and race against race.

Our hearts go out particularly to the Jewish people upon whom have been visited the most diabolical persecutions, and who are now threatened with a cold-blooded campaign of virtual extermination in Hitler-dominated countries.

American labor is dedicating all its efforts to the winning of this war, not for any purposes of national aggrandizement, but because it realizes that all the liberties it cherishes will perish unless the military power of Axis fascism is crushed.

HIDEOUS DOCTRINES

Because American labor knows the world cannot long remain half slave and half free, it fights for a United Nations' victory that will destroy the hideous fascist doctrines of racial and class oppression, and will guarantee to all peoples freedom, self-determination, and the opportunity for economic and democratic progress

In the United States, labor has voluntarily relinquished its right to many holidays during the past year, in order that there might not be even a moment's pause in the steady stream of our war production. This Christmas Day has been made the one exception by our government and by ourselves —the one day on which we may rest and re-dedicate ourselves to the cause of peace and human brotherhood which we associate with this day.

On behalf of all the millions of American working men and women associated together in the CIO, I am therefore happy to take this Christmas opportunity to express to all the working and common people of the world our most fervent solidarity in the common cause of freedom, and our heartfelt hope and determination that the coming year shall bring victory to the United Nations and the beginning of a new era of world peace and goodwill to men.

Charge WSA Reneges On Marine Pact

New York, Dec. 26—The War Shipping Administration "has permitted a dangerous situation to arise which may affect the flow of supplies to our fighting forces," Joseph Curran, president of the Ntl. Maritime Union, said this week.

This situation is due to WSA's reneging on an agreement with the NMU signed last May, Curran said, whereby all existing NMU contracts were to be kept in force. Now, in violation of this pledge, the WSA is handing over ships of three lines, Luckenbach, Moore-McCormick and Grace, to outside unions, despite the fact that the NMU has had contracts with the three companies for several years.

At the same time, the WSA is favoring the Sailors Union of the Pacific, which threatened to picket the ships if NMU crews went aboard. According to Curran, the WSA immediately yielded to this threat and threw the NMU men off the ships.

"The NMU reaffirms its no-strike policy and refuses to be provoked into an anti-war action, even by a government agency," Curran said.

Union Offers Speed-Up Plan For WLB Cases

New York, Dec. 24—A full program for stepping-up the work of the War Labor Board to make it funtion effectively in war production was drawn up by the General Executive Board of the CIO Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, meeting here this week.

"Labor dispute cases certified to the Board far outnumber the disputes settled by it," the resolution said. "The backlog of unsettled disputes is mounting each week. The period of time necessary for the final disposition of disputes before the Board has increased to a degree which constitutes a menace to the maintenance of the morale of workers."

UE PROGRAM

The UE program to end this confusion and delay calls for immediate Board jurisdiction of cases to avoid certification delays, for fuller use of the U.S. Conciliation Service employes who should become Board agents, for immediate assignment of necessary mediation officers, panels, etc.

In addition, the resolution calls for setting up a three party commission to consider all disputes in the UE's industries, with full power to settle cases subject to Board reviews; for quick consideration of cases involving union security and establishment of grievance machinery.

The UE also recommended general Board orders setting policy on retroactive wage adjustments, standard arbitration clauses, authority to act for regional Board representatives, and the calling of regional and industry-wide wage stabilization conferences.

Ford Workers Win Million Bonus in Canada

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 24.—Fourteen thousand Canadian Ford workers won a $1,000,000 cost of living bonus this week, climaxing a struggle by Local 200, UAW-CIO, largest local in the Dominion, since last February.

The bonus, retroactive to last August, will be $1.85 weekly. The retroactive payment will total $22. Local 240, UAW-CIO, and foremen, Office workers, now organized in will receive the bonus for the first time.

CIO and Manpower

It realizes that this is not a separate problem that can be handled by itself by one agency, but is an integral part of the total national war mobilization necessary for victory.

The CIO convention therefore called for a nationwide planning and utilization of all material and manpower resources under a centralized administrative control, covering all resources and economic policies.

The President's recent executive order extending the powers and jurisdiction of Chairman Paul McNutt of the War Manpower Commission is recognized as a step in the right direction, and President Philip Murray has hastened to pledge the full cooperation of the CIO.

At the same time, the CIO President, in his recent letter to McNutt, advances detailed and constructive proposals for achieving full manpower mobilization, with proper protection for the rights and interests of the working people.

Murray points out that "total mobilization cannot be restricted to manpower but must embrace mobilization of material resources as well." He declares that under the new executive order McNutt has both the authority and the responsibility to effect "a complete correlation of the activities of those agencies which have jurisdiction over procurement, the issuance of contracts and disposition of raw materials with those of the Manpower Commission."

Murray insists that employers be compelled to accept all available manpower, without job discrimination against Negroes, women or any racial groups. Along with equality of opportunity for all workers must go the basic principle of equal pay for equal work.

The CIO proposes detailed safeguards for workers' rights and living standards, and for industrial efficiency, when restrictions have to be placed on the right to leave work in critical war plants or areas; or when transfers have to be made to plants where a manpower shortage arises.

The Selective Service Division has now been made a part of the Manpower Commission, to assure better coordination. Murray therefore urges upon McNutt that labor should have a voice in determining which men should be drafted from war plants or left at work, through the labor-management production committees — instead of leaving this matter entirely to management, as at present.

Murray also calls for expansion of the U. S. Employment Service and the fullest labor participation in all phases of its activity; and for the establishment of national minimum standards for unemployment compensation, to protect workers from differences in state laws when they may transfer from state to state on war jobs.

Any study of the CIO manpower proposals will reveal their patriotic goal of total war mobilization, with labor safeguards that will assure the maximum efficiency and morale in war production.

Hitlers' Beanstalk

Jack's experience with the little seed that grew over-night into a huge beanstalk inhabited by a ferocious ogre, has its parallel in Europe's experience with the little seeds of anti-Semitism.

Hitler found these seeds among the German people—little lies about the Jews, snide remarks, job discriminations, ignorant racial prejudices.

He planted these seeds in the manure of national frustration and economic depression. He watered them with the bloodshed caused by his thugs, and with a golden stream from the labor-fearing rich.

And lo and behold! From these small seeds grew the mighty beanstalk from which he now casts his hideous shadow over the whole world.

Hitler's Jew-baiting propaganda has now borne fruit in wholesale slaughter of helpless Jews in Eastern Europe and in a systematic and cold-blooded campaign for the elimination of this persecuted race.

While we join in the horror of the whole civilized world at Hitler's atrocities, and pledge ourselves to crush the monstrous system that created them, let us also give thought to destroying at once the seeds of anti-Semitism and race discrimination which Hitleristic elements seek to nourish in American soil.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

'Twas the night before Christmas, and Santa Claus, Popeye and Superman were comparing notes.

"You're a big, fat phoney," said Popeye to Santa. "Makin' people think they get somethin' for nothin'. Lot of mush, I calls it. What use are you in a war like this?

"Take me. A coupla shots of spinach and I'd clean up Hitler before you could comb your beard."

"Not so fast, my son," said Santa Claus. "If this weren't Christmas Eve, I could almost call you a fifth columnist.

"You make people think they don't have to work and train and strain to win this war—but just let things go till the last minute, and then some magic formula will help them lick the Axis with one hand tied behind their backs."

Superman shot through the air with effortless superiority, taking care to stop before he hit the wall, lest he crash right through.

"Quit beefing, old-timers," he said. "You both belong to the past. I'm the man of the future. I'm the streamlined America that's going to zoom through to Berlin and Tokyo in no time at all and knock Hitler's and Hirohito's heads together. And I won't need any spinach to do it."

★ ★ ★

The front door opened. Santa Claus popped up the chimney. Superman darted to his place in the top of the Christmas stocking. Popeye couldn't move so fast; he just lay on the floor as if fallen from the mantelpiece.

Joe Smith and his missus came in and flopped down on the couch dog-tired.

"Wish I could believe in that kid stuff," said Joe, looking toward the fireplace. "Little Johnny thinks his brother's Superman because he's in the Air Corps. To hear him talk, you'd think the war'll be over as soon as big brother gets to fly to Berlin and drop a bomb on Hitler."

"It isn't only the kids," put in Mrs. Smith. "You know that America First dame? I ran into her today at the store, squawking away because gas rationing makes her walk off some of her fat—blaming OPA because she can't get coffee—and kicking all the time about taxes.

"You know what her line is? That the war's as good as won, and the government's just exaggerating difficulties to cover up its bungling and slip over socialism. That's her alibi for not doing anything herself, and just waiting till Santa Claus or someone brings victory all wrapped up with a nice pink ribbon."

★ ★ ★

"Well, that's not what I hear at the CIO hall, and it isn't what the fellows hear from their boys at the front," said Joe. "They all know we're up against the toughest set-up there ever was, and we've just got to make ourselves tougher than the Axis to win.

"Total mobilization—that's what the CIO is after. It means more union organization for more production—and every single American doing his part, with no barring of Negroes or women from jobs.

"It means all our resources and factories and manpower have got to be organized under one central plan and for one single purpose—winning this war.

"We've got to ration everything—not only gas and coffee—so everyone can have their fair share, according to their needs and their usefulness. That means the armed forces first, and war workers and families with kids. Then dudes and dames who do nothing but squawk can get what's left.

"Then there's got to be real price control on all necessities—and more taxes and savings to raise more money for the war, and to stop inflation. And the taxes must make those who have most pay most, and leave war workers with enough for a healthy living."

"That's quite a speech you made for yourself, Joe," said the missus. "But the CIO's got the right dope. And now let's get to bed."

★ ★ ★

"Didja hear that?" said Popeye. "Total mobinglivashun. That's my meat. I'm goin' to sea with the NMU boys, and quit kiddin' the public. And you, Superman, oughta do your streamlinin' in an airplane plant. And as for your reindeer, Santa . . ."

But Santa was off with this parting shot: "I never gave a present yet that someone didn't work to make. And that goes for the Christmas promise of human brotherhood and peace. I'll tell the world it's going to take the united effort of all labor and all the freedom-loving peoples to bring that down their chimneys."

Federal Union Seeks Joint Action With AFL

WASHINGTON — Acting immediately after the smashing legislative victory which brought overtime pay to 2,000,000 Government employes, the United Federal Workers of America (CIO) has proposed to four AFL unions representing Government workers a conference to discuss a joint CIO-AFL program to obtain from the next Congress pay and working conditions equal to those found necessary for the highest war production in private industry.

First move for joint action was made in a letter from UFWA Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Nelson after East Coast members of the union's Executive Board instructed her to ask the leaders of the four AFL unions whether they "would consider it desirable to arrange a conference of AFL and CIO unions of Federal workers to discuss a joint legislative program for Government workers during the next session of Congress."

CITES RECENT EVENTS

Writing to the American Federation of Government Employes, the National Federation of Post Office Clerks, the National Association of Letter Carriers and the International Association of Machinists, Miss Nelson said in part:

"I think events of recent months have convinced all of us of the imperative need of joint action on the part of unions of Government workers to secure the adoption by Congress of a policy of recognition of Federal workers as American workers and extending to them the sound standards found necessary for war production in private industry.

SUPPORTED ALL OTHERS

"We ourselves, as I think the record will show, have at all times consistently supported the requests of unions representing workers other than those among our members in Government. We believe, however, that much time could be saved, and much better representation in the interests of Federal workers could be obtained, if the AFL and CIO unions agreed on a joint program for the next session of Congress and ironed out any difficulties immediately, so that the full force of the Labor Movement could be brought into support of the position of Federal employes.

"It is our belief that the extension to Government of sound working conditions is not only a matter of vital concern to Federal employes but to the entire Labor Movement. Today, Federal workers number some two and one-half million people, a vast section of the working population. Standards established by Government must affect the standards in private industry, and we believe every effort must be made to bring up the standards in Government at once."

FIVE-POINT PROGRAM

The same Executive Board meeting which moved for joint action adopted this five-point program for the UFWA as it looked forward to the new Congress:

(1) Time and one-half overtime pay.

(2) Adjustment of wages in line with the Little Steel formula.

(3) Establishment in Government of a full Labor-management production committee, with recognition that such a program must depend on bona fide Unions.

(4) Recognition of Federal employe Unions throughout all Government agencies and setting up of machinery for quick settlement of grievances to speed war work.

(5) Promotion of the full UFWA Victory Plan, cardinal points of which were expressed and approved in the Federal Worker resolution passed by the Boston CIO convention.

Find Co-ops Booming

Washington, Dec. 24—Consumers cooperatives throughout the nation have increased their volume of sales by 90 per cent since 1936, the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics reported this week after its first study of the subject in six years.

Retail and service co-op establishments have a membership of more than a million and a half, the government agency found, and do a business of $365,000,000 per year. Co-op wholesales account for an additional $100,000,000.

Packing Union Sweeps Two Canada Polls

Toronto, Dec. 24.—Overthrowing company unions which had been in operation a year, workers in two packing plants here voted decisively for the Packinghouse Workers' Organizing Committee this week.

The vote at Canada Packers was 1,090 for PWOC and 502 for a company union; at Swift Canadian, 587 for PWOC and 119 against. Canada Packers workers voted for the company union a year ago and learned their lesson. Both companies are under the same management.

At Windsor a vote held among 1,006 workers of Canadian Motor Lamp was protested by the UAW before the polls opened after charges of bribery against the company and flagrant violation of a joint agreement not to electioneer. The labor department is withholding the result pending investigation.

Here's Booklet To Keep Track Of Prices

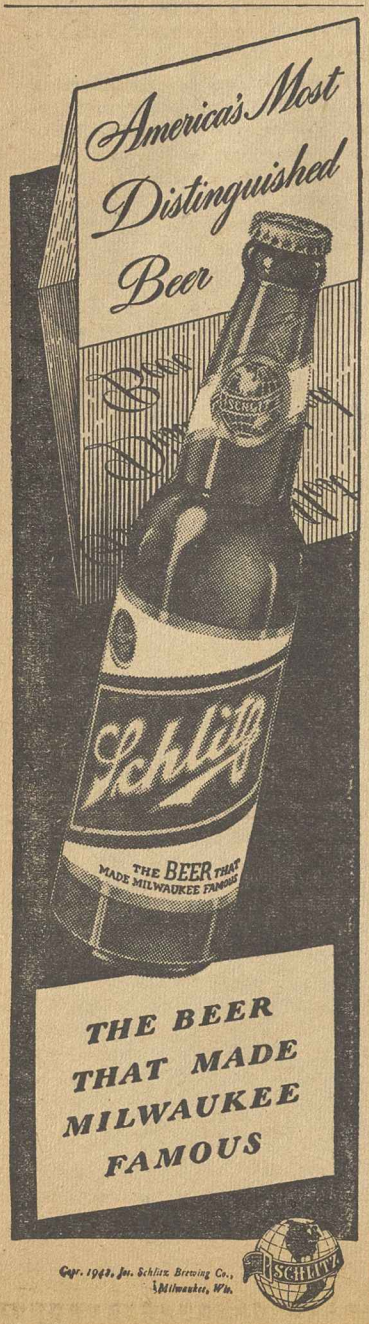
New York, Dec. 24 (FP)—A price record booklet, My Wartime Price Diary, was released Dec. 18 by the League of Women Shoppers Inc., 1133 Broadway, New York. It is available for distribution by branch leagues, clubs, consumer centers, unions and other organizations.

This booklet is based in part on the one issued by the Canadian government for use in price checking. Its foreword explains price ceilings and how to use the booklet.

Blank pages, with appropriate headings for listing ceiling prices of the shopper's own purchases, fill the body of the book.

When properly filled out the book will give the housewife a record in black and white of price ceilings of day-to-day purchases. As she repeats these purchases in the same store, she can check back to be sure the proper ceiling prices are being asked.

A 92-year-old citizen of Minonk, Ill., rolled up his sleeves and got in 17,000 pounds of scrap for the local scrap drive.



Your cooperation in demanding the Union Label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has demonstrated once more the effectivness of organized labor's purchasing power. There are still a few open-shoppers left in the men's and boys' clothing industry who deny their workers the basic right of organization. Each demand for the Amalgamated Union Label is one more blow against all anti-labor employers. Always ask for the Amalgamated Union Label on all men's and boys' wearing apparel that you buy.

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS OF AMERICA

BY ELEANOR FOWLER

CIO Womens' Auxiliaries

An early victory and a people's peace is the theme of the holiday message of Pres. Faye Stephenson of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO. The message reads:

"A common bond unites the women of America with the women of all the Allied nations this Christmas, a determination to do all in our power to win an early victory over the axis, and peace and freedom for all the people.

"Thousands of our CIO auxiliary women, like women in all parts of the world have anxious hearts this Christmas, wondering whether their husbands, sons and brothers in the armed forces and the merchant marine are safe and well.

"To them we say, sisters, we are proud of your men and we are proud of you. Your work on the home front is essential to the success of their work on the battle front. We pledge to work with you tirelessly to speed the day of Victory.

MAKE OUR PLEDGE

"We in the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO make that same pledge to our CIO unions. We pledge to serve in our communities as victory aides, as price wardens, as child care volunteers, and in any other needed capacity; to take our places on the assembly line as we are called upon; and above all to build and strengthen our unions and our auxiliaries which are the guarantee of a people's Victory and a people's peace. We urge all women in CIO homes to join with us in carrying out this pledge."

GREETINGS TO ALLIES

"Russian War Relief—Used Clothing Campaign — December 16-30. This is our first official opportunity to tip our hats to the courageous Russian Armies and the gallant Russian men, women and children back of the lines who are passing them the ammunition and guns."

This is the headline of a half page ad in the Torrington, Connecticut Register of December 15. It is signed among others by the Mayor, the Town Clerk, the Congregational Minister, the Superintendent of Schools, the Postmaster, three leading Catholic laymen, the president of the CIO Council and Helen Lanko, President of the Torrington Brass Workers' Ladies Auxiliary.

CLOTHING BINS

Bins for clothing have been set up outside six of the principal stores and the auxiliary room in the new union headquarters is piled "as high as any mountain," Helen writes. "People just go into the stores, buy brand new stuff and drop it into the bins on their way out," she says. The auxiliary volunteered to do all the sorting and packing but they may have to accept the offer of Bundles for Britain and the IWO to help if the response continues to be so enthusiastic.

Washington, D. C., residents are also anxious to give to Russian War Relief, judging by the experience of Local 203 of the United Federal Workers and their auxiliary. They gave a party last Saturday night and cleared over $200. They give some of the credit to the wonderful collection speech of Anne Rossmore—former president of the Auxiliary, now a national organizer for the United Federal Workers of America.

The San Pedro NMU Auxiliary has been doing its part towards Christmas cheer for our Allies by acting as hostesses at the British Seamen's Club, Raye Rubin writes. They are proud of their letter of thanks from the British consulate in Los Angeles.

Now the girls are busy preparing for a Christmas party in their own union hall to which all sailors on shore in San Pedro are invited.

Farm Union Offers 'Food Victory' Plan

Washington, Dec. 24—A three-year national plan to end war-time food shortages and enable the U.S. to meet food needs of the liberated nations at the war's end was proposed by the Natl. Farmers Union this week.

"Our food shortages are man-made and can be un-made by man whenever the American people make up their minds to end them," NFU Pres. James G. Patton said at the close of a two day council meeting here.

The Farmers Union, progressive organization of working farmers opposed to the big-money "farm bloc" said that shortages could have been prevented a year ago, if it hadn't been for the wrecking job the farm bloc in Congress did on the administration's Farm Security program.

According to the NFU, the farm bloc's sabotage of the Farm Security Administration and the victory production program last session kept at least half a million experienced but under-equipped and under-employed farmers out of full production. This sabotage was led in the Senate by Senator Byrd, millionaire farmer and "economy" fanatic of the tory group, and was successful despite labor's backing for the FSA appropriation.

NAME NAMES

The Farmers Union also put the finger on corporation-farmer leaders of such organizations as the Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange and the Milk Producers Federation, blaming them for leading the fight on an adequate food program.

As an answer to food shortages brought about by the farm bloc, the union now proposes a 2.3 billion dollar three-year program to increase present production by 30 per cent wit hno increase in manpower needs, and to enable the U.S. to play a full part in feeding the people of the liberated nations after the war is won.

Score Biddle Action Against Labor Senator

Detroit, Dec. 24.—CIO's scores of thousands of members in this war production state are pouring protests into Attorney-General Biddle for the indictment of State Senator Stanley Nowak, three-times elected by overwhelming majorities, on the ground that he is "a disbeliever in organized government."

Nowak was indicted for having allegedly been in favor of "overthrowing the government by force and violence" at the time he was naturalized five years ago. The indictment was handed down within five days of the time the statute of limitations would have intervened.

Resolutions protesting the charge, and comparing it to the frame-up on Harry Bridges, have been passed by the Detroit and Wayne County CIO Council; by Local 600 of the UAW-CIO, representing 80,000 Ford workers; by the Down-River CIO Council, representing 20,000 workers; and by numerous other Detroit and Michigan unions.

APPEASER MOVE

Branding the indictment as a blow to anti-war forces, the Wayne County Council said it was "vicious and appeaser inspired" and demanded that Biddle dismiss it and instead proceed against "known appeaser, pro-fascist, anti-labor enemies of the people."

Nowak has been consistently endorsed by labor in Detroit, and has been elected on the Democratic ticket three times, despite employer and anti-labor, anti-war opposition.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

The United Shoe Workers Organizing Campaign offices report winning an election at the Vulcan Wood Products, Effingham, Illinois, with a vote of 71 for CIO to 1.

Regional Director Pete Mosele of New York City reports a victorious outcome in the election held at Armour's, New York butchers, with a vote of 414 for CIO to 2 for AFL.

Ernest B. Pugh, CIO regional director in Virginia, reports winning an election at the Consolidated Textile Mill, Lynchburg, Virginia, with a vote of 654 for CIO to 159.

Frank J. Bender, CIO regional director in Baltimore, reports winning an election among employes in the Atlantic Waste Paper Plant with a vote of 36 for CIO to none.

Sub-Regional Director George DeNucci of Columbus, advises after 14 months of contact with the officers of the independent union at the National Electric Coil he was able to get them to swing over to the CIO with the following results: UAW-CIO, 188 to 12 for the independent union. Brother Lewis Strickland, UAW international representative, was in charge.

Harry E. Jones, USWA field representative, reports that the War Labor Board has issued a directive order in the matter of the Farmington Shoe Manufacturing Company, local 161-A, USWA, which substantiates all awards of the neutral arbitrator and makes the piece price now being paid by the Farmington Shoe Company higher than any piece price in the competitive area.

After long drawn out negotiations a contract was signed between UOPWA Local 109 and the National Screen Service Corporation, granting wage increases, maintenance of membership, grievance machinery, etc.

Field Representative William Mayo has concluded an extremely successful and speedy organization drive among construction workers in Evansville, Indiana, covering approximately 300 workers on an FHA project. The agreement contains closed shop, check-off, etc.

Major Standard Pact

The Oil Workers Organizing Campaign signed its first contract with Standard Oil; namely, Pan-Am, which included maintenance of membership clause, check-off, etc. This is a very significant victory for them and should prove a spring-board for further victories with this corporation and its subsidiaries.

The Utility Workers Organizing Committee completed their last chapter following a long struggle in establishing bargaining rights by signing an agreement with the Consumers Power Company governing all their employes in Michigan. Chairman and Organizational Director Straub of the UWOC advises that the agreement provides for wage increases from 8 cents an hour up; security of membership and new employes to become members of the union. These and other major improvements involving wage differentials, etc. This is a splendid victory and will repay the workers for their patience and the union for its perseverence against terrific opposition and many obstacles.

The United Steelworkers of America reports that in the U. S. Steel elections, the union polled 151,326 votes to 12,589. The USA-CIO came through with additional election results as follows: At the McLouth Steel Corporation in Detroit, USA got 216 votes to 15; Director James Robb reports two victories, one at the Ewald Iron Co., Louisville, Ky., with a vote of 183 for USA-CIO, to 15 for the AFL and 5 for no union; Oakes Mfg. Co., Inc., Tipton, Ind., USA 57, Independent 42 and 2 for neither; Joe Germano, USA director reports winning an election at the Superheater Co. in Chicago, by a vote of 419 for USA-CIO to 70.

The United Federal Workers of America, with whose officers I have had the pleasure of being associated and working with during the last two years, played a big part in the recent legislative action which brought overtime pay to some two million government employes over the bitter objections of the same Congressmen and Senators who always fight labor. Now, the UFWA is seeking to meet with other unions in the same field to map a joint program for the next session of Congress, seeking to win for Federal government employes pay and working conditions equal to those in private industry.

New Year Greetings

The year 1942 has been a memorable one. It has seen labor increasing production for the armed forces by leaps and bounds. CIO has through the statesmanship of its president, Philip Murray, grappled with many problems of national and international import. Many NLRB elections have been won, including culmination of victorious election drives in the large steel corporations of the country; collective bargaining relationships and security of membership established for workers with economic gains in many industries. It has seen the United Nations go from the defensive to the offensive in many parts of the world.

Let us now dedicate ourselves to the task of making 1943 a year unprecedented in progress in all lines of endeavor; intensifying our organizing activities, increasing our membership to an unprecedented degree to win the war and win the peace.

HAPPY NEW YEAR TO ALL!

Push Joint Labor Groups In Canada

Toronto, Dec. 26— (ALN)—A vigorous plea for the formation of labor-management production councils in all war plants was made this week by Peter Heenan, Ontario Minister of Labor.

Addressing members of the International Association of Machinists, AFL, in this city, Heenan declared: "I know of no better way to step up production of the tools of war than through such councils."

Labor-management cooperation worked best, he added, where collective bargaining existed, and for this reason the labor bill he proposed to introduce shortly into the Ontario legislature would make recognition of trade unions compulsory.

AT STEEL PLANT

Despite Ottawa's passivity, Canadian AFL and CIO unions have succeeded in establishing joint councils in the big Algoma steel plant at Sault Ste. Marie, four electric and machine shops in Toronto and Hamilton, Montreal aircraft factories and several others.

Rep. Tom Eliot Gets OWI Post In England

Washington, Dec. 24—Rep. Thomas Eliot of Massachusetts, one of the leaders of the House liberal bloc during his one Congressional term, will go to England early in the new year to help interpret this country for the Britons.

Eliot's appointment to the Office of War Information post was announced by Elmer Davis, OWI head.

The Bay State Congressman took a major part in fighting anti-labor bills during the last session, and was a consistent foe of the frauds perpetrated by the Dies un-American Committee. He lost his House seat when the Republican state legislature changed his district around, depriving him of much of his support.

Stone Workers' Pact

Woodleaf, N. C., Dec. 26—Workers at the Southern Aggregates Corp. here are now represented by the United Stone and Allied Products Workers, CIO, following certification by the Labor Relations Board. CIO Regional Director E. L. Sandefur and Stone Workers Representative Scott organized the plant. Wage talks are in progress.

Bolivian Unions Ask U.S. Labor Aid In Mine Struggle

LA PAZ, Dec. 26 (ALN)—Bolivian labor appealed this week to U. S. unions to put pressure on the Bolivian mining corporations for a quick settlement of the strike in Patino tin mines in Catavi and Llallagua. Without prompt intervention from the U. S., a general strike in all the country's mines is considered certain.

Bolivian labor is absolutely opposed to Nazi-fascism in all its forms," said Aurelio Alcoba, general secretary of the Confederacion Sindical de Trabajadores de Bolivia (CSTB).

"But the economic misery of Bolivian workers must be removed to transform this feeling into more active sympathy for the democracies. Low wages in the Bolivian mines, which result in the emigration of thousands of workers every year to Argentina, Chile and Brazil, jeopardize the war effort of the Allied Nations."

LOW OUTPUT

The most important reasons why Bolivia's Indian tin miners, who militantly opposed the Axis long before the present war, were this week willing to interrupt the United Nations' supply of tin are (1) the conviction that increased wages are necessary to increase the low labor productivity in Bolivian mines, and (2) the lack of other weapons than the strike in a country governed by a military dictatorship, with a powerful Fifth Column and few means of mobilizing public opinion.

15-CENT DAILY PAY

Until recently the tin crisis centered in the Hochschild mines of Potosi, whose owner, Mauricio Hochschild, persistently refused demands for an improvement in daily wage rates averaging 6.60 bolivianos (15c).

The Patino group, after negotiating amicably with representatives of the 6,000 miners of Llallagua and the 1,000 smeltermen from the Catavia refinery, agreed last week to raise wages an average of 30% and abolish the hated system of pulperias (company stores). The pulperias, which sell rice, meal, sugar and flour at a 30% discount, have been used as an argument for low wages, but with fewer goods in the pulperias because of the shipping shortage, the miners at present have to buy their food in the open market.

Almost daily meetings of the miners were addressed by Alcoba and Sanjines, who told the miners that a strike was only wanted by the company, to smash the union, and by the Axis, to cut off the United Nations' supply of tin.

Meanwhile, in La Paz, the Arbitration Commission, after a delay of several weeks because of the refusal of company representatives to sit at the same table with Aurelio Alcoba, determined that it lacked authority because a law of June 20, 1940, prohibited any interference with the pulperia system.

A new official delegation was appointed, which recommended in November that the government repeal this decree.

On the urging of their leaders, the miners postponed the strike vote to November 28, then to December 8, then to December 12. Then they refused to postpone it any longer.

Paraguay Labor Heads Arrested

Asuncion, Paraguay, Dec. 26 (ALN)—In an attempt to disrupt the growing unity between organized labor and anti-Axis groups within the army and the administration of President Higinio Morinigo, Paraguayan fascists and their accomplices in the Asuncion police force last week arrested a hundred union leaders and beat up numbers of workers on the streets of Asuncion.

MANY RAILWAYMEN

Fifty railwaymen, including union leaders A. Abadie, Simon Escobar, Moreno Cohene and others, were arrested on the charge, denied by all labor spokesmen, that they were preparing a general railway strike.

Adolfina Coronel, secretary of the Textile Workers Union, and Juan Gamarra, secretary of the Longshoremen's Union, were also arrested and badly beaten.

In addition to labor officials, victims of the police attacks included university professors and leaders of student organizations. Prof. Rafail Oddone and Diaz Perez, president of the Federation of University Teachers, were exiled for holding "subversive conferences" with the Mexican ambassador.

Raids on union headquarters were led by police officials Marcos Fuster and Mushuito Villaseca, members of the notorious fascist group, Frente de Guerra (Fighting Front), which attempted to overthrow the government in January last year.

Hit 'Sabotage' Of Great Lakes Shipping Pact

Detroit, Dec. 24.—The National Maritime Union, CIO, charged today that the Inland Steel Company had launched an expensive campaign to "sabotage a unanimous decision of a War Labor Board panel stabilizing the Great Lakes shipping industry."

Jack Lawrenson, NMU Vice-President in charge of the Great Lakes region, said the company persisted in playing "union-busting as usual without regard to utilizing all manpower to win the war." He cited a 1,200 word telegram sent to newspapers throughout the country by the company protesting the order as part of the campaign to "high-pressure the War Labor Board to repudiate the panel's decision."

"Inland Steel's attempt to paint the panel's order as an attempt to force a new and untried system of hiring manpower is ludicrous," Lawrenson said.

Win Hearst Poll

New York (FP)—Employes of Intl. News Service, Hearst press service, voted 133 to 32 for representation by the American Newspaper Guild (CIO) in an NLRB poll Dec. 18.

What Britain Has Learned About Manpower Problems

LONDON, Dec. 26—(ALN)—Britain's experience during the first two years of the war proved that centralized control over manpower cannot, by itself, achieve full mobilization of the men and women of a nation.

Right from the start of the war, in September, 1939, full power to allocate manpower between industry and the armed forces was given the Minister of Labor and National Service, yet this did not prevent a serious wastage of manpower.

Britain has learned that centralization of manpower control, to be effective, must be accompanied by centralized control over the whole economic effort of the nation.

So long as scheduling of production and allocation of contracts remained in the hands of seven conflicting government agencies, each dominated by monopoly interests, the value of centralized control over Britain's manpower was largely offset. It was further weakened by lack of cordination between those responsible for production and those who decided basic military strategy.

For instance, some 50,000 coal miners were taken out of the industry early in the war, thereby initiating a coal shortage which today is threatening the nation's arms output.

LIMITED SUPPLY

With a total British population of only 45 millions, Labor Minister Bevin has no easy task to supply enough men and women both to Britain's large army and to the war industries.

Under the National Service Acts of August, 1939, and December, 1941, all men between the ages of 18-51 and all unmarried women from 18-51 are liable for military service. Married men with children are not deferred. To date, men 18-41 and women 20-24 have been called up.

Britain's methods of deferring key industrial workers from military service have changed sharply during the war.

In September, 1939, in conjunction with the Trades Union Congress, the government drew up a Schedule of Reserve Occupations. Workers in these occupations were given blanket deferments.

As the war developed, the government gradually raised the age limits above which workers in reserved occupations might be deferred. Finally, in December, 1941, an order was issued raising these age limits by one year every month.

Today, in order to get a deferment, every industrial worker must go before his District Manpower Board.

Renew Pledge to Paralysis Drive

Campaign Gets AFL-CIO Support

NEW YORK, Dec. 24 — Organized labor, representing about 11,000,000 union workers in the nation, has pledged its full support to the annual fund raising appeal of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Basil O'Connor, president of the Foundation, announced today.

The appeal starts January 15 and climaxes with the celebration of President Roosevelt's birthday on Saturday, January 30.

The pledges of support were made in letters sent to the President by CIO Pres. Murray and AFL Pres. Green.

O'Connor pointed out that this year for the first time since the public celebrations of the President's birthdays began ten years ago, the fund raising appeal will have a national labor division established directly at its campaign headquarters, 342 Madison Avenue.

The labor division will be headed by Green and Murray as chairman, with Emil Rosenberg as executive director.

MURRAY'S LETTER

Murray, in writing the President, said: "Every January for several years the membership of the CIO has responded to the appealing call for support of the battle against infantile paralysis. Our response has been all the more fulsome because the appeal was upon the occasion of your birthday, so that our expressions of loyalty to you were coupled with our response to the cause which is, as you have said, so close to your heart."

"CIO members are men and women with families, and we will not be content until this dread disease, which may strike our loved ones at any moment, is conquered forever. We have rejoiced at every gain which has been made in this long battle, and congratulate you and the National Foundation."

FDR's REPLY

In his letter to Murray, the President stated: "I appreciate especially your assurance that the CIO will stand 100 per cent behind our 1943 Campaign. And I am sure that your men and women will respond generously with their dimes and dollars to fight the children's enemy on the home front."

"We are engaged in a total war against the enemies of democracy, and yet we must find the time and the means with which to wage another war — this one against disease—for that is the American way."

Co-Ops Win Fight For Radio Time

Washington, Dec. 24—U.S. consumer cooperatives this week won a month-old fight to establish their right to buy time on the radio networks to advertise their stores and services.

Initial refusal by both the NBC and Columbia networks to sell programs to the co-ops on the grounds that their message was "controversial" brought strong protests, and Sen. George W. Norris of Nebraska had asked for a Congressional investigation.

This week the Code Committee of the Natl. Assn. of Broadcasters and Co-op officials agreed to a statement permitting sponsored co-op programs as "acceptable."

"It is agreed there is no objection to commercial copy incorporated in a program sponsored by a cooperative enterprise which states that (a) any person can make purchases at cooperatives; (b) membership in cooperatives is open and voluntary; (c) cooperatives are owned by members, each of whom has one vote; and (d) profits or savings are returned to member-owenrs. However, in making such statements, no attack is to be made on any other business enterprise or system of distribution," the agreement stipulated.

"Father never showed any interest in my girls until I brought home this war worker."

Britain Takes Its Movies Direct to Its War Workers

By J. R. WILLIAMS

Before the war, there was a vigorous movement in Britain for the making of what were called "documentary" films. The men who made them were not exactly politicians, but they were men strongly interested in the social life of their times. And if you look at the films they made, you find that most of them were about work. It is what used to be called the dignity of labor.

When the war came, a group of far-sighted people saw the possibility of directing this tradition into the channels of the war effort.

The dignity of war work was now to become the theme. The entire people was to become both the subject and the audience—and the shareholders of the project, too, for this was to be a Government scheme for putting motion pictures at the disposal of the entire body of citizens.

The Ministry of Information was quickly convinced, and the production of films began. There were, of course, films on the fighting forces, for we in Britain were vividly aware that the existence of everything our islands understood by the name of civilization was dependent on the strength of a thin wall of men in navy blue and an even thinner wall of young men in Air Force blue.

But British audiences quickly saw the point when these films were associated with films on the steel-workers, the coal-miners, the spinners and weavers, the farmers, the land-girls, the nurses and the women in uniform. In a startlingly short time, all the chief contributors to the war effort had found their places in the picture.

Equally quickly a means of distribution was devised. The shorter pictures and an occasional longer one were sent out to all the theatres in the country.

RIGHT TO THE PEOPLE

America had helped to teach us the value of 16 mm. sound films. Here was the medium to reach the common man in his natural surroundings. Mobile Units were set up which could carry all equipment to any organization which could gather an audience in a hall accessible to a small car. (When the snow lay on the hills we found that accessibility was a variable quantity.) We were able to say: you get the audience into the hall and we will do all the rest.

The response was magnificent. Civil defense groups, working men's clubs, unions, women's institutes and organizations of all kinds applied to the twelve regional Film Officers.

Within a year there were regular showings at every village big enough to have a hall where fifty or sixty could gather together in the name of the war effort. Nowhere, except in Russia, had any similar attempt been made to reach the people with what is perhaps today the most powerful means of popular education.

In towns, the greatest successes were in the factories. Soon every factory of importance in the country was taking lunch-hour or midnight shows in which the worker saw the products of his own hands in action, or the relation of his industry to another, or caught a glimpse of the farmer who fed him.

At first, the pictures were all domestic ones, but soon the Allies were brought into the picture. Above all, there were Russian films—some of them made in Moscow with an English sound-track. An English-made film, "Salute to the Soviet," went the round of every town and village, rousing enthusiasm all the way.

Just before I left England there had begun a trickle of American war films, which we all hope will soon be a flood.

Britain received these films warmly—not least because so many of them emphasize the need for winning not only a war, but a peace in which a world of better conditions and finer social justice can be built. For the same reason, many of the films are of interest to America.

There are over one hundred fifty of them in this country now. We think many of them will be of interest to American labor.

(Full information on the British films (which are available at a nominal service charge) can be had from regular dealers, or from the British Information Services, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York. There are libraries also at Chicago, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.)

'Pro-Slavery' Movie Panned By Movie Union

New York, Dec. 24—This is no time to "glorify' Andrew Johnson, whom many historians consider the worst of the nation's President.

That was the gist of complaints forwarded to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures this week by union and Negro groups which have become aroused by contemplated release of a movie called "Tennessee Johnson."

The CIO Screen Office & Professional Guild, comprising employes in the home offices of many major movie concerns, charged in a resolution that "release of this film even in its present form would be destructive of national unity and . . . we urge M-G-M to scrap the film and make more patriotic use of both raw film stock and finished film product."

NEGROES PROTEST

Meanwhile leaders of several Negro and liberal organizations condemned the movie after a special pre-release showing in this city.

The CIO union resolution recalled that Johnson—who took office after the assassination of Abraham Lincoln—is the only U.S. President against whom impeachment proceedings have ever been launched.
